Anticipation

As parents and other volunteers—16 in all—gather to put together a new piece of playground equipment at Clarkston Elementary School, Brian Hubbard (left) of Glenburnie Road and Nicole Tressel of Waldon Road wait semi-patiently on parts of the whole. It took 21 hours spread over the weekend of Aug. 15 to put the equipment together. Brian's father, Addison, is chairman of the PTO's playground committee and Nicole's father, Gary, helped with the engineering aspects of the project. For photos of the finished product, see page 7.

Candidate for Springfield supervisor quits race

By Al Zawacky

Citing personal reasons, Springfield Township supervisor candidate John H. Mulloy has decided to discontinue his campaign for the top post on the township board.

"My decision is definite,"

Mulloy said. "I'm going to contact the county and try and get my name off the ballot."

Under present Michigan election laws, however, Mulloy's ability to remove his name from the ballot is doubtful, according to Becky Wichman, an employee at the Oakland County elections office.

Wichman said she contacted Lansing election official Howard McGowan on the matter.

According to state law, a candidate who has already been nominated by his or her party can only withdraw in the event of physical disability or by moving, she said.

Mulloy, 37, of 9358 Eagle Hill, filed his candidacy in the Springfield supervisor race in June. He ran unopposed in the Aug. 5 primary as a Democrat, garnering 123 votes to Republican incumbent Collin Walls' 291 votes.

Even if his name remains on the ballot, Mulloy said he would make an unofficial withdrawal by declining to campaign for the office.

"I definitely won't campaign," he said. "I'm going to compose a letter and run it (in several local newspapers), announcing my withdrawal and thanking people for their support."

Pleads innocent

Raymer to undergo forensic exam

Robert Raymer, 6048 Waldon Road, Independence Township, pleaded not guilty to an open murder charge before Oakland County Circuit Court Judge Farrell E. Roberts at an arraignment held Thursday.

Raymer, 52, is being held in Oakland County Jail without bond for allegedly stabbing to death his 25-year-old son.

Attorney Joseph L. Hardig, Jr. notified the court that he has filed a plea of insanity on behalf of the defendant and said Raymer was to undergo a forensic examination as soon as the necessary paperwork was completed.

In a forensic examination an individual is examined by professionals to determine if they are capable of standing trial and aiding their attorney in the defense.

The body of Charles Raymer was discovered at the Waldon address on July 18, according to police.

According to testimony delivered in a preliminary exam on July 31, Raymer suffered from a history of mental problems and allegedly planned the murder.

At the preliminary exam an Oakland County Sheriff's Deputy called to the scene of the crime said Raymer had told him he had decided to kill his son that morning and had sent his younger daughter out to play.

Law loophole could keep out foster care homes

By Marilyn Trumper

The Independence Township Board has taken the first step to enforce the township's zoning ordinance as it relates to the placement of adult foster care homes.

In the past, communities have balked at attempts to prevent such homes from establishment because it was thought the state had removed local power to do so.

But recently a loophole was discovered in the law and is being tested by two neighboring townships in the Oakland County Circuit Court, prompting Independence to look into the issue further.

At a meeting held Aug. 12 residents living in Lake Oakland Woods subdivision asked the board to enter into joint or separate litigation in an effort to enforce the township's zoning ordinance regarding single family residential homes.

Their subdivision is slated for a proposed adult foster care home which would house approximately six mentally retarded adults, and residents say the home would not only be in violation of their deed restriction, but also in violation of the township's zoning ordinance.

Donald E. Schuster, the resident's attorney, said deed restrictions in that subdivision limit the use of a home to "single family," and in this case also defines the term.

"Single family is defined as one individual, or two or more related by blood, marriage or legal adoption," he said. "Clearly the proposed use of the home does not fit any of those definitions."

Approaching board members and the audience, Schuster explained the loophole by saying that the most recent legislation concerning adult foster care homes failed to include a section from the previous acts which prohibited local zoning ordinances from keeping adult foster care facilities out of a community.

"We feel it's the board's right and obligation to protect the rights, interest and welfare of the residents in the township," Schuster said.

After lengthy discussion from the audience, the board voted unanimously to have the township attorney review the loophole as it relates to the township's zoning ordinances, and recommend chances of court success.

William Craig lives to one side of the proposed home on Timber Ridge Trail and is spearheading the campaign to thwart state licensing.

"I'm not arguing with the concept of adult foster care homes," he said at the meeting. "We want input and planning, on where they are going to be located."

"Not only would a home housing six non-related people be in violation of the deed restriction, he said, but the homes make money -- and that could be considered a commercial enterprise in a residential neighborhood.

Pat Biernat of Allen Road spoke out in favor of foster care facilities and criticized the residents' move.

Biernat said she has a 25-year-old moderate to severely retarded son and speaks from experience.

"We've had our son evaluated for placement in a foster care home," she said, "and chose a Macomb Oakland Regional Center (MORC) home because of their very high standards."

"I'm not immortal. Would you commit him to an institution rather than allow him to live in a community as he's been accustomed to? Maybe we all need to return to the caves," she said.

Residents and their attorney repeatedly argued they were not against foster care facilities, but were intent on enforcing their deed restrictions and the township's zoning ordinances.

A representative from Rose Builders, the subdivision's developer, said the intention of the deed restriction was to have homeowners living there related by marriage, blood or legal adoption.

"We feel this home would be in violation of the deed restriction," he said.

Further, the company intended to help the residents finance court cost to enforce that deed restriction, he said.

Each member of the township board said they saw the home as a money making venture, since the organization sponsoring the home is paid by the state for each resident it houses.

Trustee Rudy Lozano offered a different reason for disproving the home.

"This scares the hell out of me," he said to loud applause from the 50-member audience.

"I see this as a new industry and I wouldn't want one next to me.

"I have had varied discussions with someone who worked very closely in this field, I have a fairly good understanding of it and it is a money making business, it's not different than a gas station.

"And I'm not saying that an institution is good or a better place for any of the residents in a home like this. But if one came into my subdivision I would have to fight it too."

Following the meeting Schuster said he would know by the end of the week when he would file suit in Oakland County Circuit Court.

"I'm still trying negotiations with the Department of Mental Health and much of this hinges upon what happens in the Pontiac Township case," he said.

From grade school to high school: Drugs available

By Marilyn Trumper

Independence Township is not a unique community when it comes to dope.

Like everywhere else, drugs are in the schools, from the elementary level through the senior high, said an undercover officer assigned to the Oakland County Sheriff's Department Intelligence Section, who asked not be identified.

"Independence is just one of the spokes in Oakland County with Pontiac being the hub," he said.

"The kids who get it in elementary school—well there's a 50-50 chance they steal it from their parent's own stash. But there have been cases where parents use their own kids to distribute the dope.

"Society today is full of idiots," interrupts Deputy John Taylor, a township patrolman. "It's the parents more than it is the kids. The parents come from the 60's, the 'do your own thing generation,' so what are the kids supposed to think?"

"We got a guy not too long ago," Taylor said. "We answered a call for a family argument in Woodhull subdivision, and when we got to the door we saw the guy's marijuana plants growing inside.

"There they were, under lights, with a curtain hanging around to conceal them. Only this time he forgot to close the curtain. And this man was a family man, he had a wife and kids."

Taylor shakes his head. "What is a kid supposed to think when his role model does that?"

Prime target areas in the township for patrols are Pine Knob, the Depot Road Park in Clarkston and scattered fields where kids tend to congregate, Taylor said.

Pine Knob is handled differently though, said the undercover officer.

"That's an atmosphere where drug sales are expected and people come from all over Michigan," he said. "It's one big party to the people attending and there's a lot of money to be made in sales."

Clarkston's Depot Road Park is another matter, Taylor said.

"We get kids there all the time, but they have the advantage of seeing you coming so they get rid of their dope.

"They throw it in the water, or whatever," he said. "One time we caught a kid trying to eat a whole bag of dope. When we got there his had shoved it in his mouth, plastic bag and all, and it was hanging out the sides of his mouth.

"They see us coming when they're in the fields too. Usually we get there and find what's left of what appeared to be a good party," Taylor said.

There are arrests made but a good part of investigations and the arrests center around the dealer, the officers agree.

"That's where it starts," the undercover officer said. "We don't harass the average person using drugs as long as it's not waved in our face."

Street dope is available by two means, he said. It's either smuggled into the country or it's made in secret laboratories, so people don't really know what they're buying.

"Ask any kid the difference between angel dust and rock crystal and if he thinks he knows the difference, he'll tell you," the officer said. "In reality there is no difference, they are both the same drug."

LSD had made a resurgence in the past few years, he said, and has worked its way into the township just like everywhere else.

"In the late 60's and early 70's it nearly became extinct because of the chromosome scare, and other popular drugs replaced it. But now there's a new generation, a turnover of people who are trafficking and yesterday's fear is not shown," he said.

"LSD, a hallucinogenic, is pawned off as mescaline. They call it a variety of street names, window pane, micro-dot and strawberry mescaline. It's all the same and the kids think they're getting something different, but they are not."

Drugs made in basement laboratories have no company markings, usually have chipped edges and usually are different colors, he said.

Dealers are businessmen and are selling to make money like any other businessman. They don't care who they sell to, he said.

"Kids buy marijuana and it's alfalfa, they buy what they think is rock crystal and it's ground glass, and they buy drugs laced with rat poison," he said.

When arrests are made at Pine Knob, more often than not the drugs that are being sold are not narcotics, he said.

"In those cases we arrest the person for fraud, which is a stiffer sentence than an arrest for selling less than $100 of dope," he said. "Those are bonuses for us."

Wind swept

A Pacific Coast craze has hit Clarkston Mill Pond like an 80 mph wind. Rosita Acosta [above], in town to visit a friend on Holcomb Street, struggles to pull the wet sail from the water, readies herself to grab hold of the wish-bone boom, and anticipates a breeze for some real wind-surfing across the pond. At right, a casualty of fluky winds and beginner's unluckiness, Rosita tumbles into the water with a splash.

Village narrows sewer hook-ups

The Village of Clarkston has succeeded in forcing all but two residents to hook into the sewer system.

The struggle has been ongoing since May of 1973 when the village council passed a mandatory sewer hook-up ordinance.

People slowly began hooking in at that time, said village attorney Thomas L. Gruich. The council began sending out yearly reminders and each year a few more would hook in, he said.

"We got it down to 22 of the original names in November of last year, and did not get any response from those residents," he said. "So, we sent out a 90-day legal notice to hook in or be sued.

"Then there was a fairly substantial response, but still some refrained from hooking in. In total, we sued 16 people," he said.

Some of the residents had moved, some had died and some lived outside the 200-foot-limit requirement, he said.

In May 1980 the council sent summons to appear in court and filed complaints, legally moving on the last few residents who had not hooked in.

"Now, three residents still have not hooked in, but one of the three has pulled a permit," he said. "We'll continue with the suit and a show cause hearing has been scheduled for October.

"I'm pleased that they've chosen to finally hook in," said Village President Fontie Ap-Madoc. "We originally wanted it done to control pollution. This should help."

Fire facts

Proper placement of smoke detectors

Now that you have purchased a smoke detector to protect your family against the unexpected, you must install the detector in such a location that it will offer the greatest coverage and protection possible.

This is definitely not an easy task. Many factors must be considered before the detector can be permanently mounted.

You must try to place the detector in such a location that when it operates, or sounds the alarm warning of a fire, it will be heard by the members of your family as they are asleep in their sleeping quarters.

While asleep, your family is the most susceptible to being trapped by a fire and, for this reason, while you are asleep you are the most dependent upon your detector. You must be able to hear it warn you of a fire.

A good location is on the ceiling in the hallway or corridor connecting all the sleeping quarters. Don't hesitate to test the detector to make sure all occupants can hear its warning.

When you choose a location for your detector you must consider many factors. Try to visualize where smoke in your house would collect first, usually on the uppermost floor and at the ceiling level.

For extra large homes and homes of multiple stories, more than one detector is recommended. Numerous factors change the path of smoke as it travels; closed doors, open stairways, ventilation fans and heating and cooling systems.

Try not to place a detector in the direct path of an air duct or register which will blow directly on the detector. This will tend to blow any products of combustion away from the detector.

You must mount the detector in a location where it is able to monitor the quality of the air you will breathe during your escape.

Do not mount a detector in a closed room or closet.

You want the detector to tell you when the air in your escape route is becoming contaminated with smoke or invisible products of combustion.

The function of any detector is directly related to its location or placement. A poorly placed detector will function poorly.

Feel free to contact the Independence Township Fire Department if you have any questions regarding the location which will best protect your family.

Editorial unfair to candidates

To the Editor:

Your comments in a recent editorial concerning the outcome of the township primary election did a great disservice to the victorious candidates, to the dozens of township residents who actively supported such candidates and to the hundreds more who voted for them.

The editorial opined that because seven of the candidates were backed by "cash" from a "force of people" composed of "many of the most prominent citizens in the community," thus "assuring" the victories of such candidates, there was "the possibility of strong influence" by such "force."

It further implied that the defeat of Trustee Jerry Powell was attributable to the expenditures of the force.

In view of the fact that the news media has recently been noting the people's growing disenchantment with government and their resulting voter apathy, one cannot help but wonder at assertions that undue influence is the possible result where a large number of citizens join together to actively participate in their political system and support the candidates of their choice.

I had always assumed that campaigning for candidates and donating to their campaigns were as respected a part of such system as exercising the right to vote.

Are candidates supported by a "force" of citizens more likely to be unduly influenced?

Or could it be that the involvement of "prominent" citizens in an election campaign is grounds for suspicion?

Obviously not.

The facts are that the "force" spent an average of only $750 on each of the candidates they supported, that such "force" was composed of dozens of BOTH prominent AND ordinary citizens, that a large majority of the township's voters also determined that such candidates were the best qualified and that Trustee Powell did virtually no campaigning toward his re-election.

However, The Clarkston News has evidently chosen to ignore these facts.

It apparently prefers voter apathy over voter activity and political involvement.

Sincerely,
William K. Basinger

Easy riding

by Kathy Greenfield

As we stepped toward the taxi cab in Toronto, our son began a series of "20 Questions."

I made some comment and his response was, "But Mom, I've never been in a taxi before."

Wow.

On the train to Toronto, I used some of the time to read a book I've been saving for just such a period of quiet travel—"Being There" by Jerzy Kosinski.

It couldn't have been more appropriate for the adventure awaiting us in the city.

Well, sort of. Kosinsky writes strange books and they usually have impact because of his graphic descriptions of shocking events.

In this novel, however, he took a hard look at a person who viewed life through TV—when thrust into the world, he had only his television experiences and work as a gardener to use as guidelines.

And he did quite well—the outside world marveled at his talents to describe occurrences using garden terminology and he handled social situations successfully by first deciding how it would have been handled on TV. Later, I commented that although they had never actually been in a taxi, they had seen them on TV.

My ears were surprised to hear my voice when I remembered the book I had just read.

Thank goodness our son's television watching was n't enough to stop the questions about taxi cabs.

Our talkative driver explained how the meter worked, and threw in some thought-provoking information on how taxi drivers sometimes take passengers for a longer ride than necessary in order to make a living. The taxi experience was the first of many discoveries.

There were also rides on the subways, buses and trolley cars. And all of them were firsts for our children.

By the time we left, they were good at figuring out when the exit we needed was coming up and they were leading the way out of the subway tunnel to the right path back to the hotel.

It was great. I had forgotten how handy mass transportation can be and how inexpensive it is compared to always driving a car.

Some experiences are worth repeating. Corey, our daughter, discovered that when the whistle blows the subway door slams shut and you have to hustle.

Such situations must contribute to the fast pace city dwellers soon develop.

Corey also quickly learned it was safer on subways and buses.

She was near the edge of the curb when a car sped by only inches away.

"If people drove like that in Clarkston, there would be lots of dead kids," she observed.

The experience brought back memories of living in New York City some 14 years ago.

Dick and I sold our car immediately and lived without wheels for a year.

You can imagine how much money that saved us even then before the price of gasoline became outrageous.

Corey made another observation while on the bus that was worth some thought.

"Look," she said. "There are some kids on here about my age without their parents. Wouldn't it be nice to be able to get on a bus and go places?"

Political group rates praise

Dear Editor:

I feel I must respond to your editorial in the Aug. 12 edition of the Clarkston News.

In the editorial, there were statements that the seven candidates who won the Republican primary and who all were endorsed by the group called "Independence Residents for Responsible Government" were a slate.

It is also stated that another trustee candidate had lost largely because he had refused to ask for an endorsement from such a group, since he feared they would then expect his vote.

First of all, I can unequivocally state, I am not and have not been part of a slate. I had intended to be a candidate for Independence Township clerk long before the group was formed and would have continued my candidacy with or without their endorsement.

I did not approach this group for their support but was offered it UNCONDITIONALLY.

I was personally pleased that this group of active and concerned residents felt I was worthy of their support.

Your concern that if all seven endorsed candidates should be elected, decisions will be made "in someone's living room" is completely unfounded.

First of all, for a majority of the board to meet and discuss township affairs in the manner you suggest is in violation of Michigan's Open Meetings Act.

Secondly, I resent the implication that because I have received an unsolicited endorsement by a group of concerned residents that I have compromised my independence or integrity on the board.

Anyone who has followed my past performance as a board member knows my voting has been independent of any special interest group, with responsiveness to our residents and the good of our entire township as the strict guide for my decisions.

If I felt for one instant the fact I had been endorsed by a group meant that I was beholden to them, I would immediately disclaim such an endorsement.

In this instance, I feel there is no such danger, real or imagined.

In closing, I cannot accept your suggestion that the seven Republican candidates elected in our Aug. 5th primary were victorious merely because of the group you spoke of.

Here we have a group, like any candidate's committee or any political action group, who works to make the views and qualifications of the candidates they support known.

How is this a threat to our voters or our township?

It seems to me this type of active interest by residents in our community ought to be applauded.

It should also be noted, this particular group had no monopoly on the distribution of information to the voters. For example, there were the newspapers.

Also, each of the individuals elected worked hard to reach out to the people of our township by mailing literature, knocking on doors, and working at the polls.

Couldn't it be that instead of being manipulated by any group, the voters of our township evaluated the field of candidates and then voted for those they felt were best qualified and would best represent their interests?

Sincerely,
Christopher L. Rose
Independence Township Clerk

Jim's jottings

Cluttering thoughts

by Jim Sherman

Sometimes it's the little things that clutter the mind. It's time to be rid of them.

Like: Will a cry be raised against voting for a divorced man in the White House?

On the other hand: Jimmy Carter, will you explain (in simple terms) how the Cuban boatpeople situation was allowed to happen? Then, why do we accept people by sea, but not by land from Mexico?

God never meant for words and pictures to fly through the air.

Why does the state highway department allow "emergency" U-turns only on expressways? In this day of energy conservation, it should be permissible to turn over to the south (or north) bound lane instead of proceeding 17 miles to the next exit to go back for a hamburger.

The Leader print shop prints a neighborhood paper for a couple subdivisions in Auburn Heights call "Cider Press." The slogan is "A fermentation of local news." It works.

Love song titles like "A man has got to walk through the freezing rain to appreciate the sun," but we find it not necessarily true. We can appreciate the sun any time.

Purple Martins seem to think our yard is a nice place to visit but they don't want to live there.

Last Halloween we priced a "Miss Piggy" mask for $10. Knowing that was too much to spend on a joke, we passed it by. We've asked in a half dozen stores for the mask since and find no one has them at any price. Betcha Miss Piggy will be back next month at $15.

Chief Justice Mary Coleman once said the way Michigan picks judges is "ludicrous." She favors a non-partisan appointment. She also favored not seeking re-election just a few weeks ago.

Two more great song titles: "Oh, Lord, it's hard to be humble," and "Take this job and shove it."

Editor Dave Rood suggests a way to solve the traffic problems in the cities. He says: "Pass a law that says you cannot drive a car unless it is paid for."

The finished product awaits scores of youngsters out for fun and exercise during recess when school starts Aug. 27. The Clarkston Elementary School PTO raised about $8,000 to pay for the equipment and the school board added nearly $10,000 to assist with ground preparation and grading, and two asphalt play surfaces and a pathway suitable for bikers to improve the school playground. Wood chips are to be added to the area before school begins.

Welk welcome at times

by Jim Fitzgerald

The mother-in-law is 84 and doesn't want to be a bother.

She took a slight fall in her home and hurt herself while struggling to get back up. After two weeks in the hospital, she had to leave because a committee said she wasn't sick enough to stay. But, although she wouldn't admit it, she wasn't well enough to continue to live alone. She needed someone to take care of her, at least until she regained her strength.

And that's how Lawrence Welk came into the middle-aged-son-in-law's home.

The son-in-law is a jazz fan. He has always made fun of Welk's music. He calls Welk a late-inning replacement for Guy Lombardo, brought into the TV advertising game to save the nation from widespread clack of falling dentures. As the years have passed, it has become more and more important to the son-in-law that he never be seen tapping his foot to a rickety-tick Geritol beat. He's afraid a government Bureau for the Aged will discover he's old enough to have been in love with Deanna Durbin once and will make him trade in his rubber duck for a bingo card.

In the past, the son-in-law paid close attention to the Lawrence Welk show only once, when he was told he and one of the Welk singers looked alike. He tuned in to see whether there was a resemblance and there was. The singer was a silly wimp, but he definitely looked like the son-in-law. That was 25 years ago.

The last few Saturdays, because his mother-in-law was visiting, he turned on Lawrence Welk again. Incredibly, that singer is still with the orchestra. But now the resemblance is foggy. Today the singer looks the way the son-in-law looked 25 years ago.

"I could also look younger than my age if I wanted to wear sissy TV makeup," the son-in-law said, clutching his rubber duck.

While watching the singer's face for signs of cosmetic surgery, the son-in-law couldn't help noticing how much his mother-in-law enjoyed the Welk music. This made him feel good, and he unabashedly tapped his foot to a rickety-tick beat. He knew it was corny, but he could be abashed later.

It also make him feel good to be a tourist guide and take his mother-in-law to the top of the tallest hotel in the world in an outside elevator offering a view of the Detroit River that made her gasp. And then they went through the tunnel under the river to Canada, something she'd never done before.

"I've done things today I never thought I'd do, and I know I'll never do them again," she said. But she had to do them in a wheelchair, and she added: "I hate to be such a bother."

He bought her a $4 liver and onions dinner at a delicatessen, and she said he shouldn't spend so much money on her. He usually eats at restaurants where $4 won't pay half the tip.

Night after night he sat and read while she beat her daughter at dominoes and silly card games. "He must think we're crazy," she confided to his wife. She had no idea he thought their mother-daughter relationship was the nicest thing he'd ever seen, between the nicest people.

He had a birthday during her visit, and she gave him a card on which she wrote an apology for being such a bother and for "looking so terrible." He told her she looked beautiful, and she said she knew he was lying. He wasn't.

During her visit she progressed from the wheelchair to a walker and then, on the last Sunday, she walked into church with the aid of only a cane. "I'm trying to give a good performance so you'll let me go home next week," she said.

It had been OK to live in a big-city high rise for awhile, but she was homesick for her little house and for her garden and for the independence she cherishes so dearly. They let her go home. They weren't at all sure it was the right thing to do, but they were very sure it was what she wanted to do.

The mother-in-law is 84 and doesn't want to be a bother. The son-in-law, who no longer looks like a wimpy Welk singer, knows the clock ticks for every one. He wants the mother-in-law to know he likes being bothered. He hopes someone feels that way about him someday.

Primary election results merit voters' review

Dear Editor:

Now that the dust from our primary election has settled and we have all had to come to the conclusion that even in Independence Township it is possible to buy elections, let's look back at the events that caused it.

This review is a worthy endeavor. When a trustee who has been accepted as a good trustee by both Democrats and Republicans alike is dumped from the slate in an outpouring of money and endeavor as Jerry Powell was dumped, there must be strong winds shaking our trees.

It is true Powell did not campaign, and in retrospect he should have. It is also true that Powell likes a glass of beer, but if we were to carry that factor to the national level we would have many less familiar legislators and some of them, like Powell, have been good ones.

The election issue has revolved around the Pine Knob hotel, and the dissidents are made up of a coalition of village residents, who in some cases I expect are being less than consistent in their current demands for obedience to the zoning laws, and a group of newcomers to the township, who like all newcomers want no more newcomers to follow them to the new Shangri-La.

The village group has its roots in the same group who for 10 years fought relocation of the Post Office within the village, and then who panicked when it was learned the Post Office would relocate south of town.

It has its roots in the group who banned the pestiferous Labor Day carnival with its rides for youngsters from the downtown area and yet who did not speak up when Pine Knob shifted its emphasis from a hotel to an even larger version of the carnival.

It is the same group who heard plans for a Pine Knob hotel for the last 10 years and did nothing to discourage it. These are the people who lauded Pine Knob's dedication of much of its resort land in scenic easements, thereby preserving natural beauty in the area and restricting itself as to usable area.

Some have even given lip service to the Toronto concept of planning whereby the height of the building to be constructed is dictated by the amount of open and low density land around it.

Never mind. The issue is sufficiently volatile to serve the current purpose which appears to have as its actual base a "living room" concept of government.

In other words it is likely all issues will be decided before the meetings, and plague take those who do not go along. When money is the chief method of election, electees get very dependent on it and future campaign financing.

We have heard muffled talk of a manager type of government and a move to a charter township. These are not new ideas.

They have been discussed before and discarded as a result of public sentiment against increased taxes, and believe me, charter government winds up costing more money.

There are things that I, too, would like to see accomplished in Independence Township. I would like to see the lip service these candidates give the master plan become based in fact.

In truth, our master plan is not very effective.

We need a new one that takes into account sewer needs and road plans and prohibitive taxes on larger holdings, many of which have remained in the same family for more than one generation.

I urge voters to take all these things into consideration as they think ahead to the November election.

We have narrowed our choices drastically as a result of the primary election, but there are still good men and true who are candidates and are not part of the machine.

Sincerely
Jean W. Saile

'Rubber stamp' allegation ridiculous

Editor:

As the Republican candidate for Independence Township treasurer, I take exception to recent attempts by your newspaper to discredit me.

To allege that I would be a "Rubber stamp" is both unfair and absurd.

My decision to run for township treasurer came as a result of attending board meetings for several years watching board members REACT to problems and situations they should have anticipated and ACTED on long before they became problems.

My nominating petitions were being circulated before I knew of the existence of the Independence Residents for Responsible Government.

I was delighted, however, with their decision to endorse me as a candidate. Their moral and financial support has been invaluable.

I welcome the support of any group or individual who shares my views.

We live in a beautiful, rural residential community which must be protected from those who would destroy its natural beauty with ugly gravel pits, carnivals and multi-storied buildings.

Sincerely,
Carol D. Balzarini

for Treasurer

Powell supporter

Dear Kathy:

I wanted to let you know that your column in last week's paper about Jerry Powell was as if I were reading my own thoughts exactly.

I'm sure there are already a lot of people now wishing they had gotten out to vote for him. I'm glad I'm not one of them.

Early start of school should prompt student 'Yellow Flu'

Dear Editor:
 Summers in Michigan are too short.
 This year they're even shorter since our students must return to school in August.
 Our children will be attending school for three days prior to Labor Day weekend. This is an impractical, inconvenient and ridiculous system. Many people take the last two weeks of August for vacation or would enjoy starting the holiday weekend before 3:30 p.m. Friday.

The idea of beginning our school year earlier than other schools is certainly not for the benefit of the students or the parents. This group is definitely in the majority and should have some say in the matter.
 Speaking with many parents, we have found many others share this opinion. This year, we plan on doing something about it.

Easy schedule for Wolves? Bunk, says coach

By Al Zawacky

Coach Walt Wyniemko raises his voice a decibel or two when asked if his Wolves won't be benefiting from an "easy schedule" in 1980.

"I don't buy that," Wyniemko says emphatically. "I don't think you can predict a high school team's talent on its performance last year."

Gone from the Clarkston High School griders' docket are Grand Blanc, Madison Heights Lamphere and Bloomfield Hills Andover—teams that handed the hometowners three one-sided defeats in 1979.

Lake Orion stepping in to fill out the GOAL void.

A former member of the now defunct Oakland A League, Lake Orion didn't even have a football team last season as the school's gridiron program fell victim to a school millage defeat.

"We just don't know what we can do," says Lake Orion Coach Doug Holcomb, assessing his born-again football program. "We just don't know."

The Wolves will find out what the Dragons can do on Oct. 3, when Lake Orion and Clarkston clash for the first time in two years. The Dragons came out on play Grand Blanc again," said Clarkston Athletic Director Paul Tungate. "They've beaten us the last two years, and we'd like to get back at them."

"We had a two-year agreement with them (Grand Blanc), and last season was the second year. We wanted to play them again, but they'd already made a commitment to play Grand Ledge."

Lest anyone think the Wolves' schedule was made a little less burdensome this year on purpose, Tungate points out that the 1980 opponents were finalized before the 1979 season ever began.

And Wyniemko bristles at the suggestion that the Wolves may have deliberately added a few

"weak sisters" to their nine-game slate.

"If you want to be a good football team, you've got to play good football teams," Wyniemko says. "And we want to be a good football team."

"Clarkston isn't afraid of playing anybody."

Next week: Returning veterans, and some promising new faces.

'I don't buy that. I don't think you can predict a high school team's talent on its performance last year...'

—CHS Coach Walt Wyniemko

In their place are Swartz Creek, Mt Clemens, Clintondale and Lake Orion—schools whose football programs have been less than successful in recent years.

"Grand Blanc was a good football team last season," Wyniemko observes, "but that doesn't make them a great team this year."

"Records don't mean a thing—right now, Swartz Creek is 0-0 and so is Clarkston."

1980 will mark the first time in years that the Wolves and their old Bloomfield Hills Nemesis won't be getting together for their annual gridiron clash.

Andover is leaving the six-team Greater Oakland Activities League to join the Southeastern Michigan Association, with top in the 1978 game, 8-0.

A virtual unknown in these parts, Mt. Clemens Clintondale is located in Clinton Township and has played its athletics in the Class A Bi-County League.

The Clintondale Dragons haven't had much success of late, but the Wolves will have to face them on the Dragons home turf, where Clintondale traditionally plays tough.

The third new addition to the Wolves' schedule is Swartz Creek, Clarkston's opponent in their season opener at home Sept. 5.

Like Clintondale and Lake Orion, Swartz Creek's squad is also known as the Dragons—and for not winning very many football games.

"I would have liked to see us

While Varsity Coach Walt Wyniemko's griders were up at camp last week, JV Coach Gordie Richardson's players were working out on more familiar turf near Clarkston High School. The JVs are hoping for an encore of 1979 this season when Richardson and assistant John Getzan led the team to their second straight GOAL championship.

The Point After

by Al Zawacky

The joys of running

You meet a lot of interesting people when you're in the newspaper business. About two weeks ago I woke up at 8 a.m. on a Sunday and drove 30 miles just to witness a gathering of about 200 masochists.

In case you don't know what a masochist is, I'll save you a trip to the dictionary. A masochist is a long-distance runner. They can be found almost anywhere, but are especially indigenous to highway shoulders.

The event that brought them together that cloudy and damp Sunday morning was the Independence Parks and Recreation Halfathon Race, which featured courses of 4.6 miles and a half-marathon of over 13 miles.

Thirteen miles. Thirteen miles.

I've gotten tired driving that far.

When I asked some of the sneaker-clad participants why they were there, the answers varied. Running was "a challenge," or an "exhilarating experience." One runner claimed that continuing past the point of normal exhaustion created a kind of "high."

Strange, but I don't think I've ever been pulled over by a policeman who subsequently demanded to know if I'd been running. I imagine they probably confiscate your Pumas and warn you about winding up as a pair of feet sticking out of some drainage ditch alongside Sashabaw Road.

I was going to ask what happens when somebody "O.D.'s," but I never got around to it.

One of the runners asked me if I was into running.

I was flattered that anybody could think I was, in view of my 36-inch waistline. So I stretched the truth a little bit.

"Sure I am. I run all the time," I said. "I run to my car when it rains. I run to the phone when it rings. I ran for president of the Bum Phillips Fan Club once. I had a run in spades two weeks ago while playing pinochle."

This response got a lot of blank stares, after which the inquirer would usually go back to his or her running-in-place warm-up exercises. Runners have no sense of humor.

ACTUALLY, I DID give running a try several months ago. But being loath to rising early and not wanting to provide the neighbors with a few laughs at my expense, I decided to do my running at night, often past midnight.

This caused some concern for my safety—not only were cars breezing by me at precariously close distances, but my mother always told me never to run through a neighborhood at night "because somebody is liable to take a shot at you."

I decided to risk it anyway, and mapped out a three-mile course. Three miles seemed a reasonable distance for someone only slightly out of shape like myself.

I was feeling pretty cocky after the first 500 yards or so. I felt as though I could run forever.

"Forever" turned out to be about 600 yards. Approaching the one-mile mark, I found myself wishing that somebody would in fact take a shot at me and put me out of my misery.

One week later I gave it up by claiming that I "just couldn't find the time."

I still find time for nocturnal carry-out pizzas, however. That's not always easy to do—but I'm a firm believer in self-discipline.

"This is a good opportunity for a team to get some play in before the season starts," Greg Lestan, Director of the tennis complex at Waterford Oaks.

"The boys tournament was held in the spring, and this is the follow-up."

Applications may be obtained at the tennis complex located at 2800 Watkins Lake Rd., Waterford Township.

For more information on the tourney, call 858-5433.

area or top collegiate players."

Admission to the tourney is free. The matches will take place on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., with semi-final and final action starting at 11 a.m. Sunday.

The tennis complex is located adjacent to the wave action pool on Scott Lake Road in Waterford. For more information, call 858-5433.

Local BMX winners

Neil Scarf, Jay Richardson and Brian Barlow were three local winners at last Saturday's bicycle motocross races at Waterford Oaks County Park.

Neil placed second in the 11-year-old category, Jay placed second among 13-year-olds and Brian was first in the 16 and over group.

The races are held each Saturday at the Waterford Oaks BMX track near the wave pool on Scott Lake Road, Waterford Township.

Family-style bike motocross coming to Waterford Oaks

Bicycle motocross racing isn't just for kids and teenagers.

At least it won't be at Waterford Oaks County Park Aug. 27, when the first father-son and mother-daughter bike motocross family race takes place.

The race will start at 5 p.m. and be decided by the fastest father-son or mother-daughter team's combined time. Each team member will race individually by the child's age group.

A $1 registration fee is required per team. The fee will be used to award trophies and plaques to the teams with the fastest times in each age group as well as the fastest parent's time in each age group.

The family BMX race is the brainchild of BMX director Steve Wofford, who said he developed the idea after talking to some of the estimated 160-plus parents who watch their children participate in weekly races held Saturday mornings at Waterford Oaks.

"I've talked to some parents and kidded them about getting on the bikes," Wofford said. "The parents thought it was an interesting idea."

The age groups will be divided into categories of 7 and 8-year-olds; 9-10; 11-12; 13; 14; and 15 and over.

Parents can race once for each child entered in the contest. Mandatory safety equipment for the race includes a long sleeve shirt, long pants and a helmet.

The Waterford Oaks BMX

track is located near the wave pool off Scott Lake Road between Dixie Highway and Watkins Lake Road in Waterford. Further information on the race can be obtained by calling 858-0916.

Springfield weighs sewer takeover

By Al Zawacky

At a special meeting of the Springfield Township board last week, board members unanimously approved a resolution that could turn ownership of a sewage treatment plant over to the township in the near future.

Located at the Bavarian Village apartment and condominium complex on Dixie Highway north of I-75 in Springfield Township, ownership of the facility has been disputed between the complex developer and Oakland County.

"There was a change in the state law which created the ownership dispute," said Collin Walls, Springfield Township supervisor. "In the county's opinion, the law doesn't allow the county DPW to own the facility."

The developer, on the other hand, has maintained that the county already has the deed to the treatment facility — a deed disputed by the county, he said.

The treatment plant is functioning properly and no health hazard is present, said Walls. But the ownership hang-up has put the entire development in limbo, making it next to impossible for condominium owners to sell their property.

"This (the board's decision to consider assuming ownership) provides the residents with some hope this can be resolved," Walls said. "They really didn't have any before."

The board made township ownership of the treatment plant conditional on several requirements, Walls added.

"Basically, the conditions are that information be supplied and testing be done and reviewed by the township engineers to insure that the system is everything it's supposed to be and operating properly," said Walls.

"The county will continue the actual operation of the plant, and we want to be assured in writing that the DPW is meeting the proper standards — and that ownership will not put any unnecessary liability on the township."

Walls also asked Community National Bank of Pontiac, the bank financing the development, put up a $15,000 deposit with the township to cover the cost of any legal, engineering, or insurance analysis fees.

The bank agreed to the $15,000 sum, helping clear the way for township ownership, he said.

"Any time the township acquires or disposes of property, it's necessary to hold a public meeting, discuss it at the annual meeting (held every spring), or put the question on the ballot," Walls said.

After the remaining details are worked out, holding a public hearing during one of the township's regular monthly meetings would probably be the best route to take, said Walls.

Seniors fill advisory board

Each seat on the Senior Citizen's Advisory Board is filled with an Independence Township resident as required in the organization's bylaws and constitution adopted in late July.

The seniors held an early election on Aug. 11 and succeeded in filling each position with a resident, a feat previously thought impossible by Earl Shivlie, who lives on Joy Road and is chairman of the advisory board.

In July, Shivlie said he thought it was a slap in the face to those board members that were to be ousted because they were not township residents.

He also said past elections revealed township resident's apathy toward running in an election to fill seats on the board.

"I didn't think we would do it," Shivlie said, following the election. "Each candidate ran unopposed, but I'm happy we were able to fill the positions."

Incumbents Shivlie, trustee

Helen Day of 10153 M-15 and secretary Agnes DeNise of 5380 Eastview Road, are all township residents and will be up for re-election in November when their terms expire.

New trustee officers are Grace

Hoyt of 11 S. Holcomb, Edna Miller of 64 W. Washington and Kitty Jones of 9200 Sashabaw.

Co-Chairman Sally Motsinger of 5185 Whipple Lake Road and treasurer Fern Schultz of 4354 Fowler Drive are also newly elected.

Wilcox starts election bid with lawn party

Stephen King:

The man who conjures up demons, trolls and other creepy messengers of evil

By Carolyn Walker
Clarkston News Special Writer
The words themselves carried the traditional ominous overtones: Good luck.

Local writer remembers the day she met the author of 'The Shining'

I wondered if our instructor had concluded everyone's assignment so optimistically.

It was 1977 and I was pushing a pencil just inches ahead of my seven-month-pregnant body; my English-journalism degree just over the horizon.

Similarly, it was a big year for Stephen King, author. He had enjoyed successes with his novels "Carrie" and "Salem's Lot" and had just arrived at the Detroit book and author's conference to promote his then new work, "The Shining."

From a class of 20 students, I won the coveted project: Interview Stephen King and write your final exam.

Instantly I was overcome with that terror which has become synonymous with this man's name.

According to a local bookstore, Stephen King has become the best-selling author of the 80's. His name and stories can be found everywhere from the hospital to the T-ball field.

When I read in this week's news that King had donated some of his personal papers and transcripts to a museum, it took me back to that day three years ago when I got my own, bona fide Stephen King thrill.

What does a pregnant woman from Clarkston say to a prominent author who admits he likes scaring the daylights out of people?

What goes on in the mind of a man who conjures up demons, trolls, and other messengers of evil?

I saw my grade point average flash before my eyes. I wasn't sure I could meet the challenge.

As it turned out, King was not a man possessed, but rather a former English teacher with a bounty of ideas suitable for titillating the minds of others.

He began writing because he felt compelled to play with the ideas which seemed to come to him, he said. He also admitted to an obsession with the macabre. His interest in horror began as a child when he attended such movies as "The Creature from the Black Lagoon."

His liking for suspense movies and spook stories stayed with him into adulthood.

Ideas were hard to find when actively looking, King said. They came better when his mind was in neutral. He was quick to add, however, that not all ideas are easily computed into stories.

King confessed he had only taken one idea from a dream.

As a child, he said, he would have a recurrent dream of looking into a room where there would be a suicidal hanging. He worked this idea into his novel "Salem's Lot."

Although he does write some things dealing with other topics,

King said he had more fun with suspense; drawing from real life and patterning his characters after people he had known.

The little boy in his book "The Shining" was drawn strictly from imagination, he added. Calling him, "very likable," he said he was most pleased with this character and mentioned he is the kind of son everyone would want to have.

One would guess that anyone able to put out such numerous stories of horror by the age of 30 had faced some unknown terror in his own life.

This was not the case with King.

Nearing the end of our interview King said aside from his own experiences with déjà-vu, his most eerie sensations came from seeing the products of his imagination come to life on the screen.

Three of King's books have been made into motion pictures; some of them like "Carrie" and "The Shining" turned America's sweethearts such as John Carolyn Walker snapped this photo of Stephen King, who has since grown a beard, in 1977.

Travolta and Jack Nicholson into mock-monsters.

His future books are sure to follow. It's hard to keep a good ghost down.

Buy a vote: (Un)Lucky winner gets the goat

Buy a "goat vote" to help raise "John Dough" and transform an outdoor privy into indoor plumbing.

What?!?!
For the third year running, the Clarkston Village Players are selling vote tickets as opposed to raffle tickets.

Ticket buyers nominate a friend or foe as their candidate to win the drawing prize—a goat!

The "dough" raised through ticket purchases will be used to pay for the construction of an indoor lavatory facility at the Player's Depot Theatre on White Lake Road, Independence Township.

"It's really a fun kind of thing," said Doris Lipstaff, Village Player. "People have a hard time understanding that they are not buying a raffle ticket for a goat, rather that they write on the ticket who their candidate is to win the goat.

"Of course the more tickets with that one person's name the better the chances are that he/she will win the goat," she said. "And of course we post how many tickets have been bought for any one person."

Currently, patrons of the Depot Theatre make use of a Johnny-on-the-Spot but funds raised through ticket sales should end all that, she said.

"We want to install indoor plumbing," Doris said, "and not have to use the outdoor facilities available now."

Goat vote tickets are $1 each or six for $5 and are available by calling Doris at 625-8599.

The goat drawing will be held Labor Day, Monday Sept. 1 in the Depot Road park, Clarkston.

The winner is dubbed "Goat Herder of the Year" and a procession of well-wishers embark together and deliver the goat to its new owner, Doris said.

"It's all in fun," she said. "If the Goat Herder of the Year doesn't want the goat, we'll take it back to the place where we got it, so there's no problem."

Alvin Caverly of Waldon Road, Independence Township, displays his goat, ready to be purchased through the sale of "Goat-vote" tickets. The little no-name kid is scheduled for a Sept. 1 delivery to the winner of this year's goat-vote campaign. The big gray goat in the background is Herkimer, last year's prize in the contest.

His novel is accepted for publication

Local writer's 'Dream' comes true

By Marilyn Trumper

From the time he was 8 years old, Richard C. Downer wanted to write a book.

That was in 1936.

In 1979 he set out to write a novel.

Now, a year later, he sits comfortably in the kitchen of his home on Villa Crest Drive in Springfield Township and smiles.

A 44-year-old dream has become a reality.

The novel's title is "Dancer's Dream" and this month Richard received word from Carlton Press, Inc., a subsidiary publishing company, that the book would be on the stands within a year.

"For over 15 years I've had the idea in my head for this book," he said. "But I've wanted to write from the time I was 8 years old."

"The only way I knew I could ever do it was if I used people I knew as characters in the book. I did, and it's my own fantasy put into book form," he said.

A copy of the book is not available for review, but Carlton Press Inc., sums up the novel this way: "Dancer's Dream" is a big, lusty, epic novel about a middle aged man who decides that life is too short and he might just as well go and 'do his own thing'... he does.

Dancer, the protagonist, abducts three young sisters, takes them to a secluded hideaway...

...after a time they "adopt" Dancer as their father.

Humor, gripping human drama, and some unexpected events in this story add up to rich reading experience...

...with an ending that caps a solidly plotted action tale."

It took five months to write Dancer's Dreams, Richard said, and laughs as he admitted he's a one-finger typist.

"Yup, all with one finger, but I hired a girl to type the final copy," he said.

A sequel to "Dancer's Dream" is already completed that took 10 months to write, he said. Already Richard is working on a third book.

"We'll wait and see how the first one sells and then go on from there," he said. "But I'm hopeful."

Every member of Richard's immediate five-member family is in the book, several good friends and some neighbors, he said.

"They were all thrilled about it," he said. "Especially the neighbors. Anyone who has read any of the original draft or listened to the tapes of the book all think it would make a good movie.

"I've hoped for a lot in my life and many's the time a good dream has been shot down, so I won't hope for too much. But it would make one good movie," he said, pulling out a piece of paper with the book's characters to one side, and the actors he's casted for the parts on the other side.

The novel is packed with members of the crime syndicate, violence, murder, fights, kidnapping, suicide, lesbian social workers and a plane crash, Richard says.

"There's a little bit of everything, but I loved writing it. And I love writing."

On one kitchen wall several pictures hang in frames,

A single wall of the kitchen displays the characters in each book Downer has written. When working before the typewriter he often views the photographs for reference, a way of conjuring ideas to life.

Author and one-finger typist Richard C. Downer works on his third novel in the kitchen of his Springfield Township home. Downer has just received word that his first book, "Dancer's Dream" is to be released for sale within a year.

Yellow Cab in Pontiac 10 years ago.

He quit school at the age of 9, he said, and laughs.

"You know it's funny, but people always think that to be an author you have to be someone with an education. I don't, and here I am."

He holds a special memory for a woman by the name of Mrs. Iva O'Neill, former principal of Donaldson Elementary School in Pontiac.

He can point to each person, recite his or her name and many scenes from the novel and reveal their personalities, their likes and dislikes and feelings.

"Sometimes when my best friend Sam and I talk about the book, it almost seems as if we live the book, as if we become the characters," he said. "Sam is in the book too."

"Sam's the one I celebrated when the book was accepted for publication," he said. "We broke out a half-pint."

"But when I first got the news, I sat down and cried, real tears. I'd waited to do the book for so long and it finally came true."

"All my life I never really had any confidence in myself, people always told me I'd never amount to anything, but now I have the book," he said.

"She was my principal when I was in grade school," he smiled.

"She always told me that I could amount to something if I put my mind to it."

The book came along very naturally when he was writing, he said. It was a daily exercise, as was the second book.

"But I'm taking my time on the third book because I don't have that urge to get it down like the first two," he said, sitting before his typewriter with a half-finished page.

"Dancer's Dream" was written on the kitchen table with a Smith-Corona manual typewriter given to him by a friend, he said.

Married to the same woman for 22 years, Richard smiled and said everyone in the house cooperated with silence while he worked.

Suffering from emphysema, he said he still smokes too much and lights another cigarette. "But I'm doing what I like to do, and that feels good."

He's still waiting to approve the jacket cover for "Dancer's Dream" which will be out in hardback, selling for $9.95 a copy, he proudly said.

"With my picture on the back cover and a biography."

Heat pump heats, cools—and saves money, too

By Al Zawacky

The device that sits in the middle of the basement of the new home on 12500 Rattalee Lake Rd. looks like an ordinary furnace.

But it's not. It's an electric "heat pump," and therein lies the key to this Springfield Township home's "EEE" award, a citation created by Detroit Edison for builders adhering to strict energy conservation standards.

"EEE" might stand for "Energy Efficiency Excellence," but in practical terms a fourth "E" begins to emerge dominant—"economy."

"This unit (the heat pump) will heat a home for half the price of regular electric heat," says Don Frericks, owner of Frericks Home, Inc., the firm building the almost completed house.

"It's still more expensive than gas, but with gas going up 15 percent and more each year and electricity going up less than that, the two are starting to even out."

But a heat pump has an advantage over a conventional gas furnace, Frericks points out. Not only does a heat pump heat, it cools as well.

"It heats and cools using the same principle as an air conditioner," he explains.

The new home on 12500 Rattalee Lake Rd. in Springfield Township has earned a Detroit Edison "EEE" award for builder Don Frericks, owner of Frericks Homes, Inc. of Pontiac.

Simply put, freon gas circulates between an outdoor and indoor unit, absorbing heat from the outside and releasing it inside in the winter, and just reversing the process to cool the house in the summer.

"The freon will draw heat out of the air at any temperature, day or night," he says. "It can heat the entire house even when it's freezing outside."

When the outdoor temperature dips below about 25 degrees Fahrenheit, however, the heat pump unit has to supplement the outdoor heat brought in by the freon with conventional electric heat built into the unit.

The cost of operating the heat pump is comparable to operating a combination gas furnace and air conditioner unit, according to Frericks.

"When you add the cost of operating separate air conditioner to the gas furnace, the cost of the heat pump is fairly comparable to the two," he says.

The heat pump isn't the only energy-saver in the home. Extensive insulation, weather stripping, energy-conscious appliances, doors and windows are also featured.

And in the midst of all this modern technology sits another energy-miser near the home's big bay windows—a wood-burning stove.

"Wood can make a difference," Frericks says.

The stove has its own vent leading to the outside air built in to the special brick platform it sits on.

By drawing outside air through the vent as it burns, the stove doesn't expel warm room air through the chimney and thus heats more efficiently, he says.

The home is being built for Dr. and Mrs. Donald Smith, Frericks says. A retired physician, Dr. Smith and his wife currently live in Waterford Township.

The outside heat pump unit looks like a conventional air-conditioning condenser, says builder Don Frericks.

The Canary Islands are part of Spain and are noted for being one of the world's natural gardens. The perfumed smell of exotic fruits and flowers inhabit the islands making them a superb vacation ground. A few of the plants growing are hibiscus, jasmine, honeysuckle, fig and orange. Long ago, the Canary's were charted by seamen as being very close to the end of the "flat" world. There are actually seven islands and various inlets. The temperature is that of spring year round with warm, dry winds which come from Africa.

Clarkston United Methodist pays debt early

Members of Clarkston United Methodist Church plan to celebrate their freedom from debt with a mortgage burning ceremony Sunday.

The Clarkston United Methodist Church is to be dedicated debt free at a special Mortgage Burning and Dedication Service Sunday, Aug. 24, at the 10 a.m. worship service.

The mortgage was paid off about seven years early said the Rev. James Balfour, pastor of the church.

"We were able to pay it off early, which was a blessing," Balfour said.

Bishop Edsel Ammons, resident bishop of the Michigan Area of the United Methodist Church, is to preside at the service and preach the sermon, and the Rev. James Craig, Flint District superintendent, is to participate.

Organized in 1840 as a Methodist Church, the congregation has occupied three church buildings.

The first church, located at Church and Buffalo streets in Clarkston, was built between 1841 and 1847.

In 1873, the frame building was moved and a brick church was built at the same location. The congregation outgrew this church.

During the ministry of the Rev. William Richards

(1956-63), the present seven-acre site was given to the church in memory of Mr. and Mrs. Eber D. Parent, the parents of Mrs. Howard Huttenlocher.

The parsonage at 6599 Church was built in 1958.

Ground was broken for the sanctuary unit July 24, 1960 and it was consecrated Sept. 17, 1961.

During the ministry of the Rev. Frank A. Cozadd (1967-75), the education unit was consecrated on May 11, 1969. Howard Huttenlocher served as chairman of both building committees.

Valued at more than $1.5 million, the Georgian Colonial church serves a membership of more than 1,000.

The present church staff includes Balfour; the Rev. Jon Clapp as part-time assistant pastor; Charlotte Cowdin, education assistant; Barbara Steele, director of music; Judy Mellen, assistant organist; Lois Roosa, church secretary; Eileen Kortge, financial secretary; and Wesley Walter, custodian.

The public may attend the Dedication Service. A reception is to be held in Fellowship Hall following the service.

Interested persons can also ask questions at the Sweet Adeline booth to be set up inside the Pontiac Mall on Telegraph Road from Aug. 23 through Sept. 4.

The fund-raiser includes a demonstration on early American crafts, refreshments, door prizes and entertainment by the Sweet Adelines.

Tickets are available at $3.50 each.

From bad to worse

by Herb Rose

When we moved into our house, it was obvious that the kitchen had been installed along the general design concept of the Black Hole of Calcutta and I promised Anne that improvements would be made immediately.

"Immediately" is a word that lends itself to interpretation. But, after about a decade, it was becoming difficult to find a definition that suited.

I started work by taking out some of the make-do changes that I had installed temporarily. "Temporarily" has no more firm definition than "immediate."

Initially, it was difficult to convince anyone that I was improving things. A wall disappeared and, unfortunately, so did part of the floor.

Ours was one of the few kitchens in the world where you could break a leg by careless step and the dog could bury bones inside. Cabinets disappeared and all dishes, utensils and much non-perishable food was stored on some old bookcases or cardboard cartons.

It was like living in a bargain-rate summer cottage.

We were living in an atmosphere of white dust which routinely covered everything, generated by the sanding operations associated with wall and ceiling repair and rebuild.

If a plate of doughnuts was left uncovered, the selection would be reduced from nutty and chocolate to exclusively powdered sugar.

When I found Anne pensively wiping the ubiquitous dust out of a cup in preparation for coffee and accused her of being fastidious, she showed me where the label suggested the compound be kept out of the reach of children and pets.

I thought of pointing out that she was neither a child nor a pet, but decided that demonstrations of forensic excellence might be greeted coolly.

The new cabinets were promised for June 16th, and we knew that with their receipt the graph that plotted kitchen usability would start upward. June 16th passed unheralded by cabinet deliveries.

So, unfortunately, did June

17th, 18th and all other numbers associated with June. By the time we were given a firm delivery date of July 11th, all kitchen-oriented discussions tended toward the monosyllabic.

July 11th passed—slowly. Only July 12th, I was told the cabinets had been stained the wrong color and the delivery date was now August 4th.

August 4th came and went without cabinets, which was hardly a surprise. The current promise date is August 22nd.

It is discouraging to think of spending my declining years in a cabinetless kitchen realizing that future generations will be admonished not to go to Grampa's house lest they fall through the hole in the floor.

My greatest fear is that the cabinets will be promised "before snow." Experience has shown that this expression does not necessarily mean before snow falls.

It could mean before snow burns with a green flame.

Grapes flourish in Fords' vineyard

Country Living by Al Zawacky

Howard and Fran Ford survey the vineyard behind their Springfield Township home and say they expect anywhere from "one to four tons" of grapes this season.

That's quite a bit—even for a family that's been making wine for the past 10 years.

"We used to live in Grosse Pointe, and I used to grow some there," says Howard, noting that living on 12 acres in rural Springfield provides a far better opportunity to plant the purple-colored fruit.

"We're thinking of selling some of the grapes—having a 'You-Pick,' where people can come and pick their own," says Fran. "We've done that before with the strawberries and raspberries we grow."

Howard's grape-growing and wine-making are hobbies he shares with an old Grosse Pointe friend, Clyde Gross. Several times a week, Clyde takes the long trek from Grosse Pointe to the Ford home on Farley Road to work in the vineyard.

The two friends currently make wine for their own personal use, but think they might obtain a license and sell wine sometime in the future.

"I've always liked growing things," Howard says. "Growing the grapes and making your own wine is interesting—and fun."

"I think the guys like to discuss wine making as much as anything," Fran says with a chuckle. "They'll work two hours and discuss four hours."

Howard planted the vineyard three years ago when he and his wife moved to Springfield. This marks the first season that the plants have produced usable fruit.

Although the plants have bore fruit before, the grapes had to be removed because the plants were too immature to maintain them without putting great stress on them, explains Clyde.

"We get a heck of a lot of satisfaction out of this," he says. "If you could see the dying little stumps we had at first, you'd know what we mean."

Some of the duties of maintaining the plants are spraying for bugs and checking the grapes' sugar content with a specially designed refractor that measures sugar content in percent.

One of the duties involved in growing wine grapes is checking regularly for sugar content. Here, Clyde [left] uses the refractor to determine the grape juice's sugar percentage, while Howard takes another sample from the vine.

Another job is covering the grapes with netting—because birds "don't need a refractor to tell them when the grapes are sweet," Howard jokes.

After the grapes are picked and squeezed a hand-operated wine press, the juice is sterilized and implanted with the desired wine-making yeast, Howard says.

The olden days of wine-making—when the naturally occurring yeasts on the skin of the grape were relied upon to consume sugar and turn out alcohol and carbon dioxide—are over, Clyde notes.

"When you had to deal with natural fermentation, you had as many failures as successes—in fact, probably more failures," he says. "There are close to 30 different strains of wine yeast, and each one will have a different effect."

"With the coming of (French biologist and bacteriologist Louis Pasteur), we're now able to identify the different strains and can be sure of the results."

There are, of course, several other factors in the quality of the wine produced, Howard adds—things like climate, moisture, the type of grape used and length of aging.

As one might expect, a special corner of the Ford basement is set aside for use as a wine cellar, where the homemade wines are stored and allowed to age.

A novice starting out in wine-making can't expect to taste the fruit of his labor for some time, Howard points out.

"It depends on the wine, but some reds need anywhere from two to four years (of aging)," he says. "But there are some white wines that only take about a year."

Although he enjoys making his own, commercial wines are also present in the Ford home.

"I'll buy some wine for the sake of comparison with what we're making," Howard says. "I enjoy it with my meal."

"We try and limit our own intake, but we enjoy it," Fran adds. "It's something we can always treat our guests with when we have company over."

The Fords' have two grown children living away from home. Their daughter Debbie is 26 and son Howard III is 21.

Fran recalls it didn't take very long for she and her husband to decide to move from Grosse Pointe to the Clarkston area three years ago.

"Howard wanted to move to the country, and I was scheduled to take some pictures at Andersonville Elementary School," says Fran, who works as a photographer with Michigan School Pictures.

"Once I saw Clarkston, I told Howard he should come and see it too. Once we saw the town together, we knew this was where we wanted to live."

Fran and Howard Ford toast each other in the living room of their Springfield Township home with some of their homemade wine. The Ford home has all the attributes of a professional winery—a large vineyard in the backyard, a wine press and wine cellar in the basement and some discerning tasters.

Pregnant teens may attend classes

The Oxford School District is offering an educational program for expecting or full-fledged teenage mothers.

Young women can earn up to two and one-half credits a semester while in the program, said Karne Eckert, director of Teens Learning to Care.

"We offer a free day care center to sit with the mother's children while they take classes," she said. "It's an alternative learning program for those who have dropped out of school and wish to continue with their education."

There is no fee for the program and all students are asked to register by Sept. 8.

Classes are held five days a week from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. in the Oxford School District, and Clarkston residents must find their own transportation to and from school.

The program offers high school completion classes, classes in child development, pre-natal and health, career and vocational counseling and money management.

Throughout the year, a social worker from the Oakland County Family and Children Services and an Oakland County Public Nurse will be on hand to contribute to the curriculum, Eckert said.

"The important thing is that Waterford has discontinued their program which is like this, and the Clarkston School District does not offer one," she said. "Ours is open to anyone of any age."

To make an appointment for registration phone the Oxford Community Education Department at 628-1586.

More Country Living

Within a week, after their first visit, the Fords found their present home through a real estate agent and were ready to make the move.

"We like the smallness of the town—all the people are very friendly," Howard says.

But the move did have one drawback—Howard works as an engineer supervisor at the Chrysler Motors plant near Detroit City's Airport.

That translates into a 43-mile drive to work each morning, and another 43-mile trek home at night.

"It's not really that bad—it takes me about an hour, and I joined a car pool two years ago, so I share the driving," he says.

"Everybody's optimistic, and so am I," Howard adds about his employer's future. "I think the K-car Chrysler's soon-to-be-marketed new model is going to do really well."

In addition to their gardening hobby, Fran enjoys playing the piano, while Howard often spends his time in the winter months doing some household decorating.

"But only under protest and under threats from my wife," he chuckles, referring to his decorating work. "And that's only in the winter—from Easter to Thanksgiving, you can't get me into the house—I'm always out in the yard."

Neal Hoxsie of Clarkston stands alongside Western Michigan University's entry in the "Econorally," a 3500 mile drive aimed at getting the best individual miles-per-gallon record. Neal is student project leader for the rally that began Aug. 6 and continued through Aug. 18. A senior at WMU, he is the son of Mrs. Wilma Hoxsie of Washington Street. Hoxsie and a team of WMU Department of Transportation Technology students eliminated as much metal and weight as possible from the car by replacing it with formed urethane pourfoam. The car was damaged in unloading from a ship and given free to WMU by Toyota. The car is one of 11 competing and is the only American entry from west of the Mississippi. They are to travel in a convoy from Western Washington University, the rally sponsor, to Washington, D.C. Hoxsie is one of five WMU students participating in the trip. Several schools hope to average 100 miles to the gallon fuel. They will be powered by gasoline, propane or diesel oil. Also pictured, behind the wheel, is WMU President John T. Bernhard.

Seniors' flea market this weekend

Handmade crafts, homebaked goods, freshly roasted sweet corn and an array of new and used items are all part of the Flea Market planned by Independence Township Senior Citizens.

The two-day event is to be held Friday, Aug. 22, and Saturday, Aug. 23, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Flea Market will include 13 tables of bargains and it will be held outdoors, weather permitting.

There will also be a 50-50 raffle and a raffle for a 72-by-90-inch handstitched quilt with a colorful hit and miss patchwork pattern.

The senior citizen center is located at 5980 Clarkston-Orion, adjacent to Clintonwood Park between M-15 and Sashabaw Road.

All proceeds from the event are to go toward the senior citizen program.

Club notes

The Clinton Valley Barracks and Auxiliary World War I members gathered at the home of Jannetta and Clifford Pierce on Addis Road in Holly for a picnic dinner Aug. 9.

Present were guests from Fenton, Lansing and Royal Oak; Mrs. Lillian Sparks of Fenton celebrated her birthday at the event. Joseph Hughes of Lansing brought along the helmet and gas mask he'd used in the trenches of France, as many wives and widows had never actually seen the workings of a gas mask.

A short business meeting was held after the picnic to announce the National Convention site and date. No member of the Clinton Valley Barracks will be attending, but the convention will take place in Chicago the first week of September.

Members will be soliciting donations for veterans hospitals in the upcoming weeks. The groups next meeting will be in the Springfield Township Hall, 650 Broadway, Springfield Township Sept. 13. Their district meeting noon potluck dinner will be held in Lansing Sept. 24.

Alice Rioux hosted the Clinton Valley Barracks and Auxiliary of World War I at her home on Davisburg Road, Springfield Township, for last month's meeting.

Nineteen showed up in spite of the rain that kept some members away.

The sun came out and was just right for picture taking later in the afternoon.

Vern Ridgeway, home from the hospital in Goodrich, was there. Dr. Hazen Atkins drove his wife from their home in Clarkston to attend.

Guests were from Fenton, Waterford and Royal Oak.

The next picnic is planned Aug. 9 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Pierce of Addis Road, Holly.

Those desiring rides may call 634-4717 or 625-3539.

Gardening problems? Call the hotline

Certainly the summer of 1980 will be remembered as the greenest and growingest summer.

Can anyone recall a previous month of August when one needed to mow the lawn twice a week to keep it from resembling a hayfield? August in Michigan commonly is the time when frequent watering is necessary and dry lawns, further west and south of us and sent the rains to us instead. Let us be thankful.

Have you ever called the "Garden Hotline" for an answer to a bothersome garden problem?

The Hotline is but one of the services to come from the Oakland County office of the Cooperative Extension Service. It is an agency of the County, Michigan State University and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

To provide help with the answers to the multitude of calls that come to the office, a group of volunteers enrolled last winter in a course of instruction that provided them with the information and skills to answer many questions commonly asked by gardeners.

These "Master Gardeners" are on call on Mondays and Fridays from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. and usually on the other workday afternoons. Their number is 858-0902. The line is frequently busy but keep trying.

If they don't have the needed information available they have the help of Horticulturist Gregory Patchin and a host of specialists of his departments at the University.

Another service of the office is their "Handy Hints on Call"—a recorded bit of information on how to solve many current home and gardening problems. That number is 858-2519.

One problem for the home gardener this season is what to do with all the grass clippings, stalks, leaves, husks and peelings and trimmings from vegetables. Later there will be the bigger problem of bushels of leaves from our shade trees.

One good way to use these materials and also be a good conservationist is to maintain a compost pile. Webster defines compost as "a mixture of various substances for fertilizing the ground."

A compost pile can be just that, a heap or pile of any easily decomposable materials.

Many gardeners, however, prefer to put the refuse materials in an enclosure made of sheet metal, boards, wire fencing or cement blocks. It is best to locate the compost in an out-of-the-way corner of the garden far enough so the view and the odor will not be objectionable.

To speed decomposition of the composting materials try the following: First, spread the materials into layers six to eight inches thick. Then over each of the layers as they accumulate put a small amount of commercial fertilizer, 5-20-20 or 4-16-16 analysis.

About 3 cups to a bushel of compost material is adequate.

Then, to insure having the proper bacteria to start the decomposing of the material, add just a thin layer of soil. Finally—and most important—keep the pile moist. If you turn over and mix the materials occasionally they will become compost much more quickly—as soon as three or four weeks.

A handy but rather expensive tool to aid in composting is a shredder. This power tool breaks up the stems and leaves and greatly speeds up the decomposing process. It also allows one to use up the woody trimmings from shrubs and trees. The shredded materials are also much easier to mix.

A recent issue of the National Geographic Magazine contains a fascinating and well-illustrated article telling of the things that take place in a compost pile. You will be surprised at all that takes place—it's very interesting.

'Butterflies' delectable as French pastry

Butterflies Are Free
By Leonard Gershe
Brandon S.T.A.G.E.
Spring Lake Country Club
Dinner Theatre

The newest Brandon S.T.A.G.E. production designed to entertain the dinner theatre crowd at the Spring Lake Country Club is Leonard Gershe's 1969 Broadway play "Butterflies Are Free."

While it is tempting to say that a dinner theatre play is tasty, this play, which opened last Sunday night to play through the end of the month, is as delectable as a sinful French pastry.

About a blind boy, Don Baker, who is trying to live independently of his loving but sometimes blindly overprotective mother, the play probes relationships and involvements.

In his first apartment in New York, Baker meets his kooky, flighty next door neighbor, Jill Tanner, who tempts him to fall in love. Jill generally runs out on relationships before she can discover any real depth or meaning in one.

Don, for his part, has had only one chance to learn about love and was disappointed in it.

Don's mother comes to New York to assure herself that Don is getting along alright and interferes with what she views as a relationship headed for disaster. Jill, a budding actress, finds a new lover in an off-Broadway dictator.

In the climatic second act, Don, angry at losing Jill, shouts at her that she is emotionally retarded and a cripple.

"I'd rather be blind," he says.

Mike Roberts, a last minute replacement for the original lead, turned in a credible performance as Don. Janice Turnbull as his mother had her sneers and sarcasm in the right places and looked like the kind of mother you would like to hate, but she needed fine tuning. Some of her lines were too slow.

However, the final scene with

Don indicated she has the potential in this part when she becomes more comfortable in it.

Jack Schuelke as Ralph Austin has a much smaller role, but his dress and expression when he discovers Mrs. Baker is from Scarsdale was a delight.

Molly McGuire, as Jill, is vivacious and flighty. Her brightness and consistency as the shallow, irresponsible nineteen-year-old keeps the play on the right track.

Young Beth DeWilde (Roberts and McGuire are high school students and DeWilde is a recent high school graduate) also deserves considerable credit for pulling this play together despite various mishaps to the cast.

A further word should be said for the food at Spring Lake Country Club. A dinner theatre isn't going to go very far without food that lives up to the performance. If the dinner and service before the show is disappointing, the actors have at least one strike against them.

At Spring Lake, the food was a delicious prologue to Gershe's comedy.

Molly McGuire (left), as Jill Tanner, is the shallow, irresponsible 19-year-old at odds with Janice Turnbull who portrays an overbearing, dominant mother in Brandon S.T.A.G.E.'s "Butterflies Are Free."

MDA benefit carnival raises $138

Kids frolic for good cause

The Eiden's front lawn on Ellis Road in Independence Township filled to capacity last Wednesday, as neighborhood parents and kids swarmed in to participate in a muscular dystrophy fund-raiser.

Colorful balloons filled the air, multi-painted faces of clowns smiled brightly and the atmosphere of fun swelled with youngsters' anticipations.

Games included the duck-grab, the sucker game, shoot the hole-in-one and a Willie Wonka prize machine.

Kids lined up to slip a ticket in the slot and miraculously a prize popped out of the silver chute.

A sale table laden with tasty cupcakes and other delectable delights awaited hungry appetites.

"We wanted to help out the Muscular Dystrophy Association and raise money," said Amy Eiden, engineering her fourth annual fund-raiser for the association.

"We wanted to help those kids who are not able to do this kind of stuff."

Other fund-raising volunteers are Shelly and Kim Heyman, Dawn Diederich, Lisa Eiden and Wendi and Sheri Morgan.

The group was shooting for a $100 target total and in less than one hour had raised over $70 for their cause.

The total tally was $138, which Amy says she will call into the Jerry Lewis Telethon on Labor Day.

Shelly Huyman finds there's never a dull moment at the ticket counter, as Todd McLauchlin comes around for another handful of tickets for game playing.

Photos by Marilyn Trumper

Carefully aiming for the par two shot, Chad McLauchlin sidles up to the hole and lines the ball up.

Michael Schweitzer feeds the Willie Wonka surprise factory one more ticket as sister Karla waits in anticipation. Marvelous goodies always fall from the silver-colored shoot.

Derek Dierderich punches down hard on the rocket launch and sends it flying through the loop. Wendi Morgan, behind the clown face, is kept busy at one of the popular games as Michael McArdle waits his turn in line.
