Court oks Pine Knob's 185' ski run

Independence plans appeal

By Marilyn Trumper

Pine Knob Investment Co. can apply for a building permit to erect a 185-foot high ski run without site plan approval, following a ruling in Oakland County Circuit Court.

Judge Francis X. O'Brien made the decision on Nov. 19, based on what he termed a "narrow issue of the law."

Independence Township officials have said all along that the proposed ski run must go for site plan approval, and there are immediate plans to file an appeal in the case, according to Supervisor James B. Smith.

O'Brien reversed an earlier decision by the township's zoning board of appeals which required Pine Knob's proposed ski run to have site plan approval from the township planning commission before a building permit could be issued.

"The issue for the courts to decide was whether the proposed structure was an addition to an existing structure," O'Brien said, "and was, therefore, required to have site plan approval."

Stressing that he had visited the proposed site, O'Brien explained his ruling.

"A view of the site shows 40 feet of fill on top of the hill, and a ski tow. I saw that to be constructed as a structure. I said, 'Yes, it's a combination of man-made fill and an apparatus.' But what they're (Pine Knob) proposing to erect does not attach to the filled area," he said.

The supporting columns of the ski run are to be attached to the natural part of the hill, O'Brien said.

"Taking all that into account, the court ruled the zoning board's 3-2 decision had to be reversed," he said. "This proposed structure does not constitute an addition to an existing structure."

The focal point of debate between Pine Knob and Independence Township has been Section 5.12 of the township's zoning ordinance which outlines rules for site plan review.

The township has argued that the erection of the proposed ski run would be an addition to an existing structure — the hill — requiring it to have site plan approval.

Pine Knob has charged the township illegally denied a building permit and site plan review is not necessary.

The township has 20 days to file an appeal after the court's order is filed, Smith said.

According to plans submitted to Independence Township's Building Department, Pine Knob proposes the construction of a 185-foot high ski run which would rise five feet above the current radio tower on the Knob's highest peak.

The ski run is to be constructed of poured concrete and steel and to measure approximately 92 feet wide with 80 feet in the center for skiing.

New face

There's a new face on the Clarkston Village Council.

Monday night, council members unanimously approved the appointment of Vondell Gardner to fill the vacant trustee position left when Robert Adams resigned.

Gardner, of 71 N. Main, has been a village resident 15 years.

Kelly Drain speeds Chestnut Hills development

By Marilyn Trumper

It's taken two years for Hugh Garner, owner of Winchester Real Estate, to come as close as he has to receiving final plat approval of Chestnut Hills subdivision in Independence Township.

To reach this point, Garner is utilizing a natural low-lying area now called the Kelly Drain and he's compensated several Birdland residents for access to that easement.

In addition, Garner has delivered a settlement of $3,500 to four homeowners now living in the proposed subdivision.

In 1978, Garner received tentative preliminary plat approval for 75 acres off Maybee Road slated for the construction of 135 homes.

The new subdivision is adjacent to Independence Township's Birdland.

Garner's first step was to sell four parcels of land to a builder to get a head start on the subdivision's construction. This is allowed by law prior to receiving final plat approval.

Garner said he did this with the express intent of re-signing the four homes back into the subdivision when he was ready to go for final plat approval.

Retention basins were installed according to county specifications, he said, but they did not function and would not function properly until the rest of the drainage system was installed.

The land was not draining correctly and the four homeowners living there wrestled with constant water problems.

"In the meantime," Garner said, "I wanted to clean out the existing natural drain."

The natural drain, or swail, which is a low-lying area, follows the sewer line through Birdland subdivision and has since dried up following the installation of sewers.

"The drain runs through some of the side lots in Birdland and some residents there didn't want us to use it," Garner said.

"First we went to the township board and they looked at it and declared a need for drainage. After they recognized the need we went to the county," he said.

The Clarkston News welcomes reader comments. There's a place for yours on page 6 or 7. Address it to 5 S. Main, Clarkston.

Robert H. Fredericks, chief deputy of the Oakland County Drain Commission picks up the story from there.

"The township board petitioned the county to provide a county drain for development," Fredericks said. "The property couldn't be developed until a drain was installed. Before he could use the swail we had to get an easement or condemnation for a right of way."

"We did that," Fredericks said. "Residents in Birdland were compensated at a cost negotiated by the developer or by the courts."

"Now, at first it was a natural, low-lying area, not a real drain. Now it will carry more water flow as development increases, because you have curbs and roads and there is more runoff," he said. "After the condemnation, when it became a county drain, it was named the Kelly Drain."

With the drainage problem resolved, the four residents living in Chestnut Hills still had not signed the final plat.

They felt I was obligated to pay for their wells and septic and I felt it was the builder's obligation. I couldn't have the plat approved until they signed and they weren't going to sign," Garner said.

"So, I paid them each $3,500. I should have final plat approval in the next 30 days, and by the beginning of January I hope to begin construction on the first 10 homes," Garner said.

"We began working on the Kelly Drain last week," he said. "It's going to cost me $250,000 to install the 42-inch culverts in the ground."

Doom & gloom for schools

'We'll see another Executive cut'—Kammer

Michigan's school districts are in for financial tough times.

Most are facing the problem of just trying to meet their December payroll and many will fail in this effort.

There are going to be many teachers looking at empty paychecks within the next couple of months.

State legislators are in agreement.

The money is not coming in to the state's coffers as had been planned in August. The common blame for this lack of money is on the automobile industry.

Cars are not selling and the state's revenue is not there to share.

A Chrysler executive explained to a state senatorial subcommittee looking at the state's industry that Michigan's climate for business is lousy.

Businesses are harassed by abusive Workmen's Compensation payments and high insurance rates.

"We have been looking at

Rep. Stacey does not promise any relief for Michigan's financially starved schools when he said, "This is the first time since the depression in the thirties that the state has actually taken in less than it did in the preceding year." According to Stacey, no one has any solutions for the state's financial bind but to make budgetary cuts.

"We must cut everything back to absolutely essential services," said Senator Kerry Kammer of Pontiac. The Senator heads the sub-committee on School Aid and is a member of the Senate's Appropriations Committee. The Appropriations Committee is exploring every level of state spending to find ways of making cuts.

Even though the Senate's School Aid Act - S.B. 1109 provides $709.5 million for schools, as recommended by the Governor, this represents a 24.5%

By Clem Cleveland, Director Public Relations, Benton Harbor Area Schools. He is a former editor of the Oxford Leader.

Kammer said school districts can expect to see at least a 11.5% cut from state revenue sources.

When asked if school districts may see any of this money returned to them over the course of the year, he said it wasn't likely they would.

As school districts may be facing deficit budgets for the current school year, Kammer said language will most likely have to be included permitting school districts to operate with deficits.

Kammer was asked what effect such language would have when districts begin to tell their vendors that they won't be paid because the districts have run out of money; or, what will happen when school districts default on their loan payments? Kammer had no solution to offer for this financial crises.

Many school districts in August were borrowing money to carry them over until the state monies came to them. With the December state aid payment being cut by 50%, school districts are now rushing to the banks asking for additional money to carry them for an additional month or two.

"We'll start receiving local revenue from property taxes after the first of the year. Right now, we need money to cover our December and January payroll," said Director of Business and Finance for Benton Harbor Area Schools, Kenneth Henry.

Henry also said, "It is going to become increasingly more difficult to get money from banks as most of them are nearing their limit on the amount of tax free loans they can make."

The state's budget contains two major areas where cuts in state spending can be made. The first is Human Services and the second is Education.

Presently, Education is being hardest hit by the reductions. There is a general reluctance to make further cuts in Human Services because of the high number of people unemployed in Michigan.

As Kammer works with the Appropriations Committee to explore who drives what car and questions how many cars the state can sell to cut its own transportation costs; or as one lawmaker suggested to the Governor that state appropriations be cut in support of the Executive mansion, including the laying off of staff, serving the mansion - none of these proposals are going to financially salvage Michigan's schools as they wrestle with the problem of ing economy, reduction in domestic auto sales; the state finds itself looking at a financial crisis.

Industry may talk about having to borrow billions to get back on its feet and with these billions, move their plants to areas with lucrative tax incentives; the situation for Michigan schools is a bleak dollars and cents picture.

Have to let schools operate in the red.

ty to make four cylinder engines in volume.

As Senator DeMassio wonders why Michigan is at the bottom of the financial heap of the fifty states, he need not look far for an answer.

The auto industry has complained for many years of the high costs of doing business in Michigan. Now, with a tighten-

Revenue from the state will not be coming to local districts, at least in the amounts they have been accustomed to budgeting.

To shift the tax burden from industry to the people of Michigan means one thing, people of this state will be paying higher taxes to the state to support programs they deem essential, like education.

Education being hardest hit by red budget reductions.

sites in Ohio," said the Chrysler Director of Federal, State, & Community Relations. "In Ohio, their paperwork with Workmen's Compensation is heavy, but their rates are much lower," he said.

Senator DeMassio of Detroit pleaded with the executive to explain how these abuses came about. "Why has industry waited so long to complain to us? What is it about this state that we are at the bottom of the 50? Tell us, what we can do to improve our situation?" he asked.

Armed with forecasts from the middle '70's, the Chrysler man said it was just a matter of time and all of Michigan's big automakers will be finding themselves in the same financial boat as Chrysler.

"There is a tremendous cash shortage in this country," he said. "As was said, first Chrysler, then Ford and even General Motors will be looking to borrow huge amounts of money." One hundred billion dollars may be needed by industry in the next couple of years for modernization. He had no answers for the senator's questions.

Representative Lad Stacey, from the 44th District, said lawmakers should be wrapping up the State's budget by the second week of December. "We have heard that we will conclude this lameduck session on December 12. This means we will have to have the budget completed by then."

reduction from the 1979/80 school aid package.

Combining the 24.5% cut with the general inflation rate of 12%, "schools will be losing 36.5% of their buying power," said Frank Cusmano in a memo directed to the House Republican Caucus.

According to Cusmano, the Governor's recommendations of $358.77 plus $46.50 a mill for all mills will become the basic formula for computing state aid on a per pupil share to districts.

The Governor's recommendation that school transportation figures be reduced nearly in half from last year's $102.8 million to $54.3 million will be followed.

Cusmano's memo indicates that the Democrats are likely to offer a slightly smaller formula of $345 plus $46.5 per pupil and all categories of state spending can be expected to be cut by 20% and 30% from last year's levels.

"Regardless of the Governor's $709.5 million proposal, we'll still see another Executive cut for schools before the year is out," said Kammer.

October state aid payments to school districts were reduced by a Governor's executive order by 1.5%.

December's payments scheduled for the first of this month are to be cut by 50% with a second payment to make up for the December cut being made by January 2, 1981, according to Kammer.

It's a doom and gloom forecast for Michigan schools.

Burning ban talks extinguished
They'll rekindle in January

To burn — or not to burn — that is the question.

According to Clarkston Village President Fontie Ap-Madoc, the issue of a ban on burning leaves won't be decided until January.

The council has set aside Jan. 26 as the date for a public hearing on the matter, she said, at Monday night's village council meeting.

"First we want to have Dr. James O'Neill on hand to talk about the dangers of burning leaves, and a member of the Michigan Lung Association to talk about pollution," she said.

"Whatever we decide, it won't be until January and won't affect this season," she said.

Visit Santa

Santa Claus is coming to town Friday.

He'll be visiting downtown Clarkston businesses from 1 to 2 p.m. on the day after Thanksgiving, and then the jolly old elf will sit in his special chair at The Clarkston Mills shopping mall from 2 to 6 p.m. to greet all good girls and boys. He'll be there Saturday, Nov. 29 from 1 to 6 p.m.

Then, every weekend until Christmas, he'll be on hand at The Clarkston Mills from 6 to 9 p.m. Fridays and from 1 to 6 p.m. Saturdays.

There'll be free candy canes for the kids.

The event is sponsored by the Clarkston Village Business Association.

Rural living hopes bashed by ruling

By Marilyn Trumper

A lot can happen in a year's time. Just ask Ruth Klein.

Last year, Ruth Klein and her husband purchased four lots in Sunny Beach Country Club's subdivision No. 2 with the intent of building a home.

In order to build, four lots were necessary to meet all setback requirements, Ruth said.

Their new home sits atop a big hill at 4855 Clarkston-Orion Road, Independence Township.

Ruth said this was the start of rural life.

Wednesday night, Independence Township's Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA), unanimously approved a front and rear setback variance request and a lot size variance for two vacant lots adjacent to Ruth's property.

Those two lots are slated to be the site of a future home.

"When we wanted to build, we had to buy extra lots. Now these people come along and can build on two lots. They're going to be close — right in my backyard," she said.

"If I'd wanted to live in the city with neighbors close next door I would have moved to the city, or to a place like Bunny Run in Lake Orion. That's where you can shake hands in the morning with your neighbor through the window before you even get dressed," she said.

Ruth said she and a neighbor are concerned that the proposed site of the new septic tank would be too close to their wells.

"I called the county and they're going to come out and measure the distance tomorrow to see if it's within the limit. But it looks too close to me and I think a mistake has been made," she said.

"Not only that, but the septic tank is going to be installed in the storm drainage ditch. It's my opinion that this will block up the ditch causing Clarkston-Orion Road to flood. In the winter, the water will freeze and it's going to be slippery and hazardous driving," she said.

Mel Vaara, chairman of the ZBA, explained the board's reasoning in granting the request for variances.

"There's a young couple who want to build a home on the two vacant lots," he said. "The lots aren't big enough to build on without having a variance."

"There is no vacant property on either side they can purchase. So we have two choices. Either we grant the variance and allow them to build or we declare it unbuildable and take it off the tax rolls. It was a unanimous decision," he said.

Vaara also stressed the applicant had the proper health permit from the county for the septic tank, the lot survey, the location of the well and a plot plan of the house.

The lady across the street was concerned that her well was too close to the proposed septic," Vaara said.

"The distance measure 70 feet and the county issued the permit."

The distance between the

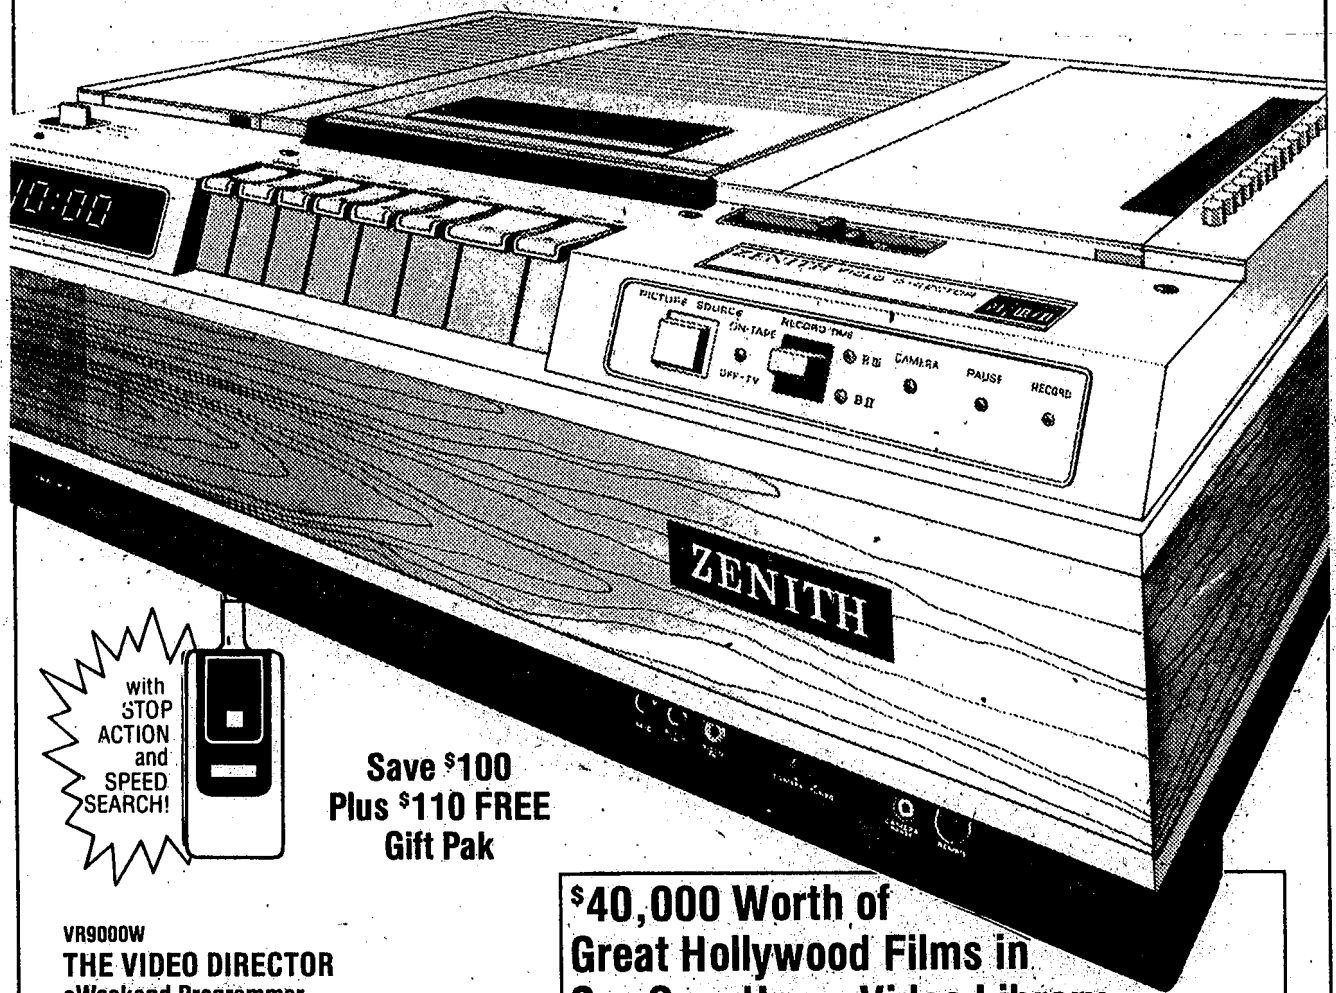

Klein's well and the proposed septic is 50 feet, he said, and 50 feet constitutes the minimum.

"We know she's upset with the decision," Vaara said, "and we instructed her she had the opportunity to go to the Court of Appeals and appeal our decision."

Ruth Klein has already consulted an attorney.

Letters to editor

Take lawn mower to 'em

To the editor:

As you now hear so much about the burning of leaves, I would like to make a few suggestions—

In the first place, I don't think that the burning of leaves once a year would cause so much pollution as to hurt anyone.

I like the smell of burning leaves.

In the second place, if the burning of leaves is banned, then what are we going to do with them?

It was suggested that we should put them in bags; but now, let me tell you something, and that is: I have immense maple trees in my yard and the falling leaves would cover the ground about 5 to 6 inches thick, and to put all of them in bags would be an almost impossible task.

I have a lawn mower which would grind the leaves into powder and not leave a trace of them, and on top of all this, it would put the ground-up leaves back into the soil as fertilizer.

I know this can be done, as I have been doing this for years and I have a beautiful lawn without ever having to use any commercial fertilizer.

I know that lawn mowers can be had to do this job at a much lesser cost than to put them in bags as some might suggest.

Think this over!

Wolo Weber

Just who is the villain?

Dear Editor:

This past week we had an unfortunate incident in our neighborhood that has left me very frustrated and angry.

After many months of putting up with stray dogs tearing up garbage in our garage, digging in our yard and doing "Do", we had had quite enough.

We thus joined a long list of other people complaining of these same animals. Because these animals are "street wise," the animal control officer was not able to apprehend the offenders.

Also, because of the numerous complaints, they asked if they could put a trap on our property, to which we said, "Yes."

This is when the real problem started. We have become the villains and have been harassed by neighbors for helping trap the strays. I feel this is very unjust.

I love and own animals myself and try very hard to be a responsible pet owner.

My animals do not mess in other people's yards, tear up their garbage or yards, or be a nuisance in general infringing on other people's rights.

I would like the judges to think about a few things:

1. Is it humane to let an animal roam to be hit by a car and be maimed for life; or lie alongside the road to die a slow, painful death? (Of course this would vindicate the owner because it was an "accident.")

2. What about the poor person who hits that animal and the guilt he goes through—even though it's not his fault?

3. Have you ever seen an animal that's been poisoned—the pain and suffering it goes through? The way its stomach blows up like a balloon? Other people around here have tried this method with varying results.

4. Is it humane to shoot an animal with a pellet gun to keep them out of the garbage? Some think that's all right.

5. Have you ever seen the suffering an animal goes through from getting soft bones out of garbage? These bones splinter and tear their insides apart.

6. Have you seen animals maimed by other animals in a territorial dispute? It can get pretty nasty.

7. What about the trauma a small child goes through when attacked by a stray animal?

Well, I'm sorry, but I do not feel that leaving an animal to roam is doing them a favor or treating them more humanely than keeping them confined in ones home or on a chain or leash. It is simply not being a responsible pet owner to turn them loose on your neighbors.

I resent being judged and made a villain for calling the animal control center.

I also cannot understand how it can be justified to let a dumb animal go through the above mentioned things and still have a clear conscience.

Who, therefore, is the villain; the person who lets his pet roam, or the person who tries to rectify the situation by calling for help?

It is truly unfortunate that people do not take the responsibility of owning a pet seriously. What is even more unfortunate is the poor, dumb animal that is owned by these people.

Thank you for letting me air my views on this subject.

Maybe some good will come of all this if it makes people think of the responsibility involved in owning a pet before they get one.

Prodigious guineas

by Kathy Greenfield

My husband is an animal lover.

Notice that I didn't say he likes animals, but that he loves animals.

That means we've had almost every variety of domesticated pet known to man—dogs, cats, birds, fish. And guinea pigs.

The guinea pig saga started with two females—one for each of our children.

They lived about four years, an average lifespan for the furry little creatures.

We liked them. They were quiet, odor-free and happy to be held whenever desired. My children even trained them to jump small spaces for a lettuce leaf treat and their coos were soothing when anyone had a rough day.

When the first one died, it was traumatic. We buried him and my son fashioned a gravestone by burning his name into a piece of wood.

After a few days, he and my husband began their search. Sure enough, they found another guinea pig with the same coloring and fur type as Chip. Thus, Chip II joined our menagerie.

She was a female, just like Chip I. Great.

Shortly after her arrival, we noticed she was getting fat. Yep, she was pregnant.

Cute little creatures, baby guinea pigs. One was a male.

We discovered his sex quite by accident, when the babies began having babies. There were guinea pigs in straw-filled boxes spreading throughout our home.

"Call the pet shop," we instructed our son with panicked voices. "See if they'll buy them."

"They will," came his delighted answer, "but we have to wait until they're four weeks old."

When he called back, they had enough guinea pigs for the moment. We gave two away to a neighbor.

Everything you've ever heard about the fast reproduction rate of a guinea pig is true.

We knew for sure that another one was ready to have babies and we had removed the males to avoid further fathering.

We got desperate. "Call the pet store again," we said.

He did and they were ready to buy. We immediately loaded the crew into our car and drove off.

We sold seven and kept one. The money didn't even cover the cost of the first one and that wasn't even counting all the guinea pig pellets and straw for bedding.

"Mom, can't I keep two?" asked my son. "One will get lonely."

"So keep it company," I said. "One I can handle."

"Besides, if you have just one, you can keep it in your room."

Thank goodness he was pleased with the prospect.

Since then, we've been gathering animals in ones.

And, know what? They get along together with only minor precautions like a screen covering for the guinea pig to make sure the cat keeps her distance.

Me? I like animals...

Jim's jottings

From 'Oklahoma!' to 'Towering Inferno'

by Jim Sherman

We remember the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas as being like a huge musical extravaganza of the movie era of the late 1940's or 1950s.

The Grand entrance with red uniformed greeters under a chandelier flavored, gold trimmed large, covered drive through pedestrian-car area.

We felt the MGM movie lot made the hotel possible, and the owners did everything they could to make visitors think they were part of a gigantic production.

Red velvet, black and gold with an over generous portion of chandeliers.

We particularly remember the too-wide hallway leading from the casino area to the auditorium where the jai-alai players were practicing.

Gothic columns with white sculptured busts of famous actors and actresses separated large pictures of more famous actors and actresses.

Too, there were artifacts from box office hits in the age of the golden screen.

It's easy to be impressed with architecture, decor and lighting in Las Vegas, but the MGM Grand was the easiest to relate to and most impressive.

Relating to the MGM fire last week, we read that the fire crept across the ceiling of the casino, that was large as a football field, in 10 minutes.

And, we read that sprinkler heads were not required in Las Vegas.

Then we recall the problems the Long Branch Saloon, the new restaurant north of Oxford, had getting water pressure to work the sprinkler heads on the second floor.

We saw the sprinkler system installed at the Long Branch. Half of it is covered up. That's because the sprinklers are double headed—the water will be sprayed out above the ceiling as well as below in case of fire.

As we recall, too, the second head is not required. The owners just want the extra safety.

Cadillac and GM are making much of their "Computer Control" engines. Cadillac cars switch from eight to six to four cylinders while going down the road, depending on the need to propel the car in each situation.

In 1917 the Inger Motor Co. of Cincinnati produced a car that "with just a touch of a lever on the steering column" the driver could switch from 12 to six cylinders.

Inger was 63 years ahead of its time.

An Open Letter to Residents of Springfield Township:

This is to urge all residents of Springfield Township to attend a special meeting on Wednesday, Dec. 3, at 7:30 p.m. at Township Hall to discuss the Early Warning Tornado System.

A final decision will be made at this meeting whether or not to purchase this equipment or an alternate system for Springfield Township.

This equipment would warn the citizens of this township in case of a tornado.

We feel that this system is greatly needed in Springfield Township. Eighty-nine percent of the population in Oakland County is already covered by these sirens and we would like to see our township added to the percentage.

Please, citizens of Springfield Township, come to this meeting. If only one life is saved because of your involvement, it will be well worth your time.

Phooey on paths

Independence taxpayers:

Did you see New York City's latest news of their $290,000 bicycle routes that are, now, to be torn-up and torn-out at a still, additional expense, because their bicyclists do NOT use them enough to justify the expense of their installation?

MORE TAX MONEY DOWN A RAT-HOLE!

New York nearly went bankrupt trying to pay for its expensive tastes, compared to its income.

Should our own township be far behind? We will wait and see.

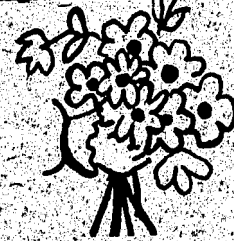

Our public roads need repair, now, and we are without money to do it.

That bike millage was passed on an off-election, last summer, earlier in the economy slide.

Who is to be blamed this time?

Here's Herb You dropped out of what?

by Herb Rose

The other day, when I decided to send my dog to obedience school, I was told that you did not "send" a dog to obedience school. You "took" the dog.

The owner and the dog were trained as a unit, and it was of prime importance that the owner be more intelligent than the dog.

I saw no problem as there was no question in my mind that I was smarter than the dog. The dog, however, appeared to have some real doubts.

It would also appear that the dogs had an influential lobby at the conference where the obedience school rules were developed.

The first night we were told that if a girl dog became overly amorous, she would be excused from class, but the owner would not. In other words, the dog would be out having a meaningful relationship while the owner was learning the meaning of "heel" and "sit."

At one point, my dog was standing stock-still, looking skeptical, and I decided to try a few simple commands - like "sit" and "down."

The dog didn't move.

I finally decided to win by default and gave the sharp command, "stand." The dog lay down.

I decided it was time to straighten out our relationship, so I put the dog on a large hassock and sat in front of it in an eyeball-to-eyeball confrontation.

"Let's," I said, "review our relative position in the social hierarchy of today."

The dog cocked its head quizzically. A glint of understanding came into its eyes and it bit me on the nose.

I thought of biting its nose in retaliation, but I didn't want to start something I wasn't prepared to finish. In nose biting, the advantage is all with the dog.

The obedience school sold me a choke collar and, with a little experimentation, I found that when I pulled the chain the dog's tongue came out.

I would think that a small working model of such an arrangement would be a welcome addition to any desk, where it could be used to moisten stamps and envelopes and possibly to clean glasses.

The dog may be totally without redeeming characteristics.

I flunked watchdog so badly I have the uneasy feeling that someone could dismantle, box and ship my living room walls and the dog wouldn't mention it.

The only time she barks is when the dog next door barks.

It is of little comfort to realize that if anyone breaks into my neighbor's house I'll be among the first to know.

'If it Fitz...

If we could only pick our neighbors

by Jim Fitzgerald

My first assignment as a newspaper employe, with my journalism degree still crinkly fresh, was to speed to my editor's home and help move a freezer from the porch to the kitchen. The man who lifted the other end of the freezer was nicknamed Butch. He was a much better freezer-mover than I was. These days, I often wonder whatever happened to him. I hope no concerned property-owner has shot him, or burned his home.

Butch was employed by the local weekly to hoist bundles of newspapers, shovel snow and run errands. He wasn't supposed to be very smart, but he was smart enough to double-dip many years before that practice was popularized by retired Pentagon generals and other government employes. Butch shoveled and hoisted for other downtown merchants while running errands for the newspaper, thus increasing his income without increasing the length of his workday.

Everyone in town knew Butch, who seemed to be permanently middle-aged.

He didn't look or talk "quite right," and he shuffled more than he walked, but these differences from the norm didn't detract from his popularity, they contributed to it.

Butch wasn't unusual in that town. Many men and women who weren't "quite right" were employed in local stores and homes. Every evening they returned to their dormitory beds in the state's largest institution for the mentally retarded. These handicapped people were an accepted segment of the community, and no one shied away from them in fear of disgust.

Butch was frequently a guest in his co-workers' homes. He often played with our children, who loved him. He and the other "home patients" were typical of those mentally retarded persons who, many years later, are receiving so much publicity in Michigan newspapers and through such national media as TV's "60 Minutes."

The big difference today is that such handicapped people are allowed to live in the community, as well as work there, and that is what's causing all the uproar from upright citizens who are afraid some crazy neighbor will drool on their lawns and attack their children.

I suppose it would be nice, but boring, if neighbors all came wrapped in sanitized cellophane, guaranteed by Good Housekeeping. I once lived in a neighborhood where two men frequently abused their wives noisily. My sleep was disrupted, especially when the police were called. One of these men was a high city official, and the other was a businessman and country club member. I would have preferred living next door to Butch, but I didn't have any choice.

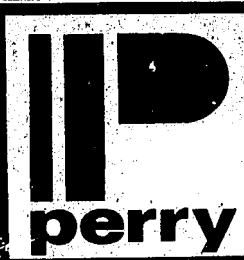

Several suburban Detroit neighborhoods have objected to the entrance of households containing five or six mentally retarded persons and their supervisors. Some of these objectors contend they aren't against retarded people, they are against commercial operations in residential zones. They say the retarded persons' supervisors are paid, and the owners of the homes make money on their investments, which is certainly commercial. Such brilliant reasoning would outlaw all maids, plumbers and landlords. These objectors are hypocrites.

Other people who object to living near mentally retarded persons are, at least, honest. They admit they are afraid. But they don't know what they are afraid of. These objectors are ignorant. The most ignorant objectors are those who shoot at homes housing retarded persons, or burn down houses scheduled to become homes for people like Butch.

My experience, which is extensive, is that mentally retarded people on Butch's level are nicer and better behaved than most "normal" people. They aren't mean to people who are different from them. They are kind to everyone they meet.

It is a shame that people like Butch can't choose their neighborhoods and refuse to live near people who are cruel to the handicapped. But that would be discriminating against people who are stupid, which is different from being mentally retarded.

Talking about . . .

On Main Street, Clarkston, we asked this week's question: Voyager I, the space probe that flew past Saturn, was part of an $8.5 billion space satellite project. Do you think it was worth it?

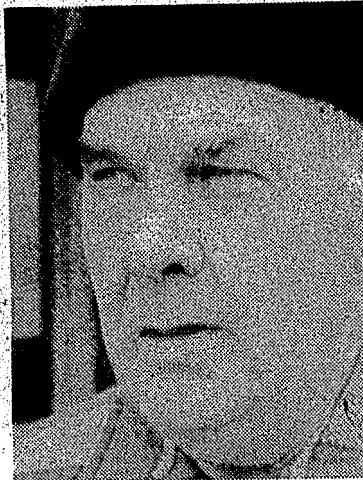

"No. I just think there's more important things to spend the money on like medical research, for example."—Linda Rieth, Orion Township, hotel desk clerk.

"No. It's too much money to put up there. We need the money here for better programs for the elderly, better social security, stuff like that."—Kelly Bryant, Brandon Township, inspector in factory.

"Yes, I sure do. Mankind has got to unfurl to the truth. He's got to wake up to the realization that this beautiful universe in which we live is much larger than mankind realizes."—Eleanor O'Dell, Waterford Township, retired.

"No, I don't. They're spending too much money, I think. Our government is causing our inflation. I hope Reagan helps us."—Samuel Burklow, Paramus Drive, Independence Township, retired.

"I don't think so. That's too much money to be going into space. We need that money right down here."—Carolyn Thibert, Eastlawn Avenue, Independence Township, housewife.

Our policy is fighting inflation. And this policy's cost has actually gone down.

Trust John Hancock to put together a plan that can help you beat inflation. It's called Expanded Estate, and what it does is help you build cash values for your long-range planning by combining whole life insurance with term insurance in a special way.

And, incredibly in this day and age, the monthly premiums have actually gone down. For more information on this and other John Hancock inflation fighters, stop in or give me a call.

Thomas C. Kreger

Memorial service for Thomas C. Kreger of Independence Township is to be held today, Nov. 26, at 11 a.m. at the Lewis E. Wint Funeral Home, Independence Township, with the Rev. James Balfour officiating. Burial is to follow at Lakeview Cemetery, Independence Township.

Kreger, 37, died of natural causes. A graduate of Michigan State University, he was a research engineer.

He is survived by his parents, Ralph and Florence Kreger of Independence Township; and his brother, James of Independence Township.

Memorials may be made to Camp Oakland.

Jack W. Wignall

Jack W. Wignall of Springfield Township died Nov. 23.

Born in Lancaster, Lancashire, England on Feb. 4, 1904, he was 76. Wignall was in the aviation service in the Pontiac and Flint areas for the past 50 years.

His last place of employment was with Flint Air Inc. where he was supervisor of maintenance. Since his retirement, he was self-employed.

Wignall came to the United States from England in the 1920s with his mother and brother. His father, a British soldier, was killed in action during World War I.

In the early 1930s, he obtained his Airframe and Engine License in Oklahoma and returned to the Pontiac area where he taught mechanics at Pontiac Central High School, led boy scout troops and started several businesses associated with the repair and overhaul of aircraft engines.

He trained hundreds of aircraft mechanics and had a nationwide reputation as an authority on aircraft engines.

He was a member of the "A" Club at Pontiac-Oakland Airport.

He is survived by his wife, Mary Bullen Wignall; children, Mrs. Rodney (Anne) Rudd of Three Rivers and Bruce D. of Clarkston; four grandchildren; and 13 nieces and nephews.

The memorial service was held Nov. 25 at the Episcopal Church of the Resurrection, Independence Township, with the Rev. Alexander Stewart officiating.

Arrangements were made by Goyette Funeral Home, Clarkston.

The family suggests memorials to the Church of the Resurrection.

Andrew Wright

Andrew Wright of Clarkston and Saginaw died early Thursday morning at Luther Manor, Saginaw.

Wright, 95, was born Sept. 9, 1885 in Saginaw. He was a pioneer homesteader and founder in Saskatchewan, Canada, for 35 years, returning to Saginaw in 1945, where he was employed by Gately's and Wiechmann's until his retirement.

He was a charter member of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, a member of the United Church, Calvary of the Odd Fellows and was active in community and municipal affairs there.

He was recently honored by the Saskatchewan Provincial Government.

He was preceded in death by his wife Ethel Smith whom he married Sept. 2, 1916. She died July 6, 1977.

He is survived by two sons and a daughter, Melville Bradley Wright of Piapot, Saskatchewan, Howard Gordon Wright of Saginaw and Mrs. Jean W. Saile of Clarkston.

He also leaves 11 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

The funeral services were held Saturday at Case Chapel, Saginaw with the Rev. Michael Grange of Lansing officiating.

Burial followed in Lakeview Cemetery, Independence Township.

Independence to consider park shelter, fitness trail

A park shelter and a physical fitness course for Independence Township's Clintonwood Park are to be considered at the Dec. 2 township board meeting.

Half the money for the projects would be provided by a federal grant program, but the board needs to decide where the other funds would come from — either the township's general fund or another source like Community Development funds, said Timothy Doyle, parks and recreation director.

"We have $17,250 of grant money available to us through the Land and Conservation Fund," Doyle said, adding that the total project cost would be about $34,500.

The park shelter would measure 60 by 30 feet and be built where an existing building, which houses rest rooms, sits at the park.

It would be open on the sides and contain a fireplace, allowing reunions or group picnics to be held even if the weather was uncooperative, Doyle said.

The physical fitness course could be used by residents age 7 to 70, he said. It would consist of a pathway with stop-off points where items like a chin-up bar, balance beam or stump to jump over would be located.

"There are signs that you put at the stations that explain what you have to do and how many times," Doyle said.

The township board meets at 7:30 p.m. at Independence Township Hall, 90 N. Main, Clarkston.

Independence Township Fire Department has responded to 811 calls to date.

Three day reprieve on taxes

Independence Township property owners have a small reprieve this year with three extra days to pay their tax bills.

Normally, the deadline for tax payments is Feb. 14, but this year the 14th and 15th fall on the weekend, and the 16th is a holiday.

Therefore, all taxes are due by Feb. 17, said Frederick Ritter, township treasurer.

Property owners should receive their tax bills by Dec. 10, he said, stressing if bills don't arrive by that time residents should notify the treasurer's office.

Delinquent tax bills are charged a 4-percent penalty and those paid after March 1 pay both the penalty and additional monthly interest of 1 percent.

Residents are not exempt from paying penalties, Ritter said, just because their tax bills don't arrive in the mail.

Bills can be paid at any branch of the Pontiac State Bank, Community National Bank, Manufacturer's Bank of Southfield, the treasurer's office or by mail.

All three banks will receive payments until Feb. 17. After that date and up until March 1, all taxes must be paid in person at the treasurer's office or by mail.

When making payments, be sure to return both copies of the tax statement.

The Independence Township Treasurer's Office, located at 90 N. Main Street, Clarkston, is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and is to be closed Dec. 25, Jan. 1 and Feb. 6.

Three weeks left to file for village office

Very soon now, they'll be off and running.

It may be too early for most citizens to begin thinking about Clarkston Village's 1981 elections but for those intent on running to fill the three available positions, it's time to plan strategy.

Dec. 16 is the deadline to hand in signature petitions announcing candidacy, according to Bruce Rogers, village clerk.

For information on how to acquire a petition, phone Rogers at 625-3686 after 4:30 p.m.

This April, the trustee terms of Ruth Basinger, newly appointed Von Gardner and James Schultz expire.

Muskrat meat: A family tradition

By Al Zawacky

Iola Herbert stood by her stove, chopping onions into a large, simmering kettle.

Husband Oliver was nearby, ready to lend a hand.

A rich beef stew, perhaps? A pot of savory chicken soup?

No, it's a kettle of cooking muskrat meat, on its way to gracing the Herberts' dinner table. It's a delicacy steeped in family tradition.

"I've been eating muskrat long as I can remember," said Oliver. "My dad was a railroad man, and he'd bring them home, we'd clean them and eat them. I remember my grandfather used to eat them, too."

And muskrat was also a staple on Iola's side of the family.

"My father was a lumberman in the upper peninsula, near Lake Superior," she recalled. "Up there they ate almost anything to survive — muskrat, anything they could catch — even rats."

"He got to like the muskrat, so when he came down here, he brought his taste for it with him."

Her recipe for muskrat meat preparation is a simple one. First the animals are skinned and soaked in salt water for a full 24 hours, with the water changed as it bloodies.

The meat is then fully cleaned and boiled until tender with a little salt, onion, pepper and bayleaf. Other spices may be added if desired.

The soaking and boiling not only make the meat tender, but also remove the "gamey" taste, said Iola.

"It's just like any wild animal — you've got to know how to prepare it, or it's not going to be very good," she said.

After boiling, she melts about a half pound of butter in an electric frying pan, lays the muskrat meat out evenly in the pan, places more butter on top and lets the whole thing simmer.

The end result may not delight the eye, but it invariably leaves a favorable impression on the palate.

"You can't really make them look very appetizing, but almost everybody that tries it likes it," Iola said. "Almost everybody in our family does."

"It's sweet, juicy — it's just a good meat. The French people in Canada prepare it by basting it in wine — but that kind of covers up the taste of the meat."

"It's hard to describe the taste," added Oliver. "It's not rabbit, it's not pheasant — it just has a taste of its own."

"I guess some people won't try it, because of the name — they've got long tails and they do kind of look like rats."

"That really doesn't make much sense," Iola said. "How about pork? Pigs aren't very clean animals, and people don't feel funny about eating pork. As long as an animal is cooked and cleaned properly, I'm willing to try it."

Oliver's pursuit of muskrat meat recently led him to place a want ad in The Clarkston News.

"These fur hunters will take the fur and just throw the meat away," Oliver said.

"I had one call from Lake Orion — the guy said he threw away 90 of them last year and said he'd call me when he got a hold of some this season."

Have some fresh muskrat meat? The Herberts are still in the market and can be contacted by calling 625-4026.

What's cooking? It's muskrat meat, one of Iola and Oliver Herbert's favorite — if somewhat unconventional — meals.

Wolves give Kettering a scare in playoffs

29-27 victory over Rochester lifts

cagers to 10-10 final season mark

By Al Zawacky

Coach Dave McDonald and his Clarkston Wolves knew what they were up against.

Monday evening at Grand Blanc the Clarkston cagers had the misfortune of opening the district playoffs against the Waterford Kettering Captains, a team that had handed the Wolves two lopsided defeats in the regular season, won the Greater Oakland Activities League in a walk and posted 20 wins without a loss in the regular season.

The Captains proved to be their old selves Monday, eliminating the Clarkston High School varsity girls' basketball team from the playoffs by virtue of a 50-40 victory.

But the Wolves had reason to be proud, noted McDonald afterwards.

"We had them (Kettering) on the ropes," he said. "They were sweating it out."

Indeed, the Captains, led by only four points at the half and saw the Wolves go up by a single point in the third quarter. Before the quarter ended, however, Kettering had regained a lead they never lost.

Junior Tracee Antos led the Clarkston attack with 13 points and also chalked up five assists and six rebounds. Junior Lanette Whitehead had a team-leading seven rebounds to go with her nine points, while senior Lisa Forsyth added eight points to the Wolves' cause.

Prior to their appearance in the play offs, the Clarkston cagers finished off the regular season with a 29-27 win over league rival Rochester. It was a come-from-behind win all the way for the Wolves, who pulled in front for the first time in the game's closing minutes and made it stick.

Whitehead scored a team-high 10 points and pulled down 16 rebounds, in what McDonald termed "a super effort," while Antos had six points and Forsyth tallied five.

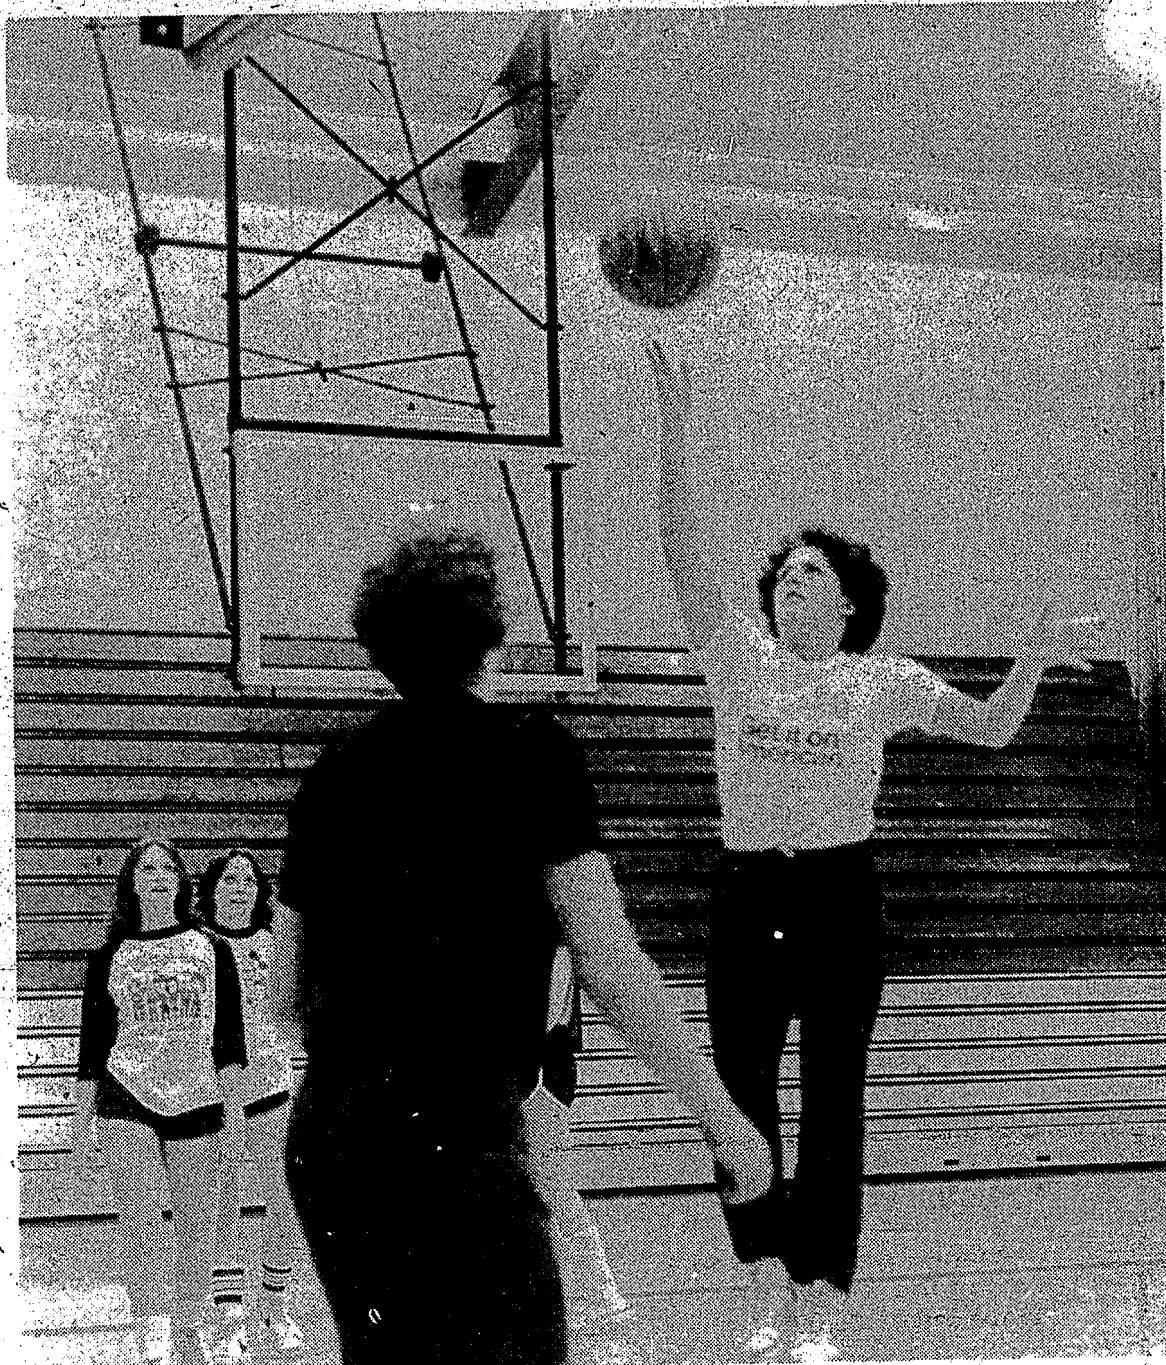

"As the score would indicate, we played some pretty good defense," McDonald said. "And the low-scoring games, we tend to win."

The victory enabled Clarkston to finish at .500 in the Greater Oakland Activities League at 5-5 and also pulled the team's overall record to the break-even point as well at 10-10.

"Discipline-wise, we played well," McDonald said, reflecting on the completed 1980 season. "The only thing that kept us from having what you'd call a really good year was our shooting—it's just something that I hope the girls will work hard on over the summer."

"Still, we made tremendous progress from last season."

Tracee Antos had a banner game for the Wolves against Kettering Monday, leading the Wolves with 13 points and five assists, as well as pulling down six rebounds.

The Point After

by Al Zawacky

The soccer revolution: I'm ready to enlist

We're living in the midst of a revolution, friend.

It's the soccer revolution—that South American and European import is in the process of overthrowing that nasty American sport called football, a game that is too expensive, too violent, too dangerous and too—(fill in the blank).

Consider the weekend of Nov. 15-16. That Saturday a mere 104,000 were on hand for the U of M-Purdue football game, and on Sunday a sparse crowd of 80,000 were at the Silverdome to see the great-turned-lousy Lions. On that same weekend a tremendous throng of 7,439 came to witness the Detroit Express' indoor soccer season-opener—and that's not even counting parents, wives and neighbors, I'll bet.

Let's face it: Football is dying, and soccer is the wave of the future.

I figured that in order to enlist in the soccer revolution, I would first have to increase my knowledge of the game. So I contacted Phil Fussball, chairman of "Citizens Against Dangerous Sports," (CADS) an organization dedicated to destroying dangerous junior high and high school football and replacing it with soccer.

I went to Phil's house just the other day, where we watched a video tape replay of a professional soccer game played last summer. I was ready to learn and play the role of the attentive student.

8 p.m.

PHIL: Before we start, I've got a confession to make. You're not going to see an average game—I deliberately selected one of the most exciting games the Toronto Blizzard played all last season. Not all the games are going to be this thrilling.

AL: The Toronto what?

PHIL: Just watch, Al, just watch.

8:30 p.m.

AL: Nothing's happening.

PHIL: Soccer's not like football. You've got to watch closely and learn to appreciate the finer points of the game.

9:15 p.m.

AL: When is something going to happen?

PHIL: Shhhh—it's happening right now—the Blizzard has the ball—loses it—gets it back—loses it—gets it back—loses it—

AL: This excitement is just a little too much for me, Phil.

PHIL: WOW! Did you see that? ALMOST a shot on goal!

10 p.m.

AL: I'm getting bored.

PHIL: How can you be bored in sudden death overtime? The first team that scores a goal wins the game.

AL: Can't they shorten it up and give the win to the first team that gets another almost shot on goal?

10:20 p.m.

AL: Do you know what a "roturier" is?

PHIL: What are you reading?

AL: Webster's Seventh New Collegiate Dictionary. Right here under the R's...

PHIL: Are you crazy? They're into shootout now, the most exciting part of the game!

AL: Yea. Anyway, according to Webster...

10:30 p.m.

AL: Now, let me make sure I've got this straight. A header is the attacking player closest to the goal...a half volley is a soccer player who likes volleyball, too...a linkman is somebody who works for Oscar Meyer...and a yellow card is something Karl Malden wouldn't leave home home without when visiting Taiwan.

PHIL: You still need a little work.

11 p.m.

AL: Phil, it's been real, but I've got to get up early tomorrow morning. Give me a call sometime this week and let me know who won.

PHIL: I'll call you Friday, Al. It should be over by then.

Grapplers' prospects look bright—at least on paper

By Al Zawacky

It looks good on paper — but how it'll look next month on the mats is another thing.

So says Coach Rick Detkowski of his 1980-81 Clarkston High School wrestling team, currently working out in preparation for the season-opener Dec. 2 at Southfield Lathrup.

Detkowski's feelings about the upcoming season can best be described as "cautious optimism."

"On paper, we look tough," he says, relaxing in the CHS coaches' office after a recent practice. "But you just never know until that first match."

The statistics are indeed encouraging. Although the Clarkston grapplers have lost to graduation their four co-captains from last season — Craig Gavette, Paul Carr, Scott Smith and Claude Gourand — the talent is there to fill the void.

Leading the list of returners from last season are three individual league champions: Mike Conway, Jeff Miracle and Mike Ogans.

Conway, a junior, will wrestle at 105 pounds this season after posting a 29-7-1 record last year as a 98-pounder.

"He had 17 pins last year as a sophomore," says Detkowski, "and all his losses were decisions by a point or so, some of them in overtime."

"Ogans won four tournaments and lost to the state champion. He'll be wrestling at 145 again this year."

A senior, Ogans posted a 33-3 record during the 1979-80 campaign.

Miracle, who achieved a 30-7 record last season wrestling at 132 pounds, is making the jump to the 138-pound class this season. "He wrestled at 138 a few times last year," says Detkowski.

"All three of these guys (Conway, Ogans and Miracle) placed in every tournament we competed in last year. They're going to be tough."

Clarkston will also benefit from the services of six other returning grapplers, all of whom posted records hovering around the .500 mark last season: Juniors Bruce Burwitz (167 pounds), Todd Thompson (119), Mark Karrick (198) and Tom Hecker (185) and seniors Lance Jewett (112) and Dale Fulcher (126).

"Our sophomores last year started out slow, but came around toward the end of the season," Detkowski says. "They started beating guys they'd lost to in the beginning of the year."

"They should be even better this time around."

Detkowski has no shortage of new faces this season 23 in all, including a few juniors and seniors. With 32 members, Clarkston should be able to field a JV team this year — something that lack of numbers prevented during the 1979-80 campaign.

Detkowski, who is entering his second season as head coach, will be without the services of his assistant from last season, Don Maskill. Maskill accepted a head coaching position at Oxford High School this past summer.

Replacing Maskill will be volunteers Win Miracle, Tim Detkowski and Craig Delowe. "They're all working for free," Detkowski points out, "and I really appreciate their help."

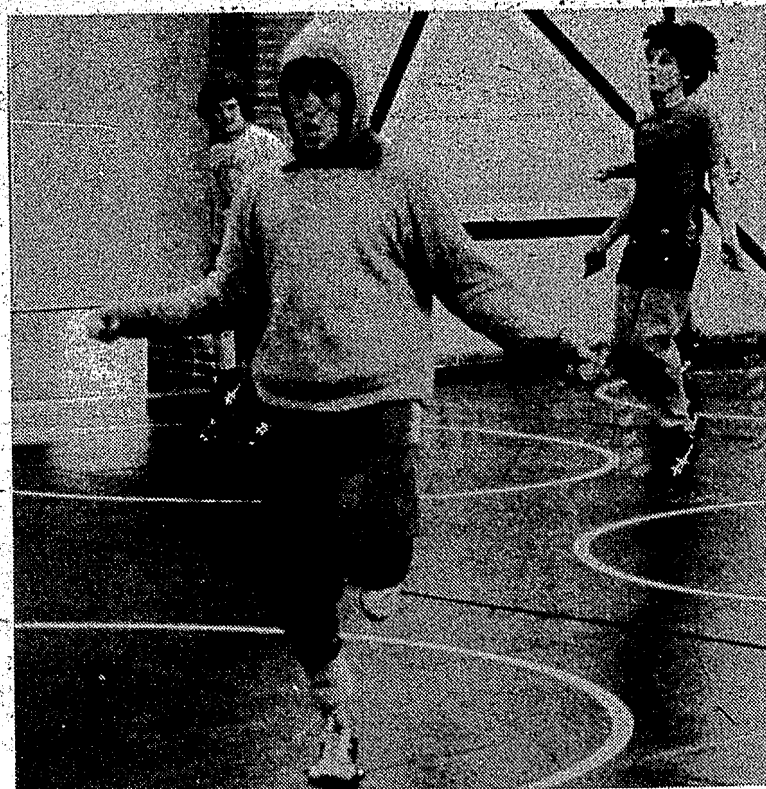

Detkowski has a number of promotional ideas to help build crowd sizes at the home meets this season.

Last year's crowds — thanks in part to Clarkston's league championship and highly successful overall season — were up significantly from the previous year, and Detkowski is hoping for even more numbers this time around.

"The crowd helps a lot," he says. "When the guys see that people are interested and they're making a lot of noise, it really makes a difference — nobody wants to lose in front of their family and friends."

And losing is something Detkowski and company plan on doing very little of this winter.

Endurance and agility are important assets of a good wrestler, and jumping rope in one way to help build those attributes. Brad Moshier shows how.

After watching a hold demonstrated by Coach Rick Detkowski, Mark Karrick [top] and Tom Hecker work on their mastery of it.

CAYAC salutes: CHS students conducting a canned goods drive

A strong sense of citizenship mixed with a little constructive competition is the moving force behind the canned goods drive at Clarkston High School.

Seniors in fifth hour classes have set aside the week of Nov. 17 through 21 to venture out into the community, moving door-to-door to solicit canned good donations.

The goods collected are to be donated to Independence Township Senior Citizens for the holidays.

This volunteer effort is sponsored by the Student Government, and the winning class gets to sit down to a free lunch in the school's cafeteria.

Daily, boxes in Room 480 are filling to the brim with foodstuffs while students hustle in more from car trunk after car trunk.

It is this spirit of cooperation and community concern which brings Clarkston Area Youth Assistance Committee (CAYAC) to salute these students.

CAYAC, comprised of local residents, is sponsored by Independence and Springfield Townships, the Village of Clarkston, Clarkston Community Schools and the Oakland County Probate Courts.

Their purpose is to develop and conduct guidance programs to aid families and youth and to prevent delinquency and neglect in the Clarkston area.

One of the program's main thrusts is aimed at youth involvement.

Celebrate with historical society

Two events with holiday themes are planned by the Clarkston Community Historical Society.

Although the activities are open to members of the society only, those who would like to become members may join now and attend the events.

The annual Christmas Caroling Party is set for Friday, Dec. 5. There is a $4 fee a person.

A walking tour of the Wisner Estate in Pontiac is scheduled Wednesday, Dec. 10. The mansion will be decked in authentic Victorian decorations.

For more information, or to make early reservations, call Denise Symons at 625-8823.

Images, illusions entertain

Photos by Kathy Greenfield

Images and Illusions is the name of the show and it's made up of mime pieces put on by members of the Clarkston Junior-High School drama classes. The group entertained last week with two shows. Each mime skit was created by the group which performed. Here, the students gave the illusion of walking down stairs. From left are Lorae Palmiter, Stephanie Jenks, Kelly Molter, Inger Nelson and Kim May.

Preparing mime faces for the show takes time. Inger Nelson uses caution while applying red lipstick to accent her lips.

In It's Hard Making a Buck, Julie Kiser [left] and Terri Prather play the parts of juggler seeking donations for his shows and a delighted little girl. Over 90 CJHS students took part in the mime show.

YOUR EYES

By Dr. Theodore B. Walton
OPTOMETRIST

Special eyeglasses, with specially ground lenses to meet unusual conditions such as might be encountered at work, may be the answer to a problem for some people. If your work involves unusual vision demands...such as a painter who does much overhead work...special glasses may be the answer. The painter's glasses might have the near-vision bifocal lens above the main lens, for example.

For special purposes, bifocal lenses can be placed above, at the sides, or anywhere on the main lens, making the job easier, with less eyestrain. Where they're needed, such glasses can be a great investment in comfort.

Whether you might enjoy specially ground lenses for work or not, you should be sure to have your eyes examined periodically.

Football rivalry splits neighborhood

Loyal U of M and OSU fans stage friendly fight over the big game

By Kathy Greenfield

The alarm clocks of the University of Michigan football fans rang out at 4 a.m. Saturday.

While the Ohio State University fans slept, they crept among the houses on Almond Lane and Woodglen Road in Independence Township, and when they were through, the neighborhood was aglow with maize and blue.

Clarkston News

SECTION TWO

Wed., Nov. 26, 1980 25
The Clarkston (Mich.) News

There were flags, helium-filled balloons and signs of all sorts displaying Wolverine loyalties.

They even posted some red and white signs in Buckeye fans' yards, each with a big "O" forming the face with tears dripping from sad eyes.

"This year, Michigan outfoxed the Ohio fans by getting up at 4 a.m. and getting all the decorations up," snickered Harold Rynerson.

By noon Saturday, the Buckeye supporters had caught up.

Red and white flags were flying, the Buckeye fight song filled the air and Mike and Ava Weber led a parade of Ohio State fans around their yard.

The Webers wore papier mache headpieces they fashioned just for the occasion and named Brutus and Bucky Buckeye.

Then, the neighborhood became quiet and members of about 30 families gathered at the home of Robert and Jeannene McDaniel to watch the big game...together.

The two organizers of the rivalry squared off.

Weber's red cowboy hat with its big white "O" was accented by a string of buckeye nuts around his neck. Rynerson was resplendent in a maize jersey and a blue cowboy hat with a large maize "M."

They both admitted they had been planning the confrontation for months — Weber brought back flags from trips home to Ohio; Rynerson stocked up on goods at the Go Blue store in Ann Arbor.

Rynerson glanced at Weber's necklace.

"That's what Buckeyes are," he said. "They're all nuts."

"Throw one at a Wolverine and watch him run," countered Weber.

And then the game began, and, while it was quiet outside, inside the loyal fans roared.

After Michigan emerged with a 9-3 victory and a trip to the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif. for the New Year's game, the Ohio State clan was presented with the neighborhood losers' trophy — a monkey playing cymbals.

"Now the monkey's on their backs for the year," said Rynerson. "Love it; just love it."

"We were really disheartened," said Weber. "We thought that for sure we'd win this year."

"Now all I have to do is get my voice back to go to work next week," he added.

So, the hatchet has been buried...until next year when the battle lines will emerge anew.

It's the only way to conduct a neighborhood feud.

University of Michigan fans give the Wolverines a loud cheer. Note the fan holding a rose in her mouth, the flag, the hats. Shortly afterwards, the whole gang watched the game together—Ohio and Michigan fans alike.

The Ohio State fans gather together and show their loyalties to the Buckeyes. Their red and white clothing leaves no doubt—they're sincere in their quest to help cheer their team to the Rose Bowl.

Mike and Ava Weber lead a parade of Buckeye fans in front of their home on Woodglen Road. Their headpieces were designed just for the event and named Brutus and Bucky Buckeye.

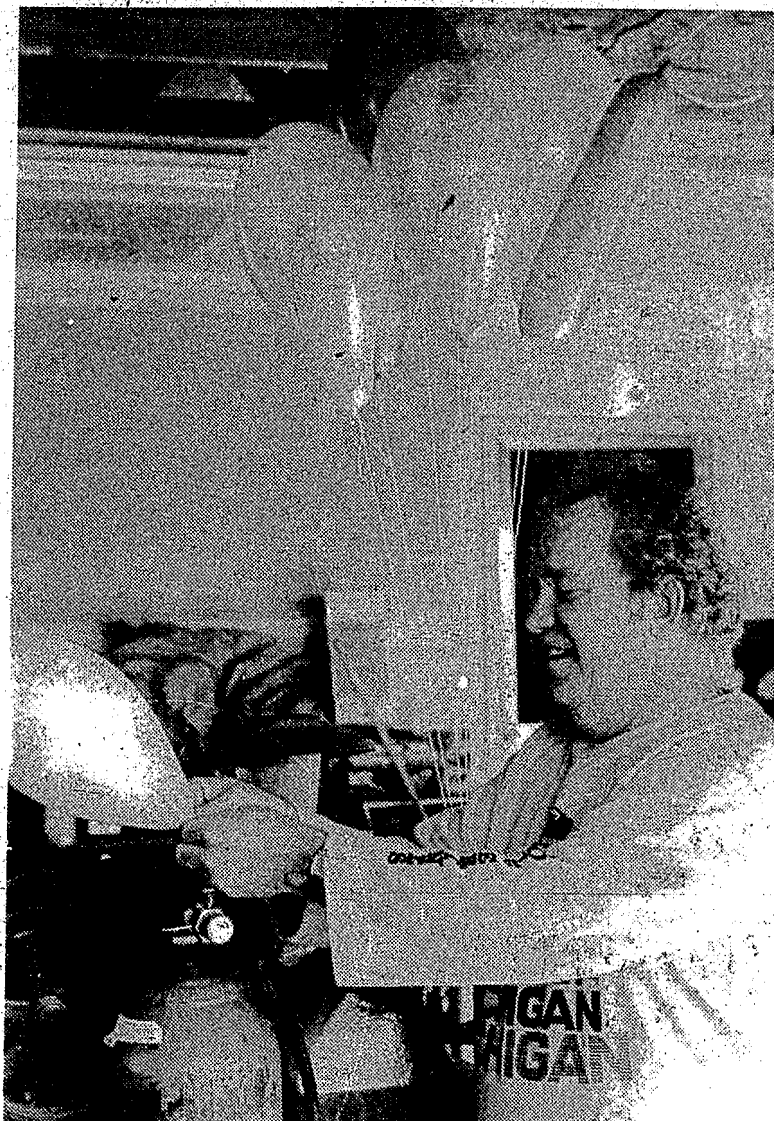

Even Spanky, Harold and Alma Rynerson's pet, shows his true colors with maize and blue balloons.

The crying "o" was placed in Buckeye territory by U. of M supporters.

Neighborly rivalry

Harold Rynerson's garage is headquarters for inflating maize and blue balloons with helium so they fly high above the homes on Amy Drive and Woodglen Road.

New pastor for New Hope

The Rev. Aubrey T. B. Phillips is to be installed as pastor of the New Hope Bible Church on Friday, Nov. 28.

A reception is to follow the 7 p.m. service at the church located at 5311 Sunnyside, Independence Township, one block south of Maybee Road off Pine Knob Lane.

Phillips retired from an executive position at British Airways in March and became an ordained minister in June.

He has served in the lay ministry all his working life, offering services in Pakistan, the Sudan, the Bahamas, Israel, West Germany and England.

Prior to coming to New Hope Bible Church, he pastored a housegroup of the Farnborough Christian Fellowship in Camberley, England. Mrs. Phillips is the daughter of American missionaries to India.

Participating in the service on Friday are to be the Rev. Carlton Spencer, president of Elim Fellowship, Lima, N. Y.; the Rev. Kenneth Greator, president of Full Gospel Fellowship of Canada, Sarnia, Ontario; and the Rev. Harold W. Crawford, assistant pastor of Faith Temple, Toronto, Ontario.

Crawford is the former pastor of New Hope Bible Church.

Be sure to keep your eyes on WDIV-TV, channel 4, during the Thanksgiving Day parade.

Twenty-five members of the "OAKlowns" Clown Alley are to make their television debut.

The group, which meets at the Springfield Oaks Activities Center in Springfield Township, is sponsored by the Oakland County Parks and Recreation Commission.

Co-founder of the clown alley, and one of the clowns, is Homer Biondi of Independence Township.

The annual J.L. Hudson's Thanksgiving Day parade is to begin at 9:30 a.m. with TV coverage to begin at 10 a.m.

The "OAKlowns" are to appear on the screen between 10:30 and 10:45 a.m.

Winter woolies for less

There's a way to save money on the cost of warm woolies and outdoor activities this winter.

The time is near for the St. Daniel's Catholic Church used winter clothing and sports equipment sale, and everything from thermal socks to tobaggans is expected to be on display and ready for purchase.

The sale is scheduled Dec. 6 from noon to 8:30 p.m. in the community room of the church located at the corner of Holcomb and Miller roads, Independence Township.

Members of the community are invited to bring in articles for sale tagged with their name and phone number, and will receive 75 percent of the sale on each item with 15 percent going to the church, says Dianna Forchette, church spokesperson.

The church proceeds are to benefit the retreat program for senior high students, she said.

Dianna asks all items for sale be brought into the church Saturday, Dec. 6th between 9 a.m. and noon only.

Thompsons once called Brazil home

Country Living

by Al Zawacky

It was a long and winding road that led the Rev. Clancy Thompson and his wife to the Clarkston area.

The road ironically starts in nearby Flint, where Clancy was born, and in Cedar Springs, Doris' home town, some 30 miles north of Grand Rapids.

From there it leads to a church school near Jackson where the Thompsons met and then to the most unlikely place of all — Sao Paulo, Brazil, a city of seven million in South America.

"We lived in Brazil for 12-and-a-half years doing missionary work for the church," explains Clancy, who is pastor of the Drayton Heights Free Methodist Church, 5482 Winell in Independence Township.

"When we went originally, we thought we'd be career missionaries — but there came a time when we felt our service there was finished — that God was moving us away from that and toward sometime else."

The Thompsons felt drawn back to the states, and given a choice between churches in California, Florida or their native Michigan, the selection was made that led them to the building on Winell near Maybee.

"We just felt directed to come here," Doris says. "Weather-wise, I don't like the Michigan winters at all — and living in South America all those years really got us used to the warmer climate."

"It was really a matter of God's direction."

Clancy agrees. "I guess if it had been totally up to us, we would have gone to California or Florida," he smiles.

Although they've called the Clarkston area their home for almost 10 years now, and although the city of Sao Paulo is thousands and thousands of miles away from the Thompson's home on Winell near their church — time and distance haven't faded the memories.

Nine-year-old Steven, Doris and the Rev. Clancy Thompson pose in their home on Winell. After living in Brazil for 12-and-a-half years doing missionary work, Clancy and Doris have dedicated the last nine-and-a-half years of their lives to their Independence Township Church.

Both Clancy and Doris learned to speak Portuguese, Brazil's native tongue, with the fluency of a native.

And they also developed an affection for the Brazilian people, their culture and their ways.

"There's so much diversity," Clancy says. "You have Europeans, Indians, the descendants of black slaves — and you mix all of them together and you get Brazilians."

"There are Orientals, Italians, White Russians, Germans — people of all sort of ethnic backgrounds. They're like us (the U.S.) in that respect."

And the differences in attitudes and culture do not transcend everybody's common humanity.

"We had no problem relating to the Brazilian people," says Doris. "We found everybody very warm and outgoing and made a lot of dear friends there."

"When we were leaving, we had friends tell us, 'You're more Brazilian than American now — you don't really want to go home,'" she laughs.

Living in a continent notorious for its frequent revolutions and political turmoil, the Thompsons never encountered any political opposition to their missionary work — although they did witness a military coup d'etat in 1964.

"It happened in March of that year," Clancy recalls. "The civilian government was moving toward the left, the press, radio and the media was being taken over, and it looked like we were on the brink of a Communist takeover — so the army stepped in."

"It's really a strange sight — the whole country just shuts down, banks, businesses, everything," he says. "Tanks would be in the streets and soldiers would be guarding all the key locations in the city — and all you would hear on the radio would be bulletins from the government."

But despite the tanks the soldiers and the ominous sight of a country seemingly ready for battle, the transfer of power took place without any violence.

"The Brazilians are actually rather famous for that," notes Doris. "They always seem to pull through without any bloodshed — they freed their slaves without any bloodshed, too."

"Another interesting thing we saw was the relocation of their capital," Clancy says. "They moved it from Rio de Janeiro to Brasilia, which is located more in the interior of the country."

"About 85 percent of the people in Brazil live on or near the coastline, so by moving the capital they were hoping to open up some of the country's interior to development."

The Thompsons have three children: Brian, Mark and 9-year-old Steven. Both Brian and Mark are graduates of Clarkston High School, while Steven currently attends school at Pine Knob Elementary.

Spending part of their lives in Brazil, the Thompsons' two eldest sons learned to handle a bilingual world. "They attended an American school where both languages (English and Portuguese) were taught," Doris says.

"They had Brazilian friends, but we always spoke English home."

The Thompsons' parsonage home on Winell is just walking distance from their church, having been built a few years after the church was erected in 1961.

"We really enjoy it here," says Clancy. "Clarkston is truly a quaint little village, with all the old houses and buildings. We have good schools here and a fine community."

He enjoys hunting and reading in his spare time, while Doris has begun working in ceramics, helps out with the church and is active in the parent volunteers at Pine Knob Elementary.

"He really doesn't have much spare time," Doris says of her husband, noting that a pastor's responsibilities are usually time consuming.

"He preaches Sunday, has a Monday night study group, Tuesday night study group, Wednesday night prayer meeting — he's busy almost every day of the week."

The Thompsons' dining room is filled with mementos of their years spent in South America, including these wooden figurines from Brazil being arranged by Doris.

On Clarkston's Main Street

She creates eye-stoppers to capture passersby

By Kathy Greenfield

Maryagnes Vanklaveren takes special interest in downtown Clarkston's window shoppers.

"It tickles me when I see people looking," she says.

For, as a window designer, she creates the displays at the Calico Cat and has done some work at Country Greens, both on Main Street.

Maryagnes and her husband Paul have lived on Woodglen Road, Independence Township, a little over a year.

She came across her job at the Calico Cat quite by accident.

While at the store, then located on Main Street across from the Waldon Road intersection, buying a gift for a friend, owner Lonnie Benjamin was wondering aloud how she'd decorate the windows in her new location on Main and Washington streets.

"I told her, 'You're talking to the right person,'" laughs Maryagnes at the memory, and she's been doing the store's windows for nearly a year.

Now that her freelance business, Windows by Maryagnes, is well underway, the Christmas window-decorating season has been hectic.

Last week, she settled her two children — Amanda, 4, and Renee, 2 — with the babysitter and set to work.

On Monday, she spent 11 hours at the Calico Cat, creating a traditional red and green scene in one window and a contemporary white, brown and peach setting in the other.

On Thursday, it was off to the Emporium, a home interior design studio in Grand Blanc.

And on Friday, she was back in Clarkston creating the holiday look at Country Greens.

Despite the frantic pace, Maryagnes is pleased.

"Christmas is always really exciting," she says. "I don't like to be in one place all the time and I like working with people. I get a lot of satisfaction."

"Like the Calico Cat," she explains, "I really want her store to look nice and she has good windows to work with — she has the best windows in town."

In addition to her work in stores, Maryagnes does home interior decorating and she presently has three clients in Rochester.

She got her start in store decorating about 10 years ago when she worked three years in display at J. L. Hudson's in Flint, later continuing her career as a freelancer.

Her flare for the unusual shows in her home as well.

"I gave the builder fits when he built it," she says, describing her choice of blue and camel for interior trim-colors. "Once the brick got up, the builder really liked it."

Maryagnes also finds time to give her home that special touch at Christmastime.

"I try to do a different theme every year," she says. "I don't do the same old stuff."

Her busy lifestyle does have its drawbacks, though.

"My basement is a mess," she laughs. "It's been crazy lately."

Maryagnes begins the steps for the window design at the Calico Cat by grouping items together and seeing the effect they'll achieve.

A time for giving thanks...

Activities outside the Clarkston-Independence-Springfield area

Kick off the holiday season on a nostalgic note by listening to Gene Miller's Ink Spots in two shows at the Somerset Mall on Sunday, Nov. 30.

Showtimes are 1 and 3 p.m. at the mall located on Big Beaver Road in Troy.

Other activities include a brunch and fashion show benefit for the Detroit Symphony at Bonwit Teller at 10 a.m. for $20 (children are free), a free brunch and fashion show at Saks Fifth Avenue at 11 a.m., and Wayne State University's Jazz Band performing at noon and between the Ink Spots' shows in the mall.

There will also be ongoing informal modeling in the mall fashion shops and a drawing at 4 p.m. for gift certificates and a free Caribbean Cruise for two.

Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association's annual Christmas sale, "Everything's Nice," begins Monday, Dec. 1, and continues through Dec. 13.

Over 75 artists are participating with such items as note-paper and prints, porcelain wildflowers, ceramic items, jewelry, pottery and pillows.

Most items are priced at $50 or less at the gallery located at 1516 S. Cranbrook, between 14 Mile Road and Lincoln, Birmingham.

Hours are 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday. For more information, call 644-0866.

One trip or unlimited visiting privileges to Greenfield Village and the Henry Ford Museum, Dearborn, may be the perfect Christmas gift for your favorite family.

You can select a one-time general admission gift to either the village or museum for $4.25 and adult and $2.25 for children ages 6 to 12. To include a tour of both the village and museum, the cost is $8.50 for each adult and $4.50 a child.

Gift memberships to the museum and the village are $25 for one person and $40 for a family.

The price includes unlimited admissions, discounts in the gift shops, reduced rates for other activities and a subscription to the "Friends" publications.

Call 271-1620, ext. 691, to order regular admissions and the same number, ext. 216, to order "Friends" memberships. You may use major credit cards.

the buffet may reserve tickets by calling the theater box office at 377-3300 or the community relations office at 377-3316.

"Rhapsody," the second concert of the season by the West

Bloomfield Symphony Orchestra, is to be presented Sunday, Nov. 30.

Curtain time is 7:30 p.m. at the West Bloomfield Auditorium, 4925 Orchard Lake Rd., West Bloomfield.

The program consists of a selection of six rhapsodies including Liszt's "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2," and Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

For ticket information, call 626-1560 between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m., now through Friday.

Clarkston and Ortonville area residents help bring "Once Upon A Mattress" to stage Dec. 4, 5 and 6 and 11, 12 and 13 at the Eagle Theatre, 13 S. Saginaw, Pontiac. Pictured from left are Kevin Fetter, Sandra Smith, Bruce Collins, Robert Schultz and Steve Cunningham. The musical is an adaptation of the fairy tale, "The Princess and the Pea" with a twist to delight the child in every adult. The family entertainment is suited to all ages. Tickets are $4.50 at the door and $4 in advance for adults, and $3.50 for senior citizens and students. Showtime is 8 p.m. For more information, call the theater at 335-6470.

An art auction is planned at Waterford Our Lady of the Lakes High School on Friday evening, Nov. 28.

Hors d'oeuvres and champagne are to be served while auction goes preview the large display of art that includes works by Dali, Max, Rockwell and Renoir.

A donation of $1 will be collected at the door.

Viewing begins at 7 p.m. and the auction, presented by the Oxford Galleries, is to start at 8 p.m.

The school is located at 5495 Dixie Highway.

Swing your partner over to a special dance by the Independence Squares on Saturday, Nov. 29.

The theme is County Fair and there will be prizes, games including a cake walk and a whole lot of square dancing.

Bandanas, blue jeans and straw hats are the attire for the evening.

The evening is to begin at 8 p.m. at Clarkston Junior High School, 6300 Church, Independence Township.

Cost is $3.50, and square dance callers are Jerry Cokewell and John Corwin.

Call Dallas Lippincott at 625-1801 for more information.

Club notes

A tribute to Gen. John Pershing, who led the American Expeditionary Forces to victory in World War I, was read by Iva Landon to the members of the Veterans of World War I and Auxiliary at the November meeting.

"We hardly hear of him today, but former teacher, John J. Pershing, in our early years was a name nearly every American saluted," says Mrs. Landon.

Apple blossoms that were sold by the organizations around Labor Day weekend in September turned into gold, for part of the money was sent to the six Veterans' hospitals in Michigan to help with Christmas and Easter parties.

At the November meeting, initiation ceremonies took place for new Auxiliary member Barbara Bates Craghead. Her mother, Helen Bates, is a member of the Auxiliary and her father, the late Harry C. Bates, was a member of Barracks No. 213 of Detroit.

Lucile Gries, past department president, performed the ceremonies.

The next meeting is planned Dec. 13 with an exchange of gifts, dinner and entertainment at Springfield Township Hall.

For more information, call 634-4717.

Recipe File

By Lorna Bickerstaff

Another one of the recipes that I picked up in Florida while on vacation is Shirley Jones' Pecan Breakfast Rolls. Shirley and DuWane moved in June from Waterford to Bradenton, Fla.

Pecan Breakfast Rolls

2 loaves frozen bread
Cinnamon
Sugar

Put bread in meat keeper overnight. Slice six slices per loaf and then quarter. Roll in cinnamon and sugar (more cinnamon than sugar).

Put layer of whole pecans in bottom of buttered bundt pan, followed by a row of cinnamon buns, sprinkle with pecan sauce. Continue alternating layers of rolls and sauce. Do not let rolls rise.

Bake at 325 degrees for 50 to 60 minutes. Will raise to top—immediately turn on to serving tray when removed from oven.

Sauce

1 c. firmly packed brown sugar
1 stick butter (do not use margarine)
1 T. water
½ c. chopped pecans

Bring to boil in sauce pan. Boil 2 seconds. More pecans may be used.

Spring Lake schedules children's dinner theatre

Nightclub it like the folks

When Heather Hubbard dons her silver wings and dances across stage during the upcoming children's dinner-theater production at Spring Lake Country Club, she'll be in her glory.

"It's like having a chance to be free and do something different also," says the 7-year-old, her eyes shining as she talks about being an actress.

Thanks to the efforts of Heather's mother, Carolyn, the musical "The Littlest Angel" is coming to Spring Lake on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 14, 15 and 16.

The Hubbards, who live on Wealthy Drive in Independence Township, have participated in The Artful Pans, a children's dinner theater group, since its inception earlier this year.

"I was hoping something would start in the area, because we really need it—there are hardly any shows for children to go to see," Carolyn says.

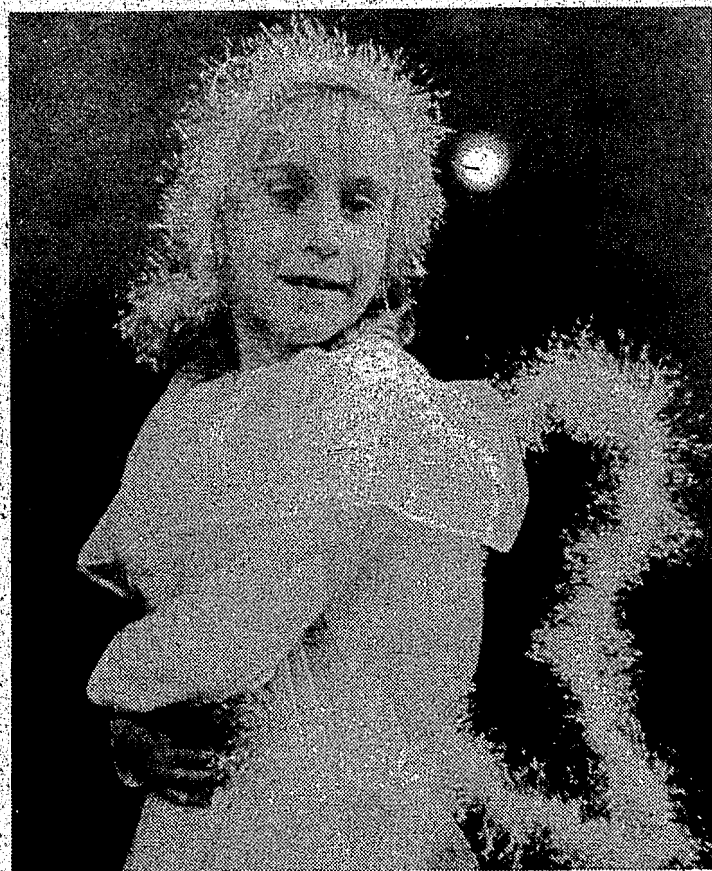

She knew there were dinner theater productions for adults at Spring Lake, so she called and asked if they would be interested in a children's dinner theater. They were.

Heather is the only member of The Artful Pans cast of 30 who lives in Independence Township.

Shawnee Spedden, artistic director of the theater group, studied at the American Academy in New York and returned to Commerce Township to produce plays in the area.

Her group is the first children's theater troupe in Michigan, she says.

"My main thrust is to give theater a boost and kind of keep theater alive and growing," Shawnee says.

Heather's costume for her role in "The Littlest Angel" consists of a gossamer gown and shiny, silver wings and halo.

The play is a simple story with lots of dancing and singing and there are about 20 children in the production.

"We're aiming for good theater for kids," she says. "I plan to continue to include children in the cast."

"I don't ever intend to do children's theater just with adults or just with children."

The evening of entertainment is to begin at 5:30 p.m. and the play is to begin at 6 p.m.

Tickets are $5 and the price includes a meal of chicken, corn, tossed salad, fruit cup, roll, cupcake and punch.

Santa Clause is to appear to greet young theatergoers after the play.

For reservations, call Spring Lake at 625-3731.

The play will also be presented at Richardson Community Center on Oakley Park Road, Commerce township, on Dec. 20 and 21.

A luncheon-theater, showtimes are during the day. The menu is the same and tickets are $5. Call 624-0029 for reservations.

Taylor, Gafner wed in Blissfield

Cathy Gafner and Dr. David E. Taylor were recently married in an early evening ceremony at the Immanuel Lutheran Church of Blissfield.

Barbara Gafner was her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Cyrene Strowers and Janet Taylor, sister of the bridegroom.

The bridegroom's brother, Richard Taylor of Gainesville, Fla., served as best man.

Ushers were Keith Gafner, brother of the bride, and Mark Young.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elwyn Gafner of Britton, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Theron Taylor of Kingfisher Lane, Independence Township.

Following their Oct. 25 wedding, the couple honeymooned in Bermuda.

Dr. and Mrs. Taylor are residing in Lapeer. He plans to establish his dental practice in Metamora.

Silver anniversary

A surprise dinner party marked the 25th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. McIntyre early this month. The party, held on Sunday, Nov. 9, was hosted by their daughter and son-in-law, John and Debbie Jackson of Waterford; their son, Brad of Clarkston; and their parents, Edna Henson of Troy and Mr. and Mrs. Robert McIntyre of Nokomis, Fla. Among the 26 guests celebrating at Machus Sly Fox in Birmingham were Dr. Alan Henson and his fiancée, Mary Bambrich of Cleveland, Ohio; and Mrs. Wally Weidman of Chicago. Thomas and Kathryn were married Nov. 12, 1955 at Bethel Missionary Baptist Church, Ferndale. They have lived on Simler Drive in Independence Township for seven years. He is self-employed with the McIntyre-Fenlon Insurance Agency, Pontiac. The McIntyres are active members of the Bloomfield Hills Baptist Church. They are proudly expecting their first grandchild in May.

Millrace: Good service breeds loyal customers

For Terry Walther and Patti Snook, The Millrace Salon represents their first business venture.

But they're hardly starting from scratch — both are bringing with them loyal customers from where they previously worked.

"I worked here (in Clarkston) for three years, and this is where our clientele is," says Terry, explaining why she and Patty decided to open their business in the Clarkston Mills Mall in downtown Clarkston.

"When people find someone they like, they'll stay loyal even when you move," adds Patty, who previously worked in Pontiac. "And I'm very proud of our work. We take time with each one of our customers to give them exactly what they want."

The two business partners first met while attending school at the Oakland Institute of Cosmetology in Union Lake. Terry currently lives in Rochester while Patty makes her home in Waterford.

"We really enjoy our work," says Patty. "I was a secretary for eight years, and it just got to be the same thing over and over again."

"This is something you can never get bored with, it's always a challenge. There's a lot of satisfaction in making a customer happy."

"We get a lot of people who will come in and say 'Change me — make me a new person,'" Patty adds. "It's a

Mills has an image of being a rather elaborate mall, but we stress that our prices are affordable for everybody.

And reasonable prices don't translate into less personable service, she adds.

"We don't believe in taking two customers at a time and rushing things," Terry says. "We want to give each individual person our fullest attention."

The business's name was the brain-child of Terry's husband and was inspired by the Clarkston Mills, Terry says.

"A millrace is the current of water that turns the wheel — and that was located just outside our window," she says. "We wanted to come up with a name that would promote the mall, something catchy."

Patti and Terry are happy to report that business has been good since The Millrace Salon opened Nov. 1. Their phone number for making appointments is 625-9710.

"Things have gone real well — we've had a very good response," says Patti. "Our clientele have followed us here, and we're also getting new people in, too."

challenge and a lot of fun to make that happen."

The Millrace is a salon for everyone, notes Patty — men, women and children — and senior citizens 65 and over receive a 10-percent discount.

"Our prices are very reasonable," Terry says. "The Outdoor education classrooms-they're naturals

North Sashabaw Elementary 6th graders thrill to Camp Tamarack's way of teaching

Learning how to pull and how not to push is the hang of old fashioned sawing. Jeff Bussell concentrates to master the age-old art and does so with success.

By Marilyn Trumper

Camp Tamarack's ground covering is copper with fallen leaves.

Often the only color to break the scene in the camp's 1,000 acres is the familiar green of fir trees.

Mile after mile of nature and hiking trails ribbon the 1,000-acre landscape, each leading to a fascination, wonder or adventure for some camper.

During the week of Nov. 17 to 21, North Sashabaw Elementary School 6th graders, roamed and ran and learned at Camp Tamarack in Groveland Township.

It was outdoor education with fun.

Almost 100 students learned about life in a fallen log, how animals stake out territories and how to make a handmade stool.

"This is North Sashabaw Elementary's first camping experience," said John Reabe, principal. "We had a spaghetti dinner fund raiser, a paper drive and the cooperation of the Parent Teacher Organization (PTO) in the candle drive. Also, the PTO gave a $250 scholarship for camp.

"The profits from the drives went to camp fees. We met our objective, that no child would be unable to attend camp because of financial hardship."

As with any first-time camp experience, the kids had a hard time sleeping the first night, he said.

"But after that, when taps were played at 10 o'clock, you could see lights go out in cabins one after another right on down the line," he laughed.

Jim Lockard, camp naturalist, taught students how to make rope and how to construct foot stools from raw wood.

Surprisingly, some knew the name of a draw knife—but none the name of an adze.

But it wasn't long before they were working with the tools in Paul Bunyon style.

There were slide shows of insect life in fallen logs, followed by a field trip to collect specimens and view them under a microscope's discriminating lens.

Two lessons involved sharpening the senses.

Blindfolded students followed a winding rope through the woods, stopping every so often when they happened upon a piece of material knotted to the line.

That was the signal to stop—reach to the ground—and search for an object in the leaves.

Once there, nimble fingers tried to discern what the object was without the use of eyesight.

There were snakeskins, potatoes, stuffed weasels and deer antlers, awaiting probing hands.

Another lesson involved dipping sponges in various scents and scattering them in patterns on the ground.

To an unaware nose, the mess on the ground simply looked like a haphazard scattering of sponges.

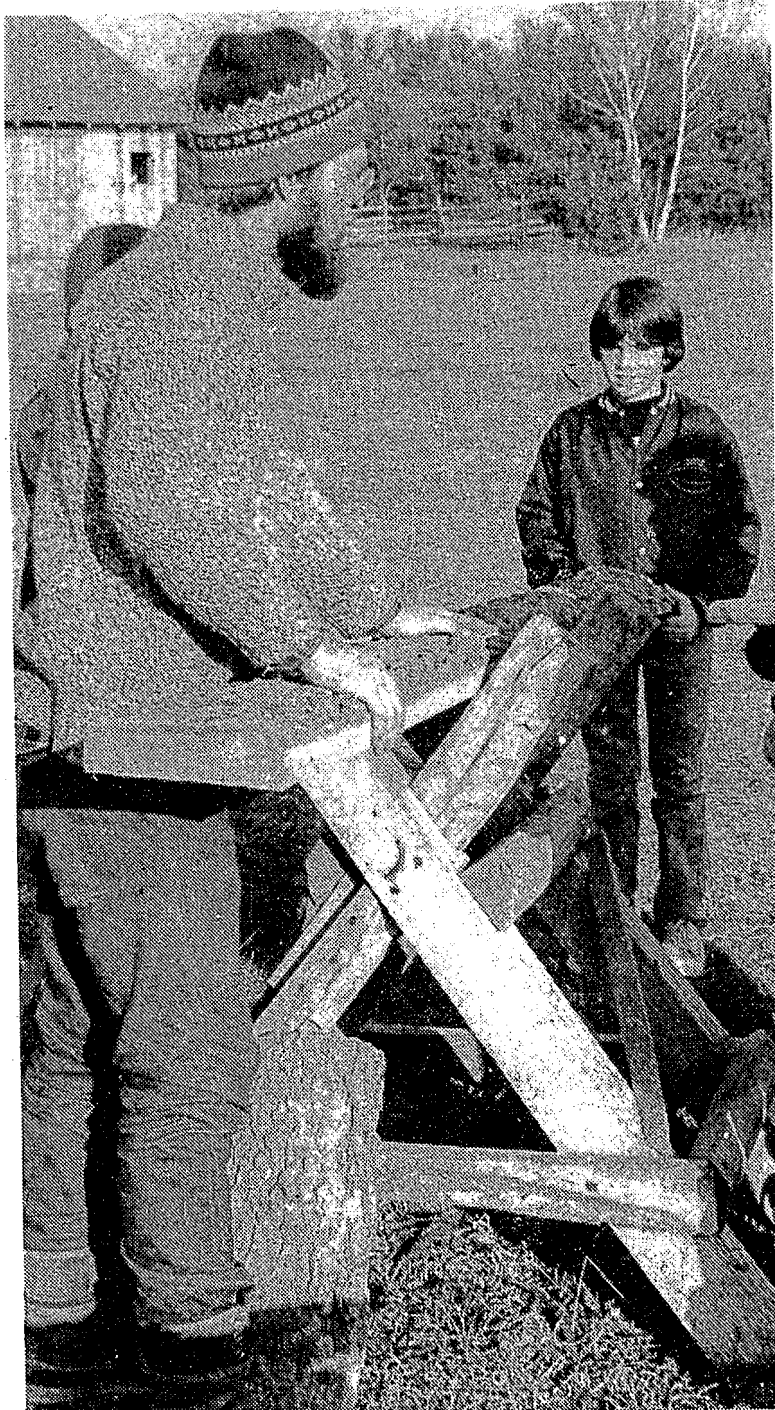

But, by smelling individual sponges, students were supposed to pick out patterns of different scents and get the feel of animals staking out territories, said 6th grade teacher, Thomas Brown.

"In the future, we'd like to utilize these facilities at Camp Tamarack for more than just sixth grade camping. We'd like to eventually have all elementary grades utilize the camp a few hours a week for outdoor education," Brown said.

By Monday, the kids will be seated at traditional desk in the traditional classroom, but their learning experience at Camp Tamarack won't soon be forgotten.

The whole idea behind this blindfolded escapade is for students to recognize what they're feeling, without being able to see it. Rose VanSickle [left] and Karol Bilby might scream instead of being curious if they knew what they possessed was a snake skin.

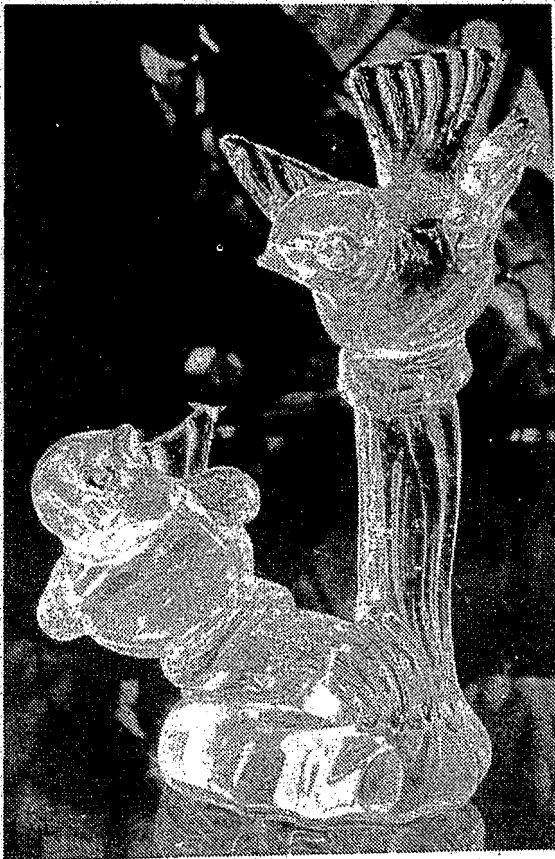

In order to properly saw, explains Jim Lockard, Camp Tamarack naturalist, the log must first be seated flat on the horse. As Jim turns the log for proper placement one North Sashabaw Elementary pupil listens carefully awaiting his turn at the blade.

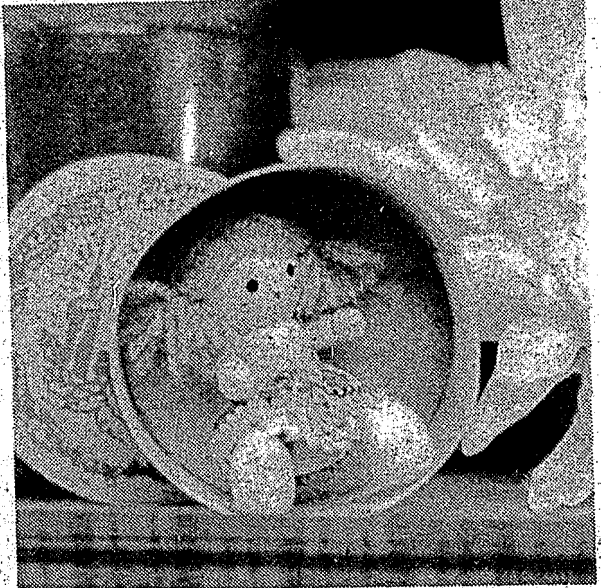

The discreet shopper

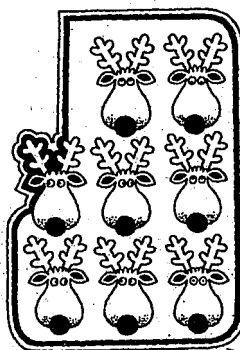

Pandas, polars, Paddingtons and even miniature Smokey the Bears are among a collection of all sizes and shapes of cuddly bears at The Gift Market in the Clarkston Mills. This mom and baby duo sells for $42. Bear prices begin at $3; and we found other bears made of ceramics and pewter; a music box bear; and a tote bag with a fuzzy bear face.

Sunlight, lamplight or candlelight captures the beauty of this pair of birds. The hand-sculptured, imported glass accent piece is one of many sure to light up the eyes of the most discriminating person on your gift list. It costs $31. Accents in glass, brass and other mediums, with a range of pricetags suited to any pocketbook, can be found at Beattie Interiors, 5806 Dixie Highway, Waterford Township.

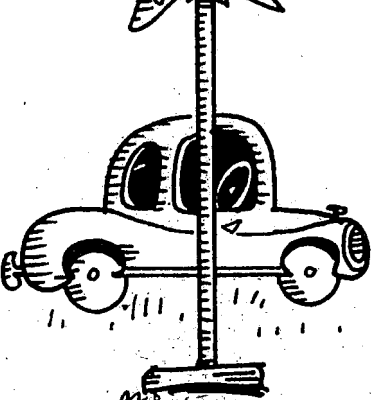

Little wooden dolls in wooden boxes can be nestled among evergreen boughs or tucked in Christmas stockings. They cost $1.75 and are part of a large assortment of wicker and wooden tree trimmers at Country Greens, 25 S. Main, Clarkston. Also on hand are many gift items priced under $2.50 certain to please the young and old alike.

Never leave money, valuable jewelry or important travel documents such as a passport or plane ticket in your hotel room. Either lock them in the hotel safe or carry them on your person. If you elect to keep them with you, be conscious of them at all times. American passports are very much in demand on the Black Market selling at a high price. If a minor, carry a letter with your parents' consent. Read about the customs and points of interest before visiting a place. Be sure to reconfirm your flight 24-48 hours ahead of time.

We'll be sure to tell you about interesting customs in the countries you'll be visiting, as well as giving you tips on how to travel comfortably. For all your needs come to us at CLARKSTON TRAVEL BUREAU INC., 6 N. Main St., 625-0325. We handle groups, conventions, and incentive programs, as well as catering to the individual. For business we can make all travel arrangements and have the tickets ready when you want them, sent to your home or office, if you wish. Open: Mon thru Fri 9:30am-5:30pm, Sat 9:30am-1pm. Have a happy Thanksgiving.

TRAVEL TIP:

Make a note of any inconvenience or mishap encountered on the trip. Upon your return, give it to your travel agent or send it to your travel agent or send it to the Consumer Affairs Department in New York.

Coping with kids

by Jim Windell

Parents can create adolescent rebellion

"When you live under our roof, you'll follow our rules," shouts one angry father.

"If you don't like it here, leave," screams another frustrated mother. When her daughter tries to leave, though, she says, "Where are you going?"

"We won't let you throw your life away," says another parent of a teenager who is behaving in a way his parents find unacceptable.

While these parents say that they have "troubled" or "incorrigible" teenagers, the fact is that the teens don't have as many problems as the parents.

It is mothers and fathers who often, though certainly not always, cause or set up the difficulties of adolescents.

Many mothers and fathers seem to expect that adolescence must be a time of stress and distress, trouble and rebellion, yet this is not universally the case in our society.

Parents can expect a troubled time from their teens when the parents themselves are rigid and unyielding, give double-bind and conflicting messages or orders and when they are unable to escape from their own past problems, concerns and conflicts.

When a mother or father takes a stand on an issue and is unwilling to modify that stance or allow an opinion to be altered, it is only a matter of time before a teenager comes along to challenge it.

Parents who are unable to escape from their own past frequently have hang ups in areas such as parent-child relations, authority and sexuality.

Fear of a child following in their own errant footsteps has Often the frustrating thing is that they can challenge an old and sacred belief so well. For some parents this then means that the defense against new information or ideas must be shored up and made more impenetrable.

caused many a parent of a teen to go against what they know to be good child-rearing principles.

Being the parent of an adolescent may not be easy, but it can be made even harder when there is an unwillingness to keep an open mind, and when a parent comes to feel that his beliefs are always right.

All the excitement and thrill in any pageant reaches a climax when the winner's name is announced. Clarkston's Junior Miss competition held Friday and Saturday was no exception When Julie Greetham was announced as the 1981 Clarkston Junior Miss, her friends and classmates shrieked with happiness and Julie joined in the madness with hugs all around.

Julie Greetham reigns as 1981 Junior Miss

By Marilyn Trumper

When the master of ceremonies announced 17-year-old Julie Greetham as Clarkston's 1980-81 Junior Miss, Julie's mom Sabra gasped from her seat in the audience and uttered, "I can't believe it!"

There were tears of happiness and joy coupled with squeals of congratulations among the 24 seniors from Clarkston High School competing for this year's title.

Julie's crowning ended two evenings of competition at the CHS Little Theatre where the seniors were judged on physical fitness, talent, poise, appearance, scholastic achievement and the ability to handle an interview.

This year's pageant theme was the Rhinestone Cowgirl. As the curtain opened, a dozen young women, dressed in green and white outfits complete with cowboy hats, square danced their way across the stage.

The evening was filled with individual performances by competitors. The talent was varied. There was everything from mime acts and comedy, to performances at the piano and flute.

Dressed in evening gowns, the seniors individually made their way across the stage to answer a single question they drew from a box.

Then it was over as suddenly as it had begun.

Clarkston's new Junior Miss, Julie Greetham, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Greetham of Andersonville Road, Springfield Township.

In addition to receiving top prize of $450 toward a scholarship, Julie is the recipient of the $25 Kraft Award.

The competition's first-runner-up, 17-year-old Julie LePere of Clarkston-Orion Road, Independence Township, received $300 toward a scholarship and won the $25 Kodak Award.

Second-runner-up, Kathy Goldner of Eastlawn Avenue, Independence Township, won $150 toward a scholarship.

Nancy Westlund, 18, of Holcomb Road, Independence Township, placed as third-runner-up and received $100.

Sponsored by the Clarkston Jaycees, this was the 19th year for the Junior Miss Pageant.

The Junior Miss competition is a nationwide scholarship program to recognize, reward and encourage excellence in young people.

Local winners advance to state competitions which determine candidates for the national title.

Julie's eyes well up with tears as she relays her happiness. First-runner-up in the competition was Julie LePere, second-runner-up was Kathy Goldner and third-runner-up was Nancy Westlund. Sue Ham was announced Spirit of Junior Miss. Holly Luter and Becky Kirk won the talent competition and Sue Jorgensen won the scholastic award. Maria Livieratos was the recipient of the Clairol Award.
