Levy gravel mine battle continues

DNR hears protests; decision on study 30 to 90 days away

By Marilyn Trumper

Hundreds of Independence Township and Clarkston Village residents, as well as 30 organizations are waiting with baited breath to see if the state's Department of Natural Resources (DNR) calls for an environmental impact statement (EIS) on the Edward C. Levy Co.'s proposed 400 acre mining operation.

If the call for an EIS goes out, chances are the permit needed to create a lake by mining will be approved, said Jeffrey King of the DNR's Land Resource Division Pontiac office.

The DNR had 30 to 90 days to make a decision, and if the call for the EIS is given, the request is passed on to the Environmental Review Board.

Over 200 people appeared at the public hearing on Jan. 28, jamming the township hall and voicing strong opposition to the proposed operation located near the headwaters of the Clinton River, adjacent to Independence Oaks and Clintonwood Parks.

Opponents of the proposed operation say it will cause sedimentation in downstream lakes, ponds, rivers and streams and possible flooding. Environmental groups and concerned citizens spoke to the destruction of wetlands, foliage, fauna, animals and aquatic creatures.

The hard stand was reinforced over and over by representatives from the Areawide Water Quality Board, Clinton River Environmental Workers (CREW), the Clinton River Watershed Council, the East Michigan Environmental Action Council, the Detroit Audobon Society, and others.

A 1,000 signature petition signed by those in opposition to the proposed pit was presented to DNR representatives by David Endreszl of CREW.

Township officials remain steadfastly behind the planning commission's 1979 denial, when Levy applied for a rezoning of the proposed site from rural residential to industrial.

At the meeting township Supervisor James B. Smith and Clerk Christopher Rose called for Independence's right to zoning and adherence to the master plan, pleading for the DNR to deny the permit.

At the hearing, Levy's attorney Norman Hyman, said the aggregate company is one of the three largest in the state.

When the permit is approved for mining, he said, they plan to take out $60 million worth of aggregate.

Hyman maintained the proposed site off Clarkston-Orion Road, west of Sashabaw, is the only available area in the Detroit-metropolitan region where prime access to the expressway as well as great gravel reserves exist.

The company will not mine the full 400 acres, he said, and instead 101 acres or 20 percent of the total site would not be touched. This would leave 292 acres.

Of those 292 acres, 66 are wetlands and another 51 acres would be used for earth berms. In addition, the processing plant would utilize 15 acres, he said.

The 66 acres of wetlands involved no threatened or endangered species and has no meaningful relationship to the Clinton River system, Hyman said, offering conclusions from an environmental study by Commonwealth Associates, a firm hired by Levy to conduct the study.

With information from the study, Hyman maintained there would be no significant impact on area wells or the environment.

In 20 years when mining is completed, the site would be reclaimed into a 198-acre lake stocked with fish, with 44-single-family homes lining the water's edge, he said.

A 200-foot buffer zone along the east side of the river, was increased to 500 feet after the study was completed, he said.

The proposed operation has put a kink in the plans of the Oakland County Parks and Recreation Department and the state's Michigan Land Trust Fund.

The site joins 100 acres of a 200-acre parcel approved for purchase with money from the land trust fund, planned to be an addition to Independence Oaks Park.

The county can still purchase the land with state money, Hyman said, adding 14 additional acres next to Clintonwood park would be available for purchase.

Independence is currently involved in a condemnation suit to purchase 80 acres of Levy property for an addition to Clintonwood Park. Tax dollars from a

Court order keeps one man from moving in

By Marilyn Trumper

Pat Biernat is first to admit she and her husband Steven are not immortal.

The certainty launched the couple into a unique parenting-planning situation 25 years ago when their developmentally disabled son was born.

The Biernats raised Kevin in their home on Allen Road in Independence Township.

They saw to it he received a proper education and learned social skills.

Every experience, each new activity was to lead to the day Kevin would achieve independence from his parents, move into an adult foster care home, and work in a sheltered workshop and perhaps make a wage.

A month ago, Kevin was scheduled to join four other developmentally disabled adults at the Timber Ridge Trail home in Independence Township, located just a few miles from the Biernats' residence.

The move has been clogged with a temporary Oakland County Circuit Court restraining order prohibiting any more residents from coming into the home.

For Pat, the action has been disheartening.

"We all plan ahead for our children's future. That's all a good part of parenting as it is with normal children," she said. "While Kevin is not capable of making his own decisions, we can make them for him with his input."

"We have given him all the experiences and training we can possibly give. If he's to experience more growth, he's got to leave us."

"He is no longer challenged in this home and he won't have the opportunity to be challenged if he remains," she said. "Everyone has the right to experience with dignity or risk."

The move into the Macomb-Oakland Regional Center (MORC) sponsored home offers Kevin the opportunity to reach his absolute potential, Pat said.

"We're trying to avoid waiting until a crisis develops, through planning, and providing him with a place to grow," she said. "We've been talking positively about placement and he's accepted it well. He hears classmates talk about their group homes and they consider it a step toward independence. It's a grown-up feeling and they feel they're making real progress.

There's a sense of urgency to move Kevin into the home, Pat said.

In June, Kevin will be out of mandatory education, and if institutionalized, he would move into a sheltered workshop or activity program.

But he's not coming from an institution and, as a result, is a low priority when it comes to placing him in either a workshop or program, she said.

"If the restraining order succeeds in keeping the residents from moving in, I'll find him a new program because that's the kind of parent I am. It may mean private tuition or fees, but I've spent all these years seeing to it he have the appropriate training for this functioning level," Pat said.

Kevin still plans to move into the home, joining four other adults in their late 30s and early 40s.

The age difference between her son and the other residents is the one thing which concerns Pat.

"That was the one negative factor that concerned me and still does," she said. "But, there were more pluses than anything else."

"The home operator impressed me. The facility impressed me, it's very home-like. Kevin would have his own private room, the house is near his home and the staff impressed me. Also, the other residents have no assaultive behavior."

"Ideally, the population in the house would be the same age, have similar interests, backgrounds, be close to their families, but that is not always possible," she said.

While she and her husband have raised Kevin, and MORC has found him a potential home, the community still remains a problem.

"Most people think mentally retarded automatically means mentally ill. A mentally retarded person is not dangerous. They may have unpleasant behavior, but they do not constitute a danger."

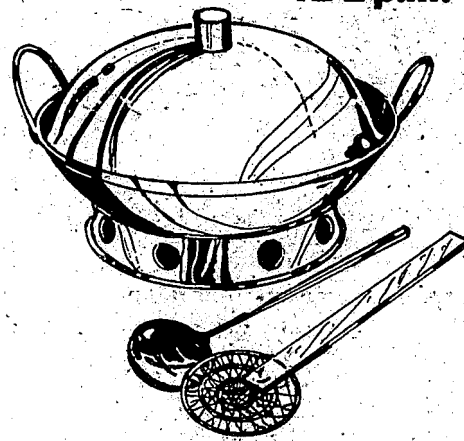

They may make guttural sounds or holler, but it's not a life-threatening situation. Those behaviors can be modified out," she said.

voter approved millage last year to generate funds for the land purchase are already rolling into the township. They were collected for the first time in December of 1980.

State Sen. Kerry Kammer, D-Springfield Township, has been actively involved in the mining issue from the beginning.

"I can recall insisting an environmental impact statement be done," said Kammer, sponsor of the Land Trust Act. "My request was that the DNR complete it—as opposed to a contract by the benefitting agent."

While Hyman had earlier stated comparable sites for gravel mining were not available in the region, Kammer said, "It's my understanding that Oxford's American Gravel Aggregate is 15 miles from the nearest headwater and is one of the largest in the world."

Clarkston Village Trustee Ruth Basinger, committee chairman of the Hydrology Committee, said the mining insured less water to the Mill Pond, and almost certain stagnation of streams and rivers feeding from the pond.

Thomas Bullen of the Independence Land Conservancy asked the DNR to deny the permit. Summing up his argument he said, "For those of us who live in this area we know what a gravel pit looks like and a gravel lake—and we are not fooled."

"Lake Levy would be an ugly legacy we cannot explain to our grandchildren without embarrassment."

Foster home neighbors promise continued fight

Challenge says home violates deed restrictions, zoning ordinance

By Marilyn Trumper

The six-month-old court battle to enforce single family deed restrictions continues for Lake Oakland Woods, but the flavor of the fight has changed.

When residents filed suit in August, the goal was to thwart state licensing and prevent the home from opening.

The aim now is to rid the neighborhood of the home which moved in three developmentally disabled adults two weeks ago.

Residents are intent on enforcing the subdivision's deed restrictions limiting the use of homes there to single families, and defining the term to mean those related by blood, marriage or legal adoption.

The dispute will go all the way to the Michigan Supreme court, promises Duane Kuzak, one of the subdivision residents who organized neighbors and spearheaded the opposition campaign.

"We knew all along from our attorney it would be tough to get an injunction to keep the home out. Before we can get an injunction, we have to show the home would do harm to the neighborhood," Kuzak said.

"When you tell the judges about what's happened in other homes, they say it's an isolated incident, that you can't prove that'll happen here. How can you prove a mentally retarded person will injure you except by showing past incidences?

"We'll take it to the Supreme Court if we have to, to prove there is something to a private contract—that you can't violate deed restrictions," he said.

William Craig lives next door to the home on Timber Ridge Trail in Independence Township, a location which affords him a firsthand view of happenings.

From the beginning, Craig and Kuzak rallied neighbors in the common cause.

"Our objections are not with the foster care program. Our objection has and always will be that foster care homes, mini-institutions, do not belong in a single family residential subdivision," Craig said.

"There are three unrelated patients and a staff living there. In no way does that work out to be a family," he said.

Craig and Kuzek point to the home as a business in a residential area as part of their argument, saying that the home violates zoning laws as well as deed restrictions.

"We came home from vacation after the home had moved in. The first day, I counted six cars in and out. At one time, there were seven cars in the drive. They leave their garage door open and the lights on all night," Craig said.

"The lights are not infringing on my rights. I don't know if they leave them on for security or what. But the cars and lights give it a business environment and it doesn't have a single-family-home look about the place," he said.

So far, Lake Oakland residents have spent $2,000 in legal fees and are gearing up for more costs, he said.

"The neighbors are behind this. We get calls of encouragement and 90 percent of the residents signed an affidavit in opposition to the home," Craig said. "The remaining 10 percent we've not been able to contact."

Three disabled adults taste freedom

By Marilyn Trumper

For three developmentally disabled adults in their late 30s and early 40s, Jan. 9 marked the day a house at 5127 Timber Ridge Trail became home.

The two men and one woman have spent a collective 50 years in Oakdale, a state institution in Lapeer, said Corey Krause, group home development specialist with Macomb-Oakland Regional Center.

The trio continues to experiment with their new-found freedom.

For the first time in years, Charles, Louis and Marie can drink coffee—whenever they want to.

They can eat—whenever they're hungry.

Both were unafforded luxuries in institutions where life is regimented down to the hour showers are taken, Krause said.

Judy Lund, careworker among five others staffing the home, reveals one way institutional living has conditioned responses.

"Their first day here, we sat down to have soup and sandwiches for lunch. After eating, Charles stuffed some saltine crackers into his pants pockets to save them to eat later. We assured him he would never have to do that again.

"He must have done that in the institution, though of course there, the crackers were in cellophane," Judy said.

In their short time within the home, the residents have been to the movies, to Pine Knob where they watched skiers, to the Drayton Plains Nature Center and McDonalds.

They've joined a Saturday bowling league and go shopping.

For the first time in his life, Louis went into a grocery store, Judy said.

Home administrator, Karen Adams, said outings will diminish once the residents are enrolled in a sheltered workshop.

"We still don't have all the residents we're supposed to have, but there's a new program opening in February they might possibly go to," she said.

"They take care of the house, although they don't have to.

They vacuum, dust, make their beds, make their own lunch, and Marie and Charles set and clear the table."

The staff prepares the meals, but when residents want to become involved and learn, they do, she said.

Meals are balanced and reviewed by the state Department of Social Services.

"Charles had a heart attack a couple of years ago, so the menu's prepared with a check on cholesterol," Karen said.

There are two staff members working in the morning, one is in the home all day long, two at dinner, one all night and two on weekends, she said.

None of the staff sleeps in the home.

Staff members do the residents' laundry, the cooking, they're responsible for the cleaning, and act as role models in addition to introducing the residents to things they've never seen or heard of before, Krause said.

Prior to the residents moving in, Karen was allocated $7,000 from the state to furnish and stock the home.

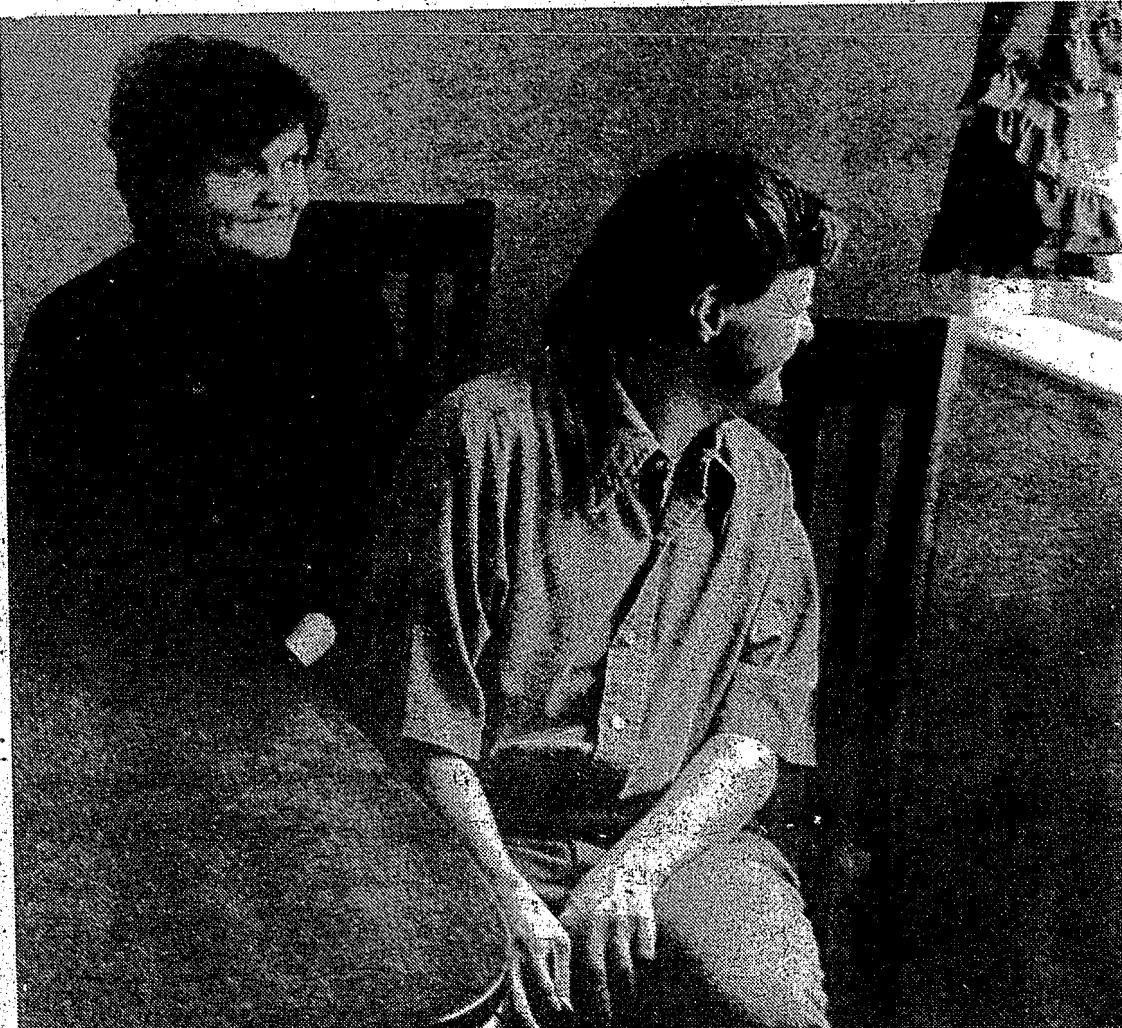

Each bedroom is furnished with a bed, chair, dresser and lamp for each resident, a state requirement, she said.

"Their (the residents') parents have expressed some interest in providing pictures and things for their walls," she said.

Few items in the home reveal it's a state regulated facility.

An index card tacked into the fireplace mantle provides staff with instructions for use.

Fire extinguishers in bold red hang on several walls, and on both upstairs and downstairs walls hang framed diagrams of the house's windows and doors and hallways.

The view of the outside from the Timber Ridge house's living room, offers trees, leafy ground and nature, a fresh relief from institutional courtyards and indoor recreational areas. Marie and Charles take in the view while Louis, [not pictured] especially delights in the squirrels.

Opposition points to cost as primary reason

By Marilyn Trumper

A majority of residents at Clarkston's council meeting on Jan. 26 were adamantly opposed to a ban on leaf burning in village limits, and voiced their opinions strongly. "This issue was put to a vote of the people and did not pass," said Karen Sanderson of Holcomb Road. "If someone on the council wins an election by one vote—they win. Doesn't that mean anything?"

"Some people heat their homes with woodburning stoves. The next thing you'll tell me is I can't do that," she said to the council.

Sanderson arrived at the meeting with a 27-signature petition in hand objecting to the proposed leaf burning ban.

"I want to know why this request came from Mrs. Clemo," Sanderson demanded. "She lives in the township, she's not even a village resident."

The issue first surfaced in November as a result of a request by Clemo. She pointed to air pollution as a primary reason to institute the ban, to dense smoke rolling across village streets endangering pedestrians' lives, and was concerned about the number of people burning leaves without a permit.

At the meeting, Clemo repeated those concerns and offered alternatives to burning

"I think all of us know there are no boundary lines when it comes to smoke," Clemo said.

Clemo proposed residents rent a leaf mulching machine, and also proposed bagging and drafting an ordinance to prohibit burning. Clemo's husband Donald suggested the village consider the purchase of a municipal leaf-sucking machine.

Village President Fontie ApMadoc turned thumbs down to the leaf-sucking machine, saying the village could not afford the purchase.

Council member Jackson Byers pointed out the cost of an ordinance saying, "We have ordinances running out of our ears with no way to enforce them. An ordinance is costly, and that cost would be directly passed on to the taxpayer. In lieu of such an ordinance, we have to have an alternate plan."

Other council members wanted to know who would "chase down" ordinance violators, and Clemo suggested the township would, as it enforces the village ordinances, or the fire department.

"You're still living in a small community, my dear," ApMadoc said. "We don't have someone to go out and catch someone burning leaves."

Ethel Sinclair of Holcomb was in favor of the ban, and informed council that the Clarkston school's Band Boosters were interested in raking and bagging leaves for a fee as a fund-raising project.

Rita Chisholm of Miller Road, laughed at the suggestion that residents rent a mulching machine for $6 an hour, and questioned who could afford to pay for students services.

"A lot of us can't pay that and besides, we want to clean up our own yards," she said.

Opposition against the leaf burning ban continued, even with testimony from local pediatrician Dr. James O'Neill and Dr. Sol P. Baltimore of the American Lung Association.

Both men spoke of the hazards of air pollution from burning leaves, and the additional particles fed into the air from gasoline, newspapers and anything else used to prime the leaves for burning.

The Clemos called for the council to take a stand on the issue.

"I hear people making excuses for not doing something," Clemo said.

"Someone has to have the guts to make the decision and establish the law," her husband Donald said. "These kinds of decisions are made by people like you everyday."

Trustee James Schultz said the village would have to come up with an alternative to burning before banning the practice. Trustee Byers agreed.

"Before we ban, we have to select the most cost-effective means of dealing with unwanted leaves," he said.

ApMadoc suggested one way to enforce burning without a permit would be to institute a $50 fine. This could help eliminate heavy smoke accumulation, she said.

The council agreed to review the situation and look into hiring a disposal firm to pick up and shred leaves, or buying a mulcher, costs for bags, and students to rake and bag for a fee.

The issue is to be discussed again at the March 9 meeting.

Village drops engineer of 24 years

'I can't, in my heart, vote on Kieft, knowing he wants an expanded M-15'— James Schultz

By Marilyn Trumper

Clarkston's Village Council has dropped its engineering firm of 24 years and hired a new company which deals solely with municipalities.

The quest for a new engineer began in November when concerns over a possible conflict of interest were raised by Trustee Ruth Basinger.

Basinger called Kieft Engineering to task for representing the village and performing work for private citizens in the village and outside village limits, where village property was involved.

Over the past few months, the council has listened to three firms bid for the post, focusing on Harry Mosher, village resident, member of the village zoning board of appeals (ZBA), partner in the engineering firm Mosher-Kapelczak located at 9215 Dixie Highway, Independence Township.

Mosher-Kapelczak specializes in work for municipalities and does not take private contracts.

At the Jan. 26 meeting, village President Fontie ApMadoc repeated her concerns that Mosher himself could find himself in a conflict of interest with his many ties to Clarkston.

"I know I don't have a vote in this, but I do have an opinion," ApMadoc said. "He (Mosher) does live in the village and personally I feel hiring his firm could be a mistake. Now, I have nothing against Harry, but I do know he's extremely involved in Novi and has missed ZBA meetings because of work."

"I feel it would be an asset," said Trustee James Schultz.

To which ApMadoc countered, "As long as he thinks your way."

When Kieft Engineering

president Delton Lohff appeared at a council meeting two weeks ago, he denied his firm has a conflict of interest and assured the council they wanted to remain the village engineer.

He also voiced approval of widening M-15 outside village limits when asked by council members, adding it would ease the congested flow.

Trustee Schultz pointed to Lohff's position on widening M-15 as his reason for hiring a new engineer.

"I can't, in my heart, vote on Kieft, knowing he wants an expanded M-15," Schultz said. "The village has been against this from the start. We don't always know when there is a conflicting interest, but he wanted five lanes."

Trustee Gary Symons agreed with Schultz, raising an eyebrow over widening the road, but he offered an alternative; to retain Kieft and hire Mosher-Kapelczak as an alternate if a conflict of interest should appear on the horizon.

Trustee Jackson Byers agreed. "If we do force a conflict of interest, it would be best for the village to call in an outside firm—perhaps we've been negligent in the past. All the firms we heard could do the same kind of work for about the same fee," he said.

The council voted 4 to 2 to hire Mosher-Kapelczak, effective March 1.

Trustee Symons and Byers voted "no," and Trustee Schultz, Vondell Gardner, Connie Fischer and Ruth Basinger voted "yes."

Illiterate parkers galore

To the Editor:

It has been less than a year since I wrote about handicapped parking in front of A & P and Wonder Drugs.

The last time I wrote, there weren't any handicapped signs in place. Well, now there are, and the people who patronize A & P and Wonder Drugs are still parking there.

Just to remind the people of the area: A handicapped sign is the sign with a wheelchair on it. You must have a permit to park there.

Please don't park in the handicapped spots unless you have a permit.

If you do park in these places, handicappers think you are handicapped, because you are unable to read or because you just don't care.

Thank you.

Thinking springtime

To the editor:

It's that time of the year again—the seed catalogs start to make their appearance in our mailboxes.

It's time to sit back and watch the birds flock busily around the feeders and thumb through these dream and wish books.

It's time to admire all those fruits, vegetables and flowers we will have in our gardens and yards this spring and summer.

It certainly is great therapy for fighting the winter blahs and cabin fever that is so prevalent this time of the year.

And don't forget when you feed the birds, continue through spring as they can perish in less than 48 hours without food.

Also, the ashes from your woodburner or fireplace are very beneficial for your garden.

Spring is surely around the corner.

Hostages' plight tugs at all

by Kathy Greenfield

The yellow ribbons were there, as promised, as we all sat down to the luncheon at the Michigan Press Association convention Saturday in East Lansing.

At the head table that spanned the front of the banquet room in the Kellogg Center sat Richard Queen, the 53rd hostage held in Iran for 250 days when he was released due to an illness later diagnosed as multiple sclerosis.

The gesture, of wearing a yellow ribbon, I thought, was worthwhile—it was a way the over 400 people there could give tribute to Queen and all the hostages now home again.

The young man sitting next to me did not put on his ribbon. Curious, I asked why.

He said he was "all hostages out" and tired of the media attention on the situation.

Later, when Queen came to the podium to speak, everyone in the crowd stood to welcome him—my neighbor at the table stood, too—after all, you can carry individualism only so far.

Before that, I had decided I liked Queen. As he sat at the head table that was decorated with a wide yellow band and giant yellow ribbon he talked with the people around him—his smile, beard and age (29) reminded me of my brother.

There was an aura of healthiness about Queen despite his disease, which is now in remission.

The sense of well-being he carried was more than just the way he looked; but showed in what he said as well.

"I always attempt to look at the positive side," he said during his introductory remarks.

"The United States very much gained as a nation from what happened to us in Iran. We came out stronger, wiser and more united than we were before. I see that as a very tremendous gain."

He talked about having his hands and feet tied during the first days of the American embassy takeover in Iran, about having to stay in bed and having to ask to go to the bathroom.

"It was Mickey Mouse," he said, adding that it was important to keep a sense of humor.

Speaking for himself, Queen said the Iranians did not physically torture him.

Although he never used the term mental torture, he talked about it.

The "quack" doctor who just laughed and dispensed pills even when Queen knew he was seriously ill; the night last February when 22 hostages were awoken in the middle of the night by masked men who lined them up blindfolded against a wall and cocked their guns; the early rules that allowed no speaking—all were mentioned by Queen.

He talked about organizing books that came from a high school and were dumped in the embassy and about his role as librarian for the hostages.

He made everyone laugh when he said he realized most of the hostages had been removed from the embassy when they stopped returning the library books, because he knew they were reading, with little else to do, while being held captive.

Queen told the crowd about his trip to Alaska with friends shortly after his release and his need just to talk with a few friends and drink a few beers.

The newly released hostages deserved privacy, too, he said, and asked the media to allow them such peace.

Queen said he didn't consider himself a hero; merely a man doing his job.

He spoke about Iranians who are naturalized American citizens and about attempts earlier to take away their citizenship.

"We have to remember we are a nation of immigrants," he said.

His voice filled with anger when he talked about the militant Iranians responsible for holding the Americans captive, yet he balanced his feelings by saying that he did not hate the Iranian people and that there were a few compassionate Iranians among the group that held him prisoner in the American embassy in Tehran.

When Queen finished his appearance, the crowd again presented him with a standing ovation.

Queen returned to his seat, and the woman sitting next to him—she was the wife of a press association official—patted him on the back and said, "It was good."

Before we left, I glanced at the young man sitting next to me who refused to participate in the ribbon tribute.

He had tucked the yellow ribbon inside his shirt pocket.

Jim's jottings

Term reminiscence

by Jim Sherman

By the time you read this our term as president of Michigan Press Association will be over. The year has been spent.

The actual time involved with Association related items is nil. We really worked harder for the group in 1978 when we were involved in re-writing the organization's by-laws.

For the most part the top office means presiding over four meetings a year of a board of 14 newspaper people—half representing daily newspapers, half weeklies.

Every other year the MPA president is from the weekly press.

The office puts an editor or publisher in a position to meet more people on a different level than non-officers.

Through our 10 years as a board member and officer we've met all the top elected officials in Lansing on a non-political footing.

University-types, state department heads, judiciary, and some business leaders have been met who we would not have otherwise been exposed to.

But mostly the position expands acquaintances in our own field. We even met some editors of daily newspapers we liked. We thought all the good guys were in the weekly press.

This is being written a couple days before we leave for Lansing and the last hurrah. We're trying to get our butterflies flying in order, because appearing before 500 of your peers tends to make one nervous.

We've jotted down "don't forget" notes for two weeks. There are six meetings to preside over in the 3-day period, and I'd just as soon leave an image of something above a blithering idiot.

Hazel is as nervous as I that I'll embarrass her. I'm determined not to, but that determination has been strong before, only to have my mouth in motion before my mind is in gear.

We also know that no matter how much preparation we do now, it could all go down the drain as soon as the MPA executive director Warren Hoyt sees me.

This is his big show, too. He has to shine or he may lose his job. Thus there will be last minute script changes, additional people to acknowledge, program changes, and new unpronounceable names to stumble through.

One thing is certain; We started the year at this MPA convention on stage with a belly dancer. That won't happen this year.

Well, maybe just one number.

Letter to editor

Loud cry for school backing

To All Voters of the Clarkston School District:

Our schools have a very big problem and I am personally very worried and scared about what is going to happen.

We have only a couple months to decide the future education of our children, as well as the future of the Clarkston community.

Yes, the community too, for the schools are a vital influence in keeping the property values up. People do not move into an area with a poor school system and many others leave, creating a problem that affects everyone living and working in that area.

How do you cut $1 million out of a school system that is currently providing a "no frills" education?

I feel the school district has shown a history of very conservative use of money, many cuts were made last year, eliminating many intramural sports, educational field trips, purchase of needed supplies and books, etc.

Mr. Mason has proposed $1 million more in cuts which will continue to take away from the quality of education we provide.

I feel extra-curricular activities and sports are a very important motivating and developing factor for students. What do these students do with all their spare time and energy?

Jobs are certainly not available for them. This is an area I have felt we needed to expand, hence my proposal last year for adding soccer.

More students need an opportunity to participate—sports and extra-curricular activities should not be eliminated.

Is "pay-as-you-play" the answer? It is certainly something to consider, but we are talking about 1 percent of the budget. If they cut out all sports, they still must find $840,000 more to cut.

It appears that personnel cuts would be inevitable since salaries amount to 75 percent of the budget. What will this do to our level of achievement?

Increasing the number of students per classroom when many are overcrowded already is going to hurt every student in our schools.

When Detroit Edison and Consumers Power have increased costs, they pass them on to us and there is nothing we can do about it except to pay them.

When schools have increased costs, they must come begging to the voters who, because they have a choice, often say "no" in order to save on their personal expenses.

WHERE ARE OUR PRIORITIES? I want my children to have the best education possible and I will support a millage vote, for I know that money will go directly to our schools to educate our children.

Parents, citizens, do you have ideas where there is waste in our schools or what can be done to save money? I spend many volunteer hours per week in our schools and I cannot see waste or frills.

I have made a few suggestions to school board members for cutbacks. Have you?

Those of you in businesses or homes that are cutting back, share your knowledge. The more we can save, the less teachers must be laid-off.

We have elected seven people to represent us, but they can't do that unless you let them know what you want done by letter, phone or by attending board of education meetings.

Let's unite as a community and support our school district the way we did in 1980 to support our winning basketball team.

Relay for Lincoln

Abraham Lincoln's 172nd birthday is cause for celebration, and members of the Independence Township Republican Club have come up with a new twist.

The Club's Lincoln Cup 172 Cross-Country Relays are planned Sunday, Feb. 15, at Independence Oaks County Park.

Teams must consist of six persons with at least one skier under age 14 and at least one over age 40. The total combined ages of each team cannot exceed 172 years.

The teams will be formed at race orientation that begins at noon at the park the day of the relays. The race that consists of 1/4-mile relays, begins at 1 p.m. "A lot of Republican clubs do things for Lincoln's birthday—mostly dances, lunches, speakers, that sort of thing," said Beverly Clemo, one of the organizers of the relays. We chose to go along this route as a family participation event."

There will be a spot on the line-ups for cross-country skiers of all abilities, she said.

Donation for each person is $1 and pre-registration is mandatory. Forms are available at Coach's Corner, 12 S. Main, Clarkston and at Timberline Saddlery and Ski Co., Clarkston Mills.

New face on beat

Illegal parkers, sidewalk bicycling kids and anyone doing anything they shouldn't be doing—won't skirt the law much longer.

Keep an eye out for the blue patrol uniform of Charles Smalley, Clarkston's new parking enforcement officer.

The former Independence Township police reserve officer was hired by the village council at the Jan. 26th meeting, with orders to begin work immediately.

Smalley, who lives at 5247 Sashabaw Road, Independence Township, replaces Volney Schaffer, who resigned from his year-long post two weeks ago.

Smalley is expected to patrol the village nine hours a week.

'If it Fitz...

Feels good when you quit

by Jim Fitzgerald

There was a long period in my life when, on every autumn Friday night, I attended a high school football game where 400 spectators were considered a large crowd. I watched a high school football game in a stadium where 400 exit doors are considered missing. Onward and Upward.

The stadium is the Pontiac Silverdome. I have owned a piece of it since 1974 but never visited it before Saturday. Several people expressed surprise that it took me so long. I modestly regard myself as a boulevardier, as well as a football expert, so why have I never joined the fashionable people who watch the Detroit Lions play in the Silverdome?

The answer is that I prefer to do my boulevardiering on reasonably negotiable boulevards. There is nothing reasonable about the traffic in the Silverdome area on Lion Sundays. Experienced fans say the only way to avoid hours of inching on the highway is to arrive the day before the game, and leave the day after. Apparently, getting stuck in traffic for several hours is supposed to be worse than sitting in a stadium for two days to see a three-hour game. That makes as much sense as smashing your thumb with a hammer so you won't have to smash it with a rock.

So it seemed like a fine idea to make my first trip to the Silverdome to see two high school teams play for a state championship. The crowd would be 25,000, much skinnier than the 80,000 who turn out for the Lions, so traffic wouldn't be too bad. That's what my brother-in-law told me. I refuse to take any responsibility for the men my sisters marry.

It took us an hour to go a distance usually covered in two minutes. It was bad enough that there were no police to direct traffic but the real kiss-off was at the busiest corner, right next to the stadium, where the stoplight wasn't stopping any cars, it blinked yellow as traffic poured from two directions toward the parking lot. Motorists were expected to politely take turns crossing the intersection. Motorists who have been inching for hours, and who are already late for the kick-off are not famous for being polite.

I was driving the second car in a two-car caravan. My job was to stick directly behind the first car at all costs, otherwise our party would become separated and my brother-in-law would be unable to guide us to our special seats on the one-yard line. I accomplished my assignment, refusing to yield to all courteous impulses at great risk to many fenders. When I crossed the take-turns intersection without allowing a break in the caravan, the people in the car ahead were so impressed they stood up and applauded. It isn't easy for six people to stand up and applaud in a hardtop sedan, but this was one of those memorable occasions when a heroic performance forced an heroic response.

Finally inside the Silverdome, I counted the exit doors. There are 125. Recently the Pontiac fire marshal, pressured by a Detroit News investigation, conceded that 125 is 442 doors short of the number required by safety codes. That's convincing. Any crummy building can be one or two doors short, which is equivocal, but when a crowded stadium is 442 exits short, and the fire alarm rings, there is no room for equivocation. I am reminded of the athlete who was in great shape to win except for one little thing—he was dead.

Like it or not, Michigan taxpayers own part of the Silverdome by virtue of an annual $800,000 subsidy. Many people, including me, think the subsidy is a rotten idea. If team owners can't make it on ticket sales, they should go out of business, or quit paying athletes such stratospheric salaries. It's that simple.

But there is this disturbing thought: Without that $800,000, the Silverdome might cut back on exits and traffic control. That blinking caution light might be turned off, and 80,000 spectators might be funneled through one door. Faced with such a horrifying squeeze, I would certainly stay home, even from high school games. I don't want to be a one-lane boulevardier any more than I want to smash my thumb with a hammer.

Sheriff's log

Friday, would-be-thieves pried open the front door of a house on Whipple Tree Lane, Independence Township, but were scared off by the family dog, according to police reports.

Saturday, thieves broke a back window out of Harvey's Colonial House, 5896 Dixie Highway, Independence Township, and took $450, according to police reports.

Saturday, thieves stole two basketball backboards and hoops mounted on poles, from the front yard of a house on Parview Drive, Independence Township. The equipment is valued at $100, according to police reports.

Sunday, would-be-thieves pried open an aluminum frame window in the rear of a house on Eston Road, Independence Township, but were scared off, according to police reports.

Sunday, thieves broke into a house on Kingfisher Lane, Independence Township, and stole over $800 worth of merchandise. The thieves ransacked bedrooms, using pillow cases to haul away the items.

The homeowner is still compiling a list of the missing belongings, but police reports said two television sets were missing.

Sunday, thieves broke into a shed in the backyard of a house on Reese Road, Independence Township, and took ski goggles and a padlock.

Total value of the stolen merchandise is estimated at $10, according to police reports.

Sunday, thieves stole the rear license plate off a car parked in the driveway of a house on Clintonville Road, Independence Township, according to police reports.

The above information was gathered from Oakland County Sheriff's Department reports.

Masked bandit robs woman

A 34-year-old Independence Township woman was held captive in a closet for several hours last Friday when a masked, mace-spraying bandit forced his way into her home.

She later escaped unharmed. According to police reports, Ruby Alexander of Wa-lo-hi Road, answered the door bell's ring at 10 a.m. and was met by a man wearing a ski mask.

He sprayed a mace-like substance into her eyes, nose and mouth, and Alexander fainted, reports said.

She regained consciousness inside a locked closet.

The thief ransacked the house, cut phone cords, and fled in Alexander's 1980 Pontiac which was parked in the garage, taking with him a television set, three rifles and a muzzle loader.

Alexander told police the thief had been in the house for hours while she was held in the closet. She later escaped and fled to the neighbors for help.

She described the bandit as a white male, anywhere from 20 years old on up. He was dressed in a blue snowsuit with orange piping and wore a blue ski mask.

Thieves take $8,000 worth

Police speculate at least four persons using a pickup truck were involved in the break-in of an Independence Township house on Eastview Road last Saturday, in which thieves stole over $8,000 worth of appliances, tools, and jewelry.

Thieves entered both the house and garage, carrying out a $400 antique mahogany china cabinet, five gold chains valued at $800, two shotguns worth $520 and a stereo.

A tool chest valued at $1,500 was chained to the wall. The inside was filled with miscellaneous hand and air tools valued at over $1,000.

The box, according to Oakland County Sheriff's reports, was ripped out of the wall.

Police speculate that because of the size and quantity of the merchandise stolen, several people and a truck must have been involved in the break-in.

Dragons celebrate last-second victory

Fourth-quarter rally stuns Wolfpack

By Al Zawacky

The whole earth seemed to be shaking at Lake Orion High School.

The Dragon fans were on their feet, cheering, applauding, waving green and white pom-poms. Cheerleaders embraced while players slapped each other on the back.

Even George Elias, the stoical and relaxed head coach of the Lake Orion Dragons, wore a toothy grin.

While Lake Orion exulted, Clarkston Coach Gary Nustad stood in a small office near the visitors' dressing room, stone-faced and arms folded, pondering what had gone wrong.

Nustad's Clarkston High School varsity Wolfpack had just lost a basketball game to the Lake Orion Dragons, 39-37.

It was a game the Wolfpack had led through the first three quarters, and through all but the final two seconds of the fourth, an important league contest that Clarkston could ill afford to lose.

"I'm very upset," Nustad began. "We let a lead slip away from us, let the tempo of the game get away in the last four minutes."

Holding on to a comfortable 21-13 lead at the half, the Wolfpack played the Dragons even in the third quarter—but Lake Orion began chipping away in the fourth.

The persistent Dragons knotted the score at 37-37 with less than a minute remaining, and when Clarkston muffed several chances to pull in front again, the stage was set for the dramatic 25-foot game winner by Lake Orion's Bruce Bullard.

Bullard's shot slipped through the hoop with just two seconds remaining, just when it appeared that the Wolfpack would be involved in its first overtime contest this season.

"We just started getting the ball up court," Coach Elias said, explaining his team's second-half turn around. "We weren't giving them (Clarkston) a chance to get set."

"They didn't seem to be hustling as hard and might have been trying to sit on their lead."

Elias' suggestion that the Wolfpack may have been a little lackadaisical in the second half irked Nustad. "My reaction to that is that it's just too bad, we don't play them a third time," he said, his eyes narrowing.

Nustad insisted that the controlled tempo the Wolfpack displayed in the third and fourth quarters was by design and not attributable to a lack of hustle.

"On the road, you try and control the tempo," he said. "We didn't want to give them a running game that could get the crowd going, and we didn't want to shoot from outside."

"We wanted to work the ball inside for the inside shots, and that's what we did—we were able to get the shots we wanted, but we couldn't put them in."

Turnovers also proved to be the Wolfpack's undoing, especially in the crucial fourth quarter. "Turnovers have been a problem for us. If you throw the ball away a lot, eventually it's going to catch up with you, and tonight it did," Nustad said.

Scott McKoin scored 10 points and pulled down 15 rebounds against Lake Orion. Sophomore Ray Kubani had his best night ever scoring-wise in a Wolfpack uniform with nine points, followed by teammates Brad Beattie with eight points, Greg Lane and Ric Schebor with four and Brad Sheldon with two.

Dennis Recknagel paced the Dragon offense with 14 points, while Bullard chipped in with 10.

Earlier in the week the Wolfpack edged out non-league opponent Bloomfield Hills Andover 43-40 at home. Beattie and Lane each had a team-high nine points, followed by Craig Schnabel with eight, McKoin and Sheldon with six, Schebor with three and Kubani with two.

Friday night's loss to Lake Orion cost Clarkston sole possession of first place in the Greater Oakland Activities League, creating a three-way tie for the top spot between Clarkston, Lake Orion and West Bloomfield.

"This is what I was dreaming about," said a smiling semi-clad Bullard in the Dragon dressing room later. "Beating Clarkston."

"Everybody is still in the race," Elias noted, assessing the wide-open GOAL title race. "We've got three games left away from home, so we're going to have to play some inspired basketball."

"It's tough to win on the road in this league."

Just ask Gary Nustad.

Eyes fixed on the target, Wolfpack co-captain Scott McKoin leaps from the floor to tally another two-pointer.

Odds Are...

CLARKSTON at KETTERING (Feb. 6): Much depends on this game.

A Wolfpack victory will put Kettering two games down in the league title race with just three league games left. A loss would create the possibility of a co-championship, and Clarkston isn't interested in playing share-zies with the hated Captains.

If the Wolves are going to win this game—and by every right they should—they'll have to cool it with the retaliatory tactics. Let Kettering play its physical game, draw the fouls and ultimately lose at the line—where Clarkston lost last December's contest.

If the Wolves play intelligently, they could win big here. CLARKSTON by SIX.

CLARKSTON at DAVISON (Feb. 10): Why does the Wolfpack play these guys twice? They'd have been better off this season not to play the Cardinals at all.

Granted, Clarkston has made impressive progress since the two teams last met in the season opener, but Davison hasn't been standing still, either. The 75-68 final last time was deceptive, too—the Cardinals were substituting freely in the fourth quarter when the Wolfpack started playing catch up.

There'll be a long bus ride to Davison Tuesday—but the ride back to Clarkston will seem even longer. DAVISON by 12.

JVs learn lesson

By Al Zawacky

Coach Larry Mahrle likened it to a learning experience. He wasn't overly pleased with the performance of his Clarkston High School junior varsity basketball team.

But on the bright side, the lesson wasn't a painful one, Mahrle's junior Wolfpack still managed a come-from-behind 32-29 league win over the Lake Orion Dragons.

"It's a win, but we didn't do the things we wanted to do to continue to improve," Mahrle said. "It wasn't until we were down 10-0 in the first quarter that we started to play ball."

The contest in the Lake Orion gym started out like an Irwin Allen disaster film as the junior Wolfpack committed 13 turnovers in the first eight minutes of play and went one five-minute stretch without taking a single shot.

But Clarkston rallied in the second stanza, pulling to within a single point at the half and outscoring the opposition 12-5 in the final quarter.

Rick Williams had his best night of the season with 23 points to dominate the stats of both teams. Teammates Craig Nicolai and Mike Dearborn contributed four points, while Mike McCormick had one point.

Steve Carrouthers led the Dragon attack with 16 points.

Earlier in the week, the Clarkston JVs humiliated Bloomfield Hills Andover 65-38 in the CHS gym.

Rick Williams was the big gun again, scoring 18 points.

McCormick had 16, Tom Williams nine, Kevin Brown six, Nicolai four, Joel Schrader four, Dearborn two and Pat Rausch two.

As a result of last week's action, the junior Wolfpack owns a perfect Greater Oakland Activities League mark of 6-0 and a 10-2 record overall.

From home courts to fair-weather fans

Bits and pieces...

HOME COURT ADVANTAGE?

By most estimates, a home court advantage in basketball is supposed to be worth anywhere from five to eight points a game. And that's an edge the Clarkston Junior High boys' basketball players never have when they play their Sashabaw Junior High counterparts.

The two schools met earlier this season at Sashabaw, but Clarkston's "home" game this month will take place—as always—at Clarkston High School.

The reason, so I've heard, is that the CJH gym is too small to hold the number of spectators who usually attend the cross-town rivalry clash.

So why not play both games at the high school, much as both freshmen football games are played at the high school athletic field? The current situation is clearly less than fair.

ROAD SWEET ROAD: There won't be many chances to see the Clarkston High School varsity basketball team at home the rest of the season. Six of the eight Wolfpack contests in February take place on the road.

That's not such a bad omen. Curiously, two of three varsity and both junior varsity defeats in the current campaign have taken place at home. Both squads are a combined 7-1 away from the CHS gymnasium.

TOURNEY PREVIEW: Hail, hail, the gang's all here.

There'll be plenty of familiar faces when the Wolfpack begins "March Madness" tournament play next month.

Clarkston will be part of a six-team district, including Pontiac Central, Pontiac Northern, Waterford Kettering, Waterford Mott and Waterford Township. All six schools competed in last season's district playoffs held at Clarkston High School.

The 1981 host school will be Pontiac Central.

PROPHET IS A LOSS: Mid-way through the season, does anybody remember yours truly's predictions about the GOAL varsity basketball race?

No? Good. Keep it that way.

DEAD WINGS: Overheard at Joe Louis Arena—"Why would anyone pay 11 bucks to see the Red Wings?"

"What Red Wings? I'm here to see the Islanders."

JVs ROLLING: Last year as freshman, the Clarkston and Sashabaw

Junior High basketball teams posted a combined mark around .500. This year as JVs they're cruising in on a league title—and they're doing it sans sophomore Ray Kubani, who is playing varsity.

That's a tribute to the kids. Moreover, it is a tribute to Coach Larry Mahrle.

FAIR-WEATHER FANS: It's really a shame to see large empty patches in the stands at the varsity basketball games this winter.

Is the 1980-81 Wolfpack somehow less worthy of community and school support than last season's team? Not by one iota. Four straight league titles is an unprecedented and brilliant achievement—and the chances of it happening get better with each passing Friday night.

Sashabaw wrestlers skin ailing Wolverines

By Al Zawacky

The large blackboard in the Sashabaw Junior High gymnasium told the story.

On it were scrawled two numbers: 66 and 18.

"Bad timing," said Clarkston Junior High wrestling coach Dave Stobbe.

"All our kids were up for this one," said Rich Weston, the Sashabaw Junior High mentor.

Up? The CJH Wolverines couldn't have reached their SJH counterparts' plateau with a fireman's ladder Jan. 19, as Sashabaw's wrestling team whopped Clarkston 66-18.

"We had some big pins," Weston said.

It was the second and final dual meet between the two teams in the 1980-81 season, and the Wolverines fared little better in the previous clash, bowing 42-33 to the victorious Cougars.

"We shuffled some kids around," Weston added, comparing last week's contest with the earlier meeting. "They (Clarkston) had some good kids out, too."

Stobbe could recite a casualty list as long as his arm.

The flu bug was the culprit.

"I had 10 of 45 kids show up for practice last week," Stobbe said. "All our kids were coming back from the flu."

"It sounds like I'm making up excuses, but I'm not trying to. This was just some bad timing—I wish we could have had this match about a week later."

Clarkston had just three winners: Andy Vinstra (pin, 1:43), Matt Scott (pin, 2:57) and Jesse Breese on a void.

The names of the Cougar winners could have made up a small-town phone book of Dean Buchanan (pin, :54), respectable size.

They were: Greg Ellis (pin, 2:30), Tom King (pin, :16),

Dean Buchanan (pin, :54), Gilbert Delgado (pin, 2:12),

Brian Dennison (pin, 4:20), Jeff Lawrence (pin, 2:59), Andre

Gourand (pin, 2:33), Keith Edwards (pin, 2:57) and Troy Wilmont (pin, :14). Drawing voids for Sashabaw were Mark Goodsell and Tony Rafferty. "I think our team's improved," Weston said later. Obviously.

Fiscal crunch squeezes athletics

By Al Zawacky

Clarkston High School Athletic Director Paul Tungate sat behind his desk, pondering the future of Clarkston athletics.

These are not the best of times for Tungate, or for many other athletic directors statewide. As school district after school district feels the pinch of spiraling costs and hard economic times, interscholastic athletics are suffering.

"Athletics is always the first to go," Tungate observed. "I'm a little upset with that approach."

"I really feel a kid learns more things about life in athletics than in memorizing the quadratic formula, or working with logarithms," added Tungate, who was a mathematics teacher prior to assuming the CHS athletic director's post.

Clarkston Community Schools is faced with a $1 million budget deficit in the next school year, a situation that leaves the Clarkston athletic department with several options—none of which are particularly attractive.

One of the alternatives is adopting a fee system, similar to the one instituted in the neighboring Waterford schools last fall.

Under the plan, each athlete would be charged $143 for each sport he or she participates in. The $143 figure was arrived at by dividing the combined costs of varsity, junior varsity and ninth-grade programs by the number of students expected to participate, said Tungate.

Although equipment costs and gate receipts vary from sport to sport, Tungate said that combining costs and arriving at an average fee was the only fair way to handle the fee system.

"I don't want to start discriminating and pitting one sport against another," he said. "It's awful hard to compare girls tennis to football."

Although a sport like tennis doesn't have the equipment costs of football, it doesn't have the gate receipts either. Football is one of the biggest school spectator events, and the revenue collected by the tickets helps offset the game's high costs.

"I hate to get in the situation where one sport is more important than another just because it generates revenue," Tungate said. "All the sports are important to the kids who play them."

Rather than eliminate an entire program, Tungate would prefer making general cuts that would affect each sport equally. By eliminating such items as school laundry service, game films, paid game supervision and slashing equipment costs, the projected fee of $143 could be reduced to $85.

That figure could be further reduced to $68 by eliminating bus transportation for the teams to and from road events, but Tungate took a dim view of being forced to rely on private vehicles.

"You're opening yourself up to a lot of problems by relying on sporadic transportation," he said.

John Moffat, athletic director for the Waterford school system, reported that the fee system was not having a negative affect on his district's athletic teams.

"Actually, we had more kids come out for ninth grade football this season than we did in '79-80," Moffat said. "It hasn't affected the number of students participating at all."

One often-expressed fear about the fee system is that coaches will lose their authority and discretionary powers as to who gets to play and who doesn't. The concern is that parents, having paid a fee, will pressure coaches and react angrily when their son or daughter spends time on the bench.

But Moffat said that hasn't happened in Waterford.

"We did have one isolated situation where a couple people paid their $50 and thought they controlled the coach," he said.

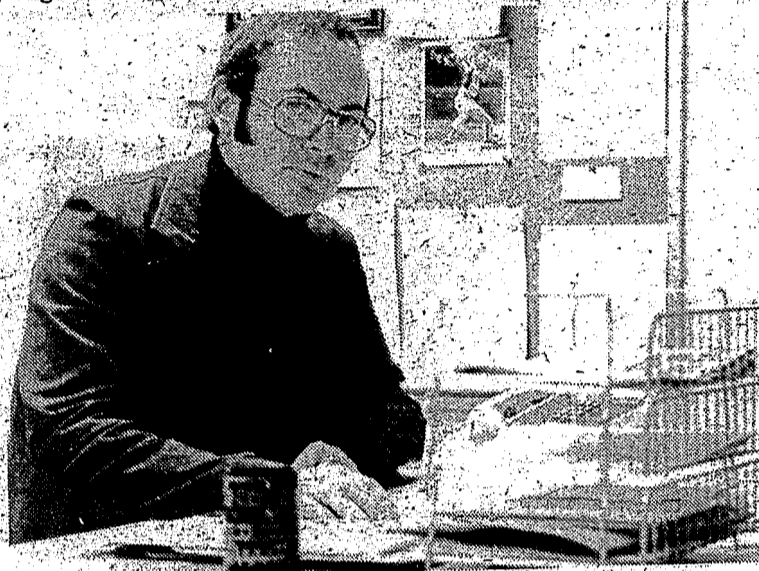

"We called a meeting and were able to settle things."

"But other than that one time, we haven't experienced that problem."

Tungate said the Clarkston School Board also has the option of going to the voters for a millage increase, but added that economic conditions and the mood of the electorate meant that any millage proposal has only a slim chance of passage.

Another alternative would be to keep services the same and have the school system go bankrupt in June of 1982. Total elimination of all athletic programs by next fall isn't an impossibility, Tungate added.

"Right now," he said glumly, "it's hard to say. I could be back in the classroom next September."

Clarkston High School Athletic Director Paul Tungate sees an uncertain and gloomy future ahead for Clarkston athletics.

Planning a trip to Vienna? Be sure to see some of its wonderful coffee houses. Time was when people came to the coffee houses as often as three times a day. It was a way of life and served as a home away from home for many people. Though the coffee house as a refuge for philosophers, composers and the like has almost vanished, it lingers on in a few places. However, the marble top tables, crystal chandeliers and magnificent plate glass windows have remained.

One of the most famous buildings in Vienna is Saint Stephen's Cathedral, with its graceful Gothic spire rising 450 feet above the city. Southwest of the Cathedral are the buildings of the imperial palace, Hofburg, and opposite the palace are the museums of art and natural history, housed in 2 beautifully domed buildings in Italian Renaissance style. No trip to this city would be complete without a visit to its many beautiful gardens and parks. # Coping with kids

by Jim Windell

Verbal assaults can be devastating

"You belong in the juvenile home," screams an irate Mrs. M. at her 13-year-old son.

"You're going to wind up in the mental ward of a hospital," a father tells his daughter.

These kinds of threats are not uncommon. Parents, often in a rage, unthinkingly tell their children such things.

They should be locked up, living with delinquents, where someone else can take care of them or that they are so mentally disturbed they should be sent away. That's what these parents say.

For the child who has to contend with these verbal assaults, the results can be devastating or at the very least disturbing.

Two things are likely to happen immediately. One, is that the young person will stop communicating with the parent out of anger and hostility. Second, is that the anger will build.

Continued threats could drive some youngsters to the brink so they do eventually engage in some kind of action or behavior that results in what the parent has been threatening all along.

Out of anger, one young teenager who had been told for years that he was no better than a juvenile delinquent, hit his mother. Her fears finally confirmed, she signed him into a detention center.

The longer range effect is on the young person's self image, if he grows up hearing he is a criminal or mentally disturbed, he may question his identity.

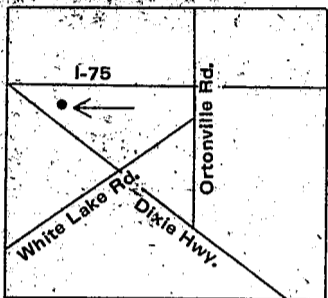

When he gets angry or has any strong feeling, he may fear that whatever his parent has predicted may come true.

The destruction of the self-esteem, coming about through years of angry, unthinking and hostile remarks by the parent, may be virtually irreparable as the person may carry through life a secret fear that the long-time predictions are bound to one day come true.

"Its purpose is to involve families who want to take an active part in horse activities," says Mary Ann Ellis, secretary of the club.

Wheeling into the past

Clarkston News MAGAZINE staff writer Al Zawacky felt like he had been transported back through time when he stepped into the barn behind James Morris' Independence Township home and viewed an array of relics from the automobile's past. Recently, he visited the home of antique-car enthusiast Morris and got him to start his fully-restored 1923 Dodge and pose at the wheel. Although he appreciates the simple and elegant beauty of antique cars, Morris said he's actually glad they don't make them like they used to.

One good cup leads to another

you may be non-plussed by the genial query, "Care for cream or sugar?"

It is a little awkward to reply, "Well, no, actually, and I'm not too sure about the coffee." When my office was moved to an area where security regulations precluded the inclusion of coffee machines, getting a cup of coffee offered a sporting challenge.

It was necessary to exit the plant where a guard laboriously noted your name and identifying statistics, then step outside into the unknown. Unknown because another regulation demanded that windows be covered to prevent "visual compromise," i.e., peeking.

After trotting along outside the building in possibly hostile elements, you re-entered at tank shipping. Now tank shipping is not a good place to enter the plant.

Under the best conditions, a wash rack for a 60-ton battle tank might be a pipefitter's nightmare, and this installation was apparently made by a learner. I never crossed the area without feeling like MacArthur going ashore at Leyte.

By the time you found an operating coffee machine, you felt you should call your secretary and explain that you were still on the payroll and it was not necessary to clean out your desk for your replacement.

After running the gauntlet backwards, the coffee was the ambient temperature of the office and was about as appetizing as a modest portion of cold, fried mule.

I tried to solve the problem by carrying a thermos in a smart leather case with a shoulder strap, but the guards kept trying to take it away from me. They thought it was a camera.

Perhaps I should switch to something I could shoot directly into the vein.

Over a cup of coffee the other day, someone mentioned coffee nerves. My problem is not coffee nerves, but attempting to get enough coffee to keep from building up a severe caffeine deficit.

For example, accepting a cup of coffee from a non-coffee drinker may be a nerve-shattering experience, but not from caffeine intake. Many people eschew stimulants, including coffee, but I have been where a non-coffee drinker feels prepared to offer coffee to his guests.

If you are ever offered coffee in a non-coffee drinking environment, decline. What may be offered is the residue of a jar of ersatz coffee that was bought for old Aunt Agatha's visit 27 months ago and has been age-hardening ever since.

If you choose to accept, your judgmental error will be followed by the ominous screeching of a steel knife painfully scraping bits and pieces of an igneous formation into a cup.

Water, which was boiling but has perceptibly cooled during the prolonged chiseling operation, is optimistically added, with the vain hope of dissolving the fossils. Unfortunately, the dissolution rate for the coffee is about the same as for the cup.

When this gustatory delight is presented,

Art is her forté

One of Karla's most recent projects is a sketch copied from "The Doors Latest Hits" album cover of the late Jim Morrison, former member of the group.

Front & Center

Call it determination or call it fate, there's a lesson to be learned from artist Karla Ripley's first formal drawing class experience.

"I decided in junior high to take an art class," she said. "I really didn't do very well.

"I got a 'C' in seventh grade and I wasn't going to take any more."

But, as things happen, a friend who wanted to take another art class at Clarkston Junior High School convinced Karla to join her.

"I'm glad I continued, because things have gone really well," Karla says.

Now a junior at Michigan State University, 20-year-old Karla has settled on a major of graphics design.

Visitors to Akers Hall on the MSU campus can see her handiwork—she designed a wall mural for her floor that was so well received its concept has been copied in the dormitory entrance area.

And, Karla has been hired part-time by MSU's graphics department.

Samples of her work are also visible in the Clarkston area. The most permanent designs are murals on the walls of the preschool rooms at Clarkston United Methodist Church.

Karla also does lettering on signs for Beattie's Interiors on Dixie Highway in Waterford Township.

A career as an art director in an art studio is Karla's present goal.

"I would really like to be an art teacher, but the field of art teaching is so limited," she says wistfully.

The latter interest is a tribute to her art teacher at Clarkston High School, Janet Miller.

"I owe everything to Miss Miller—she's just awesome," Karla says. "She just knows how to pull things out of you."

"If I didn't get my start there, I wouldn't be where I am now."

Coopers' talents cover many areas

The Cooper family of Andersonville Road, Springfield Township, can be spotted doing any number of diversified activities on a given day.

Marc, 31, is a chaplain in the ranks of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department, an accomplished printer with a booming business and pastor of his newly organized church, Open Bible Baptist Church of Pontiac.

His wife Martha, 36, is full-time mother to three children and owns and operates a hair salon within their home.

The kids, James, 10, Elizabeth, 7, and the family's foster child Danny Beam, 13, are actively involved in the church's activities and the printing business as well.

"I learned the printing business when I was in high school," Marc said. "It's growing and we're kept busy. I have two employees who work for me part-time, and James helps out a lot too.

"I enjoy it. We print everything. We print all the programs and stationery for the church, school systems and other churches. I want to help non-profit organizations—I just feel Christian organizations should help other Christians out," he said.

The business is adjacent to the Cooper's family room, and an evening's worth of work is a step away through the door. Marc and his employees often work late into the evening to complete a work order on time, he said.

For Martha, the hair salon is a part-time hobby/money maker.

"I enjoy it. It's the way I made my living before I was married and I've just continued with it," he said.

Over the years, she's established a returning clientele which Martha said is enough to keep her busy.

"More than anything it's really a hobby. It's relaxing to work on someone and I don't think of it as a business. But I haven't kept up with the changing styles so if it were to go full swing I'd have to go back to school," she said.

Side-line work is one thing, but it's the growing congregation of Open Bible Baptist Church which elicits cheers from the Coopers.

"The Lord has really blessed this church," Marc said, with Martha's immediate agreement. "We're averaging over 100 people at services. Each Sunday, the pick-up route to church has increased in size. Most of our congregation is from the Independence-Springfield township area."

Cooper, a 1972 graduate of Detroit Bible College, said that from the time he was a little boy he wanted to be a police officer.

"I hired in May of 1975 as a detention officer and later they asked me to take the position of chaplain," he said.

Now Marc enjoys a career which satisfies his religious and law enforcement needs.

"I work the jail four hours a day, supplying the inmates with library books, and the other four hours is spent programming and coordinating religious services for the inmates," he said.

With Marc and Martha's side-line jobs, Marc's work at the sheriff's department, and their strong ties to the new church, the family adds to the list of responsibilities their job as a foster care home.

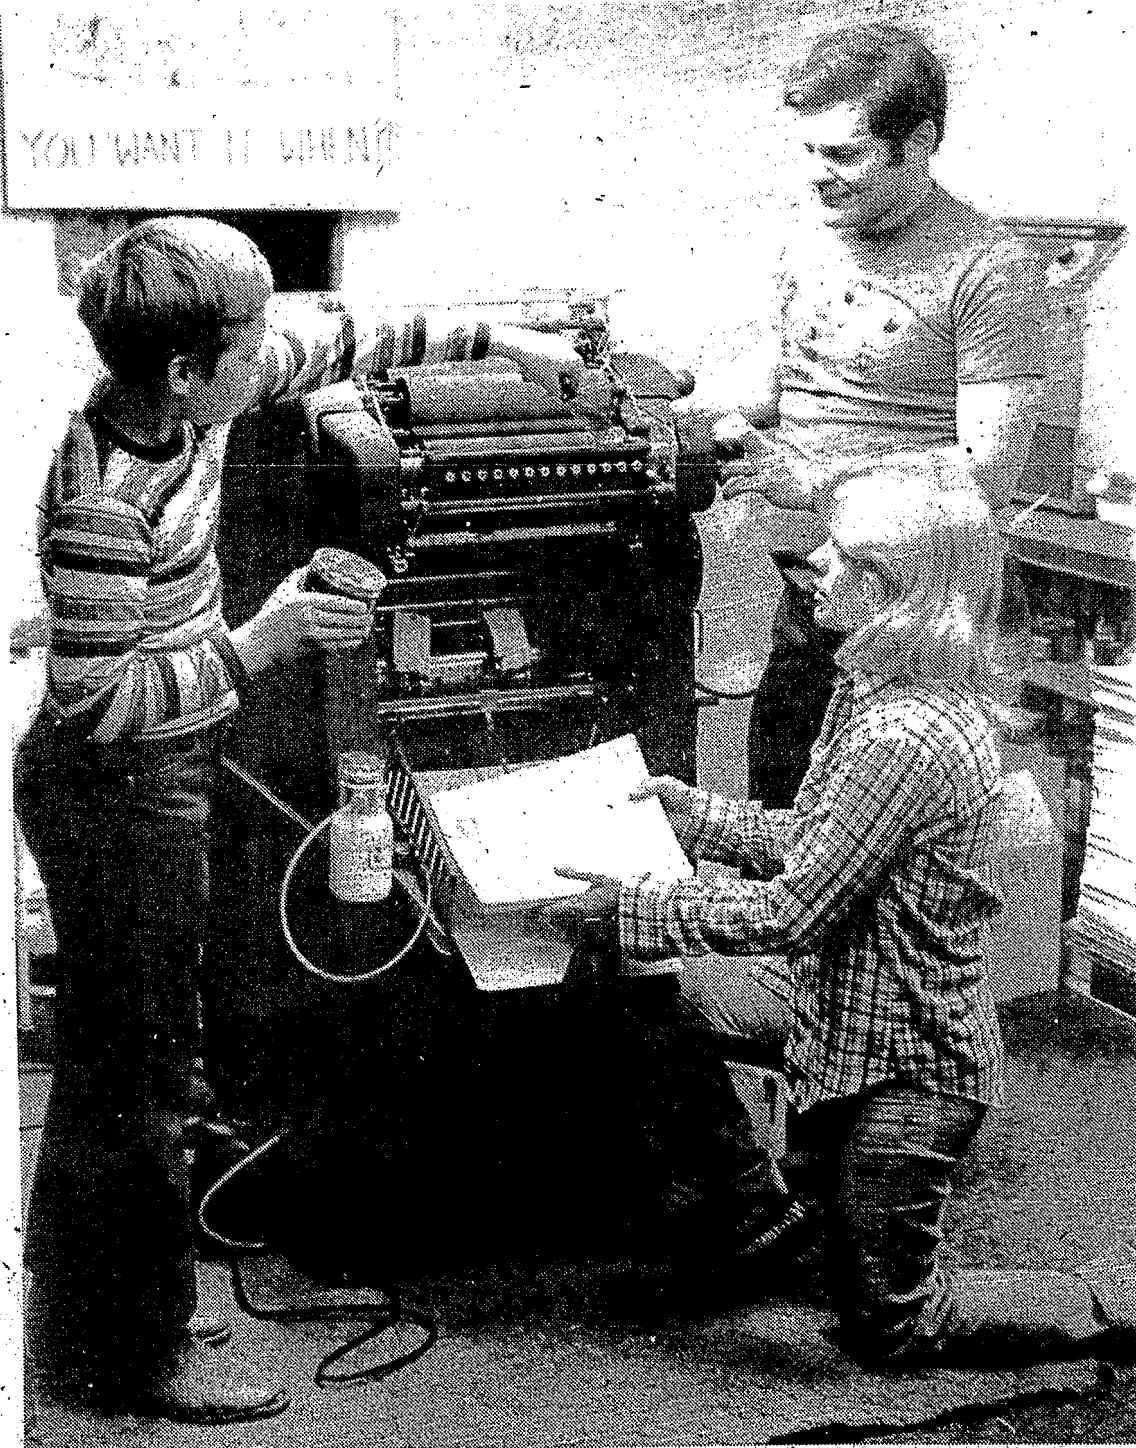

"We've been licensed for five years, and we've had three children live with us in that time," Martha said. "We enjoy working with the children, having them in our home and trying to help them."

The hard part, she said, is when it becomes time for them to leave.

"We know it will happen, so we condition ourselves to it as if it were a child going off to college," she said. "But it's hard to let them go, even though you know it's the best thing for them."

Marc supervises the printing operation as his employee Cindy gathers the newly run-off papers. James' job is spreading on the goopy orange ink, a job he executes with care and a deft wrist. Marc says the sign in the background often depicts his daily frustration.

The Coopers

One of the presents under the Coopers' Christmas tree this year was a jig-saw puzzle, a favorite family pastime. With half the puzzle still to complete, Martha and Marc work diligently while James [left], Elizabeth and Danny look on from their post at the couch.

Here it is!

Let it freeze

Photos by Kathy Greenfield

The sun shines and the fishing continues for several hours. Other times, it's so cold you can't stay out long at all, says Mike Potvin as he tries for a few more bluegills from the waters of Parke Lake.

Ask his wife how often he goes ice fishing and "she'll tell you every day," laughs Ronald Shore of Reese Road, Independence Township, as he tries to lure pike to take a bite on ice flies submerged on his line in Deer Lake.

GOIN' fishin' brings forth images of sunshine and warm summer breezes, but there's a whole different breed of people who like to fish on ice.

They laugh at winter's offerings of frigid winds and frozen water. And, they have some hard-to-dispute reasons for their hobby.

The scarcity of work is one incentive for Ron Swayne, a builder, and Mike Potvin, who is laid off from his job with a company that trucks car parts.

"We've got plenty of leisure time and this is what we like to do," said Potvin. "We don't have time to fish when we work."

The men were fishing on Parke Lake, using bait of wax worms and golden rod seed pods collected on a nearby island. A batch of bluegills in the snow attested to their success.

"We're going to fry 'em up tonight," said Potvin, which is one more reason to brave the icy waters.

On nearby Deer Lake, Ronald Shore fished for pike and bluegill with ice flies. He goes fishing nearly every night after work.

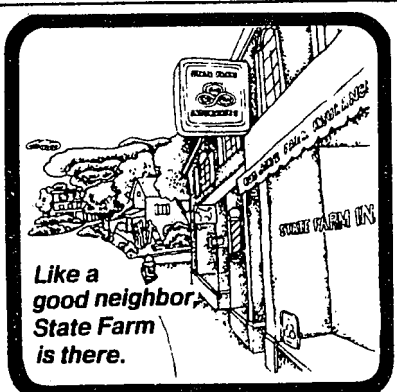

It's healthy and it's something to do during the winter," he said. "It's fun—a lot of people won't agree with me on that!"

They all concur that there's another reason to take to the ice.

It's quiet. Nobody bothers you or anything," is how Potvin puts it.

...that is unless someone pokes a camera your way and questions you about your motivations for fishing on ice.

TIME TUNNEL: James Morris steps b

By Al Zawacky

Stepping into James Morris' barn is like stepping backward in time.

Inside, an era is carefully preserved—a simpler time before seat belts, catalytic converters, computerized engines and power windows.

It is here, behind his Independence Township home that Morris works to faithfully restore antique cars, a hobby he has pursued for the past 20 years.

On one side of the barn, removed from the work area, is his fully restored 1913 Studebaker. On the other side, in various stages of restoration, are a 1912 Reo and a 1940 Austin Bantam.

"My wife and I had a car like this when we first got married," Morris says of his Austin Bantam. "I'd like to have it finished soon."

But there are limits to his nostalgia about antique cars. A late model Olds Delta 88 sits in the nearby garage.

"They don't make them like they used to," Morris says.

"Thank God for that."

Vintage Model T's may be a challenge to restore, fun to drive and nice to look at, but Morris doesn't yearn for the good old days of automobile engineering.

"The cars today are more reliable, ride better—they're just better in every way," he says. "Today, you buy a car and about all you have to do is put gas in it. With these old cars, you practically had to be a professional mechanic to keep them running."

"Every 1,000 miles you had to change the oil. You had to lift up the hood and do some lubrication every time you drove the car. The plugs would foul up. You constantly have valve problems..."

He leans back in his chair and smiles.

"Of course, we think of all that as fun today—it's part of the challenge of working with old cars."

"You have to realize also that when these cars were running around, you didn't have road salt to contend with—you didn't even have paved roads. As soon as the first snow came, you'd put the car up on blocks in the barn.

"They don't put as much metal in the cars as they used to, but the body contours were so much simpler in the old days. The metal today is good metal, but it has to be stretched more for the modern styling."

A retired music store owner, it was his work in the music business that eventually got him interested in antique cars.

Dick Teague, an antique-enthusiast and head of styling for American Motors, used to bring brass items such as headlights and

Because of the car's small size the tiny engine [right], the Austin Bantam is a commuter's dream—the car will average close to 50 miles per gallon. Below, the instrument panel of the 1923 Dodge is a reflection of simpler times. Only the most essential gauges are present—speed, fuel and battery monitor.

Although there's still a lot of work left to be done on his Austin Bantam, James Morris is optimistic he can complete the vintage horns to Morris for repairs. A polished craftsman at repairing brass musical instruments, Morris was a logical candidate to do the work.

"I came over his house once to fix an organ, and he showed me some of his cars," Morris says. "From that point on, I was hooked."

He got his start with Henry Ford's classic Model T, taking parts in the back of his music store and working on them whenever he had a chance. Some parts are available from other antique enthusiasts, but many of the cars' components have to be reconstructed by hand.

"What you can save, you save," Morris says. "What you can't, you've got to buy or make."

"The idea is to make the car as authentic as possible—to make it look like the day it came out of the factory. Some people do overdo it, though—they over-restore with a lot of fancy trim and things that weren't originally there."

"There are improvements to be made that don't change the character of the car. When you tear down the engine, you don't put in cast iron pistons, you use the new light-weight aluminum. I've seen some people cast the wheels out of aluminum instead of using wood, which will shrink and warp."

Walking through the vast array of parts and tools inside his barn, Morris points to the body of his '12 Reo, running his hand along the unpainted metal surface.

"I had to rebuild all of this," he says. "You know what that was made out of? Paper and wood."

He lifts up a portion of the rear seat to expose the crumbling wood and paper remains.

Sitting in his garage, right next to the Olds 88, is his prize antique car: A 1923 Dodge. The car has a special sentimental value.

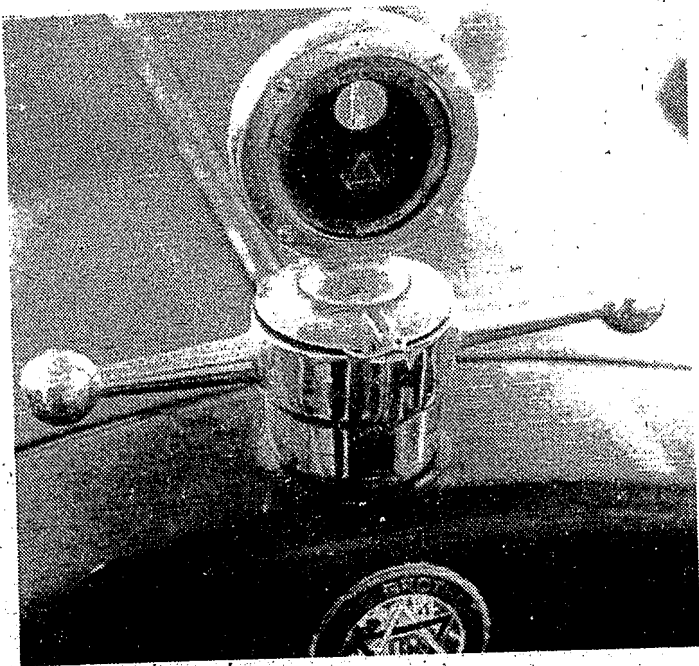

"My dad had a car like this," Morris says. "When I was a boy, the whole family drove from southern Illinois all the way to Texas in a '23 Dodge—my dad, mom and us four boys."

"She'll go 60 miles per hour," he says proudly. "I've put about 3,000 miles on her every year."

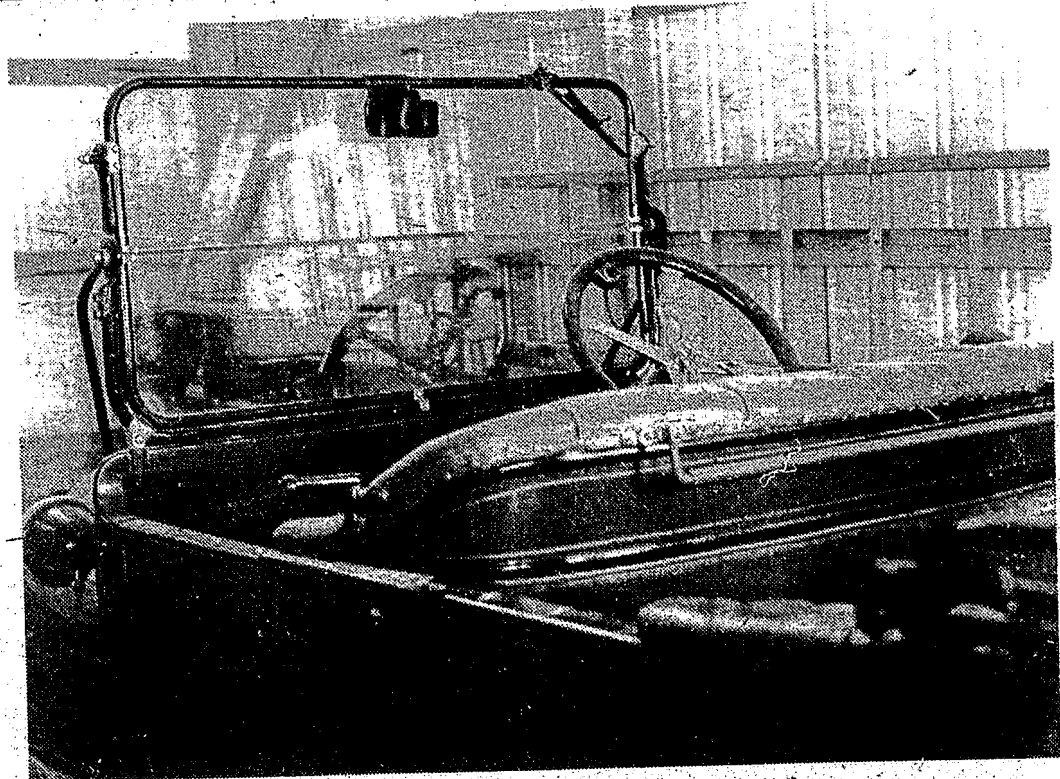

Antique car restoring and collecting can be effective hedge against inflation, he points out. The cars annually increase in value, keeping pace with the spiraling cost of living.

But there's more to James Morris' hobby than that. There is also the satisfaction that comes with creating something new out of something old.

"It's interesting to go on shows and tours," he says. "And I like being able to work with my hands."

The distinctive logo used by the Dodge brothers is present just above the radiator of James Morris' 1923 Dodge; below is the open interior of this fully-restored 1913 Studebaker. This car was the last American-made car with the steering wheel located on the right-hand side, before the "keep to the right" rule of the road standardized left-hand side operation.

40 automobile sometime soon. Retirement has meant plenty of free time to work in the barn behind his home and enjoy his hobby.

Twenty years ago, round black balls with flickering orange flames marked areas of construction along our nation's highways.

Remember?

Those black balls resembled miniature bombs like something out of a Peter Sellers movie.

Picture Inspector Clouseau juggling those deadly spheres to the torment of his superior officer.

Or, the coyote in a Road Runner cartoon as he wrestles a bomb into a giant catapult.

All those roadway markers lacked years ago as they flickered out a warning—was the sputtering fuse which always leads to disaster on the big screen.

Whatever happened to those "bombs?"

They became obsolete as progress exchanged them for new-fangled objects, says William Mercer, director of maintenance for the Oakland County Road Commission.

Efficient batteries with longer lives are now the power source behind the flashing lights instead of oil and kerosene-fueled flames.

"I don't even know when they changed over from the "bombs" to the signs," Mercer said. "It was a phasing process and came little by little. I don't even think we have any left. I think they've all been auctioned off."

—Marilyn Trumper

Have you ever captured a memory musty with age, dusted it off, mullied it over and thought, "Oh yeah! I remember those! You can't buy 'em anymore. I wonder whatever happened to that?"

The Clarkston News wants to stir those memories up again, if only for a moment, and highlight objects led away by Father Time.

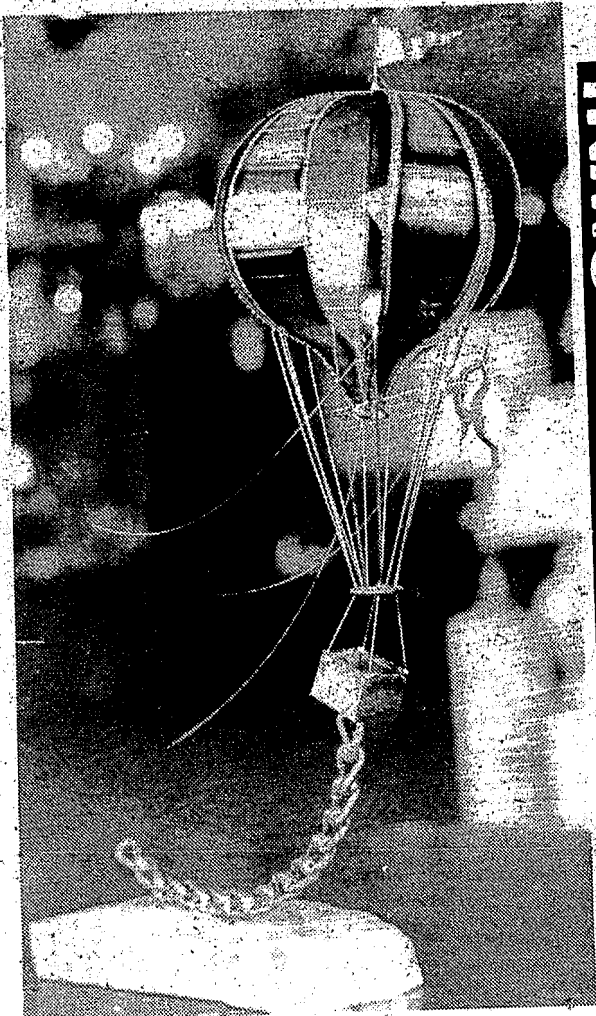

For De ja-vu we'll investigate why something's become obsolete and what's replaced that object.

But we need ideas.

If your memory's been jogged and you recall a piece of the past, give us a call at 625-3370.

Mastering the art of cut and pierce

Virginia Schultz creates customized 3-D lamp shades

Three dimensionalized lamp shades seemingly sparkle through the dark.

Delicate moves, deft wrists and steady hands are the most important asset for cutting and piercing lamp shades.

Virginia Schultz has mastered the art, and the result casts a warm illumination through detailed design.

"I first saw the shades in New England, and that's where I got the idea," Virginia said. "They enhance an antique lamp, although I have done shades for contemporary lamps too."

Depending upon the size and design, each shade can take hours to create. Virginia said she works in her "trusty workroom" in the basement of the Schultz home on Robertson Court in Clarkston.

The process begins with heavy paper and a design.

"First I draw the design on the paper and then I cut out or pierce areas," she said. "I know of no one else in this area who does this."

The shade's pattern evolves into three-dimensional design by primping and shaping cutout areas.

Flower petals are crimped inward at the edges. The light passing through the cuts casts shadows, creating the 3-D effect.

Dozens of tiny holes punched into the paper magically produce the leaf of a strawberry plant while hundreds of triangular cuts make up an American eagle with wings spread.

The shade's paper, as well as the trim, can be any color.

"No two designs ever have to look the same, and that's one of the reasons I enjoy this work so well," Virginia said. "I can pierce an area, or alternate by cutting, and I can use watercolors.

"With watercolors, I can match wallpaper, and create a custom shade. The color can be painted on in back of the shade, so that unless the lamp is turned on, the color doesn't show up. Or, I can paint it on the outside of the shade, but that produces a bolder color," she said.

Virginia has been creating cut and pierce shades for the past four years, and offers them for sale in her shop, Main Street Antiques in Clarkston.

"I also take custom orders," she added, "and can make the color and design to suit any person, or room.

Virginia Schultz painstakingly sketches a pattern onto the heavy white paper, in readiness for cutting and piercing a new lamp shade. Any given design may take hours to create, but fills a living room corner or bay with a warming glow for years.
