When the tots at Clarkston Pre-School join in the song "I've Got Two" from Sesame Street with the 29-member Sashabaw Junior High School Boys Chorus, all arms reach to the sky. Above, Tom Lawson, in the Loggins and Messina T-Shirt, shares his enthusiasm with the pre-schoolers including Stephen Harlton (below). The chorus is under the direction of Jan Knapp.

Economy, law change mean more civil suits

By Marilyn Trumper

A doctor, unable to collect payment from an uninsured patient, looks to the district court on procedure for filing suit in small claims court.

When a fuel bill goes unpaid, the company's owner steers himself to the courthouse and goes after payment before a judge.

The list of recent court actions goes on with landlord/tenant suits, gas companies seeking payment from credit card holders and those collecting on auto accidents.

The number of small claim suits has increased says 52nd District Court Judge Gerald E. McNally, and it's due in part to the sluggish economy.

People, he said, are coming into his courtroom more and more for judgment, and most are going after an average of $150.

"When the bills go unpaid, the buyer and seller are feeling the pinch of today's economy. There are negative cash flow problems," McNally said. "It's like the house of cards effect.

These are symptoms of a lot of people."

One man in the oil business had to borrow money at 20 percent to purchase oil. He borrowed the money because some customers weren't paying their bills, and he was without working capital, he said.

That man has filed suit in small claims court and is going after his debtors, McNally added.

Carol Furnham, head of the court's civil division, agrees with McNally's hypothesis, pinpointing a sluggish economy, but points to a change in the law for part of the increase.

Prior to Jan. 1, 1979, those filing small claims could go after a maximum of $300, she said. When the law was changed, plaintiffs could go after as much as $600, she said.

The $600 limit has made the effort more worthwhile, she added.

The whole philosophy behind small claims is to allow the average citizen to go after payment due him/her, without hiring an attorney, Furnham said.

"Attorneys didn't get involved, because if the client recouped a $600 loss, most of that would go to pay the attorney."

"But, a person has to understand that in small claims they're on their own. It's up to them to find out where the debtor lives, works and banks, especially if they intend to garnishee wages," she said.

"Even then, if there is a judgment, that doesn't mean the person will pay," Furnham said.

The court has received inquiries from two stores in Brandon Township, asking on procedure to recoup losses from bad checks, and one garbage disposal company is seeking payment from customers who've not paid for service.

People are going after their money, because they feel they're entitled to it, and most of the time they are, she said.

For some, the suit and pursuit of payment becomes a matter of principle.

Especially, she said, when the judge rules in their favor the debtor refuses to pay.

Judge allows adult foster care home to fill to capacity

Independence Township is sitting high on an observation platform with telescope in hand when it comes to the adult foster care home in Lake Oakland Woods subdivision.

Last Friday, Oakland County Circuit Court Judge James S. Thorburn, lifted the temporary restraining order and in doing so allowed two additional developmentally disabled adults to move into the home at 5127 Timber Ridge Trail.

In addition, Thorburn clarified an earlier ruling in which he said the home could not violate state or national laws. The township has argued it does.

According to township attorney Robert White, Thorburn has given the township the right, on 24-hour notice, to show cause in court if they see a lack of supervision in the home or if the community shows unrest.

Also, the township has been given the opportunity to go to a full-scale trial, he said.

"We are really happy with the decision," White said. "It means Thorburn, along with the township, will be monitoring the home. A responsibility has been assumed."

From now on, the township will be keeping a close watch on the home, he added.

The township was charging its right to enforce local zoning ordinances has been taken away by the state, and was fighting for the right of self-determination and clarification on land use.

Administrators of the Timber Ridge home moved in a fourth resident on Wednesday, Feb. 18, according to a staff member working there, and expect the fifth resident some time in the future.

One day goes to local canines

With the coming of spring follows dog licensing and vaccinations.

Independence Township, in conjunction with the Oakland County Animal Control Department, is making both the licensing and vaccinations convenient this year.

The township plans a dog clinic on Feb. 28 from 1 to 4 p.m. at the new Department of Public Works building on Flemings Lake Road, in Independence Township.

For $4, dogs can receive their 1981 licenses, and a veterinarian will be on hand to administer vaccinations for $6, according to township Treasurer Frederic Ritter.

As of March 1, Ritter said, licenses increase from $4 to $8. The $4 increase policy excludes new pups born after the first of March and those dogs moving into the area after that date.

Leaf ban talks doused for awhile

There's been a change in plans.

Followers of the highly flammable leaf ban issue in the Village of Clarkston can expect to hear further discussion on the matter at the March 16 meeting, instead of the March 9 meeting.

Springfield readies for fire station

Springfield Township is getting ready for the opening of its second fire station.

"Late 1981 is what we're shooting for," Township Supervisor Collin Walls said of the projected completion date for the new station. "But it might take until '82, depending on the funding situation."

The new station will be located at Rattalee Lake Road and Dixie Highway, and, in preparation for its opening, the township board recently authorized the fire department to purchase a new fire truck.

"We want to have the equipment ready and available when it (the new station) opens," Walls said.

Delivery of the new tanker and chasis, which will cost $45,195, is expected within 60 days. More than half of the cost will be funded by Springfield's Community Development Funds, which the township board had earlier agreed to use for the fire department.

25 YEARS AGO February 16, 1956

This week The Clarkston News was printed in the new building at 5818 M-15, near Dixie Hwy.

The Clarkston High School Faculty played and defeated the Holly High School Faculty, at Holly, by a score of 92-62. A return match is planned for this Saturday.

During the worship service at the Methodist Church last Sunday, Richard Mansfield, Frank Strother and Edwin Glennie received their "God and Country" Boy Scout awards.

The High School Library has purchased about 100 new books, that have now been processed, and are on the shelves for the students' availability.

10 YEARS AGO February 18, 1971

According to the 1970 census figures released this week, population of Independence Township increased 59.4%.

Jan R. Stump, a senior at Clarkston High, was chosen the 1971 Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow.

David Butler and Vicki J. Swartz were among the 132 students designated University of MI Flint Scholars for the just completed fall semester.

Chris Rose will appear in the hit musical comedy "Little Mary Sunshine," presented by the University of MI Flint Theatre.

Village parking ordinance in works

"Some people could care less," said Clarkston Village Trustee Jackson Byers at the Feb. 9 meeting. "Seems the only answer is to impose a fine."

Byers was referring to village residents parking on streets during snows, creating impossible situations for plowing.

While signs are up prohibiting parking on Clarkston's Main Street, there's no ordinance to enforce those signs.

"I think it's time we get an ordinance to back up the signs," he said.

Village attorney John Steckling said one answer would be to draft a traffic control order, post all areas, issue tickets and hire additional enforcement officers to issue those tickets.

The proposal met with council's approval and, in unanimous agreement, Steckling was instructed to draft a traffic control order to prohibit parking in the commercial district and those areas where two-hour parking signs are now located.

"The business district suffers the most when the streets are not plowed," Byers said.

Township to have strong hand in development

By Marilyn Trumper

In an effort to keep the best interests of the township and Deer Lake Farms residents in the forefront, the Independence Township Board is going to lay down guidelines regarding a planned five-acre commercial and 25-acre condominium development.

At the Feb. 17 meeting, the board approved in concept developer Hugh Garner's concept to construct 110 condominiums near the intersection of I-75 and Dixie Highway.

But before amending a consent judgment which would allow Garner to build, board members went to lay out the specifics in black and white and hash out the conditions between Garner, the board and the planning department.

At the meeting, the board agreed to hold a closed session to outline its conditions.

Then, explained Trustee Larence Kozma, the board, the planning department and Garner can meet and hammer out their differences.

This strategy, he said, would place the township in a better bargaining position, and allow Garner some latitude.

Some board members continue to raise eyebrows on the planned five-acre commercial development adjacent to the proposed condominiums, and have indicated a preference to making those businesses small service-oriented shops, like bakeries, cleaners and jewelry repair.

They have also expressed concern about increased traffic flow out of Deer Lake Drive, and a need for a green belt separating the condominiums from subdivision residents.

Garner, owner of Winchester Real Estate, said he envisions a first-class restaurant or motel on the five acres.

But, after repeated questioning from board members, he showed a willingness to compromise and said he could live with the development of small service shops.

If the judgment is amended, and Garner is given the go-ahead, he said the condominiums would be constructed in phases and would take four to five years to build and market.

The 25 acres slated for condominiums is shared by Independence and Springfield townships, with Independence having the additional five acres of commercially zoned land.

Garner's proposal required an amendment to a 1976 Oakland County Circuit Court judgment holding the land to commercial development, even though the property is zoned multiple.

Early tax payment to schools nixed

By Marilyn Trumper

It will take a 4-3 vote before the Independence Township Board discusses the issue of tax distribution to Clarkston schools ever again.

At the Feb. 17 meeting, board members voted to table the issue indefinitely, which means there will be further action until a majority of the board deems it so.

"As near as I can see, it's the end of the matter," said school Superintendent Milford Mason, following the meeting.

In January, Mason called for the treasurer to release school tax money as soon as possible, instead of holding revenue for the full extent the law allows.

Faced with the possibility of teacher layoffs and a shrinking budget, Mason said the schools could invest the money instead of the township, and earn between $14,000 and $20,000 annually.

The township has budgeted total interest earning at $75,000 for the 1980-81 year, and included are the school revenue investments, said Frederick Ritter, township treasurer.

At the meeting, Ritter repeated he was in compliance with the law and that he had made an early payment to the schools.

"I have not been unwilling to try and cooperate with the schools," he said. "I have given them money prior to the distribution date. But as far as making daily distribution or in 72 hours of receipt, it is administratively impossible.

Written communication from Trustee William Vandermark, absent from the meeting, called for 90 percent of the money to go to the schools within three days of receipt.

In the letter, Vandermark said the schools need the money, the township is not required to hold the revenue, and he pointed out it was good citizenship to release the funds.

Trustee Daniel Travis offered another thought.

"In conversations with voters, I've found they find fault that we as a township benefit from what is earmarked for the schools," he said.

Independence directors plan to spend $1,000

Residents' voices were noticeably absent at the Feb. 17 public hearing when the Independence Township Board opened the floor to suggestions on ways to spend an expected $100,000 in federal revenue sharing funds.

Residents still have one chance to offer their ideas on where that money can best be spent by attending a second public hearing scheduled March 17 at 7:30 p.m., at the Independence Township Library, 6495 Clarkston-Orion, Independence Township.

Township department heads were the ones to offer ideas at the Feb. 17 meeting.

Fire Chief Frank Ronk asked that his department be the recipient of $40,000, which would go into his apparatus purchasing account.

Township Clerk Christopher Rose, read correspondence from Timothy Doyle, director of the township's parks and recreation department.

Doyle asked for $23,000 to construct a boat launch and dock at Deer Lake Beach.

Township Librarian James Hibler, asked for $22,000 and offered the board a breakdown on how that money would be spent.

Rose pointed out that one of the township's first projects might mean the installation of an elevator inside township hall.

According to Rose, all township activities must now be accessible to the handicapped, adding that as far as he knew, the rules did not exempt historic buildings.

Talking about . . .

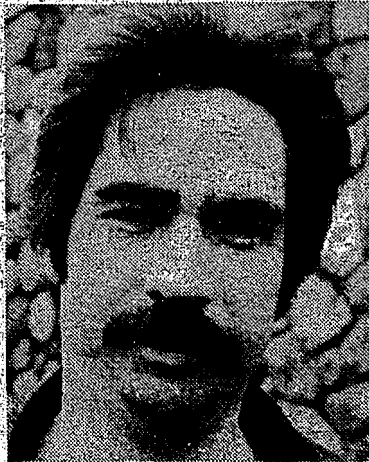

How would you feel if the United States Post Office discontinued Saturday mail delivery in an effort to cut costs?

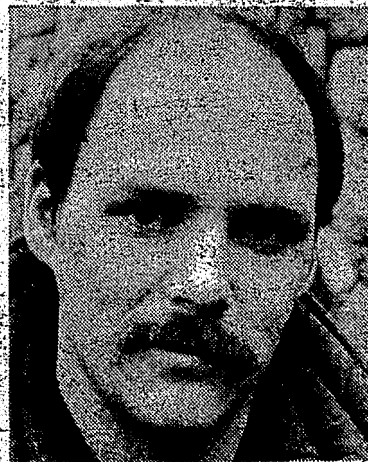

"I'd be for it. You've got to save money somehow. I saw a television program on the Chinese postal service, and they deliver twice a day for about 7 cents a stamp." John Griffiths, Groveland Township, licens-ed builder.

"I don't think much of it. The service is poor as it is and they're raising the rates. I really think government should get out of the postal business and let free enterprise take over." Margaret Hooper, Brandon Township, secretary.

"It won't bother me. I just won't get any bills on Saturday." Gary Godschalk, Independence Township, county employee.

"I don't think it's a bad idea. Most other public service organizations work five-day weeks. It's a good way to save money and cut down on spending." Glenn McTaggart, Oxford, teacher.

"They want more money for less service. I think this is wrong. It's not the American way." Emma Brauner, Lake Orion, housewife.

She escaped uninjured. According to police reports, the man approached the girl, attempting to hug and kiss her, told police she had never seen calling out "Becky" or "Betty," the man before, adding he smelled intoxicated. She pushed him away. He grabbed her, threw her to the ground and attempted to remove her coat.

Reports said she screamed, slapped him and ran. During questioning, the girl

Seniors topic of latest task force

By Marilyn Trumper

Another campaign promise is fulfilled by Independence Township Supervisor James B. Smith.

At the Feb. 17 meeting, board members approved a five-member task force targeted at senior citizens.

When campaigning last fall, Smith pointed to problems surrounding senior citizen housing and said, "...it would be a travesty for us to allow these people who have been loyal, contributing citizens to be forced out because they can't afford to live here."

His concerns remain at the forefront as board members reviewed a fact sheet outlining four problems of acute concern to the community, and to senior citizens, as Smith sees it.

The fact sheet pointed out:

- Escalating taxes, energy and living costs, combined with inflation, create problems for those in or approaching retirement years. Many are confronted with locating more energy-efficient, smaller and less-costly living quarters, and/or are forced to leave the community.

- Independence Township is without a retirement village mode of living where maintenance, service and food are provided.

- No regular system of public transportation exists for senior citizens.

Chairing the five-member team is L.A. Volberding of 7130

Deer Lake. He is Human Services director for the county of Oakland.

Next is Maryetta Bullard of 6745 Parke Lake Dr.

Third member of the team is Jane Kennedy of 6561 Clarkston-Orion.

Tom Rademacher of 7085 Hillside Dr. is also seated on the task force.

Completing the list is the Rev. Robert D. Walters of 6986 Church, Independence Township.

Tisch would win right now

By Jim Sherman, Leader Publisher

By now you may have received a notice of increase in property tax, real and/or personal.

You are also likely thinking more and more about the Tisch Amendment, wishing it were up for a vote right now.

The latest state law, PA 114 of 1979, is a direct slap at what politicians around the state believe is the will of the people.

Though none of the tax proposals passed at the last election, even Governor Milliken agreed the people are not about taxes and want them lowered.

We now realize PA 114 was actually law during the last political campaign (though not very public). The politicians were sympathizing about higher taxes, all the time knowing they were going higher.

They were deceiving the public.

Robert Tisch is threatening petition action again, with mellower tones, and we wish him well for an early vote.

The state's demand for 50 percent assessments by classification is inconsiderate, cruel, and unforgiving. Assessments have been at 50 percent for years.

What was wrong with Oxford or Addison

Township having a one factor, for total valuation? What was wrong other than even that was too high?

Our state constitution says property will be assessed at 50 percent of market value. Why the need to reinterpret it?

One reason. Greed. The more we pay in property tax, the more the state holds back from schools.

So, Oxford township residents will pay an average of about 18 percent higher property taxes. Addison residents about 17 percent.

What's worse... we have little recourse... except Tisch. Our present legislature certainly shows few or no signs of seeking relief for the taxpayers.

Oh yes. Besides Tisch, we can vote NO on schools.

The state has really done their work well. Hurt the kids.

If Robert Tisch doesn't choose to expend his time, energy and money again to help the citizens of Michigan, we are left with looking to Lansing, dismal as that prospect seems.

We hope you are as bitter about this 1981 tax increase as we are, and that you'll take pen in hand and write some Lansingites.

Tax tips Dependents

by George Bennett

A dependent is, generally, a relative who receives over half of his (her) support from the taxpayer.

Items of support include food, lodging, clothing, education, medical care, recreation and similar necessities.

In addition, a capital item (i.e., a "big ticket item" such as an automobile or a television set) must be included in the support computation, if it is in fact a support item.

If a capital item benefits members of the household other than the potential dependent, it is not considered a support item.

Examples:

Mary gives her son a $5,000 automobile for his exclusive use. The cost is included in computing the son's total support and the proportion provided by Mary. However, if the son purchased the car and expends another $1,000 for his support, Mary must provide the son with support items worth $6,001 in order to meet the over-half support test.

At Christmas, Fred gives his son a lawnmower to ease his lawn trimming chores. Since the lawnmower is acquired for general household purposes, rather than the son's personal benefit, it is not considered a support item.

A $1,000 deduction is allowable for each dependent who:

- Has gross income of less than $1,000; or
- Is the taxpayer's child and is either under 19 or a full-time student.

Moreover, a nondeductible dependent (i.e., a person you could claim as a dependent except that the person had income of $1,000 or more), can have some tax value, in terms of a medical expense deduction.

You may deduct medical expenses you paid for a dependent if that person was your dependent at the time the expenses were paid or incurred, and in addition, you may also deduct medical expenses you paid for a nondeductible dependent.

What crisis?

by Kathy Greenfield

There's a way to handle turning 40.

I came to that conclusion last week while talking with someone who's dreading the inevitable passing of time.

He talked about celebrating the first anniversary of his 39th birthday, using President Reagan's formula for not feeling old.

I talked about some old sayings like "Life Begins at 40," but that didn't cheer him up.

"I guess I'll have to pick out an age that means you're really old," he said.

"No, no, no," I said. "What you have to do is pick out an age you're really looking forward to, like 80."

"I figure when I'm 80 I'll be able to read 10 hours a day if I feel like it and eat Fritos for breakfast if I feel like it."

He laughed and said I had made his day.

The funny thing is, I honestly am looking forward to being 80.

Most of the questions I have about the future will be answered, I won't have to worry about setting a good example for my children and, if I'm really lucky like my grandmother who is 87, I'll be able to rely on my children to do such chores as lawn-mowing and house painting.

This method of handling getting older (but better) is something I established when in my 20's.

I used to really look forward to being 30. I spent my younger years looking a whole lot younger than I was.

That may not sound too dreadful, but it's easy to get tired of people asking if you were married at age 16 and saying over and over and over again that you look too young to have children.

It was then that I figured when I was 30 I would look older and such things wouldn't happen.

Thirty was better. By that time, no one was checking my ID when I wanted to order a glass of wine at a restaurant and, while people were still saying I looked too young to have children THAT OLD, things were smoothing out.

I also decided, as I watched friends squirm about turning 30 and officially entering "The Establishment" that the way to handle the whole thing was to pick an age you'd like to be.

I hadn't really chosen what exactly that age would be until talking about the pending 40th birthday.

There's another thing about 80. It makes 40 sound downright young.

Put cameras on trial

by Jim Sherman

Allowing cameras in the courtroom is a controversial issue in a law-media circles. Particularly, tv cameras.

It's not the disruption from sound, they're silent, it's the 15 second exposure on a half hour "news" broadcast that's bothersome.

Since tv is a dramatic media (sometime count how many local news broadcasts start with a fire, accident, or shooting) some lawyers and newspeople feel the 15-second clip could prejudice viewers.

Twenty six of our 50 states permit cameras in one court or another, often just the appellate court. Often the feeling is that proceedings in this court are boring, cameras would be wasted, and no harm could come.

Michigan allows no cameras in any courtroom, though recently in Grand Rapids a tv camera shot through a window in district court. The lens caught a man dropping his pants and mooning the judge.

There was the man's derriere in your 6 p.m. supper. Another Grand Rapids station showed side view of the man at 6 p.m., but gave the viewers the full exposure at 11 p.m. for their adult audience. Ah, such discretion.

The United States Supreme Court ruled unanimously this year to let cameras in courtrooms, but not their courts. In effect, Justice Burger wrote, "Let the states decide the camera issue, but don't let them in Federal courts."

The case that got to the Supreme Court was the "Chandler Case" from Florida. That's the one where two policemen were acquitted of killing a man and the decision caused a riot in Miami. The whole trial was on the tube.

Florida allows cameras in the court room on a one year trial basis. This was the recommendation of a committee we're on for Michigan.

Some lawyers, judges, tv, radio and newspapers make up the committee. In Sept. 1979 we backed a move to let cameras in courtrooms for a year.

We've been told that when the seven jurors on our highest court reviewed if the vote was tied at 3 and Justice Mary Coleman wouldn't agree to permit cameras.

With the recent supreme court decision, Michigan's court will be asked to review the matter again.

But, if cameras are allowed, don't expect pants to be dropped in appellate court.

Welcome home, David

Family, friends gather to greet him after 6-month hospital stay

By Kathy Greenfield

Tables were heaped with food for dinner, a cake sported the message: "Welcome Home Dave," and a sign with the same slogan hung on the wall.

"Here he comes!" someone said, and silence descended while everyone waited for David Watson to discover his surprise party.

He wheeled down the Clarkston High School corridor with an assist from his brother Daniel and, when he arrived at places when he dove into shallow water in Deer Lake last August.

In the hospital since the accident, he had arrived at his Independence Township home only two days before the Feb. 16 party.

"The neighbors wanted to welcome him home," said his mother Rosemary. "I knew I just couldn't have neighbors and not my family."

Arrangements were made to use the high school facility and David was told the event was a concert.

When David arrived, his mother had made sure all the food was arranged properly and his father Henry was busy recording the event with his camera.

The Clarkston High School Madrigal Singers performed under the direction of their teacher Grayce Warren and David's sister Pandora sang a solo.

David had almost decided not to attend the affair, but had been convinced to by his family.

"I was expecting (a party) Saturday, so when it didn't happen, I thought maybe it wasn't," he said. "Usually Dad gives it away, but he didn't."

It feels good to be home and to get back into the routine of things again, David said.

He'll be returning to the hospital for therapy three times a week and he also plans to check into attending college.

"Maybe Wayne State or Oakland University—they're about the best schools for accessibility," he said.

"I may go into art or psychology to help people get used to the chair. There was a guy at St. Joe's in a wheelchair that really helped me out."

David reacts to his surprise party in smiling symmetry with his brother Daniel.

'It was really nice and touching that people would come out. I really thank them a lot.'

the cafeteria, smiles, laughter and shouts of 120 people greeting him filled the room.

"When I came around the corner, I couldn't say anything," David said afterward. "I was shocked. It made me feel good that many people would come out."

"It was really nice and touching that people would come out. I really thank them a lot."

David, who is 19, broke the cervical area of his neck in two

by Jim Fitzgerald

It was back in 1977 that I risked injury to the inside of my mouth by writing nasty things about dentists. I was put on their case by Al Brandsdorfer, publisher of the Clare (Mich.) Sentinel, a weekly newspaper. Today, it is interesting to note that Al is still having fun with dentists, or vice versa.

It all began when the Michigan Dental Association asked newspapers to publish free "public-service advertising" urging readers to see their dentists regularly. Most newspapers are not the New York Times, and most publishers can't afford to give away advertising, just as a couple of dentists can't afford to give away tooth extractions. Brandsdorfer spoke for many newspaper people when he told the director of the Dental Association:

"You must really be out of your mind. My children, three of them, are in braces. My wife is having two root canal jobs, and I am going to a periodontist who tells me my condition should have been noticed years ago...My dental bill is staggering. You are suggesting free ads. You really must be out of your mind."

And, conceding that many newspapers do give public-service advertising to such charitable organizations as the Red Cross, I asked what made dentists think they belonged in the same category. "The Red Cross aids victims of disasters. Dentists aid victims of toothaches," I wrote. "The Red Cross does not make money off victims. Dentists make so much money they use cavities for tax shelters."

That was three years ago. Since then, both Brandsdorfer and I have switched dentists, and I haven't heard another word about the Dental Association's begging alms from starving publishers. It is assumed that sanity has been restored to the tooth mechanics, and their greed diminished. All is forgiven, and peace reigns. This brief reprise of a 1977 debate is not an attempt to draw new blood from old gums. I mention it only to properly preface newer material.

concerning Brandsdorfer, a dentist and free advertising.

In a lifetime of worthwhile accomplishments, one of Al Brandsdorfer's most meritorious achievements is that he and I attended Michigan State University during the same years, but he never had anything to do with me. He was a campus big shot and athletic booster, the type of enthusiastic student who sneaked onto rival campuses to dump MSU green paint on enemy statues. I spent all my time in the library so I could spend my book money on beer. Students received free football tickets, and I never used one, I could sell.

Neither of us has changed much through the years. In fact, my nonchalance toward my alma mater and its paid gladiators has peaked to the point where I am now voluntarily paying tuition for a young man to attend the University of Michigan, the most dratted of all MSU opponents. On the other hand, Brandsdorfer has continued to cheer and argue for old MSU, haranguing innocent victims to the point where one of them, his children's orthodontist, took a magnificent reprisal.

The orthodontist, Dr. Tom Twigg of Cadillac, is a graduate of U-M. He has heard much from Brandsdorfer about the superiority of MSU. Also, whenever two of the Brandsdorfer children visit Dr. Twigg's office, their father makes certain they are fully clothed in MSU colors and emblems.

Dr. Twigg recently attached retainers to the teeth of the two Brandsdorfer youngsters, one of whom will soon be a freshman at MSU. The retainers have block M's engraved on them, set in U-M colors, maize and blue.

Brilliant. The next time dentists need free advertising, they should seek advice from the jeans manufacturers who somehow convince their customers to wear their signs on their butts. If people can sit on it, they can spit on it.

The covered bridge to be located in Independence Township inside the Bitterbush subdivision will be one of only a few of authentic design in the state.

Bitterbush bridge

Old-fashioned style structure slated

Clip-Clop, clip-clop, clip-clop. That's the sound of a horse-drawn carriage crossing a covered wooden bridge—an echo from the past. The horse and carriage may be absent from the planned scenario at Bitterbush subdivision in Independence Township, but an authentic covered bridge is slated for construction.

It's the full-flavor, style and design of century-old construction, sans structural steel, said owner John Powe.

"It's the only authentic covered bridge in a private development in the state, and it's going to be truly a masterpiece," he said. "The builders are artists."

"I really feel people will come from all over the Detroit metropolitan areas to see this. The only others are located in Frankenmuth, Greenfield Village, and a few in Grand Rapids," he said.

Plans for the subdivision consists of 22 private secluded estates divided by a winding road.

The 100-foot bridge is to cross a winding stream which flows through the development. Bridge construction, which is to take two-and-one-half years, is scheduled to begin this spring.

Douglas fir timber from Oregon and cured Ash from New Hampshire is the material Graton Associates of New Hampshire plan to use to construct the bridge, down to the authentic wooden pegs, Powe said.

Bitterbush is located three miles north of the Village of Clarkston, off Rattalee Lake Road.

Plot too predictable, but acting rates four stars

Bus Stop
By William Inge
Clarkston Village Players
Depot Theater
Feb. 20, 21, 27, 28
March 1, 5, 6, 7

Two months of hard work and preparation by the Clarkston Village Players went into this production. The question is, is "Bus Stop" worth it?

Not that there aren't reasons to see this play and things to enjoy at the Depot Theater these Shakespeare-quoting former college professor who drinks too much; Cherie, a beautiful, well-mannered—but unchaste—nightclub entertainer; Bo, an uncouth hayseed from a cowboy ranch in Montana; and Bo's trusty, guitar-strumming cowpoke sidekick Virgil.

If you've seen even one "Gun Smoke" rerun, you've already met Bo, Virgil and the Sheriff.

It would be difficult for anyone to weave an intriguing

Spotlight

by Al Zawacky

days. There are moments of witty dialogue; the acting is always good and occasionally excellent; and the work on the set construction and decoration, along with the special effects and sound all merit a four-star rating.

But it is a mystery why the CVP revived this mediocre play as part of their 20th anniversary season. It does not measure up to the Players' two earlier productions this season—"No Sex, Please—We're British," and "Two Blind Mice," in any respect.

"Bus Stop" inundates the audience with a veritable chorus line of stereotypes. After speaking his or her first five lines, the actions of all eight of playwright William Inge's characters become as dependable as tomorrow morning's sunrise.

We start out with a crusty but benign diner owner named Grace; her waitress, Elma, a cheerful, innocent high school girl; Will, the friendly, law-upholding small town sheriff; Karl, a crusty and profane bus driver; Dr. Lyman, an eccentric, story with these assembly-line characters. Inge, in any event, doesn't do it. "Bus Stop" follows its inevitable and woefully predictable path, with nary a single unexpected turn of events along the way.

The plot revolves around Bo's pursuit of Cherie, who shuns him at first, only to—if you haven't guessed by now—realize in the end that she loves him after all.

In the meantime, Inge tries to be funny by treating the audience to a few rounds of musical beds. The bus driver makes it with the diner owner; the college prof spends the greater part of his time drooling over the innocent high school girl; and the fact emerges that Cherie is the first woman with whom Bo has gone the proverbial distance.

The humor is more crude than comic. We hear lines like Carl's leering post-bedroom query to Grace: "You did like me, didn't you baby?" And then there's Bo's, "Well, ah figure ah'm virgin enough for the both of us," to Cherie after she con-

Pat Thomas (left), who plays the owner of the roadside diner, kibitzes with Don Fenton, the bus driver, as he suggests a meeting later in her apartment.

But the play's tedious predictability and tawdry morality is redeemed somewhat by the efforts of the CVP. The acting doesn't have a weak link in the chain, and the sound and set work are convincing in their realism.

The talents of the Clarkston Village Players deserve better, however. "Bus Stop" isn't really worthy of their efforts.

Wolves one win away from title

By Al Zawacky
Pity the poor Milford Redskins. They never had a chance. But it wasn't the shooting of chief Wolfpack snipers Scott McKoin and Brad Beattie that foretold the Redskins' doom. It wasn't Clarkston's dominance on the boards, either.

So what was it that guaranteed the Redskins' demise?

Simple: It was all over when the Clarkston High School varsity basketball team showed up at Milford High "geeked up" for the game.

"Yea, we were really geeked up for this one," said Wolfpack senior Brad Sheldon, tongue firmly in cheek after Clarkston's 50-39 win over the Redskins.

Geeked?

When pressed, Sheldon and his grinning teammates explained that Flint Central star Eric Turner recently attributed a big win over 1980 state champs Lansing Eastern to the fact that Central was "geeked up."

You'll have to write Eric Turner, care of Flint Central High School for a more detailed explanation than that.

But that's the way it was in the Clarkston Wolfpack's dressing room Friday night—a lot of jokes and a lot of laughs.

After all, by downing fifth-place Milford, the Wolfpack had just moved within millimeters of clinching an unprecedented fourth straight Greater Oakland Activities League championship.

"We didn't play exceptionally well, but we played well enough to win," said Wolfpack Coach Gary Nustad.

"Still, I'm pleased—this is a big step toward winning that league championship."

The situation in the wild and woolly GOAL title race breaks down this way: By defeating Rochester at home Friday, Clarkston will clinch the league championship—but the Wolfpack will have to share first place honors with the winner of the Lake Orion-West Bloomfield clash.

Kettering—with its 35-33 loss to West Bloomfield last Friday—has been mathematically eliminated from the race.

"The kids have responded well this season," Nustad said. "If we win that league championship Friday night, it'll be as satisfying a league title as I've had since I started coaching here."

"These are 12 fine young men. I'm proud of them all."

The Wolfpack's win against Milford was never in doubt, as Clarkston pulled in from 16-6 at the end of the first quarter, stretching the margin to 28-14 at the half.

Scott McKoin paced the Wolfpack attack with 17 points, followed by Brad Beattie's 11 points, Craig Schabel's nine, Ray Kubani's eight, Ric Schebor with three and Greg Lane with two.

McKoin pulled down 13 boards for the leadership in the rebound department, while Beattie cleaned the boards nine times.

Jim Kinney's 17 points led the offense for the Redskins, whose big star Rod Sharpe, a three-year varsity player, watched the game in street clothes at the end of the Milford bench.

Sharpe was diagnosed with mononucleosis last month and hasn't played since the Redskins' 68-61 victory over Kettering Jan. 23.

"Sharpe scored 31 points that night," said Milford Coach Don Palmer, who was sitting alone in his office studying the game stats afterwards. "We haven't had him since—and we haven't won since."

"It's easy to speculate, but I really think we could've been a factor in the league race if Sharpe had stayed healthy."

Clarkston was coming off a 54-49 loss at home to Pontiac Central Tuesday, a game in which the Wolfpack played well, only to be overpowered by the explosive Central squad in the fourth quarter.

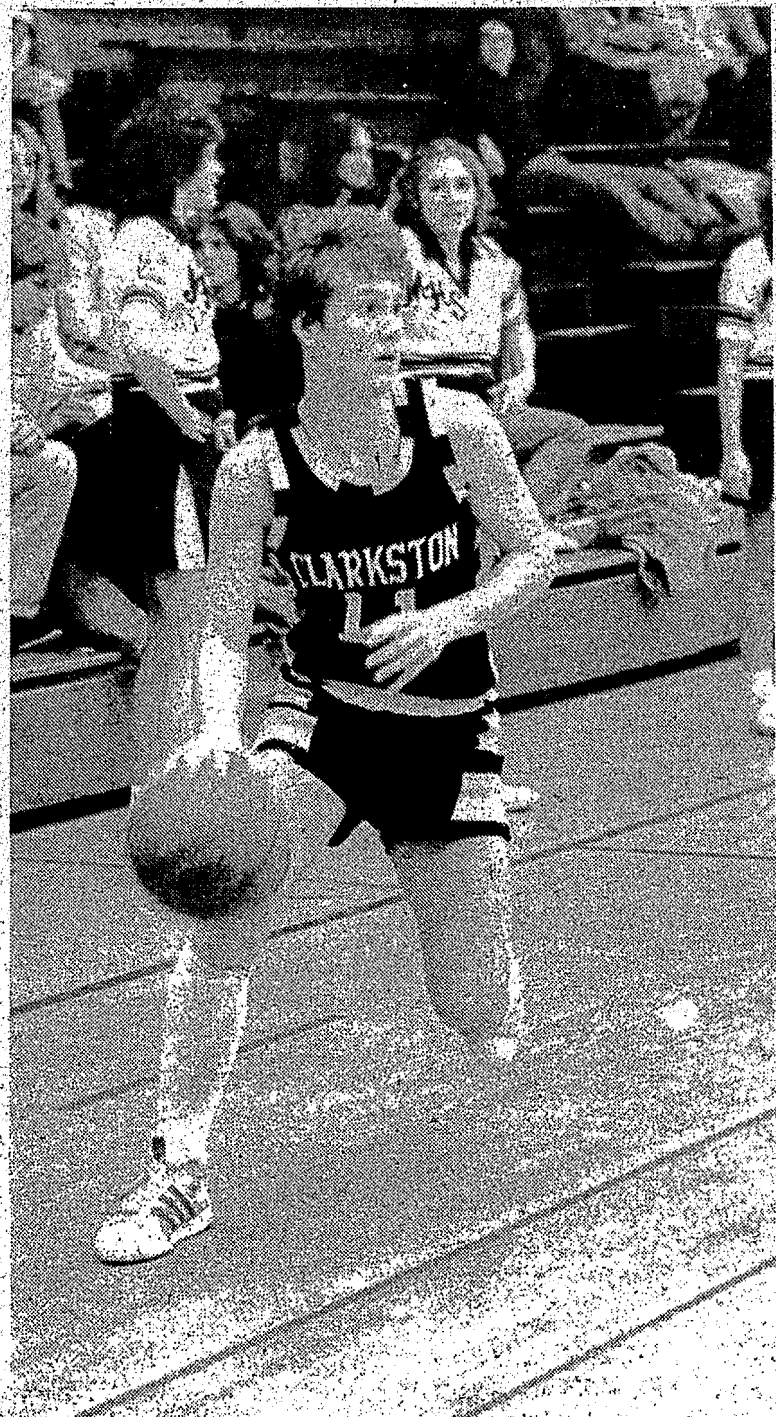

Central's Kevin McAdoo with 32 points and Andrew Brown with 17 accounted for almost all of the Chiefs' attack. Clarkston was led by a 24-point performance by McKoin, followed by Beattie with 13 points, Schebor with five, Scott Weaver with three and Sheldon and Schnabel with two.

The Point After

by Al Zawacky

For Wolfpack, it's now a one-game season

IT ALL COMES down to Friday night in the Clarkston High School gymnasium.

It's been almost three months since the varsity basketball season began—three months marked by hours of practice, hours of team meetings, hours of preparation, moments of joy—and a few moments of despair.

No matter. It is a one-game season now. Beat Rochester and a fourth straight coup of the league's silverware is assured. It doesn't look very tough—home court advantage against the league's doormat—but there have been too many ups and downs in this long and sometimes frustrating season to permit so much as a grain of overconfidence.

IT HAS PROVED to be an interesting campaign, one prone to surprises and the unexpected. At times the 1980-81 Wolfpack has been absolutely dazzling, carving up West Bloomfield twice, humbling Rochester in the Falcons' own backyard, savaging a good Rochester Adams squad.

But there have been valleys, too—periods and entire games in which Clarkston could not execute, could not hold onto the ball, could not hit the routine shots.

One week an opposing coach labels the Wolfpack "the best team in the league," sure to win the GOAL title in a walk. Seven days later Lake Orion's Bruce Bullard lofts one through the twine, and the Wolfpack suddenly finds itself in a first-place log jam.

Another week goes by and the Clarkston faithful are shaking their heads at Waterford Kettering, watching the Wolfpack's title chances become a ward of the out-of-town scoreboard.

It's been a weird season—but it's never been dull.

A WIN FRIDAY will do more than just bring the regular season to a close. It will turn to ashes all of those two and three point heart-breakers, evaporate all of the season's bitter moments and vindicate the hard work of 12 young men.

It will clinch a fourth straight Greater Oakland Activities League championship. No other school can say that.

And the Rochester Falcons would no doubt find it very gratifying to prevent it—to salvage a disastrous season and boost their wounded pride by upsetting an arch foe like the Wolfpack. It is never very easy to walk through a celebrating mob on your way to the dressing room, head hung in defeat while the enemy players exult and take turns cutting down the nets.

The Falcons will do everything they can to keep it from happening.

And the Wolfpack? They'll want this one so bad they'll be able to taste it.

Friday night, in the best tradition of the 1980-81 season, will definitely not be dull.

Mike Conway is to represent Clarkston High School at the state championship wrestling meet coming to Ann Arbor Feb. 27-28.

Clarkston star is Ann Arbor bound

By Al Zawacky

Mike Conway stands 5-foot-7 and tips the scales at about 105 pounds—dripping wet.

On a wrestling mat, however, he is a giant.

Conway, a junior on the Clarkston High School wrestling team this season, wrestled his way to a first-place finish in the regionals Saturday to qualify for state championship competition Feb. 27-28 in Ann Arbor.

Clarkston Coach Rick Detkowski figures Conway has a solid chance of finishing on top of the pack in Ann Arbor's Crisler Arena, site of the state competition.

"He's got a good chance to win it—a very good chance," Detkowski says. "There'll be two or three guys there that he's already beaten earlier in the season."

Conway earned his first-place spot in the regionals with a 15-4 decision in the finals. En route to the finals, he defeated Lake Orion's Mike Webb 8-2, the only opponent to defeat him this season.

Conway's season mark after the regionals stood at 35 wins, two losses—both defeats coming at the hands of Webb earlier in the campaign.

"They've faced each other six times this season, and Conway's won four times," Detkowski points out.

Conway was also a state qualifier last year, compiling a 29-7-1 record at 98 pounds as a sophomore.

Three other Clarkston grapplers also competed in the regionals, but all three suffered defeats in their first two matches and failed to qualify for the state meet.

They were senior Mike Ogans, who finished with a final season record of 35-6; junior Jeff Miracle, 38-4; and junior Tom Hecker, 27-16.

"These guys all had good seasons," Detkowski says. "They just seemed to have an off day on Saturday."

"But they accomplished a lot just to be there in the regionals."

KEEP THE THERMOMETER RISING...

Make no mistake about it: There will be a Clarkston High School football team next fall. And they will play under a brand new lighting system at the Clarkston High School athletic field.

Eric Reickel, co-chairman of the Lighting Fund Committee, was adamant on both counts during last week's committee meeting at the Clarkston Community Schools board office.

"The people of this community have come to expect basic extracurricular activities," Reickel said. "I don't think they'll stand to see those eliminated."

Somehow—hopefully through the passage of a school millage, but through private citizen support if necessary—the athletic and band programs will continue. This was the consensus of the assembled committee members.

And the lighting fund drive is marching on. Recently, the halfway mark was passed as contributions hit the $31,000 mark, leaving $29,000 remaining to be raised.

"I'm convinced we're going to do it," Reickel said.

Growing community backing for the lighting drive was evidenced by a resolution of the Independence Township Board earlier this month, in which the board expressed its unqualified support for the project by unanimous vote.

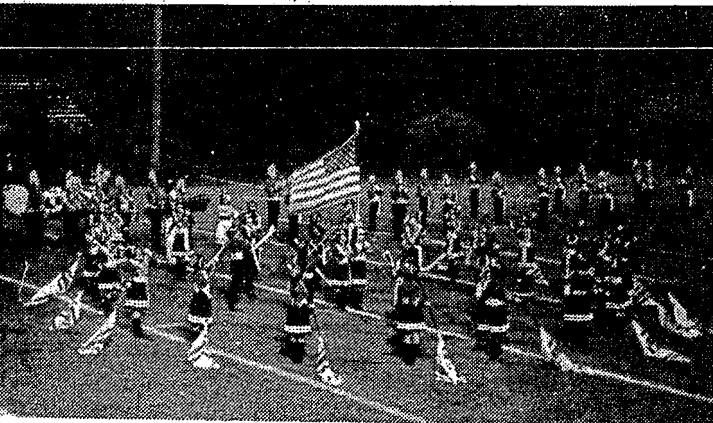

Recent major additions to the lighting fund came from a student government sponsored dance at Sashabaw Junior High which raised $500; a Big Boy hamburger promotion at Independence Township's Elias Brothers' Restaurant which netted $300; and a similar promotion by McDonald's Restaurant in Independence Township which raised $66.50.

Contributions of $100 or more were also received by John W. Dressler & Associates; Booth, Patterson, Lee, Karlstrom & Steckling Attorneys; Clarkston Band Boosters; Deer Lake Racquet Club & Back Court; LaSalle Machine Tool, Inc.; Temple Plumbing; Howard & Smith Inc.; Clarkston Fuel Supply and Robert A. Olson, CLU.

Future fund raisers include the football team's "Lift-a-thon," set for March 21 and a dinner-dance being planned for next month by Clarkston area residents Tim Doyle, L. Brooks Patterson and Jerry Powell.

Individual tax-deductible contributions to the fund can be mailed or dropped off at Clarkston Community Schools, 6389 Clarkston Rd., or at The Clarkston News, 5 S. Main, Clarkston 48016.

Checks should be made out to Clarkston Community Schools and indicate that the money is for the lighting fund.

Like the football team, the Clarkston High School band and color guard also have a stake in the lighting drive. Vowing to lend a hand, the CHS Band Boosters recently pledged a $500 contribution to the lighting fund.

Spikers triumph

The Rochester Falcons sauntered into Clarkston High School last week, confident of victory.

After all, they were playing the same Clarkston High School varsity volleyball team they had defeated convincingly just a few weeks before.

But a replay was not what Coach Linda Denstaedt's Clarkston Wolves had in mind, and when the battle was over Clarkston had posted a thrilling 15-5, 11-15, 15-13 victory.

"Rochester came out flat in the first game," Denstaedt observed later. "They might have been a little over confident after beating us last time."

Although trailing 8-1 in the deciding final game, the Wolves never lost their composure, pulling out what Denstaedt termed a "pressure-packed" win.

With the victory, Clarkston's chances for a repeat of last year's Greater Oakland Activities League championship took a giant step forward. Both the Wolves and the Falcons are tied for the league lead with 8-1 GOAL records and each have a single league contest remaining on the schedule.

In action earlier in the week, Clarkston downed Milford 15-11, 15-6, led by the strong hitting of Lanette Whitehead and the passing of Tammy Wilder.

JVs clinch crown

By Al Zawacky

The Clarkston High School junior varsity basketball team set a goal for itself at the beginning of the season.

Win the league title. Nothing less.

Friday evening, the months of hard work and dedication paid off as the junior Wolfpack obliterated the Milford Redskins 58-24, clinching the GOAL championship.

"The kids worked extra hard in practice this week, and I think that made a difference," said Clarkston Coach Larry Mahrle, savoring his team's third league crown in the past four years.

Mike McCormick led the attack against Milford, scoring a game-high 22 points.

Earlier in the week, the JVs suffered a rare defeat, bowing to Pontiac Central 56-49.

As a result of the league win against Milford and non-league loss to Central, the junior Wolfpack's record stood at 8-1 in the GOAL and 13-4 overall.

Hoping to tip an air-born ball into the hoop, Wolverine Craig Kulaszewski (15) leaps off the floor flanked by Cougars John Spiker (31) and Chris Lawson (21).

Districts drawn

The Clarkston High School varsity basketball team drew a bye in the first round of the district playoffs coming up in March, CHS Athletic Director Paul Tungate reports.

So much for the easy part. After the bye, Coach Gary Nustad and his Wolfpack will face the winner of the Pontiac Central-Pontiac Northern game. Central and Northern have posted combined records of 29-6 so far this season.

Also competing in Clarkston's district this season are Waterford Kettering, Waterford Mott and Waterford Township. All the district games will be played at host school Pontiac Central.

The Central-Northern game will be played on March 2 at 7 p.m. and the Wolfpack will play the winner March 4 at 7 p.m.

Clarkston has been allotted 500 tickets for its first district battle, Tungate said. Tickets will go on sale at the CHS box office immediately following Friday night's regular season finals pitting the Wolfpack against Rochester in the CHS gym.

Wolverines rip Cougars

The difference was rebounding, said Clarkston Junior High basketball coach Larry Sherrill.

Using their advantage on the boards, Sherrill's Wolverines downed Sashabaw Junior High 56-41 Thursday.

In all, the Wolverines cleared the boards 56 times, paced by Ken Johnson's 16.

Ken Temple led a balanced Clarkston attack with 16 points, followed by teammates Craig Kulaszewski with 10 points, Johnson with nine, Bill Hudler with six, Scott Kovacic, Rob Mortimore and Greg Molzon with four, Darren Stewart with two and Mark Westlund with one.

The Cougar offense was paced by a 14-point performance by Chris Bruce, followed by teammates Dean Callison with 10 points, John Spiker with six, Chris Lawson with four, Tom Hall with three, Chris Hadley with two and Mike Fairbanks and Bob Ruelle with one.

Coping with kids

Too much criticism harms self-image

by Jim Windell

"When are you going to learn to take responsibility for your actions?" Mrs. W. shouted at her 15-year-old son?

On another day, Mrs. W. criticized her son for studying so little his grades had plummeted. Frequently, she pointed out to him that he was lazy and failed to be constructive and resourceful about his time.

She believed that if she didn't criticize him, he would get worse. She had difficulty, however, finding his good qualities and bringing those to his attention.

Criticism can be a useful tool in helping children and young people see their faults and grow. Yet, in the wrong hands or used too often criticism or fault-finding can be destructive and discouraging. In the right hands and used as a positive technique, it can be helpful in teaching about a fault or an area to be corrected.

Mrs. W. used criticism to the exclusion of nearly every other child management technique yet was not aware of this. Her high expectations forced her to concentrate on her son's faults.

The problem was the discouragement it caused the teenager. Most others, except Mrs. W., could see how he felt defeated when she criticized.

There is a particular effect fault-finding has on relationships. Because the fault-finder seems to be saying, "I don't accept you," the other person may feel hostile and negative toward the person and the criticism.

It is only when there is a clear loving relationship that criticism can be used in a constructive manner.

Used too much, it becomes easy to ignore. The person, in this case, the teenager, sees it as picking on him and learns to "turn off" his mother.

When she really has found a fault she should point out to him, he will not listen to that either. Since he begins to view his mother as intolerant, the teen may become careless and rebellious to get back at her.

But, by far the worst problem with criticism is the result on the self-image of the criticized person.

A young person especially needs constructive messages and encouragement to see himself as basically good and worthwhile. A child subjected to too much criticism learns to see himself as a failure.

Ann's ark

Signs of spring surfacing

by Ann Glenn

Now that Feb. 2 has long past, the ground hog has gone back to sleep for six weeks until spring.

Now that we have had the first torrential thaw with the warm weather making hazardous ice rinks of roads and fields, we can look for signs of spring.

New color appears on the finches and they change from dirty brown to gold.

Tree buds are large and almost juicy as sap makes its ascent to the tops of trees, and memories of maple sugaring linger.

The cat begins to shed her dense hair. Her colors come off on the patting hand.

An extra rug must be put at the door to catch the wet and grit as people and pets track the outdoors inside.

The mare is heavy with foal. The first robin stops at my feeder.

The warm air invites a jog down the road, "Hi" to my kids, and even a bike ventures out.

It is a cold time and viruses abound ready to prey on cold victims rushing the season.

Be sure your dog has warm, dry quarters. It is a good time to clean out an outside dog house and put in fresh bedding. A good brushing will be welcomed by any dog now to loosen winter accumulation of hair.

You may even include a massage-rub the shoulder muscles, the muscle in the small of the back, the leg muscles.

Make a new resolution to jog-a-dog, or train him, or give him more attention.

It is prime time to clean stalls and remove year-old dung piles to the garden, or even line a cold frame for those seedlings that are barely popping through.

Chickens need their nest boxes and floors cleaned and clean nesting material.

Rabbits can use special attention now, too. Be sure bedding is clean and dry.

But, don't rush the season too much. There is probably more winter to come.

Early migrating birds will need feed from your feeders in an unexpected storm, or to make it through a cold night, so don't stop filling them yet.

Remember, dampness means mats in dogs, cats and angora rabbits, so keep on top-comb or brush while still damp to prevent mats.

Include your pet in a family outing or project, or take a family walk and look for signs of spring.

See water erosion or glaciers formed by water running through ice, learn more about the birds singing now, plan a clean-up project at home or elsewhere.

Enjoy the life around you.

The Detroit Kennel Club Show is March 8 at Cobo Hall. It is a benched show where you can see all breeds and meet breeders. There are exhibitions of trained dogs as well as judging.

TOWNSHIP OF INDEPENDENCE

ORDINANCE NO. 103

AN ORDINANCE EXEMPTING PINE KNOB NORTH NO. 3 SUBDIVISION FROM THE REQUIREMENTS OF A CENTRAL WATER SYSTEM AS REQUIRED IN INDEPENDENCE TOWNSHIP ORDINANCE NO. 52, AS AMENDED.

PREAMBLE: Whereas, Independence Township has, by virtue of the powers extended it by State Enabling Act, established by its Ordinance No. 52 certain standards and procedures governing the creation of platted subdivisions within the bounds of said Township, and whereas the standards include a requirement for central water systems in all such subdivisions, and in recognition of the fact that certain subdivisions, for reasons relating specifically to those subdivisions cannot reasonably be constructed with such central water systems, and further in recognition of the fact that the Township of Independence can be harmoniously developed with reasonable protection extended concerning the health, safety and welfare of its citizens if, in those few instances where the facts merit, the requirement for such central water systems are waived, this Ordinance is therefore adopted waiving said requirement as it concerns the above named Subdivision only, and no other. THE TOWNSHIP OF INDEPENDENCE, OAKLAND COUNTY, MICHIGAN ORDAINS:

ARTICLE I. EXCEPTION FROM CENTRAL REQUIREMENT:

Section 1.1 The above named Pine Knob North No. 3 subdivision is hereby excepted from all of those provisions of Ordinance No. 52 requiring the installation of a central water system, including those portions requiring a central pump house, the granting of easements, and the like.

All other aspects of Ordinance No. 52 shall remain in full force and effect as it concerns said Subdivision, the only exception being the central water system requirement; it being the Township Boards' intent that no central water system be required, but that all other aspects of the said Ordinance No. 52 be enforced in full.

ARTICLE II. EFFECTIVE DATE

Section 2.1. There being no penalty provision in this Ordinance, said Ordinance shall take immediate effect; but said Ordinance shall nevertheless be published in accordance with the requirements of state statute.

Adopted this 17th day of February 1981, by the Independence Township Board by the following vote:

Ayes: Ritter, Rose, Smith, Stuart, Travis.

Nay: Kozma.

Absent: Vandermark.

Christopher L. Rose, Clerk

Gloria and new friend

The 15½ pound ram lamb Gloria Bellairs holds on our cover photo is a bit larger than usual for the Romney breed. His name is Valentine in honor of his Feb. 14 birthdate. MAGAZINE staff writer Marilyn Trumper visited the Bellairs at their Hillside Farm in Springfield Township early in January...and then we waited for the lambing to begin so we could illustrate their story. The Bellairs knew the births would start either at the end of January or mid-February. As Valentine illustrates, mid-February it was!

Permanent press stamps out Manglers

Dejà Vu

Padded rollers rhythmically fold down, press the wrinkled sheet dispensing a blast of hot steam, and viola—an ironed bedsheet, pillowcase or tablecloth, and perhaps a few melted buttons and smashed zippers along the way.

Those were the days before permanent press.

The days when 100 percent cotton was the word and wrinkles were the game.

The days of the Mangler.

Or Ironright.

By any name, to a 2-year-old child the huge steamer was a combination of fear and fascination. Mothers frantically reminded to keep those tiny hands away lest they be smashed into a flat crepe.

Today's generation is lost to the Mangler's hypnotic movement. It's remembered by the select age of 100 percent cotton wearers.

Al Villareal, manager of the Mt. Clemens' Highland Appliance store, remembers the Mangler and knows where it went.

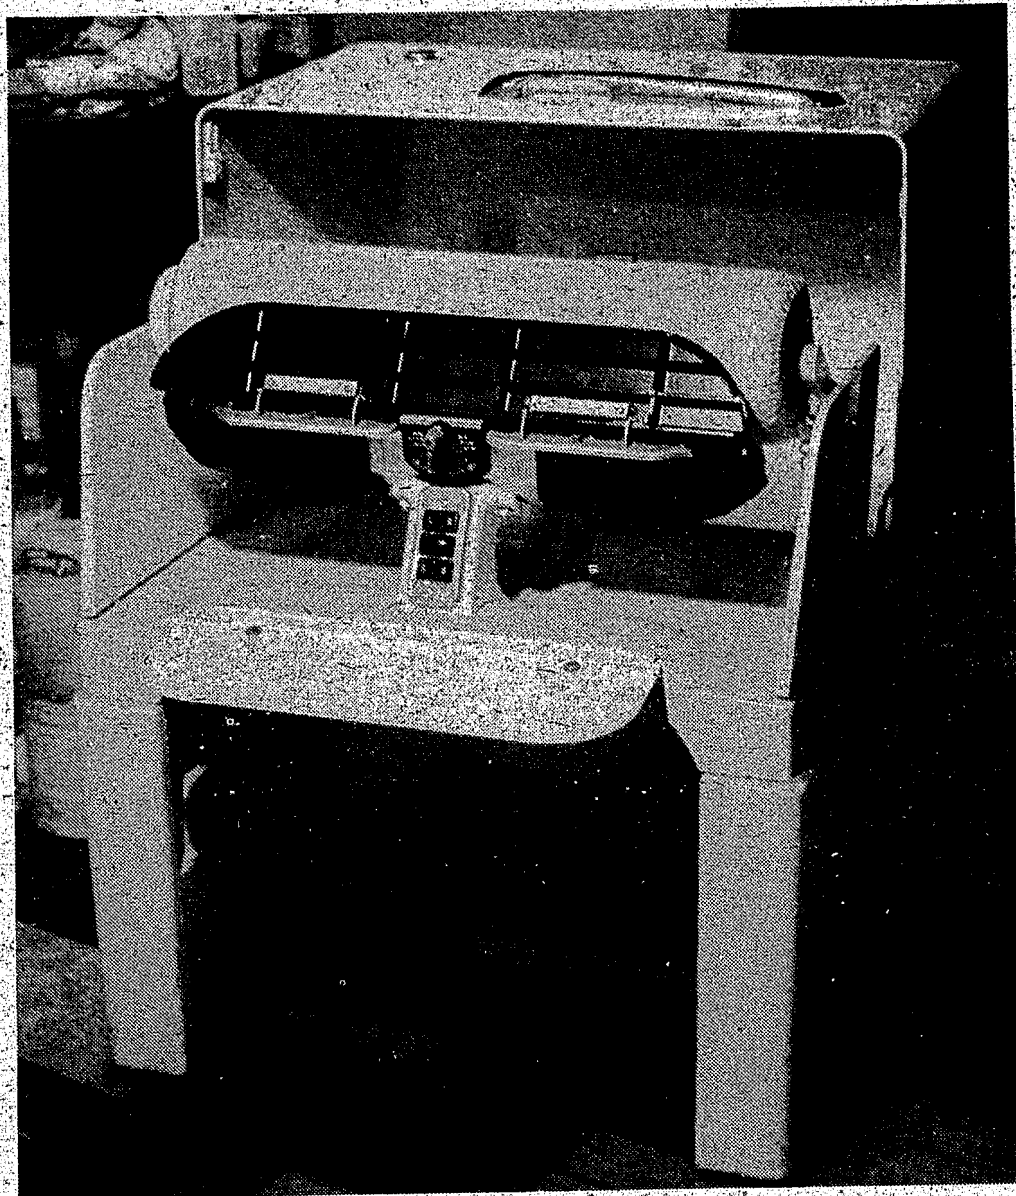

Permanent press extinguished the Mangler's steam.

"Today we have permanent press, we don't need to do that kind of ironing. People today do less ironing than they've ever done before," he said.

According to Villareal, the giant ironer was a luxury in its day. They were expensive, and not everyone had one, he said.

Technology trounces yet another machine.

Marilyn Trumper

She shares secret of career success

There is a formula for success.

It doesn't require a college degree.

But, it does require courage, determination, and most importantly cooperation and curiosity, says Marion Cheyz.

Marion, 45, has come to know success through all four elements. In January, she was elevated to bank manager of Michigan National Bank Mid-Michigan's Clarkston office on Dixie Highway in Independence Township.

While promotions are made nearly every day, Marion captured hers with just three-and-one-half years in the banking business.

"I'm surprised about this myself, just a little," she said, seated at the long hardwood conference table. "I have worked very hard, but I'm only here because of the help of a lot of people."

"I was motivated to learn when I hired in as a teller, and possibly, they gave me that much more because I was willing to learn."

"But, you learn by doing," she added.

It's all in a day's work for Marion Cheyz, manager of Michigan National Bank Mid-Michigan's Clarkston office. She means it when she says she would never expect an employee to do a job she wouldn't do. Here, she takes time out to discuss happenings with bank employees.

The philosophy has carried her through several careers in life.

At age 20, Marion worked for Cadillac in an office where her dad was assistant comptroller.

"He was a GM corporate man, and I learned then that you get by in life on your own efforts and own merits," she said.

From there, Marion married, transferred to Pontiac Motors, and quit when she was expecting her first child.

Seven years later she returned to work, this time an employee of Oakland County.

Three-and-one-half years later, she quit again to be at home for two daughters when they hit the ranks of junior high and high school.

"I wanted to stay home with the children, and I never regretted the move," she said. "It's important you be close when they're that age."

Then, 10 years later, she hired in at the bank as a teller.

"I started at the bottom, so I know it can be done," Marion said, referring to her managerial position. "But, I've gotten a lot of help from a lot of people."

"Help for me is a phone call away, and I take advantage of this," she said. "Cooperation and teamwork is the key. I'm always learning something new."

"If they're busy behind the counter, I'll go back there and help them out. I wouldn't expect anyone to do a job I wouldn't do."

For those floundering in the job market, dissuaded with the slow pace of their positions or struggling with career decisions, Marion offers some advice.

"Don't give it up. Hang in there. Don't ask yourself what you can get out of it, but what you can do. How much you can learn. It can be done," she said.

They're movin' on, but not out

There's a moving day in the Derryberry family's future.

But when Guy, his wife Lorie and their four children leave their home on Tappon Court in Independence Township, they won't need a moving van. It won't take the family a while to get used to a different community, different schools or a new neighborhood, either.

"I guess that shows you how much we like the area," Guy chuckles. "We're moving right next door."

"Originally, we'd planned to be in by Memorial Day, but now I'm not so sure. But I'm positive we'll be in by next September."

When completed, the Derryberrys' new home will be almost identical in design to the home on Paramus Drive in Independence Township built last year by the Clarkston High School building trades class.

"I'm using the same blueprints," Guy says, "although I've made a few changes."

By doing the construction work himself and buying the materials from local lumberyards and building suppliers, he figures the completed home will cost him about half what he'd have to pay for the same home built by a contractor.

And there are other reasons to want to build a home yourself, Guy notes, scanning the wooden beams and floors that make up the home's roughed-in interior.

"I enjoy doing this type of work, and like the idea of being able to see and enjoy something I've built," he says. "You get the feeling that you're doing something lasting, building something that's going to last for a long, long time."

Guy credits much of his building expertise to a friend he met at work. Technical skills like plumbing and electrical work he learned by reading books.

"It's not really too difficult," Guy says. "The plumbing and electrical work has to be inspected no matter who does it, and the inspectors are usually pretty helpful if they see you doing something wrong."

And he hasn't been quite alone in his endeavor, having been helped by a younger brother, father and wife Lorie.

"I wouldn't live anywhere else," Lorie says. "I just like it here—I don't like Pontiac, and in Waterford the taxes are too high."

Living in the Clarkston area is also convenient for Guy's work. He's been an employee of Pontiac Motors in Pontiac for the past 10 years.

Concerning the future of the American automobile industry, Guy is cautiously optimistic.

"I'm in a position where I can see the cars coming three or four years down the road," he says. "I think the American companies will meet the demand and the needs of the average person."

"I don't think the personal passenger car is going to fade away. We're building small cars with the quality of our big cars—I think we build a good product."

Guy and Lorie both attended Clarkston schools—Lorie through the sixth grade when her family moved to Waterford, while Guy is a 1971 Clarkston High School graduate.

His roots in the community and a life-long interest in politics prompted Guy to run as a Democrat for the Independence Township Board this past fall.

"I was brought up in a very politically active family, and I guess I developed my interest from there," he says. "I'm active in the union at work—I just enjoy talking and working with people."

Although his campaign was unsuccessful, Guy says he has no regrets. "It's hard for a Democrat to win out here," he jokes.

The Derryberrys enjoy taking family vacations together. Guy enjoys an occasional round of golf at Spring Lake, while Lorie's forte is bowling.

There isn't always a great deal of time to pursue her favorite sport, she notes.

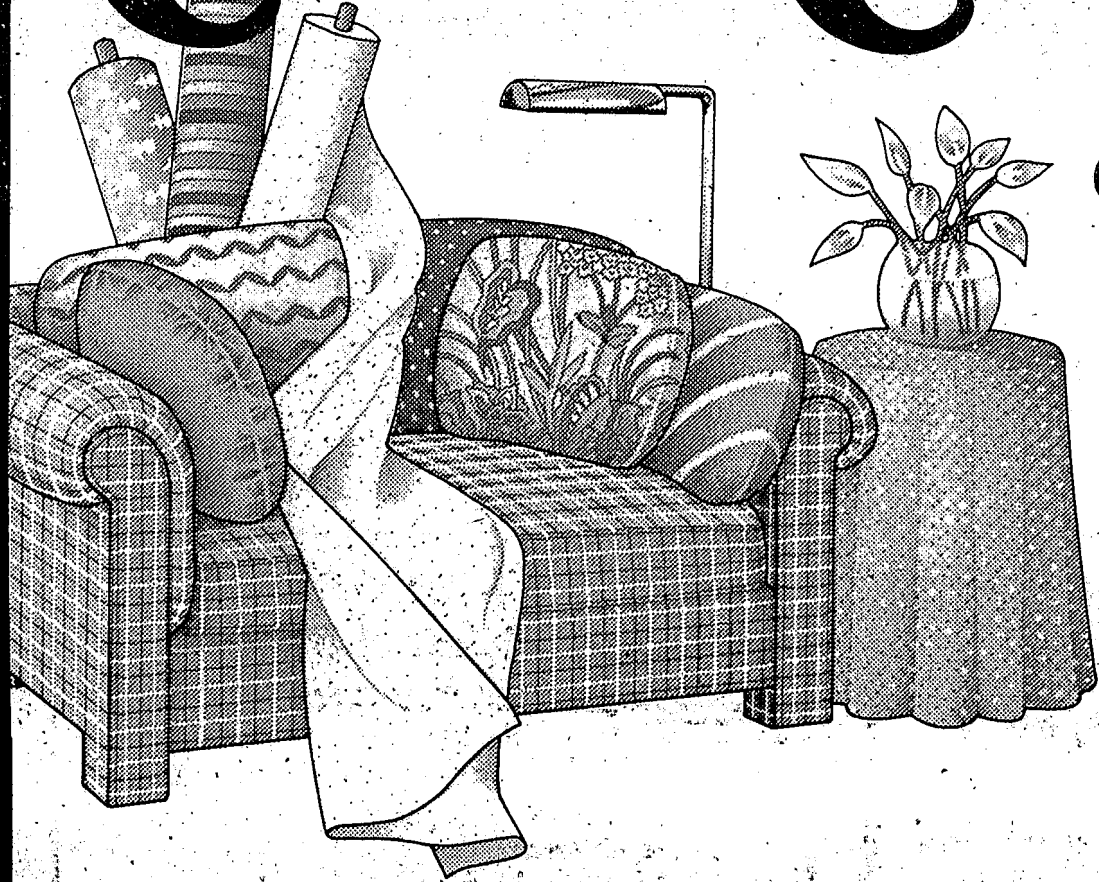

"I'm employed at home," she smiles. Children Stephanie, 12, Zachary, 6, Corey, 3 and Wesley, 1½ keep her more than busy.

Can spring be far behind?

32 of the Bellairs' 60 head of sheep are expectant mothers

Gloria Bellairs communes with sheep.

It's as simple as that.

By listening to barn sounds transmitted via an intercom into her living room, Gloria knows when they're feeding, sleeping, hungry, restless and when they're going into labor.

"Listen," Gloria said, cocking her head to one side, "They're all eating now. I can tell because it's quieted down and all the bells are moving rhythmically as the sheep move their heads from side-to-side."

"If a stranger were to walk into the barn, I'd know. The horse would whinny, the goats would bleat and the sheep would become restless and their bells would ring."

"I can tell when one is going into labor. They make a short kind of bleat," she said, mimicking the sound.

The intercom and Gloria's oneness with the sheep will play a significant role in the coming weeks.

Knowing when the sheep are in labor is just about the most important thing, for 32 of the Bellairs' 60 head of sheep are expectant mothers.

Michigan's sub-zero freezing temperatures pose no problem to Gloria, her husband George and their two sons Michael and George.

The Bellairs' Hillside Farm on Big Lake Road in Springfield Township is ready for annual lambing.

For the past several weeks, the sheep have been fed a special mixture of corn, oats and wheat, rich in Vitamin E, Gloria said.

"They are also given a Vitamin E shot. That's to prevent lambing disease in the ewes and white muscle disease in the lambs," she said. "Michigan is low in Vitamin E, so we have to supplement the sheep's diets."

All the ewes are shorn before lambing.

"We weigh everyone and usually can tell then if they're to have twins or singles. At this time, we check to see if there will be any problems and that everything looks okay," she said.

Lambs usually weigh 9 pounds, 8 ounces, but can weigh as much as 14 pounds, 8 ounces, Gloria said.

Ewes lamb once a year with a five-month gestation period.

"This week their hooves will be trimmed and their udders checked. This could be called the prenatal care," she laughed. "They also receive tetanus boosters and they are wormed."

The first sign of labor is a swelling udder, Gloria said.

"When we see that, there is someone to the barn every two hours night and day. It's called 'making bag.' Usually when they go into labor they refuse grain—but not always."

"When the ewe begins labor, something very interesting happens to the other sheep. They all go and stand a distance away so they won't interfere or crowd her. They seem to respect her privacy," Gloria said.

The birth usually takes a half-hour from start to finish.

For the past eight years, the Bellairs have assisted the sheep in labor, often stepping in to aid in breach births and to iron out any problems.

"You don't have time to feel anxious or worry," George said. "You may be nervous before you start, but once you start, you don't think about it. You have to make split-second decisions."

Gloria agrees.

"You have to decide immediately what's best for the sheep—and then do it. We've only had to call a vet once in all those years," she said.

Once, Gloria and George rallied to assist in the barn and witnessed a very special birth.

As the mother ewe gave birth to a lamb, the Bellairs waited for the inevitable placenta. It never came.

"She went into contractions again a twin was born," Gloria said. "So

In a large, open area many of the waiting ewes are expecting single lambs, twins or triplets any day. That doesn't stop them from gathering around George who brings in a special treat—salt. As each ewe baa-baas her greeting, it is apparent they all have different voices. Gloria says that after you get to know them, you can recognize them by their individual sounds.

The newborn Dorset breed lamb is owned by Don Bradford, but Gloria is there to give it some special attention. The nursery room has four enclosed stalls, each with its own heat lamp. A barn cat visits and now and then a chicken looks down through a hole in the ceiling. As the lambs begin to be born, the atmosphere in the barn changes. "If the door is open, other ewes sometimes will come and peek inside," says Gloria. "They've all been born here or have used this room for birthing."

Story by Marilyn Trumper,

Two black Romney lambs and their mother are ready to be moved into a larger enclosed area within the barn, because the babies are a day old. Gloria holds Uno-She whose twin brother is Uno-He, their names in honor of their arrival before any of the other lambs are born. After three to five days, the ewes and their lambs join the rest of the herd.

Gloria walks among the gentle sheep and many of them stop dining to say hello.

we waited some more, and she still wasn't finished. She had triplets!"

"One of the special things about lambing is the way the mother talks to the newborn lamb. There's a kind of running conversation, a continuous mumble as she washes the lamb. She seems to encourage it and nudges it to find the nipple and nurse.

"The lamb wags its tail real fast, it's like a little rag," she said, shaking her finger back and forth as an example.

Lambs are born with wool, and have little milk teeth on their bottom gums, Gloria said.

"There is a cartilage over the tip of the lamb's hoof that falls off within a day. When they're born they look like they're diving with their face between the two front hooves. The cuticle lessens the chance they'll tear the mother up with sharp hooves and when they're being born," Gloria said.

The lambs are on their feet almost immediately after birth, she added.

"The mother urges them to keep moving and to nurse, especially in this weather," Gloria said. "She senses it's the only way to survive, and some mothers become overbearing about the issue."

The lambs are born in the nursery in a "jug" or pen.

Inside the pens are heat lamps to dry the lamb's wool, and it's a quiet time.

Lambs gain approximately 1 pound in weight daily.

The Bellairs show their sheep, utilize the wool for spinning and sell their creations at The Sheep Shed, the family business.

Gloria offers classes in spinning and in the art of kenakus, hooking raw wool into burlap.

Last year the farm was cited by the American Sheep Producing Council for its promotion, production and processing of wool.

By day, George works at Bell Telephone. By night he becomes shepherd and feeds the flock.

George says he sees the sheep as retirement income.

Son Michael says he's involved because he just plain loves animals.

Gloria said she sees that and more, summing up her involvement in one sentence.

"I'm fascinated by sheep."

Homing pigeons

Free flyers keep coming back

Williams watches part of his flock circle the air again and again, safe in the knowledge that the hombody creatures will faithfully return.

Most pet birds are kept confined in cages.

But Richard Williams' birds—about 40 in all, he estimates—make up a formidable exception.

It isn't unusual for the door in the wooden bird loft behind Williams' Independence Township home to be wide open, allowing his feathered friends to be free as well, free as the birds.

There's no cause for concern that this feathered freedom will quickly lead to an empty loft, for Williams is not raising just any kind of bird. He's breeding homing pigeons—those winged creatures with the uncanny ability to find their way home, even from hundreds of miles away.

"They did have useful functions at one time," Williams says, noting that the birds were often used to transmit messages.

"By attaching notes to the birds' legs and releasing them miles from their 'home' where they were born and raised, messages could be delivered via nature's own air mail.

How do they find their way? Apparently, only the birds know for sure.

"There are a lot of theories," Williams says. "I've read a few things on it and one idea is that they use the ultraviolet light from the sun to find their way back.

"Nobody really knows."

He adds that the homing pigeon was used as late as World War I to transmit military messages, but with the advent of rapid electronic communications, the birds are raised today strictly for fun and an occasional profit.

"It's something I do just for fun," Williams says. "I've been at it ever since I was a kid.

He built the loft in back of his home about three years ago and takes about five to 10 minutes a day to feed and water the birds.

"It's really interesting raising the birds and seeing what kind of colors are produced," Williams says. "You can cross two white pigeons and get different colors—something from a few generations back that's been hidden.

"Right now, I've actually got more than I really need. I'd like to sell about half of them."

Depending on their breed, a single bird can be worth anywhere from $12 to $20. Local pigeon auctions are regularly held where fellow enthusiasts can buy, sell and trade.

Pigeon racing is a popular sport among breeders, and the birds are also suited for—if conscience permits—culinary purposes.

But Williams says he hadn't eaten pigeon in years.

"It's really not worth it," he says. "There isn't much meat on them."

Williams buys leg bands from a pigeon supply company. They can be used to time races and also to act as a kind of bird ID for those few stray birds that defy their homing instincts.

"You can take them 1,000 miles away, and 99.9 percent of the time they'll come back," he says.

DR. R. ALAN BUSH ANNOUNCES THE OPENING OF CLARKSTON CHIROPRACTIC LIFE CENTER

7180 Dixie Highway
625-5823

When Do You Need a Check-Up?

Here are some valuable tips on how to make the most of your opportunities for health and vigorous living.

A woman walked out of a chiropractor's office in St. Louis, Mo. recently, turned around to the doctor of chiropractic and said, "I only wish I had heard about this five years ago. It would have saved me a lot of suffering."

Here was a woman who had answered the question of "When a chiropractic check-up?" in the way that many millions have done before and since: namely, when she had tried orthodox medical methods and found they did not help her particular condition.

Time For A Check-Up

It is certainly time for a chiropractic check-up when symptoms have persisted despite usual medical treatment. For how long a patient gives medical methods a chance to achieve results before turning to chiropractic, is usually a matter of individual psychology and the amount of accurate information he has about chiropractic. Usually when chiropractic gets its results, the obvious conclusion is: "Why did I wait so long?"

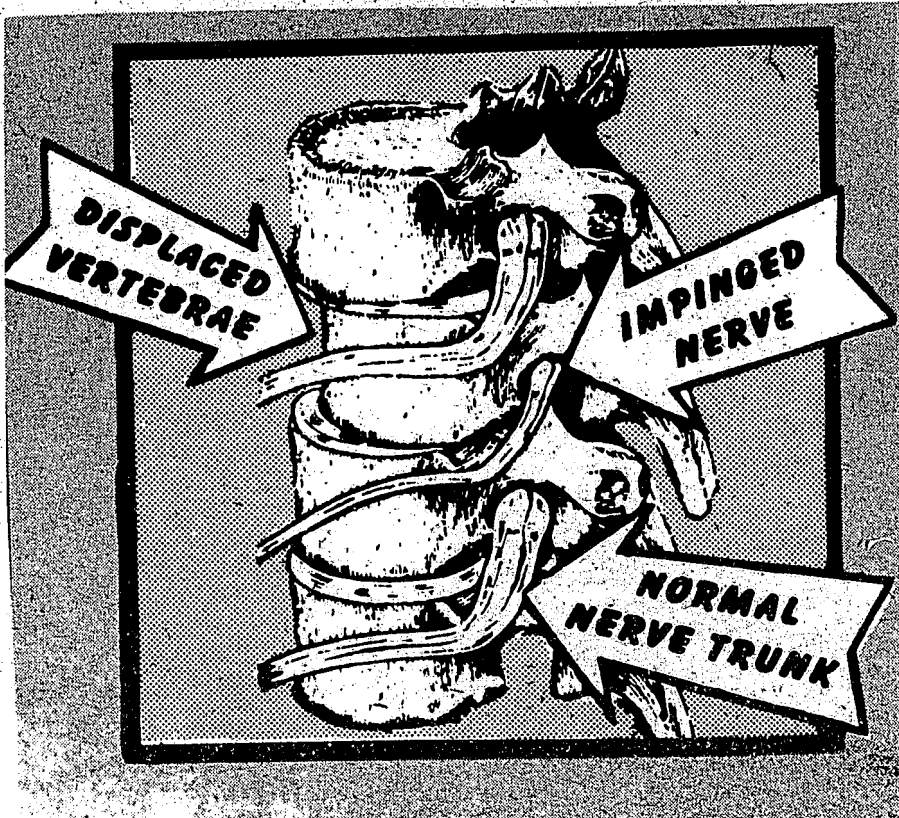

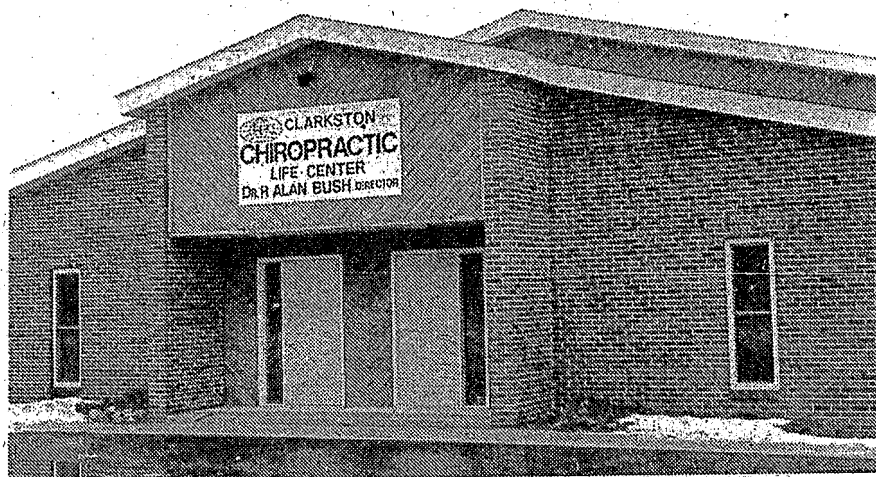

Given half a chance, a chiropractic check-up can stop many disease processes before they get started. Many people are bothered vaguely by physical conditions, but don't feel there is anything definite they can put their finger on. Perhaps, they don't sleep so well. Or they get an occasional headache. Or a twinge of pain in an arm or back from time to time. Or a poor digestion. Or constipation, or a whole host of other symptoms, none of them very painful or dramatic, but somehow annoying. The experience of most people, or of their friends, leads them to believe it would be a waste of time to visit a doctor for such symptoms. They don't feel there is "anything they can put their finger on." And so the tendency is to do nothing, but instead to wait until a definite symptom of disease exists before anything is done about it.

Look for Basic Causes

How wrong this is! It is just when these "vague" symptoms are present that a chiropractic check-up would be in order. To the chiropractor the vague symptom would be only one item in his forming a diagnosis. A chiropractic examination would tend to reveal the source of the discomfort and indicate the nature and frequency of the adjustments required to deal with it.

In looking at the human body the chiropractor is guided not by a desire to attack symptoms but to find out how far away the body is from normal state. Thus, his approach is perfectly calculated to stop developments which might lead to more serious conditions.

The doctor of chiropractic is trained to look for basic causes. He knows that an intact and soundly functioning nerve system is an essential condition of good health. He wants above all to restore natural harmony between the structures of the body, and to bring the nerve system back to proper operation.
