School millage to hit June 8 ballot

Talks about where to cut district budget continue

By Kathy Greenfield

A millage request for Clarkston schools will appear on the June 8 ballot, but the amount the schools will ask voters to approve has yet to be set.

The school board voted unanimously to place a millage request on the ballot at the Feb. 24 special meeting.

After 27 members of the advisory committee appointed by the board reacted to the proposed $1 million in cuts needed to balance the school budget, the motion was made to go for the millage request.

Fifty people attended the meeting. They discussed the proposed cuts and gave their opinions for three hours.

Several said some cuts are necessary, because enrollment in the district is lower than it was five years ago.

Others said the state of the economy warrants cuts.

"The fact is, we have less dollars to operate with," said James Vollbach. "We have to cut, just like you would in business. It doesn't take a brain surgeon to figure that out."

Jeanne Molzon had a list of 14 proposals that would lessen the impact on academics and extracurricular activities.

Early retirement for teachers, a six-hour day, elimination of classes like needlepoint and T-shirt painting, elimination of driver's training if that would not hurt accreditation, turning the heat down and reducing the number of administrators were included in her list.

She also warned that if cuts are made in academics and extracurricular activities, enrollment would drop, resulting in even less income.

"Particularly in an area like Deer Wood, there are many people who are checking into busing costs," she said. "It's not just the sports. There are people who are checking into this."

The mood of voters who already feel over-taxed was also discussed.

"People are saying, 'I'm not going to pay any more, because my taxes are too high,'" said Steve Secatch.

Citing the need for residents to support school districts, Al Bartlett, a Clarkston High School teacher and president of the Clarkston Education Association, noted that many districts across the state are in financial trouble.

"It comes down to one simple fact—where does this community place its value on education? It's coming down to a situation where all of us need to think about the priority of education," he said.

Superintendent Milford Mason said expenses have been pared over the past four years with little fanfare.

Heating and lighting costs dropped from $176,000 in 1977 to $157,000 the next year. Because of increasing utility costs, that figure is up to $170,000 for the present year.

Triple tripping for school buses was implemented in 1977 which saved money by reducing miles traveled and allowing fewer buses and fewer drivers, he said, but with gasoline increasing in cost from 11.9 cents a gallon in 1977 to about $1.10 now, those savings are dwindling.

When proposals for reducing the administration are made, there will be one less than in 1975, he said.

Still, the committee members said they wanted to see more efforts made to reduce administration costs.

"If there are no cuts at the top, there isn't going to be any money from the bottom," said Leonard Cotter, referring to voters approving higher taxes.

The need to explain exactly what a millage proposal would mean to each taxpayer is a necessary part of working for approval, Molzon said.

"Property values are going to decrease if the schools go down," she said. "This time we should make a united effort to try to reach all the people."

Ordinance planned to govern historic district

New law would regulate all home repairs, additions, upkeep

By Marilyn Trumper

If the proposed historical ordinance currently under draft is finally adopted by Clarkston's Village Council, residents living in the historical district must first seek approval from a five-member committee before painting, remodeling, constructing, repairing or demolishing any of their homes or out-buildings.

Before the ordinance goes for a vote, council must first hold two public hearings, which it expects to do in the coming future, although no dates have been set, said village President Fontie Ap-Madoc.

Over the past several months, council has twice called two special meetings to make revisions in the draft, and have scheduled a third special meeting for Thursday, March 5 at 6:30 p.m. at Clarkston Village Hall, 375 Depot, Clarkston.

Threats of widening M-15 to five lanes south of the village generate the need for the proposed ordinance, ApMadoc said.

"We felt it would act as a roadblock in the widening of M-15," she said, adding the recent inclusion of portions of the village in the National Historic Register should act as a double deterrent.

Reserving the character and continuity of Clarkston was another reason, she said.

"We should be proud of our heritage. We have a lot of beautiful old homes and businesses here that should not be changed or torn down like what's happened in other towns," she said.

For the past year and a half, the village's planning commission has been drafting the proposed ordinance which covers the downtown area and selected surrounding residential districts.

Approximately 100 homes in the village of Clarkston are located within the historic district.

Shortly after a portion of the village was declared a National Historic District in June, and admitted to the National Register of Historic Places, the commission completed drafting procedures and submitted the ordinance to attorneys for review.

When the revision process is completed by council, public hearing dates will be set, Ap-Madoc said.

Cuts hurt Clarkston

When money gets tight, municipalities statewide suffer, and the Village of Clarkston is no exception.

Because drivers are buying less gas and fewer license plates, the state's gas and weight tax revenue has dropped, and the cut means a loss of $389 to the Village of Clarkston.

"Every little bit that's taken away hurts," said Village President Fontie ApMacdoc. "The tax base in the village is so small that we depend on federal revenue and state shared revenue to manage the village."

"We've already lost about $7,000 in state revenue and $1,000 in federal revenue. We may have to ask for another mill."

But, ApMadoc said, the 1981 assessments may have stifled the need.

"This year, the way reassessments are going up, I was increased 20 percent, we may not have to go after an increase in taxes," she said.

The percentage of the cut is not that big, but even so, it will have some effect, said Artemus Pappas, village treasurer.

"The village depends on that money to upkeep the roads and for snow removal," Pappas said. "Usually the street fund takes adequate care of those projects, it's only when there is a major undertaking that we have to dip into the general fund."

The village budgeted to receive $20,000 from the state in the 1980-81 fiscal year, and has received so far $15,224.

The latest cut may not drastically affect the road fund, but repeated cuts in revenue could, he said.

Independence moves to take over Case Cemetery

An old 1885 statute allows Independence Township to vacate a neglected cemetery and take it over.

It also allows for the disinterment of bodies.

"But we won't do that," Robert White, township attorney, quickly volunteered.

When the Clarkston Community Historical Society saw what was happening to the old Case Cemetery on Dartmouth Road, they moved quickly.

The group petitioned the township to vacate the property and maintain the gravesites for preservation purposes.

Vandals had smashed and stolen headstones, grass was growing five-feet high and the fence around the perimeter was falling down.

Graves dating from the 1880s are final resting places for some of Clarkston's earliest settlers, and the last burial took place in 1950, according to one headstone.

In December, when the historical society made its request, no one knew what had happened to the cemetery association which had maintained the property.

White is no closer to finding out, but he has traced the last recorded title which dates September 1956, and names a cemetery association called Hammon Union Burying Ground.

After that, there are no records, he said.

If an interested party or member of the cemetery association fails to come forth and block the township's move, Case Cemetery could become the latest land acquisition to Independence Township by March 11.

That's the court date, White said.

Letter to editor

Mill Pond calls for collective action by village residents

Dear Kathy,

There is a village problem that was not included in your questions to candidates and, because it is not immediately apparent, it is the more insidious in its potential for destruction.

Mill Pond water plants have become subject to eutrophication, "becoming overfed," upsetting the plant-animal equilibrium that nature developed over long years.

Clearing vegetation for houses and roads removes the mantle that tied the nutrients down.

"Channelizing" and dredging disrupts the water's living community, lowering its nutrient-processing powers.

Increased human presence brings more flow of household and animal wastes, lawn fertilizers, and paving from which there is a more easy flow of storm water, oil, gas and salt-bearing snowmelt.

As the water becomes more polluted and nutrient-enriched, its plants and fish shift from clear water forms to species that tolerate murky, even foul, water conditions.

In many lakes in southern Michigan, dominance by plants is well along. Some have already developed into swamps.

We are all proud of the beautiful setting the local waters afford our village. Chemical treatment eases the unpleasantness, but only temporarily.

We must begin anew this spring in village-wide awareness and a collective effort to control the sources of nutrient inflow.

Ruth Basinger

School cuts no secret

by Kathy Greenfield

Ask any kid who is old enough to understand the concept of lay-offs in the Clarkston school district and you'll get an earful.

They'll list names of teachers likely to be out of a job come fall and they'll tell you how unhappy the prospect makes them.

Ask them about the results of a faltering budget and they'll tell you more.

They'll talk about their sadness over the elimination of sports and argue why the ones they're interested in should be saved.

They'll tell you how worried they are over the possible demise of the yearbook, the newspaper, drama, music and band concerts.

As the months have passed, I have become more and more concerned about my children, who at ages 12 and 14 have become walking encyclopedias about the bottom line of budget data.

When they and their friends discuss this brand new topic, we talk a lot about realities.

While I feel strongly that the district needs to work on belt-tightening, as we all have while facing escalating prices and incomes that can't keep pace, I can't help but feel our kids are getting the shaft.

As a school district, Clarkston has done a pretty good job. Perhaps better than most.

As other districts talk about getting back to basics, Clarkston is already pretty much there.

There are no gyms in elementary schools, no art teachers for the younger kids, and just a smattering of band and music.

We don't have new schools built to accommodate kids that never materialized when the present generation took many by surprise with smaller families.

We don't have a swimming pool. Field trips to museums, or any place else, are things of the past.

The fact is, though, kids who attend Clarkston schools do well in tests, comparing favorable with districts like Rochester and Birmingham when it comes to knowing what they need to know.

All this doesn't mean I'll run blindly to the voting booth and say "yes" to any millage request.

"I'll look hard at the millage the school board ultimately ends up asking voters to approve in June.

I hope that one message the school board is getting is that voters can't afford to keep everything as it used to be.

And I hope that one message the voters get is that they need to consider the consequences of refusing to consider a millage request on its merits.

Each generation has an obligation to prepare its offspring for the future.

If that isn't enough to encourage voters to study the issues, perhaps this is—if a school district is poor, the neighborhood, as they say, goes down the tubes.

Preposterous paper prices

by Jim Sherman

At the checkout counter at Vallier's IGA in Naubinway last November, the clerk commented, as she struck the register keys and tossed aside four rolls of toilet paper, "I can't believe how much paper goods have gone up."

I decided to compare it to our newsprint prices. In 1975, we were paying $259.65 a ton for the paper this is printed on.

In 1980 we paid $375.00 a ton. That's a 44.4 percent increase.

In 1975 four rolls of Northern tissue cost 59 cents. In 1980 Cottonelle cost 88 cents, a 49 percent increase.

Lady Camelot facial tissue, 200 ct., was 27 cents in 1975. Kleenex tissue was 58 cents in 1980.

The biggest increase in everyday paper goods is in towels. In 1975 Kleenex towels cost 59 cents for 2 rolls. Fame in 1980 was $1, a 69 percent increase.

Conclusion...many things have gone up faster than paper goods in five years.

You get important stuff in Jottings.

During the last very heavy snow storm, it was on a Tuesday, a lady I know, talked another lady I know into going from Oxford to Flint to check an apartment. They just HAD to go that day.

That same Tuesday, a man I know who owns an apartment complex, told of getting numerous calls to get snow removed from their cars, immediately if not sooner.

One particularly demanding man, as soon as the snow was removed, backed his car up and moved it over exactly one car space.

It reminded me of a story my mother told about her husband. Dad would drive around the fields in the spring with his car checking for snow damage to corn stubbles, or something.

Every year he'd get stuck in the mud, and every year mother would say, "He's happy now. He got stuck."

Expressions I can go without hearing:

That's all I need.
This is one of those days.
It always happens to me.
Why me?

As coaches throughout the land say, "You make your own breaks." And, you make your own day.

Rudy's makes history with Saturday closing

Son's wedding comes before business

By Marilyn Trumper

It was a milestone in the history of Rudy's Market on Main Street, Clarkston.

For the first time in 44 years, Rudy's closed on a Saturday.

The marriage of Rudy's son Fred, to Doreen Frietag, marked the reason for the momentous occasion.

Rudy's, a family run and owned operation, employs several members of the Frietag family.

Since most everyone employed at the store is related, opening on Feb. 28 would be impossible for all to be in attendance when matrimonial vows were exchanged.

"Why not close?" Rudy said. "I have a lot of work to do."

For Rudy, that seemed to say it all.

Although signs advertised the one-day closing for three weeks in a row, Rudy expected customers to knock on the door that morning.

They would have seen a dark store front and silent registers.

But the backroom was ablaze with lights, all the ovens were on and knives busily sliced across the cutting board.

Rudy, and Doreen, who was just hours away from becoming a new daughter-in-law, were preparing a catered meal for the expected 400 guests at the evening's reception.

There were hams, beef roasts, turkeys, three salads, potatoes, jellies, and more.

Doreen, calm, cool and collected in the face of expected absolute chaos said, "It looks like I'll enjoy myself."

Sunday, after the wedding it was back to business at Rudy's.

This sign marks a momentous occasion, a milestone in the history of Rudy's Market.

*Rudy's Market is practically a two-family operation, shared by the Schwarzes, the owners and the Freitag's, who work there. Because almost all store employees will be in attendance at the wedding, which joins a Schwartz and a Freitag, Rudy's must close. ## 'If it Fitz. . .'

No need to watch language

by Jim Fitzgerald

Steve Kemp and Pat Ewing done well for themselves. There is not a grammatical error in that sentence. I recently learned there is no such thing as a grammatical error.

Kemp will be paid $600,000 to play baseball for the Detroit Tigers this year. Many people think it's ridiculous, and a damning indictment of our value system, to pay a man so much money to play a game. Certainly.

But Kemp is a professional, selling his services for a price that ticket buyers are willing to pay. When fans quit buying, Kemp's salary will go down. Until then, he is not sappy enough to refuse $600,000 for fear of appearing greedy. The only saps are the fans paying the $600,000.

There is much ridiculousness in professional sports. Take the Detroit Pistons basketball team, for example. Late every season, it becomes apparent that the Pistons are better off losing than winning. If they finish last in their league, they get first grab at eight-foot college players looking for $600,000 jobs. If the Pistons win too many games, and finish above last place, they blow their chance to hire good players. So losing is really winning, and failure is rewarded. That is not only ridiculous, it is also outrageous. But the fans buy it, so why not sell it? All hail the saps.

Ironically, it is at jock universities, where the professional athletes are still called amateurs, that the salaries and fringes paid sports stars have reached really awesome heights of ridiculousness in the never-ending quest for sappiness, or vice versa. For conclusive evidence, look at the aforementioned Pat Ewing, a seven-foot basketball player recently signed by Georgetown University in Washington, D.C.

While he was still in high school, Ewing's services were much sought after by universities, and his high school coach sent letters to 150 of them, outlining what Ewing wanted in return for making field goals. Most of the demands were for ordinary rewards, such as thousands of dollars worth of room, board and tuition. But Ewing also asked for unlimited time to take academic tests.

"Pat's slowness in writing does not give him ample opportunity to express himself," his coach explained.

Think about that. Even the jockiest colleges require some semblance of scholarship from jocks. To stay in school, they don't have to speak and write correctly, but they must pass a few written tests in Jump Roping II or The Appreciation of Pocket Pool. But if an athlete couldn't pass such tests, he could still play ball if his teachers never found out he'd flunked. And they'd never find out if he didn't complete the tests and hand them in until after he'd used up all four years of his sports eligibility.

This brilliant bit of ridiculousness, practiced on a university level, is reminiscent of my recent criticism of Michigan State University. An MSU athlete said, "We was a good football team" on TV, and I said it was disgraceful that a university senior, with almost 16 years of schooling behind him, would make such an obvious "grammatical error." Wrong.

Reader George B. Sherman of Detroit wrote: "There is no such thing as a 'grammatical error.' If it's grammatical, it can't be an error. One can make an error in grammar, however."

That will teach me not to be so smart. According to a newspaper report, MSU football Coach Muddy Waters had took a private jet to get to a high school senior before another college could sign him, and that's not a grammatical error. It is also not the way high school seniors who speak correct grammar, but don't play football, are recruited by universities.

When a university professor charts a jet to enroll a promising poet, that will be the day Steve Kemp signs for 60 cents and the Pistons refuse to sign a 10-foot center because he wants unlimited time to spell his name.

Bus drivers plan game to benefit accident victim

Plans are underway for a benefit to help cover medical expenses for an Independence Township man struck by a car while walking on the campus of Central Michigan University.

Ken Grable, 23, the son of Dale and Rosemary Grable of Independence Township, is in intensive care at Midland County Hospital as a result of injuries sustained in the Feb. 16 accident.

The benefit volleyball game is being organized by Mrs. Grable's co-workers, bus drivers for the Clarkston school district.

Grable and a friend, Jennifer Tompkins, 21, of Bloomfield

Township, were walking alongside a road on campus when a vehicle traveling between 50 and 60 mph struck them, Mrs. Grable said.

"At this point, he is paralyzed from the mouth down," she said.

"He's not moving anything. His mind is clear, but his body is completely paralyzed."

Tompkins is at the Mt. Pleasant Hospital where she is recovering from multiple injuries including several broken bones and a ruptured spleen, Mrs. Grable said.

A CMU student, she has worked at the Pine Knob Music Theatre.

Grable, who graduated from Clarkston High School in 1975, is in his second year at CMU. A cheerleader, he is employed by the school's security patrol.

While a CHS student, he participated in many activities, including playing on the baseball team in 1974 and '75, JV football in 1974 and varsity football in 1975.

After graduation, he served with the Pontiac Police Department before beginning school at the university.

He was also active in boxing and won the Golden Glove Championship on the regional and state levels in 1976. He was regional boxing champion in 1977.

The benefit volleyball game is scheduled Friday, March 13 with the main event—a match between the women bus drivers and women CHS and junior high school teachers—to begin at 8 p.m. at Clarkston High School.

There are also plans for a warm-up match, but details have yet to be finalized.

Tickets are $1 for adults, 50 cents for children and those under age 5 will be admitted free.

The CHS Pompon Girls will perform at half-time.

The bus drivers also plan to have a concession stand, a bake sale and a cake raffle to help the cause.

Tickets may be purchased from any bus driver, or contact benefit chairperson Loretta Graham at 625-9823.

Donations will also be accepted.

Plant brings woe to resident

The dirt berm surrounding the Stickney Road gravel plant has eroded twice in the last two years, washing dirt, sand and rocks across the backyard of James Morris, down his driveway and across the street.

When it happened the second time, three weeks ago, Morris's laundry room was flooded with water which first traveled through a septic field.

"I want it fixed, and I want it fixed right so this won't happen again," Morris demands. "I won't be satisfied until it is, and I'm considering consulting my own attorney."

Morris lives on Sally Road in Independence Township, and to the rear of his backyard lies the partially reclaimed Stickney pit.

When the last blizzard melted, the natural drain was frozen, and the flood water found an alternate route, said Gary Gildner, an employee of the Stolaruk Corp., owners of the pit.

"The problem that caused it was the ice situation of three weeks ago," he said. "The natural drainage course was blocked by frozen ice. These problems do happen.

"No corrective measures will be taken now until the material dries, and we can get machines in there without doing further damage. We've built up the berm with straw to prevent further soil erosion and as soon as the weather's permitting, we'll correct the problem," he said.

Morris says he'll be keeping a close eye on developments to insure Stolaruk returns and completes the job.

Celebration: A 52-34 win over Rochester and a GOAL championship made the Wolfpack dressing room a pretty happy place Friday night. It was Clarkston's fourth straight league title, a feat symbolized by the four fingers being raised by some of the players.

Four straight! Wolves win

By Al Zawacky

Coach Gary Nustad stood in the Clarkston coaches' office, smiling and brimming with pride.

"This is as satisfying a league title as I've ever had," Nustad was saying.

Down the corridor in the Wolfpack dressing room, the only thing missing was a case of vintage champagne as 12 basketball players celebrated in style.

Four fingers held up on one hand was the greeting of the hour—symbolic of four straight Greater Oakland Activities League championships.

It was a moment that had been worked for, hoped for and dreamt about.

The Clarkston High School varsity basketball team had just ended its regular season by defeating Rochester 52-34, a win that clinched a fourth consecutive GOAL crown for Coach Gary Nustad and his Wolfpack dynasty.

Four straight. Just to put that in perspective, the last professional Detroit team to win four straight league titles was the Red Wings, who turned the trick almost 30 years ago.

"I'm tremendously proud of these kids," Nustad beamed. "We had guys on this club like Brad Sheldon, Brad Beattie, Ric Schebor, Craig Schnabel—guys who had no previous varsity experience and still came through for us."

The Wolfpack did have a few problems against Rochester's zone in the first half Friday night, and entered the dressing room with a scant 21-18 lead after the first two quarters of play.

But the third quarter—and the rest of the game—was all Wolfpack.

"We didn't change anything," said Clarkston co-captain Scott McKoin about the team's second-half turn-around. "We just came out really tight in the first half, and the shots weren't falling in."

"We were just as intense in the second half, but we loosened up—and the shots started falling."

McKoin's observation was echoed by Rochester Coach John Bailey, who was stoically watching the milling, celebrating crowd a few minutes after the final buzzer.

"They (Clarkston) weren't hitting in the first half, but in the second half those perimeter shots started falling in," Bailey said. "That's what hurt us."

"I can sum up our season in one word," he replied when asked about his club's last-place GOAL finish. "Frustrating."

It was not quite a week without some measure of frustration for the Wolfpack, either, as earlier in the week Clarkston dropped a 49-44 non-league game to an undistinguished Bloomfield Hills Lahser squad.

McKoin paced the Wolfpack offense in both games, notching 22 points against Lahser and 20 points against Rochester. Brad Beattie was also in double figures against Rochester, tallying 14 points.

The Wolfpack will open district playoff action this Wednesday at Pontiac Central High School against Pontiac Northern. Game time is 7 p.m.

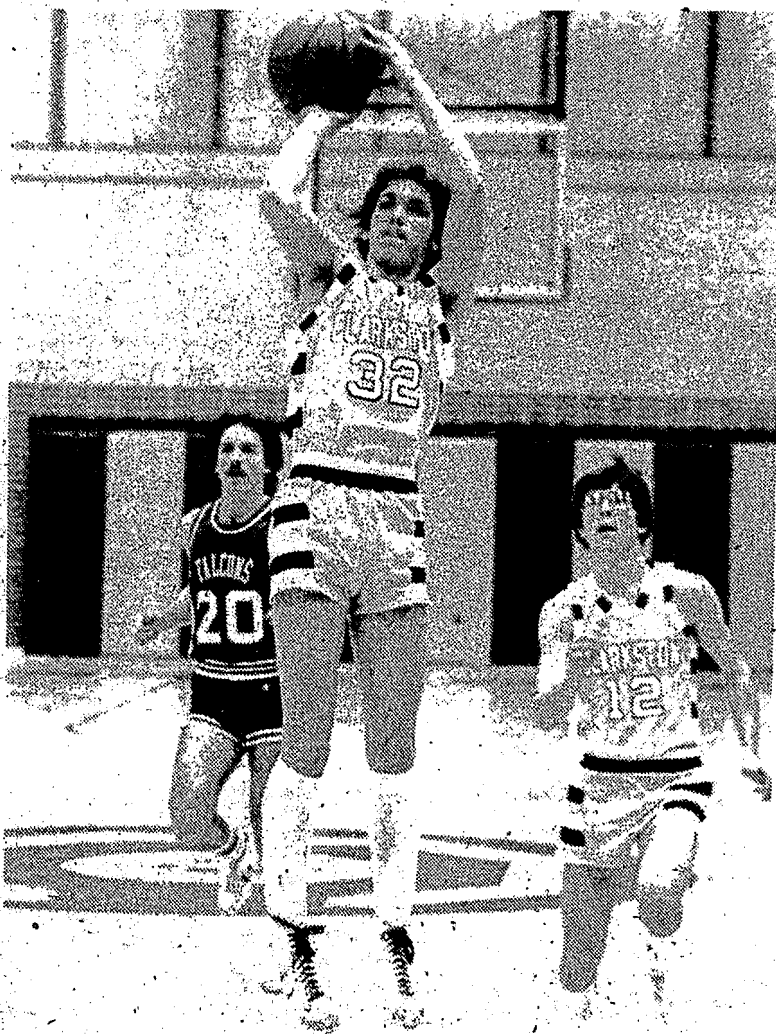

The winner will advance to the district finals Saturday at 7 p.m. and the district champion will meet the Owosso district winner in regional competition in Davison.

The Point After

by Al Zawacky

Wolfpack celebrates—while writer drip-dries

LOOKING BACK, I guess it was a pretty dumb thing to say.

"McKoin," said the Clarkston News sports writer, "if you guys win the league title, you can dump me in the showers."

I uttered those fateful words three months ago after picking the Rochester Falcons to win the league championship. Exactly where I said it I don't remember, and exactly why I said it I couldn't begin to explain.

Friday night the Wolfpack players joined the crowd in counting off the seconds of the last game of the regular season. Five, four, three, two, one—pandemonium. Clarkston had just won its fourth straight Greater Oakland Activities League crown.

Those ill-considered words of December had come home to roost.

ACTUALLY, I BEGAN sweating it out as much as a month ago, but given the three-month time lapse there was reason to hope that the players would forget the whole thing.

Alas, the memories of Scott McKoin,

Brad Beattie, Greg Lane, et al. proved to be infallible.

"Al, you're a good sport," said a grinning McKoin as the victimized writer pushed some dripping strands of hair out of his eyes.

There's a lesson to be learned here. Good sports get dumped in the showers, while bad sports waltz on their bets and are hated for it—but at least they stay dry.

Now they tell me.

IT WAS SUCH a gratifying evening for the Clarkston players and crowd, which included such illustrious Wolfpack alumni as Chuck Nicolai, Larry Baylis and Ed Haddad. These guys had to feel good to see a proud tradition preserved and a genuine Clarkston dynasty extended.

New faces come and go, Tim McCormick moves on—but the GOAL championship trophy doesn't budge. It's become a standard piece of decor in the Clarkston High School trophy case.

"I COULDN'T HAVE asked for a better senior year," said Wolfpack forward Brad Sheldon as the team dressed for a post-game steak dinner at Spring Lake Country Club. "Two league titles. It's great."

It was just this past fall that Sheldon quarterbacked Clarkston's varsity football team to its first league championship in three years, teaming up with receiver Kevin Krause to create a passing tandem that was the scourge of the GOAL.

Now, Sheldon has a basketball title to savor, too. And Krause had a hand in it.

"He couldn't be here tonight because he's at baseball camp in Florida," Sheldon explained, "but he kept me going this season. He was always up in the stands starting all the cheers."

When the Wolfpack traveled to Rochester in January, Sheldon not only had his own cheering section, but his own sign—"Sheldon Road," a genuine green and white highway sign obtained in a covert operation from the streets of Rochester.

Each time he entered the game, the sign made its appearance in the midst of the crowd, courtesy of Krause and some of Sheldon's other football buddies.

"He'd kid me and tell me to stick with football," Sheldon grinned. "But he was always with me. I'm glad I decided to play this year."

THERE WAS A festive atmosphere at Spring Lake afterwards, but the season is not over, of course. The playoffs remain, and the Wolfpack has drawn the dubious honor of opening district action against the winner of the Pontiac Central-Pontiac Northern contest.

It'll be like running into a buzz saw, but Coach Gary Nustad and his players are prepared to give it their best shot.

"I think we've proven we can play with anybody," Nustad said. "We're just going to come out and play as hard as we can, and let the chips fall where they may."

That, of course has been the Wolfpack's modus operandi all season long. And it's worked.

A league title is pretty good proof.

Clarkston JV cagers post best season ever

By Al Zawacky

Larry Mahrle has had more than his share of successes in his five seasons as junior varsity boys' basketball coach at Clarkston High School.

He's seen his teams win three league titles, and he's coached such eventual varsity stars as Scott McKoin, Brad Beattie, John Sheldon and Ed Haddad.

But he has never had a better club record-wise than his 1980-81 junior Wolfpack.

Fifteen wins, four losses. A 9-1 record and first-place finish in the Greater Oakland Activities League.

That's not shabby.

"I'm very pleased with the effort we had tonight, and throughout the season," Mahrle said after his JVs finished their season by edging second-place Rochester, 54-52.

In non-league play earlier in the week, the junior Wolfpack downed Bloomfield Hills Lahser, 52-44.

Technically, both were "nothing" games for the JVs, who had already clinched the GOAL championship the week before by crushing Milford

But the junior Wolfpack played hard right up until the season-ending buzzer, a fact that made Mahrle proud.

"We knew we had it (the league title) won even if we'd lost—but the kids still played hard," Mahrle said.

The big reason for the JVs success could again be found at the foul line, where Clarkston hit on 42 of 50 opportunities in the two games.

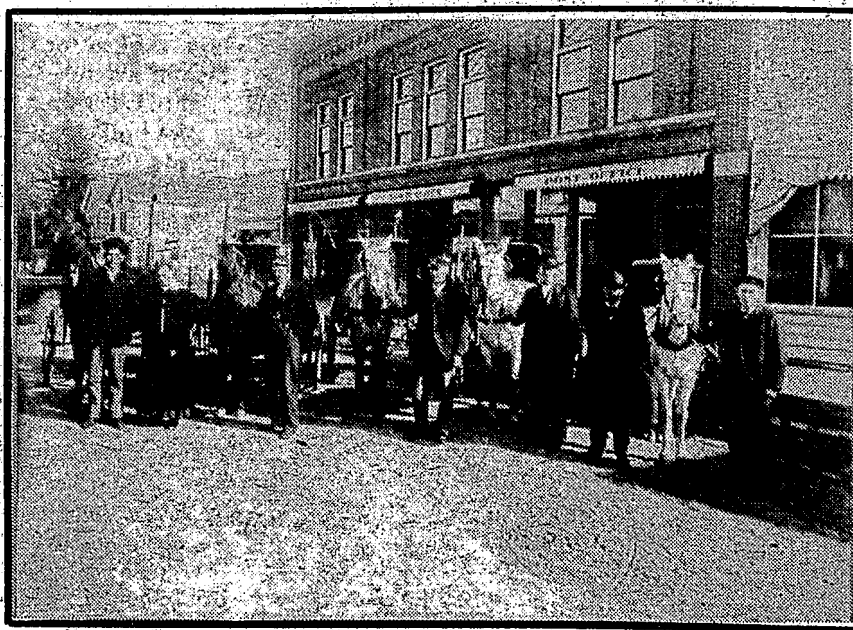

Pacing the JV attack against

Rochester were Mike McCormick with 14 points, Scott Temple with 13 and Rick Williams with 11.

Conway 4th in state meet

No wrestler in Clarkston High School athletic history ever placed higher in the state championship tournament than junior Mike Conway did this past weekend.

Conway placed fourth in the state-wide meet, held Feb. 27-28 in Ann Arbor's Crisler Arena. He finished the season with a personal record of 37 wins, four losses.

"The fact that he's only a junior makes it that much more impressive," said Rick Detkowski, Clarkston High School wrestling coach. "Conway topped off a good season—and I thought the team had a good season overall, too."

The CHS grapplers have posted a combined record of 21-3-3 over the past two seasons, Detkowski's first as head coach. Last year Clarkston also won the Greater Oakland Activities League championship.

"We're building a winning tradition," Detkowski noted. "We've got the kids interested and we want to get the community interested in wrestling also."

CHS 2nd in JV tourney

The Clarkston High School junior varsity volleyball team fell victim to an energy-crisis of sorts Saturday.

"We just ran out of steam," said Coach Nancy Foster of her team's loss to Mt. Clemens in the finals of the Clarkston JV Volleyball Invitational Tournament held Feb. 14 in the CHS gym.

Prior to the finals, the JVs played an energy-draining marathon battle against top-seeded Waverly, a match that took its toll when the Clarkston players clashed with Mt. Clemens, Foster said.

"Mt. Clemens wasn't that good, they were just a very consistent team. They kept hitting the ball over," said the Clarkston coach.

Nevertheless, Foster's Wolves still managed a solid second-place finish in a field of 10 schools, highlighted by a number of sparkling individual performances.

"Annette Ulasich's hitting was just spectacular," Foster said. "She played really tough the whole way."

Foster also lauded the hitting of Jamie Howenstine, the passing and serving of Renee Mericier and the passing of Becky Buhl.

Borg-Warner wants homes inside Pine Knob complex

Borg-Warner Equities Corp. has moved on an idea earlier espoused by Pine Knob Investment Co. and is proposing a development of 71 single-family homes in the Pine Knob complex, north of Waldon Road.

The homes would be built in conjunction with the condominiums there now, said Timothy Palulian, director of the Independence Township building and planning departments.

Average lot size would be 20,000 square feet with 120 feet of frontage, he said.

The proposed 45-acre development is zoned multiple, but the township allows single-family development in multiple zones, he said.

The development plans include sanitary sewers and a central water system, according to the application for tentative plat approval.

Spomer and Scrase of Milford have been named on the application as developers/builders.

When the review of the tentative plat is complete, the project will be scheduled to go before the township planning commission, Palulian said.

Village saves sewer money

Independence Township is slated to take over the Village of Clarkston's sewer maintenance, a job formally tackled by Oakland County.

Beginning July 31, Independence will take over its own sewers at an annual savings of $31,700, says George Anderson, director of the township's Department of Public Works (DPW.)

Clarkston can share in the savings, he said, at the village council's Feb. 23 meeting.

"We can do it cheaper, that's what I'm telling you," he said. "We can do it for $4.52 per quarter per unit, and the county will be charging $6.10 per quarter per unit."

The Council agreed unanimously to go with Independence, and stands ready to sign a contract.

When the contract is signed, it will take 180 days before Oakland County releases the village from its obligation.

Under the new agreement, Independence Township will be responsible to maintain and repair both lift stations in the village, located on M-15 and Hidden Lane, Anderson said.

Cable TV under scrutiny

Another task force gears up to tackle trouble spots in Independence Township.

The township board recently approved a new task force to review cable television, and formally recognized the Community Center Steering Committee established under the former administration.

Approval was given at the Feb. 3 meeting as township Supervisor James B. Smith announced Peter Ohrnberger of Caberfae Trail would chair the five-member task force on Cable TV. Ohrnberger is vice-president of F. Joseph Lamb Co. in Warren.

Other members are James Schultz of Robertson Court, instructor at Brookside Elementary School of Cranbrook Schools; William Genshaw of Alco Road, instructor at Clarkston High School; Michael Spillum of Fawn Valley Drive, vice-president of the Melvin Corp. in Flint; and Carol Balzarini of Reese Road.

Chairing the five-member Community Center Steering Committee is Bruce Shull of Allen Road, employment service and program manager for Chrysler Corp., Detroit.

Other members are Paul Tungate of Transparent Road, athletic director of Clarkston High School; Barbara Steele of Kingfisher Road, musical director of Clarkston United Methodist Church; Dale Stuart, attorney and township board trustee; and Anni Glenn of Reese Road.

HOW TO PLAY THE MARKET WITHOUT RISKING YOUR LIFE.

It used to be so easy. Risk some money in the market for growth. Keep the rest in the bank and buy a life insurance policy for security. Inflation has changed all that. A lot of people are risking that "security" today just to stay even with the economy.

There's a better way. John Hancock Variable Life. Like any whole life plan, it guarantees you the face amount of the plan you buy, but unlike most other plans, it also lets you invest in the market, with the opportunity to add to the value of your coverage.

Send us the coupon for more information. In uncertain economic times like these, an insurance plan that gives you an opportunity to help keep up with inflation could be the best plan in the market.

Talking about . . .

Would you support a millage increase for Clarkston schools?

"I certainly would not! I pay too much in taxes already and with reassessments, my state equalized value went up $3,500. It seems to me we've reached a critical point."—Ruth Halstead, Sashabaw Road, Independence Township, homemaker.

"No. Taxes are so high right now. I just got my assessment and it went up."—Nancy Haven, Buffalo Street, Clarkston, housewife.

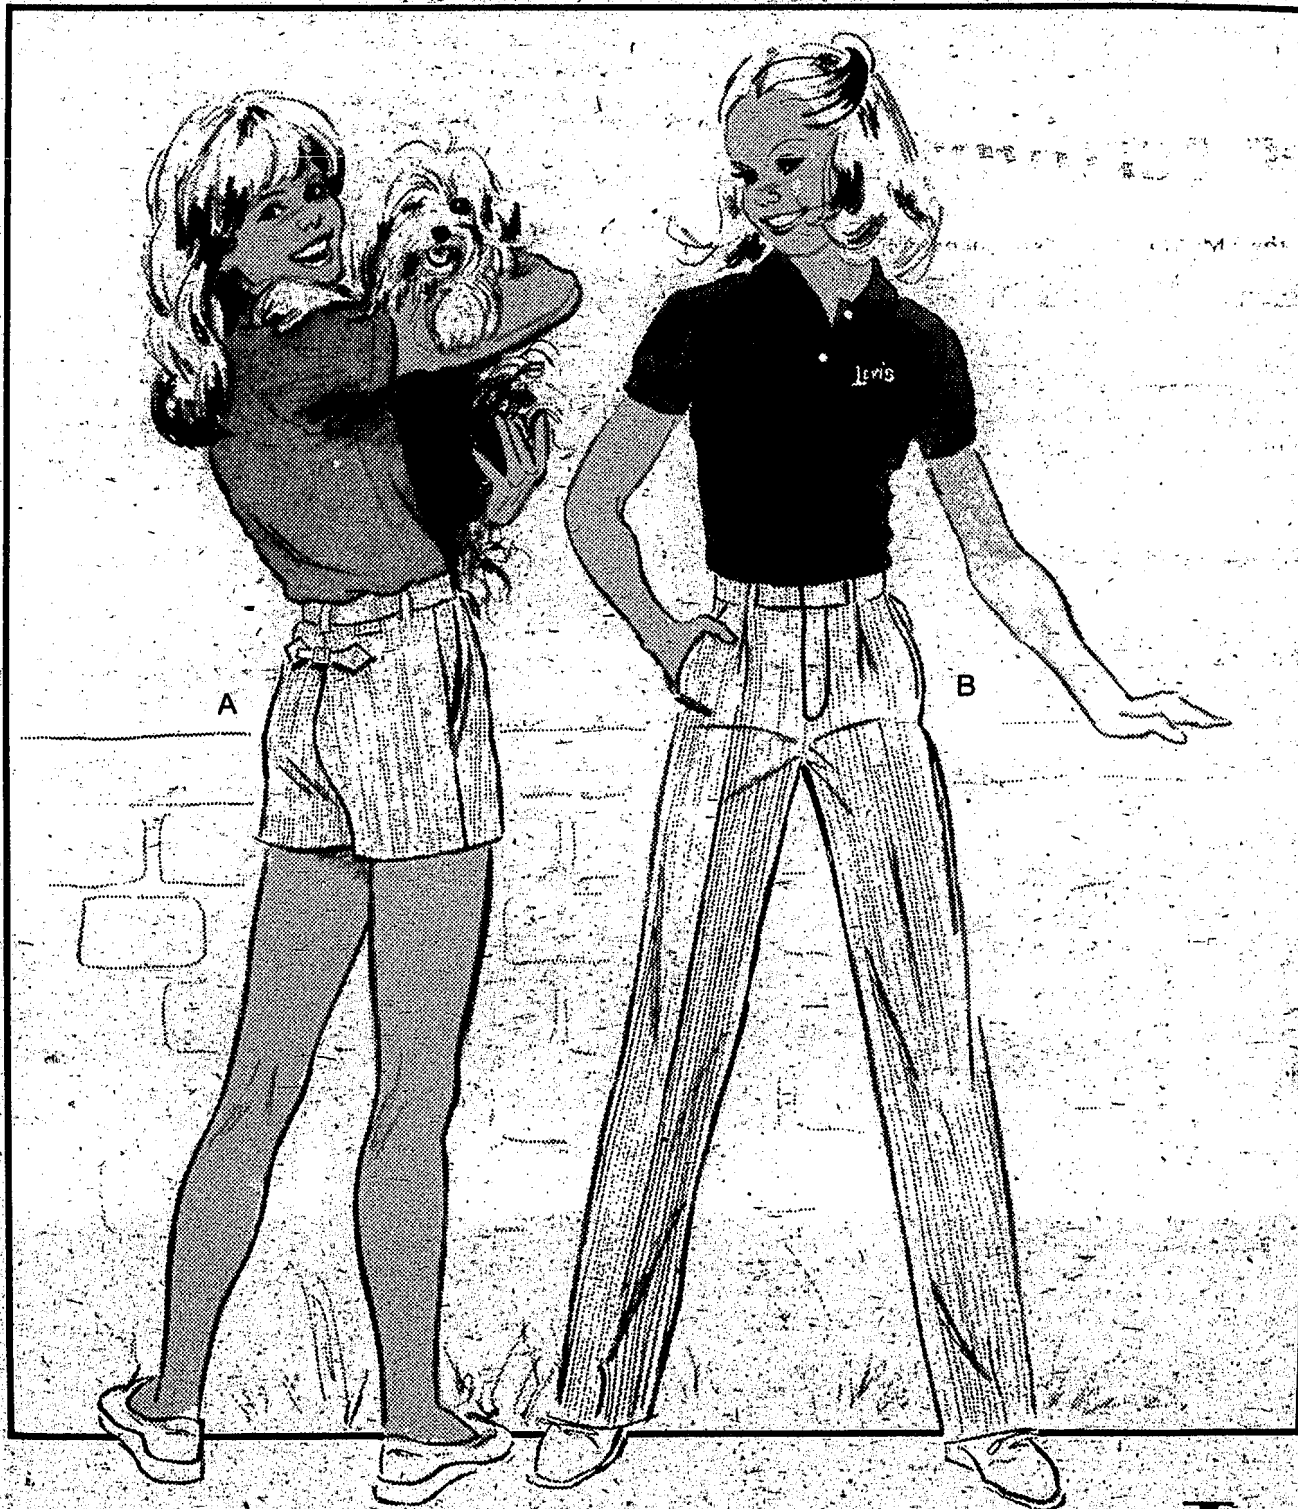

"No, no, no! And it wouldn't matter what school. I'm willing to support the schools, but only when the money is going where it's supposed to be going. All it pays for now is salaries. If we give 'em a millage, they'll raise the salaries."—Herman Jaenichen, Dixie Highway, Springfield Township, retired.

"Yes. I have three children in the system and have supported millages ever since they started the schools."—Lin Carlson, Phaelen Road, Independence Township, substitute teacher.

"Yes, definitely. I'm a mother and have had one son graduate from Clarkston High School, and have two daughters still in school. I'm for millages. I feel they're very necessary at this time."—Lynn Spillum, Fawn Valley Drive, Independence Township, housewife.

Revenue hearings slated

The Village of Clarkston anticipates $5,725 in 1981 Federal Revenue Sharing funds and is calling for citizens' ideas on ways to utilize those dollars.

Traditionally, the money has been used to pay for police services, said Artemus Pappas, village treasurer, first, when the township police department patrolled the village and last year to the Oakland County Sheriff's Department.

The village council has scheduled two public hearings to hear residents' ideas, on April 13 and 27 at 7:30 p.m., Clarkston Village Hall, 375 Depot, Clarkston.

Rose named secretary

Independence Township Clerk Christopher Rose has been selected secretary of the Michigan Townships Association of Oakland County.

Some 50 representatives of the 23 townships in the county selected the slate of 1981 officers at the regular meeting Jan. 22.

"I'm pleased," said Rose. "They go through a program where you start out as secretary, become third, second and first vice-president and then become president. It will be interesting the next few years."

In other business, Don Berg, Joyce Butler, Bruce Campbell and Bill Haase were elected to the church council for three-year terms.

Outgoing members are Pat Dolven, Dorothy Haase, Dick Mawhinney and Ned Parsons.

A major congregational decision was made to call a parish deaconess to work in Christian education, youth ministry, and volunteer services.

parable of the prodigal son had actually occurred.

He plays the role of the prodigal son's father.

The play is to be performed at 6 p.m. at the First Church of God, 6300 Clarkston-Orion, Independence Township.

Lana attended Oakland Community College and recently completed insurance-related courses at Michigan State University. She has undertaken a career with Farm Bureau Insurance Co. The couple plans a May wedding.

Students capture honors

Three students at Clarkston's Northwest Oakland Vocational Education Center captured high honors in the recently held Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECCA) contest.

They competed among 50 other students district-wide as members of the youth organization for retailing and marketing students, said instructor David Lessel.

"I was very happy to begin with that I had nine compete," he said. "But was even prouder that the three qualified to go onto state competition. If they win from there, they qualify to compete nationally."

"I'm very excited and wish each of them the best of luck."

Jean Krueger, a senior at Waterford-Mott High School, took second place in math and salesmanship testing, and placed second overall, he said.

Chuck DesJardins and Don Klein, both attending Waterford Township High School, were top eight finalists, he said.

Chuck, a senior, competed in food marketing and Don, a junior, competed in food services.

Mrs. Harry (Marie) Schlautmann of Cranberry Lake Road, Independence Township, made this very good Chocolate Chip Date Cake for a recent Knight of Columbus Friday night Fish Fry.

1 c chopped dates
1½ c boiling water
1 t soda

Pour water over dates and soda. Let stand until cool.

½ c shortening
1 c sugar
1½ c sifted flour
2 eggs
¼ t salt
½ t soda

Cream shortening and sugar, add eggs and beat well. Add cooled dates. Add dry ingredients and mix until blended.

Pour into greased 9x13 pan. Before baking, pour over batter a mixture of ½ c. sugar and ½ to ¾ c chopped nuts. Then pour over one 6 oz. pkg. chocolate chips. Bake 30 to 35 minutes at 350 degrees. When cake is done it will have a nice glaze.

Tax tips

by George Bennett

Energy tax credits mean savings

The residential energy credit (a credit is a direct reduction of the amount of tax you owe) is allowed for the costs of the following energy saving items installed in your principal residence (whether rented or owned):

15% of the first $2,000 of expenditures for qualified energy conservation items installed in a principal residence which was substantially completed before April 20, 1977; and 40% of the first $10,000 of expenditures for qualified renewable energy source items installed in a principal residence, whenever completed.

The maximum credits--$300 for energy conservation items and $4,000 for renewable energy source items--are allowed with respect to the taxpayer's principal residence on a cumulative (no annual) basis.

Consequently, if energy savings credits were claimed in a prior year, the amount of prior expenditures must be taken into account in computing the maximum credits allowable in 1980.

However, homeowners are eligible for the maximum credit each time they change their principal residence.

Energy conservation items include insulation, storm windows or doors, caulking or weather stripping, clock thermostats, furnace replacement burners, furnace ignition systems which replace gas pilot lights and automatic flue dampers. These energy conservation items must be designed to achieve a reduction in the amount of fuel consumed.

The credit for energy conservation does not apply to fireplaces, heat pumps, exterior siding, carpets, drapes, wood paneling, or a new furnace or boiler. (The furnace modifications mentioned above do not qualify if they are installed as a component of, or for use in, a new furnace or boiler.)

To qualify for the credit, an item must be initially used by the taxpayer and expected to last at least three years.

Renewable energy source items include solar, wind and geothermal energy items (e.g., solar panels on a roof and windmills) which heat or cool a principal residence or provide hot water or electricity. To qualify for the credit, an item must be initially used by the taxpayer and expected to last at least five years.

If you have not previously claimed any residential energy credit (the credit is computed on Form 5695), you can reduce your 1980 tax by as much as $4,300.

If the allowable credit exceeds your 1980 tax liability, the excess may be applied against your 1981-1987 tax liabilities.

Time was . . .

Snow's for kids

by Harry (Pat) Tinson

It seems when we are children we have the knack of enjoying winter to its fullest; a trait that seems to diminish in many cases with the passing of years.

A day off from school because of being snowed in was unheard of. If the roads were impassable by car, you could count on our teacher Miss Scott coming to school by a team of horses and bobsled driven by her brother, Clint.

These were very special days with the opportunity to ride the bobsled to and from school.

The coming of the first snow also meant we were able to play Fox and Geese.

For those unfamiliar with the game, a round track like the rim of a wheel was laid out in the snow. Then, tracks were made like the spokes of the wheel. The center hub was the free area.

There was a fox chosen and the rest of the kids were geese. It was certainly a very simple game, but many hours of enjoyable time were spent this way.

The coming of snow also meant sledding on Cemetery Hill. Those of us who had sleds would bring them to school. There would be all types and sizes.

Some had flexible flyers, some small bobsleds and some homemade from boards or metal signs.

This was done only on specially-designated sled days when Miss Scott would eliminate recess and give us a longer lunch period.

Ah yes, these were beautiful times, best enjoyed now only in memories.

Coping with kids

by Jim Windell

Mothers can provide outlet for anger

Children often say things to their mothers they would never dare to say to anyone else.

And this has nothing to do with disrespect or love, at least not the way many mothers think of love and affection.

Mrs. E. was a good example. "I came to see you," she said to a counselor, "because I just can't stand the way Bobby talks to me. It's just terrible some of the things he says."

"He acts so hateful at times it scares me. If he talks like this now, at his age to his mother, what's he going to be like when he's a teenager?"

With that, the overwrought Mrs. E. dissolved in tears contemplating her Bobby, whom she thought was destined to be a delinquent or worse because he frequently swore at her and said other "terrible" things.

In this case, Bobby is a 9-year-old diagnosed as hyperactive. He has rages in which he destroys things that belong to him and while in his angry states lets loose with rather raw language.

Mrs. E. had been punishing herself for a long time, because she thought she must be a poor mother to produce a child who would treat his mother in such a "hateful" and unloving way.

Many children recognize that things said to one's mother will be treated differently than if similar things were said to someone outside the family.

The repercussions are far different if you swear at your mother or at the school principal. This may not be so unhealthy.

Probably it is well that a mother deal with a child's acting out in a less punitive manner.

It does not mean the youngster will treat all people in a disrespectful manner nor that the behavior will escalate so that soon the child is shooting people.

Some children, like hyperactive youngsters, have angry outbursts for almost no explicable reason. Afterwards, they often feel guilty and act loving and may even be cuddly once again.

Sometimes, too, it is because a child can count on his mother being loving, accepting and forgiving that he can release his anger at her. It is not so safe with other people.

They will reject you or deal with you in a less tolerant fashion.

However, no matter how loving and affectionate a mother is to an angry outburst, she also has a continuing obligation to the child.

She must teach him some restraint and how to make distinctions about what he can say to various people he will encounter in life.

Just because mom is understanding, he must learn that doesn't mean most others are.

Drama on tour

Clarkston Junior High School drama students went on tour recently and shared their talents with pupils in some of the district's elementary schools. "Metrics Can Be Fun" was the name of this play. Above, Stephanie Jenks, as a sorcerer, pulls a bouquet from her sleeve to the amazement of Carol Harris. Below from left, Inger Nelson portrays what will happen if an ax falls as Alice Sutton and Ted Myatt look on. The students are enrolled in drama classes taught by Jan Gleeson.

It's spring concert time, and members of the Clarkston Junior High School Girls Select Chorus are busy practicing. Here, soloist Beth Chartier leads the group in a portion of the song "Commercials." The concert is planned Thursday, March 5, beginning at 7:30 p.m. at the school, 6300 Church, Independence Township. The 175 chorus students of Mary Conklin are to perform. Admission is free.

Spring singers

After sampling all the items in song, the girls moan about their resulting stomach aches. Joanie Leichtnam's lament is captured here.

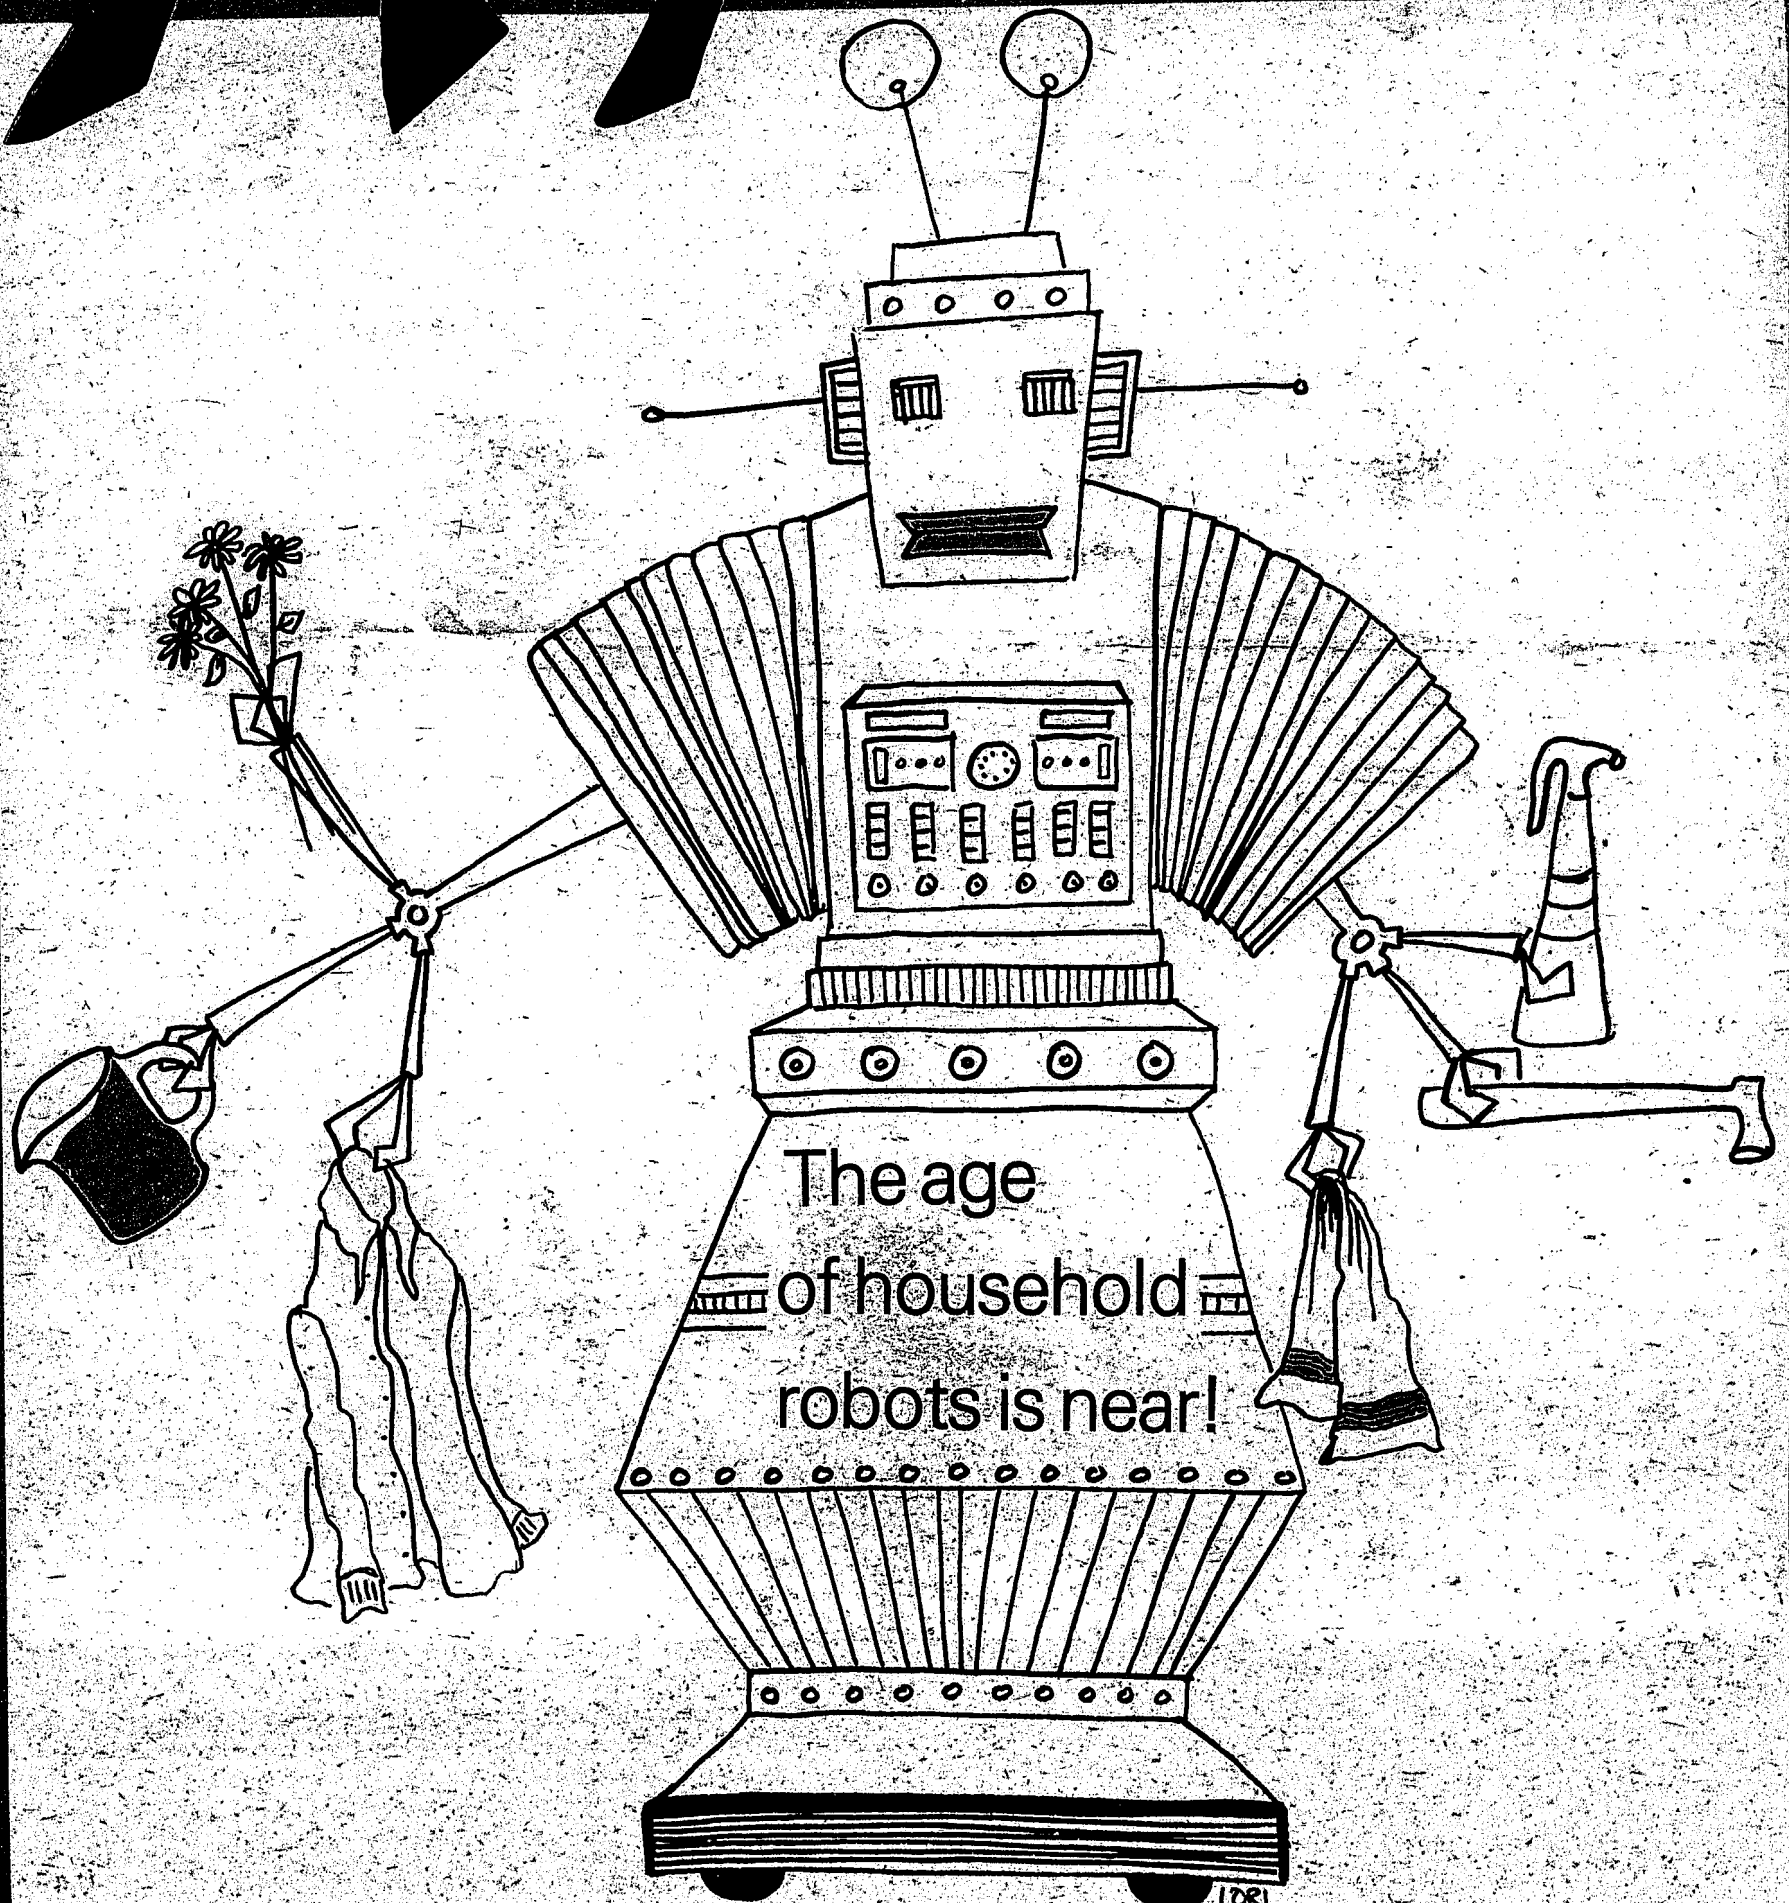

Getting into the spirit of a commercial tune are (clockwise from front) Stacey Hargreaves, Heather Laurie, Wendy Forsyth and Kim Smith. The song is a series of short ditties familiar to those who listen to the tunes found in advertisements on radio and TV.

Robotic inspirations

MAGAZINE staff writer Al Zawacky's story on computers found at Universal Data Inc./AST and owner Chuck Phyle's thoughts on the future inspired our illustrator Lori Duckett and her 12-year-old son Randy Elwell. Lori's drawing appears on the cover—a robot suitable to do housework would require at least six hands, she said. Young Randy conjured up a fast sweeper that resembles Darth Vader—his drawing appears on pages 8 and 9. While we realize few people would want robots around the house that look like "Star Wars" refugees, we decided to go with the fun while thinking about the dramatic impact computers are bound to have on us all.

Egypt's peace treaty with Israel has allowed her to turn considerable energy toward her third largest foreign exchange revenue producer, tourism. Upper Egypt's Luxor and Abu Simbel have used interest free loans to develop indoor and outdoor museums, major archeological sites, roads, airports and tele-communications. At least, the great Nubian temple monuments of Ramses II will be accessible. The Cairo Museum has benefited financially from the Treasures of Tutankhammen Tour enough to upgrade it substantially as well.

The tour of Tutankhamen's gold has spurred great interest in travel to Egypt. Many tours are currently available and some of them are combined with visits to other countries, including Israel. If you are interested in one of these trips give us a call at CLARKSTON TRAVEL BUREAU INC., 6 N. Main St., 625-0325. You will have the benefit of the combined experience and knowledge of our entire staff when planning your trip. Hours: 9:30 a.m.-5:30 p.m. Mon. thru Fri., 9:30 a.m.-1 p.m. Sat.

TRAVEL TIP:

Twelve thousand hotel rooms are available in Egypt. This number will double by 1983.

Canine's fate creates doggone mystery

My dog attempted suicide the other day by throwing herself into the icy waters of the Mill Pond, but was thwarted by a friend who risked what would have been a most invigorating swim and fished her out.

She may have been despondent over graduating from obedience school 16th in a class of 16. It could have been worse, however, there might have been 25 dogs in the class.

The last time I was associated with a dog that had blatant suicidal tendencies we were involved in a Steinbeckian trek to New Orleans. "We" consisted of Anne and myself, three kids, six fish, an aged hamster, one dog and a 5-cylinder station wagon.

The car had six operating cylinders when we left Detroit, but a bearing had failed almost at once and we were now limping slowly along, stopping frequently to add water and oil.

We left mechanics across six states that said we couldn't make it and one charmer who optimistically predicted we wouldn't get out of town.

The hamster's cage was in the back of the wagon with the luggage. At the end of the first day, we found that the road vibration had shaken the water out of the drinking jar and the cage litter was a wet, soggy mass on which the venerable beast deigned not to set his ancient feet.

He was sitting on the exercise wheel, balefully looking out and probably thinking: "I fail to see the immediate benefit in this move."

The fish rode in a Mason jar next to the heater. At random intervals some kid would use a straw and blow bubbles to aerate the water.

I don't know if the fish liked it; they never said much.

The dog was not a good traveler. In fact, he would have had to improve considerably before he could be thought of as insufferable.

Apparently this faithless companion suffered from a variant form of claustrophobia and, when left alone in the car, went gazorkees.

When we were in a restaurant and man's best friend was supposed to be guarding our worldly possessions, he was actually nervously shredding the road map and devouring the sun glasses.

The only mode in which we could leave the car was with the dog tied to the steering wheel on a two-foot tether and all loose objects at least 25 inches away.

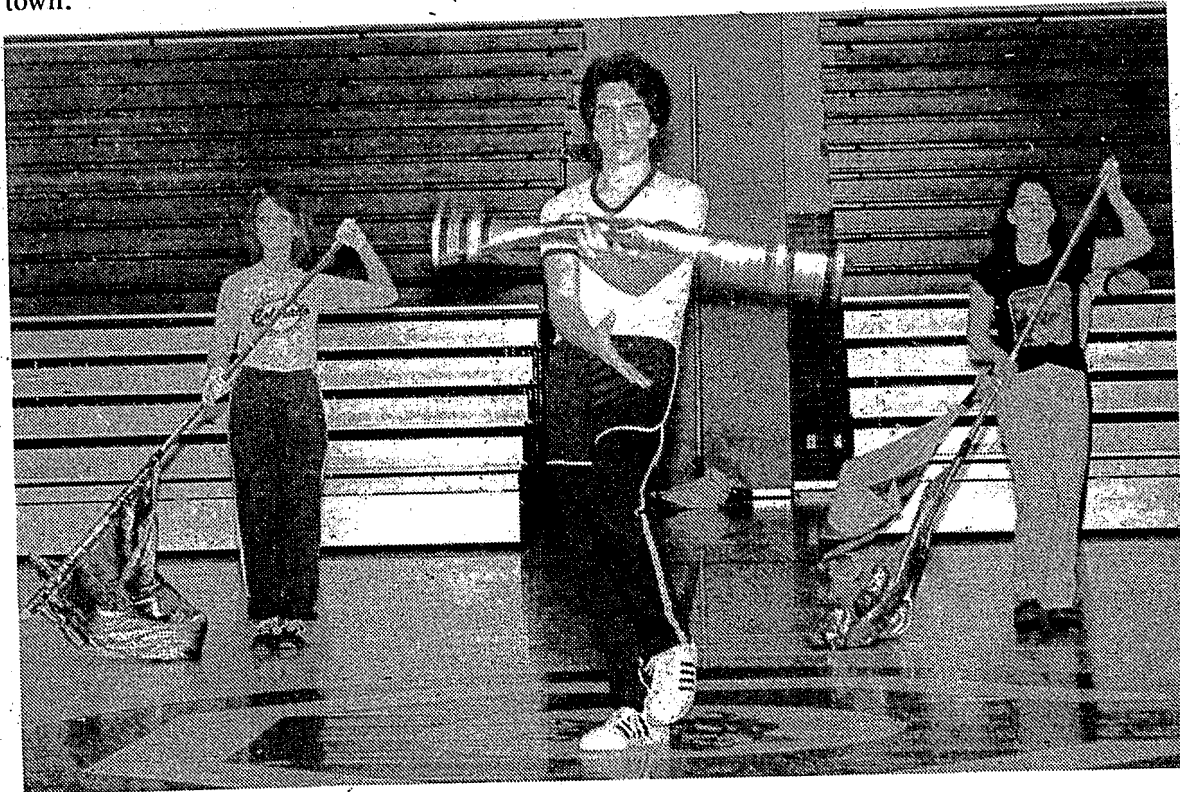

One time, in an apparent effort to end it all, the dog wriggled through an impossibly narrow crack in a partially open window.

That self-destruct attempt was foiled by an alert restaurant employee who found him dangling outside the driver's window.

The dog may have eventually done himself in. After we got to New Orleans, I spent a week's sojourn in the hospital for some minor repairs.

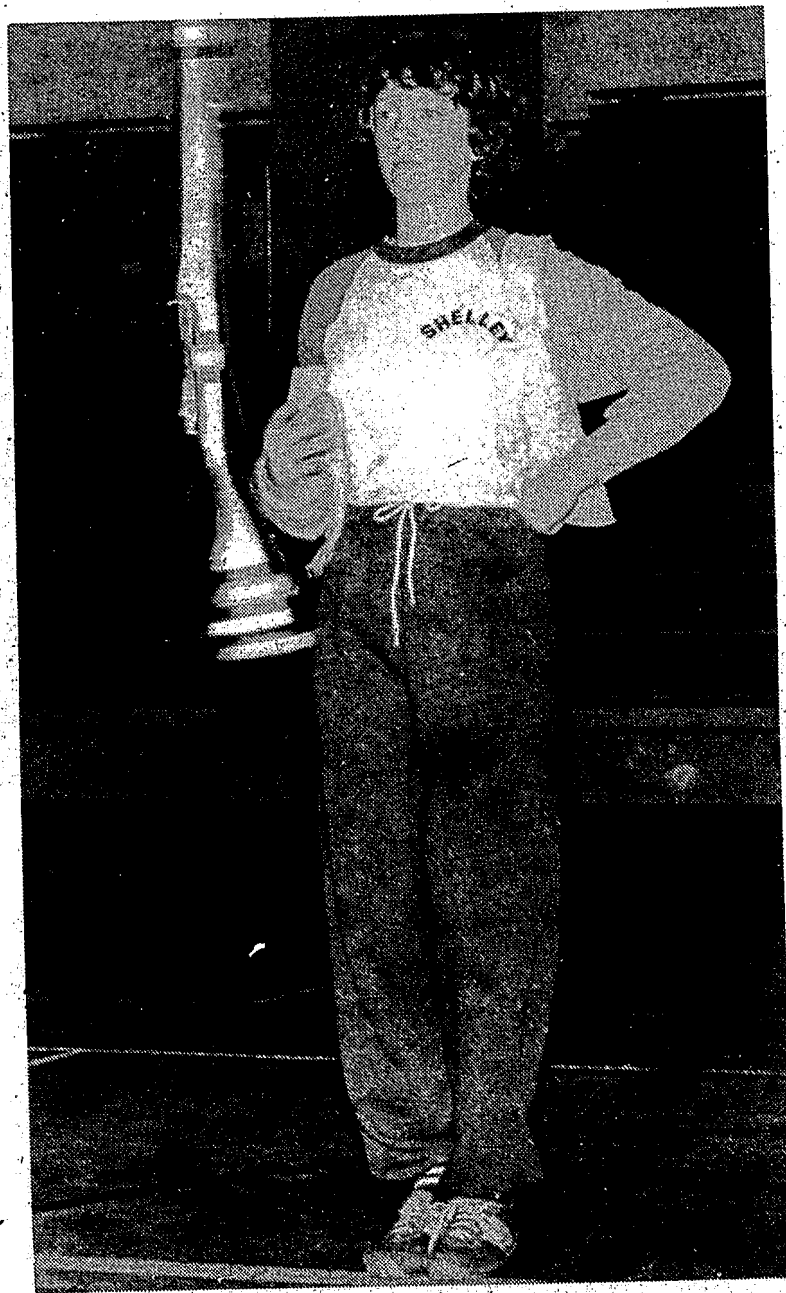

When I came home, the dog was gone, mourned by none. Anne said it ran away. I wonder if Anne gave it a road map and packed a lunch.

No matter what the conditions, the dog was gone; the only thing I am reasonably sure of is that it didn't jump off a cliff. I believe the highest point in New Orleans is 11 feet above sea level.

Winter Guard marches on

The Clarkston High School Winter Guard was hard at work recently, preparing for the Clarkston Midwest Open Color Guard Contest held at CHS Feb. 21. Competing were schools from Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Canada. The Clarkston guard placed second at a competition in Flushing Feb. 22 and also posted second-place finishes in recent competitions in Chicago and Hoffman Estates, Ill., narrowly missing first-place honors. Members of the CHS Color Guard are Kelly Bartlett, Jane Coleman, Debbie Dobson, Cindy Hawley, Shari Santala, Karen Soltes, Nancy Soltes, Karen Thomas, Lori Thomas, Sally Vandermark, Dennis Farmer, Laura Little, Shelley Little, Matt Pambid, Debbie Ragatz, Wendy Ripley, Deanna Brewer, Dyane Mandilk, Artha Sans and Kristi Swanson. # Man on billboard lives right here

Cowans find contentment with Clarkston-Independence life-style

Ask Dr. John Cowan about the mammoth billboard on I-75 advertising his chiropractic office, and a slight furrow wrinkles his brow.

In an effort to conceal a grin, his 34-year-old wife Linda, covers her mouth with her hands and laughs softly.

"I thought painting a picture was such a simple job," he shakes his head sadly. "That sign is going to be coming down soon."

For two years, the billboard marked the side of the road and read, "Still Suffering?," advertising John's Waterford office.

Then, six months ago when he joined radio station WPON for a weekly call-in chiropractic talk show, he commissioned the sign company to mark the advent of his new venture and paint his portrait.

"I called them three months ago to try and change it, and they did. But it's no better," he said of the art work.

"It's surprising how many people who've never noticed the sign, see it now and comment on it," he mustered a laugh.

Each Tuesday afternoon, from 12:30 to 1 p.m., John dons headphones at WPON and talks health and chiropractics with nutritionalists, podiatrists and other specialists.

"At first it was hard and a little scary," he said. "I found it hard to sit down in front of a microphone and talk to someone who wasn't there.

"You can't see your audience, or feel them, or watch them respond," he said. "Yet, you have to bring across something you know is interesting and whatever you do has to be done right."

At one point, for a brief second, John's oldest son Jeremy got into the radio act.

"At the end of my dad's show," 8-year-old Jeremy said, "I got to say Merry Christmas. I was kind of nervous."

The Cowans have lived in Deer Wood subdivision for the past four years, and from all appearances and the praises they have for Independence Township, they plan on staying around for quite some time.

John's latest endeavor involves his temporarily designed chiropractic office slated for construction near the intersection of Sashabaw and Waldon roads.

John says the office will be a monument within the chiropractic profession, as one of the largest facilities in the states, handling 1,000 patients per week and employing four chiropractors.

He's quick to thank his wife for success, for without Linda, John wouldn't be where he is today.

"Linda put me through school," he said. "We were living in Iowa at the time and she was teaching fourth grade."

"Now," Linda said, "I work at his office one day a week and keep the books, do the payroll and take care of the account. The other days Jason keeps me busy."

Country Living

The Dr. John Cowan family of Independence Township is a unit. They enjoy most of the same hobbies, but the true test of togetherness comes when they man and crew their 41-foot Chris-Craft, "Forever One." Summer weekends are spent boating the Great Lakes.

Jason, the couple's 2½-year-old son, makes grand use of the family's spacious home expending uncalculable amounts of energy.

From April to September, the Cōwans crew their 41-foot Chris Craft and take to the waters of the Great Lakes.

"The boat is named 'Forever One,' John said. "Because when we're all on it we're forever one. We all enjoy boating. On Friday afternoon Linda has the car packed and ready to go to Port Huron.

"We bought the boat late last summer," Linda said. "We picked it up in Bay City, and then went on to Mackinac Island and stayed five days. Some people go to their cottage, we go to the boat."

Jeremy takes pride in his seven-foot dingy with a two-horsepower engine, but laments, "Right now it has a hole in it."

John says Jeremy is a "pool shark," avidly practicing on the family's pool table.

In addition, he's a hot-shot skier with a string of patches marking the arm of his jacket as proof.

He's a member of the Winter Walden Ski Club out of Birmingham and each Saturday hits the slopes at Pine Knob.

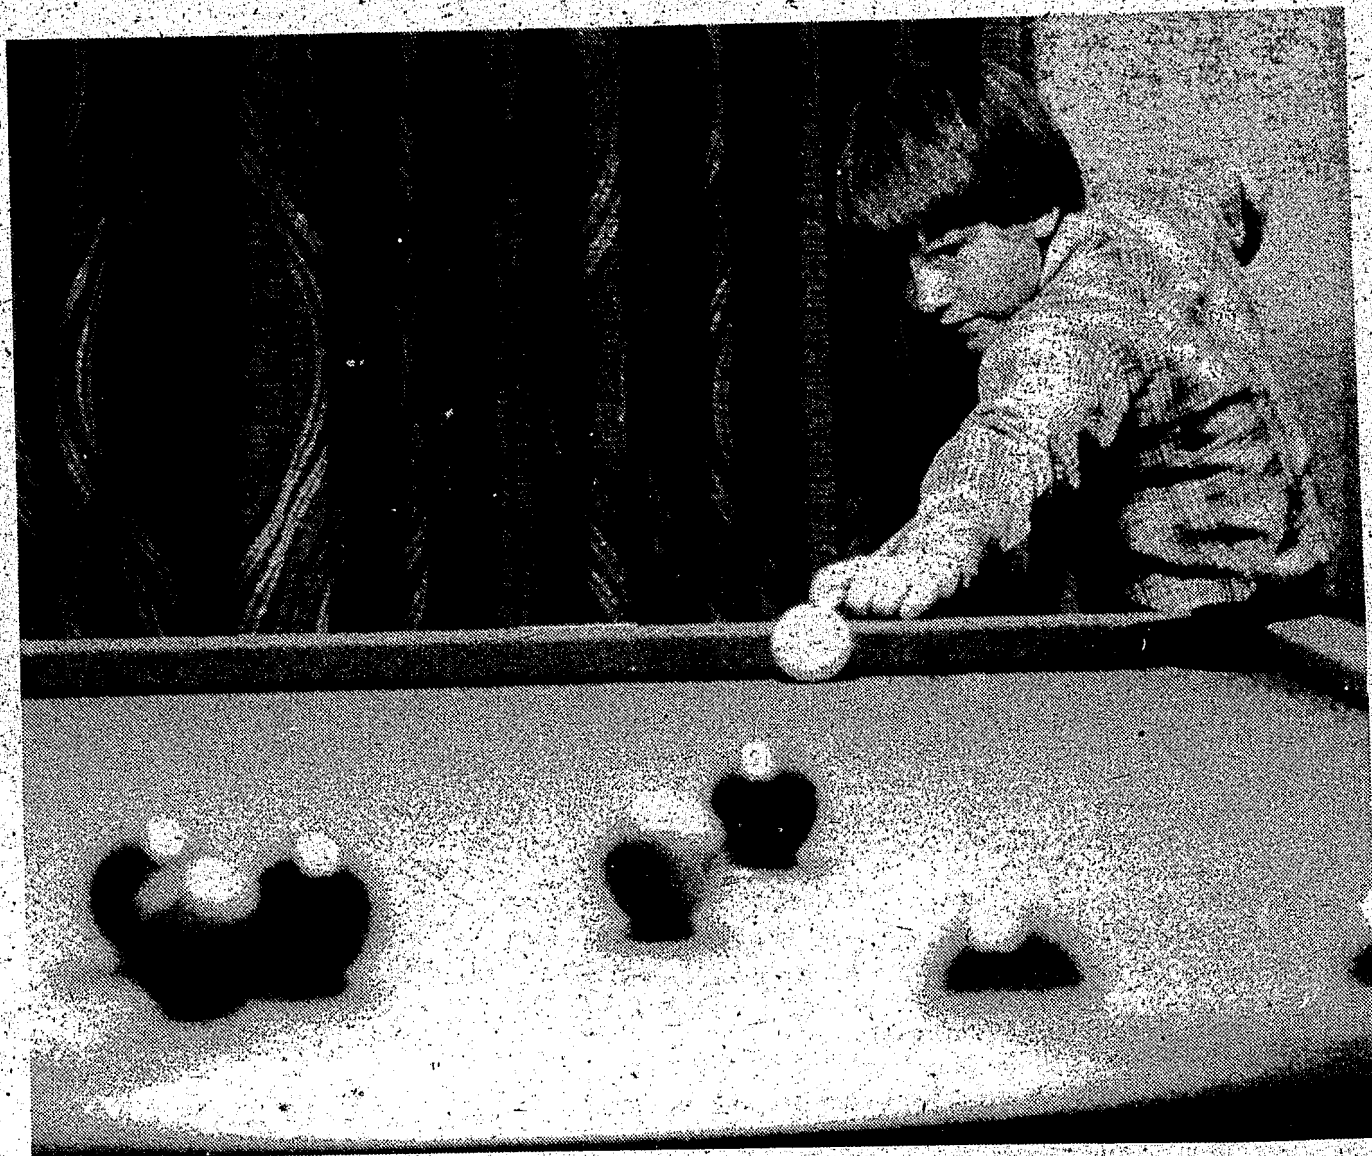

John patronizes Pine Knob too, but in a different season for different reasons.

"I'm a big golfer," John said. "I play what I think is the best course around—Pine Knob. I was a club member when they were private and they've kept it up just as good now that they're public."

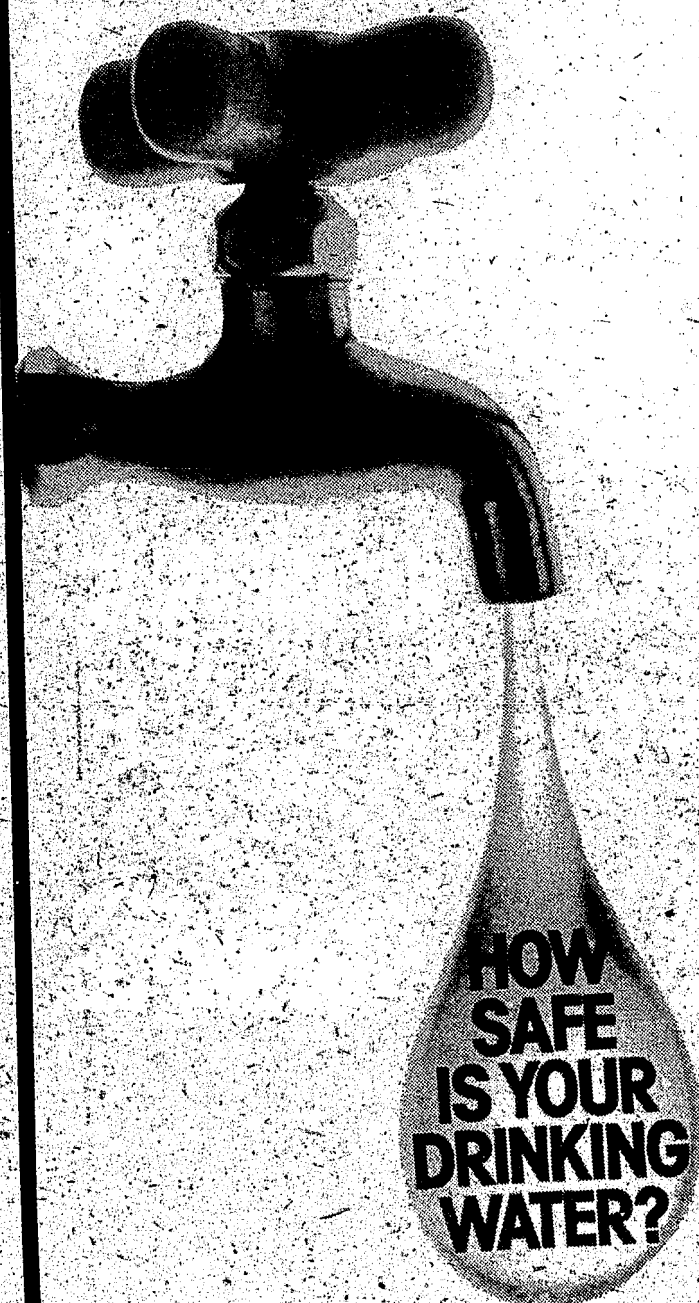

That's the Cōwans.

They live, work and have fun in the Clarkston—Independence area.

Pool shark Jeremy lines up the ball, takes aim, and shoots into the corner pocket. It's become a daily event after school to grab a pool cue and practice.

Imagine visiting a neighbor's house, knocking on the door—and being greeted by a robot. Picture a mechanical maid dwelling in your home, washing windows, doing the laundry and vacuuming the living room without complaint.

Scenes like these aren't just the product of a science fiction writer's fertile imagination.

They're a look ahead into the next 20 years by Chuck Phyle, chief executive officer and board chairman of Universal Data Inc./AST Inc., a computer manufacturer which recently opened its corporate headquarters in Independence Township.

Domestic robots and computers are on the horizon, Phyle says, soon to make their transition from television's "Outer Limits" and "Twilight Zone" to the average American household.

"You're going to see a home computer in every home by the year 2000," Phyle predicts. "It'll be controlling heating and cooling, balancing your checkbook, providing education and games for your kids."

"And by then we'll have the technology to build robots that can answer the door, vacuum, do the laundry, clean the bathroom. Robotics are the biggest thing you'll see in the year 2000."

"We already have the mechanical technology to make the physical robot," he adds. "But the electronics is still too huge to fit into a practical-sized robot."

"But that's coming."

Some simple robots are already on the job, Phyle notes, performing tasks ranging from welding work on auto assembly lines to a machine that travels through the corridors of Michigan Bell's Southfield office delivering mail.

Continuing progress in the field is an inevitable as tomorrow morning's sunrise as companies compete to produce ever cheaper and more efficient "chips"—the tiny electronic components that are the heart and soul of modern computer technology.

"It's a constant battle," Phyle says. "We're in an extremely competitive market. The best chips we have today will be obsolete in 24 months—that's how fast the technology is advancing."

"Five years ago, this unit would have been as large as this desk," he says, picking up one of his company's portable computers from his large office desk.

"This device right here can store 65,000 characters," Phyle adds proudly. "That's between three and four hours of constant keying on the keyboard, and all that information is stored in a portable device."

The hand-held computer has a myriad of functions, he says. Delivery men can use it to keep track of their orders, feeding the compiled information into a main computer at the end of their routes and having all of their orders ready the next day.

Utility companies such as Detroit Edison have expressed an interest in using the portable devices for meter reading, thus enabling the company to use fewer consumption estimates and more actual readings in billing its customers.

One of the portable computers ranges in price from $800 to $900 for the "Numeric" model which has only numbers on its keyboards, to $2,500 for the more sophisticated "Alpha" model, which can store letters and words as well as numbers.

Good news for harried housecleaners

By the year 2000, we'll have technology to build robots to do mundane chores, says Chuck Phyle

And contrary to the inflationary times, prices in the computer technology field often tend to go down—as evidenced by the price trends of such consumer items as calculators and electronic watches over the past few years.

"When a new chip first comes out, it's necessary to get back all of the money invested in its research and development," Phyle explains. "Once you get that back, the prices drop."

"It's like looking for oil—sometimes your investment pans out, sometimes it doesn't. You've got to constantly invest in R and D."

Phyle says he realizes that many people have fears and reservations about growing computer and robot technology, but dismisses the fears as unfounded.

"The worst thing that might happen is a robot might bump into a wall," he says. "We're still dealing with a machine, and a machine doesn't have a mind. It can only do what it's been programmed to do—it can't make a decision to be 'good' today and 'bad' tomorrow."

"And every home will have a control panel where you can turn off all of the electric power if there's any kind of a problem," he says.

"Businessmen aren't scared to death of computers anymore," Phyle adds. "The executives coming up now have grown up with it and had a smattering of computer courses in college—they understand that a computer is just a valuable business tool, just like a typewriter."

"That attitude change is making the devices easier to market."

Phyle moved with his wife and four children to the Clarkston area last September, and was followed by business partners Daniel Adkin and Katherine Korzetz. A third partner, Frank Desrochers, makes his home in Davison.

"Our business is centrally located here," Phyle says. "And for my family, we have a country atmosphere, a good school system, nice homes and a decent class of people."

—Al Zawacky

Katherine Korzetz's job involves the "software" aspect of computer production, which entails placing the desired program into the machine's memory. The programming is done line by line at this special keyboard.

As vice president of engineering, Frank Desrochers handles computer design and construction—the "hardware" aspect of computer production.

Letter to a thief:

Robbery victim recreates traumas caused by thefts

Dearest Thief,

In the summer, you took my Grumman canoe that rested by the creek. I was quiet.

In January, you took my Toro snowblower. I was still quiet. I trusted you. Surely you would not invade my home.

On January 28, I arrived home from work to find the door wide open. Still trusting you, I came inside to a terror known only to one who's been similarly victimized.

"To protest in silence makes cowards of men." I cannot be quiet any longer. My beloved community cannot be quiet any longer.

The blatant breaking and entering endemic in our township must be stopped. I prayerfully call upon each one of my community to stop you—NOW! Realistically, any one of them could be next.

You already know what once was in my home, but listen, dearest thief, let me tell you what's inside me.

Six years ago, I lost my husband to our unconstitutional "no fault" divorce.

Devastated, I did not have the strength to go on until Dr. James O'Neill said to me, "Let him go on and live your life in dignity."

I accepted the challenge and I assumed full financial, physical and moral responsibility for myself and family.

When I felt overcome by the demands of overtask, my son, Kurt, would remind me, "Mom, we're doing all right and we're living our lives in dignity."

Through the grace of God and the help of many good people in this community, my children have gone on to happy, productive lives.

I've taught them to do their own thing, as long as it doesn't offend anyone. I've taught them to give back what's been given to them.

My daughter Sigrid is giving back already. After graduating from college, she served a year in Vista, now holds a government job and enjoys serving her Girl Scout troop (comprised of children all from "broken" homes).

Eric and Leif, still in college, will give back some day. They feel the desire already.

Kurt is in the Navy. He will give back.

We are grateful survivors. Life has been good to us. We're a strong family, in a good home. We lived in peace in the woods.

Then you entered our lives.

In all probability I have welcomed you into our home. Perhaps I've even embraced you, as I'm given to greeting my children's friends.

You've been in my home. You knew better where my pretties were than I. Your friends know who you are and I know what you are.

It's important that you know what I am, for you must also know what you, too, will fight.

Dearest thief, have you ever heard any response from your victims? Do you want a glimpse of the terror your plundering presented to this one?

Light up! Maybe you can handle it!

I came in through the open door, saw the broken window on the door, the strange object lying on the floor (the glass cutter that cut right through the glass with an Operation Identification sticker on it).

Bewildered, I innocently came upstairs to terror. I walked into my upheaved bedroom, hysterically picked up the phone and could only utter over and over, "Oh my God."

Some way, my dearest neighbor and friend, Ethel Yoder was there. When the sheriff's deputies arrived, I still was hysterical as I sat on the stairs in my wide-brimmed hat and flowing black cape, uttering, "Oh my God; oh my God."

The deputies returned later to take the report after a friend drove to Troy to bring Kurt to me.

The next day, I couldn't cross the threshold of my bedroom. Ethel came over and cleaned up the debris.

Tom Pidd came and repaired my window. He stayed with me. Eric Richards stayed with me.

You know these fine young men who helped me. They care. They stayed with me until I could stay by myself.

I've gone from hysteria, to trauma, to anger, to continuing terror to a newly emerging, not so quiet acceptance.

One night the only way I could bring myself to come home was by repeating aloud the 23rd Psalm over and over. With God's help, I've come a long way in recovery. My strengths are returning.

I've decided not to run in fear of you. I've decided to hold the fort.

I've decided to fight you.

Did it ever occur to you what an impact your pilfering has had on your victim's life? Take another puff and I'll confide some of it to you.

You took my "Segovia's Favorite Encores" still on my stereo, but I can still hear the master.

You took my binoculars that always sat by my kitchen window in the winter. I can't see the precious black-capped chickadee on the suet ball—but you can't quiet his chirp.

You took my AM-FM radio and cassette player with my son Leif's tape, playing guitar and singing to his mother. I can hear him now.

You took an antique platinum diamond ring and platinum wedding band—the only tangible remnants of a marriage of 25 years. But you can't take away the blessed sanctity of those 25 years.

You took my antique jewelry as you dumped my dresser drawers into the pillowcase. You cannot understand how precious the antique silver locket with the pink gold bird imposed on it was to me.

It was an engagement gift from Aunt Mary. But you can't rob me of the love this dying saintly woman gave to me.

The oval antique pin of leaves and pearls was also a gift to me. The pink gold scrolled locket watch with the heart-shaped slide with a pearl in it was my grandmother's. It should have been handed down to my daughter, not to you.

You took the Eagle pins my son Eric and Leif pinned on their mother when they made Eagle Scout. But you cannot rob me of the job I felt as they obtained their goals through the caring efforts of my fine scout leaders.

A silver tea set, given to me by my mother-in-law, was sacrificed in the last indignity of my "no fault" divorce, known as the property settlement.

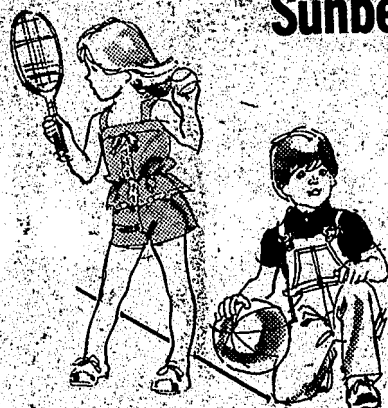

You cannot rob me of the integrity restored to me when I worked overtime to grace my tea cart with a Royal Holland Pewter tea set.

When Kurt reached 18 years of age, I treated myself to a Royal Holland Pewter vase to hold a rose I would buy for myself to remind myself that I have been a good mother.

The vase is gone, but I am still a good mother.

No, my dearest thief, you do not know. You do not care. As long as you bombard your brain with exogenous effects, you can't care.

But I care. Home is sanctity to me and my children. I've decided to hold the fort and fight you. It will take a long time to replace some things that brought me pleasure.

It goes without saying, some treasures cannot be replaced. Since you've entered my home, I have acquired some new possessions.

My kids do not call me "that crazy little old lady who lives on the hill" for nothing.

I no longer trust you. I know you. My neighbors know you. They too will fight you.

Restoring the American Dream begins with me, right here on my land.

My beloved community does not suffer from apathy. It's simply that they do not know how ruthlessly rampant your working network is.

After reading of the young man's music store being robbed repeatedly, I decided to come out of the woods and speak through you, dearest thief, to my beloved community.

We all moved to Clarkston for tranquility and peaceful surroundings for our families.

The time has come for protest. Protest and action, taken against you!

I'm not providing for you any more. You've cost me approximately $7,000 in these past six months.

I've provided for your potential return, my neighbors have.

As you know, you have stripped this place of all the good stuff, except the most valuable thing left. ME!

And I'm telling you, "I am only one, but I am one. I cannot do everything, but I can do something and what I can do, I will do."

I am a 5 foot, 2 inch tall woman. With God's help, I will live in peace in my home.

I will hold the fort, with my very life, if necessary. So be it!

My dearest thief, life is God's gift to us. Our gift to Him is to live the best life we can live.

Remember the seventh? "Thou shalt not steal."

Listen, listen!

Déjà Vu

Like the deliverer of mail, the Twin Pines milkman trudges through rain, sleet, snow and hail.

Up with the sun, he stumbles through dew laden backyards with barking dogs, skirts the mailman's traditional territory—the front porch—and circles round the back of the house to the outside kitchen wall.

His target—the milk chute.

Inside his truck rolls a dairy store on wheels.

Orange juice, cottage cheese, coffee cream, ice cream, chips and chocolate milk. Always during the holidays Twin Pines offers special ice cream molds in appropriate shapes and festive colors.

But, the one item most every family calls for is good ol' white milk.

Today, it comes in red and white striped cartons with the stamp of twin, green pines.

Until 12 years ago, the milk arrived in big glass bottles.

The milkman would first remove the old bottles, cleanly rinsed by the conscientious housewife, and he'd replace them with bottles of fresh milk.

The big glass bottles were heavy, and had special easy-to-grip indentations on the side, except for the frustrated hands of a tiny tot.

The glass shattered splendidly on the kitchen floor, blanketing the walls and ceiling with milk when the heavy bottle proved victor over a child too impatient to wait for mom.

Although the milkman's still around, he's an endangered species, and Twin Pines reports as few as 165 still making home deliveries.

On the other hand, the milk chute and glass milk bottles are extinct. Where did they go?

The answers took the combined efforts of local builder Joe Noll, owner of Stylemaster Builders, and Thomas Argott, president of the Detroit-based Twin Pines Farm Dairy.

Says Noll, the demise of the milk chute came when the milkman failed to follow the migration to suburbs.

"We don't put them in homes anymore, unless someone requests one," he said. "There's no need to. People buy their milk at the store. The milkman didn't follow the city people into suburbia."

The glass bottle was replaced by cartons in the late 60s, Argott said. The move boiled down to what was the most cost-effective.

"They've gone by the wayside because of the cost involved in glass bottles," he said.

They had to be washed by hand, and the amount of labor and the cost of solutions and soap to clean the bottles was reflecting in the consumer price.

Aggressive supermarket competition proved too much and Twin Pines switched to cartons in an effort to offer lower prices, he said.

"We don't have a pulse on it, but it seems the cartons are more popular. As for transportation costs, it's more economical to load cartons. They enable the milkman to put more in the truck and serve more customers," Argott said.

The milk chute and glass milk bottle curdle forgotten in the world of nostalgia.
