Women join in suit against school

They charge misrepresentation; PBI attorney dubs suit 'cheap crap'

By Marilyn Trumper

Seven women, two of whom are Clarkston-area residents, have filed a joint lawsuit in Oakland County Circuit Court against Pontiac Business Institute's Oxford School of Business, charging the school misrepresented itself to students.

The school's attorney, Dennis L. Carmichael, called the suit "cheap crap" and "nonsense at the highest level," and refused to respond to the allegations, as did the school's President Howard Weaver.

Kathleen Warren and Dawn Drake, both of Independence Township, join women from Oxford, Lake Orion, North Branch and Lapeer alleging they were told credits from the school would transfer to other colleges, but, according to Warren, they would transfer only to Oakland Community College.

The suit also alleges the women did not receive the quality of education they expected. Instead, according to Warren, classes were combined with little or no lecturing.

The former students charge they expected an associate's degree upon graduation, but learned they would receive an associate in commerce certificate, which is five hours less, said the women's attorney, T. Gordon Scupholm II of Bloomfield Hills.

Warren said incentive to enroll in the school in June of 1980 was sparked by the understanding she would receive an associate's degree in six terms or 54 weeks, instead of two years as in a community college.

"One of the school's directors said I must have misunderstood at the time when I questioned it later," she said. "I didn't and neither did the other girls who thought they were getting an associate's. When I found out I wouldn't get the degree, in my fourth term, I quit."

"I feel I've wasted my time and money," she said. "As a secretarial school, I think it's pretty decent, but for that you only need certain skills. The rest of it (the school's academic classes) I think are pretty much a waste of time."

According to Warren, her summer accounting class was in a room shared with mathematics and data processing classes, and involved no instructor's lectures, because verbal discussions would distract other students.

Instead, she said, students worked out of books and completed assignments given by instructors.

Scupholm said the women are asking the court for a return on their investment, which for Warren exceeds $2,400.

Pontiac Business Institute's attorney negated the suit.

"It's nonsense at the highest level," Carmichael said. "This school has been historically a fine school for the past 80 years and never has a suit been filed—this is the first.

"I'll rigorously defend it. It's silliness and nonsense on the part of those people. We don't make the kinds of statements they're alleging," he said.

Amusement park plans still on for Pine Knob

Co-owner Joseph Locricchio says he's waiting for 'opportune moment'

Plans for "The Wonderful World of Pine Knob" are still on the drawing board and any announcement to the contrary is "premature," says Joseph Locricchio, co-owner of Pine Knob Investment Co.

In May, when officials of Pine Knob Music Theatre held the annual meeting with Independence Township residents, theater General Manager Joel DeShane indicated plans for the amusement park had been shelved.

"Mr. Joel DeShane has no knowledge beyond the music theater of what goes on in my business," Locricchio said. "Plans for The Wonderful World of Pine Knob are at best delayed—not shelved—not forgotten. I have my zoning and the right to do what I want."

The proposed 12-ride amusement park on 2.5 acres will be developed "at the opportune moment," Locricchio said.

Last summer Locricchio operated one ride, the Himalayan, outside the theater before and after concerts. Independence Township spent two months encouraging him to submit revised final site plans of the proposed amusement park, ticketing Locricchio for each day the ride illegally ran.

In August, Locricchio finally submitted the required information and the Himalayan operated for the remainder of the music season and was then disassembled for the winter.

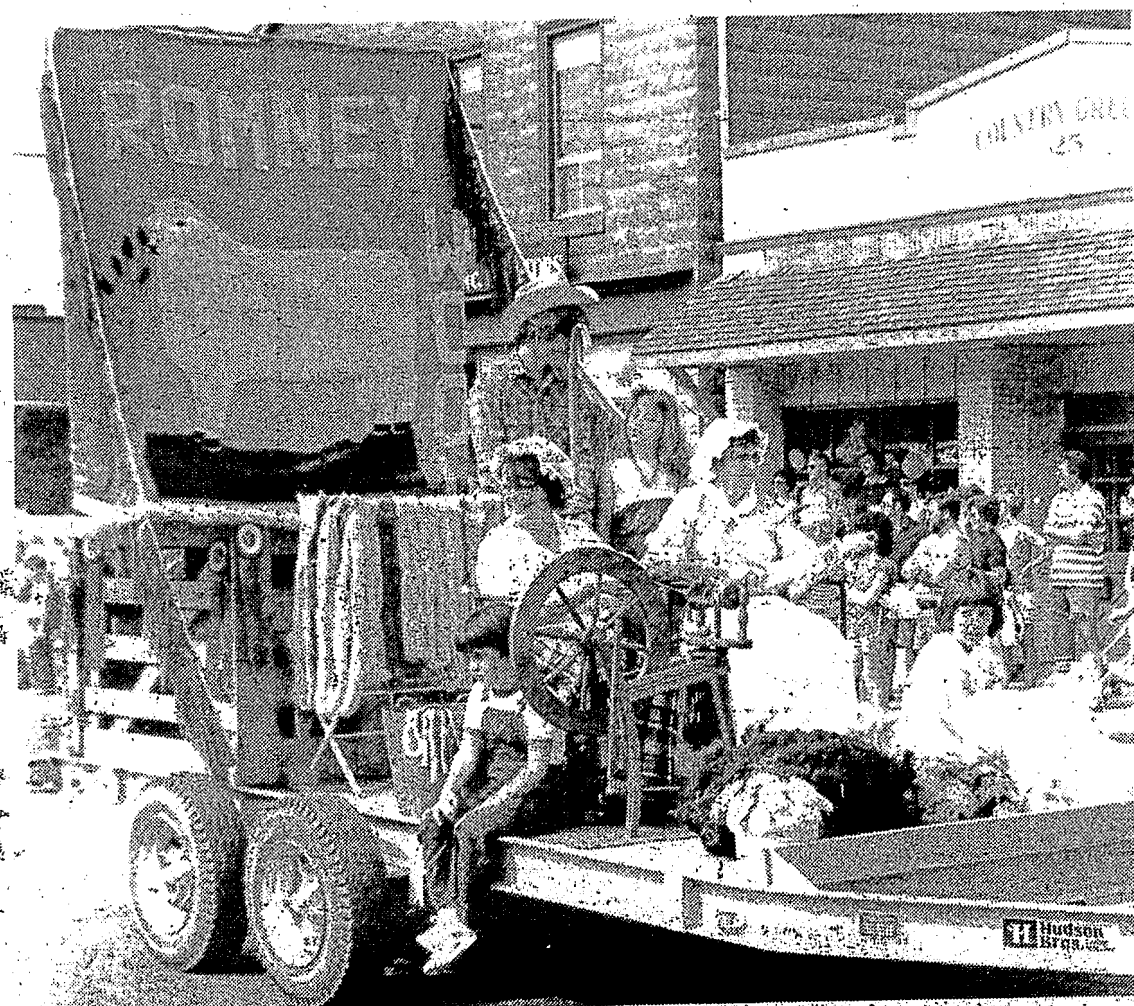

The ride is absent this year, "because I didn't want it," Locricchio said.

450 apply for 65 jobs

By Marilyn Trumper

They came from as far north as Davison and as far east as Rochester—but most of them came from the Independence Springfield township area.

One was an out-of-work waiter from the Las Vegas Playboy Club.

The line began in the lobby, traveled out the door and along the bridge located at the rear of the Clarkston Mills Mall, outside what's soon to be Foxy's at the Mill, the newest of the Harris Machus Enterprises.

June 30, the advertised first day of interviewing and application taking, had in excess of 200 applicants, said Judi Roberts, director of personnel and communications.

Into the second day, applications had totaled 450 to fill approximately 65 positions, she said.

"When I arrived the first day at a quarter after nine, there were 75 people already lined up at the door. Some waited four hours for an interview and the ad said to appear between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m.," she said.

Most of those standing in line were Clarkston-area residents, according to Roberts.

"One of the questions we ask involves transportation," she said. "A majority of those questioned said, 'Oh, if something happens to my car, I'll walk to work. I only live five minutes away.'"

The restaurant plans a late July opening which is contingent upon transfer of the liquor license, said John Wood, vice-president and general manager of Harris Machus Enterprises.

Red-faced dad returns sign

The red-faced father of a graduating senior has retruned The Gift Market sign stolen June 10 from the store's southwest wall.

"I'm grateful to get my sign back and I have the sign company working right now to get it back up and repair it," said Hazel Pill, owner of The Gift market in the Clarkston Mills Mall.

It was nice he saw to it that it was returned. I think he felt it was something which should have been returned," she added.

According to Pill, the embarrassed father spotted the sign in his basement—and after questioning—found it had been a graduation gift to his daughter by kids who "showed up" to her graduation party.

"It was a graduation gift, like giving her The Gift Market," Pill said, frowning. "I will say the father was embarrassed and said he wanted to clean the sign up before returning it. I guess it was really a mess."

When the sign was stolen June 10, Pill's flood light and siding were also damaged. At the time she termed the theft a "graduation prank."

"I'm just glad to have it back now—but I hope I'll have it up in time for the Fourth of July," she said, referring to the hundreds of people expected to flood Clarkston's downtown district for the parade.

Dale S. Wilder, Whoopee Bowl owner, dies

Dale S. Wilder, owner of the Whoopee Bowl in Springfield Township, succumbed to cancer July 3. Wilder, 72, had lived in Springfield Township about 34 years.

In 1947, when he and his wife, Marguerite, and daughter, Donna, arrived in the township, they made plans for a recreation area at the site where the Whoopee Bowl now sits.

They named it the Whoopee Bowl—a place to have fun—and began working on their dream. But the ice-cold spring-fed lake worked against the resort plan, and gradually what began as a resort, and then became a bait business turned into what the Whoopee Bowl is today, Donna said.

"He always said the Whoopee Bowl was a place people could go where they could get something they couldn't get someplace else," Donna said.

While the business does a large volume of trade in items like mufflers and polyurethane foam, the goods run the gamut from marbles and bumper stickers to nuts and bolts.

But the underlying theme of the Whoopee Bowl perhaps best describes her father, Donna said.

"He wanted something for people who couldn't afford to go out and buy new," she said. "It goes along with the way he was always helping people—he was a rock on the outside, a marshmallow in the middle."

Along the way, the Wilders cared for seven foster children from Mexico whose family they met during their yearly trips there before a fire destroyed the original Whoopee Bowl in 1965.

"Whatever he could do for people, he'd do."

The children were helped to learn English and to prepare for better jobs before they returned to Mexico, Donna said.

"He was just a very caring person," Donna said. "Whatever he could do for people, he'd do."

After the fire in 1965, some of that help came back to Wilder as he rebuilt the business without benefit of insurance for the buildings or the contents.

"He started out from scratch," Donna said. "The people who had been supplying him in the past, they all helped him out as he had helped them."

Three years ago, the home her father had designed was built alongside the business on Dixie Highway. The grass-covered roof attracted interest, not only because it looked different, but because it was energy efficient.

The savings in energy had not prompted its construction, however, Donna said, but rather it was her father's love of animals.

"That was a dream of his that he had for 30 years," she said. "He always enjoyed animals. He always dreamed of having a grass roof where the deer could graze."

Despite her father's death, the Whoopee Bowl shall stay open, with Don Hopson continuing as its manager.

"(Hopson) moved in with us when he was 13—he's been with us over 30 years now," Donna said. "He's the manager, and especially over the past year, he's taken full charge."

Mrs. Wilder and Donna and her husband Orval will also continue to assist with the business, she said.

The memorial service for Dale Wilder was held July 7 at the Lewis E. Wint Funeral Home and entombment followed in Ottawa Park Cemetery, Independence Township.

Wilder was a member of the Davisburg Rotary Club and a veteran of World War II.

He is survived by his wife, Marguerite; daughter, Mrs. Orval (Donna) Marlowe of Clarkston; seven foster children in Mexico; brother, Clifford Wilder of Illinois; and sister, Dorothy Martin of Florida.

The family suggests memorial tributes to the Clarkston First Church of God or the Davisburg Rotary Club.

Dungeons game gets bum rap

Dear Editor:

I would like to voice the opinion of a large group of local Dungeons and Dragons players.

We feel that a great injustice is being done to this game. Lately, some people have begun degrading Dungeons and Dragons, as well as its players. Some even went as far as to call us players "Devil worshippers."

I disagree with this as much as anyone else who understands the game. The key is, those who don't understand the game are those who are against it.

The game is not a cult, as some people would like you to believe. It's just plain fun to play. So naturally, those who try it usually enjoy it and continue playing.

It does nothing but benefit the individual who plays it. Not only does it give the individual an imagination (something that television has almost eliminated in our society), but it also keeps the mind very active, and (not to mention keeping us off the streets) it has many other advantages which are too numerous to count.

The point I'm trying to make is: Why should someone who doesn't even understand the concept of the game try to condemn it? It's like convicting a man before reading the charges, it simply shouldn't happen.

Speaking on behalf of my fellow players, I hope that in the future, people will try to understand the concept before condemning the idea as evil. This goes for any issue, as well as Dungeons and Dragons.

Report on 'modest excursion'

Tourees in number 21.3 met on the site of the Caribou Inn, one of Clarkston's earlier enterprises, at 9 a.m., Sunday, 28 June 1981, to follow the modest excursions sponsored by The Bike Route, one of Clarkston's new endeavors.

The .3 was a little blond urchin who was being towed behind a bike in a two-wheeled conveyance called—not a buggy—but a "Bugger."

The bikers ranged from kids in casual cutoffs to adults in natty, color-coordinated ensembles complete with riding gloves and crash helmets.

The master plan offered the choice of a five-mile jaunt after first opting for the 15 miler, but being prevented by strident voices and strong arms from riding in the bugger.

Our group completed a leisurely, pleasant five-mile loop in an hour and wondered if those who went three times as far had three times the fun.

Had one of those "Happiness is" experiences the other day. Daydreaming while driving the expressway the speedometer (never could get used to odometer) read 65mph.

A quick glance in the rearview mirror, and there's that darn blue bubble atop a car behind me.

Happiness is: Learning that the blue bubble behind you when exceeding the speed limit is the helmet on a motorcyclist behind the car behind you.

Little kids never ride their bikes beside the road, always right down the middle.

That touch of class shown by chefs or restaurant owners can work both ways... both leaving lasting impressions.

Did you hear the one about the three couples from Clarkston who went to the Polish festival in Hamtramck on Friday?

The festival was on Saturday.

It all started down at the neighborhood beach. Someone had a yen for kielbasa. It was decided that we would all gather together and head for the city. All we knew was that the Polish festival was in a stadium somewhere in Hamtramck.

Once we got down there, it took awhile to find the correct location. We knew we were in trouble when we drove up and saw only a few people working on flower-covered booths. Sure enough, when some of us got out to check, we were told to come back the next day.

All wasn't lost, however. We then decided to go down to the Detroit River front to the Freedom Festival offering that weekend.

We really had a good time. After meandering past all the food booths, we each chose dinner and the variety was truly international—Greek salad, shish kebab, Italian sausage and, of course, kielbasa.

We listened to music, watched people and looked at boats docked at the river.

The highlight was a ride on the trolley car—to the end of the line and back again for 35 cents each way.

I had forgotten how much I like large cities. While Clarkston has more than its share of good reasons to live here, it doesn't hold a candle to a large city when it comes to an evening of entertainment.

The next day, we were talking to some people about our travels and the conversation turned to purse snatching. I guess there's always a good reason not to spend time in a city, but I can think of a whole bunch of reasons, every bit as valid, not to leave my house.

As for our trip to Detroit, I have but one regret.

We missed the "best legs" contest held for men during the actual Polish festival the next night. Now that's just campy enough to suit my style.

High above Main Street, this enterprising lad's found his vantage point for parade watching. Just able to peer over the window's ledge he looks below and enjoys the unfolding events.

A blemished background

by Jim Fitzgerald

It would be discouraging to be a pimply teenager today and read that Maureen Reagan still has pimples at age 40.

When I was a teenager, I had awful pimples and always tried to hide my face behind my shoulders, which was difficult because I didn't have any shoulders. I was the only guy on the beach who swam in a T-shirt. My parents and other caring persons tried to make me feel better by saying I would soon grow out of my pimples.

"When you are 20, you will look back and laugh at the days when you thought pimples would ruin your life," my mother said.

But what hackneyed phrases do mothers murmur to their acned offspring today in the face of Maureen Reagan's revealing advertising? She is endorsing Acne-Satin lotion in TV and radio commercials.

"Let me tell you, it certainly made my life easier during that frantic election campaign," she endorses.

If the daughter of the president of the United States can't get rid of her pimples in 40 years, what hope is there for the children of ordinary citizens?

Also, there is the added fact that Maureen's mother is Jane Wyman, who was a glamorous movie actress, privy to Hollywood beauty secrets, while Maureen was growing up. If the daughter of a gorgeous star can't grow out of her pimples, what hope is there for the children of parents who don't even have a privy?

If I were a pimply teenager during the Reagan administration, perhaps my mother would keep up my hope for an unblemished future by claiming Maureen didn't have pimples when she was a teenager but, rather, got them for the first time when she was 40. Maureen's late bloomers could have been caused by her father's election campaign, as she implies in her testimonial.

Unlike candy and Coca-Cola, presidential elections are not hackneyed reasons for acned faces, but they are feasible. Some medical authorities say pimples can be caused by nerves, and it would be understandable if Maureen were nervous when her father ran for the biggest job in the world. However, it is doubtful that this is the reason Maureen was hired to say Acne-Satin helped her make it through her father's campaign.

Not many children have fathers who are presidential candidates, and I'm sure Acne-Satin wouldn't aim a national TV-radio advertising campaign at so narrow an audience. It would be much cheaper for Maureen to make personal calls on the candidates' children and give them free samples of Acne-Satin.

To me, it appears likely that Acne-Satin is paying Maureen Reagan for being who she is, not for being a pimply 40-year-old. And thereby she has opened herself to charges of celebrity name-dropping, the same mistake made by her brother Michael.

He received much criticism for using his dad's name in an attempt to sell military equipment. People don't believe he mentioned "my father's leadership" in a sales letter simply to point out that there is now an enthusiastic gun buyer in the White House. They believe he mentioned the relationship to influence potential customers who would be impressed by doing business with a prince.

Likewise, many people won't believe Maureen Reagan is mentioning "that frantic election campaign" because it gave her pimples but rather to influence pimply people who would be impressed by using the lotion used by a princess.

Maureen doesn't seem to care that, by admitting she is fighting pimples at age 40, she is disillusioning thousands of young Americans who believed it when their mothers said their pimples would disappear when they got out of their teens.

But I don't really care. I didn't write this column to warn that Maureen Reagan may someday take Billy Carter's place in the hearts of Libyans everywhere. I wrote it to point out that not even Cole Porter ever rhymed hackneyed with acned.

Davisburg facelift feasible—Walls

By Al Zawacky

To renovate or not to renovate—in downtown Davisburg, that is the question.

The answers were generally positive at a special meeting held last week at Springfield Township Hall, where residents and businesspersons gathered to listen to a county plan to renovate and restore downtown Davisburg.

"It's now in the hands of the business community," said Collin Walls, Springfield Township supervisor. "There was an awful lot of information given to them in a short period of time—the thing now is to give everyone time to absorb all that information and decide if the advice is worth pursuing."

Walls prompted the county study of Davisburg last year when he contacted Phil Dondero of the Oakland County Planning Commission to request ideas for improving Davisburg's appearance and economic climate.

The county responded with the study presented to township officials and residents at two special meetings June 20 and 27 at Springfield Township Hall.

Included in the county's plans are the installation of underground utilities, more greenery and landscaping and gas light style street lighting. Building facade renovation and improvement, along with a change to parallel from perpendicular parking on Broadway (Davisburg's "main street") were other key elements in the county's plan.

Each individual business owner would be responsible for the cost of the improvements to his or her building, said Walls, although the township is currently investigating the possibility of low interest loans or historical preservation funds available through the federal government to assist in the plan.

The program remains entirely voluntary, depending on the decision of the building owners, Walls stressed.

"It's not a grandiose plan," he said. "When we requested the study, we stressed the importance of it being economically feasible.

"I feel, when we look at what was presented, for the most part it's not real utopian or real expensive—it's just a matter of bringing out the features that are already there in the buildings.

"I think the program is both reasonable and cost-effective."

'Fun Day' to cap tennis tourney

On July 19, Sunday, will be "Fun Day" for the whole family at the 1981 Oakland County Tennis Tournament for the March of Dimes.

Coming to Deer Lake Racquet and Country Club July 10-19, with proceeds going to the March of Dimes, the tournament will conclude with Fun Day featuring food, drinks, music, entertainment, swimming and racquetball.

Participants can also view the tennis tournament finals and see a special exhibition by an internationally ranked Michelob Light tennis professional. Anheuser Busch, the brewers of Michelob Light, are sponsoring this year's tournament.

For a $50 contribution, persons can play the pro, and for $5 persons can participate in a "return the serve" contest.

Tickets for the Fun Day are $10 for adults and $2.50 for children 16 and under. Sales are going briskly, according to Jacqui Milzow, Deer Lake co-owner.

"It's really just a fun day for everyone," she says. "There are clowns, continuous entertainment, racquetball, swimming, tennis—everything's happening at once."

Persons wishing to buy tickets should act quickly, Milzow says, by calling Deer Lake at 625-8686. Deer Lake Racquet and Country Club is located at 6167 White Lake Rd., Independence Township.

Foster care resident moved

A 27-year-old developmentally disabled man who has been the brunt of neighbors' complaints for the past two years has been moved from 60 Waldon, Clarkston, to a new location.

"That atmosphere was such he couldn't grow there anymore," said Ron Cornelison, director of group homes for the Macomb Oakland Regional Center, the home's sponsoring agent.

"As a result of the opposition, the neighbors' intolerance of him, we've moved him to a less-restrictive environment better suited," he said.

Cornelison would not say where the man is living now, only that he left the home July 2.

Neighbors living around the home housing six developmentally disabled adults voiced concern over the behavior of one man, charging he screamed and yelled, broke windows, kicked walls and ran around outside yelling and screaming.

According to Cornelison, the house will have a new resident to replace the man who's left, but he could not say when.

Summer ball: Wolfpack showing promise

By Al Zawacky

The bad news was the final score—80-53.

The good news? It didn't count—the actual season is still five months away and there were more than a few individual bright spots.

Such was the case when Clarkston High School played Southfield High last week in one of a series of summer basketball scrimmages. Six 10-minute quarters were played, and Clarkston found itself on the short end of each score: 12-10, 9-4, 14-9, 13-8, 16-12 and 16-9.

Final cumulative tally: Southfield 80, Clarkston 53.

"It looks bad on paper, but we would have done things differently if this had been the regular season," said Larry Mahrle, Clarkston's junior varsity and assistant varsity basketball coach.

'I feel this team has the potential to win our league.'

—Larry Mahrle

"We would have played them a zone, for one thing—they (Southfield) did not shoot well from outside."

Even so, Southfield was no soft touch, having advanced to the regional finals last winter before bowing to Brother Rice by six points.

Mahrle lauded the play of Mike McCormick, Duane Cahill, Mike Dearborn and Rick Williams, four players who look to play prominent roles on the 1981-82 Varsity Wolfpack next winter.

"I feel this team has the potential to win our league," said Mahrle. "But you've got to play in the summer—that's why I'm glad to see so many kids at these scrimmages."

"And we play every kid—that's our philosophy in the summer. Other teams will play their starting five."

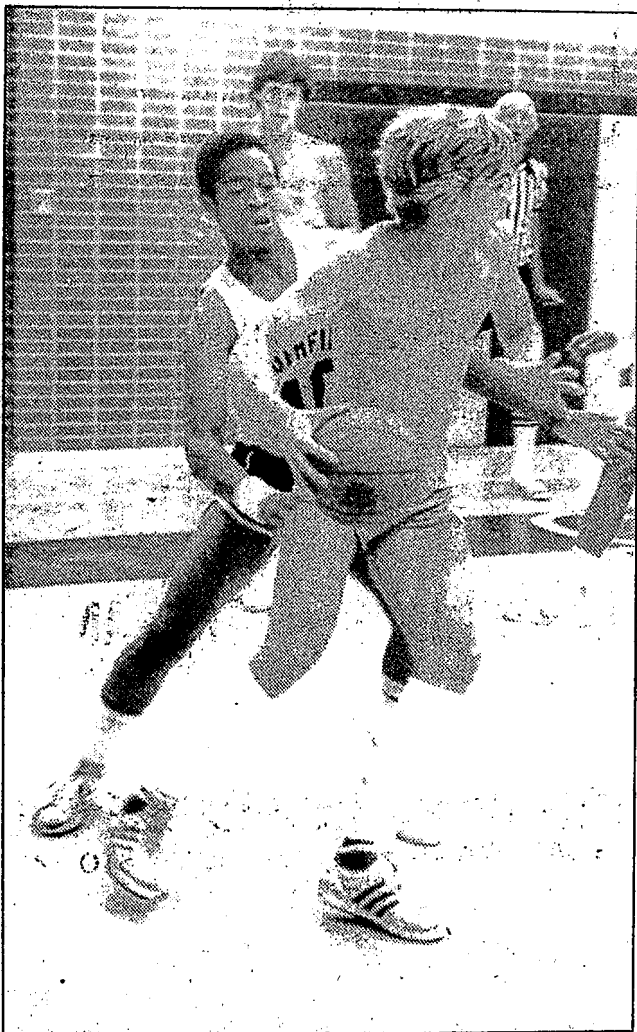

As far as next season's junior varsity team is concerned, Mahrle expressed a similar optimism. Like their varsity counterparts, the junior Wolfpack also took top spot in the Greater Oakland Activities League last season.

"I don't feel I'll have the depth I had last year, but I'll be able to field a good starting five," he said.

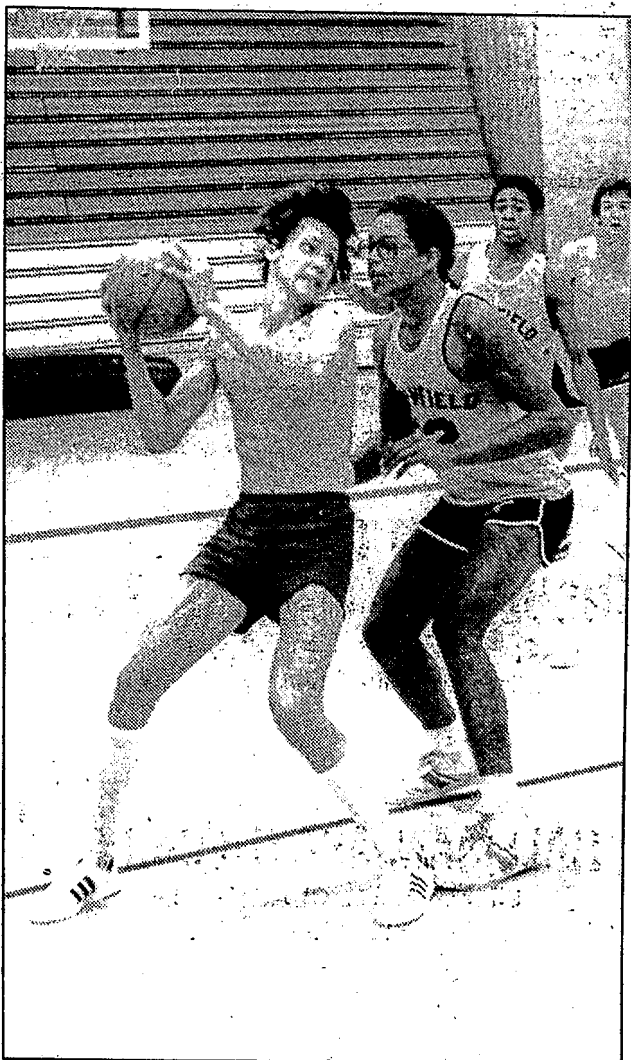

Between 10-minute quarters, Coach Larry Mahrle goes over a little strategy with his players. Although Southfield held the upper hand in last week's scrimmage, Clarkston played hard and showed signs of promise for next winter.

Duane Cahill's hard work this summer has earned him the praise of Coach Mahrle and the team captainship. "He's devoted the summer to playing basketball, just basketball," says Mahrle.

Mike McCormick stops short of the baseline and looks for an open teammate. McCormick figures to be one of the Wolfpack's mainstays at guard in '81-'82.

Craig Kulaszewski, who will be a sophomore at CHS this fall, cuts around the defensive tactics of his Southfield opponent.

Cougars sweep twin bill from Wolverines

Cougar pitcher Julie Marshall sends the ball in the direction of a waiting Wolverine batter in the final inning of Sashabaw Junior High's 4-3 victory over Clarkston Junior High.

The Sashabaw Junior High softball team handed cross-district rival Clarkston Junior High a double-dip defeat May 28, sweeping a double-header by scores of 4-3 and 15-5.

Julie Marshall pitched a five-hitter for the Cougars of Sashabaw in game one to pace the victory. The score was knotted at 3-3 in the bottom of the sixth when Sue Castillo singled home Kelly Keating with the winning run.

In the top of the sixth, Keating squelched a Clarkston Wolverine uprising with a diving catch. Kim Lorenz had two hits for the Cougars, while Sheila Moore had two hits for the Wolverines.

Lorenz pitched Sashabaw to victory in game two, benefitting from a strong offensive output paced by Janet Herron's four RBIs, Cindy Covert's three RBIs and the hitting of Kim McDonald.

Cougar Coach Nancy Foster also praised the defensive work of Sheila "Zipper" Moore as instrumental to the Sashabaw triumph.

Karen Clark's three singles and two RBIs paced the attack for the Wolverines.

The double victory improved the Cougars' season record to a perfect 10-0, while the Wolverines saw their season mark dip to 7-7.

Players of week

Gary Imhoff and Terri Douglas are this week's Spring Lake Country Club Players of the Week in Independence Parks and Recreation softball.

Imhoff plays for O'Brien and Gary's in Men's Alpha, while Douglas plays for Spring Lake in Women's Beta. Each will receive a $10 gift certificate from Spring Lake.

Named players of the week in their individual divisions were Rick Reece of Savoy Lanes in Men's Beta; Bill Swayne of Springfield Inn in Men's Gamma American; and Chris Kilgore of Frederick Jewelers in Men's Gamma National.

Clarkston JVs best ever

In the annals of Clarkston High School junior varsity baseball history, there are none better than Coach Kurt Richardson's 1981 Wolves.

The Wolves racked up a 15-2 record this past season, including a 9-1 mark in the Greater Oakland Activities League—good for a share of the league championship with West Bloomfield.

"That's the best record ever in junior varsity baseball at Clarkston High School," says a proud Coach Richardson.

Richie Schrader was named the team's most valuable player—a logical award to someone who led the squad with a .476 batting average. The most improved award went to Mike Dearborn, who handled Clarkston's backstopping duties.

The pitching staff boasted the likes of Dale Hesse, who won four, lost none and posted a 1.65 ERA; Scott Temple, who finished at 3-1 and chalked up a 1.40 ERA; and Shawn Mosele, who went 4-1 and posted a 2.28 ERA.

Hesse was also the team's second-leading hitter in the average department, hitting safely at a .440 clip. Teammate Adam Kline led the Wolves in RBIs with 18 and posted a .363 average, while Bill Weeks battled .375 and set a school record for the fewest strike outs, fanning just once in the entire season.

Dave McIntyre at .350, Kevin Teague at .333, Temple at .333 and Rick Williams at .320 were the Wolves' other .300 hitters.

Hurls no-hitter

Fifteen-year-old Tony Dettore pitched a no-hitter June 25 in the Independence Parks and Recreation Pony baseball league.

Tony, who will be a sophomore at Clarkston High School this fall, struck out 19 batters and walked only four to lead the Pine Knob Rangers to a 3-0 win over Micro Photo.

The Rangers are coached by Bryan Schnabel, and Tony's no-hit-victory improved the team's season record to 2-2.

Pitchers shine

Even an infield pop up ranks as an accomplishment of sorts when it comes against the pitching of young Mark Bush.

So far this season in Independence Parks and Recreation Midget baseball, Mark has fanned an average of two and a half batters an inning.

And he was in top form last week as he retired 11 of the 12 batters he faced in pacing an 11-0 win for Moscovie Building Company over Cabine Tree.

Teammate Jim Muhleck came on in the fifth inning and was just as effective, striking out five of six batters to wrap up his team's first no-hitter of the year.

A-OK for audit

An administration change in the midst of the 1980-81 fiscal year hasn't affected finances in Independence Township government as the firm of Doeren Mayhew & Co. of Troy reports a clean audit.

According to Clerk Christopher Rose, the township's assets total $17.7 million, of which $10 million is designated for sewer lines and equipment.

"They (the auditors) said we're no longer a 'small township,' we're 'big business,'" Rose said. "They also said it was a well-run, clean audit and that there were no problems; that we're in fine shape."

The audit has been termed "Unqualified", which means the auditors' report did not hinge upon stipulations, Rose said. For example, the auditors did not say it's fine "except for," he added.

Treasurer Frederick Ritter reports earning in excess of $270,000 in interest, a record for township investment earnings.

Board members heard the auditors' report at a special meeting June 30.

Parade seekers scrambled for the shade of Depot Road Park to listen and enjoy a free concert, "Ring All the Bells of Freedom," under the direction of John Koger. The local group practiced for the second annual July 4 concert in the park for two-and-one-half months at the Clarkston Junior High School music room.

Patriots in the park

Photos by Marilyn Trumper

Marching with the John R. Schmude VFW Post of Clarkston proved hot and hard work for local Commander Regis Little, who made the trip to Depot Road Park.

The line grew longer and longer as folks of Food Town's red, white and blue hot air balloon. The billowing ball could be seen proved to be a drawing point to the park.

Many services: Suzanne' The Unique Boutique

Ladies' apparel, handmade stained glass and dry cleaning represent a rather unique combination of services all under one roof.

Thus, the inspiration for the name of Ron Hunt

Sue Spaven and Ron Hunt say business has been good at "Suzanne' The Unique Boutique" since they opened their doors in February. Ron, who works nearby at Matheson Plumbing, leaves most of the duties at the store to Sue. Men's clothing may be an addition to their merchandise line in the future if the business keeps growing. "We'll see how things go," says Ron.

and Sue Spaven's business—"Suzanne' The Unique Boutique".

Unique is the word that best describes the combined selection of women's jeans, tops and sportswear in one area; a separate room filled with original stained glass lamps, mirrors, jewelry boxes and decorative pieces; and a drop-off area for dry cleaning work done at Herald Dry Cleaners in Lake Orion.

"She wanted the name Suzanne, and I wanted the Unique Boutique," explains Ron.

As it turned out, there were already two businesses registered under the names "Suzanne" and "The Unique Boutique," so Ron and Sue combined their two ideas when they opened shop last February. "We had always wanted to own our own business," Sue says. "And business has been real good—we're paying our bills."

Doing business

"Our clientele seems to be very happy that we're here."

"Some people said we were a little crazy to be opening way out here with times being what they are," adds Ron.

"But we've got brand names, keep our prices down and with gas so high, people don't want to have to drive all the way to the malls."

Suzanne' The Unique Boutique's location at 4740 Clarkston Rd. is also convenient for Sue and Ron. Both live near the business and Ron works as a plumber right next door at Matheson Plumbing.

"Plus, this is a convenient place for people to take their dry cleaning," says Sue. "Herald Dry Cleaners have a good reputation with the people out here."

The stained glass items are handmade by a friend of Sue and Ron's, and custom-made objects can be ordered.

Coping with kids

by Jim Windell

Father's involvement is important to children

"My father worked afternoons in the shop," remembers a young woman of her teenage years. "As a result, we only saw him on the weekends and my mom ran everything."

This is not an unusual situation in a city where many people have jobs in automobile plants and often are placed on shifts that effectively keep them cut off from their children and their children's day-to-day lives.

Sometimes it is almost as if the father forgets he has children.

The young woman whose father worked afternoons recalls, "Once I had to go to the hospital and my father took me. He had forgotten my birthdate and he wasn't much help in completing the records. He couldn't remember what grade I was in at school."

Fathering to be decisive in a young person's life must involve a certain amount of time. It is all well and good to say that a dad offers quality involvement not necessarily quantity, but the amount of time must be sufficient so the young person feels the impact in his life.

If a father is going to be any help at all in assisting his child to grow up to be able to confront a bewildering variety of new experiences, he must be around.

The father's biggest role may be as a representative of the authority and rules of society. Absent authority is no authority.

A father who is forced to work a shift that does not allow for daily contacts with his children must somehow plan to intervene in their lives in some other manner. Telephone calls and notes might be one alternative to actual face-to-face contact.

It is usually through activities that fathers deepen the relationship with their children and not only bring about a positive impact on their lives but make fathering more joyful.

Even if a dad is a weekend father only, activities can be crammed into a weekend which can vitalize the relationship between father and child.

Patience is the key to housebreaking puppies

In response to several requests, I have prepared a project in dog training for families over the summer. Feel free to contact me with problems and successes. There will be three articles in the series.

If you are on the market for a puppy, or beginning a training program, it is helpful to realize the important development stages for a puppy and to know or find out his environment at key periods so you can better understand his responses.

The critical periods are:

1. Birth to 20 days
2. From 20 days to 49 days
3. From 49-80 days
4. From 12-16 weeks

During the first period, the pup is totally dependent on his mother and human stewards for survival. Warmth, food, and sleep are the essence of this period.

The second period is critical, because the senses are developing. Interaction with littermates is crucial. It is paramount that puppies be gently socialized and played with by humans and become a part of human socialization.

We find our maltese pups, who are so little, first learn to identify us by our feet, because we tower so over them! They are overjoyed at the foot of a known human, a little hesitant with strangers feet until they hear reassuring words.

The third period is the real formation of the man-dog relationship. The pups must receive as much individual attention as possible. A dog confined to a kennel and not observed or loved during this period can have permanent personality damage. A dog between eight and 10 weeks should not receive harsh discipline, but only affirmation-praise for right. It also should not receive inoculations during this two-week period.

The fourth period from 12 to 16 weeks is when formal training should begin - serious firm expectation without cruelty or rage. Patience is the key. The reward for you is a well-mannered dog and for the dog love and caring is the goal!

The first phase of training is house breaking. Dogs are creatures of their environment. Whatever world you show them, that is what they will believe in.

The best thing you can do for your puppy is clean up quickly—they are animals of habit. Cleanliness is the way to get to your dog without yelling, hitting, or threatening to take him to the pound.

If caught in the act, say no and carry him outside. Stay with him. If he relieves himself, praise him.

Dogs are den animals and like a clean den just like you!

When you are away, confine dog to small bathroom or kitchen or dog crate.

Next, set up a schedule for you and your dog. Remember to let him out when he wakes up from his nap.

If you are at home: 7 a.m., walk. 7:30 a.m., feed. 7:45 a.m., walk. Fifteen minutes play in kitchen. Confine in crate or in bathroom. Noon, walk, 15 minutes of play, confine. 4 p.m., feed, walk, 15 minutes of play, confine. 7 p.m., walk, 15 minutes of play, confine. 11 p.m., walk, confine.

If you work: 7 a.m., feed, walk, play in kitchen while you eat. 8 a.m. (just before you leave), walk, confine. 6 p.m., walk. 6:20 p.m., feed, walk. 6:40 p.m., play in kitchen 30 minutes. 7 p.m., walk, confine. 11 p.m., walk, confine overnight.

When the dog relieves himself on walks and keeps play area and confined area clean, you can increase play time. Do not rush. If he backslides, return to schedule for one week.

Remember, you want the puppy to loathe being dirty, so clean any accident thoroughly. If he soils your kitchen during play time, he has been out too long, or he did not do what he was supposed to do outside. Put puppy in crate until next scheduled walk.

Remember, praise him when he goes outside.

Do not expect perfection. Dogs do learn from their mistakes, and your regularity and patience.

Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Robertson of Hummingbird Lane, Independence Township, announce the engagement of their daughter, Patricia Kay to Craig Thomas LeClaire, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Jack LeClaire of Lake Angelus. The bride-to-be is a 1976 graduate of Clarkston High School. She attends Oakland University, Rochester. Her fiancé is a graduate of Washburn University, Topeka, Kan. He is employed by Michigan Flame Hardening, Troy. The couple plans a September wedding.

New arrival

Kathleen Sartell of Silver Lake Road, Waterford Township, is the parent of her first child—a daughter. Kristine Elizabeth was born at 2:40 a.m. at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit, weighing 5 pounds, 10 ounces and measuring 19 inches. Grandparents are Roy and Nelda Wegman of Pinedale Road, Independence Township.

Club notes

Eleven persons attended the June 13 meeting of the World War I Clinton Valley Barracks No. 2803 and Auxiliary at Davisburg Town Hall.

Two June birthdays were honored with special cake and ice cream—that of auxiliary president Minnie Schneller and of Lewis Hanson.

The next meeting is planned at the home of Alice Rioux, 9997 Davisburg, Springfield Township, on Sat., July 11, with a potluck dinner at noon.

All WWI veterans, auxiliary, their families and all interested persons are urged to send letters before July 21 to Rep. William Broomfield, Washington, D.C., urging support for H.R. 1918 regarding a pension for WWI veterans and widows.

WWI veterans never had a service pension nor any educational benefits.

—Alice Rioux

Idea nets Super Bowl tickets

Henceforth, when David Kiser of Springfield Township hears the name of the new plaza development in Pontiac, he can smile with pride.

Kiser, who named the plaza The Phoenix Center, won two tickets to the 1982 Super Bowl at the Pontiac Silverdome for his idea.

About one and one-half months ago, Kiser entered the name-the-development contest sponsored by the Oakland Press.

His entry was at the prodding of his wife, Susie, who teaches art at Sashabaw Junior High School.

"I happened to see the contest, and I said to him, 'Think up a name and I'll send it in,'" she said.

When her husband suggested Phoenix, her first thought was of the car with the same name, she said. "But," he said, "There's a mythical bird that arises from the ashes—that would kind of symbolize what it is—the renaissance, the rebirth." So we sent it in," she said.

Mrs. Kiser answered the phone call that announced the win at the end of June. When she told him he'd won, he was pleased—and surprised.

"He was excited—he said, 'Hey, that's great, I finally won something,'" she said.

They're both looking forward to the big game at the Silverdome Jan. 24. But while that will be a one-time event, the Phoenix will live on.

Recipe file

By Lorna Bickerstaff

John Gere of Farmington Hills is sharing his recipe for Baked Chicken Breasts Supreme with The Clarkston News.

Baked Chicken Breasts Supreme

- 6 whole breasts, halved and boned
- 2 c sour cream
- 1/4 c lemon juice
- 2 t celery salt
- 2 t salt
- 1/2 t pepper
- 1 1/4 c dry bread crumbs (for crisper chicken, use corn flakes)
- 1/2 c butter
- 1/2 c shortening
- 2 t garlic salt

Rinse chicken breasts and wipe well with paper towels. In large bowl, combine sour cream with lemon juice, celery, salt and pepper. Add chicken to sour cream mixture and marinate in refrigerator overnight.

Pre-heat oven to 350 degrees. Remove chicken from sour cream mixture and roll in crumbs, coating well. Arrange in large shallow baking pan. Melt butter and shortening. Add garlic salt. Spoon half over chicken. Bake uncovered for 45 minutes. Spoon remaining butter over chicken, and bake 10 to 15 minutes longer or until chicken is tender and nicely browned.

Catching some rays

There are ways to work in everything you want to do during school vacation—all it takes is a little creativity. While waiting for a basketball scrimmage at Clarkston High School, these members of the team soak up a few rays while perched on the concrete bases of the arches outside the gym. Clarkston News MAGAZINE editor Kathy Greenfield photographed the sun bathers. They are [front to back] Tracy Flood, Tony Rana, Rick Williams and Steve Luchenbach. IN A DISCUSSION of the baseball strike the other day, I was told that although my interest in sports is so limited that it borders on mental retardation, if I assiduously applied myself to a course of study under the tutelage of a team of psychiatrists and sports enthusiasts, in a few short months I could develop a knowledge of athletes that would be no less than cursory.

I think my problem may stem from the total absence of logic in the sports arena.

Why for example, if a bunch of yahoos who apparently have IQs in the mid-70s and who are paid approximately $1.2 million a year for flailing at a horse hide spheroid with a bulbous laundry pole want to strike, why not let them strike? If, after two or three years they want to play baseball, then let them play ball.

Line from a play: "Why is logic never even tried?"

I am told the Tigers lose a great deal and the fans are disappointed because they like to see the team win.

Again the solution seems blindingly apparent. Simply transfer the team from Detroit to Ortonville. As the "Ortonville Tigers" playing against other small towns, they would probably be triumphant crowd pleasers and victory celebrations would abound.

Actually, I don't think there is much that can be done to help baseball, which is inherently dull. I recall being a spectator at a pitchers' duel that lasted about 75 scoreless innings and provoked all the white-knuckle short-breathing response of an intermural chess match.

Basketball, on the other hand, could be improved easily. Exciting basketball games are those won by two points in the final 27 seconds.

Estatic fans are overjoyed at seeing a "real cliff hanger, so why not award each team 114 points and then play for 27 seconds? Not only would each game be excitingly close, but with a little planning the proper scheduling, the entire season could be played in one day with appreciable savings in the fuel expended by fans who would not travel to a number of separate games.

Football could be treated in much the same way. Currently, teams rush at each other with brutal ferocity, for 60 minutes strewing the field with fairly important parts of players, like arms and feet, half killing themselves and each other only to have the game decided in sudden death overtime by a field goal.

It seems much more reasonable, and humane, to give each team two touchdowns and a conversion then let field goal kickers kick field goals until somebody misses. This approach would save a great deal on laundry soap as no one would get his uniform dirty.

Sports would appear to be a fertile plain for the sharp plow of logic.

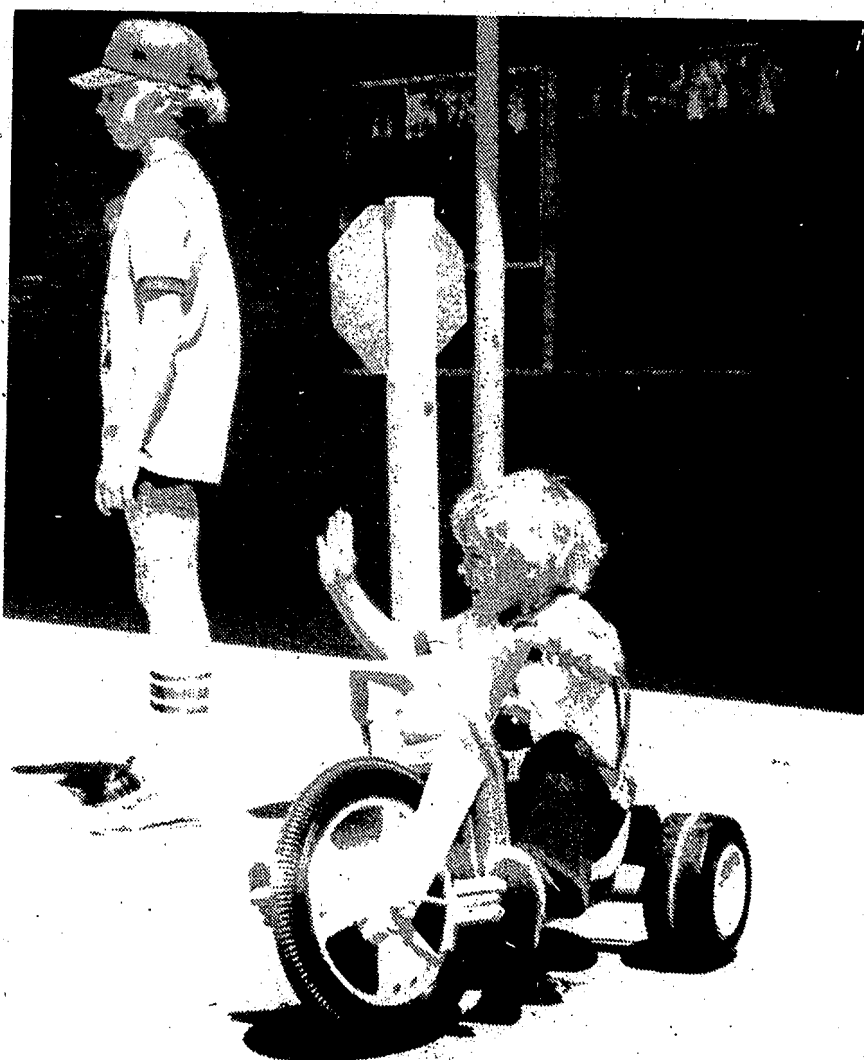

Kim Fettig [center] and Marta Blankenhagen negotiate one of the stop signs and intersections on the Safety Town traffic course.

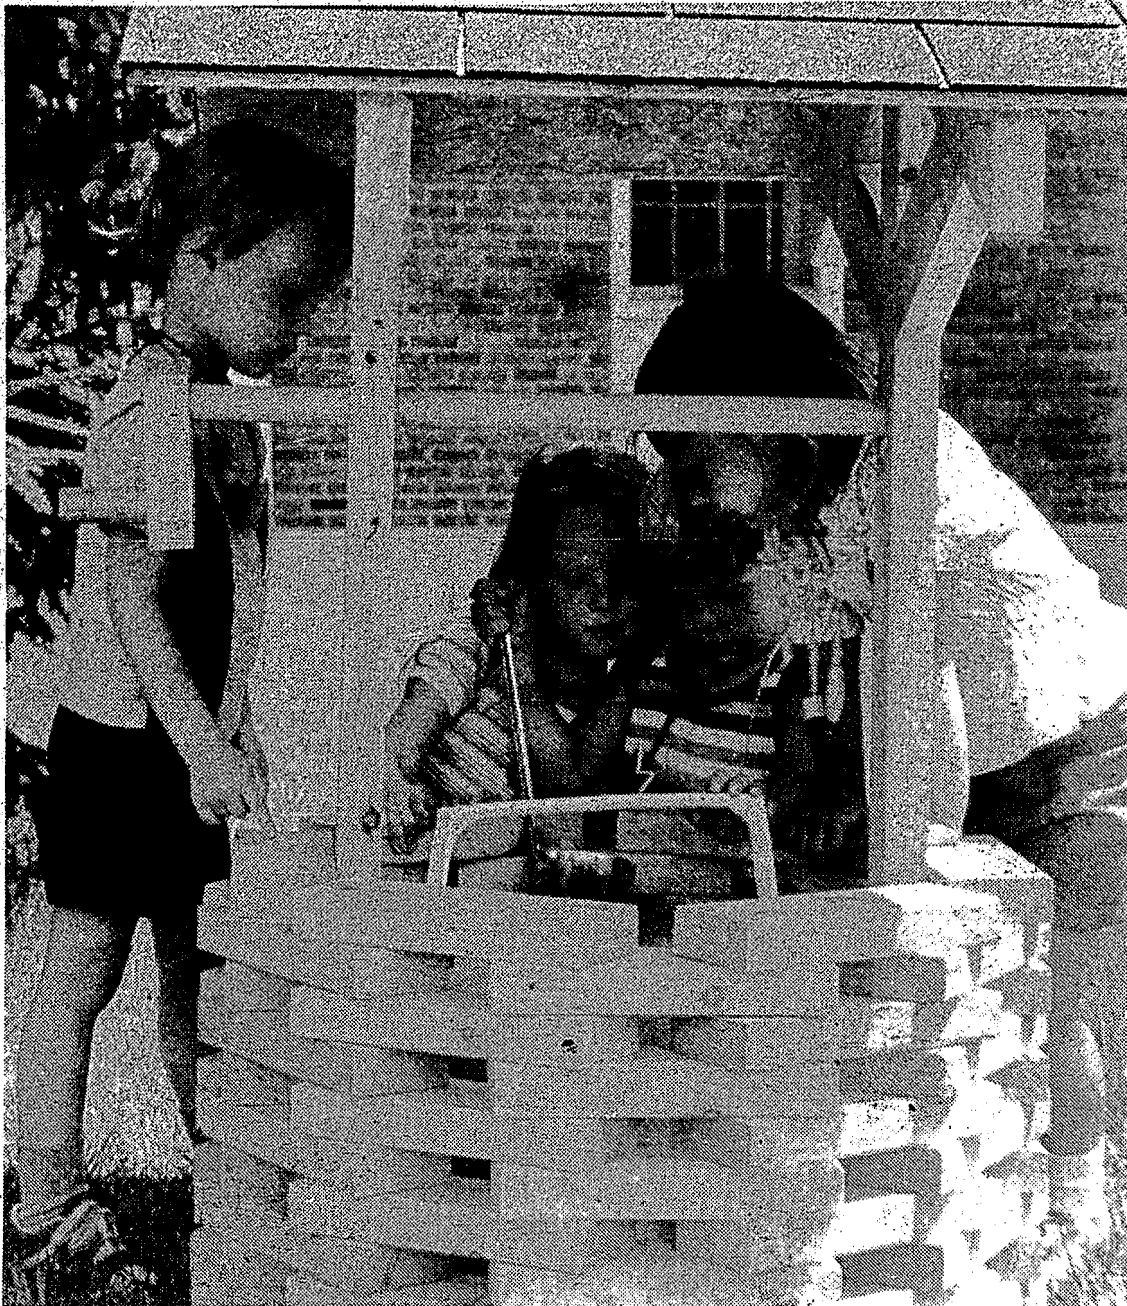

Marge Garrison, a volunteer with the Springfield Township Fire Department, explains the workings of a fire truck and the duties of a firefighter to the attentive youngsters.

Safety on wheels

Jayme Junga completes a turn in his "car" on the Safety Town course behind Davisburg Elementary School. The course was a mockup of the Springfield Township area, complete with stop signs, intersections, local businesses and a train crossing, all designed to teach youngsters about highway safety. It was just part of the two-week Safety Town course in which 30 children recently participated. Sponsored by the Davisburg Jaycettes, the program included lessons in bike safety, water safety, fire safety and a visit by the Oakland County Sheriff's Department.

Early in the morning, Jewish children during the time of Jesus Christ would visit the town well to bring back water. That's the task assigned to [from left] Jimmy Oakley, Allison Haight, Brett Ribb and Jillian Wyatt.

... when Jesus was a boy

After the story, Pat leads the children in their search for called "Manna"—peanuts were used to illustrate the point. The four-day vacation church school recently held at the Clarkston United Methodist Church had as its theme "Jerusalem Marketplace" with the purpose of exposing children to life the way it was when Jesus was a boy.

Stories from the Bible told by Pat McArthur lead to activities by the children, who, in this case, were told a story that illustrates that God provides the needs of His people, but that greed is not tolerated.

Urban Cowboy

Riding the bull's easy, says Mike Smorto

A native of New Jersey, Mike and his family moved to the Clarkston area about a year ago. It was after getting a job at AW's Rodeo in Waterford that Mike had his first ride on the mechanical bull.

It was about a year ago that 19-year-old Mike Smorto sauntered up to the mechanical bull at AW's Rodeo in Waterford for his maiden ride.

"I saw 'Urban Cowboy,'" says Mike, referring to the John Travolta film that introduced audiences to the hair-raising sport of mechanical bull riding. "I thought I'd give it a try."

One year after his first brush with the bucking bronco of the barroom finds Mike headed for Columbus, Ohio, to compete in "Screamin' Willies' First Annual Grand National" regional championship bull riding contest.

Last month at the equivalent of the state championship held at AW's, Mike emerged victorious to qualify for the Columbus event. And success at the regionals will send him on his way to the national finals.

"Endurance and balance," says Mike when asked what it takes to be a good rider. "You've got to be able to move with the bull to say on."

The sport is not without its risks. In Tennessee, a rider was hurled from the bull, landed on his head and ended up permanently paralyzed from the neck down.

With a grin, Mike relates how his mom said the rosary while she watched him in the state competition at AW's last month.

But he dismisses the dangers with a shrug. "What happened in Tennessee was the operator's fault," says Mike.

Operators can set the bull at any of 13 "levels" depending on the experience of the rider, he explains. The Tennessee rider never should have been allowed to ride at the maximum level, he says.

"Some bars just like to throw people," says Mike. "But I've never seen anyone get hurt here (at AW's). Really, it's not that dangerous."

Even so, riders must sign a release form before riding, and the thick foam cushion surrounding the bull indicates that not every rider finishes in the saddle.

"It's habit-forming," Mike grins. "I started doing it just for fun, and it's good exercise, too."

"You've got to really psyche yourself up before you start and concentrate on what you're doing to win."

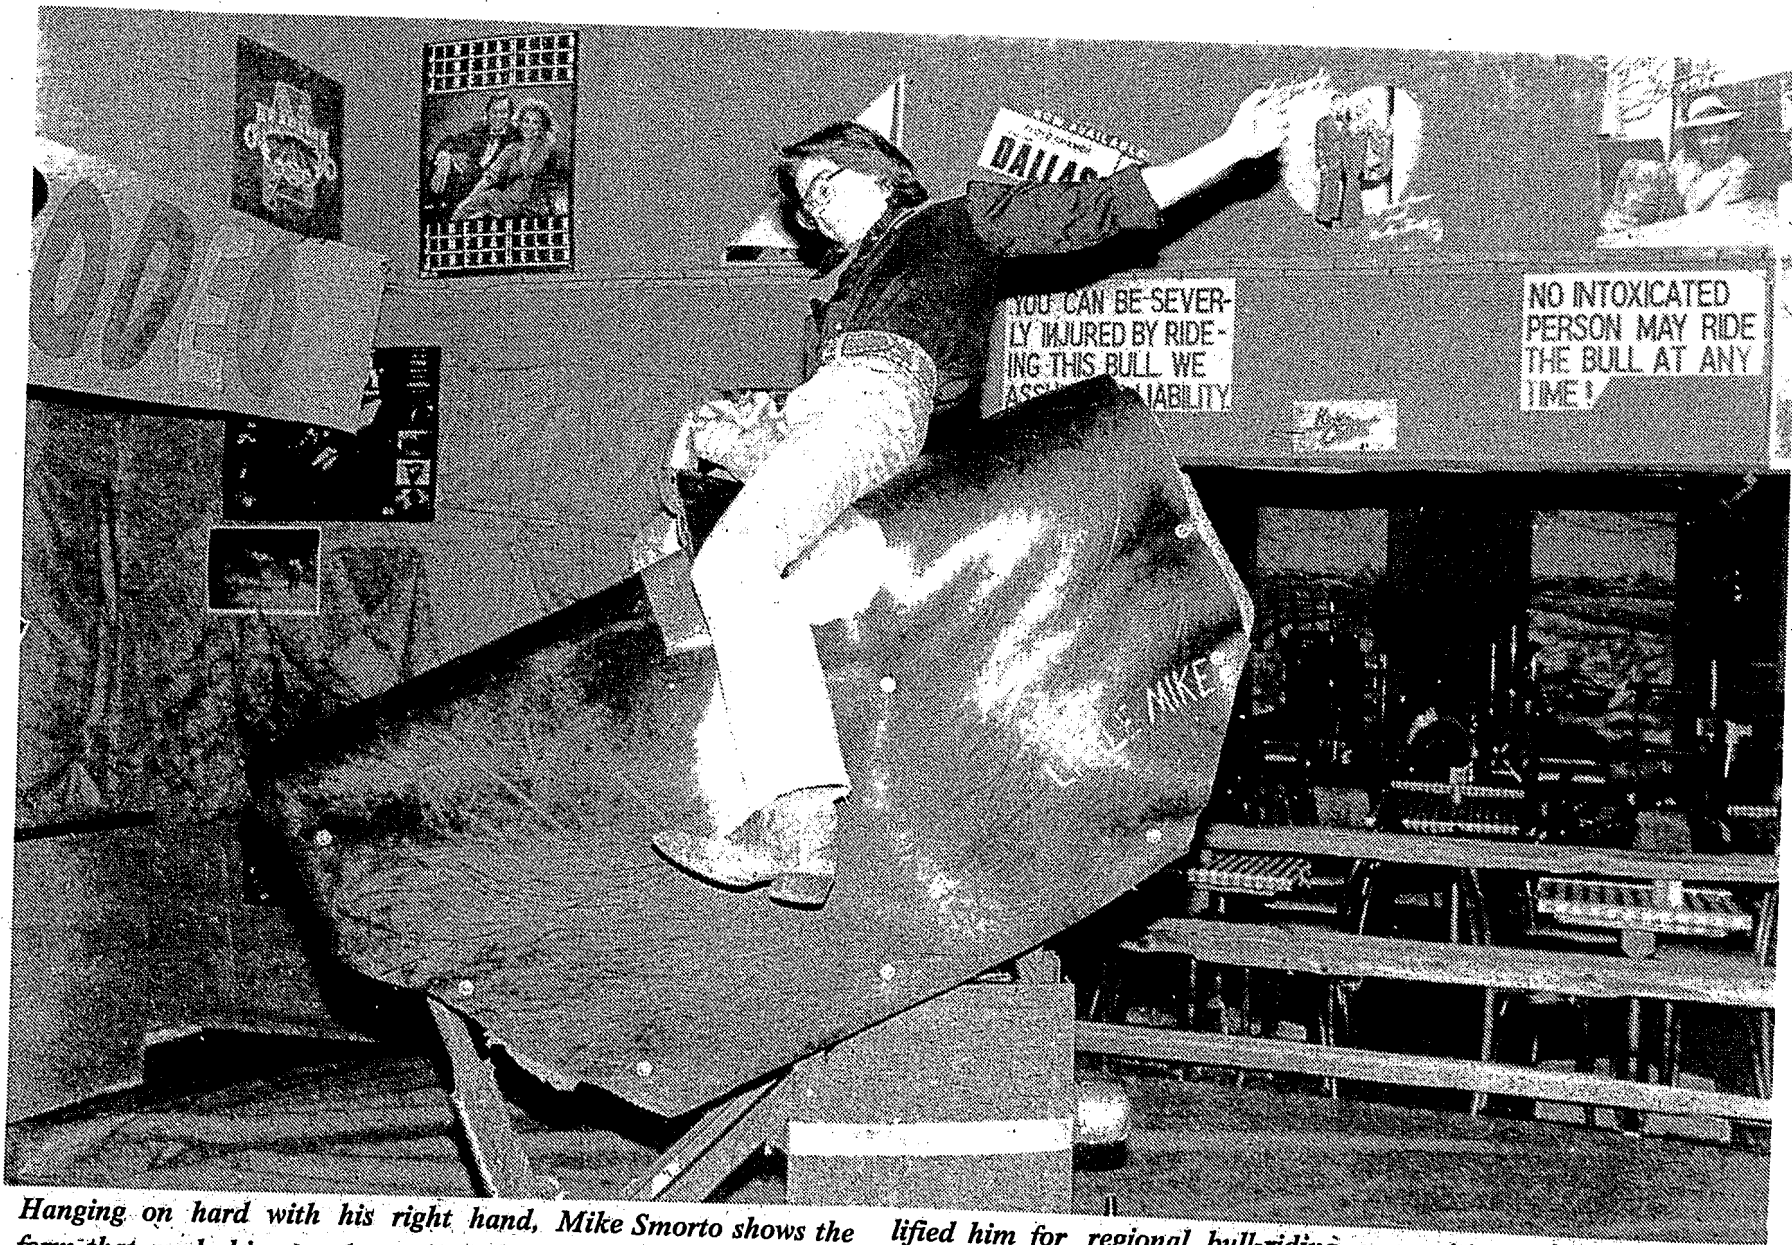

Most competitions are decided on point totals, Mike says. Two judges award a maximum of 25 points each based on form and style—riders are not allowed to touch any part of their body or the bull with their free arm, for example.

"It started as just a fad, but now it's really becoming a sport," he says.

Encouraged by his success at the mechanical bull, Mike is considering trying his hand at the real thing in the near future—live rodeo.

"Of course, my mom isn't too happy about that," he grins.

—Al Zawacky

Hanging on hard with his right hand, Mike Smorto shows the form that made him No. 1 at AW's Rodeo last month and qualified him for regional bull-riding competition in Columbus, Ohio. Endurance and balance are two essential qualities of the good rider.

Velcro: It's squashed guesswork out of blood pressure monitoring

A visit to the doctor almost ensures an increase in the old blood pressure.

Weary, ill, worried and anxious all combine to get the old heart pumping faster and the old lungs breathing posthaste.

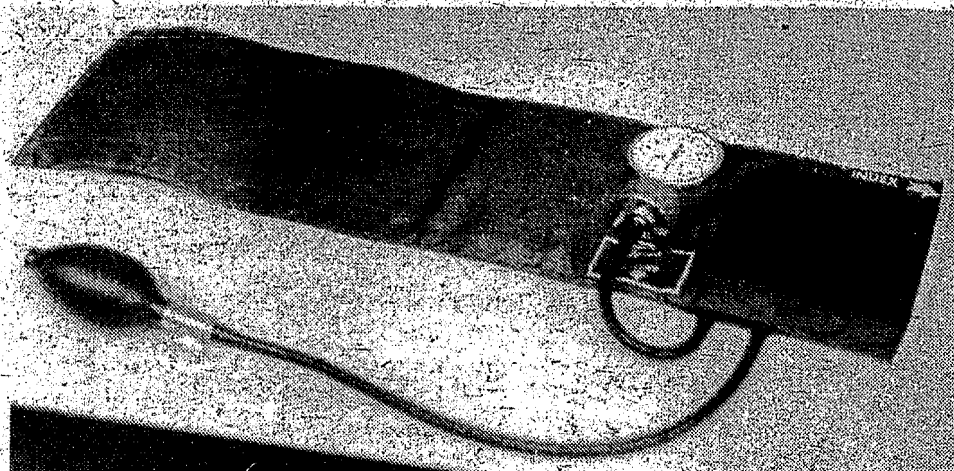

Thanks to the adaptation of Velcro—monitoring blood pressure's been made easier and more efficient—especially for children, says Dr. James O'Neill, local pediatrician.

Before Velcro, doctors used clips and clamps to hold the meter's armband steady. Every inch or two there were holes which lined up with metal knobs that snapped in place, he said.

"The clip never fit anybody," O'Neill said, laughing. "It was made for the 'average person'—and there's no such thing."

The band slipped and moved and slithered making blood pressure metering an art, conquered by those with nimble fingers and deft hands.

The Velcro, O'Neill said, "is absolutely great. Especially for kids."

Just going into a doctor's office can make some folks' blood boil, and measuring just how much is made easy with a blood pressure meter and Velcro. Mystical, magical Velcro's made taking blood pressures more efficient, and has replaced the old-fashioned banding.

They squirm around and wiggle so much.

"But the sound it makes when you tear it apart," he laughed again, "sounds as if you're tearing off the whole back. 'Whew,' the kids say, 'It sounded awful, but it didn't hurt'."

O'Neill laughs again.

Velcro.

It's used for more than holding a skirt in place or keeping a racquet-ball glove on tightly.

It's revolutionized the art of keeping on blood pressure meter armbands—and flabbergasted a lot of kids.

Family's still tops with the Lessards

Marriage seems to run in cycles. It starts out with just the two, husband and wife. Then children arrive.

One by one, they start school, learn to drive, go off to college, marry and leave home.

Finally, husband and wife are back where they started in the beginning—just the two of them.

Lou and Marian Lessard have gone through that cycle. Today, after hectic years of raising a family, the two of them are back to appreciating quiet evenings together.

Nary a room in the Lessard's Independence Township home is without some type of memento or reminder of their four children—Cathy, Judy, Lou Jr. and Joe.

"We're really such a close-knit family, and we have so many things from our children that it feels like they're still here," says Marian.

The memories are happy and vivid, and so are Lou and Marian's pride.

All four of their children earned college degrees from Michigan State University.

They've been active in everything from music to art to sports to politics.

And both Lou Jr. and Joe are doctors. Both studied premed at Michigan State and studied medicine at the Kansas City College of Osteopathic Medicine in Kansas City, Mo. Lou graduated in 1980 and just recently finished his internship, while Joe graduated this year and is just starting his internship.

"They both made their decisions (to enter medicine) independent of each other," says Lou Sr. of his two sons. "They had two important role models here in the community, too—Dr. (Alfred) Hamilton and Dr. (Ronald) LePere. I think that had some bearing on it.

"And I've always told all our children that you can do anything you really want to if you put your mind to it."

Marian can remember the boys aspiring to become doctors prior to entering high school.

"It's something they were both interested in," she says.

"I remember talking to Louie when he was in high school—he said he didn't know if he could stand all the long years of intense study it takes."

But being a doctor presented the opportunity to work with people and help people. And there was also the fact that Lou Jr. owed his life to a doctor who successfully operated on him as an infant.

He made his decision, and today both he and his brother are fulfilling their goals.

And like most physicians, Lou Jr. and Joe are finding themselves solicited at parties and social gatherings for a little free medical advice.

"They hear health complaints just like I hear telephone complaints," chuckles Lou Sr., a staff manager at Michigan Bell's downtown Detroit office.

The Lessards' two daughters, Cathy and Judy, majored in political science and resource development, respectively. Cathy, the eldest, gets the credit for starting the family tradition of attending MSU.

"She really liked the way the campus looked," says Marian. "I think the fact that the capitol is right there in Lansing influenced her, too. She's always been very politically minded—when the children were growing up, we took several trips to Washington and I think it kindled an interest in how the government is run."

Cathy's interest in politics has extended all the way to a few tries at public office. Twice she ran as a candidate for state representative in Republican primaries, once in the Lake Orion and Oxford area and once in the Lansing area.

She also served as a Congressional intern in 1968 for congressman Jack McDonald, answering phones, opening letters and meeting a lot of people in government.

"Some people say there's no point writing to your congressman, because they don't look at their letters or surveys anyway," Marian says, picking up a picture of her daughter behind a pile of mail atop her desk in Washington.

"Well, Cathy told us that she knows different," she laughs.

Judy is the nature lover in the family, enjoying the country atmosphere and scenic mountains of the American west. She's also fond of horses and riding.

"Judy had been out in Wyoming and Montana on a government resource study," says Lou Sr. "But now both she and Cathy are working together for a real estate firm in Okemos, Mich."

All four of the Lessard children graduated from Clarkston High School, and the family are long-time residents of Independence Township.

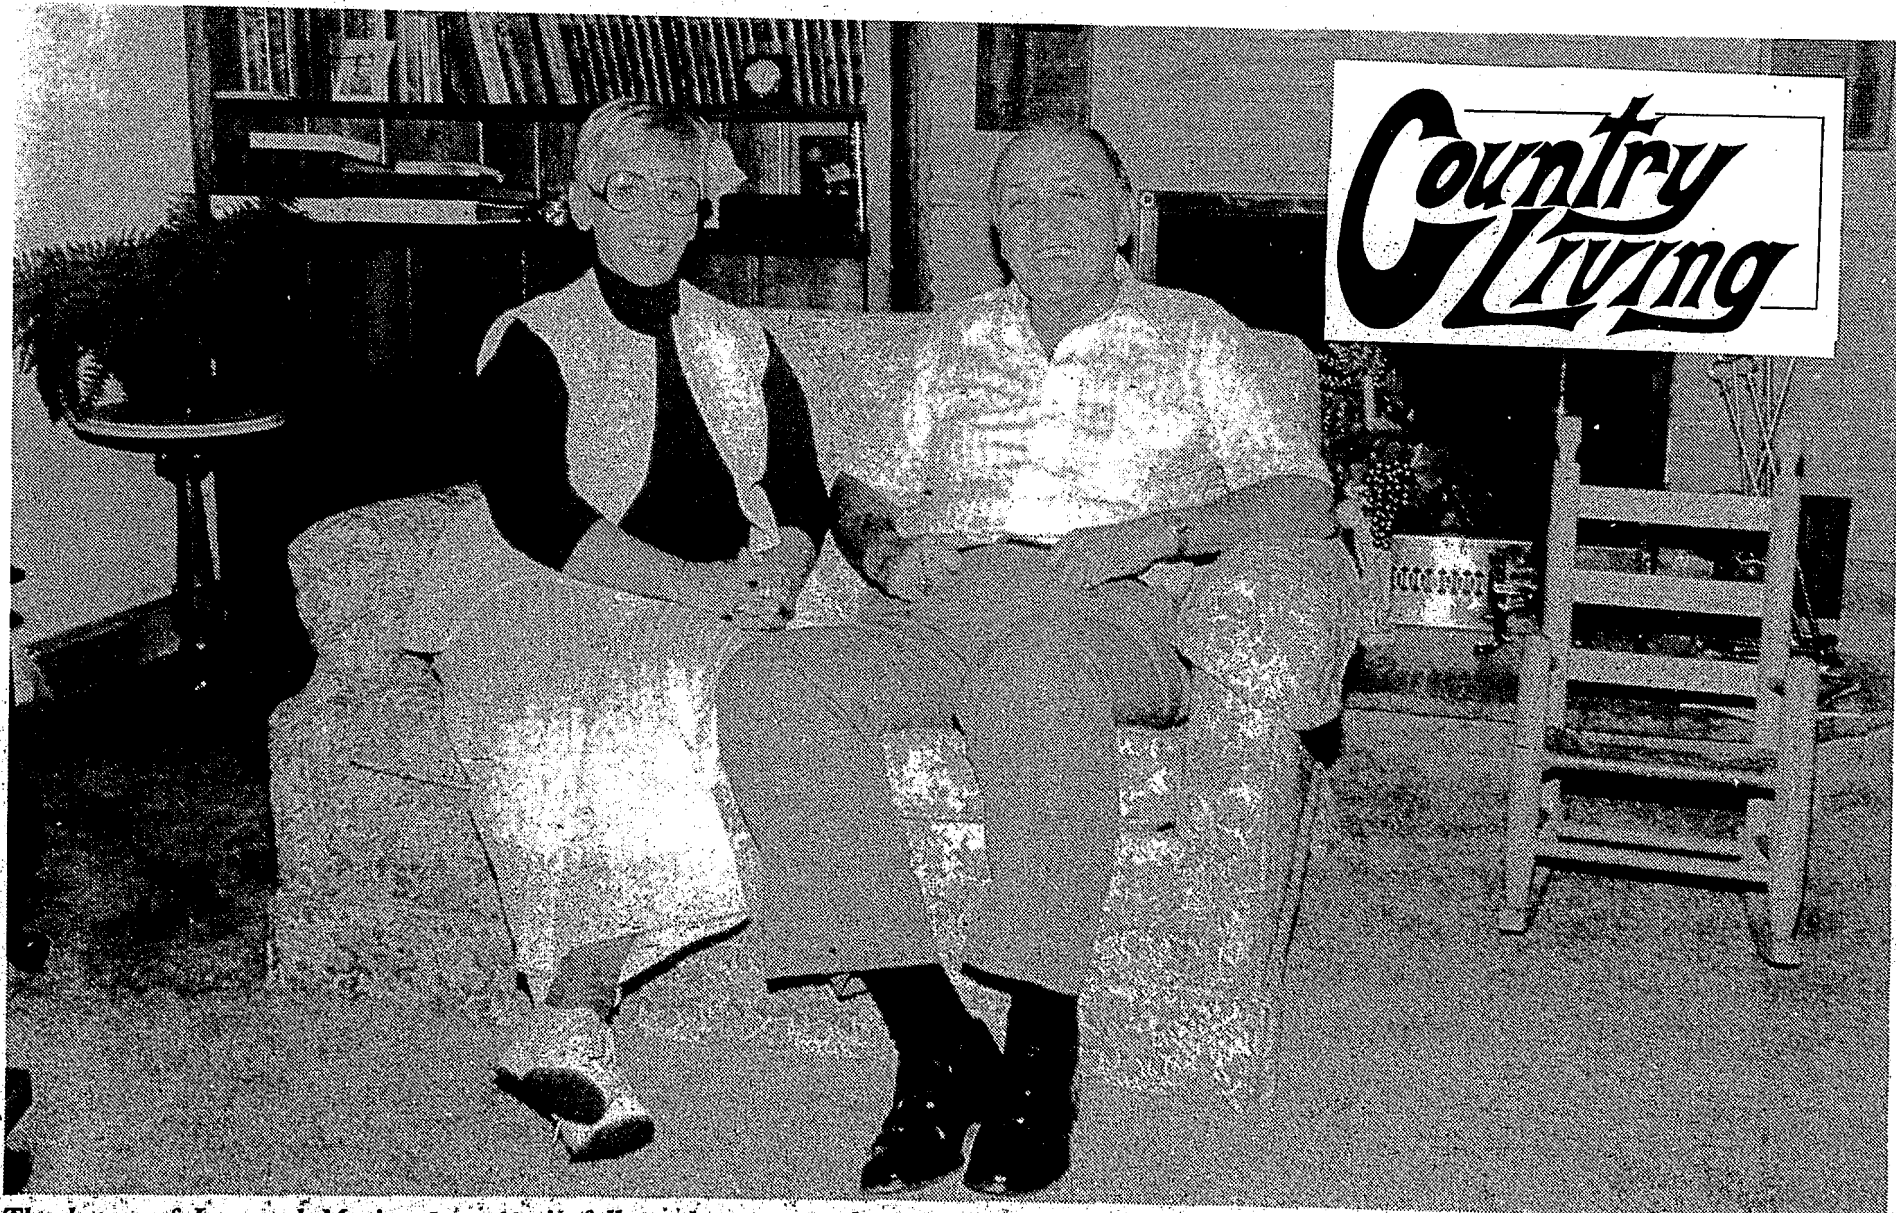

They bought the property near Clarkston High School 33 years ago, Lou Sr. built the family home there himself, and the Lessards moved in in 1953.

"I was working in Pontiac and going to college nights at the Detroit Institute of Technology," Lou Sr. recalls. "Once I graduated, I started working on the house."

"We had three children at the time," Marian says, "and we decided we didn't want them to go to the Pontiac schools. We were looking for a community where they could walk to school every day."

Today, the children are gone. But as they all live nearby, the visits are frequent, the memories are happy and the family is as close as ever.

The home of Lou and Marian Lessard is full to the brim with happy memories and mementos from their four children. Now that all the children have left home, the Lessards can enjoy quiet moments together, but as Marian notes, "We're really such a close-knit family and we have so many things from our children around us, we feel like they're still here."
