CHS lights hit heights

By Al Zawacky

After a six-month absence, a set of field lights is again standing at the Clarkston-High School athletic field.

Installation of the six new light poles—each of which weighs over three tons—took about six hours last Saturday. But even though the new lights are in place, contributions are still being sought to finance the final wiring and aiming of the lights, says Eric Reickel, co-chairman of the Clarkston Lighting Committee.

Lack of more contributions will force the committee to rely on funds from the Clarkston Athletic Boosters to finish the project—"and they could use that money for other things," Reickel says.

But the important thing is that the lights are there, he notes, culminating a successful eight-month campaign by the lighting committee to replace the old lights which couldn't have made it through another football season.

Many local citizens contributed their time and expertise to the project, one of the most prominent being Glen Hagyard of Schultz Electric.

"Without him, the project never could have happened," Reickel says. "He was performing the function of construction manager, supervising the installation and wiring—I don't know how much money he saved us."

Although the new lights will provide about 10 times as much light on the field, they'll actually use less energy than the old lights did, according to Jihad Alkateeb, president of Arden Engineering Associates, who was on the scene at Saturday's installation.

"It's about the most modern lighting system you could come up with," he says. "When they're all operating, you'll get about 25 foot candles on the field—if you sit in your living room and try to read with the highest setting on a three-way bulb, that's the same amount of candle power."

"The field will qualify for semi-pro when it's finished."

The bulbs won't need to be replaced for 10 to 12 years, he adds—contrasting the old lights dismantled last January which were constantly blinking out.

Pine Knob developers clash

Borg-Warner lawsuit also names Independence Township

By Marilyn Trumper
and Kathy Greenfield

Pine Knob Investment Co. and Independence Township are back in court, but this time the fracas is over the resort's halfway house down the hill from the Hamburger Mansion and both Pine Knob and the township have been named in a lawsuit by Borg-Warner Equities.

The suit is presently being heard at Federal District Court in Detroit by Judge Ralph Guy.

Borg-Warner, whose main office is in Delaware, contends that construction on the halfway house will result in over-burdening of the service drive that leads to the luxury condominium development at Pine Knob by Borg-Warner, the golf course, the Hamburger Mansion and the halfway house.

"We don't want the character of the development changed," Lifton said. "We have a beautiful residential community and we don't want anything to occur that would take away from that. There's a beautiful, lovely golf course and a residential community next to a recreational facility—and we don't think a full-service commercial establishment has anyplace in that development."

"We're objecting to the use of residential land to service a couple of full-service restaurants," he added. "We're asking the court to stop that. We don't want the second restaurant to open, and we don't want the tennis courts used for commercial purposes."

As part of its lawsuit, Borg-Warner has asked the judge to order Pine Knob to restore to tennis courts the parking area presently used by Hamburger Mansion restaurant patrons and by golfers. The suit also asks that the service drive be used only for access to the golf course, tennis courts and swimming pool.

When Pine Knob first opened its country club and club house, the facility was private, Lifton said. Later, Pine Knob opened the golf course and the Hamburger Mansion to the public.

"We were never happy about it then," Lifton said about the Hamburger Mansion going public. But he acknowledged that Borg-Warner never moved to block the change.

Pine Knob's argument is that the halfway house has always existed as a restaurant.

"It served barbecued chicken, hamburgers, cole slaw, hot dogs, beer, wine and vodka gimlets," said Pine Knob attorney Anthony Loerichio. "All we've done is enclose the patio and make it an Italian restaurant by changing the menu."

"Borg is saying we're building a whole new restaurant," he said. "We're not and it's not any larger. We seated 150 before and we'll seat 150 after the roof's on. All we've done is cover the open area, change the interior and make the bar area larger. The

The Clarkston High School varsity football team's home opener Sept. 18 won't have to be a candle-light affair, thanks to the presence of six brand new light poles at the CHS athletic field. Here, workers guide into place, on the visitor's side of the field, the first of the 7,000 pound poles in a project that took about six hours to complete.

The issue of whether Pine Knob Investment Co. can revamp the halfway house down the hill from the Hamburger Mansion is in court, but construction continues. Inside, the building is under remodeling and outside workers are enclosing a patio. When finished, the Italian restaurant is to seat 150 people.

plans to the township show this."

Independence Township issued a building permit to Pine Knob Investment Co., owned by Joseph Locricchio and Gary Francell, in May.

Borg-Warner has asked the judge to instruct the township to withdraw its building permit.

Unless ordered to do so, the township has no plans to interfere with construction underway, said township attorney Richard Campbell.

"This is a halfway house and people have had a drink or lunch there for years," Campbell said. "This is a proper extension of that aspect and we don't think this is wrong."

Campbell and township officials were present at the hearing in Detroit Monday morning, but Joseph Locricchio was on the stand all morning, Campbell said, and he requested to be telephoned when testimony from the township was required.

Independence Township Supervisor James B. Smith declined to comment on the case, other than to make one statement.

"It appears at this point that there's basically a problem between Borg-Warner and Pine Knob," he said.

4-H Parade heralds fair

Animals of all kinds appeared on the streets of Davisburg Saturday when paraders kicked off this year's Oakland County 4-H Fair. "I am told it is the biggest parade they've had," said Beth Bordner, parade supervisor. The Brandon Believers, a 4-H group, sponsored the parade that had over 50 units. The marchers, floats, animal units and line-up of tractors and other farm equipment traveled a one-and-one-half mile parade route that began at Springfield Oaks Activities Center and circled through Davisburg. The Oakland County 4-H Fair is open through Saturday at the activities center, 12450 Andersonville, Springfield Township. The exhibit hall is open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. each day, the carnival opens at noon and parking is $2.

DPW building price to be settled soon

The cost of Independence Township's new DPW building is expected to be settled by next week, according to township attorney Richard Campbell.

The building on Flemings Lake Road has been occupied by the township DPW department since Jan. 1.

In December 1979, the township and construction firm, Clements and Van Wagnen of Lapeer, entered into an agreement. The township said it would pay $312,000 for the building when it was completed. Clements and VanWagnen agreed on a completion date of June 1, 1980.

The matter came into dispute when the completion date was in December 1980.

The township was unable to enter into an earlier agreement on a loan at 8.5 percent interest, according to township Treasurer Frederick Ritter.

"Because the money market rate was 9 1/4 percent, the difference in interest over 15 years would be $59,000," he said.

The township asked for a $55,000 adjustment in the cost and took its case to Federal District Court in Flint, where Clements and VanWagnen had filed for bankruptcy in December.

"We met Thursday and the judge ordered us to enter into negotiations," said Campbell. "He gave us some perimeters. He told us what his thinking was."

The township board is expected to agree upon a compromise proposal at a special, closed meeting Tuesday night, Campbell said, and the information will be taken back to the judge who will act as an intermediary between the township and the construction firm.

Village street fix-up finished

The going's a bit easier through the village of Clarkston following repair of pot holes and rough spots in the streets.

Trustee James Schultz informed the Clarkston Village Council of maintenance progress at the July 27 meeting. Road repair costs of $2,500 were paid from the village street fund, he said.

In addition, the village parking lot at the corner of Main and Washington streets is sporting new ties, he said, adding that replacement of the rotting oldsters had just been completed.

Rotary restores basket tradition

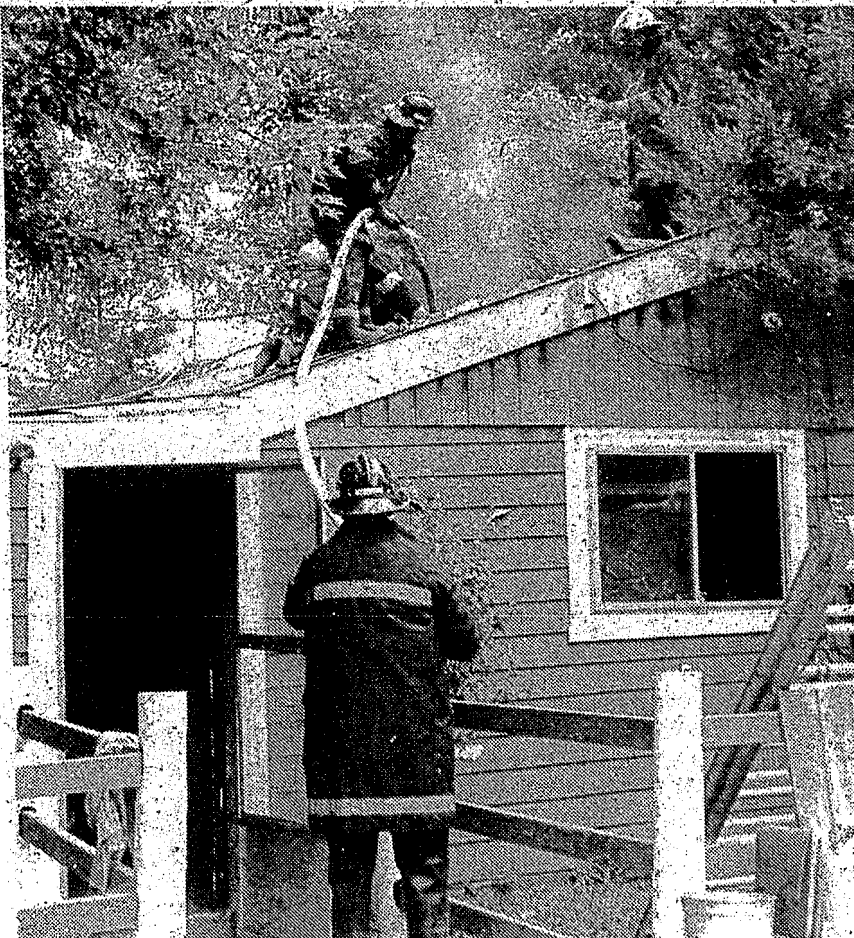

Baskets of hanging greenery and flowers adorn Clarkston's Main Street thanks to the efforts of the Clarkston Rotary Club.

The members gathered at 7 p.m. Monday to hang the baskets on the same brackets that are used for the Christmas decorations also provided by the club.

"The baskets were in the basement of the Pontiac State Bank building covered with dust and rust and we dug them out and restored them," said Rotary President Richard Ayers.

As far as he can determine, the baskets haven't been hung for five years and there was a gap in the once annual project before that, Ayers said.

The club spent about $250 on replacement of the flowers and greenery, he said.

Before and after

Twice in one week, fire ripped through a house on Foster Road in Springfield Township. The first time it caused $15,000 in damages. The second time the house was completely destroyed—and the Oakland County Arson Squad is investigating, according to Assistant Chief Elwyn Hillman of the Springfield Township Fire Department. According to Hillman, fire broke out in the unoccupied house at one minute past midnight on July 24. Firefighters had the blaze under control within 20 minutes, he said, but were unable to extinguish flames which had completely engulfed the house. Just four days earlier, firefighters from the Independence and Springfield departments worked over an hour to extinguish the first fire which began in the attic and spread to the family room area. No one was injured in either incident, Hillman said.

2-car collision claims life

A two-car collision at the intersection of Dixie Highway and White Lake Road in Independence Township claimed the life of a 27-year-old Waterford Township man early Sunday morning.

Dead is John Anthony Combs of 4876 Hillcrest.

According to Oakland County Sheriff Department reports, Combs was driving west on White Lake Road at approximately 2:25 a.m. Aug. 2 when he failed to stop for a flashing red signal at Dixie Highway.

Comb's vehicle was then hit in the intersection by a car traveling northbound on Dixie Highway driven by 28-year-old Patricia Pash of Waterford. Pash braked but could not stop her vehicle in time, according to police reports.

Combs was taken by ambulance to Pontiac General Hospital in Pontiac, where he died of injuries sustained in the crash at 7:04 a.m. Sunday. Pash's injuries did not require hospitalization.

The accident is currently under investigation by the Oakland County Sheriff's Department.

He feels betrayed by raises

Now I know how Christ must have felt when Judas betrayed him. "The Last Supper," "The Last Straw." I have had it with our school board and head administrators here in Clarkston.

We the people of Clarkston demand a public account of who on the seven-member board voted for and against the 7 percent pay raises.

We further propose the administrators return one-half of that pay raise as an act of good faith until better economic times return.

As a member of Jeanne Molzon's task force for "Kids Still Count in Clarkston," I feel betrayed. Others involved along with Jeanne also share this opinion. The economic climate of this township cannot and will not support such backhanded activities.

In the coming two years, a 1 mill school tax is up for renewal. The administrators as well as our school board are aware of this, but I'm not sure the voting public is.

Come voting time, I will personally remind the township how administrators and school board members acted in bad faith after the 3-mill proposal passed.

The aforementioned two demands should not be taken lightly, as this is the mood of the people.

This is the school board's and the administrators' opportunity to "save face" and show great leadership. For God's Sake and the sake of the "Kids in Clarkston," don't, don't let them down!!!

Ronald P. Galley

EDITOR'S NOTE: As reported in The Clarkston News on July 22, the vote approving the 7 percent salary increases for administrators and other non-affiliated supervisory personnel was 5-2.

"Yes" votes were cast by board President Janet Thomas, Secretary Mary Jane Chaustowich, Treasurer Addison Hubbard and trustees Fernando Sanchez and Stephen Werner.

Voting "no" were Vice President Vincent Luzi and Trustee Carolyn Place. Luzi asked that the record show his "no" vote was because the motion included a 10 percent raise for the food service supervisor. Place asked that the record show her "no" vote was because of a matter of procedure—she said the board should wait to approve the superintendent's raise until after a formal school board review of his job evaluation.

As a matter of public record, the vote is to be published in a public notice of the minutes of the meeting and is available at the administration office.

Boat ramp plan ridiculous

The proposed planning of the Independence Township Board to install a boat ramp on the south end of Deer Lake in the Village of Clarkston with approximately $6,000 of federal funds is not only ridiculous, but would result in the creation of future lake problems too numerous to mention.

I understand that two members of the township board, who do NOT live on the lake and do NOT pay lakefront taxes but are boating enthusiasts, are the sponsors of the quarterback sneak.

The mere mention of this boat ramp back some time last March was unanimously opposed by all present at the meeting.

We are all anxious for a DNR meeting relative to the above, in the near future, as we are very concerned with the future of Deer Lake.

Thanks for bottles, cans for SCAMP

Clarkston SCAMP has raised over $850 from the Bottle and Can Drive held the week of July 4. Thanks goes out to all who helped make this a worthwhile project.

Sheila Meadows of Summerhill Road, Independence Township, was the top collector. She collected over 1,000 bottles and cans thanks to her supportive neighborhood. She won $25 worth of groceries from Ritter's Farm Market.

Stephanie Smith from Brandon Township won the Clarkston SCAMP JACKET for collecting over 900 bottles and cans.

Father Lewis from Colombiere Center and Scott Lambert, who lives on Clarkston Road, both brought in over 300 cans and bottles.

Again, thanks to everyone who participated. The money brought in from this project officially began our 1982 fund raising efforts. If you are interested in working with Clarkston SCAMP to help bring about SCAMP '82, call 625-3330 for more information.

Jim's jottings

Auld acquaintance

by Jim Sherman

I was in the last class to be graduated from Vernon High School. (I'd like to add a sidenote right off—notice I wrote "Be graduated". One of the few grammatical corrections I remember from my father is: "You don't graduate! You are graduated!")

There were nine in the class of 1943. The next year high school students split between Durand and Corunna. I split for college, and have seen only a couple classmates since, none in a dozen years.

After mother died and dad moved, there was no reason to return to Vernon, though some classmates stayed.

Being such a small school, seniors even learned names of some lower classmen (persons). Two we recall were Joy Mason and Joann Rowley.

That was 38 years ago.

Joy's dad was the only saloon keeper in town. My dad was the John Barleycorn of the saloon and "world's greatest shuffleboard player." Dad is the "world's greatest whatever he was doing at the time."

Dad is in Griffin Nursing Home in Corunna now. It took him a while to get used to these surroundings, but he's making it fine. Even wears his wig once in a while to stimulate comment from the aides.

On our most recent visit, as we chatted with dad in the lounge, a middle aged woman in white approached the back of dad's chair, and asked Hazel and I, "Don't you know me?"

There was only a hint of recognition of Whistler's mother

by Kathy Greenfield

The years have gone quickly. I still remember the joy of welcoming our two children into the world, of holding them in my arms and of watching them discover the wonders of light, color and sound.

Now we look each other in the eye, swap advice and sometimes exchange tennis shoes or socks. And last month, it became official—there are two teenagers living in our house.

Since birthday number one, we've always celebrated with a party for friends. It began with babies smashing pieces of cake while seated in high chairs.

Then there were parties with lots of games, planned to fill up every minute. For a long time, I called mothers of the guests to make sure an invitation would not interfere with other plans.

All that has progressed to a meeting a few weeks before the birthday party. We discuss menu and activities.

For his 13th birthday, my son took it from there—he shopped for game prizes and lunch ingredients, made his guest list and called everyone himself.

There were only a couple of slip-ups. One guest arrived at the correct time a day early. Another forgot—that's not surprising after numerous changes in time and date with an equal number of phone calls. His line was busy, so my husband and son drove over and he arrived just a little late.

It was a good party. There was eating, swimming, a movie matinee and a successful obstacle course designed and put together by my son.

I must admit, however, I felt a tiny tinge of sadness when I thought about how the parties have changed and about the passing of time.

A few days after the party, something significant happened. My son announced he had learned to whistle through his thumbs and I remembered that was something I always wanted to do, but could never get it together.

He gave me perfect pointers and we were both pleased with my success. I, too, can now whistle through my thumbs.

It seems appropriate that this discovery came about thanks to the recent celebrator of birthday number 13.

President's letter thanks kind kids

He wasn't expecting thanks, says Duane Proctor, the sixth grade teacher whose class sent a video tape of a performance to President Ronald Reagan.

But now that he has a signed note from the President, Proctor is pleased.

"The day that President Reagan got shot, we were in the process of planning and working on the play," said Proctor.

His pupils were upset when they heard news reports of older students jeering and making negative remarks about the President upon hearing of his brush with death.

"They wanted to let him know not all students felt that way," said Proctor, so the idea to send the President a video tape of their show, "That is What America is About," was carried out.

The tape was sent off a few days after the May 7 performance. It included a variety of songs like "America the Beautiful" and "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and the kids reading poems about the United States and reading "The Gettysburg Address."

Proctor sums up the play in a word, "Terrific," he said. "They put on quite a show."

'If it Fitz. . .'

What the judge meant was . . .

by Jim Fitzgerald

The problem is the same in Detroit and London and Cleveland and hundreds of other cities: Not enough jobs. What's the solution? How about law school?

Most unemployed people want jobs, but there simply aren't any available. The only answer is for the jobless to make their own jobs—to create a need for their services and then fill it. On the lowest level, a shoe shiner can create mud puddles outside posh men's clubs and charge $1 per shoe to shine away the splash marks.

Lawyers operate on a much higher level. Doctors and auto mechanics are pretty good at creating profitable work for themselves. But it's generally conceded that the world's most extensive and expensive mud puddles are created by and for lawyers. I was reminded of this anew recently when I read the results of a study financed by the federal government.

Researchers discovered that an average juror in a criminal case understands only about half of the judge's instructions to the jury. When many judges explain the applicable points of law, their explanations are so long, complex, disorganized and legalistic that jurors are often more confused than informed. The result is that, after perplexed deliberation, a jury often causes justice to have a miscarriage.

Obviously, these miscarriages could be avoided if judges talked plain English instead of garbled legalese. Amiram Elwork, the Philadelphia psychology professor in charge of studying confused jurors, said each state should appoint committees of judges, lawyers and laymen to overhaul traditional jury instructions.

"Here is a great opportunity to make tremendous strides to improve the law, and nobody's doing it," Elwork complained.

That's all right; the overhaul committees wouldn't work anyway. Committee laymen would be greatly outnumbered by lawyers, who don't want to be understood by laymen, and by judges, who have been lawyers too long to change their speech patterns. The only way the laymen could understand the lawyers would be to hire their own lawyer to guide them through the mud puddles.

And, presto, that's how lawyers create a need and then fill it. They refuse to be understood by anyone except themselves. They get elected to legislatures and write laws only lawyers can understand. They get hired by government bureaus and make regulations only lawyers can understand. They get appointed to corporation boards and formulate policy only lawyers can understand.

If a layman wants to successfully and legally complete any transaction more complicated than buying candy from a vending machine, he must hire a lawyer. The first thing the lawyer will do is warn the layman about the horrendous risks of operating a vending machine without a lawyer present.

Someday soon, a lawyer will offer the only possible cure for confused juries. He will suggest that juries should hire lawyers to help them understand judges.

That's how it will start—one lawyer per jury, with the fee split 12 ways, practically painlessly. But, as years pass, the no-fault insurance concept will continue to reduce the number of damage lawsuits, and the government will grant doctors and auto mechanics immunity from malpractice suits. To make a living, lawyers will have to be more and more creative, mudpuddlewise. The U.S. Bar Association will declare that, in the interest of justice, every individual juror should have his or her own lawyer to explain what the judge is explaining.

Any juror who can't afford to hire a lawyer will have one appointed by the court, with taxpayers paying the fee. Courthouses will be enlarged to accommodate the hundreds of public-spirited lawyers who appear each day to make themselves available to indigent jurors.

That's what the future holds. The next time you see a jobless young fellow idling on a street corner, tell him about the unlimited employment offered in the legal profession. Tell him to go to law school and learn how to create mud puddles.

Most of the array of tractors were driven by adults, but this trio of kids looked like they were having the most fun of all.

Same names, different teams: Terry McNally [right] leans into the pitch, while brother Kevin McNally waits in catcher's regalia for the result. In a fair and equitable twist of fate, both boys managed to take home a victory in last month's twinbill pitting brother vs. brother.

Brothers clash in friendly rivalry

By Al Zawacky

It could have been termed "the family feud" when Woody's Warriors and Mathisen Plumbing squared off in a Midget baseball double-header last month.

Those were two games pitting brother vs. brother—13-year-old Kevin McNally of Woody's Warriors and 12-year-old Terry McNally of Mathisen Plumbing.

Originally, both boys were on the Warriors' roster before Terry made the switch that set the stage for the friendly sibling rivalry.

"He (Terry) didn't want to be the youngest guy on the team," says Kevin, explaining the break up of the McNally tandem.

So naturally, there was a little bit of kidding back and forth when the two teams played against one another.

It was Terry's turn to do a little good-natured gloating when the two teams first met—a contest that ended in a 20-3 Mathisen victory.

"They're both good ballplayers," said Warrior Coach Gary Chamberlain of the McNally boys. "Terry sure hit the ball well against us the last time we played them—their whole team did."

"Hopefully," he added, looking forward to the double-header rematch, "we can beat them this time. If we just stay with them, we can do it."

When the first game of the twinbill had gone by boards, the Warriors had avenged their earlier loss with a 6-2 win.

Terry reacted stoically to the loss.

"I said we'd split today," he said, recalling a prediction he made to his brother Kevin. "I figured we'd win one and he'd win one. I think we'll come back (in game two)."

That prophecy proved to be good as gold as Mathisen gained a split by taking the second game 10-4.

Point After

By Al Zawacky

How about a quick game of Priorities?

How I spent my summer vacation...

Looking forward to September: It's almost too good to be true.

The Lions look strong. Michigan is ranked No. 1. And the Clarkston Wolves... well, let's just say they're going to be good. Very good.

As a card-carrying football fanatic, this fall is shaping up to be my own personal concept of nirvana.

Oh, and another thing. The Sashabaw Junior High freshmen will win big in the annual cross town season opener—but Clarkston Junior High will win the re-match. Don't ask me why—I've just got a feeling.

Wondering how the new field lights look: Verdict—very impressive. What a pleasure it's going to be to watch the football games and halftime shows next month.

It's going to be a long, long six weeks of anticipation...

Checking out the sites across the river: I love just driving by Windsor Arena—that aging mountain of red brick on McDougall Street in downtown Windsor.

Just wandering through the corridors is worth an admission price...gazing at all the old team photographs, the memorabilia, sitting down in one of the narrow seats and looking out onto the tiny ice surface...geez, the place even smells good.

Playing there is of course the ultimate experience, one I've been able to relish on three separate occasions. Why is it that Canadian ice always seems better than the stuff we have, anyway?

I miss Olympia Stadium...

Reacting to the settlement of the baseball strike: Yawn.

Inventing a new game: Inspired by our local school system, I came up with a new parlor game I'm calling "Priorities."

The rules are simple. Each player draws a line down the center of a sheet of blank paper, dividing it into two columns.

At the top of the left-hand column, each player then writes, "Things we have plenty of money for."

And at the top of the right-hand column, each player writes, "Things we can't afford."

Now, in the left-hand column each player can put things like....

•Fringe benefits

•Convention trips to Dallas

And in the right-hand column, some examples would be....

•Calling back all laid-off employees

•Purchasing more library books

•Restoring all axed programs

Got the idea?

The first player who has the most items in both columns at the end of 10 minutes is announced the winner.

I'll give you a little tip on how to win. Things that benefit the students and promote good education tend to go in the right-hand column. Things that benefit the Brown Brick Building and its inhabitants invariably find their way into the left-hand column.

Simple, eh?

It's good to be back.

Talent + coaching = 26 straight triumphs

By Kathy Greenfield

Two batters couldn't make it to base before the ball was fielded and shot to the first basegirl. One batter's ball sailed to the pitcher, who reached out and grabbed it.

And that was it.

The game, the season and 26 straight wins were over Thursday for the Independence Township Recreation Department Mini-Miss team coached by Bob Taylor and sponsored by E. F. Hutton.

"They haven't lost since the first game last year," said Taylor after the game, smiling all the while.

It's clear he is proud of his team of fifth, sixth and seventh graders, but Taylor remains lowkey after the game, as he is during it.

His guidance from the sideline comes in surprisingly quiet, calm doses.

"Let it come to you," he suggests as a girl is at bat. "OK, let's hold 'em" is his advice as they head out to the field when it's the other team's turn to bat.

The lowkey approach is no mistake.

"Kids this young, I don't like to see them yelled at," he said. "It just gets them upset."

He credits the 26-game-winning streak to the girls' talents.

"I think we have the best defensive team I've seen in a long time in girls this young," he said. "They're a great bunch of girls."

A coach with the township recreation department eight years, Taylor began by assisting with the Widget team of his son, now 16.

Five years ago, he received a call from the recreation department saying the T-ball team his daughter was on was coachless. His daughter is 10 now, and he's still her coach.

"I enjoy it," said Taylor. "I think it's more fun working with girls than boys. The girls seem to be more dedicated. They're out here for every game."

Taylor also coaches a Maxi-Miss team and the Midget team of his 14-year-old son.

When the third shift at Fisher Body was eliminated, Taylor began juggling his work hours and, by starting an hour early and taking his lunch hour during game time, he only missed about two-and-one-half hours of work a week, he said.

After Thursday's game, each of the 12 girls received a large trophy, purchased by the team's sponsor, E. F. Hutton. Then they left for the traditional celebration at the Clarkston Dairy Queen.

A few stayed behind to help gather the equipment. As they carried bats and slung bags of mitts over their shoulders, two paused to talk about their team and about winning.

"We really couldn't have done it without Mr. Taylor, because he helped us a lot," said Jodi Trzcinski. "He showed us even if we lose not to really care, just to play a good game."

"I think it's a pretty good team," added Tammy Swallow. "Mr. Taylor is a good coach. The first year we came here, he didn't get upset with anything we did. He showed us what to do. If it hadn't been for him, we wouldn't have been in first place all these years."

Taylor's team has finished in first place three years. They were sponsored by Max Broock in 1979 and 1980.

The 1981 Mini-Miss league champions are: Jennifer Councilman, Renee Davis, Heather Koned, Tammy Lee, Tina Lee, Gwen Lichtenberg, Beth Moshier, Kyle Powell, Tammy Swallow, Linda Taylor, Jodi Trzcinski and Nancy Warden.

Coach Bob Taylor and the girls on his Mini-Miss team gather together after their 26th win to share some good feelings. As with winning teams everywhere, the girls had lots of praise for their coach and the coach had good things to say about the team.

Some 50 youngsters participated and each one got a free soccer ball and a pass to a Silverdome game for attending. Hanson golf outing Aug. 31

Golfers can hit the greens Friday, Aug. 31, for a morning of exercise and helping a Clarkston High School student.

The B. J. Hanson Golf Outing for the scholarship fund begins at 8 a.m. at the Spring Lake Country Club, 6060 Maybee, Independence Township. Cost is $20 for nine holes of golf, lunch and a donation to the fund.

"The money goes toward a $1,000 scholarship in B. J. Hanson's name," said Clarkston schools Athletic Director Paul Tungate. "The scholarship is for a student who's excelled in science and participated in sports."

The award has been granted to two CHS seniors since its inception. John Tisch won the scholarship in 1980 and Jane Acton received the award in 1981.

B. J. Hanson was a former coach, athletic director and science teacher at CHS.

"The scholarship was established because of his interest in both the athletic and science fields," Tungate said. "It's an ongoing memorial to honor people in these fields."

For reservations for the B. J. Hanson Golf Outing, call Tungate at 625-3805 or Spring Lake Country Club at 625-3731.

A "Rampage" rider anticipates the big splash after zooming down the 35-foot high water coaster now open to the public at Groveland Oaks County Park. The "Rampage" combines the thrill of a roller coaster with the enjoyment of a water slide as riders plunge down on the ramp on specially designed fiberglass "surf boggins," ending their trip skipping across the waters of Stewart Lake. Cost is 25 cents per ride, five rides for $1 or all day for $2. Park admission for Oakland County residents is $2 per car and for non-residents $3. Groveland Oaks is located at Dixie Highway and Grange Hall Road in Holly.

Absent: ApMadoc, Raup, Symons.

Appointed Lillian Bauer to the Zoning Board of Appeals. Abstain, Basinger.

Approved the request of the Clarkston Farm & Garden Club to sell beer in the park on Sept. 5 & 6, 1981, in conjunction with the Labor Day activities sponsored by the Village Business Association.

Directed our ordinance enforcement officer to order removed within 30 days a deck constructed at 44 E. Washington without a building permit and a denial of the request by the board of appeals.

Transferred $7,000 in 1980-81 funds from the general fund to the local road fund.

Directed our attorney to inform the property owner at 42 W. Washington that his renting out part of his home is in violation of the R-2 Single Family zoning there.

Approved the proposed Sewer Maintenance Agreement between the village and the township.

Decided to inform the Dept. of Natural Resources and Independence Twp. that the village wants the permit request for a boat ramp at Deer Lake Beach denied, since the village owns the property and doesn't want it because of the liability, the larger boats, and possible maintenance expenses.

George Krull gears his dentistry toward kids

By Marilyn Trumper

A stuffed Mickey Mouse keeps an eye on what's happening in the orange dentist chair of George E. Krull, D.D.S. in the Clarkston Professional Plaza.

A giant yellow Teddy with brown muzzle, paws and ears protects one corner of the room.

The reading table's filled with magazines and books geared toward kids with titles like "Highlights", "ABC", "Little Red Riding Hood" and "Mother Goose".

This office is geared toward children's dentistry and is the foundation for a lifetime of good dentist-patient relationships.

It's here, in this office, where dental habits are formed, where a child will learn to visit the dentist—not because it's fun or a good time—but because it's not so bad, Krull said.

"I hope to be able to reduce their level of anxiety. I want them to think of a visit to the dentist as nothing out of the ordinary—just something to experience," he said.

Krull recommends children begin visiting at 18 to 24 months of age when he begins to look for any problems which could occur or are happening right now.

Yes, he says, a two-year-old child can have decaying teeth and require immediate attention. Dentistry is not limited to those with mature mouths.

Family dentists may not be used to dealing with children and may not have the resources at their disposal to handle different cases. That's where a children's dentist has one up on working with kids.

A young child's mouth demanding extensive work can overwhelm a family dentist not used to working on a small, uncooperative child, Krull said.

This child can be taken to a hospital, put under an anesthetic and the work can be done at one time without returning visits.

Krull's currently negotiating for such a facility at Wheelock Hospital in Goodrich.

As a specialist in children's dentistry, he cites problems inherent to kids like nursing bottle syndrome, where infants are put to bed with a bottle and the result is rotting teeth.

He's eager to discuss the importance of fluoride in the diet and stresses that parents need to have an active role in their children's dental awareness.

Dr. Krull welcomes patients with behavioral problems, the developmentally disabled and the handicapped.

He's one to step forward and meet problems which occur with a very small child—one who doesn't want a stranger's fingers in his mouth and doesn't necessarily want to sit still.

As he himself says, "I hope children will learn to visit the dentist regularly without parental supervision. Not because it's fun, or a good time—but because it's not so bad."

Five-year-old Jennifer Wantz of Independence Township looks up to Dr. George Krull for assurance she's got the brushing technique down pat. Krull recently opened his dental practice in the Clarkston Professional Plaza where he specializes in working with children.

Coping with kids

by Jim Windell

Leaving decisions to 10-year-old creates chaos

Sean was caught in a bind between his parents. The funny part was that he didn't live with either one.

As a 10-year-old who had been moved back and forth between his parents, both of whom had married after a divorce, Sean ended up with his grandparents this school year. When he first arrived at his grandma's house (he always thought of it as his grandma's house even though he had a grandfather too), he said he wouldn't stay there; he'd run away to his mother's.

He said he hated his father, a career Army man who lived in Florida, but he was most dissatisfied with his stepmother. Sean hadn't seen much of his mother who lived in Detroit, but he was sure when he was mad at his grandma that his mother would welcome him with open arms.

When his mother called him one day and set the wheels in motion to start visitations on the weekends with Sean, things got even more confusing.

His father and grandmother didn't believe his mother was an adequate mother. His mother thought that living with his grandmother was unhealthy because grandma was elderly and, after all, she was his mother.

By this time, Sean was sure, having listened to tales from relatives about his mother's behavior years ago, that she was not someone he wanted to see. When the court order arrived specifying a time when Sean would visit his mother, he went into a panic. He cried and wanted to run away.

The visit with his mother lasted barely an hour because Sean was literally ill from fear, panic and confusion. His mother was convinced he was emotionally disturbed. His grandmother knew the visits wouldn't go well. Sean wanted no more visits.

Somewhere along the way following this disastrous attempt at a pleasant Sunday afternoon between mother and son, someone suggested that Sean decide where he would live and who he would visit when.

Sean just wanted to avoid this sort of thing. And why not?

He was confused enough about his life and his relationships with his parents. Who could expect a 10-year-old to make sense out of all this and have enough judgment to decide what was best and would benefit him in the long run?

A 10-year-old child cannot make decisions that only adults can make. The error in most of the planning was to base decisions on what Sean said when he was upset.

He had been used and tossed around by his parents and his confused thinking had been compounded by years of listening to what other people thought about his parents and stepparents.

Sean, no matter where he lives or who he visits, will need a clear-headed adult to make decisions for him. Furthermore, he will need many years to sort out his own, true feelings about his natural mother and father.

3rd in series: Training Fido to 'stay'

"Down...Stay" can keep Caesar in the kitchen while dessert is served, or near a camper on a trip, or in his assigned spot in your bedroom. (Dogs are most happy when they share your den with you!)

Place your dog in the "sit" and pull his front legs forward to the "down" position, as you say, "Down." Praise him when he is down. Do this at your left side.

Walk forward, giving the "heel" or "walk" request as you move your left foot forward to walk. Stop after a few steps, and repeat the "down" exercise. Do this 10 times. Then, review the heel and sit.

You can combine a down motion with your arm and the verbal command. You raise your arm straight up (as you raise your hand in school), and with "down," you lower it quickly to your side. The dog will eventually respond to only the arm motion. Do not try the arm motion alone until he is perfect at both commands 100 percent of the time.

After he is comfortable with the "down," place the flat of your hand in front of his nose and say, "Stay." Walk in a close circle around the dog; if he stays, praise him. Then try the same while going to the end of the lead. Stand for 30 seconds. Increase to one minute, 2 minutes, 5 minutes, etc.

Use the "stay" with the sit and use when the dog begins to enter forbidden or dangerous territory—after he performs 100 percent on the above exercises. This saved my first maltese from death.

She always would run between the up-fronters and lagers on lengthy green-mountain hikes. After a hike one day, I was in the parking lot, and late comers were coming down the trail. She shot from them to me just as some youngsters wheeled in and screeched their car. I screamed, "stay" and she stopped dead in her tracks, a tragedy averted.

The recall has life-saving potential as well as being high on the list of qualities of a well-mannered dog. It is something you must teach after the dog has learned other basic behavior well.

Always praise your dog (puppy) when he comes when called. Never punish him after he has come. If he is reluctant about coming, use food rewards and lavish praise.

Start by using a 10-foot line. Leave your dog in a sit-stay, and go to the end of the line. After a minute, in a happy voice, call the dog's name, followed by

"come" (i.e., "Caesar come"). Pull in the line to you until the dog is in front of you. Repeat and repeat. Practice inside by going across the room; then outside a short distance, and farther. Always when the dog makes a mistake, return to the most elementary step and repeat.

Congratulations on now having a well-mannered dog, a lasting companion, and a job well-done!

Wanted: recreation volunteers

The Oakland County Parks and Recreation Commission is seeking volunteer therapeutic recreation aides to offer support and assistance to handicapped individuals.

Volunteering provides an opportunity for challenging work, valuable experience and personal growth, says Anne Clinton-Cirocco, coordinator of the Oakland County Parks volunteer program.

"Our primary project right now is working with the United Cerebral Palsy team, she says. "Volunteers will work individually with the athletes and get them ready for the United Cerebral Palsy games."

All aides will be trained and should have a flexible schedule. An aide must be at least 16 years old and willing to travel throughout Oakland County.

The time commitment is about two hours a week, says Clinton-Cirocco.

Recreation aides are also needed for a wide range of other activities, including public relations, cross country skiing, arts and crafts and clowning.

For more information on the volunteer program, contact Anne Clinton-Cirocco at 625-8133.

Village Day School adds French class

More than the moi of Miss Piggy awaits preschoolers at the Village Day School as conversational French classes become a regular part of the program this year.

The school, which meets at Calvary Lutheran Church, 6805 Bluegrass, Independence Township, is now accepting applications for day care, the 2½- to 3½-year-old program, the 3½- to 4½-year-old program and developmental kindergarten.

The 2½- to 3½-year-olds meet on Tuesday and Thursday mornings from 9 a.m. to noon and the 3½ to 4½ year-olds meet on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9 a.m. to noon.

Developmental kindergarten is designed for school-age children not attending kindergarten and 4½- to 5-year-olds are eligible. Days and times for these pupils are to be set when enrollment is known.

Day care is available from 7:15 a.m. to 5:15 p.m. weekdays.

Regular sessions at the school begin Sept. 14.

Still time to swim

There's still time to get in on swimming lessons sponsored by Sashabaw United Presbyterian Church.

Dancers and dragons, Martians and knights were among the 130 young readers who trooped into the Independence Township Library July 29 to enjoy the "Clown Makers," a film that featured Don Adams of "Get Smart" fame.

The costume party was part of the Summer Reading Club, Adventure '81. The difficult job of judging costumes went to Librarian James Hibler. The awards, based on originality, imagination and the amount of work that went into executing the costume, were given to five children.

Colin Garlak as a red devil and Derek Shirley, a knight of the Round Table, were winners for the boys. Sandra Wolfe as a bookworm with antennae and a green face and Carrie Peruski, a non-ferocious lion, were winners among the girls.

A special award for the zaniest outfit went to Paul Cole as a monster with a million eyes.

Bauer fills vacancy on village ZBA

After a three-month search, Clarkston's Village Council has found a resident to fill the vacant zoning board of appeals (ZBA) post.

At the July 27 meeting, council approved the appointment of Lillian Bauer. Trustees James Schultz, Connie Fisher and Jackson Byers voted "yes." Trustee Ruth Basinger abstained and Trustees Gary Symons and David Raup were absent.

Bauer, who lives at 175 Surrey Lane, is a village resident of 34 years.

"I like to serve the village," Bauer said, having learned of the appointment. "I've always taken an interest in what goes on here and like to keep it as is."

Here's Herb

by Herb Rose

The only solution may be a concrete slab

THERE WAS A brief period of time when I considered mowing my lawn with a hand-push, reel-type mower. After some brief but conclusive experimentation, I determined that the hand-push mower belonged to an era when you could easily rent a neighborhood urchin.

Today, not only is urchin-renting prohibitively expensive, but the average urchin would look at the traditional lawnmower incredulously and, with fear and trepidation, query:

"I'm supposed to push that?"

Talk of renting anything makes me recall one of my idols, a 12th Century English liveryman named

Hobson whose exemplary modus operandi gave us the expression "Hobson's choice."

At Hobson's livery you could rent any horse you liked, but you took the one that stood closest to the door. Hobson apparently felt that his entire inventory could last longer if individual selections were made by chance.

I like this man's style, but this practice must have led to some fascinating dialogs between leasee and leaser:

"This horse is black. I wanted the roan."

"Try Hertz 'Rent-a-Roan'."

"I want that roan horse."

"Take the black."

"Roan!"

"No!"

I bought an inexpensive power mower that suffered from the Nader syndrome carried to a logical conclusion. There were so many safety devices that not only was it difficult for me to hurt myself but it was almost impossible to hurt the grass.

I considered it no loss when it stopped-short-never-to-run-again soon after it hit a submerged railroad tie.

I then, throwing caution to the wind, rushed into the marketplace and spent $35 for an over-powered mower that viciously cut tall grass and short trees, mulched rocks and was considered a hazard to building foundations.

This machine was so old I suspect it was originally powered by steam and retrofitted with an internal combustion engine at some later date. It was eminently satisfactory as a lawn shortening device, but it did create one problem.

As my after-purchase cost soared with the acquisition of two replacement handles, which were obtainable from the Better Handle Department of the Whoopee Bowl, and a spark plug, I found that bemoaning the expense of a dollar to repair a $35 machine could be injurious to my health.

It was particularly unhealthy if I were talking to someone who had just signed a ruinous promissory note in order to purchase a mower purported to have the capability of cutting and extracting usable protein from grass.

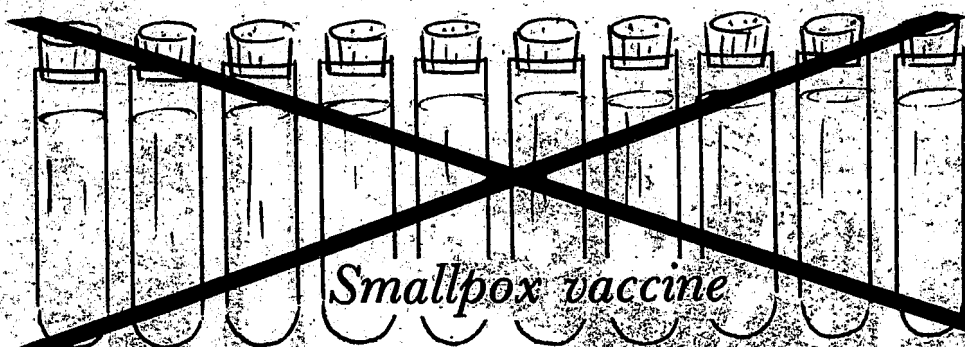

With the elimination of the hand mower and new or old power mowers as totally acceptable grass cutting systems, my only viable option appears to be to buy a mobile home and park it in the middle of a four-acre concrete slab.

I could treat grass as a botanical oddity, grown in a small ornamental pot.

Déjà Vu

Putting the kibosh on smallpox

Smallpox vaccine

Smallpox vaccinations

The word itself threw youngsters entering school.

It had an ominous tone.

Smallpox sounded immensely evil, ranked right up there with bubonic plague or leprosy.

The injection hurt—but the big spherical pox it left healing in its wake was enough irritation to irk even the smallest youngster.

After the pox there was a round scar which youngsters sported as if it were a medal of bravery, comparing and contrasting their individual awards with morbid relish.

The smallpox vaccine no longer haunts school-age kids. It became history 10 years ago, says Dr. Irving Kernis, local pediatrician.

"(Its demise) was something that came about a decade ago," he said. "Because the smallpox vaccine was one of the first we developed, it was appropriate it was the first disease we were able to conquer.

"More people were dying from the vaccination than contracted the disease," Kernis said. "So, it was not used any more."

There is no more smallpox left anywhere in the world, he added.

In case of an outbreak or recurrence, laboratories are ready and waiting with the vaccine.

"But that's the only place it continues to exist," he said, "in laboratories."

Oh, kids embarking into kindergarten still submit to injections and vaccines for various and sundry diseases, but not the dreaded smallpox.

It's been conquered and eliminated by medical science—and that's one step forward all mankind's probably ready to applaud.

Fond farewells

After putting for all she's worth, Melissa Corbin of Springfield Township steps back to ponder her shot—while the next little guy in line makes a grab for the club. Kids lined up to play bingo, bust balloons, throw bean bags through rings and more. All activities were free and the lines were long—an indicator of fun by any ruler.

He's an alien, but Quonto captures essence of humanity

His creator, 14-year-old Guy Davis of Independence Township, introduces his comic strip about Quonto this week. Next week, a serial about the lovable, almost-super-hero begins.

Quonto. Age: 758. Height: 7½ feet. Skin: green. Eye: yellow. Nationality: unknown.

As Quonto himself would say, "Holy Hamhocks!"

The expression, according to Quonto's Guy Davis, just seems to fit the green alien's character.

Whenever Quonto appears in Guy's comic strip, his sidekick Ploovo is closeby.

The flying robot looks like a sphere with eyes, and arms that whip out whenever needed. Ploovo is a byrd—the spelling is Guy's—and it's close enough to reveal that the robot flies despite its wingless design.

Guy, who is 14, begins his sophomore year at Clarkston High School in the fall. Always drawing and sketching, Guy made the transition from pieces of paper to comic strip form last year.

Comic books were assignments in two classes at Sashabaw Junior High School—one for an art class and one for English. The assignments brought together a skill and interest Guy has had for a long time.

"It just came naturally," says Guy as he tries to recall when he started drawing cartoon figures. "I can't remember that far back."

Guy admits he is an avid fan of the movie "Star Wars"—he's seen it 14 or 15 times and he's viewed the sequel, "The Empire Strikes Back" 13 times.

"Star Wars was OK, but I like to think I'm doing my own thing," he says. "I make Quonto a lot different than Star Wars."

Quonto has characteristics that are decidedly not earth-like. He has three fingers on each hand and two toes on each foot. His eye is shaped like an inverted heart.

"He can see like everyone else," says Guy. "He's alien, so he just has one whole eye—he blinks and everything."

While Quonto could be called the hero of Guy's work, he is not a typical "good guy"—there is no squeaky-clean image.

"He's really not that nice," says Guy. "He's not like a super hero that saves every galaxy. Sometimes he's a pirate. He has lots of enemies. The only thing that makes him win is his ship's so small he's faster."

Ah, the enemies.

There are the Zygotians with flat-nosed beaks, wrinkles under their eyes and horns. The Cyclopians sport one eye and hoof-like feet which dwarf Quonto's 7½ feet, leaving him barely tall enough to meet the creatures eye-to-hoof. Then, there's a phantom of the opera of outer space. And there are others.

Guy scoffs at the frightening line-up, while maintaining an awareness of his power over his creations.

"I kind of like to think it would be neat to be able to do what Quonto does instead of being stuck here," says Guy. "I'd kind of like to meet some of his enemies—I created them, so they couldn't really do much to me."

As Quonto flies, fights and jokes his way through adventures in space, the going is easy for Guy, who usually doesn't plan what happens next, but merely lets the story flow.

"I just start drawing," he says. "I think whatever Quonto would say, I write it down."

Even though Quonto doesn't look like a human, his personality is easy to relate to. The reason that seems to be true is that Guy, as with many writers of fiction, gets into his character.

"Sometimes it's the realest thing I can get to being the way I want—living out my fantasies through my character," says Guy. "I think I'm Quonto when I draw."

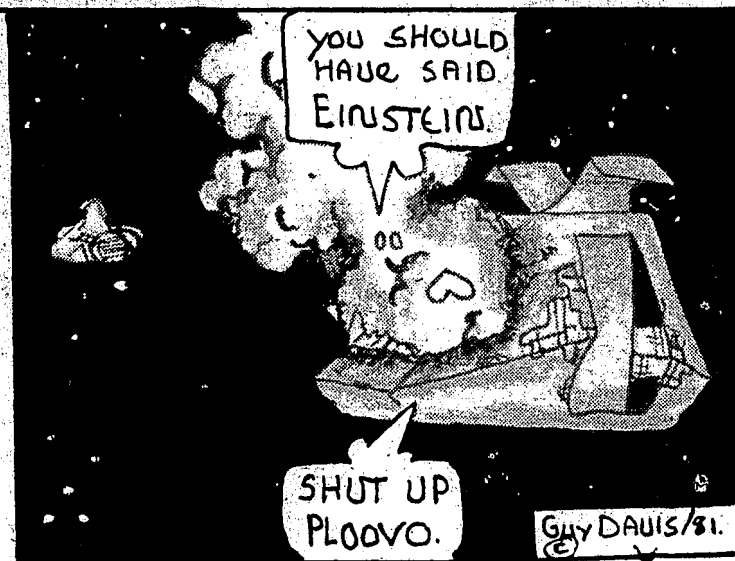

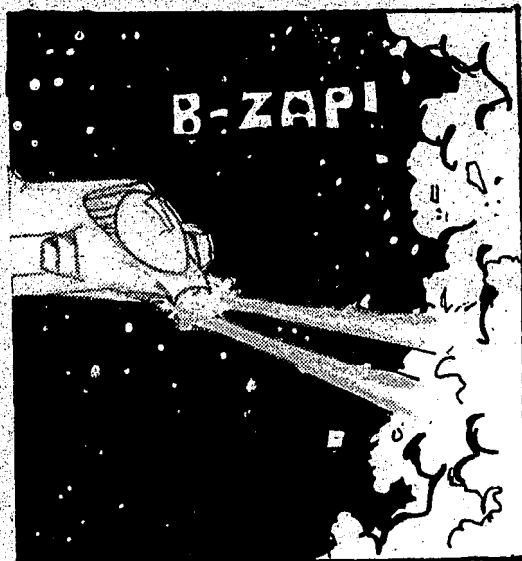

—Kathy Greenfield

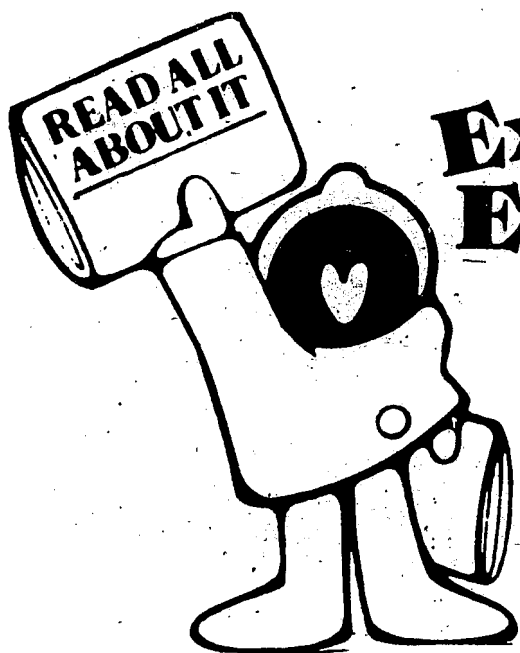

Guy Davis spends hours—three or four a day—at the drawing board creating the world of Quonto and his friends and enemies. Guy begins by making pencil sketches, filling in later with black and shades of gray for The Clarkston News strip or using color for sketches, large and small, that surround his workplace in the family room of his parents' Independence Township home.

Learn about Slovakia at Dominican museum

In the midst of an area known for its gravel and automobile industry, its lakes and golf courses, who wouldn't be surprised to stumble upon a tiny, thriving, oasis of eastern European culture.

It's here to be sure, and one need only drive to the Dominican Sisters' Motherhouse in Oxford to find it.

In the basement of the Motherhouse Sister Gabrielle (Catherine) Woytko has established a small museum and library, filled with artwork, clothing, handicrafts and books from Slovakia.

Known as the Slovak Cultural, Educational and Literary Center, the museum and library facilities are open to the public daily from 9 to 6.

Visitors can count on a personally guided tour conducted by Sister Catherine. And for good reason: everything in the facility is there because of the efforts of the Sister. Her full time job at the convent involves researching, cataloging and expanding the Slovak Center's collection. It is her job alone, and the years of work she has invested in making the museum and library a reality come out of a strong love for her parents' homeland and its people.

Although Sister Catherine was born and raised in Pennsylvania, she grew up speaking only Slovak at home. English was learned later at school and from friends. The rich cultural and language background she gained from her childhood remained with her throughout her adult life.

In 1971 she finally had the opportunity to visit Slovakia. Traveling on a scholarship from the Windsor-Detroit Slovak peoples' organization, she studied and toured Slovakia for a month during the summer.

Naturally, her souvenirs from that trip went into the museum, as did photographs and write-ups on the dozens of churches and castles she visited.

Another Dominican nun, Sister Francis Mary, traveled to Slovakia just last year to visit relatives there. Her trip, too, resulted in several donations to the museum.

Most of the items in Sister Catherine's collection, however, have been donated by native Slovaks, from around the world, who have heard of her work and supported it. She has received donations to the Slovak Center from people in Argentina, Australia, South America, Canada, Europe and the United States.

Included in the museum's display cases are dozens of dolls garbed in the traditional Slovak folk costumes, intricately designed samples of colorful needlework, and hand-decorated eggs. Also lining the shelves of the cases is an assortment of wood carvings, farm tools and coins.

Large dividers in the center of the room are filled with photos of Slovak writers and painters. The captions below appear in both Slovak and English, the English translations having been done by Sister Catherine. In one corner is a phonograph and tape recorder where visitors may listen to selections of Slovak folk music and the works of famous Slovak composers and singers.

Books on religion, art, history and a host of other topics line the shelves of the Slovak library, as well as current periodicals in the Slovak language. Sister Catherine's latest project is cataloging the library's collection with the Library of Congress so that visitors may check out books.

She works on that project, a monumental one, a little bit each day and in the between time keeps herself busy with letter writing and other research. The highlight of Sister Catherine's schedule in May was a trip to Toronto, where she attended the Slovak World Congress.

Once every three years Slovaks from around the world meet, in a different place each time, to discuss world issues and exchange ideas that would help the Slovak people. This was to be Sister Catherine's first trip to the event, from which she hoped to return with still more items to add to her cultural center.

—Martha Fulford

This painting of a Slovak farm woman is only a small sample of the artwork, both original and prints, on display in the museum.

Sister Catherine with a doll dressed in Slovak native costume. Another manikin on display in the museum features a man's costume that is over 100 years old.
