Gifted kids' program makes grade

By Kathy Greenfield

Come January, some 75 academically gifted pupils enrolled in Clarkston schools are expected to be members of a special two-day-a-week program.

The board of education voted 5-2 Monday night to approve the establishment of the gifted program for two-and-one-half years.

When the meeting began, six residents volunteered their views on gifted education. Five said they supported such a program and one said he was against it. The discussion ended when the board agreed to add the previously tabled item to the agenda.

Voting to approve the program, which would include fourth, fifth and sixth graders the first year and cost about $50,000, were Janet Thomas, Mary Jane Chaustowich, Vincent Luzzi, Carolyn Place and Steven Werner.

"I believe an education that is aimed solely at the average youngster is tantamount to being contented with mediocrity," said Werner.

Place expressed her support of the program, but said she believed parents should not have to provide transportation to North Sashabaw Elementary School, as the program's guidelines suggested. She also objected to criteria for selection which includes that children with emotional problems cannot be taken into the class.

"I know from my own experience many children who are gifted and have some emotional problems resulting from years of not being challenged," she said. "I feel it is definitely discriminatory." Place is a special education teacher in the Holly school district.

Casting "no" votes were Fernando Sanchez and Addison Hubbard.

"We can't be everything to everybody," said Sanchez. "We have to narrow our perspectives in terms of what we can do for our students within the financial restrictions that we have. It's just not logical to start new programs when we have to scrimp and save for the following year."

Resident David Kithill expressed similar concerns when he voiced his disapproval of the program, while citing the 3-mill tax increase voters approved in June.

"I think any program which serves the gifted is a super program," he said. "However, we voted for this millage increase and I was under the impression this millage would go to maintain programs. To create a brand new program in the tight times we're facing, I feel it would not be fair to voters."

Other residents who spoke expressed sentiments similar to those of Linda Sutton of Woodcreek Trail.

"It's a sad thing when your child doesn't want to go to school, because he hasn't learned a thing in over a year," she said. "I feel the schools are tremendous at special education classes, but if they can help the children at the bottom of the ladder, why can't they help those at the top of the ladder?"

Two teachers are to instruct two sections of gifted children two days a week each, with Fridays set aside for conferences with other teachers and with parents.

The teachers are to leave their regular classrooms shortly. The school board is to recall two teachers to take their places at a special meeting Thursday, Sept. 17.

Pupils enrolled in the gifted program are to be selected by a committee. Criteria includes test scores and teacher recommendations. When under consideration, a youngster's name, age, sex and school are not to be known by committee members.

Third graders are to be added to classes the second year they are in existence.

Melodious minstrel

A fantasy world created to depict the 16th Century is open to visitors at the Michigan Renaissance Festival underway for the next five weekends at Colombiere Center. While there are plenty of opportunities for large groups to gather around street players and musicians, there are quiet moments, too. The talents of minstrel Claudette Witek of Bloomfield Hills entertain Mike McDonald [center] of Balmoral Terrace, Independence Township, and Dave Rose of Lake Orion. There's more on the festival on Page 21 of this week's Clarkston News.

Kindergarten switch sparks parents' protest

Charging chaos in the 39-pupil kindergarten class at Clarkston Elementary School, a dozen women met with Clarkston schools administrator William Neff Monday morning.

The solution Neff offered was to move a few days earlier than planned to resolve the situation.

The class would be split and Clarkston Elementary kindergarten teacher Mary Dedricks agreed to take over the newly formed afternoon class until Monday, when Bailey Lake Elementary kindergarteners would have one section eliminated and the teacher there, Cindy Omans, would be ready to split her teaching duties between the two schools.

The solution was challenged by several parents at Monday night's board of education meeting. Citing that they had not known of the problem until they reached the meeting, board members agreed to a special meeting to discuss solutions on Thursday, Sept. 17, at 7 p.m.

Parents at both meetings expressed dismay over disruption of their children's first experience in school. They asked the school board to consider keeping Bailey Lake's team teaching methods intact despite low enrollment there and to hire an additional teacher for the afternoon class at Clarkston Elementary at a cost of about $8,000.

Omans asked the board to reconsider the present solution, because team teaching was underway at Bailey Lake and the afternoon class would no longer benefit.

"I will take the job (at Clarkston Elementary) if I have to," she said. "I don't want to see bitter feelings, but it's really going to upset our program completely."

Neff, who noted a drop of 50 pupils enrolled in kindergarten over last year and 250 fewer pupils in elementary school, defended the plan.

"We have reached the point right now where we are running into classrooms where there are very, very small numbers," he said. "I'm simply trying to be cost-effective."

The school board is to meet at the Administration Building, 6389 Clarkston-Orion, Independence Township.

Cost to repair the broken window is estimated at $50, according to police reports.

The above information was collected from reports at the Oakland County Sheriff's Department.

Couple held for cocaine sale

Two Clarkston Village residents, a husband and wife team, have been arrested for allegedly selling cocaine for $7,000 to an undercover Michigan State Police officer.

James Reekwald, 34, and his wife Jayne, 23, of Holcomb Street, were arraigned Monday before Judge Robert W. Carr in the 51st District Court, Waterford, on joint charges of delivery of a controlled substance. Bond was set at $1,000 each.

James was charged twice and the judge set an additional $1,000 bond.

According to state police Lt. Roger Simmons, James Reekwald was arrested Saturday night at the Northfield Hilton in Troy after allegedly attempting to sell cocaine to an undercover officer.

Jayne Reekwald was arrested later at the Holiday Inn in Bloomfield Hills.

Their arrests ends a four month investigation by the state police narcotics investigations and the federal Drug Enforcement Agency, Simmons said.

An undercover officer, according to police, had negotiated with Reekwald to buy a pound of cocaine for $28,000, but settled on four ounces at $7,000 when that was all the suspect could produce.

Police report the drug was purchased in Miami and flown to Troy.

The cocaine had a street value of $40,000. Police also report a quantity of qualudes seized in the arrest.

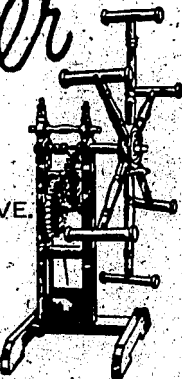

A Rochester man, arrested for his part in the scheme, was later released from the Oakland County Jail pending further investigation, police said.

A preliminary exam has been scheduled for the Reekwalds Oct. 2 at 9 a.m. at the 51st District Court.

Planner's head on chopping block

Independence weighs whether to hire new firm or retain old one

By Marilyn Trumper

The head of Independence Township planner Tod Kilroy balances precariously on the chopping block as board members continue to weigh the hiring or retention of a planning consultant.

Kilroy's firm, Community Planning and Management of Utica, has represented the township for the past four years.

After the Sept. 8 board meeting, Kilroy said he did not understand the township's push to hire a new planner.

Independence Township Supervisor James B. Smith says it's the firm's method of charging that raised eyebrows around the board table and spawned the interviews of other firms.

Kilroy's contract expired with the township last May. Since then he's worked on a standard $40 an hour rate.

After two hours of debate at the Sept. 8 meeting, board members, unable to decide on a firm, voted 5 to 2 to table the matter until the Oct. 6 meeting.

Treasurer Frederick Ritter and Trustee Larence Kozma voted "no," and throughout the meeting Ritter rigorously defended Kilroy's firm.

"I'm in favor of retaining Kilroy," said Ritter. I've worked with him two years when I was on the ZBA (zoning board of appeals) and now as the township's Community Development Administrator. Whenever I've gone to him for assistance, I've always had good contact."

According to Smith, the board felt "last year's charges (from the planner) were out of control."

"When we established the 1981-82 budget, we as a board agreed that because of the drop in construction, and other planning activities, the planner's budget should be reduced by half."

Subsequently, Smith said, the board cut the 1980-81 budget from $21,000 to $10,000 for this fiscal year.

The township was receiving bills for what it understood was for time not spent in the township, but rather for time spent at workshops. And there was discontent among different boards and commission over the kinds of reports Kilroy submitted, Smith said after the meeting.

The board interviewed Kilroy's firm, Ayres, Lewis, Norris and May from Ann Arbor; Gerald Luedtke and Associates Inc. from Detroit; and a firm called Impact from Taylor.

"I personally favor Luedtke," Smith said, during the meeting. "He told us himself he takes a stand, and God, I love that in a planner. He's worked in top-flight communities like Grosse Pointe and Bloomfield Hills. Communities like that have withstood the test of time."

Trustee Dale Stuart said he favored Ayres, Lewis, Norris and May from Ann Arbor, a group with five years' experience.

"I would say I'm most impressed with Ayres, Lewis and the attitude of the people there and the fact that their firm has a back-up of talent," he said.

Trustee William Vandamark pointed out the continuity of keeping Kilroy and said he limited his choice to Kilroy and Luedtke.

"I recommend Mr. Kilroy. He has a lot of continuity to offer. He's been with us a long time. He knows the zoning, he's qualified and with his kind of experience you always have a real edge," he said.

"Where Mr. Luedtke shines is his depth. He has the expertise on staff, and I think he's better organized in reference to his planning reviews."

After the meeting, Kilroy expressed puzzlement over comments that his billing is confusing, and he defended his firm's practices.

"We're not just pulling fees out of thin air. We don't have a blank check. My schedule of fees is a contract signed by the township. A rezoning costs so much, plus so much an acre. We take a look at the master plan, ordinance, we draft the recommendation, etc."

Kilroy added he does not understand the township's push to hire a new planner.

"I could see it if the planning commission was not getting along with us, or members of the staff. But that's not the case," he said.

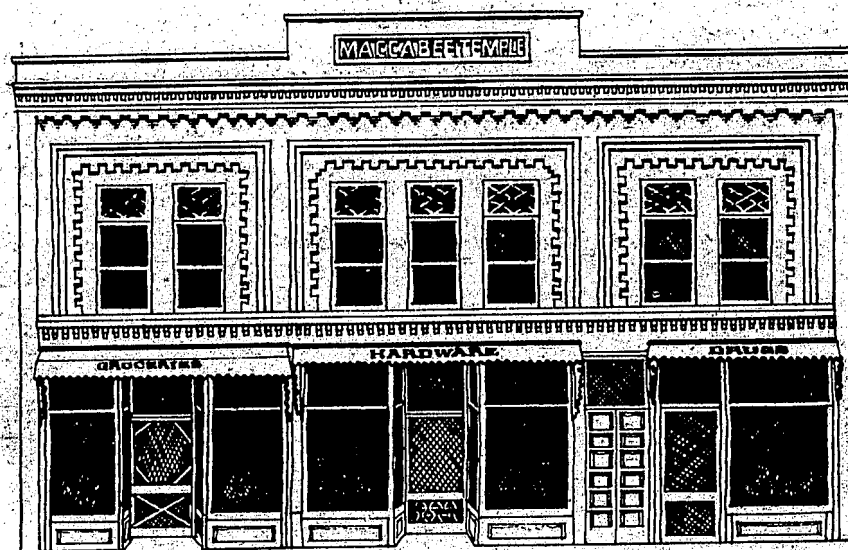

"I don't have this problem in other places. Usually there's one issue or person whose hit list you're on. I can't identify an act or reason," he said.

At an earlier meeting, on Sept. 1, Independence Township Planning Commission Chairman John Gray made a plea that board members retain Kilroy.

"The planning commission, in its recommendation to the board, asked that Kilroy be retained," Gray said.

"During my tenure here on the commission I cannot think of a time Tod didn't have the answers—and if he didn't he knew where to get them. He handles himself professionally. I would highly recommend the township continue his services."

Cards depict bygone days

New at the Clarkston Historical Society's booth at the Crafts and Cider Festival this weekend are note cards depicting six views of Clarkston buildings past and present. The drawings are by local artist Donella Vogel. They'll cost $2 for six note cards and envelopes or 35 cents each. In addition to the Macabee Temple pictured, there will be the Caribou Inn, the Walters house, Ronk house, Butters house and the old Baptist church. The historical society, which sponsors the festival, will also sell hand-crafted mirrors stenciled with apples, old post cards, old maps of the village, genealogy sheets and books. Memberships in the society will also be available for $10 and the price includes a copy of "Heritage," a hardcover book about Clarkston's roots, and newsletters every other month.

Coordinator has 'big plans' for vehicle

Independence helps finance senior citizen van

Independence Township has stepped in to do its share to finance the van donated to the Senior Citizen's Center by the Clarkston Rotary Club.

At a special meeting Sept. 8, board members voted unanimously to finance the needed $4,000 difference to pay for the van from the improvement revolving fund at no interest, with the suggestion that in lieu of interest, Rotary consider purchase of an extended warranty for the van.

"They're giving us in essence a $9,000 gift. I think we should not charge them interest," said Clerk Christopher Rose.

"You can't slap a gift horse in the mouth," said Trustee Daniel Travis.

Clarkston Rotary is putting down $5,000 for the van. The money was raised during the Rotary's Annual fund-raiser at Pine Knob featuring barber shop quartets, said Richard Ayers, Rotary president.

He thanks the community for support in the extravaganza, and says donating the van to the seniors is a way of returning that money to the community.

Ayers also thanks the people at Pine Knob for use of the pavillion.

"We've had use of the facility for the past three years. If it wasn't for them letting us use the facility, this whole thing wouldn't be possible," he said.

Rina Chemin, senior citizen coordinator, has big plans for the van.

"I think it's great. I think I have more plans for the van than there is van," she laughed. "We'll use it to take our seniors to the doctors, grocery shopping and to activities here at the center."

Ayers predicts the van will be presented within the next two weeks.

Springfield sets millage rates

Continuing an established practice, the Springfield Township Board has voted to levy less than the maximum allowable millage rate for the township general fund on 1981 property tax assessments.

The board voted at its regular monthly meeting Sept. 9 to levy 1 mill of the 1.3371 maximum under the Headlee amendment rollback for the general fund, but agreed to levy the maximum of .9843 mill for police and fire protection.

One mill is $1 for every $1,000 of assessed property valuation.

"For the general fund, we've only been levying about 70 percent of what we could," said Collin Walls, Springfield Township supervisor.

"I wouldn't consider levying anything less than the maximum (for police and fire protection)," he added.

The rates will raise an estimated $88,079 for police and fire protection and $92,881 for the township general fund, according to Walls.

The motion to approve the millage rates was made by township board Trustee Glen Vermilye and seconded by Trustee William Whitley. Board approval was unanimous.

25-year rain causes Mill Pond mess

By Marilyn Trumper

Zero visibility last week in Clarkston's Mill Pond resulted from a 25-year rain, and there's no way such an "act of God" could have been predicted, says Karl Randall, erosion control inspector for the Soil and Erosion Division of the Oakland County Drain Commissioner's Office.

"Rain of that intensity has been calculated to fall once every 25 years. We got four inches in a 24-hour period and as a result there was tremendous runoff," he said.

"The erosion control measures at St. Daniel's Catholic Church on Holcomb Road just gave way. They were overwhelmed. We had almost a flash flood situation," he said.

The church's straw and dirt berms at the construction site fell to the pounding rain, and the catch basins used to filter runoff filled almost immediately, Randall said, adding he knew of no temporary erosion control measure which would stand up to that volume of water.

He described the water from upstream as "churning," and said there was so much water at the Bluegrass culverts it approached coming up over the road, because the culverts were unable to handle the excess flow.

According to Randall, construction crews at St. Daniel's have been working to restore the straw and dirt berms and to clean out the retention basins.

Those precautions against erosion can be expected to withstand a normal rainfall, he stressed.

"When you look at (the Mill Pond) today, you can see it's already cleared up remarkably well. It looks bad when it's raining, but after the water settles it clears up," he said.

Township ups interest on departmental loans

The Independence Township Board has created a new policy on financing between its own departments geared to get the most for the dollar.

Under the Whitey Tower Administration when cash-flow problems plagued fire, police or general funds, board members approved the lending of money from the sewer fund, among others, at lower interest rates, like 5 3/4 percent, than it would cost to borrow from an outside source.

No more, said the board at a special Sept. 8 meeting, voting 5 to 1 to change the interest rate paid by one department to another to 65 percent of prime on the date of transfer.

Clerk Christopher Rose voted "no." Trustee William Vandermark was absent for that vote.

Trustee Dale Stuart said it was his opinion funds should be borrowed between departments at whatever the interest rate would be to borrow from an outside source.

The sewer fund, for example, should not have to minimize its earnings for coming to the rescue of another fund, he said.

The issue came up when Treasurer Frederick Ritter asked approval to transfer $25,000 to police and $100,000 to the general fund from the sewer bond fund.

The transfer is to ease cash flow for the police fund, expected to collect that money in December from taxes. The general fund experienced a shortage because the state held up the August state shared revenue payment of $130,000, Ritter said.

Board members approved the move, with the new policy of lending at 65 percent of the prime rate.

DNR sets hearing for Deer Lake

Residents ready to speak out on high speed boat traffic and volume on Independence Township's Deer Lake can plan to attend the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) public hearing.

"We don't know what the problem is out there," said Eric Olsen, Marine Rules and Education specialist for the DNR's Law Enforcement Division.

"Deer Lake is already quite heavily lawed. There seems to be an abundance of controls on the lake. We're anxious to hear what the people have to say."

Olsen has scheduled the public hearing Wednesday, Oct. 14, at 7 p.m. at Independence Township Hall, 90 N. Main Clarkston.

Yeah for parade, boo pushers

We have just returned from another of Clarkston's fantastic parades. It's a pleasure to see so many people throng to the village to enjoy an old-fashioned parade. The only damper on the day was the mob of watchers who insist the only way to see a parade is from the middle of the street.

People come early and line up at the curb, eagerly awaiting the first flags that pass by, but if they stay at the curb they soon find themselves at the back of the crowd.

By the time the band marched past there was barely room for them to squeeze through. People still refused to step back. Small children were standing dangerously close to horses' hoofs and giant wheels of disposal trucks.

Where were the parents and Oakland County Sheriff's Patrol? They were right out there in the middle of the street with the kids.

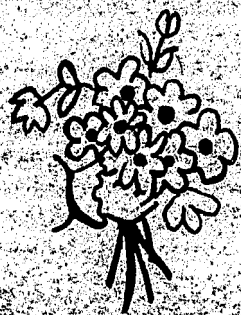

Those who refused to be inconsiderate and insisted on standing back and making their children sit down on the pavement found it difficult to see. With people standing so close to the parade, only those up front are able to see.

Let's get back to the real old-fashioned parade—where you watch from the curb, where the Sheriff's Patrol and parents remind children to stay back, where the marchers have plenty of room to parade past and where everyone can see.

Sam was OK

by Kathy Greenfield

I remember Sam.

He was a rather large garter snake who used to curl up on the porch of my parents' home and sun himself. He appeared each summer for several years.

It was not surprising to see a garter snake, or other harmless varieties of the reptile family, around my parents' house.

We lived on nearly five acres of property—there were open fields, wooded areas and swamps and, back over 20 years ago, there were few homes.

More than anything, Sam taught me something important about the balance of nature and about the value of garter snakes in general.

Sprinkled in the message not to bother the snake that my father presented was the lesson that garter snakes are worth their weight in gold, because they ate insects, which in turn could do considerable damage in the garden if their numbers were not kept in check.

We all talked about Sam and liked having him around. The one who spotted him first each summer proudly shouted out, "Sam's back!"

I remember the year he disappeared. We were never sure what happened, but we wondered for a long while. Since then, however, I'd forgotten all about the gentle reptile.

But a few weeks ago, I was reminded.

One of my neighbors was upset over a garter snake sunning on the porch near the side entrance to her home. Unable to find anyone willing to catch the snake, she did find another neighbor willing to kill it. Luckily, they failed in their mission and the snake escaped.

Later that day, when my son and I walked by, she asked him where he'd been when she needed him, because she knew he would have been willing to catch the snake and remove it, and then find it a new home, preferably far away.

That's when I remembered Sam. That's when I went into my dissertation about the value of garter snakes in general and in gardens specifically (which my neighbors have).

I guess people are supposed to be afraid of snakes. I guess people would rather spray poison on their plants than contend with (UGH!) snakes.

Sam, wherever you are, you're welcome on my back porch any time.

We've all had short trips we've wanted to take "some day". Driving north out of Sarnia to Tobermory and beyond (with a side trip to Owen Sound) has been on my list of one.

For longer trip dreams . . . the rocky coast of Maine, the Rocky Mountains and Lake Louise will do, thank you.

Supposedly it's a good idea to use Canadian money when traveling in our neighbor's land. For those who watch such things, obtaining that money the right way can save you money.

A couple area banks exchanged our currency, giving us a 16½ percent break. Just for the heck of it, we stopped at the currency exchange booth at the Sarnia side of the bridge and asked what the discount rate was.

The gal said it was 17¾ percent. At the perfume, etc. CanAm store the exchange was 18 percent.

For the very best deal we'd suggest American's wait until they get to a Canadian bank, like ScotiaBank. They were buying American money at 20.25 percent and selling it at 21.25.

Oh, yes. The banks have the two buy-sell rates. When we exchanged our Canadian currency for American locally we paid 18 and 18½ percent.

We didn't learn this gasoline selling trick on this trip, but it is something worth noting.

At the Standard Oil station west of Big Mac bridge on U.S. 2, the price on the self-serve islands was 3 cents a gallon HIGHER than the full-service.

That's either Yankee ingenuity or trickery, and either way it's very upsetting.

We wanted to catch the car ferry from Tobermory to Manitoulin Island. To do so, we stayed overnight at a motel handy for getting in line at 6 a.m. for the 7 a.m. departure.

When we asked the motel clerk for a "wake up call", she quickly set an alarm clock on the counter.

That clearly is ingenuity. No use spoiling her morning by getting up.

By the way, all the tourist outlets we checked with, and it was a few, said to get in line early for the ferry.

However, the non-commercial people we talked with said we could still make the ship 10 minutes to 7:00.

They were right, too. We should have believed the locals and slept an hour.

Germuska's out to see ERA ratified

By Kathy Greenfield

Kate Germuska doesn't hesitate when she's asked to recite the proposed Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) to the United States' Constitution.

"Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any state on account of sex," she says. "It's that simple."

Germuska, who teaches English at Clarkston Junior High School and lives in Springfield Township, is putting her belief in the ERA to work.

Thirty-five states have ratified the amendment and only three more are needed by June 30, 1982 to make the ERA part of the Constitution.

Six states have been targeted—Illinois, Oklahoma, Missouri, Virginia, Florida and North Carolina—and Germuska says only a few more votes are needed in each state legislature to gain approval.

'We're talking human liberation'

The push right now is for money, she says, to support pro-ERA candidates in upcoming elections and to form powerful lobbying groups.

Through the Clarkston Education Association's Women's Concerns Committee, Germuska and several others are co-sponsoring Move-a-thon '81 at Belle Isle on Sept. 27 with the Detroit metropolitan chapters of the National Organization of Women.

Those interested in supporting passage of the ERA—men, women and children—can attend the rally; gather pledges and participate in the six-mile Move-a-thon around the island jogging, walking, running, riding a bike or skating; or they can make donations.

"Rallies are just wonderful experiences," she says. "Anyone who feels now's the time to get involved can participate. There are 10 months left. It can be done."

Her interest in politics and the need for protection of women's rights began when she was growing up in the '60s, Germuska says.

In one college class, she was asked to make a list of 20 famous American men.

"No problem. I could name 50," she says. "And then I was asked to name 20 famous American women and I couldn't do it. After that, I made it a point to find out about women and where we've been and where we're going."

Membership Education Association (MEA) and conference on women's concerns were the next step. Topics included women in politics, racism and sexism and women in power.

Then she attended a women's concerns conference sponsored by the National Education Association in California.

"I just felt it was time for me to make some kind of contribution," she says. "It was time to take some of the philosophical things and turn them into action."

The ERA issue has been surrounded by claims that if it passes, men and women will share public toilets, homosexuals will come out of the closets in droves and there will be major changes in private lifestyles. Germuska says such charges are simply untrue.

"It really is an economic issue revolving around the fact that women make 59 cents for every $1 that a man makes," she says. "It really is a bread and butter issue."

Recent actions under the administration of President Ronald Reagan, who does not support ERA passage, are more reason for involvement, she says.

"Women have to quit being so politically naive. They have to look at the functions of government and realize they have to influence that," she says. "Reagan and the ultraconservative force that got him elected, they keep talking about the mandate."

"I think his mandate was to turn the economy around. I don't think his mandate was to cutback on affirmative action, defeat ERA and to gouge Head Start."

The stance that women's rights should be handled by individual states is beset with problems, she says.

"Women don't realize what can be taken away from them unless they have some constitutional guarantee," she says. "It all comes back to how many times can you fight the credit card battle? How many times can you fight not being able to own a home? You'll be fighting the same battles over and over and over again."

"There's a great quote I always liked—'Changing the discriminating laws-law by law is like Lincoln freeing the slaves plantation by plantation'."

As Germuska continues her work coordinating ERA fund-raising activities for the women's caucus of the MEA, writing about the issues for MEA publications, writing letters to legislators and encouraging participation by other women's concerns groups, she continues to be glad she's involved.

While she strongly believes that the ERA should be approved, CJHS teacher Kate Germuska stresses that she avoids coming on strongly in the classroom. "That's a really important point, that parents don't see what I'm doing as indoctrination," she says. The issue is discussed using a team teaching approach and both sides are discussed, she says.

"The struggle's worth it, because it's time for women to take their equal place," she says. "We're not talking about women's liberation, we're talking human liberation, letting people be what they choose to be."

"I look at myself as being a really lucky person. I've studied about what's happening and I'm convinced the ERA has to pass."

There is a group of about 15 people planning to attend Move-a-thon '81 at Belle Isle on Sept. 27. The rally is to begin at noon. Anyone wishing to participate, to organize a group or to obtain pledge sheets may call 625-5456 or 673-5910.

'If it Fitz. . .'

He's got a nutty problem

by Jim Fitzgerald

On one hand, a reader urged me to lead a boycott against peanut butter.

On the other hand, an economist urged me to convert all my money into goods "with a long shelf life," such as peanut butter, which never does on the shelf.

Life isn't easy, except on Saturdays when I sleep until noon. Sleep is important to me, which doesn't necessarily make me a worthless person. Sleep is also important to President Reagan, and he's worth so much he can pay $750 for one night in a hotel. That's what he was paying at the Century Plaza in Los Angeles the night the war games lost their amateur status in Libya.

The president's sleeping habits received considerable publicity when our side shot down two Libyan jets. Reagan's aides didn't awaken him with news until six hours after it happened, by which time much of the nation had already learned of the air battle from news reports. No one shook the president's shoulder until reporters began filing articles about how everyone except the commander in chief knew that his Navy had successfully defended the U.S. against attack by two Libyan pilots apparently engaged in a crazed attempt to avenge their country for the Billy Carter loan, speaking of peanuts.

Certainly, this indicates that when the president goes to bed, he leaves instructions not to be disturbed for frivolous reasons. I can understand, and admire, his attitude. I slept through most of World War II, despite being drafted.

When I'm not sleeping, I worry about such things as inflation, peanut butter and conflicting solutions. Keep reading and you'll understand why.

John Pugsley is the economist who preaches shelving. In his book, "The Alpha Strategy," he insists inflation will never cease inflating, no matter what, and the only way for middle-income people to survive is to buy the non-perishable goods today they'll need tomorrow. He estimates the average individual could store as much as $20,000 worth of good stuff at home, at 1981 prices, and consume it in 2010 when prices will be tremendously higher. This won't be hoarding, it will be sheltering capital—in attics and basements. Closet space will be invaluable; hang your other suit in a tree.

It is Pugsley's theory that someday everyone will realize wealth is goods, not money, and when that day comes, the people with the most goods and least money will be the wealthiest. The buy-now idea is that you should hurry and get some value out of your money while there is still some value to get. Pugsley is not a million laughs.

But what about peanut butter? Rita Kornfield of Farmington Hills is the reader who urged me to tell everyone not to buy peanut butter until the price takes a deep drop. The price shot up over 50 percent last year when the peanut crop was hurt by drought. The crop is much better this year, but the price of peanut butter will not drop correspondingly. One retailer explained that consumers are now paying $2.60 for an 18-ounce jar just as meekly as they used to pay $1.60, so why lower that price? Why not just pocket the added profit? Rita thinks that's outrageous. She says quit buying until the meek inherit the peanut butter.

But that's where the conflicting solutions come in. If the way to bring the price of peanut butter down is to quit buying it, okay. However, if the way to beat inflation is to fill my shelves with enough goods to last a lifetime, how am I going to last a lifetime without peanut butter?

I couldn't do it. I have to eat peanut butter on warm toast at least once a week or my stomach sticks to the roof of my mouth. That's why the price of peanut butter and everything else never falls as far as it rises. There are always jerks like me who pay the price because their hunger is greater than their outrage. That's also why John Pugsley says inflation will never stop, so shelf it.

If he is right, there will come a day when the only people who have peanut butter will be people who never eat it. Wake me up six hours after that day ends.

Pretty baby

Libby Baker has the face of a winner. She won the baby contest that was part of the Old-Fashioned Country Fair sponsored by the Clarkston Business Association in the Depot Road Park over Labor Day weekend. Votes were cast with dimes placed in canisters under the picture of the 26 entries. The money gathered was presented to Muscular Dystrophy. Libby won with $41.60 and a total of $259 was gathered for the cause. She received a $50 savings bond from Pontiac State Bank. Her parents are Mike and Connie Baker of Holcomb Street, Clarkston. "I must admit her aunts and uncles and grandpa stuffed the box," said Connie. "I think they put the most dimes in, but her babysitters and our neighbors put in dimes, too." And, she notes, it was all for a worthwhile charity. "I was glad that we could do our part," says Connie. "I always wanted to do something, but there's not much you can do on your own."

Gravel mine stays open

'What's practical is best,' says Walls

By Al Zawacky

The Springfield Township Board has agreed to grant a permit to the Thompson-McCully Company to continue a gravel mining operation in Springfield Township.

The site of the operation is a parcel of land west of the Springfield-Independence boundary behind the Clawson Tank Company off White Lake Road.

The property is currently zoned residential, but aerial photographs indicate that it has been continuously mined since prior to 1973 when the township adopted an ordinance restricting the practice, according to Collin Walls, Springfield Township supervisor.

In a letter to the township board, Thompson-McCully agreed to comply with the reclamation provisions in the township's existing ordinance if a permit was granted.

"I think what's practical is best regardless of the ordinance," Walls said, speaking in support of a motion to consider the mining operation a pre-existing, non-conforming use.

Speaking at the Springfield Township Board's regular monthly meeting in August, Afa Wyckoff of Thompson, McCully said that the company plans to remove approximately 300,000 tons of gravel from the site over the next 10 to 20 years.

All the area where mining takes place will be restored, and any land untouched by the operation would be left natural, he said.

Springfield Clerk J. Calvin Walters made the original motion to consider the land a non-conforming use and issue the mining permit, but Trustee Glen Vermilye recommended that the non-conforming use and permit be considered separately as two motions.

"I can see some complications arising in having the two together," Vermilye said.

Walters agree to re-state the motion as two separate motions, and the board approved both at its regular monthly meeting Sept. 9.

The vote on non-conforming use was 3-2, with Walls, Walters and trustee Glen Vermilye voting "yes" and Trustee William Whitley and Treasurer Patricia Kramer dissenting.

The vote on the issuance of the mining permit was 4-1, with Kramer casting the lone dissenting vote.

"It (the area) hasn't been mined in the past six months, so the area has lost its pre-existing non-conformity," Kramer said. "I don't think the board has a right to grant the permit."

Wolves triumph—but just barely

By Al Zawacky

At least the worst didn't happen.

Even though his Wolves looked anything but impressive in downing a weak non-league opponent, Clarkston Coach Walt Wyniemko could still console himself with the fact that any win is better than a loss.

And that was about the only good thing to come out of Friday evening's season opening varsity football game at Swartz Creek—a final score of Clarkston 13, Swartz Creek 7.

"We didn't come out mentally or physically prepared to play tonight," Wyniemko said. "Why, I don't know."

"People are going to want to beat Clarkston this year, and if we don't come out ready to play, we're going to have problems. This game proves you can't take anybody lightly."

A few more performances like this one, and it'll be the Wolves that people will start taking lightly.

Last year when the two teams met, Clarkston came out on top 43-0. Suffering the effects of the elimination of junior varsity sports in 1979, Swartz Creek went on from there to lose all eight of its remaining ball games.

As a result, the Wolves were heavily favored to win and win big in Friday's re-match. They did win, but their shaky play had the Clarkston coaching staff sounding more like losers than winners afterwards.

"On the bright side, our defense played well at times," Wyniemko said. "The goal-line stand was impressive. And on offense, we felt we could move the football."

"But we just couldn't come up with the KO punch. We weren't consistent enough to really hurt them."

"There are going to be changes. We're going to roll up our sleeves this week and go to work."

Neither team could generate much offense in the early going, as both the Wolves and the Dragons took turns fumbling, throwing interceptions and taking penalties.

Clarkston did manage to put together a scoring drive before the half, racking up six points on a two-yard run into the endzone by quarterback Mike Stefanski. Will Williams kicked the extra point.

Before the quarter ended, the Wolves turned in an impressive goal-line stand on their own one yard line, enabling Clarkston to trot off the field with a 7-0 lead at the half.

On the ground, the Wolves totally dominated Swartz Creek, amassing 156 yards in 37 plays to the Dragons' 16 yards in 30 plays. Senior Tim Brennan paced Clarkston's rushing attack with 96 yards in 11 carries.

The bulge increased to 13-0 in the fourth quarter on a three-yard run by Dave Fulcher, but the PAT kick was short and kept the score at 13-0.

The Dragons then gave the Wolves a scare with less than two minutes remaining when quarterback Greg Spodney hit Bill Milne with a pass good for six yards and a Swartz Creek touchdown. Todd Schumer split the uprights for the PAT, and the score had narrowed to a too-close-for-comfort 13-7.

With time running out, the Dragons tried an on-side kick, but the Wolves recovered and ate the football to use up the remaining time on the clock.

Although the Dragons managed just 16 yards rushing to Clarkston's 156, they moved the ball disturbingly well through the air, accumulating 109 yards to the Wolves' 35. Spodney also threw a long touchdown pass in the first half that was nullified by a Dragon penalty.

"We have a good receiver in Mark Florian, so we knew we could throw on them," said Swartz Creek Coach Mike Weigandt.

"There was a lot of emotion in this game for the kids. When somebody beats you 43-0, it's hard to forget."

The Wolves next test will be at home this Friday against non-league foe Bloomfield Hills Lahser, coming off a 20-3 win over Birmingham Seaholm last week.

Lahser runs a multiple offense and plays a lot of games on defense," Wyniemko observed, looking ahead to his team's home opener.

"They're a good football team. They're going to put a lot of pressure on us."

Point After

By Al Zawacky

Dissecting Friday's near-disaster

THE SEASON IS only one game old, and already people are beginning to wonder if these 1981 Clarkston Wolves haven't been vastly overrated.

Ever since the end of the last season, everyone—coaches, players and spectators—have been predicting great things from this team. Could all these people have been so wrong?

Last Friday night, the highly-touted Wolves traveled to Swartz Creek and did some pretty weird things on the athletic field they have over there. They wandered around for two quarters, accidentally crossing the goal line once before the Swartz Creek band took over.

Then the band left, and the Wolves returned for another two quarters of wandering around. It was all pretty strange, all right.

Whatever it was they were doing out there, it certainly wasn't football.

You can overlook the bad plays. At tribute some of the mishaps to opening-game jitters and having to play a long way from home on an unfamiliar field.

But—where was the heart? The enthusiasm? The spirit? The guts? The guts that separate the good from the great and the winners from the losers? You can overlook honest mistakes, but what excuse is there for lackluster, uninspired play?

Emotion, after all, is what football is all about. Just by watching the two teams warm up and by observing their behavior on the sidelines, you could tell that Swartz Creek had that fire in their eyes, while Clarkston did not.

Hey, we're the Clarkston Wolves, man! The defending league champs, you know? I mean, we're bad! We can beat you guys without even giving our best effort. Don't you know we went 8-1 last year and we are going 9-0 this time around?

So how about falling down and getting this game over with quick so we can head home and celebrate our big win, OK?

If that's the attitude the Wolves have this season, they're in for some bitter lessons. So many teams on the schedule will be gunning for them the rest of the way—and many of these key games will be played on the enemy's turf. Kettering, West Bloomfield and Lake Orion would like nothing better than to hang Clarkston's scalp from their belts this season, and heck, after last Friday even Mott and Rochester look dangerous.

TRUE, SWARTZ CREEK is not the Swartz Creek of old. "If my 1981 team could play last year's team," says Creek Coach Mike Weigandt, "they'd beat them by three or four touchdowns."

OK, so the Dragons are vastly improved. But we're still talking about a team with a group of seniors who've never played junior varsity ball. A team that went winless last year and, improvement aside, isn't expected to make many waves this fall either.

Yet, they were good enough to force the Wolves to fall on the football and eat up the remaining seconds on the clock for fear of losing. The Wolves may have held on to win, but in this man's opinion they deserved to lose.

IT HURTS TO have to say all this, because Clarkston remains a team with tremendous potential. The talent is there. But it takes character, desire and leadership among the ranks to develop that talent to the fullest.

Maybe, as Coach Walt Wyniemko observed, the near-fiasco at Swartz Creek will prove to be a blessing in disguise. Maybe it will shake these guys up and make them realize that you can't saunter onto the field and play four quarters of lethargic, uninspired football against a fired-up opponent and expect to win a league title, much less go 9-0.

We can only hope.

THE HOME TEAM

Girl harriers off to fast start

The Clarkston High School girls' cross country squad got off to a fast start in its first two meets last week, but the boys' team came up empty handed.

The girls beat Royal Oak Dondero at home 19-39 and bested Rochester Adams 26-32 on a hilly 5,000-meter course at Oakland University. Both meets were non-league.

The boys lost to Donero Dondero 17-44 and fell to Adams 25-31.

"We're very happy with the excellent start of the girls' team," said Clarkston Coach Mike Kaul, "but there's too big a gap between our third runner and the rest of our team and this could hurt us. We'll be working on trying to close that gap."

Clarkston's Sheri Rowland took the top spot against Dondero, finishing first with a time of 20:55. Teammates Chris O'Rourke and Pam Stoecklin were second and third respectively with times of 21:43 and 21:45.

An Adams runner took first in the Rochester Adams meet, but Rowland was only nine seconds behind in second place with a time of 22:18. Stoecklin was third at 23:10 and O'Rourke fourth at 23:11. Adams took fifth, sixth and seventh, but Clarkston swept the eighth through 12th spots.

Paul Burch had the best Clarkston score for the boys against Dondero, placing fourth with a personal best time of 16:44. John McInnis took seventh for Clarkston with a time of 17:55.

Burch and McInnis were again the top Clarkston runners against Adams, finishing third and fourth respectively with 5,000 meter times of 18:46 and 18:54.

"We felt we could win this (Adams), but the absence of our top four runners due to leg problems turned out to be the difference," Kaul said.

Autumn soccer program offered

Independence Township Parks and Recreation Department is offering a fall soccer program. There is a league offered for 9- through 12-year-olds on Monday and Wednesday at 5:30; to 6:30 p.m. at Bailey Lake Elementary School.

An instructional clinic with drills and game scrimmages is offered for 6- through 9-year-olds. This program will start Sept. 26, running on Saturday mornings from 9 to 11 a.m. Deadline for this registration is Sept. 25.

Bloomfield Hills Lahser at Clarkston (Sept. 18): Dub this game the "Event of the Year."

The first game at home. The first varsity game under the new field lights. A formidable opponent in Bloomfield Hills Lahser.

In fact, there are only two things that might ruin this spectacle--bad weather and the final score.

Lahser is tough, tough, tough. Coach Bob Kefgen's boys can throw, run and block. No better proof of their credentials can be found than what they did to Birmingham Seaholm Friday night.

Meanwhile, the Wolves are coming off a garbage performance at Swartz Creek. The brand of football seen from the Wolves last week won't wash against Lahser, and Coach Walt Wyniemo knows it.

Expect a grand disappointment. Lahser by 10.

Cougars gain revenge, bury Wolverines in opener, 26-6

By Al Zawacky

It was Sashabaw Junior High's proudest football moment in years, yet Coach Chris Krueger seemed remarkably laid back about the whole thing.

After two years and four games of complete frustration, the Cougars of Sashabaw had just gotten through blitzing cross-district rival Clarkston Junior High 26-6.

Horns were honking outside in the Sashabaw parking lot and players were celebrating the win in the dressing room, but in the midst of it all Chris Krueger sat in the Cougar coaches' office with a very matter-of-fact expression on his face.

"One of the problems with this series," he began, referring to the two Sashabaw-Clarkston freshman football games played each year, "is that all the people in Clarkston think of it as the whole season."

"You can lose all the rest of your games, but if you win those two people will say you were successful."

Somehow, the Cougar mentor didn't sound very convincing. Wasn't this victory—the first win over Clarkston since October 1978—something very special?

"Of course it was," Krueger grinned. "The first game of the season is always special."

Actually, the 26-6 final was a little deceiving. The Cougars didn't wrap it up until the fourth quarter when a couple of big plays put the game out of reach.

Sashabaw put its first points on the board in the second half quarter when Robert Newblatt ran 65 yards for the touchdown and a 6-0 Cougar lead. Later in the quarter Sashabaw quarterback Eric Kline hit teammate Doug Colling in a passing play good for 22 yards and another six points.

Newblatt made it 18-0 on a 45-yard run in the fourth quarter, but Clarkston struck back on a 75-yard kickoff return all the way into the endzone by Mark Bundridge.

But Kline and Newblatt struck again only moments later, combining a 30-yard passing play that netted the fourth Sashabaw TD, and Colling hit Kline with a pass on the next play for the only successful PAT attempt of the evening.

"They (Clarkston) played better than all the stories I had heard, but I expected that," Krueger noted.

Clarkston head coach John Craven sends the next play into the huddle via Dean O'Neil [right].

"I was worried until we went up 18-0. A 12-point lead isn't much in junior high football, especially against a team that can throw like Clarkston."

Krueger praised the work of his offensive line, including lineman Chris Cantley, Ryan Lewis, Ted Wilson, Pete Koneda and Todd Rabideau. Kline and Steve Alexander turned in key interceptions to stop two Clarkston drives, and Don Fischer recovered a Clarkston fumble deep in Cougar territory when the score was still 12-0.

On defense, Sashabaw benefited from the work of Fischer, Mike Powers, Dan McGeary, Bob Weir and Kevin LaRocque.

"They just wore us down," said Clarkston Coach John Craven afterwards. "What really hurt us was we just didn't have their numbers--by the second half, we were dragging it."

In the air, the Wolverines had some success. Dean O'Neil caught four passes from quarterback Mike Galley for a total of 44 yards, and overall Clarkston had 14 completions in 31 attempts for a total of 128 yards.

But the ground game was stymied to just eight yards in 17 plays.

"We were just too spotty, offensively and defensively," Craven said. "We'd get down to the 15 once, the 20 another time and had nothing to show for it."

Sashabaw assistant coach Jim Smith bellows directions from the sidelines in the first half of the Cougar's triumph over the Wolverines.

Cougar running back Doug Colling [12] darts through a maze of Sashabaw white and Clarkston green to gain some needed yardage. Colling caught a touchdown pass good for 22 yards in the second quarter and figured in a successful two-point conversion later in the game to help lift the Cougars past the Wolverines 26-6.

Clarkston cagers rally to down Avondale

By Al Zawacky

It took two overtimes to do it, but the Clarkston High school varsity girls' basketball team pulled out a well-earned come-from-behind 54-46 victory over Avondale last week.

In doing so, the Wolves overcame a 17-10 deficit at the half to win their 1981 season opener. The non-league victory puts the Wolves at 1-0 while dropping Avondale, coming off a win over Madison, to 1-1.

"We were four-for-30 from the field in the first half," said Clarkston Coach Dave McDonald. "We were looking good and moving the ball around well, but our shooting was making me kind of nervous."

"We just figured that it's got to come—you can't keep shooting that bad."

Once the Wolves started finding the mark, the gap closed at the score was knotted and 42-42 at the end of regulation time.

The score was tied again at the end of the first overtime—this time at 44-all—but in the second OT Clarkston took control and iced the win with some good shooting from the foul line.

Michele and Annette Ulasich led a balanced Wolves' attack with 11 points each. Tracee Antos had nine points, Janet Zografos seven, Lori Martin and Sue Ketvirtis had six and Lanette Whitehead had four.

Ketvirtis, a sophomore playing in her first varsity game, also contributed 10 rebounds in what McDonald termed a "super performance." Whitehead cleared the boards seven times, and Antos had five assists.

"I'm pleased with the way we played," said McDonald. "We showed some good progress."

The Wolves' first Greater Oakland Activities League contest is scheduled Thursday at home against West Bloomfield.

JV gridgers battle Dragons to 6-6 stand-off

By Al Zawacky

It was the type of game that neither team really deserved to win, so it seemed only appropriate that Clarkston High School and Swartz Creek played to a 6-6 tie Thursday in junior varsity football action at the CHS athletic field.

The game was the season opener for both clubs, and the inexperience showed as penalties and turnovers filled the game stats.

Neither team could score in the first half, but Swartz Creek drew first blood in the third quarter on a dive off tackle from the one. The try for the two-point conversion was no good, and Creek took a 6-0 lead into the final quarter.

The Wolves squared the score at six apiece on a eight-yard run by Tim Parke. A penalty nullified Clarkston's successful two-point attempt on the next play, and the Wolves' subsequent try for the conversion failed.

Parke led the way in the rushing department with 96 yards on 13 carries. Clarkston quarterback Craig Kulaszewski was three-for-five for 46 yards in the second half, and Lance Walenski picked up two receptions good for 49 yards.

Leading the Wolves defensively were efforts by Mike Harbaugh, Dan Fenton, Kurt Bottorff and Dan Harken.

Sheldon faces shoulder surgery

Texas Tech freshman Brad Sheldon suffered a shoulder separation last month and lost out on a chance to play football at Tech this fall.

The injury occurred Aug. 18, and as a result Sheldon will have to undergo surgery over Thanksgiving.

"It was a shock, especially when they told me I'd have to have it operated on," he said.

"I can't even do a push-up now."

Sheldon added that he'd try to play again next fall if he recovered from the operation in time to participate in spring ball.

A 1981 Clarkston High School graduate, Sheldon quarterbacked the CHS Wolves to a league championship and overall record of 8-1 in 1980.

Schools' 4th, 7th, 10th graders ready to take MEAP test

Clarkston schools' fourth, seventh and 10th graders can prepare to sharpen their pencils and take the Michigan Educational Assessment Program (MEAP) test on Sept. 29, 30 and Oct. 1.

While most classroom tests cover material presented in specific textbooks, the MEAP test covers minimum skills students should have regardless of which books they use, said William Potvin, director of planning and evaluation for the district.

"It gives us another look as to whether our textbooks are teaching everything they should be, plus it gives us an opportunity to look at ourselves compared to the rest of the state," he added.

The test is a requirement in all public schools in Michigan. In Clarkston schools, fourth and seventh graders have taken the test for 14 years and 10 graders have been tested three years.

The results are used to show possible areas in which individual pupils may need help and to improve school and district programs, Potvin said. Individual pupil's scores will be available by

Nov. 16. The schools will make the announcement in their regular newsletters.

For more information, call the child's school or Potvin at 625-3330.

Village Players break ground for facilities

Patrons of the Clarkston Village Players, (CVP) performances at the Depot Theatre who have withstood the lack of indoor plumbing for years have some relief in sight.

Members of the CVP, patrons and angels gathered Sunday to celebrate the turning of the first shovel full of soil in a ground breaking ceremony at the theater located on White Lake Road, Independence Township.

The ceremony marked the first phase of a three-part plan—first, the septic system and well, which are expected to be completed this fall.

The next step involves the actual construction of indoor restroom facilities and the final phase includes a small lobby area to be built adjacent to the restrooms.

The Players began gathering money for the project four years ago with the plea "Help Us Raise John Dough." Since then, donuts, goat votes, muffins and toilet paper have been sold to help the cause.

"It may take a few years, but we're going to do it—we're going to have running water out here," said CVP President Sandy Sanford, during the ceremony.

"I can't really say when construction will start," she added later. "It depends a lot on our funds. The main idea was to have something started so people would know we are going to do it."

This year begins the 21st season for the Clarkston Village Players. They began presenting their plays in the quaint Depot Theatre in 1966.

The traditional ground breaking ceremony ends; the beribboned shovel is abandoned and members of the Clarkston Village Players clown around a bit, bidding adieu to the old standby, an outdoor toilet. From left are Pete Rose, Sandy Sanford, Marlene Sewick and Russ Inman. All are past presidents of the organization except Sanford, who is the current president.

Wed., Sept. 16, 1981 21

Music of all types awaits patrons of the festival. There are bagpipes, lutes, African drums, an early brass band and singers, all included in the price of admission. Tucked in a corner, a harpist plays while sounds of other festivities melt into the background.

Wrapping colorful ribbons around a dried flower head garland is Stacey Wasik's task as a merchant in one of the shops located at the Michigan Renaissance Festival. Stacey, who lives on Wealthy Street, Independence Township, says there are many more local students at work at the festival, although most are to be found in the food booths, selling such items as turkey drumsticks, steak sandwiches and apple fritters.

Spun Metal Products expands to new location

Spun Metal Products has a new home, and the Holly Green Industrial Park No. 2 has its first resident.

Ninety days after an April ground breaking at the new site on Enterprise Drive off Dixie Highway in Springfield Township, co-owners Larry and Marge Reuter and son Bill, Spun Metal Products' vice president and shop supervisor, left their old building at Dixie Highway and Davisburg Road.

"We just outgrew our old facilities," says Larry. "We expanded at the old site in 1974, but there just wasn't any more room," adds Marge.

With a grin, Bill notes that "we actually had machinery sitting outside there."

The Reuters are experienced hands in the metal spinning business. Larry's been in the trade for almost 30 years and went into business for himself back in 1969 when he opened the old shop at Davisburg and Dixie.

Today, the business employs 12 full-time and two part-time employees, turning out a wide variety of aircraft parts and auto parts, as well as specialized metal parts for companies such as Detroit Edison and Consumers Power.

"We make just about anything, as long as it's round," says Larry.

"Basically, we're into prototype and experimental work," notes Marge. "We don't do any production work."

Doing business

Since their trade revolves around experimental work and new innovations, the past few years have been busy ones at Spun Metal, she adds. The auto industries recent rush to re-tool and re-design has meant a business boom—in contrast to the over-all auto sales slump.

"We had people working over 60 hours a week at one time," she says. "It's slowed down a bit now."

"Things have gone good so far," adds Larry, referring to the new location. "As soon as we get the open house out of the way, we'll be able to get everything finally settled."

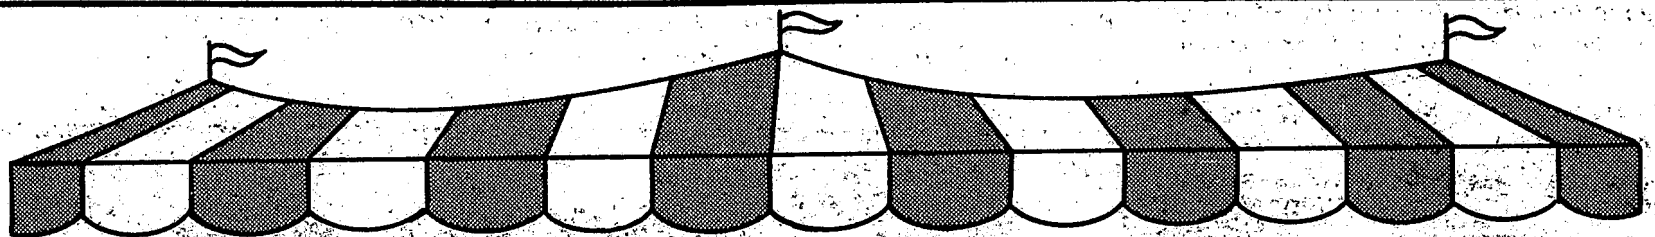

Although the area around the shop today is empty, it is to someday be the hub of a bustling industrial park.

"We've had a really good relationship with Springfield Township," says Marge. "We seriously thought of leaving the area at one time, but the township has been just great working and cooperating with us."

Spun Metal Product's new location off Dixie Highway in Springfield Township.

The Clarkston Community Women's Club is kicking-off the year's first meeting Thursday, Sept. 17 at 7:30 p.m., at the Episcopal Church of the Resurrection, 6490 Clarkston-Orion, Independence Township. The evening program's targeted at fashion trends for the fall and winter of 1981-82 and how to coordinate and accessorize wardrobes to achieve that total look. The club is a social/service group which draws its members from the Clarkston-area, and sponsors local fund raisers to the support of various community activities like the Independence Township Library and an annual blood bank, Clarkston-area Youth Assistance, the football field lighting fund, Jr. Miss Contest and more. Pictured from left are the group's officers, past-president Gail Ferguson, Roz Needham, president, Sandy Meyer, vice president, Kathy Jones, recording secretary, JoAnn Lund, correspondence secretary, Beth Ford, treasurer, Marilyn Lash and Theresa Harp, board members at large.

Just like her mother, Kathleen Glowzinski announced her engagement at her parents' 25th wedding anniversary party, firmly establishing a family tradition.

Kathleen Ann and Kenneth La Ferle plan to be married in July 1982. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Glowzinski of Warbler Lane, Independence Township. A 1977 Clarkston High School graduate, she is currently attending Eastern Michigan University, Ypsilanti, where she is majoring in occupational therapy.

Her fiance is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor La Ferle of Lima, Ohio. A 1980 University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, graduate, he is currently a graduate student majoring in audiology at the University of Montevallo, Birmingham, Ala.

Frank and Pat Glowzinski celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary with a mass at St. Daniel's Church, Independence Township. A surprise party was given by their children and family in the parish hall immediately following the service.

The Glowzinskis were married June 16, 1956 at St. Vincent's Catholic Church, Pontiac. All except two of the original 10-member wedding party were present at the party.

The couple have five children, Paul of Dallas, Texas; Michael of Kemmerer, Wyo.; and Kathleen, Patrick and Charles of Clarkston.

Paul and Michael were unable to attend their parents' party, but they sent letters which were read at the dinner.

Plaza has auction

Waterfall Plaza is planning produce and art for the Fall Festival Farmer's Market. The Festival includes an Art Auction to benefit Muscular Dystrophy Sept. 18 and 19.

Local farmers plan to display and sell their produce while arts, crafts and other specialties are also to be featured. Farm stand entries and concession applications are still being accepted.

The Art Auction is planned for Saturday, Sept. 18. It is sponsored by Waterfall Plaza. The auction is presented by Oxford Art Galleries of Detroit. The art work to be auctioned is double matted and professionally framed. Modern and classical sculpture is also to be auctioned. Hours of the auction are 2 to 5 p.m. The pieces may be reviewed from 1 to 2 p.m. Champagne and hors d'oeuvres will be served throughout the affair. Admission to the auction will be $1 at the door and tickets may be purchased from now until the auction begins.

For further information concerning the auction tickets and farmer's market registration, call 625-9346.

Classes are to begin Sept. 28 and to meet every Monday and Wednesday for 10 weeks at Clarkston Junior High School, 6300 Church, Independence Township. Cost is $35.

For registration information, call 625-0900.

Coping with kids

by Jim Windell

12-year-old moodiness just has to run its course

Paula, at 12, is a strange mixture. She can be absolutely charming with manners that always win adult approval. She can study hard and persevere in a tough situation.

But, she can also be moody, surly, flip, sarcastic and temperamental. This switch in behavior is sometimes like night and day.

That's a 12-year-old for you. It is the unevenness of behavior that makes life so hard for them and their parents. One minute grownup; the next a bratty baby. Particularly if things don't go their own way.

There's more withdrawal from the family at 12 and this starts to worry parents. "She doesn't want to do anything the rest of us want to do," complains one mother of a 12-year-old.

Another one says, "If she had her way, she'd stay in her room with her stereo on full blast while she was talking on the phone constantly."

And this mother might have added that the topic of conversation might be entirely about boys. Yet, there is more talking about boys than action. Always on the look-out for "cute guys," most of their love and sex life is strictly fantasy.

Friendships with other girls, for the 12-year-old female, are pretty close although still sometimes transitory.

Friends are a necessary part of their lives; it is with friends that they discuss all those important things: What classes each has this fall; who are the new boys on the street; who's the latest rock star; what restaurant has the best food.

The best survival technique for the parent is to recognize that this is the way 12-year-olds are and to try to offer love and reassurance despite their moodiness and boy-crazy (or girl-crazy) and erratic life.

As with most stages with young people, it's usually a matter of "seeing it through" without getting too upset about it.

Hearing Loss Is Not A Sign Of Old Age

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of one of the smallest Beltone aids of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

Send for this model, put it on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. While many people with a hearing loss will not receive any significant benefit from any hearing aid, this free model will show you how tiny hearing help can be. It is not a real hearing aid, and it's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a fourth of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 15359 Beltone Electronics, 4201 W. Victoria St., Chicago, Illinois 60646.

Natural ways to combat fleas

Now is the time to think of using an alternative to dips, sprays, poisons, to combat the flea problem of late summer.

Natural spices like clove, pennyroyal, eucalyptus oil, tansy, camomille or garlic powder can be applied directly to dog or cat skin.

I like clove with a few drops of eucalyptus oil. Bedding area can be sprinkled with cedar, eucalyptus or rue to discourage fleas hanging around, waiting for dinner.

Diet can also eliminate fleas 80 to 90 percent of the time. Add Brewer's yeast (crude grade) and garlic powder to food which builds up the skin and causes odor (not noticeable to humans). It repels fleas or makes skin taste bad.

One tablespoon Brewer's yeast mixed with one teaspoon garlic powder is good for a large dog—one teaspoon mix for small dogs. This internal flea formula takes three to six weeks to be effective, so start now.

Others have said one tablespoon vinegar added to food also helps. Vitamin C is always a good idea.

Both internal and external methods must be practiced.

Summer hot spots on dogs can be treated with camomille tea, brewed, cooled and applied to the area. Teas contain an acid that dry up moist eczemas, thus relieve itching.

One of the first things I ask when I get a call about hyperactive dogs, is what their diet consists of. It has been shown that cancer, arthritis and diabetes in animals as well as behavior problems are related to diet.

The first thing you do in assessing your dog's diet is to eliminate all white flour, sugar, or foods chemically preserved or colored. This will eliminate 90 percent of all commercial foods.

Health food stores carry chemically-free pet foods, or you can venture into the realm of preparing your own. Use two parts whole grain brown rice, corn, wheat, oats, etc.; one part steamed ocean fish, chicken, or meat; and one part steamed vegetables in season.

Cottage cheese can be added with natural vitamins, minerals, kelp, nutritional yeast and your flea preventive.

You might consider chemical-free drinking water, also.

It is good to put dogs on a 24-hour fast twice a month. It rests the body functions and promotes healing.

If you ever have a chemical emergency concerning an animal, there is an animal emergency hotline available to anyone 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Information is free dealing with actual or suspected animal poisoning. The number is: 217-333-3611.

Here's Herb

by Herb Rose

WILLIAM SAFIRE, who writes a language column for The New York Times, claims he is going to buy a dog and name it "Peeve," so he can refer to it as his pet peeve. Lions, it appears, may be born free but peeves are forever pets.

People seem to think this column would be an excellent media for discussing peeves and initiate conversations with, "You ought to write a column on the _____," and name something over which it is impossible to exercise a scintilla of control.

I can never understand why people think I would be interested in verbalizing petty annoyances. Why would I, who am tactful to the point of diffidence, be accused of acerbic hyperboles in a discussion of some organizational misfit or procedural curiosity.

Besides, I have no peeves, pet or untamed, so why should I worry about someone else's domesticated peeves? I, the personification of equanimity, am in complete harmony with my universe.

Almost...

I can find it in my harmonious heart to be irked at out-of-town real estate agencies that look at Clarkston as a profit-generating center only and care little for other aspects of community life.

One such organization has listings which include an empty house near me. During the winter months the agency plowed the driveway as a convenience to hopeful salespeople and potential purchasers but piled the snow across the sidewalk with arrogant disdain for the local peripatetics.

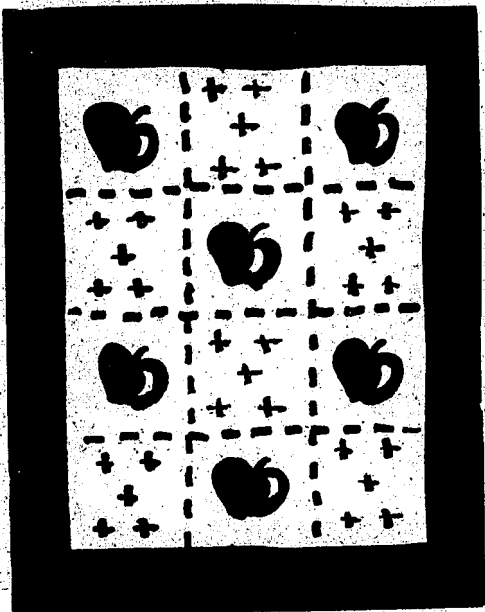

As I routinely scaled these snowy heights, afraid that I might induce a nosebleed or have an unrewarding confrontation with Yeti, I realized I was witnessing an excellent demonstration of the STRAP principle. STRAP is an acronym for "Screw The Rural American Public."

Perhaps a pet named 'Peeve,' but never (almost) a pet peeve

Continued evidence of the STRAP concept as a modus operandi was apparent when I suggested to the manager of the local office that, considering they had two properties on the Mill Pond, they contribute $10 to aquatic weed control. I was told that monetary commitments of that magnitude required home office sanction.

I was recovering from the jolt of this pejorative analysis of the branch operation autonomy when, in subsequent calls, I was further told there was no time to seek the required approval. The statement was truly a revelation. Heretofore I had thought real estate people had 24 hours a day like everyone else.

I am not plotting my revenge. I think the next time they show that house I will rent two wide-eyed, sad-faced urchins and instruct them to stand, holding hands, and stare quietly. If anyone tries to speak to them, they are to cry and run away.

Look for Shirley and Gar Wilson's booth under the shade trees in Clarkston's Depot Road Park during the annual historical society's Crafts and Cider festival.

It will be filled with fine, handcrafted Shaker furniture made of prime pine wood.

A nightstand with a functioning drawer, a pie saver with glass panels, a jelly cupboard, trunk, milk bench are some pieces of furniture the couple plan to offer for sale.

"I want to stress it's just a hobby for me," says Gar, from his home on Church Street in Clarkston.

Whenever there's spare time Gar ambles out to his workshop in the backyard barn and creates Shaker furniture, known for its simplistic lines and lack of ornamentation, says Shirley, chief furniture finisher.

"He just comes up with ideas for furniture in his head—you know what they say about the mother of invention," Shirley laughs. "We also look at a catalog filled with designs. We'll make furniture to fit to the individual person's specifications too."

From collecting and refinishing antiques, Shirley's mastered the art of finishing her husband's handcrafted material—and together they create first-class work.

Gar stresses the festival is a first-time event for him and the family, having been involved with making furniture just one year.

Look for Gar, Shirley and their children down in the park, surrounded by Shaker furniture, on Sept. 18, 19 and 20 in Clarkston's Depot Road Park. Hours of the Crafts and Cider festival are noon to 6 p.m. all three days.

Postal employee Red Rexford hands Juanita Parsons her morning mail. Red's supply of candy and bones makes him a special favorite among kids and dogs along his route.

As a postal employee, Red Rexford's duties are simple and well-defined.

Deliver the mail. Quickly, efficiently.

But to so many people up and down his route in Independence and Waterford townships, Red is more than a postman. He's the friend and neighbor that just happens to bring the mail, too.

"He talks to everybody, honks at everybody, gives candy to the kids—he's just a real special guy," says Juanita Parsons, an Independence Township resident on his delivery route.

"Just about everybody knows him and feels the same way."

On week days, Red can be seen driving down the roads of his route, alternately honking, waving or chatting to his postal customers.

"I've been with the post office since 1967, and I was born and raised in this area," says Red. "So I know a lot of people."

People are what he likes about his job—"the people I work with and the people on my route," he says.

"I've watched kids grow up, get married and have kids of their own," he says of his 41 years delivering mail.

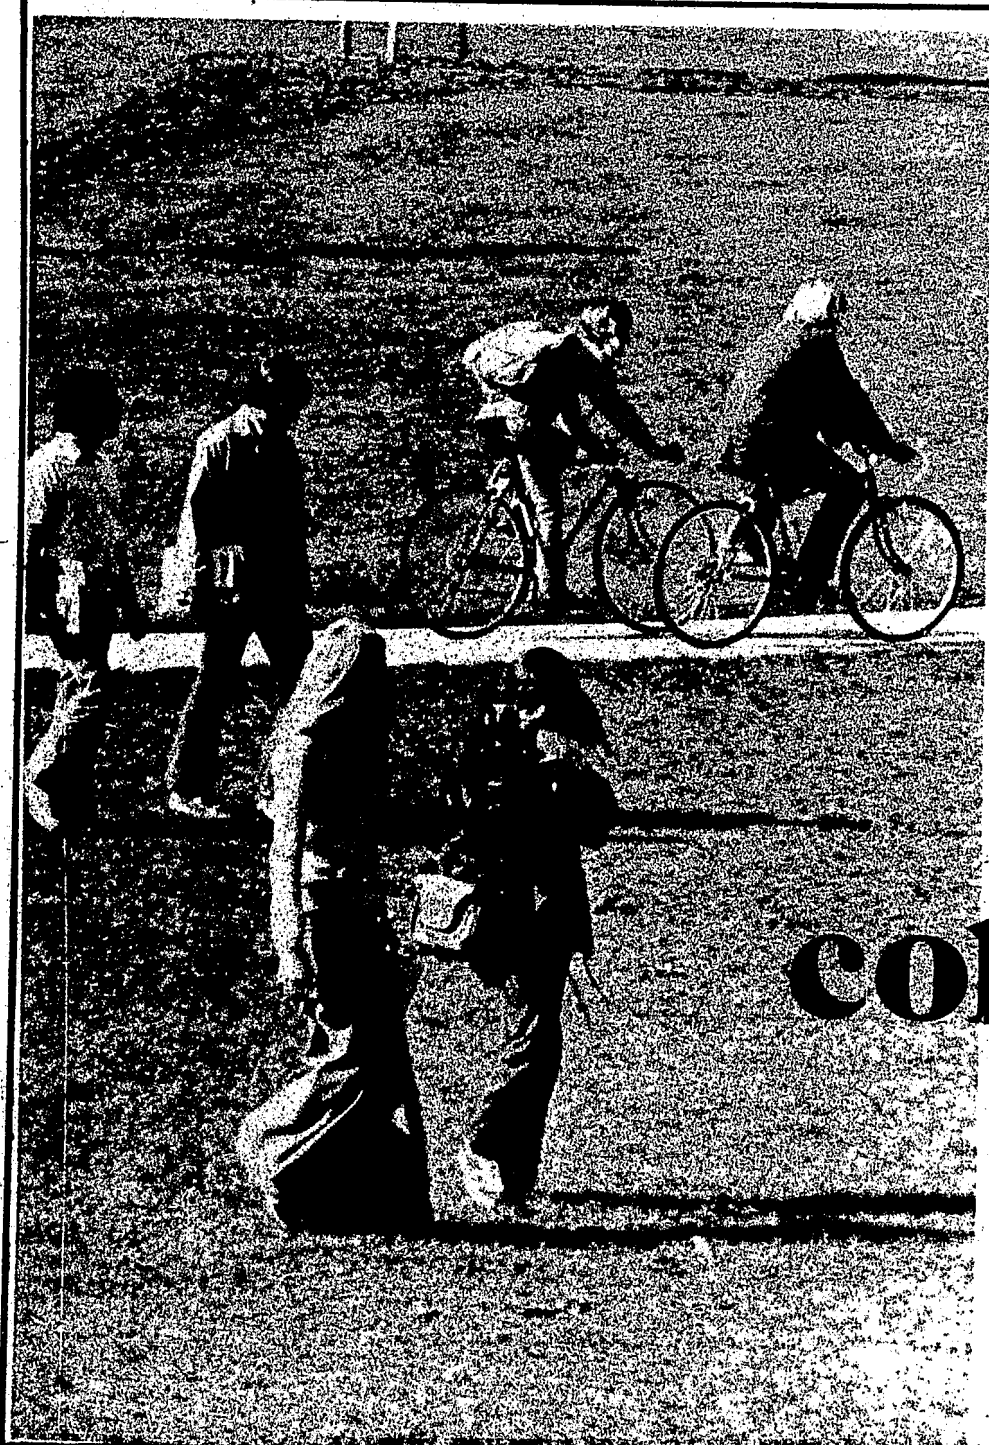

Red is a special favorite with the young people—and mailman lore notwithstanding, the dogs on his route like him, too.

Out of his own pocket, he buys candy for the kids. For his canine friends, he keeps bones or dog biscuits handy.

"When we're on his route," jokes fellow postal employee Cindy Holsworth, "the kids all ask where Red is."

"Aw, it's really not anything," Red shrugs. "People treat me well and I get it all back in the long run."

Young racer stacks up awards

Football practice leaves Bryan with little time to practice racing in the fall, but whenever he gets a chance he gets a few laps in around the track by his house.

Twelve-year-old Bryan Pankey can hardly remember a time when he wasn't riding motorcycles.

At the age of 3, he was going for short jaunts with his dad at the controls. At the age of 5, he was already going out alone.

The early start must be paying off, for last month Bryan took first place in the 12-to 14-year-old stock class at the 1981 American Motorcycle Association Youth National held at Bridgeton.

"You've got to have the will to win," says Bryan, seated near his glittering trophy collection occupying an entire wall in the Pankey's Independence Township home.

"And you can't be a poor sport about losing. Racing is just fun—it shows how much skill you have. It's fun to see who can go the fastest."

The skill involved is considerable, adds Bryan's mom Linda. Riders whip along the trails at speeds that in some events can zero in on the 70 mph mark.

"It takes a lot of balance and coordination," she says.

An eighth grader at Sashabaw Junior High, Bryan has had his share of bumps, scrapes and bruises in his riding career—but never anything serious, says his dad Jerry.

In fact, he rates cycle racing as a safer sport than Bryan's other passion—football.

Last year Bryan was a first-string running back with the Clarkston

Chiefs little league football junior varsity team, a squad that marched through the season undefeated and unscored upon.

This year, he's back on the Chiefs, this time with the varsity unit.

"He's had more injuries playing football than he has racing," says Jerry. "The speed might sound a little scary, but with all the gear it's really a safe sport."

Bryan practices riding on a track etched out in the green terrain next to his house—but the races and competitions have taken his family to places as far away as Kansas, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

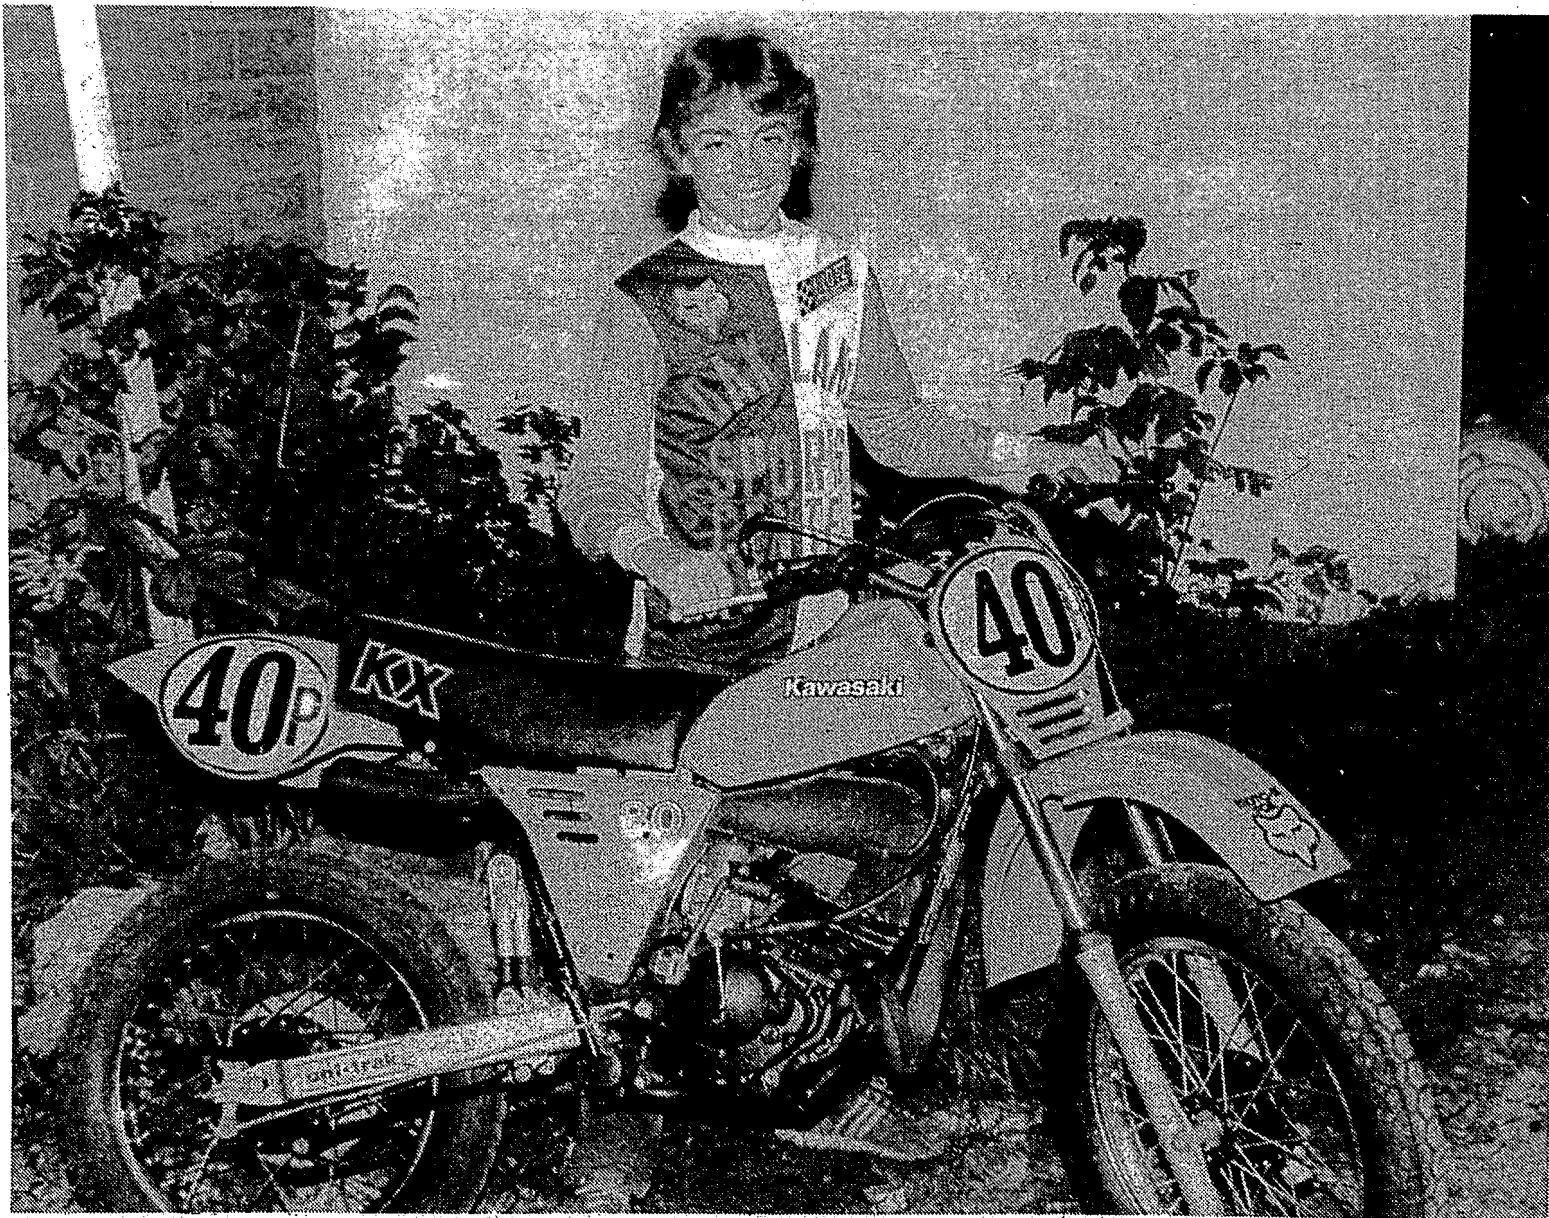

"It's always a family thing," says Jerry. "We travel together, camp out and meet a lot of interesting people."

Motorcycle racing is hardly an expensive sport, the Pankeys point out. Besides the cost of the bike, there are other high-priced items like helmets, boots and leathers.

Buying used gear can help defray some of the costs, and Bryan also gets a break from his sponsor—Oakland Sports Center, located in Drayton Plains.

It's a good investment for all the good family activities and fun the sport brings, says Jerry. And besides that, the regular repair and maintenance work on Bryan's Kawasaki KX-80 is giving his son a good mechanical background, he adds.

—Al Zawacky

Number 40 is the number on his bike, number 40 is the number on his jacket and number 40 is the number he wears as a member of the Clarkston Chiefs little league football team. It's more a matter of habit than superstition, says Bryan. "That was the number I got with the Chiefs, and I've just kept it," he says.

Bryan holds the first-place trophy he won in the 1981 AMA Youth National in Bridgeton. In the background are some of the other trophies and awards he's won in his racing career, which stretches back to when he was just 8 years old.

Gingerly balancing the jackknife, a quick flick of the wrist and Ta-da! They're playing mumble-the-peg, an aged game of skill and coordination where players aim to flick the knife's blade into the ground. From left are Flavis daCosta, Kyle Raup and professional former kid, Harry Fahrner.

Mumble-the-peg: A childhood game

sliced away a piece at a time

MUMBLETY-PEG OR MUMBLE-THE-PEG [the loser's originally having to pull out with his teeth a peg driven into the ground]; a game in which the players try to flip a knife from various positions so that the blade will stick into the ground.

—WEBSTERS NEW COLLEGIATE DICTIONARY

It's a game of skill and coordination which requires little cost. The initial investment of a jackknife's all that's needed. It can be played by many, and occupied boys' attention for hours during the lean depression years and afterwards.

A group of knicker-clad lads (with heavy-handed pocket knives would assemble on some kid's front lawn. Kneeling down, they'd take turns flipping the knife off various parts of the body—taking aim so that the blade arched high in the air and came to a stop in the ground.

Green lawns filled with tufts of upturned grass were left as the only evidence of a just completed highly competitive mumble-the-peg game.

"As I remember you'd start with the fingers, move up the wrist, elbow, shoulders, top of the head, nose, mouth, chin and both arms. There was a starting and ending point," says Harry Fahrner of Robertson Court, Clarkston, an expert former kid with a memory for childhood games.

The jackknife blade's point would rest on a fingertip. With the free hand a player would flip the knife handle up and over into an arch, using the weight of the knife to carry the blade down into the ground.

The knife was flipped from the fist, fingers, ear, mouth—any and all parts, but the more advanced players relished the chance to try "Tip-the-Cap" and "Skip-the-Ditch" and "Over-the-Hill."

In Tip-the-Cap, the knife was flipped off a hat bill.

In Over-the-Hill, the knife was flipped from one side of the body in an arch up over the head and into the ground on the other side of the body.

Skip-the-Ditch required a jackknife with two open blades at right angles. The player earned 25, 50, 75 or 100 points depending on what kind of angle the blade entered the ground.

Mumble-the-peg got its name from a ritual performed by the loser.

According to Harry, all those who didn't lose took a turn hitting a matchstick into the ground, using the handle of the knife as a hammer.

"The loser had to pry that stick out of the ground—with his teeth," Harry said. "That's why we brought along the quart bottle of water—so he could rinse out his mouth."

Wardrobes were created around the game.

Harry recalls "high-topper" shoes with a knife sheathe built in to hold the included accessory.

"We'd look at the knife before we looked at the boots," he laughs.

Mumble-the-peg.

It's a game lost to today's generation whose time is spent unraveling the mysteries of Simon, the computer, and other like electronic games.

Human rights battler, victorious

Today Michael Lucas sits at home in Sanilac County, in Michigan's thumb-area, owing his cleared name to attorney Joe Fabrizio of Greenview Street, Independence Township.

Fabrizio and his law partner represented Lucas in a two-year civil rights suit against the Sanilac County Mental Health Department, charging Lucas was denied due process of law and his first amendment rights when he was fired in 1976 for allegedly assaulting a mental patient, among other charges.

The case had all the ingredients of a full-blown movie. It twisted and turned in a maze filled with sex, violence, blackballing and Perry Mason-style courtroom drama, with surprise witnesses, arguments and tampered evidence, says Fabrizio.

A vocational education teacher, Lucas was hired by Sanilac County to be supervisor of the mental health department's activities program, and he was authorized to set-up a program for mentally handicapped adults through a vocational center.

After arriving, Lucas was instrumental in attempting to organize a labor union for health employees. He had also charged some members of the mental health board with conflict of interest during a public meeting broadcast on the local radio station.

Lucas charged that $1,000 a month rent paid for a deteriorating building used by the mental health department was paid to a member of the mental health board who owned the building.

He also cited conflict of interest when developmentally disabled persons living in a private group home instead of wards of the county were placed in a county-run group home.

That group home belonged to a member of the mental health board.

Fabrizio said he entered the courtroom to prove the charges leveled against Lucas were trumped up by the mental health board to oust a troublemaker from their midst.

The first trial, after a year, ended in mistrial when an attorney for the defense tainted the jury, Fabrizio said.

The second trial produced a $120,000 settlement in favor of Lucas, with an additional $150,000 to be paid in attorney fees.

The jury trial held in Federal District Court in Port Huron, in the courtroom of Judge James Harvey ended Aug. 7, 10 weeks after it began, vindicated," Fabrizio said.

"We had to prove first that the charges were false, second that he never got a fair hearing and that if he had a hearing he would have been vindicated," Fabrizio said.

"Lucas was fired on serious charges that were publically made. We argued such charges would stigmatize a person, affecting for the rest of his life his right to work and earn a living."

The jury agreed as Fabrizio showed the charges of patient abuse were false, as were all the other charges used by the mental health board to fire Lucas.

Fabrizio's family forfeited a summer vacation this year as he spent those 10 weeks in Port Huron, in court from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day, with more work after the court closed.

"My partner and I rented a cottage because it was too expensive to stay in motels. At night we pack-up, eat dinner, and begin preparing for the next day in court."

"It was hard work," Fabrizio said, "it would have been terribly depressing had we lost."

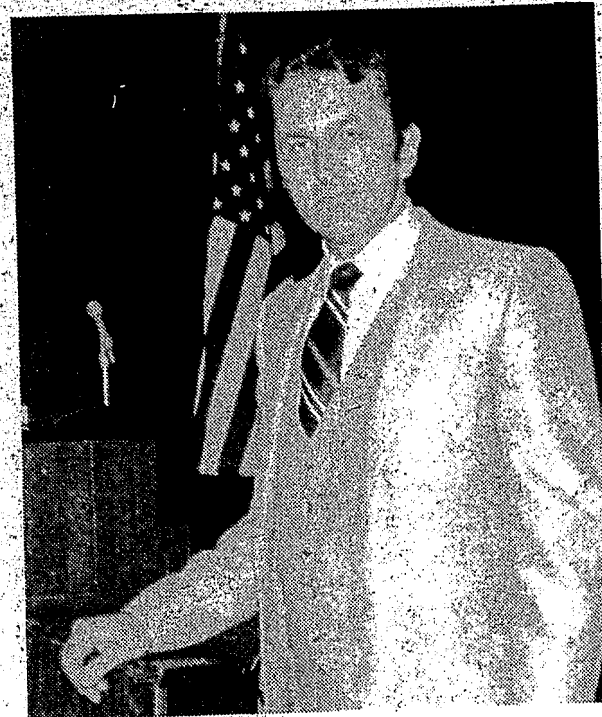

The human rights issue goes to the heart of the whole system of government, he said.

"You hear a lot of talk about the Constitution, a person's right to the pursuit of happiness, etc. It's rare when a person has a chance to take out the Constitution and use it," he said.

A victory poster hanging in Joe Fabrizio's family room, in large red, white and blue letters reads:

"One small step for Mike Lucas, one giant step for human rights in Sanilac County."

First stop for brides-to-be:

The Clarkston News

Many Clarkston area couples have made their hometown newspaper, The Clarkston News, the first stop after their engagement.

What better way to let their friends and neighbors know of the up-coming wedding than to have it published in their local paper. Plus, much of their planning can be accomplished right at the Clarkston News office.

Couples can choose from an array of fine invitations, imprinted napkins and matches, the ever-important thank you cards, guest registers, bride's memory books; even paper plates, plastic spoons, knives, forks and more.

So, long before you say "I do," come in and see what "we do!" By the way, newlyweds in the area get a one year free subscription to The Clarkston News with their wedding order.

When weddings run amuk, the laughter runs in peals

Those wedding jitters. They're made of the stuff that creates laughter in retrospect. At the time, they're knee melting, heart stopping, eye twitching and stomach churning.

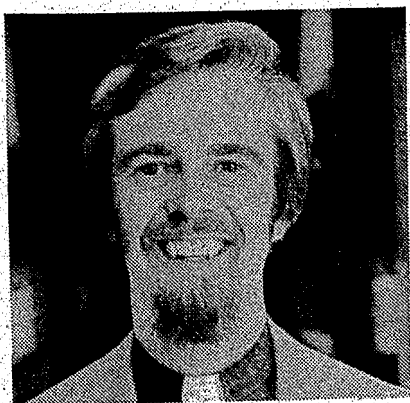

Clarkston-area ministers with years of experience easily recall some of their church weddings, and the bride and bridegroom's embarrassing moments, now most probably pulled from memories each anniversary and shared with the family to peals of laughter.

The Rev. Alexander Stewart of the Episcopal Church of the Resurrection on Clarkston-Orion Road recalls the wedding that wasn't.

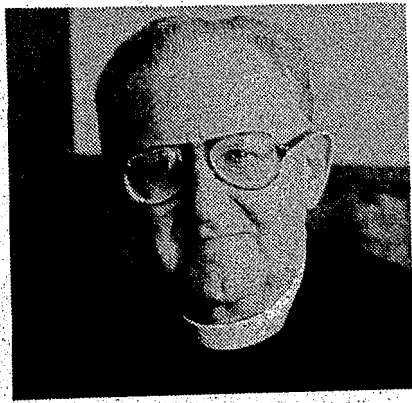

"The groom didn't show up...and it wasn't very funny," he said. "Yes, it was here in Clarkston. I guess he got cold feet. They finally did get married, though, a month later. I didn't perform the ceremony the second time."

At his first church, Stewart recalls a bridegroom who was allergic to wheat.

"He was a bakery salesman and he was allergic to wheat and had just gotten out of the hospital. He had to sit in a chair for the ceremony, for he was very weak," said Stewart. "His young bride had to search out rice flour recipes for him."

The Rev. Robert Walters

The Rev. Alexander Stewart

The Rev. Robert Walters of Calvary Lutheran Church on Bluegrass Drive recalls with a snicker one of his wedding ceremonies.

"One bride fainted half-way through the service and spent the rest of the ceremony on a chair.

"Once the flowers didn't show up until the exact minute they were needed. They'd been delivered to another church. As the wedding was starting, the florist was putting the flowers in place."

Mock weddings at the high school have proved to be the cause of some of his most embarrassing moments, he added.

"The bride and grooms succulent French kiss. I've had to ask them to greet each other more discreetly," he said.

With amusement, Walters remembers his first wedding.

"It was a hippie wedding in 1962 near the north side of Chicago. It was in the basement of a flat and they wore sandals. He had a beard; she wore a simple dress."

Tradition

A handy guide for splitting wedding costs

Tradition surrounds the dividing of expenses between the families of the bride and bridegroom.

Although it is not unusual for the bridegroom's family to share in the cost of the reception, it is most often the custom that the bride's family is entirely responsible for the ceremony and reception expenses.

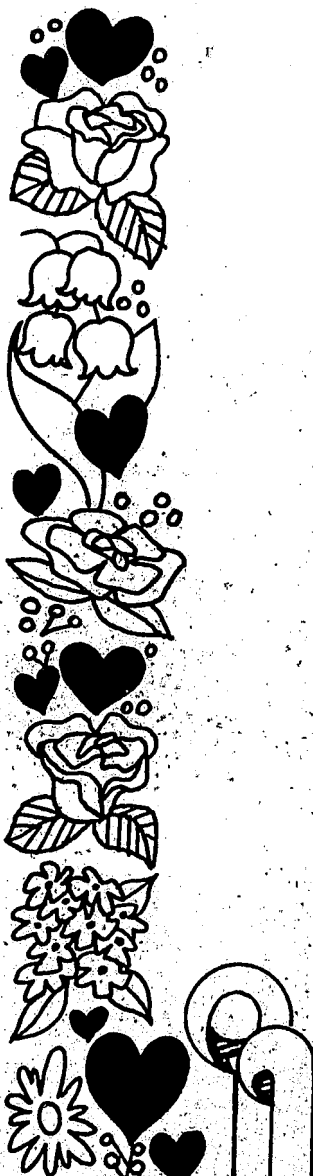

As pointed out in Bride's magazine, wedding costs are customarily divided as follows:

Bride or bride's family expenses:

- Invitations, announcements and enclosure cards.
- Bride's wedding dress, veil and trousseau.
- Bouquets for wedding party.
- Flowers for church and reception.
- Engagement and wedding photographs.
- Fees for church, sexton, organist.
- Transportation of the bridal party to the church and reception.
- Entire reception, including food, beverages, music and decorations.
- Bridegroom's wedding ring and wedding gift.
- Gifts for bride's attendants.
- Hotel accommodations for bridesmaids from out of town.

Bridegroom's expenses:

- Bride's engagement and wedding rings.
- Marriage license.
- Clergyman's fee.
- Bride's bouquet.
- Boutonnieres for men of the wedding party.
- Flowers for mother and grandmother.
- Bride's wedding gift.
- Gifts for best man and ushers.
- Hotel accommodations for ushers from out of town.
- Complete wedding trip.

The best man's memories

— By Al Zawacky

Dressed to the hilt, best man Al Zawacky poses for a traditional wedding portrait with the maid of honor.

Ranking somewhere between jumping the Snake River Canyon and strolling through New York's Central Park past midnight is the experience of being the best man at a wedding.

The writer assumes that being a best man can often be a tranquil event, void of any embarrassment or moments of panic. At least that's how some other best men had related their experiences to me.

But mine was occasionally harrowing.

Still, there's no greater honor a friend can bestow than to ask you to be his best man. It's an offer you can't refuse.

So when Mark, a good friend of mine, asked me to be his best man, I gushed and said I was flattered and said it would be an honor. I was rather naive then.

"So, what will I have to do?" I asked, reminding him that my job as a reporter 30 miles out of town often made spare time a scarce commodity.

"I really don't know," Mark replied. "I've never been a best man. Organize the bachelor's party, I guess, is one of the things you'll have to do."

I told him I didn't know the first thing about organizing a bachelor's party. Where would we hold it, for one thing. I didn't want it at my house. Mark's apartment was too small. Where would I get the money to buy the required beer supply, or to rent the cargo truck needed to have it transported to the scene?

Not only that, but I didn't own a single 8mm film suitably decadent for bachelor-party use.

"Well, it's no big deal," Mark replied. "There really doesn't have to be a bachelor's party."

The tuxedo and shoes lightened me to the tune of about $45, and my financial obligations did not end there, of course. There was also the matter of a gift, and naturally, the best man is expected to give a wedding present befitting the honor bestowed upon him as best man.

After prowling for weeks through Lakeside Mall looking at top-of-the-line toasters and electric blenders, I decided I didn't need the added burden of trying to select an appropriate gift. I opted for cash instead.

The day finally arrived, and I rose at 8:30 that morning—about four hours earlier than my usual Saturday-morning form. I downed a few cups of coffee and showered without incident, but fate began to turn on me when I picked up my razor.

You see, I hadn't seriously cut myself while shaving for years. And if there ever was a time that you didn't want it to happen...

"ARRRRGGGGGHHHHH," a voice boomed out of the bathroom.

An inspection of the wound revealed the cut to be just on the bottom of my lower lip—which meant that every time I licked my lips, a natural reflex most of us do without thinking—the bleeding would start again.

Neither styptic pencil, nor tissue paper, nor prayer would halt the flow.

I uttered many an epithet on my way to Mark's apartment.

Based on the shaving escapade, I expected the worst when I began to change into my tux. As the fates would demand, one of the adjusting snaps in my pants broke almost immediately. And the buttons in my shirt didn't seem to match anyone else's.

Then Mark's dad found out the trousers in his regalia had a defective zipper.

I suddenly felt lucky with my broken snap and weird buttons.

"Now I know why these were so cheap to rent," said Mark.

"Yea," I said.

On the way to the church, we cracked jokes back and forth to try and keep each other loose.

"I just hope I remember everything from the rehearsal," I said.

"Oh, yeah—there's one more thing you're supposed to do," Mark said.

"You're telling me this now? On the day of the wedding?"

"It's no big deal. You're supposed to make a toast at the reception and then introduce the priest to give the blessing."

"What?"

"It's no big deal. You don't have to give a big speech."

"What's the priest's name?"

"Uh—Koper. Father Kohh-per. I thing that's the way you pronounce it. There's plenty of time between then and now to ask and make sure you've got it right."

"Damn."

"What's wrong?"

"My lip's bleeding again."

The ceremony went smoothly. Pretty much so, anyway. I was ever conscious of not licking my lips, and the fact that I almost crumbled permanently to the floor when I genuflected in front of the priest left me somewhat embarrassed.

As a non-Catholic, the art of genuflection is not in my repertoire. Is it one knee? The right or left? Anyway, I can be reasonably certain that the way I did it did not follow the strictures of orthodoxy. I bent down, heard a crack in my knee echo throughout the church, and almost fell. It took a herculean effort for me to get back on my feet and return to my pew.

Everyone in the wedding party found the whole scene priceless for its entertainment value.

"An old hockey injury," I explained later.

After the long drive from the church to the reception hall, with horn blaring much of the way, it was time to form the reception line.

For 45 minutes I stood there, shaking hands and saying hello to dozens of people I didn't know. I got tired of saying again and again, "Hi, my name's Al and I'm a friend of Mark's," so I just started shaking hands and nodding.

After a few hours of partying, Mark nudged me and said it was time to deliver the toast. I was required to go up to the front of the hall—in front of all those people—and give a brilliant, eloquent toast in honor of the bride and bridegroom.

Oh no, not now. Where's the microphone? Where's the front of the room? Give me some time. Give me some black coffee. Let's do this later.

But wedding protocol is unbreachable, and besides, no one could start eating until after the priest gave the blessing. And I had to introduce him.

"You don't have to give a big speech," Mark said.

I picked up my glass of champagne and dutifully walked up front, grasping the live microphone one of the DJs handed me.

"Can I have your attention? Can I have your attention please?" The hall fell reasonably silent. I relished the feeling of power.

"I'd like to propose a toast," I began, "to our newly weds, Dianne and Mark."

"I know I'm speaking for everyone here in wishing them many, many years of health and happiness in their new life together."

I raised my glass and the mass of humanity followed suit. We drank, and without further delay I smoothly announced that "Father Kohhh-per will now give the blessing."

Then I found my way back to my seat.

Seated next to me, Mark gave the "thumbs up" sign.

Ah, was there ever any doubt that Al would perform magnificently? Even under pressure, he is totally coherent. Words, after all, are the brick and mortar of his profession.

"By the way," I asked somebody later. "What did I say?"

In retrospect, I guess being the best man isn't really so bad. In fact, I wouldn't mind doing it again.

But not for a while yet. I need some time to practice genuflecting. And shaving.

Getting into the proper country spirit by donning a pair of cowboy hats, Jean and Vince Rizzo pose before the merry dancers at their recent silver anniversary celebration at their home in Independence Township. Over 100 friends and relatives gathered to help the Rizzos celebrate the happy event.

Foot stompin, 'toe tappin' silver celebration

THERE WAS A REAL hoedown celebration at the home of Vince and Jean Rizzo recently, as the Independence Township couple marked their 25th wedding anniversary in style.

Over 100 friends and relatives from places as far away as New York, California and Florida gathered at the Rizzo home to help Vince and Jean remember that day 25 years ago when they exchanged wedding vows at Sacred Heart Church in Roseville.

And when a professional square dance caller showed up at about 8 p.m., the party really got rolling.

Flashes of lightning illuminated the dancing couples outside the Rizzos' garage, rustically decorated to resemble a country barn. The heavenly fireworks proved to be a portent of the downpour that hit about 9 p.m., but the rain could only dampen the turf and topsoil—not the spirits of the partygoers.

"We just moved inside and waited for the rain to stop," says Jean. "It really poured—about eight cars got stuck later, but we were able to get everybody out OK."

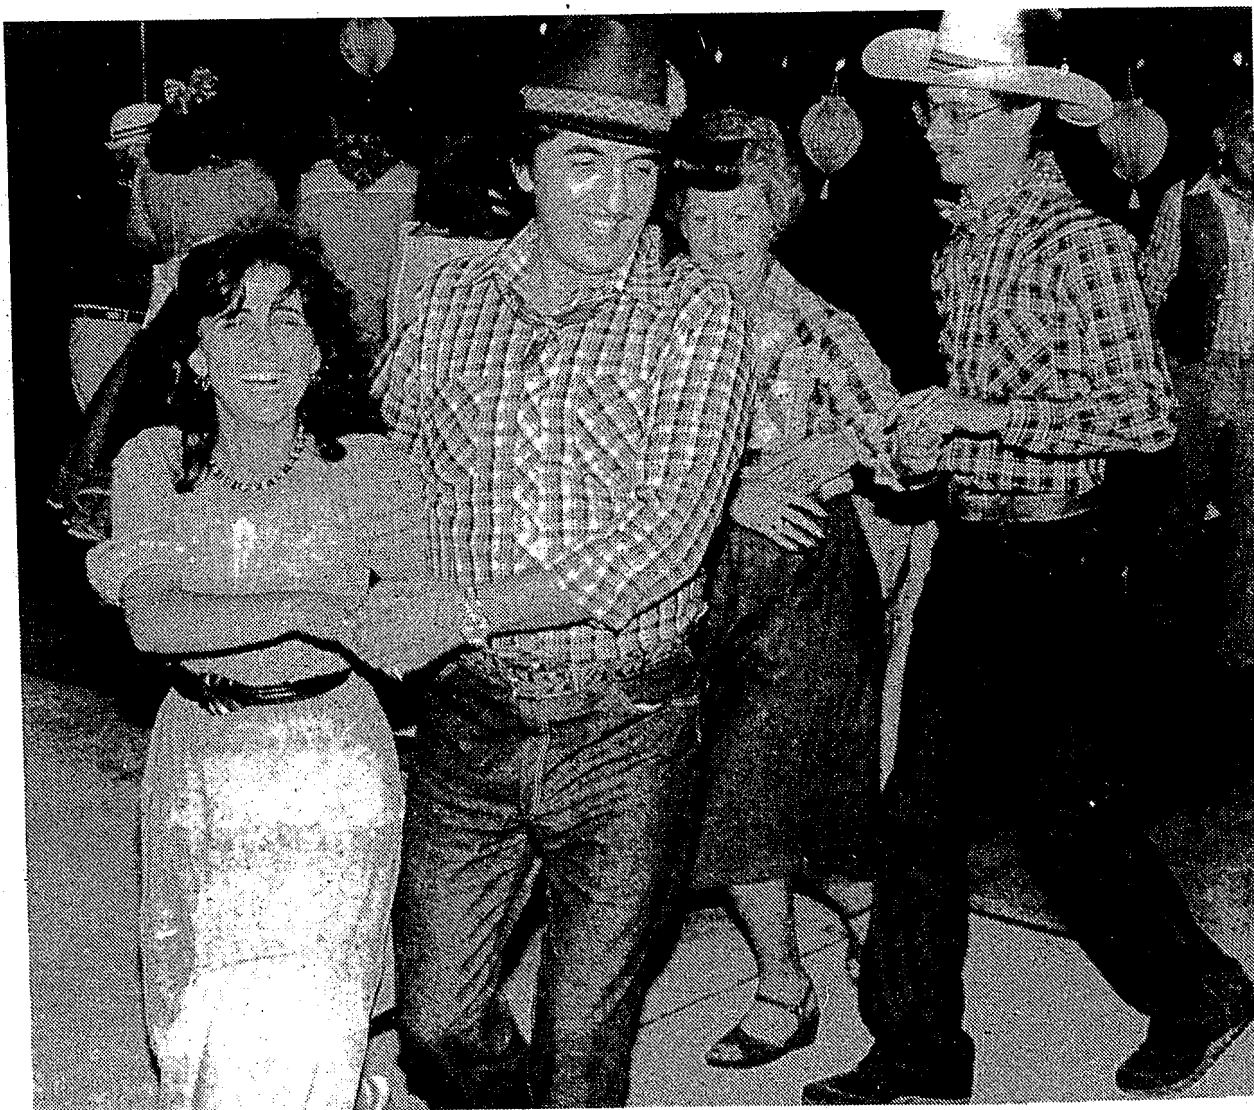

And the festivities didn't break up until about 2 a.m., Vince reports.

Calling out the promenades and do-si-dos is square dance caller Wayne Hall of Oxford.

Prior to the arrival of the rain, Maria and Joe Pavone, Lue Pierce and Larry Chalbian [from left] have a rollicking good time dancing to the calls. Maria and Joe are cousins of the Rizzos and live in Mt. Clemens, while Lue and Larry are family friends from Mt. Clemens and Warren respectively.
