An afternoon at day camp

It was "Pirate Day" at Independence Oaks County Park last week, as kids participating in the Independence Parks and Recreation day camp program made boats and went on an afternoon treasure hunt, canoeing on the waters of Crooked Lake. The program is broken down into three two-week sessions, and is open to boys and girls ages 6-12. Fishing, swimming, canoeing and camping are some of the activities. Above, Scott King, Matt Johnston and Amanda King (from left) put the finishing touches on their milk-carton boats.

• Board OKs administration shake-up

By Al Zawacky

Clarkston Junior High Assistant Principal Doug Pierson will be teaching again next fall, while central office administrators William Potvin and William Neff have been re-assigned to building positions.

Sashabaw Junior High assistant principal George White and Pike Knob Principal John Riebe, on the other hand, will retain their current positions.

Before a packed and vocal audience at a special meeting Monday night, the Clarkston Board of Education approved almost all of the administration shake-ups recommended by Superintendent Milford Mason.

Mason's recommendation dealt with administrative personnel named earlier in the year as possible reassignment targets in order to cut district costs.

The lone point in Mason's plan that the board hedged on was the status of Potvin and Clarkston Junior High Principal Duane Lewis. Mason recommended that Potvin, currently director of building and planning, return to Clarkston Junior High as principal, while Lewis assumed the assistant principal's job.

However, the board in its motion left open the question of whether Lewis or Potvin would be Clarkston Junior High's principal. Board member Mary Jane Chaustowich's motion stated only that both would be at assigned to CJH, without specifying which jobs they would hold.

The vote on the motion was 4-2 to approve, with dissenting votes cast by board members Addison Hubbard and Fernando Sanchez. Voting aye were board president Janet Thomas and board members Stephen Werner, C. Vincent Luzi and Chaustowich.

Final determination of the situation at Clarkston Junior High will probably take place at the board's next regular meeting, according to Thomas; although Potvin suggested a special meeting be held in order to allow as much time as possible for discussion.

"I don't anticipate a special meeting will be necessary," Thomas said. "The July agendas are usually light."

The specifics of the rest of Mason's recommendations, all of which were approved by the board, are as follows:

- Clarkston Junior High Assistant Principal Doug Pierson will return to the classroom in a teaching capacity.

- Central office administrator William Neff, director of elementary education, will become the principal at Andersonville Elementary to fill the vacancy created by Lynn Jervis' return to the teaching ranks. Neff will also retain some of his elementary education director duties.

- No changes will occur in the status of the remaining administrators named earlier in the year as possible reassignment candidates—Clarkston High School Principal Dom Mauti, CHS Assistant Principal John Kirchgessner, Sashabaw Junior High Principal Gus Birtsas, Assistant Superintendent Mel Vaara and Administrative assistant William Dennis.

Mason pointed out that earlier in the day, the administration had lost an arbitration ruling to the Clarkston Education Association. Under the ruling, time spent in an administrative capacity cannot be added to teaching seniority.

Mason and the board had agreed earlier that administration reassignments should not leave any administrators without jobs. In light of the arbitration decision, the demotion of some administrators to the teaching ranks could mandate that they be laid off.

Audience reaction to the proposal to remove Lewis from the principal position at CJH was harsh.

"There's a good working relationship between the parents and Mr. Lewis," said Mary Jane Scharfenkamp. "He responds to parental interests and concerns in a very positive ways, and has initiated many new programs for the fall."

Jessica Hirr added that, "putting new administrators in right now would be like starting all over again."

Thomas said the decision was a hard but necessary one.

"The people in this district have said over and over again, 'You have too many administrators, reduce your number of administrators.' We're responding to that."

Sanchez, who cast one of the dissenting votes, said he based his objection to Neff being required to continue as many of his elementary education director duties as possible while taking over as principal at Andersonville.

"It seems like we're creating a super principal," he said, suggesting that Neff's old responsibilities instead should fall to someone in central office.

Cable TV Task Force nears its recommendation

The Task Force on Cable TV moves closer each day to issuing its final recommendation, as three companies, Concord Cable Communications, Multi-Cablevision and Omnicom of Michigan Inc., continue to vie for Independence Township's contract.

That word comes from Chairman Robert Hurlbert as the five-member team handed in a 30-page comparative analysis of the three companies' features.

"We did not stress in any way that one was any better than the other," Hurlbert said.

Copies went to the township board, village council and to the three companies. Copies are available for the public at Independence Township Hall, 90 N. Main, Clarkston.

Allowing the next month for corrections or questions, the task force has scheduled a public meeting July 27 at 7 p.m. at township hall, for each company to again make its bid and field questions.

Soon after, Hurlbert anticipates the task force will make its recommendation.

Levy, DNR trial postponed; township frustrated

There's been another stumbling block tossed in the path of Independence Township's bid to force a decision in the Edward C. Levy Co.'s Inland Lakes and Streams application, needed to mine approximately 400 acres near the headwaters of the Clinton River.

With a full docket dominating the courtroom of Oakland County Circuit Court Judge Gene Schnelz, the township's suit against the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) has been postponed to July 14.

Expressing frustration over the delay, Supervisor James B. Smith pointed to mounting attorney fees as the township's reason for filing suit and seeking to get the first step over with.

"We'd like to get this done as soon as we can, there's been delay long enough," Smith said.

In June, after a year of waiting, the township filed suit against the DNR to force a decision on the permit.

In February of 1980, following a public hearing where 200 voiced strong opposition to the proposal to mine, the DNR promised a decision on issuance of the permit within 90 days.

In February 1981, almost a year to the date of the hearing, the DNR waived when negotiations for an alternative to the plan appeared as though they may bear fruit.

Fourth of July parade to hit street Monday

Grab Old Glory and a brassy blowing horn and hit the streets of downtown Clarkston early on Monday, July 5, for the Independence Township Fire Department's annual Fourth of July parade, scheduled to begin at 10 a.m.

Marchers should line up at 9:30 a.m. at Clarkston Junior High, 6300 Church. The route follows Church Street to Main Street, north to Miller Road.

Participants should gear their floats to this year's theme: "A red, white and blue salute to Independence."

A $25 award goes to the following winning entries: Most original float; best children's float; best theme float.

In addition, three awards will be given to those judged to be the best made-up clowns prior to the parade as marchers line up at Clarkston Junior High.

Clowns are encouraged to hang around after the judging and join the parade.

To register your entry or for information phone 625-1924.

Bible comes to life

No, King Tut did not pay a visit to Clarkston United Methodist Church recently—but village resident Jim Schultz did. Looking very convincing in his pharaoh garb, Schultz helped children at the church's summer bible class bring to life the Genesis story of Joseph and his life in ancient Egypt. Chip Galley, standing at left, played Joseph.

News, historical society sponsor photo contest

OK all you shutterbugs, now's your chance to capture whatever suits your fancy in the village of Clarkston and win cash for your efforts.

The Clarkston News and the Clarkston Community Historical Society have joined forces to sponsor the Clarkston Sesquicentennial Photo Contest and provide the prizes.

All entries will become the property of the Clarkston Community Historical Society to provide a sample of life in the village in 1982 to be enjoyed by future generations.

We'll take entries any time between now and Friday, Aug. 27, at 5 p.m. They may be dropped off at The Clarkston News office, or mailed to The Clarkston News Photo Contest, 5 S. Main, Clarkston, 48016.

Here are the rules and guidelines:

- The contest is open to amateur photographers of all ages. Each person may enter each category once.

- The photos must have been taken during 1982.

- Entries may be in black and white or color. Only 5-by-7-inch prints will be considered for the prizes. They need not be mounted, but the photographer's name, address, age, telephone number, and the date and place the picture was taken must printed on the back of the photo.

- The three cash prizes in the general category will be provided by The Clarkston News—$25 for first, $15 for second and $10 for third. In addition, the historical society will award each general category winner a copy of "Heritage," the hard-cover book published by the society in 1976. The next five winners will receive, as an honorable mention award from the society, copies of "Heritage." As a guideline for photographers, almost anything goes here as long as the photo was taken in the village.

•The Clarkston Community Historical Society has also established two special categories, and prizes in each are $25 for first place and $15 for second plus "Heritage" books. There will also be two "Heritage" books awarded in each category for honorable mention.

Kids—write your way to fame, prizes

Hey, kids! Get involved in Clarkston's 150th birthday celebration. Take your pen in hand and enter The Clarkston News Young Writers' Contest.

Children in grades three through nine may enter by writing up to 250 words on "Why I Like Clarkston" or "What I Would Like Clarkston to Be."

Because the idea is to honor the town's 150th birthday, keep in mind that "Clarkston" refers to the village.

- The historical society's first special category is for best architectural photograph. Judges will be looking for a photo of something that's typical of village architecture with artistic value.

- The second historical society special category is for a photo of historic value—a picture that would show how the village operates today, so it would be significant in the future.

Photos of the winners will be printed in fourth Clarkston News special section honoring Clarkston's sesquicentennial, planned Sept. 15. Entries will also be on display during Crafts and Cider, the historical society's annual fund-raising event held in the Clarkston Village Park in September.

We will begin accepting entries now, and they must be received no later than 5 p.m. Friday, Aug. 22, at The Clarkston News office, 5 S. Main, Clarkston, MI 48016.

Prizes are $25 for first place, $15 for second and $10 for third.

The winners' themes will be printed in The Clarkston News fourth special section honoring Clarkston's sesquicentennial on Sept. 15.

Girl, 16, injured in grease fire

A Springfield Township teenager is recovering with second-degree burns over 17 percent of her body after she attempted to carry a burning skillet outside and spattered hot grease on her arms, legs and face.

Wendy Leach, 16, of Ormond Road, is listed in good condition in the burn unit of Mott Children's Hospital in Ann Arbor, according to a hospital spokesperson.

Wendy was reportedly baby-sitting for family on Clarkston-Orion Road, Independence Township, on the afternoon of June 25, preparing grease for fried potatoes.

The skillet caught fire, according to Independence Township Fire Chief Frank Ronk, and she attempted to carry it outside when it spilled.

The fire department's Emergency Medical Service found Wendy at the neighbors where she'd run for help.

Bid approved for CHS house

A bid has been accepted for the latest house built by the Clarkston Community Schools Building Trades Program.

At Monday's special school board meeting, Assistant Superintendent Mel Vaara recommended and the school board approved accepting the high bid of $78,500 from Independence Township residents Charles Robinson and his wife Betty Anderson.

The building trades house, located on Goldfinch Lane in Independence Township, has approximately 1,850 square feet of living space. It's the fourth house built predominately by Clarkston High School students in the history of the four-year-old program.

Vaara stated that the agreement with Robinson and Anderson hinged on the ability of the couple to sell their present home within a 45-day period.

"If they can't sell in that time, we will turn the house over to a real estate firm," Vaara said.

"Good service, good coverage, good price . . . that's State Farm Insurance."

Board knows its fundamentals

To The Editor,

Reading your June 23 front page headline, "Free dumping overwhelms officials," may have led some citizens to wonder about the wisdom of their leaders.

Fortunately in my case, a few minutes later I read a front page article in the Wall Street Journal, telling how the Christian Phalangists in Lebanon were successful in establishing a peaceful community in that war-torn world:

...in a bloody putsch in 1980, Beshir demolished the rival Christian Militia. This allowed him to assume control of the Christian supermilitia that included most of the Christian factions.

"The Phalangists combined their military strength with a political program that aimed at supplanting the decaying Lebanese State. Starting in 1976, they organized Popular Committees in the Christian neighborhoods of East Beirut and Jounieh. These committees operated on the plausible theory that the first responsibility of politicians is to pick up the garbage.

"The Phalangists boast now about how they distributed plastic garbage bags and organized an efficient refuse-collection system. Soon they were maintaining the local water, electricity and telephone networks, designating municipal parking lots, and promulgating food and drug safety laws. In the chaos of Lebanon, the orderly and secure streets of East Beirut began to seem like paradise, even to the many Lebanese Moslems."

I have a college degree in political science, but never before have I heard that the "first responsibility of politicians is to pick up the garbage."

Obviously, the Independence Township Board and the Lebanese Christians know their fundamentals.

Steel trap cruel, unnecessary

Dear Editor,

We recently found a baby robin caught in a steel jaw trap, set by a neighbor to keep rabbits out of his garden. Both of its legs were severely mangled and it was making a desperate attempt to free itself.

We were able to release it from the trap, but because it was after business hours, we weren't able to find any nature centers or veterinarian clinics open to help us save the bird.

We remembered Ann Glenn, whose column has appeared in your paper, and we knew she would have the knowledge and compassion to know what was best for the bird.

How many people would drop everything and change evening plans to care for a wild creature? If it would have been easy to just let the bird die, but Ann felt it was strong-willed enough to live in spite of its serious injury. She doctored the legs, fed it special formulas and watched it around the clock for four days.

Because of her care, the robin was beginning to fly again until for some unknown reason it died suddenly.

We are so grateful that someone like Ann lives in our community. Her love for wild creatures was an inspiration to us; she recognizes the importance of allowing living things to exist naturally rather than be killed or suffer because of man's cruel devices.

We wonder how many people are using traps for similar purposes, and how many family pets or young children will accidentally stumble upon them. There are more humane ways to protect a garden and we hope people will remember how this small creature's life was ended so cruelly and will think twice before setting any kind of trap.

'If it Fitz. . .

Remember with laughter

by Jim Fitzgerald

It's been almost 20 years since I had a father to honor on Father's Day, but I still think of him often. I thought of him last week, when I read that Jim Jordan is still alive at age 85.

Jordan was Fibber McGee of "Fibber McGee and Molly," a popular radio show when I was a little boy, in the 1930s. Fibber made my father laugh until he cried. The only radio program that made him laugh harder was "Amos and Andy." If you are too young to remember Fibber and Amos and Andy, I don't care. I don't care if you fall into your TV set and get run over by the Duke of Hazzard.

FORTY-FIVE YEARS AGO, people listened to the radio as intensely as they watch television today. I always sprawled on the floor, snug between the radio and my father's chair, with both ears pressed against the fiber screen covering the loudspeaker. Obviously, I was an unusual child. In those days, as today, it was a rare boy who had both ears on the same side of his head.

I had a valid claim to the best radio seat in the house, much to the chagrin of my much older sister, Terrible Jean, because it was my radio. I won it—a Philco floor model—in a raffle at Hess & Son's grocery store.

My family purchased all its nourishment from Hess, two blocks from our home. My mother phoned in her daily order in the morning; one of her children picked it up in the afternoon, and my father paid up in person once a month. Dad would sit at Tommy Hess' desk, pull out the Fitzgerald account, total up his own bill and write a check. Try that at your neighborhood supermarket someday.

During the months that Hess & Son distributed one radio raffle ticket for each $1 purchase, I magnanimously volunteered to tote home as much groceries as Mother could order. This allowed me to print my name on the ticket stubs, a just reward for unusually unselfish magnanimity. I remember carrying my own pencil to the store in preparation for printing. I carried it behind my ears.

WHEN TOMMY HESS phoned to say my name was drawn out of the box, Terrible Jean's wrath was fearsome to behold. She insisted that, because I hadn't paid for the groceries attached to the winning ticket, the radio belonged to the whole family, including her! I said only the holder of the winning ticket could claim the radio, and if she didn't shut her dirty rotten mouth I would leave my radio at Hess & Son's and listen to it there, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mon. thru Fri. and until 9 p.m. Sat. nite.

Because Terrible Jean was bigger than every kid in our neighborhood—and most of the trees—I was the object of much sibling brutality. But no father likes to see his only son pounded into the ground up to his neck to have his ears boxed one-handed. So I was also the object of much parental pity, and Dad ruled that the radio was mine. I couldn't put it in my bedroom, but I could sit closest to it in the living room. I couldn't prevent Terrible Jean from listening to it, but I could stick my tongue out at her and say nyaaaah. Life can be beautiful.

It was most beautiful, in those days, when I sprawled on the floor between my radio and my dad and tried to laugh as hard as he did at Fibber McGee and Amos and Andy. A lot of the time I didn't know what I was laughing at, but he didn't care. Dad would reach down and rub behind my ears and call me "Sport." It never occurred to me that he wanted a dog.

Most of my memories of my father are associated with laughter. He never told jokes, but he was the funniest man I ever knew. Once in a while I get lucky and a reader who knew Dad will tell me I'm almost as funny as he was. For me, that is the supreme compliment.

Whenever my children ask what I want for Father's Day, I answer nothing. I guess what I really want, ultimately, is what my father got—to be remembered with laughter. That's probably why I don't mind walking lopsided in the winter because both earmuffs are on the same side of my head.

Hooked on history

by Kathy Greenfield

I've spent a great deal of time in the past couple of weeks taking a hard look at the town I call home.

With Clarkston Historical Society President Denise Symons as my guide, I toured the village and listened to her comments on changes that have taken place on buildings over the years.

When she talked about preservation—the need to take care of what we have in our 150-year-old town—it made sense.

The tour and subsequent reading and rereading of the available books on Clarkston's history added to my knowledge. "Heritage," the historical society's hardcover publication edited by Jennifer Radcliff for America's 200th birthday in 1976 deserves praise—it's worthwhile to give it a thorough reading.

A couple of things happened along the way as I studied Clarkston's past.

I have always liked Clarkston's old homes and buildings, but now instead of saying, "Gee, isn't that a neat house?" I can say, "That house, of Greek Revival design, was built in the 1850s by Nelson Clark, one of Clarkston's founding fathers and namesakes. The pillars in front used to be taller, but they were showing age and were shortened to make them more stable at a later time. The stonework on the porch was also added later."

I think I'm hooked—it's fun to know all these details.

As I became aware of what village buildings are made up of, another thing happened—I became more critical.

Thoughts of how great a place would look without the remodeled fronts popped in my head, and things like street and building signs began to bother me.

I think there's hope, however, because after being out of town for several hours last week, I drove back home, saw the joggers with dogs and the kids on bikes gliding past historic homes, and realized anew that Clarkston makes me feel good.

That in itself is a tribute to a town in the midst of its 150th birthday celebration.

Prospering in his adopted country

By Al Zawacky

Paul Eghigian sat at his desk in his Independence Township home and recalled a terrible day in his past.

Smiling pictures of his children and grandchildren decorated the walls of the room, but at the moment his thoughts were focused on a scene 65 years ago, thousands of miles away from the house on Sashabaw Road in Independence Township.

The massacre of an estimated 1.5 million Armenians living in Turkey during World War I might rate little more than a few paragraphs in most history books.

But 80-year-old Paul Eghigian didn't learn about the Armenian pogrom by reading about it in a book. He was there.

A lad of 13 at the time, he remembered seeing weapon-wielding Turkish soldiers coming into his village. Although he and about a dozen other boys were able to escape—his family was not.

"I lost my father, my mother and five brothers—all killed," he said. "Myself and some other boys ran away to the mountains and hid in a cave."

For two years, the boys lived a murky existence, fearing for their lives and battling the odds to survive.

Then word came that the Allied armies had entered Constantinople, and the boys were able to safely enter the city.

Eghigian lived in Constantinople for three years, working hard to raise money to earn passage on a ship to a place he had only heard about—the United States.

He had never seen the U.S., but he was certain that America was the one place where he could rebuild a shattered life.

His reason was simple and he recited it with a grin.

"I knew America was the only damn country in the world that is really free. No other place is."

In 1920, he arrived in Boston with $20 in his pocket and an envelope with an uncle's address on it.

"I walked for two, three hours before I found where he lived," Eghigian said.

"I would walk up to a stranger, show him the envelope and ask, 'Mister, where is this?'"

He was an immigrant in a strange land with no skills other than a willingness to work, but he found a job with the Sunshine Biscuit Company and before long had a hand in a grocery-type business in Boston.

The store didn't do very well, but Paul Eghigian's

Paul Eghigian: Narrowly avoiding death at the hands of Turkish soldiers as a boy, he went on to battle his way to success in a new and strange land.

entry into the business world proved to be a portent of things to come.

In 1924, he married and came to Michigan where he began working at the Ford Motor Rouge Plant. Handling his money carefully, he was soon doing well in his adopted land.

But then came the stock market crash that heralded the Great Depression. Eghigian was one of a mass of unemployed—and he made a decision never to return to a factory job.

"I lost two houses and all the money I had in the bank," he recalled. "But I wouldn't go to welfare. I walked back and forth between Detroit and Pontiac as a peddler. I can remember having holes in my shoes."

He began selling gas lighters, used to ignite stoves and torches. By saving his money he was eventually able to buy the tiny business from his boss and operate the "Detroit Gas Lighter Company" from a small, run-down building in Detroit.

Confident of his product and himself, he entered the domain of corporate Ford headquarters and sold the company 500 of his gas lighters. "I bought a lot of Fords from you, now maybe you can buy some gas lighters from me," he said, reciting his sales pitch.

The business grew and Eghigian eventually diversified into heavy machinery. Within a few years he sold the gas lighter business—for $25,000.

From there on Paul Eghigian followed a winding road in the world of business, always seeming to be in the right place at the right time.

He owned and operated the successful Paul's Machinery business in Detroit, and worked on some big defense contracts during World War II.

In 1960 he came to the Clarkston area, and currently owns the American Stone Products gravel business on Sashabaw Road.

"I've made a lot of money, but I've lost a lot of money, too," he said. "I remember losing a lot of money on an oil company once."

He remembered with a grin being told that everything he touches seems to turn to gold, but Paul Eghigian knows that it isn't all that easy. Even today at 80, he continues to answer phones, and take care of the family business.

The secret to his success is simple.

"I didn't go to school or college," he said. "I just worked hard for everything I ever had."

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

June 16, 1982

To the Citizens of Clarkston:

I am pleased to join all those gathered to celebrate the 150th anniversary of Clarkston and to send my warm congratulations.

The spirit which has built and sustained your community reflects the energy which has forged America into a land of wonder. As a community held by fellowship and goodwill, Clarkston has become "home" to many who love it dearly. Further, it stands as an example of the blessings of liberty and freedom to those around the world.

Again, my hearty congratulations on this proud, historic occasion and my best wishes in the years to come.

Ronald Reagan

Reagan sends regards

By Marilyn Trumper

With all the hoopla over Clarkston Village's 150th birthday, even the White House is abuzz with talk of the sesquicentennial.

Word didn't filter into Washington via the grapevine, though. It was Vi Biondi who penned the news to U.S. President Ronald Reagan.

In turn, Reagan penned a reply.

"(Husband) Homer and I are proud to be a part of it, just as we were when (the United States) celebrated its 200th," Vi told a surprised Clarkston Village Council at the June 28 meeting, when she presented in frame the president's reply.

Seconds before, the council had opened a resolution from the state legislature commemorating Clarkston's birthday, issued at the prodding of Sen. Kerry Kammer.

"I hate to go one up on the senator," Vi said, to loud applause from the audience.

Prior to the meeting the Independence Township resident said she just "...thought it would be nice if the village had something from the president to mark its 150th birthday. So I sent the letter. I still get goose bumps when I look at the return address."

The note, on White House stationery complete with watermark, is on display in Clarkston Village Hall, 375 Depot, Clarkston.

Clarkston's 150th birthday has the official presidential stamp of approval.

Recall 4 teachers

Four Clarkston Community Schools teachers pegged for layoffs in April will be back in the classroom this fall.

At a special meeting Monday, the Clarkston Board of Education unanimously approved Superintendent Milford Mason's recommendation that teachers Michael Taylor, Bonnie Valuet, Russell Samuel and Leonard Loveless be recalled.

Taylor taught at Clarkston Junior High during the last school year, while Valuet was at Pine Knob Elementary, Samuel at Andersonville Elementary and Loveless at North Sashabaw Elementary.

Taylor, Valuet, Samuel and Loveless were four of the 33 teachers pink-slipped by the school board in April due to declining enrollment and revenues.

Mason said the recalls were the result of the retirement of Bailey Lake Elementary teacher Mary Steele, another expected resignation that would become official later this week, and the recall to administrative positions of Sashabaw Junior High assistant principal George White and Pine Knob Elementary Principal John Reabe.

It is still uncertain where the four recalled teachers will be assigned, Mason added.

The birthdays of President Minnie Schneller and Barracks Chaplain Louis Hanson were celebrated with cake, ice cream and strawberries.

Secretary-Treasurer Lucile Gries, who attended the department convention in Kalamazoo gave her report. First-place award went to the auxiliary for the publicity book and honorable mention was given to the scrap book. A citation was given to Lucile Gries for reinstating six members.

A report was also given by Lucile on the opening of the branch of the Arlington Cemetery at Fort Custer on Memorial Day weekend. Next year it will be dedicated.

On June 29, the barracks and members of the auxiliary will travel to the Methodist Home in Chelsea where Dr. and Mrs. Hazen Atkins now reside for the presentation to the home of the flag that flew over the Capitol Building in Washington, D.C.

Everyone is to keep up their letter writing to members of the House of Representatives who have not co-sponsored H.R. Bill 1918. Three in Michigan: James Blanchard, John Dingell and John Conyers Jr. are on the "apathy list."

Evelyn Dolmage received a citation of 100 hours of volunteer work from the Ann Arbor Veterans Hospital.

The barracks and auxiliary wish to thank the several newspapers in the surrounding area for promptly printing our veterans news. Any veteran of World War I who does not belong to the barracks, please contact us.

The formal meetings for the summer are over, but we will be having a picnic each month, the first one planned at the home of Alice Rioux at Rioux Acres on Davisburg Road July 10.

'White's Army' to gather for reunion bash

By Al Zawacky

The search is on for "White's Army" alumni.

The reason: A reunion party scheduled for Saturday, July 24 at the Springfield Oaks Youth Activities Center.

"We're hoping to have players, parents, wives and past supporters of the program attend," said Kurt Richardson, one of the reunion's organizers.

The event will attempt to bring together players from all six teams of former Clarkston High School varsity football coach Rob White, who coached the Wolves for six seasons during the 1970s.

Highly successful at Clarkston, White led the Clarkston gridders to a perfect 9-0 record and state playoff berth in 1977.

During his tenure, the discipline and success of the Clarkston High School football team earned the Wolves the moniker of "White's Army."

White resigned the CHS after the 1977 season to accept a coaching position in Wayland, Mich. Currently out of coaching, he is living today in Mid-leville, Mich.

Gary Warner, Bill Johnson, Kurt Richardson and Roy Warner, all CHS assistant coaches from the White era, are planing to be in attendance at the reunion. Also planning to join White, former players and friends in the festivities is White's father Bob White, a retired coach.

The reunion will start at 7 p.m. Tickets are $12 per person and include dinner, beer, pop and entertainment.

Tickets are available in advance by calling Judy Blower at 625-8885.

"We've been trying to contact as many people as possible, using the old school mailing lists," Richardson said.

son said. "But we're having a lot of problems locating people."

Many players have moved and left no forwarding addresses, he said. "Hopefully, by getting something in the paper, we can get the word around."

Richardson said the idea for the reunion originated last winter.

"We've had the deaths of players Syd Standing, Steve Brewer and Kevin Dutcher. It seemed like the only time Rob and the players got together was in a negative atmosphere," he said.

"We figured it would be good to get together in positive circumstances for a change where everybody could have a good time."

POINT AFTER

Umps don't get any respect

By Al Zawacky

ANY SOUL WHO dares brush off home plate and bellow "play ball!" is asking for trouble.

Everybody boos umpires. You wouldn't be much of an American if you didn't. Booming umps is part of our whole baseball, hot-dogs and apple pie tradition.

The focal point of the vociferous spectator's wrath always seems to be the arbiter's visual acumen. If you watch any game, from Yankee Stadium to the humblest little league diamond, you're bound to hear a variation on at least one of the following themes:

1. The umpire needs glasses. (If he already wears them, he needs a new prescription.)

2. The umpire needs braille line-up cards, or sells pencils on the side.

3. He is never seen on the street without his seeing-eye dog.

These are all rather hackneyed concepts. I suspect Abner Doubleday himself probably got sick of hearing them. Yet they still echo on ball fields across the land.

LOCAL RECREATION LEAGUES, alas, have their share of umpire abusers. Calls are disputed, and the umpire's knowledge of the rules is questioned mightily.

And if you happen to be one of the small minority of female umpires around, it can be even worse. Rodney Dangerfield could definitely feel some empathy for umpirettes—a breed that often gets no respect at all.

"People look at us and think we don't know what we're doing," says

Kristie Dearborn.

She and Tracy Smallwood work games together for the Independence Parks and Recreation leagues. They're two of the 16 female umpires employed by the township vs. 35 of the male variety.

Both girls, who will be starting the 10th grade and plan on being cheerleaders at Clarkston High School this fall, attended an umpire clinic and had to pass a test to become certified umps.

So, while their qualifications are confirmed on paper, not all spectators show due respect.

"Tuesday, a parent asked me if I needed some glasses," Tracy grins.

Ah yes, the old glasses theme.

"A lot of times the people watching can't really see the play from where they are. It'll look good to them, but not to us. And we're right there."

And as Kristie notes, "We can't be everywhere."

Well, I was feeling a little fiendish at the time, so—just to be nasty—I popped a little quiz on the two of them: "If the ball hits in foul territory outside the third base line, spins back into fair territory and passes the bag inside the line, is it a fair or foul ball?"

One of the girls, I'll won't say which, gave the wrong answer.

Now, no offense intended, but that calls for the traditional American response. And after dying with the Tigers for 15 years, I'm pretty good at this, you know.

Boooooooooooooooooooooo...

Hawke celebrates his 93rd

It was a weekend of celebration for Allen E. Hawke's 93rd birthday recently.

On June 25, 16 people had dinner in the home of Marianna and Bud Hawke. Col. Jay and Irene Blainen from Texas were on hand, as were Earl and Jo Hawke.

Also there were grandchildren and great-grandchildren, including Tracie, Trisha and Tommy from the Tom and Sharon Hawke family of Ortonville, and Meghan and Todd from the Terry and Peg Hawke family of Orchard Lake.

One June 26, there was more celebrating as Foxys at the Mill in downtown Clarkston threw a party in honor of Allen Hawke. The next day was his 68th anniversary day, so the family spent a quiet dinner at home.

"He's really a remarkable man," said daughter-in-law Marianna Hawke, who laughed when she recalled her father-in-law's reaction to the fact that one of his birthday cards was unsigned.

"He said, 'If it isn't signed, how will I know who it's from 10 years from now,'" she said.

Jaycees elect new president

A drum roll, please.

Dennis Dael is the new Clarkston Area Jaycee President, elected last week by fellow members to fill the one-year term.

A Birmingham resident and manager of Country Value Hardware on M-15 in the A&P shopping center, Dael is a five-year Jaycee veteran.

Suffering from declining membership, the group faces inactive status if its ranks don't swell soon.

Dael is hustling to increase membership so that Independence Township can keep benefitting from Jaycee-sponsored events like the Haunted House at Halloween, Pass Punt and Kick contest, Junior Miss pageant, Easter Egg Hunt at Clintonwood Park, Senior Citizens Breakfast, donations to the library, SCAMP, and fund raisers like the football field lighting.

The new president is replacing outgoing President Greg Bemister.

To join the Jaycees or for more information on the group of men age 18 to 35 dedicated to working to better their community, phone Dael at 625-1122.

Ridley, Oles exchange marriage vows

Tessa Gail Ridley and Lorin Oles were recently wed in a garden setting at her parent's residence with the Rev. James Balfour performing the afternoon ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorin Oles

For her June 5 wedding, the bride wore a gown of tulle over satin which she fashioned and handmade herself.

The bride's sister, Becky Ridley of Pontiac, served as maid of honor. Robin Ridley of Clarkston was the bridesmaid.

Best man was Charles Conklin. Other groomsmen were Dan Saunders and Jerry Whitehead.

The reception was held in the garden at the Ridley home on Mustang Drive, Independence Township. The 80 guests included people from Washington State and New York.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ridley. A 1975 Clarkston High School graduate and 1979 graduate of Western Michigan University, Kalamazoo, she is an occupational therapist.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Oles of Snowapple Drive, Independence Township. A 1975 CHS graduate, he was graduated from Oakland University, Rochester, in 1979. Employed by Computer Sciences Corp., he is a computer analyst.

For their honeymoon, the new Mr. and Mrs. Oles took a Caribbean cruise. They will reside in Rochester, New York.

Honored queen

Robyn Roy was installed as Honored Queen of Job's Daughters Bethel No. 25 of Clarkston, during ceremonies June 19. Robyn is the daughter of Carolyn Kelley of Clintonville road, and Richard Roy of Westview, both of Independence Township. Other officers included: Floy Licatovich, senior princess; Doreen Gibbons, junior princess; Krista Heline, guide; and Christine Hulet, marshal.

Mr. and Mrs. Jon Peters

Couple wed

Barbara King and Jon Peters were wed May 21 in the chambers of Oakland County District Court Judge Gerald McNally.

Maid of-honor was Carol Hanson of Westland and Terry McNeil of Waterford Township served as best man. Stacy King was flower girl.

Thirty guests joined the couple for a reception at the Club Players in Waterford Township.

The couple, both employees of Colombiere Retreat Conference Center, reside in Springfield Township.

College notes

Three Clarkston High School 1982 graduates have been selected for membership in the Society of Distinguished American High School students.

Chosen for the honor were Robert McLaughlin, Penny Mueller and Melissa Savas.

The society is one of the most selective high school honoraries in America. To be accepted, students must have excelled in academics, extracurricular or civic activities and be nominated by a local sponsor.

The students' sponsor, CHS Principal Dom Mauti, has been presented a National Appreciation Award from the society for "the steadfast dedication and untiring contributions made on behalf of the students."

Brian Ladd has been named to the dean's list at Albion College for the spring 1982 term. He has also received a renewal of his merit scholarship.

His studies are in chemistry and science.

A 1981 graduate of Clarkston High School, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Ladd of Kingfisher Lane, Independence Township.

Dan Brennan, a Michigan State University sophomore, received a full-tuition scholarship from General Motors Corp.

Brennan, a mechanical engineering major, plans to work with Fisher Body in Warren for the next two summers.

He is a member of the honor's college at MSU, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and the Shaw Residence Hall Senate. In addition, Brennan made the dean's list and is active in intramural sports.

A Clarkston High School graduate, he is the son of Katherine and James Brennan of Clarkston-Orion Road, Independence Township.

Kathleen McInnis, has been awarded a scholarship to the Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp for a two-week summer study program in band or orchestra.

She is a Clarkston Junior High School student.

Russell Ham is a bachelor's degree candidate at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio.

He resides on Treece Court, Springfield Township.

New arrival

Lynn and Warren Myers of Crestview Road, Independence Township, have a second daughter.

Kylie Marie was born June 13 at 9:25 a.m. at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, Pontiac. She weighed 6 pounds, 13 ounces and measured 19 1/4 inches long.

She was greeted at home by her sister Karissa, 4.

Local events open to the public are printed in Around Town as a community service. Call 625-3370 or write to The Clarkston News, 5 S. Main, Clarkston 48016 two weeks in advance.

Scouts invade Independence Oaks

Girls Scouts from the Woodlands Summer Day Camp infiltrated the treeless fields, paths, playground and beach at Independence Oaks County Park the week of June 21, setting up a green sea of pup tents and colorful canopies.

Sunburned noses were red hot, pigtailed bunched and squeals were the major form of communication as they baked gooey pizza in the rough over an open flame, learned to tie square knots for their lanyards and wrestled with swimming.

While would-be Robin Hoods learned archery others earned their biking badges.

Bee stings, mosquito bites and two cases of the traditional poison ivy were reported.

In all, the beaming faces agreed it had been a fine week as they munched the pizza and jostled each other in constant competition for space at a picnic table.

Parks and rec on persistent pool prowl

The pool prowl's begun.

Independence Township's Parks and Recreation Department needs pools for its summer swimming program and has hands outstretched to community residents.

The department teaches kids 4 and up to swim, and requires in-ground pools because they're warmer than the lakes and are usually heated with a shallow side, according to instructor John Schultz.

"We buy the chemicals and keep the pools clean so for some of the people it will be a good deal," Schultz said. "We're looking for someone who maybe doesn't use their pool that much anymore or can't keep it up."

Lessons begin at 10 a.m. and last thru 1 p.m.

To donate your pool or for more information phone 625-8174 or the parks and rec department at 625-8223.

Springfield reallocates '78 CDA funds

Springfield Township found itself with some leftover 1978 Community Development Act funds recently, and has reallocated the approximately $5,200 into its 1981 CDA project.

The 1978 CDA allocations included township administration and special planning costs for projects such as the draining and septic study for the downtown Davisburg area, according to Collin Walls, Springfield Township supervisor.

At its regular monthly meeting June 9, the township board voted unanimously to funnel the leftover money into its 1981 CDA project, equipment and building expenses for the new township fire station at Rattalee Lake Road and Dixie Highway.

"Quality Proves Performance"

Melissa's Keyboard Klassics tunes in to piano

The custom sign of Melissa's Keyboard Klassics catches the eyes of passersby on Dixie Highway, Independence Township, just east of the Independence Commons shopping strip. Studio owner/teacher Melissa Dell looks at the handywork advertising her recently opened shop.

More than the piano in Melissa Dell's studio oozes music.

The curtains are patterned after a music bar dotted with notes, bass and treble clef. A similar design covers her coffee cup. Colorful note-style sun-catchers sparkle in the window, a ceramic note mobile hangs from the ceiling and antique sheet music fills a frame, hanging on the wall.

Doing business

There's easy in and out parking in the studio just west of Independence Commons shopping strip on Dixie Highway, and look for the custom sign—it too is a keyboard.

The Springfield Township resident opened the studio—Melissa's Keyboard Klassics—April 1, and boasts a growing clientele ranging in age from 3 to 63.

After majoring in education and minoring in music at Eastern Michigan University, Melissa combined both to teach piano, first by traveling to each student's home.

Finding the house-call task demanding, she opted to open her studio.

"A child doesn't have to have musical ability to be a good musician or composer—all they have to do is work hard.

"There are people who know the piano and people who teach the piano. You can be a concert pianist (and not know how to teach). I really think the education I studied in school has helped me to know what motivates kids and how to keep them interested."

Unlike classroom teaching which Melissa says must be unrewarding, music has been "very rewarding."

She nods in agreement at the scenario of a young boy pushed into lessons by a doting mom. Unhappy, he fights the lesson, the practice and the knowledge. One day he plays, finds he likes it and works to be better.

"That's when it's rewarding," she smiles. "The proudest moments are at recitals when I sit back and look at them. I know where they struggled, what they found hard and how they worked. They've come such a long way."

The student who balks at a challenge is at a handicap.

"It grinds me when they look at a piece of new music and say, 'I can't do that. It's too hard.'"

"They can do it. I watch them learn to do it. And then see them feel good after they've mastered it."

Call Melissa's Keyboard Klassics at 623-2455.

McDonald's open on Sashabaw

Chicken McNuggets are now available in the Sashabaw Corridor.

Monday, June 21, the McDonald's Corp. opened its new store just north of Maybee Road to the musical strains of the Sashabaw Junior High School Pep Band, according to Anne Hoyt, McDonald's community relations director.

Al Carter, chairman of Clarkston Area Youth Assistance Committee, was on hand to collect 100 $1 bills taped to the ribbon that marked the opening ceremony.

Declining to release the number of employees hired to man the restaurant because of company policy, Hoyt offered assurances that most are local youth.

Sans the front lobby and glossy exterior seen at most McDonald's, the new store has a side lobby and wooden exterior, a variation from the traditional theme.

Boasting a full menu and Drive-Thru service, the store is open from 7 a.m. to midnight Sunday thru Thursday and 7 a.m. to 1 a.m. Friday and Saturday.

Class of 1932 gathers, remembers

By Al Zawacky

It was time for dusting off and sharing some old memories; a time for laughter and a time for a tear or two.

At Deer Lake Racquet Club last weekend, the Clarkston High School Class of '32 was back together.

There at their 50-year class reunion were 10 of the 24 students who graduated in the days when Clarkston was a tiny rural community, Herbert Hoover was president, and the nation was mired in the darkest days of the Great Depression.

In attendance were class president Ronald Weber and Gladys Gundry MacArthur, the two chief organizers of the reunion; and classmates Maurice Ogden, George Beechum, Wayne Parnall, Ronald Beardsley, Fredrick Hawley Skarritt, Erna Konzen Ford, Betty Huntly Washburn and Gwinevere Gadoor Weston.

Also there were two of their teachers, Adella Minor, who taught Latin; and Bob Walters, who taught science and handled the school's coaching duties.

"These are the pictures from our senior skip day," said Gladys Gundry MacArthur, showing a classmate the collection of memorabilia on hand.

"You know," she added, "these were depression days—we didn't have any money. All our parties had to be home parties."

But even when the times were hard, the old high school days evoke pleasant memories. As classmates and their spouses sipped coffee, Weber spoke on the some of the highlights at Clarkston High School.

Later, all the 10 of the CHS alumni on hand gave a brief autobiography of their lives after leaving high school into a tape recorder.

The tape will be played for another one of their teachers, Dorothy Huttenlocher, who couldn't attend the reunion because of illness.

"I know Dorothy's going to get a kick out of this when we play it back for her," Weber said.

In all, four members of the class—Bernice McFarland, Gordon Boice, Eddie Larion and Marian Dunston—couldn't attend because of conflicts or illness. Two others, Clifford Galligan and Gwendolyn McGrain, couldn't be located.

And eight classmates have passed away—Stuart Farner, Robert Kelley, Robert Croasdell, Hazel Francis, Maurice Miller, Dorothy Powers, Stella Crosby and Beryl Orr.

Only one of the CHS alumni present still calls Clarkston home—Fredrick Hawley Skarritt. Weber, who lives in Florida, had the longest journey to make.

"There were a few people I didn't recognize right away," Weber said. "After 40-some years, I had to hear a few names, first."

And from his perception, there really isn't that big a difference between today's graduates and the students of 1932.

"I think young people are better informed today than we used to be," Weber said. "You hear a lot about a small minority nowadays, but I think things are basically the same."

"You know, we had kids who really excelled—but in our day we had those that just did enough to get by, too."

The Clarkston High School Class of 1932 and two of their teachers today. Seated from left are teacher Adella Minor, Gwinevere Gadoor Weston, Gladys Gundry MacArthur, Betty Huntly Washburn and Erna Konzen Ford. Standing

About the cover

At the turn of the century, Clarkston looked much like it does today, and that's the idea behind the cover of the first of our four sesquicentennial special sections. A lot of caring and hard work went into keeping the town intact—many other 150-year-old towns have lost their charm. We've devoted this section to lots of talk about history and preservation, because our birthday wish is that Clarkston never loses its special atmosphere.

1832-1982 Back to Clarkston's roots

THE YEAR, 1832. The place, a new settlement marked with a sawmill and a few shanties dotting the wilderness—a town to be named Clarkston a decade later.

In the 1840s, things began to happen rapidly. The Clark brothers, former New Yorkers Jeremiah and Nelson, had purchased the sawmill in the late 1830s from Butler Holcomb, and construction of a gristmill began. Soon the town was busy taking care of the surrounding farmers' needs.

Main Street gradually took shape. Not a quiet place at all, the working village had wooden sidewalks along the narrow, dirt wagon path. Horses and buggies were tethered in front of shops, the gristmill and sawmill, livery stable and tavern.

Surrounding homes were lawns made up of whatever grew naturally. Many yards sported a kitchen garden for fresh vegetables and herbs and, perhaps, a flower garden. There were horses, chickens, ducks and pigs in backyards.

Houses were built relatively close to the road so they could put "their best face forward." In backyards, there had to be room for the outbuildings for livestock, carriages and the outhouse, surrounded by lilacs wherever possible.

In 1851, the Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad built west of town heralded changes. By the 1800s, Clarkston became a resort town—a summer vacation place for city residents.

By the 1920s, hotels and inns included the Demarest House (built in 1872) at the corner of Main and Washington streets. The Johnson Hotel was down Main Street, near Church Street. Deer Lake Inn and Vliets-on-the-Hill, both on nearby Deer Lake outside the village, also took guests.

Now all the inns and hotels are gone, with the exception of the former Johnson Hotel, now the Terrace Building.

But many of the summer homes built along Main Street still exist. Now year-round residences, they serve as memories of another time.

The automobile, better roads, the completion of I-75 in 1963 and appeal of rural living all contributed to Clarkston as we know the town today—"a wonderful setting for everyday living."

Touring historic downtown Clarkston

Historical society president Denise Symons shares her knowledge and enthusiasm

By Kathy Greenfield

Notecards, the "Heritage" book published by the Clarkston Community Historical Society in 1976, and a walking tour guide are in her hands.

Denise Symons, president of the historical society, is ready to begin a tour of village businesses and houses along Main Street.

Within minutes, she's giving tips on what to look for, sharing information on what used to be in the 150-year-old village and creating an aura of enthusiasm about the town she calls home.

A relative newcomer, she and her husband Gary moved to Clarkston in 1976, after he completed dental school. They had purchased the Terrace Building where Gary's dental office is now located, and the Symons moved into the upstairs apartment.

Their new residence was the oldest wooden business structure in Clarkston—the first portion built in 1842 as a tailor shop. It later became a tavern, then the Johnson Hotel and finally the Terrace Building with apartments and shops.

"For two people who really liked contemporary structures, we found that we enjoyed working on the building," she says.

A few years later, in 1979, the Symons bought a home in the village. Their children, Jamie, now 4½, and Scott, 2½, are growing up in a house built in the 1880s. The family devotes a good deal of time on restoration of the two buildings.

"We're hooked. It just kind of sneaks up on you. Every little thing that you do to bring a structure back to its original character, it's very rewarding," says Denise.

"We're downright hooked—no matter where we go, we're always happy to come home."

When they came to Clarkston, it was a time of transition for the Symons. During the first couple of years, Denise continued working as a remedial reading teacher in a South Lyon middle school. But when they started their family, she quit to stay home and take care of their children.

"I had been used to working all my life," she says, and her new life-style left a gap. She joined the Clarkston Community Historical Society in 1978.

"I needed some mental stimulation," she says. "I really enjoyed it."

Denise became president of the historical society in June. The two-year term of office will be a challenge, she says, but she plans to carry on the tradition of working hard for preservation of the village she loves.

"The preservation movement is a revolution that's going on right now, because people can make money that way and it's also rewarding emotionally," she says, adding that the benefits can be enjoyed by everyone.

"I think people who aren't into preservation agree—why did they come here? Clarkston's a great place."

Work by the historical society and others in-

Clarkston Community Historical Society President Denise Symons leads a tour through downtown Clarkston, sharing her knowledge and enthusiasm about the town's past. Surrounded by heritage, she stands in front of stone walls which are the only remnants of the Linabury Livery, once located almost directly across Main Street from Main Street Antiques.

terested in taking care of Clarkston's heritage has been done by many people, Denise says, and she's quick to give them credit.

"There are a lot of people who have done more than I could ever think to do," she says.

Denise laughs as she talks about her own enthusiasm for restoration, something that tends to become almost a compulsion.

"It's a nice crazy," she says. "If you find something that you really love, you're lucky. A lot of people go through life and never find anything to really get excited about."

Why 1832?

How the year of Clarkston's 150th birthday was chosen

By Kathy Greenfield

The signs put in place at the Clarkston village boundaries on Main Street in November say this: "Welcome to the Village of Clarkston—Established 1832."

While the year 1832 is prominent in Clarkston's history, it wasn't until the signs went up that action on a sesquicentennial celebration for the town's 150th birthday began.

A number of other dates could have been used. In 1842, the map was made of the town with lots drawn in place, and the name Clarkston was written in place. The village was incorporated by the county board of commissioners in 1884.

She has no problem with the choice of 1832, says Jennifer Radcliff, editor of "Heritage," the history of Clarkston and Independence Township published by the Clarkston Community Historical Society in 1977 in honor of America's 200th birthday.

"I think probably 1832 is pretty good," she says, referring to a major event that year when Butler Holcomb brought his family from Herkimer County, New York, to settle on land that is now part of the village.

"When you start talking about a major settler bringing his family, then it's no longer just a collection of shanties, it's a settlement.

"At the same time the township was developing and it would follow the town became the center."

While Radcliff did not take part in discussions about what year would be placed on the sign, it's probable that her research printed in "Heritage" had some influence.

The sign was related to a study of the village business district printed in 1981 by Preservation Planning Inc., Royal Oak, under the direction of Betty-Lee Francis. Federal Community Development funds totaling $15,000 were used for the project, and the resulting book, "Clarkston, Michigan—Guidelines for Conservation of the Village Center" (available at the Independence Township Library) puts emphasis on preservation of Clarkston's heritage with plans for restoring buildings to more closely reflect their original designs.

When the study was underway, plans for the village signs were drawn up, and then Clarkston Village Council President Fontie ApMadoc paid for the drawings.

"I truthfully didn't pay any attention to the date on the sign," said ApMadoc.

She took the plan to the village council about three years ago and discussion resulted.

"I had it around in my briefcase for a long time," she said. "I approached the State Highway Department and they absolutely would not let us put it on the state highway property (Main Street is also M-15)—they would make us a regular green and white sign."

After rejection by the highway department, the sign plan died down, ApMadoc said, and it was finally picked up again last year by village council Trustee Gary Symons.

By then more Community Development funds were available and they were used to pay for the signs. Symons chose the locations—on the south end of town, the village owns the property near the pumping station and on the north end of town, the sign was erected on former township supervisor Floyd Tower's property, with his permission.

The year 1832 is prominent, and significant when matched with 1982—150 years ago...

"When the signs appeared...people started thinking about it and that gave it impetus," said Radcliff. "It was just another step along the way, and it just seemed like a natural to celebrate."

The Lambert home is believed to have been built in 1905 as a summer home. It is one of the few homes in the village still owned by a relatives of the original family. Located on the east side of Main Street on the Mill Pond and adjacent to the stream that runs between the pond and Parke Lake, the growth of trees has hidden it's wrap-around porch from easy viewing. In the photo at left, Mrs. Mary Hirst and her daughter, Mrs. Henry Kingsley, the owner of the house, grace the porch. The photo above shows the home from the Mill Pond side in the early 1900s.

Thank yous are in order for information provided for the first Clarkston Sesquicentennial special section.

Information on homes and businesses for the tour of historic Main Street was provided by Clarkston Community Historical Society President Denise Symons, and former president Susan Basinger. Symons took us on a walking tour and provided most of the old photographs we reproduced. Basinger took the time to add her knowledge of Clarkston's past.

Credit also goes to historical society past-president Jennifer Radcliff, editor of "Heritage," the hardcover, limited edition book published by the historical society in 1976.

"Heritage" may be purchased for $6 at The Clarkston News office, 5 S. Main, Clarkston, or at the Pontiac State Bank branches on Main Street in Clarkston and on Maybee Road in Independence Township.

The tour begins here—

It's easy to picture Clarkston as it appeared as early as the 1840s, for little has changed in the spaces businesses take up in the village. A few of the original buildings remain, but some were moved, some torn down and many were destroyed by fires. The picture above (Page 10) is a reprint of a postcard postmarked 1909. The photo at the top of Page 11 was taken on June 20, 1982.

As we take a walk down Main Street, we'll begin at the corner of Main and Washington streets, heading south. At Church street, and the present location of Clarkston Corners shopping mall, we'll crossover Main Street and head north, ending at Main Street Antiques, located just north of the village parking lot.

Clarkston News Photo 1982

1. One More Time, the Clarkston Travel Bureau and the Clarkston Masonic Temple sit are found at the former location of Nicholas Smith Drugs and Groceries, an establishment well under way in pictures dated around 1890. The frame building is believed to have been moved north and attached to the Terrace Building in 1916. The Masonic Temple was constructed shortly thereafter. The building next door was known as Cheeseman's. In 1922, Cheeseman's caught on fire and the roof of the Masonic Temple was burned off and it had to be replaced. Built as a bakery, Cheeseman's became Cheeseman's ice cream parlor in the 1930s, and it's still remembered by area families who traveled many miles to Clarkston for a Sunday outing for ice cream.

Clarkston News Photo 1982

2. Across Washington Street sits the Roy Addis building, whose name is imprinted in stone in a nameplate on the front peak. The site first housed John Axford's general store in 1838—the spot where families could take their horses and buggies and buy necessities for everyday living. It is believed an older frame building still exists under the brick that was applied in 1925. For generations, the store was an ice cream and candy shop, and renovations are underway for a new ice cream shop. The mansard overhang erected in the 1930s or 1940s was removed, and plans include a green awning, more in keeping with the origins of the building.

Clarkston News Photo 1982

3. In the late 1800s and early 1900s, many fires changed the face of Clarkston. Walter Hall, a building similar to the present Macabee Temple which now houses Hallman's Apothecary and the Village Bake Shop, was destroyed by fire in the late 1800s. The building included shops downstairs and the "Opera House" upstairs, where residents would gather for dancing and entertainment by orchestras or for meetings. After the fire, the land stood vacant for nearly 20 years, a fence protecting the curious from the still-present basement. Stock was sold in the early to raise enough money to rebuild, and the Macabee Temple was put in place in 1900. It, too, had an upstairs dance and meeting hall. In the late 1960s, apartments took the place of the upstairs room. During the remodeling, the metal ceilings were removed and destroyed. The old stage curtain from the hall is still used by the Clarkston Village Players inside Depot Theatre located on White Lake Road in Independence Township.

4. In 1927, yet another fire claimed all four frame buildings between the Macabee Temple and the Terrace Building. In 1929, brick buildings replaced the wooden structures, earning the name "Brick Block" for the east side of Main Street. The fronts of the buildings were redone later, but if you look up, the blond brick and nameplates are still visible. The building now houses Coach's Corner, attorneys' offices and the Clarkston Cafe.

Clarkston News Photo 1982

5. The Terrace Building is the oldest frame structure in the village. In 1842, it was John Hertwig's tailor shop, but he wasn't making enough money as a tailor, so he changed it to a tavern to take care of travelers between Pontiac and Flint. In 1916, it is believed the Smith grocery building (built in 1960) was moved down Main Street and attached to the south end. For a while, it was called the Johnson

[The Tour Begins on Page 10]

Hotel and used as a summer resort, and then the Terrace Building, a name which probably reflected its change to apartment dwellings, frequently called terraces at that time. The alley located north of the structure is believed to have saved it from the 1917 fire which destroyed the four frame buildings formerly located where the blond brick building sits today. The Terrace Building now contains Tierra Arts & Design, the offices of Gary Symons, D.D.S., the Village Bookstore and upstairs apartments.

Clarkston News Photo 1982

6. Across Church Street is the former location of the blacksmith shop owned in 1877 by Frank Yeager. The building no longer exists. In its place is Clarkston Corners, a shopping mall which houses Brayton's women's apparel, the Daisy Chain gift shop, the Hair Scene and the Clarkston Community School Employees Credit Union.

7. Crossing over Main Street, on the south side of Depot Road is the Clarkston Emporium. The original frame building was covered with native Michigan stone, a widely used material after the turn of the century, and Clarkston was the home of several stone masons. The frame building, built in the 1850s, was originally Peter

Green's Livery Stable. It is believed the original building still sits underneath the stone facade because of wooden trim still visible at the top on the Depot Road side. Most of the shops around Main Street have been a little bit of everything, and the former livery stable is no exception. It has served as a gristmill, grocery store, drug store with soda fountain, men's and women's clothing store and Rudy's Market was once located there. It now contains Country Cords, a children's clothing store; the Flower Adventure; Elston's beauty salon; and the Village Sampler gift shop.

Clarkston News Photo 1982

8. Depot Road was once called Livery Hill, and it was regularly closed in the winter so local children could use the street for sledding. It's easy to imagine the fun the narrow, steep road provided as we cross it and look at the Garter Building, now the home of Max Brook real estate. Constructed in 1911, the building is made of concrete block patterned to resemble stone. The blocks were manufactured in the Pontiac area until the depression, in the 1920s.

Clarkston News Photo 1982

9. Fire again claimed the earlier buildings where Country Greens and Patricia's beauty salon are now located. Both built in 1924, the structures are typical of that period. The buildings first served as the village hall and the fire hall. There were so many fires in the village, brick was used for construction as soon as it was available because it was believed to be fireproof.

Clarkston News Photo 1982

10. Built in 1911, the building now owned by Dennis Kacy, attorney, was built as Independence Township Hall. It later served as the village hall, post office and first telephone office. It is constructed of the same type of block found in the Garter Building.

11. The original design of the Pontiac State Bank, Clarkston Branch, is intact, complete with native stone and its unusual tile roof. Constructed around 1911, it was first the Jossman State Bank and, as the story goes, when one of the Jossman brothers was convicted of embezzlement in 1913, some local businessmen invested in their money and renamed it the Clarkston State Bank.

12. The alley and parking lot between the bank and Rudy's has a name—Mill Street. That's because it once led to the Clarkston Mills gristmill and sawmill demolished in 1918. The Clarkston Mills Mall now visible at the end of Mill Street was built for a factory in the 1940s by Henry Ford. Ford chose the site for his factory because of the power available from water in the millstream, and controls for the dam are still located in the basement and the water rights still belong to the owner of the building. The remodeled structure contains Antiques at the Clarkston Mills, Christie's of Clarkston, the Drop'd Stitch, Foxys restaurant, Grattan Optometry, It's About Time, Lovett Jewelers, Pattie's Merle Norman, Sadow's Auction Galleries Inc., The Gift Market and The Millrace Salon.

13. A devastating fire in 1939 in the building once at the corner of Washington and Main streets adjacent to the current Clarkston News building forced Rudy's Market to move to several other locations in the village before settling in 1954 in the native stone building the grocery store now occupies. Rudy Schwarze still owns the business located in the former Ford dealership built about 1910.

14. The Walter Building, constructed in the 1870s or earlier, is believed to be the oldest brick building in Clarkston. The site formerly contained the Clarkston Carding Mills where wool was made spun into yarn and put on cards to be sold. First used as Walter's Dry Goods downstairs and a meeting room for the Grange Hall upstairs, the building now houses The Clarkston News and K. W. Kammer and Associates, an insurance firm. The upstairs rooms are used for storage.

15. Moving across Washington Street, and the village parking lot, you'll have to use your imagination, for the Demarest House, a hotel built in 1872, was burned by a fire in 1958 and the structure was subsequently demolished. Porches wrapped around the building that changed hands six times before its existence ended, when it was called the Cribbo Inn. Long-time Clarkston residents remember dining the restaurant once located within its walls.

Clarkston News Photo 1982

16. The concrete steps that once led to the Caran sisters' millinery shop and home are still in place next to the village parking lot. The sisters lived upstairs. The home and shop was burned or demolished to make way for village expansion, but those plans must have faltered along the way.

Clarkston News Photo 1982

17. Wiltsie Vliet's cabinet shop, where boats were also made, once existed in the building that now contains Main Street Antiques. Built in the mid-1800s, it also served as a blacksmith shop in an earlier time.

The Clark homes provide glimpse of yesteryear

Clarkston was a mill town

By Constance Lektzian

Editor's note: For over 10 years, beginning in the late 1960s, Constance Lektzian wrote historical columns for The Clarkston News. Plans are underway to publish the 40 to 50 articles in booklet form in the near future. The author agreed to provide one of her columns for our celebration of Clarkston's 150th birthday.

Saginaw Trail wound a vine-like path northward since the time of the Indians. This road was the reason for many towns springing into being after white men began to settle in Michigan.

Out of necessity, stage coach stops were built along the way. These became taverns that offered not only a change of horses for the coaches, but food and lodging for the passengers. It was a very brave driver that dared such poor roads in the dark.

The little communities that swelled around the taverns during the day of the stagecoach shriveled when the railroad came along. Unless a town had something more to offer than a rest stop for tired horses and people, it lost its reason for existing.

Clarkston did serve as a stopover for the stages in the early days—not because it was, but because it wasn't built directly next to the Saginaw Trail.

That stretch of the road that reached from what is now M-15 to White Lake Road was mired out of sight during heavy rains. Travelers were often forced to turn off toward Clarkston and detour up Cemetery Road to get back on the trail. On their way, they often stopped overnight, or at least for a meal and a rest in the village.

But Clarkston's early survival was not due to the stage coach lines. Very early, mills were built in the village. These mills brought settlers struggling out of the woods and the plains with their corn to be made into grist, their wheat to be turned into flour—and very importantly, their logs to be sawed into boards.

Butler Holcomb, who had been there since 1831, built the first mill two years later. Shrewd and energetic, he first saw the potential of water power.

His mill was built on the east branch of the Clinton River. Butler dug, or had dug, a ditch nearly one-half mile long to bring the water to the mill. Roswell Holcomb, his brother, was the sawyer.

The settler's wife could pound the corn to a coarse meal to make johnnycake or corn bread, but her husband must have lumber for the barns. So most often the sawmills came before the grist and flour mills.

In 1838, Butler sold his mill—and all milling privileges at this point—to Jeremiah and Nelson Clark. They built a dam 200 feet long near the mill, enabling them to get a water fall of 22 feet. They sawed enough lumber to build a gristmill, completed in 1839.

The Clarks did things in an expansive manner. The new mill was 40-by-50 feet in size, two stories high with a deep basement and two run of stones.

A few years later, a third run of stone gave the mill a capacity of 350 bushels every 10 hours.

Nelson and Jeremiah were good businessmen, but not millers. They hired that work done and found the best miller available. His name was Thomas Farmer and, for as long as he stayed in Clarkston, the mill had the best and finest flour for many miles around.

Later the building was further enlarged and plaster mills were built in connection with the gristmill.

Judge Melville Dorr built a second sawmill in 1834. This was on the northwest quarter of section 19, north of Deer Lake.

Moses Garter and his son later bought this and it was in operation at least through 1877. Near the outlets of Crooked Lake, Jeremiah Clark put up a third sawmill. It was abandoned shortly afterwards for lack of power.

Carding mills were built that were powered by water carried in an underground truck from Parke's Lake. At one point, woolen goods were manufactured here, but apparently not for very long. There is a record that a foundry was also operated in connection with the carding mills.

Eventually, the necessity for the flour mill began to die. Farms dwindled. Store-bought bread became cheap and plentiful.

Somewhere in the move toward a life that was less back breaking, people lost pride in a living that from scratch to finish was the work of their own hands.

On January 23, 1917, the Pontiac Gazette carried a small item about Clarkston. The flour mill was being torn down by "some Detroit men." The best of the lumber was shipped off to Detroit, the worst of it sawed up for stove wood.

John King obtained a section of the old mill, a slab of wood 20 feet long and an inch thick. It was in sound condition and part of it was used to make the Kings a new rowboat—lumber that had been turned out on Butler Holcomb's old mill in 1838.

On that day, a special era came to an end in Clarkston.

The Mills—yesterday and today

The view from Mill Street looked like the photo above for 78 years. Now the alley and parking area between Rudy's Market and the Pontiac State Bank, the site is pictured at right. Where old Clarkston Mills, the site of gristmills and a sawmill, once stood is the new Clarkston Mills, a shopping mall inside the remodeled factory built by Henry Ford in the early 1940s. Butler Holcomb constructed a sawmill at the site in 1832, the same year he brought his family to settle nearby. In 1838, Holcomb sold the mill to Jeremiah and Nelson Clark, and the brothers built their gristmill in 1839. Other contributions to the area included Jeremiah's planting of the first apple trees, and Nelson's building of the first school, and hatching and planting brook trout. The large frame building was torn down between 1917 and 1918.

Long-time Clarkstonites reminisce

By Al Zawacky

There was a time when pedestrians on Main Street far outnumbered the occasional cars.

Back then, Dixie Highway had more trees than neon. Land that would later be covered with streets and houses was tilled in the spring and harvested in the fall.

And everybody in town, it seemed, knew everyone else.

Virginia Walter and Elizabeth Ronk remember that kind of Clarkston.

Mrs. Walter's recollections go back to 1933 when she came here to teach in what is now Clarkston Junior High. Mrs. Ronk, a Clarkston native, can remember even further back.

Their Clarkston roots run deep. The Walter family first arrived in Clarkston in the 1850s. Mrs. Walter's late husband's mother was a member of the Addis family, a clan that traces its Clarkston heritage back to the very beginning of the town in the 1830s.

Mrs. Ronk's maiden named was Hammond, another venerable Clarkston surname. It was the Hammonds who owned the land where Clarkston Elementary and Clarkston High School are now located.

Reminiscing together in the graceful Walter home on Washington Street, time momentarily seems to stand still.

But a few hundred yards away on a typical Monday afternoon, cars and trucks buzz up and down Main Street, highlighting the fact that the winds of time have swept away the Clarkston of yesterday.

Both ladies remember the old days fondly while feeling positive about their town's growth.

"I don't like all the traffic, but other than that, I think there's been an improvement," says Mrs. Walter.

"We've had a lot of civic-minded people move in and they appreciate the village," she continues. "Take the historical society—the thrust of the group is coming from newcomers."

Mrs. Ronk can recall when busy Main Street was a dirt road bisecting a quiet town. It wasn't until the 1920s that the street was paved, she says, and later the road became a favorite route of travelers headed north before the I-75 freeway was opened in 1963.

"I remember Main Street being a solid line of traffic whenever there was a holiday," she says. "The boys would sit out on the lawn and watch."

She smiles as a picture of the scene forms in her mind.

"There would always be a lot of fender-benders, and they used to like to watch."

The new north-south freeway was supposed to end all that, but in a historical irony, just the opposite happened. With the advent of I-75, Clarkston was now less than an hour's drive from downtown Detroit.

Commuters arrived and subdivisions began to dot the landscape.

One of Mrs. Walter's first experiences as a teacher in Clarkston couldn't take place today, for example.

"I can remember following the janitor into the office," she says. "He picked up the phone and said to the operator, 'Hello, Doris? Get me Ma.'"

"Right then and there," she says chuckling, "I knew I was in a small town."

She notes with a grin that when the new high school (the current Clarkston Junior High) was built off Waldon Road just outside the village, there were some cries of protest.

"People thought it was a terrible place to build a school, that it was too far out of town," Mrs. Walter says. "They thought it should have been on Main Street."

Mrs. Ronk worked for years as Clarkston's postmaster back when the post office was located downtown on Main Street. She retired in 1970.

"Some of the letters would just have the names on them and that was good enough," she recalls. "Of course, you couldn't do that now."

Some changes in the small-town atmosphere fall in the negative column, however.

"It seems like there's a lot more petty crime around now," Mrs. Ronk says. "You never used to think about locking your doors, but now you lock them even if you're just going out in the yard."

The Walter family used to operate a dry goods store in what is now The Clarkston News building, Mrs. Walter says. Built in the 1870s, the building is the oldest brick structure in town and she remembers resisting plans to make some changes in it years ago.

"I said I liked it the way it is," she says, "and today, it still has the original front. I'm glad I didn't let them touch it."

One hundred and fifty years ago, when the first white settlers arrived in the Clarkston area from New York and New Jersey via the Erie Canal, what is today Woodward Avenue and Dixie Highway was an old Indian trail.

The early pioneers saw a potential for water power and plenty of good farm land. They enjoyed good relations with Chief Sashabaw, the leader of the local Indians.

The changes between then and now boggle the mind and give one pause to think about what Clarkston might look like over the next 150 years.

Both Mrs. Walter and Mrs. Ronk are hopeful that their town will continue to be an island of relative stability in the midst of growing urbanism.

"I don't know about 150 years, but I think in the future there will be a continued preservation of what is good in the village," Mrs. Walter says. "I certainly hope so."

Elizabeth Ronk (left) and Virginia Walter take time from their busy schedules to remember what life in Clarkston used to be like.

Frank Walter and Son, Dry Goods, Footwear and Groceries could be found at 5 S. Main in 1915. The building is now occupied by The Clarkston News. Walter rented the building for several years before purchasing it in 1919. The deed to the building was given to the Independence Grange Society in 1877, making the building at least 105 years old.

The Walter house on the west side of North Main Street is an example of Carpenter Gothic architecture. It is impressive because much of the wooden detail still exists. Built in 1883, it was owned by the original family until the late 1970s.

The wagon of Frank Walter was driven through the countryside, and he would buy butter and eggs from farm women and sell them various soft goods and notions. The practice ended when he purchased Walter's Hall on the east side of Main Street, which burned down in the 1880s.
