Knight in shining armor

Try this one on for size, history scholars: What place and period in the past does the dress of this couple represent? If you identified the garb as that of a 17th-century Pollsh Winged Hussar cavairyman and a fair malden in native Polish dress, give yourself an 'A' in European history.

But who are these people really—and what were they up to in an empty field in Brandon Township Wednesday evening? The answer can be found in the story and pictures on Page

Knob balks at overture

By Marilyn Trumper

Communication between Pine Knob Investment Co. and Independence Township is ruptured, with township Director of Building and Planning Kenneth Delbridge tiptoeing in to patch things up.

In his words: "We're going through divorce right

The fuse that led to the explosion was the township's push to pin down Pine Knob co-owner Joseph Locricchio on the "intent" of the controversial 2.5-mile road network under construction at the com-

Delbridge hand-delivered a letter to Locricchio Aug. 25 which the recreation area owner reportedly ripped in half and put back in Delbridge's pocket.

"Then (Locricchio) said essentially that if the township has anything to say, it should have direct contact with him, one-on-one, and not to send a letter." Delbridge said.

"The letter said the township wanted to know what Locricchio's intent for the road was going to be. It didn't say we would stop him (from building) or anything else. It was not threatening or anything like

"We felt we needed some discussion and an explanation. The meat of the letter was, 'Get back with us and let's talk," Delbridge said.

Locricchio could not be reached for comment.

There were no copies made of the letter, according to Delbridge.

"I know I caught him at a bad time, " Delbridge said. "Maybe the timing was bad. I caught him right in the middle of his rehearsal. I do know that the next letter the township sends is not going to be delivered by me. It'll be by registered mail."

Township officials are frustrated because Locricchio can excavate and build private roads for private use without the need to consult government. Local officials continue to work without firsthand knowledge of the project.

"What we need to do is sit down and talk, and forget the past. We need to go at this and iron out everything and handle it," Delbridge said. "Right now Locricchio is building and says he'll use the roads. If he does for private use, that's fine.

"If he opens the road for public use then we're going to wind up in court—and when that happens only the attorneys win."

Early deadlines

Due to the Labor Day holiday, there's an early deadline for news items and advertisements for the Sept. 8 edition of The Clarkston News.

Classified ads must be placed by 4 p.m. Friday, Sept. 3. The display advertising deadline is noon on Friday.

News items must be called in or received by 4 p.m. on Friday.

The Clarkston News office, 5 S. Main, Clarkston, is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. The office will be closed on Labor Day, Monday, Stewart McTeer: His goal is to help local merchants prosper.

Stewart McTeer named ad director

Stewart McTeer has been named advertising director of The Clarkston News by publisher James Sherman.

"We feel his experience has just got to be beneficial to the customers of the newspaper," said Sherman, publisher of the News and two other weekly newspapers, the Oxford Leader and the Orion Review.

McTeer, 55, has been on the News' advertising staff for one year. He previously served as sales manager of two major daily newspapers, The Detroit Free Press and the Philadelphia Bulletin.

He and his wife Madeline moved to Independence Township three years ago.

"We love Clarkston—we moved to the area before I joined The Clarkston News," McTeer said. "I'm looking forward to being able to help the local merchants prosper."

McTeer's has served as marketing representative for many major accounts including Sears, Ford Motor Co., Winkelman's, Cunningham's and Saks Fifth Avenue. For 12 years, he was a speaker on advertising for the American Press Institute at Columbia University in New York City.

A 1951 graduate of the University of Detroit, McTeer holds a bachelor's degree in business administration.

The McTeers' daughter Michelle and her husband Cass Wisniewski also live in Independence Township with their children, Mark, 2½, and 1½-month-old Thomas.

The former Clarkston News' advertising manager, Norine Valentine of Oxford, shall continue in the position of advertising director for the three newspapers published by Sherman.

Labor Day festivities abound

There's plenty in store right at home for entertainment seekers over Labor Day weekend.

Festivities begin Saturday, Sept. 4, when the Clarkston Village Park becomes the site of a three-day Old Fashioned Country Fair sponsored by the Village Business Association.

There'll be contests galore thanks to the downtown merchants with prizes ranging from a new pair of tennis shoes in the Rotten Sneakers Contest to a cash prize of $1 for the most successful egg tosser. Participants can register for the events at the information booth in the park beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday or they can sign up right before the contests. A complete list of times, contests and events is on Page 8 of the Clarkston Sesquicentennial special section inside this week's Clarkston News.

Volunteers for SCAMP will be in the park with a host of games for children. A fund-raising effort, tickets for the games will be five for $1 and most games require one ticket, with some requiring two.

The Clarkston Village Players will also appear at the Old Fashioned Country 1 ir with performances of a melodrama and skits. There'll be lots of food for sale. A deejay shall provide music Saturday evening beginning at 6 and demonstrations planned include karate and square dancing.

Hours of the fair are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 4; noon to 6 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 5; and noon to 6 p.m. Monday, Sept. 6.

Labor Day events on Monday, Sept. 6, begin with a pancake breakfast to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association in the Main Fire Station on Church Street in Clarkston from 7 to 10 a.m.

The parade is to begin at 10 a.m. Sponsored by the Clarkston Rotary Club, the parade promises to be worth watching with its music, floats, clowns and antique autos.

Following the parade, a water battle will be underway in the village parking lot at the corner of Main and Washington streets. Fire fighters from several Oakland County departments will battle to the finish with their fire hoses.

Just north of town, the annual Corn Roast put on by the American Legion, Campbell Richmond Post, will be underway from noon to about 6 p.m. Fresh roasted corn dipped in butter and an array of food and beverages will be sold, and there'll be a band, plus games for the kids. The address is 8041 M-15, Independence Township.

The Clarkston United Methodist Church Men are sponsoring an Ice Cream Social following the parade at the church located within easy walking distance from downtown Clarkston at 6600 Waldon, Independence Township.

Prices and details on all the events are on Page 8 of this week's special section honoring Clarkston's sesquicentennial.

Patterson gears for Kelley debate

, By Marilyn Trumper

August was a dismal month filled with stumbling blocks for Oakland County Prosecutor L. Brooks Pat-

He lost the Republican's bid for gubernatorial candidate and last week, his petitions to get capital punishment on the November ballot came under attack for authenticity.

Despite losing his bid to run for the state's highest office and ongoing plans to appeal the Board of Canvasser's denial of the ballot proposal, Patterson is gearing up for the state attorney general race. The Independence Township resident accepted the Republican Party's push to face opponent Frank Kelley, a 21-year veteran of that office.

The petitions were a bitter disappointment," Patterson said, on the eve of his scheduled appeal before the court to overturn the canvasser's decision. "I've pushed three years to get capital punishment on the ballot, and to come so close, just that close, it was a disapointment.

They were challenging what I call technical errors," Patterson said. "Rather than signing like 'L. Brooks Patterson' people would put 'Brooks Patterson, a shorter version of their name. But, it's still the same person."

The 43-year-old Patterson called his loss in the governor's race "disappointing." "It was a long, hard year and really I ran two campaigns," he said, talking of capital punishment.

We went up north after it was over with the family, to relax and get reacquainted. The party put pressure on me to accept the race for attorney general. Headlee (Richard Headlee, Republican candidate for governor) sent flowers to my wife.

"I didn't know if I should join the race or stay here and open up a greenhouse," Patterson laughed.

With 60 days until the November election, Patterson said he'll tackle the campaign for attorney general as he did for governor, hitting hardest the outstate area where he's not as well known.

Kelley knows he's in for a hard race. I've already challenged him to a series of debates, and he's accepted," Patterson said.

The office of attorney general is the chief law enforcement office of the state, according to Patterson.

"Where was Kelley on the question of parole reform? I led a statewide petition drive in 1978 to make it tougher for dangerous felons to get out of prison. Kelley opposed that.

"I will be very aggressive on the issue of law enforcement."

Patterson challenges Kelley with "building an empire," and criticizes the veteran for tackling issues Patterson defines as outside the realm of the attorney general, like review of bonding.

Finally, Patterson points to what he calls Kelley's "approach" to running the office.

'In 1966, before I was even prosecutor, a woman was raped in Pontiac Township and Thomas Wayne Tucker was arrested, prosecuted and convicted of the

According to Patterson, Tucker appealed to the court of appeals and the Michigan Supreme Court which both upheld the circuit court decision.

Tucker reportedly went to the federal court and sued to get out of prison, and Kelley, then attorney general, defended the state.

According to Patterson the federal judge agreed Tucker had been illegally retained and ordered a new

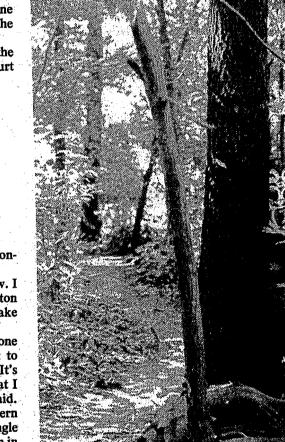

By this time it was 1973 and Patterson was Oakland County's Prosecutor, responsible for the retrial.

Patterson said Kelley called the case a loser.

Instead of a retrial Patterson pushed for the sentencing and made the last ditch appeal to the highest court in the nation, the U.S. Supreme Court, which reversed the federal court and ordered Tucker to serve his term.

Patterson reiterated he'll run a tough campain and promises to force Kelley to the wall in the debates, as he did in the Tucker case.

But on running in the Republican ticket he said, "I'm just responding to the party's call. If I can assist Headlee's campaign and assist in the defeat of Blanchard, good."

Village OKs Hawke's live-ins

Ninety-three-year-old senior wanted commercial rezoning instead of variances, says he'll be back

By Marilyn Trumper

Ninety-three-year-old Allen Hawke will be able to have live-in residents at his home on West Washington Street in Clarkston, with the zoning board's OK.

At the Aug. 25 meeting, members of Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) voted 3-1 to allow the aged senior live-in companions as long as he lives in the house, even though the zoning is single family.

There was no stipulation whether Hawke could accept rent money.

Chairman Howard Huttenlocher, Edward Thomson, and Lillian Bauer voted "yes." Richard Weiss was absent. James Schultz, member of the village council, was the lone dissenter.

The push to oust tenants from Hawke's motherin-law apartment began early this summer when the village council charged there were zoning violations. Hawke said he was old, alone, and wanted companionship.

After Wednesday's meeting, Hawke said the decision was good but that he favors a complete rezoning of the land.

"It wasn't what I wanted, but it will do for now. I wanted it to be commercial, the same as the Clarkston Mills (Mall). I wanted it rezoned. It would make wonderful doctors' or dentists' offices.

"I have so many square feet, too many for one family. Also, everything else is commercial next to me. There's no parking on the street out front. It's already like something commerical and that's what I wanted. You can't call it anything else," Hawke said.

Earlier the village council had expressed concern over large houses in the village reverting from single family to multiple, and Schultz held to that concern in

"It really was a ticklish thing. The man advertised for someone to live there instead of listing someone to care for him because of his age," Schultz said.

"I understand the gentleman is old. But years ago, we worked to eliminate these multiples in the village and we did that for a reason."

They stampede for secretarial job

By Marilyn Trumper

The stampede to fill a single $7,10 an hour, non-union secretarial job in Independence Township is a sign of the times.

Township hall was overrun recently with 50 applicants for the advertised job, a turnout that found Supervisor James B. Smith "agonizing" over Applicants learned of the opening from a single ad in The Clarkston News, from the Michigan Employment Security Commission and by word-of-mouth, according to Smith, who said he spent two weeks interviewing.

When the fog blew over, Smith hired Rita Bordick of Independence Township.

"It was tough. The people fell into three categories: Those who commuted and wanted local employment; those who worked here and wanted to change employment; and those who needed a job for whatever reason, maybe they were putting the kids through school, maybe their spouse wasn't working, maybe they wanted to be more selffulfilling.

"I had to sift through all that and it was a trauma. You knew that one person would get the job. Of the 50, 30 were qualified. Others were overqualified.

"I agonized. I spent the weekend working a rather involved scoring system and made my decision based on that. Consequently I eliminated many of whom were close friends and local citizens," he said. "But I'm satisfied I made the right choice and a good choice." And the second of the second o

Payment query leads to taxing situation

Beatrice Theresa O'Neill of Milford pays all her debts at once.

The 52-year-old woman of Elkinford Road walked into Springfield Township Hall last week to inquire about paying 1982 taxes, and almost walked out with the cuffs on.

But not for tax evasion.

When Beatrice announced her name to the clerk, it rang a bell with a deputy from the Oakland County Sheriff's Department who was standing nearby,

He checked Lansing and, sure enough, there was a warrant out for her arrest.

Beatrice was to appear in court on charges of drunk driving and she never showed up.

She was taken into custody and paid a $150 bond before being released from the Oakland County Jail.

Nothing is certain except death and taxes...and sharp-eared deputies.

Garbage issue needs debate

Let's push away all the rubble and take a look at what's happening with the serious solid waste problem facing the residents of our community and every person in the United States.

With so many people truly upset over the prospect of hurting local business people involved in the trash collection, we seem to be missing the

It's important to note that Oakland County has come forth with a plan to care for solid waste that includes an energy-generating incinerator system, landfills to handle construction materials and toxic wastes and a resource recovery facility that would recycle items like paper, metal and glass rather than have them create more useless landfills.

From our point of view, the plan is a good one. It certainly beats the heck out of wringing our hands and wondering where the next landfill will spring up.

In order to implement the solid waste plan, most communities in Oakland County will have to participate. According to George Schutte, supervisor of the county's solid waste unit, that means they will have to agree that all waste collected in the areas they govern will be taken to county facilities. And, Schutte says, most of the governmental bodies they've contacted have said they are willing to pay more for garbage collection for a period of time so the facilities can be constructed. He estimates that will mean $10 to $20 more per year for homeowners.

"The people of this (county) have said they don't want so many landfills," Schutte says. "It just can't be a wild poker game like before."

The first stages of the plan, if approved by at least 41 of the 61 municipalities in the county, should begin some time next summer, he says.

Enter Independence Township. Faced with the problem of how to best join the plan, the Solid Waste Task Force has set forth some ideas for consideration by the township board.

The task force, headed by Clarkston resident Edward Thomson, has suggested it would be best to divide the township into areas and take bids from existing garbage collection firms to be the sole collector in each section. The firms would be expected to provide pickup for large items like appliances as well as everyday garbage.

The plan would eliminate the present freeenterprise system which now includes five firms serving the community. It would also limit the presence of garbage cans on neighborhood curbs to one day a week and would cutback on garbage

Our major concern about the task force's proposal is that it would undoubtedly force some garbage collection companies into bankruptcy.

We feel that a system that is operating successfully with the majority of the people satisfied should not be tampered with.

And that is an option open to the township board-it can decide to license only collection firms that agree to use the county facilities and leave the present free-enterprise system intact.

But aside from our opinions, we applaud the township for bringing the matter open for debate—that's exactly what the task force should have done.

Now it's up to community members to express their opinions and assist the township board in making the decision about the plan that would best suit our needs and our values. -KLG

Fifty years isn't such a long time afterall. That's the conclusion I reached after curiosity prompted me to ask a group of Clarkston teenagers what they think they'll remember about growing up here.

It all began after I talked with Phyllis Robinson and Isabel Bullen about growing up in Clarkston over 50 years ago for a story in this week's Clarkston News special section honoring the village's 150th birthday.

The memories of Phyllis and Isabel bear some striking resemblances to the events that make up the lives of local kids today.

"It's a small community and everybody seems to know each other," said one current

This generation will also remember things like catching 23 turtles in Parke Lake during an afternoon reptile hunt, taking shortcuts during winter months across frozen bodies of water and knowing all the shopowners in town and having them know their names.

There are some changes brought about by different kinds of businesses in the town.

The 24-hour bake shop has meant local kids can make early morning or late night visits to the bakery with friends.

"It's great. You get up and do your (paper) route and you get hungry. You can eat," said 2) another teen.

The group also talked about parades. They've been able to be in them and they have favorite memories—a neighborhood float or riding in an antique car. They miss one part—the throwing of candy from moving vehicles recently outlawed because of the potential danger.

But even after all the years that passed between the time that Phyllis and Isabel grew up in 4) the town, the young people of today agree they would rather live in Clarkston than anyplace else.

One of them sums it up in a words that could have also been used by teenagers three generations ago.

"It's classic. (Clarkston) has a certain touch most towns don't have."

The Spinal Column management has been fighting to get advertising away from dailies for a dozen years. During this time I defended the dailies.

I have, until now, urged people to take a daily newspaper. The weeklies are where you have to go for local news "because the dailies can't have enough staff to write all the community's news" they claim to cover in circulation.

Even after the Oakland Press in Pontiac (They got away from calling it the Pontiac Press several years ago just as the Free Press tried to drop Detroit this week) started a weekly paper called the Gazette, I said people should read a

No more. Read the weeklies and listen to radio.

Dailies own weeklies all over the place . . . Flint, Port Huron, Kalamazoo, Chicago . . . The Los Angeles Times even bought 30 or so weeklies around their area to control the advertising market.

Busy people and buyers of goods don't have time to read a newspaper every day unless it's an institution like the Wall Street Journal.

But everyone has time to read what's happening in their home town, to and with his neighbors, what the various boards and bodies are doing, and school happenings.

Weeklies is where it's at. The dailies have finally found this out.

Conservancy supports developer's road plan

For 10 years, the Independence Land Conservancy has been working with developers to obtain the best possible plans to protect the scenic beauty of our township.

Often trade-offs are involved; the developer will help us if we will help him.

Such is the case with the 240-acre Nolte-Brennan property at the northeast corner of the township. Kieft Engineering designed a plan for only 21 lots (instead of 121 lots allowed by zoning laws).

Complementing this low density layout, a beautiful 60-acre woodland park will be given to the Conservancy. In return, they have asked the Conservancy to support their request to the Zoning Board of Appeals for the approval of a private road. (The case is to be considered by the board of appeals on Wednesday, Sept. 1, during its meeting that begins at 7:30 p.m. at Independence Township Hall, 90 N. Main, Clarkston.)

The sketch that appears with this letter shows how this road is the key to creating a very attractive development with the minimum number of lots entering public roads. As the proposed private road runs from one dirt road to another, it is difficult to justify forcing the devlopers to pave their road to county standards.

The township planning commission, in preliminary review, has already stated that performance bonds would be required to assure that the road would be completed according to specifications.

We too dislike private roads, but we believe that all citizens will agree that this trade-off is an excellent one for the township; the Conservancy's board strongly supports their request.

Douglas Roeser, President Independence Land Conservancy

Keep 'Big Brother' from trash

I have lived in Clarkston for 11 years and have always employed the local garbage pick-up service.

They have never missed a pickup, never gone on strike, and never failed to give excellent service with a smile and a friendly comment. These men live in or near this community and treat all their customers like the friends and neighbors they are.

Now the township government wants to divide this community into pick-up zones and have disposal services bid on them.

Our local businessmen cannot compete against the much larger firms from Detroit or other big metro

If we allow this "Big Brother" move to succeed, we will: 1) force many of our neighbors into unemployment or possibly bankruptcy; 2) destroy the healthy competition of this free-enterprise system; 3) lose yet another personal touch in our everyday lives.

Let's support our local people!! Let the township government know how you feel! Your opinion-expressed-could keep our neighbors working!!

Ruth Brueck

Tackle problems

I'm not in the garbage hauling business, but neither is Independence Township.

Our ambitious township politicians should concentrate on existing problems like real estate taxes and police protection, and not get involved in a foreign business that is prone to strikes, poor service and, last but not least, more taxes.

Our lives are richer for having known 'Bud'

The office across from the gym will be quieter. Bud McGrath, "Uncle Bud," will not be there.

I doubt if the people in this community can possibly realize what they have had and what they have lost.

I won't try to be flowery, Bud certainly wasn't, but he was a friend to kids. A person who would go to the mat to help even those "rinky dinks," as he called them, who wouldn't help themselves.

Bud was a friend to quality education who endured—seldom in silence—a dozen twists and turns of education fad and fashion.

He was a devoted husband and father.

But, most of all, Bud was a Man. He was a robust man with solid principles, personality, and character who stood out all the more for living in an age of wishy-washy equivocation.

We will miss the laughter, the booming voice, and the sturdy handshake. We will miss him. But, thank God, our lives our richer for having known the

Short shrift for me

It's not right for a city to be nicer to short-time visitors than to permanent residents. In Detroit, for lord's sake, even the local panhandlers are more gracious to tourists than to the people who pay local

The mayor gives the key to the city to every visiting twit passing through town on the way to tinsel sainthood, but he gives short shrift to news reporters asking questions on behalf of the citizens who pay his salary. Nobody tell me what to do. I'm telling you what's going to happen," Mayor Coleman Young recently retorted to a newsman who had the temerity to suggest that a mayor should obey the Freedom in Information Act which requires public officials to respond to requests for public documents within five days, not 30

But I can understand, if not forgive, that brand of short shrifting. Just because I live in the same neighborhood as the mayor, and he is my employe, that is no reason he has to give me long shrift. After all, I'm just one of the local peasants while the mayor occupies the city's highest office from where he can oversee the harvest and distribution of all shrift. Better than anyone else, the mayor knows where shrift causes the least damage, and long shrift does the most

HOWEVER, PANHANDLERS are something

" your was so party of Air and else. They're not the mayor, and they shouldn't treat local citizens worse than visitors.

Almost every weekday, while walking through downtown Detroit, I'm approached by panhandlers requesting money for busfare to visit their sick childen in Grosse Pointe. Most of them treat me rudely, especially when they realize I have nothing to give them except short shrift: It doesn't do me any good to explain that the shrift might someday have historic value because I got it from the mayor of one of the nation's largest cities. The panhandler who came nearest to treating me graciously didn't ask for money until after te'd praised my choice of clothing and my stylishly unique pairing of a navy blue jacket with grey flannel trousers. At first, I thought he was a fashion photographer looking for a model. But then he asked for busfare to visit his sick mother, the leading couturiere in Paris, Ky. When I gave him delayed-but-nevertheless-short shrift, he said my necktie was too wide and my shoes were scuffed.

UNTIL RECENTLY, I accepted such shabby treatment from panhandlers with quiet grace, the same way I accept it from the mayor. But last week Sheikh Mohammad Al-Fassi of Saudi Arabia came to Detroit for one lousy day and the panhandlers met him at the airport with ring-kissing hosanna. They gave him a proclamation of welcome and a police escort into town. And at no time did the panhandlers crassly ask the sheikh for bus fare to visit a sick relative. Instead, head panhandler Nicholas Hood, who is a city councilman, simply pointed out that Mohammad Al-Fassi gave money to panhandlers in other cities and "we hope you will do the same for Detroit."

It is not right that our panhandlers grovel for visitors while telling local citizens their ties are too wide. When I complained to City Hall, a mayoral spokesperson said the only reason our panhandlers were kind to Mohammad Al-Fassi was they felt sorry

"The poor sheikh has a bad public image because nosy newspapers reported he was slow paying his hotel bill," the spokesperson complained. "Our panhandlers, especially those who are city officials, have great sympathy and empathy for victims of bad publicity."

So there you ae. The mayor gives the key to the city to visiting twits but short shrift to me, his neighbor, because he doesn't like newspaper writers telling him what he should do. And local panhandlers give ring-kissing hossanas to visiting sheikhs but accuse me, a local taxpayer, of wearing scuffed shoes just because I give the the same short shrift I get from the mayor. It's not right.

Friends, family mourn death of Bud McGrath

By Al Zawacky

Harry J. "Bud" McGrath—teacher, counselor, coach, friend and family man—succumbed to leukemia Aug. 26, less than three weeks after his 59th birthday.

To his many friends and co-workers, who remember him as the avuncular counselor at Clarkston Junior High and the man who ran the clock at Clarkston High School athletic events, the loss was hard-felt and difficult to accept.

"He was the kind of guy just about everybody liked," said CIH Principal Duane Lewis, who recalled that McGrath's warm personality and friendly demeanor earned him the nickname of "Uncle Bud's among teachers and students alike.

"Everybody seemed to be his friend," Lewis said.
"He was totally dedicated to his job—he wasn't feeling well and had a tough time last year, but he kept on coming to work.

"Bud was just the kind of guy who would do anything for you. If you were moving stuff on a Saturday, he'd be there. That's just the way he was, and I never knew him any other way.

"He was a friend of mine, and probably everybody in this building would say the same thing."

McGrath came to Clarkston Junior High in 1971 after serving as a teacher and counselor at Clarkston High School.

A loyal follower of school sports teams, he coached the CHS boys' basketball team in the mid-1960s, the CHS IV football and also served as an assistant coach at the varsity football level.

Although he left coaching over 10 years ago; he continued to attend the varsity and JV football and boys' basketball games, where he was a regular in the press box or at the scorer's table in his role of official timekeeper.

"I remember Bud used to officiate a lot of our games before he got into coaching," said CHS Principal Dom Mauti, who preceded McGrath as the CHS boys' basketball coach.

"He'd been here close to 20 years, and he never really did get away from athletics. We're all upset. It's just hard to believe it's all over."

Bud McGrath: He's going to be missed.

Paul Tungate; Clarkston Community Schools athletic director, said that the community had lost "one of its biggest supporters of athletics."

"Whenever we needed something done, Bud would offer to do it," Tungate said. "And he always felt the kids came first. He's going to be missed."

Bud McGrath is survived by his wife, Margaret of Drayton Plains; mother, Ercel McGrath of Waterford Township; brother, John E. McGrath of Waterford; children, Timothy of Eldorado, Ill., Michael of Kenton, Mich., Mrs. Mark (Melissa) Rose of Union Lake, and Mrs. Dale (Molly) Schaffenacker of Lafayette, Ind.; and eight grandchildren.

He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Pontiac.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Huntoon Funeral Home, Pontiac. Services were held Aug. 28 with the Rev. Galen Hershey officiating.

The family requests memorial tributes be made to the Clarkston SCAMP program.

Children's contests underway

Birthday card and poster contests for young people are part of the celebrations planned for Clarkston's 150th birthday during the upcoming Crafts & Cider Festival.

Sponsored by the Clarkston Community Historical Society, the birthday card contest is open to 5- to 11-year-olds and the poster contest is for 12- to 18-year-olds.

Birthday cupcakes will be given to the first 100 children who bring their birthday cards to the society's educational tent at Crafts & Cider on Friday, Sept. 17.

Child care classes

Child care and babysitting techniques are the topics of the "Red Cross Mother's Aide Course" offered at the Springfield Township Library beginning Sept. 22.

The class is open to upper elementary through junior high school pupils. Sponsored by the Red Cross, it will be taught by librarian Cathy Phillips.

A certificate will be awarded upon completion of the eight-hour course. The sessions are planned from 6 to 8 p.m. on Wednesdays, Sept. 22 and 29, and Oct.

Class size is limited. Call 625-0595 for more information or to register formation or to register.

The library is located at 10900 Andersonville Rd. in Springfield Township.

The winner of the card contest will receive $10, with a $5 prize for second place and three honorable mention awards.

Pre-festival entries will be accepted at The Clarkston News, 5 S. Main, Clarkston, and at the Independence Township Library, 6495 Clarkston-Orion, Independence Township.

Rules for the birthday card contest are: Card size—8½-by-11 inches, folded in half; deadline—6 p.m. Friday, Sept. 17; prizes—to be awarded Sunday, Sept. 19 at 2 p.m. at Crafts & Cider; judging will be based on originality.

Posters should include an original Crafts & Cider logo heralding the village's 150th birthday.

Cash prizes will be $10 for first place and $5 for second place. There will be three honorable mention awards.

Rules for the posters are: Size—no larger than a 12-by-12-inch square; deadline for entries is Sunday, Sept. 12; entries will be accepted at The Clarkston News or the Independence Township Library; prizes will be awarded Sunday, Sept. 19, at 2 p.m. at Crafts & Cider; designs become the property of the Clarkston Community Historical Society; judging will be based on originality and the decision of the judges is final.

Winning entries in both contests will be displayed at Crafts & Cider, Sept. 17, 18 and 19 in the Clarkston Village Park on Depot Road.

Local woman to appear in Flint ballet show

By Marilyn Trumper

When the curtain rises on the Whiting Auditorium stage this October for the Flint Ballet Theatre's performance of "Swan Lake," look for Independence Township's Susan Butler in the first act.

The firm and fit 33-year-old Butler is both a villager and swan, and will be spending the next month in rigorous rehearsal for the ballet, famous for its music by Piotr Ilich Tchaikovsky.

Susan smiles as she talks of dancing from an early age, of the semi-professional ballet theater and of the production's choreographer, Iacob Lascu, a stern and strict master from "the old country."

"Oh, he's wonderful," she said. "He demands discipline and settles for nothing less. Just when you think you can't go on, you think you're dying, that the pain's too much, he'll say, 'There are no excuses...go on with it.' He demands a lot."

"From dancing I get a sense of accomplishment. I feel good knowing I can keep up with some of the dancers who are in high school. I love to dance. It's a rigorous exercise, but you become part of the music," she said. "I don't like the pain, and I get a lot of blisters.

"I've never really asked, but I think I'm the oldest dancer in the group," she added, laughing. For a few years Susan hung up her leotards and points. "From 1971 when I started teaching school until

I left to have Lindsay, I didn't dance," Susan said, talking about her 2-year-old daughter.

"It was really hard to get back into physical shape and limber up after that."

The benefit performance of "Swan Lake" is scheduled Sunday, Oct. 10, with performances at 2 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. in Whiting Auditorium, 1241 E. Kearsley, Flint. All proceeds go to the March of Dimes.

For ticket information, phone 239-6772.

The choreographer, Iacob Lascu, is the Flint Ballet Theatre's master who studied with the Romanian Opera masters in Bucharest, the Romanian National Folk Ballet, and the Bolshoi Theatre in Moscow. He is also the Ballet Master of Dance Detroit Ballet Co.

Swartz Creek 10, Clarkston 7.

Frightening thought, and even though I wouldn't bet on it, it could happen, you know.

Of course, there's the other possibility: A Clarkston victory. Trouble is, even if the Wolves smite the Dragons in a manner similar to that 41-0 score two years ago, the typical response around town will be a collective yawn.

That's the frustrating part about next week's varsity opener. It's a no-win situation for the Wolves.

Lose, and the team's confidence may be dealt a blow from which it will never recover.

Win, and people will say, "So what? Look at who they played.' The bottom line is that in an opener against Swartz Creek, Clarkston has nothing to gain-and everything to lose.

So why, for the third year in a row, are the Wolves opening against the Dragons, anyway?

It's a logical question to raise, particularly since there are about 160 Class A high schools in the state—and numerous Class B schools around as well that could provide the Wolves with more credible competition than the woebegone (2-16 over the past two seasons) Dragons.

Paul Tungate, Clarkston Community Schools Athletic Director and the man who formulates the schedules, has an explanation that is nothing if not interesting.

What it came down to, he says, was a choice of five schools to open against-Swartz Creek, Catholic Central, Dearborn Fordson, Brother Rice or Grand Blanc. Those were the only possibilities, Tungate insists, and if that's the case it isn't difficult to figure out why Swartz Creek was the choice.

Who wants to get maimed by a Fordson or a Brother Rice in the first game of the season?

That's not Tungate's explanation for settling on Swartz Creek, but who can believe it wasn't the major factor?

WOULDN'T IT BE nice if just once we could get a Rice or a Fordson in here? Granted, it would be preferable to play them in a year when the local talent well was a little better filled. But even in a lean year like this one, I think it would be interesting.

It would definitely draw more people and generate more interest than a game against the Dragons.

And what difference does it make who wins? If the Wolves beat somebody like Fordson, it'll make their season, and if they lose, so what? At least you're losing to some top-flight competition, not to a school where football victories are about as common as vists by Halley's Comet.

But, it seems as though the Clarkston hierarchy painfully remembers being annihilated for two straight years by Grand Blanc in 1978 and 1979. Twice burned, they're determined to keep it from happening again.

That's a shame, because it shows a lack of confidence in the talent we have here. And it's a contradiction of everything I've ever been told about how we're supposed to be seeking out the "tough schools"

Instead, we're stuck again with Swartz Creek-lose and it's a disaster, win and it's no big deal. That's the price you pay when you play the weak

sn't officially back in the GO

By Al Zawacky

Sports may be back in the Pontiac school system, but Pontiac Northern isn't quite back in the Greater Oakland Activities League.

And although the Huskies of Pontiac Northern will have both a varsity. and junior varsity football team this fall, only the Clarkston High School JVs will play them.

That's the word from Clarkston Community Schools Athletic Director Paul Tungate, who was busy last week making changes to this fall's sports schedules after the Aug. 19 announcement that Pontiac would reinstate its defunct sports program.

"Northern is in the league, but we really can't count the games as league games because of the way things will be set up," Tungate said.

Pontiac Northern was slated to join the new eight-school Greater Oakland Actitivities League this fall, but when the school system announced last summer that athletics would be dropped, the GOAL's seven remaining members-Clarkston, Lake Orion, Rochester, West Bloomfield, Waterford Mott, Waterford Kettering and newcomer Waterford Townshipfound other opponents on the open dates on their schedules.

As it turned out, the Huskies will have sports, but the short notice has forced the school to scramble for opponents to fill its schedule without regard to league and non-league games.

Clarkston, for example, had already scheduled a non-league game with Troy Athens in the Oct. 28-29 varsity and junior varsity football spots originally intended for Northern.

Those games will remain on the schedule, but while the varsity has no available date to play Northern this fall, the JVs do, thanks to the openings created by the Waterford School District's announcement that it will not field any JV football teams.

The JVs will thus play Northern on Sept 30, a date originally set aside for a game with Waterford Mott.

Contests with the Huskies have also been added to the CHS cross country and girls' tennis schedules.

"The news just came as a surprise everyone," Tungate said. "Somebody came forth with the money and the board did a complete turnaround in deciding to have sports."

Tungate added that by the time winter sports start in December, the league will have had enough time to work Northern back into its schedules, and the Huskies will become fullfledged members of the GOAL.

The JV tradition: Winning football games

Clarkston junior varsity quarterback hopeful Erik Kline peers downfield in search of his receivers during a scrimmage Wednesday afternoon. The numbers are up on this year's Clarkston High School JVs, and a cautious optimism prevails among coaches Gordie Richardson and John Getzan, who led the 1981 JV Wolves to an undefeated 7-0-1 record.

starford drops JV, frosh football; X-country, tennis

By Al Zawacky

There will be no freshman football, junior varsity football, cross country or girls' tennis in the Waterford School District this fall.

That decision, reached within the past week due to lack of funds and participation, has created a host of headaches for Clarkston Community Schools Athletic Director Paul Tungate.

Waterford's eleventh-hour decision has left Tungate with numerous holes in Clarkston athletic schedules, and with the fall sports season only one week away, there isn't much time to fill them.

The Clarkston High School JV football, girls' tennis and cross country teams all had dates scheduled with the three Waterford High Schools-Kettering, Township and Mott-and the Sashabaw Junior High freshman football team had three games scheduled with Waterford junior highs Crary, Mason and Pierce.

Tungate has filled the IV football gaps with contests at Roseville Brablec Sept. 23, at Pontiac Northern Sept. 30 and at home against Waterford Our Lady of the Lakes Oct. 21.

Sashabaw, meanwhile, has picked up West Bloomfield Sept. 22, and Royal Oak Shrine on Saturday, Sept. 25.

Sashabaw still has one open date remaining, and Tungate is also searching for opponents to fill no less than six spots on the cross country and girls' tennis schedules.

By Al Zawacky

In an unsettled world, it's nice to have things you can always count on.

Like the Clarkston High School junior varsity football team.

Since the arrival of head coach Gordie Richardson and assistant John Getzan three years ago, the JV Wolves have established themselves as very reliable at winning football games.

Very reliable. Twenty-three victories, to be exact, vs. only three defeats and one loss. Included in that tally is a perfect 14-0 record in the Greater Oakland Activities League and three league titles.

Next week-A look at the CHS varsity Wolves

Whether that tradition continues this year remains to be seen, of course. But the prospects are en-

After carrying fewer than 30 players last season, the JV numbers are hovering around 45 this time around. And, based on what they've seen in practice so far, Richardson and Getzan have reason to look forward to defending the league crown.

'We've got a lot of people with real good football backgrounds," Getzan says, "and we're bigger than we've been in the past. But that doesn't mean we'll be better.

"We're just cautiously awaiting the start of the season. Until we get out there and actually play someone, we can't know if we've got some good football players—or just a lot of big kids."

Richardson remains mum on who the Wolves likely starters will be Sept. 9 when they travel to Swartz Creek for the season opener. "I don't think it would be fair to the kids at this time to mention names, not after just three days in the pads," he says. "Naturally, we have some ideas—but you always have some kids that turn out to be better than your first impressions.

"We're looking for a good season. We may not be any quicker, and I don't see how we could be any smarter than the group we had last year. But with more people, we're bound to have more depth-which in the long run may help us to be better than last year." "Better than last year" will be a tall order-the Wolves finished the 1981 season at 7-0-1 and finished a perfect 4-0 in the GOAL.

"It all comes down to the kids," Richardson says. "In general, you just coach all you want and if the kids are willing to learn, you're going to be good.

'We've been fortunate here in that the kids who've stayed on and played have been willing to learn. and make the sacrifices.".

A CONSUMER SHOPPING TIP

Many stores have voluntarily set up policies to let you return articles purchased at their stores. Honest mistakes over items that don't fit or suit the right purpose do entitle you to the privilege of the store's return policy—providing they have a policy and your purchase fits within it. Make sure you know what it is. Ask yourself whether you are depending on a store's liberal return policy rather than your own good judgment in making purchases.

Eiden girls host Fifth Annual MDA Carnival

The tot puts a ticket in the Willy Wonka Machine and quickly moves around to the tube on the side, his hand outstretched for a prize.

"Mommy, see my balloons!" he says with glee, running across the lawn with the treasures.

The barking dogs inside the enclosure next to the driveway provide a clue to the activity going on in the woods. There's laughter, delighted squealing and the general hubbub made by kids on an adventure—the jungle safari is complete with costumed "headhunters," ferocious stuffed beasts, fabric snakes curling down a tunnel and a friendly native who passes out Pac-Man cookies to all who survive.

"Every year it gets better," said Lisa Eiden, 17, about the carnival she and her sister Amy, 14, put on last week to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

After five years of carnivals, the Independence Township girls are veterans. This year, they worked three solid weeks preparing for the afternoon of fun

Amy was only 9 when she came up with the carnival idea.

"After seeing kids in the (Muscular Dystrophy) Telethon, I just wanted to do something for them,

Lisa immediately joined in, and with help from neighbors and the whole Eiden family, the carnivals got underway and have continued to be an annual

"I just enjoy it a lot," said Amy. "It's a lot of hard work getting ready, but when you think of the results, it's worth it."

"Every year we watch the telethon-Amy and I do. We always want to do something, but from our own pockets, we can't. So this is a way to give something to those less fortunate than we are," said

The 1982 girls' basketball season gets underway at Clarkston High School next week, as the hometown Wolves host the Milford Redskins Tuesday evening. Action has been heated in practice and varsity coach Dave McDonald says he's encouraged about the coming season, which will include a contest at the Pontiac Silverdome against Waterford Mott

Oct. 29.

Fast-breaking Wolves show potential in 1982

Whatever's behind it, Dave McDonald just hopes it keeps up.

So far in pre-season scrimmages and practices, the Clarkston High School coach has seen his team perform far above expectations. On a few notable occasions, the graduation-depleted Wolves have been Birmingham Marian, Waterford Kettering, Troy Athens, Lapeer East and Oakland Community College have provided the opposition. The OCC scrimmage ranked as a highlight, as the CHS varsity girls' basketball squad handled itself impressively against college competition.

'The coach from Marian told me he thought we had as good a fast break as he's seen," McDonald noted with satisfaction. "We did well-Lapeer East gave us a lot of trouble, but the game against OCC had to be our best game of the year."

Only two seniors-Lori Martin and Annette Ulasich-will be on roster when Clarkston opens the 1982 season Sept. 7 at home against Milford.

The nine remaining roster members are all juniors—Julie Beamer, Janet Herron, Renee Jones, Sue Ketvirtis, Lin Klingler, Shannon Moore, Sheil Moore, Cristi Nicolai and Kris Tisch.

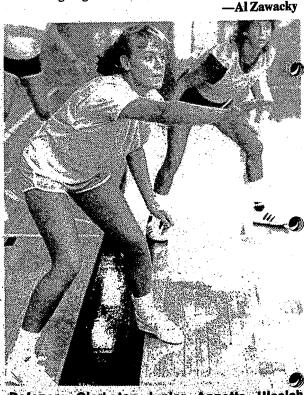

"I don't think we're going to be world-beaters," McDonald adds, "but we've got a lot of potential. We've got a lot of fine athletes.

"It's going to be fun."

Like track runners off the starting blocks, Annette Ulasich (foreground) and Sue Ketvirtis Entrepreneur, architect, developer-turnedpromoter Joseph Locricchio (seated), talks about stage production with Rick Flores, guitarist for "Pharaoh." Locricchio, co-owner of Pine Knob Investment Co., hand-picked the eight-member band which made its world premier Aug. 24 and 25 on the stage of the Pine Knob Music Theatre. The band opens its tour of the U.S.A. this week, beginning Sept. 1 in Chicago. A winter tour of Japan is on the books. Pharaoh is a combination sound of "Santana's" latin rhythm, "Chicago's" horns and "Journey's" rock.

Pharach: Ready to face the world

By Marilyn Trumper

Fifteen minutes before show time, Joseph Locricchio sidesteps music fans, deftly misses hostesses laden with champagne-weighted trays and hustles down aisle AA with a tunnel vision for the mixing board.

After intense discussion with a blue-jeaned crew member, he turns, scurries down the aisle, turns left, and heads up the stage and behind the curtain.

Dressed in white shirt, black bow tie and tux, brown hair cropped in a short curly afro, the 40-yearold owner of Pine Knob Music Theatre's a bundle of wired dynamite waiting for the fuse to be lit.

Tonight the entrepreneur gives birth to yet another ideal, like the DeLoreans of his kind-the dreamers, the movers and shakers, the inventors, the men willing to funnel thousands into a dream and muster the know-how to make it work. Tonight his rock band "Pharaoh," a hand-picked "swat team" of eight men, makes its world premier on the stage of the Pine Knob Music Theatre.

The small crowd's hushed. The hype's been thorough.

A resonant electric huuuummmmmmmmml A crazy quilt of lights, and the upright silver geometrically shaped phoenix lands on a stage of living grass and evergreens. Like a spacesmp ia heaven, the hydraulic silver bird comes to rest and Pharaoh's eight members begin the performance that could make them—or break them.

The effect rivals a Steven Spielberg production and challenges the Electric Light Orchestra's exotic and involved stage show hailed at its inception years

"Ohhhhhhs!" and "Ahhhhhhhs!" filter through the crowd. For an out-of-nowhere band, it's first

Over an hour and three encores later, Pharaoh left the stage and stepped into fame: Paul Finazzo, Rick Flores, Larry Fratangelo, Mark Nilan, Ross Pooley, Chad Smith, Danny St. Laurent and Paul Ventimiglia had arrived and Locricchio's delivery was smooth.

Just three hours earlier, the free-spirit Locricchio sat in a sea of empty orange pavilion seats yelling orders to stagehands and shouting "great sound, great sound," over blasts of music through the speaker.

The hills were empty and lonesome. Sounds traveled far.

That was a year ago.

"Four or five of them did not even know each other. They met, walked up to one another and said, 'Hi. I'm such-and-such,' "Locricchio said.

Dressed in blue and yellow tennis shoes with green and white socks, navy shorts, sweat shirt and plum jacket, Locricchio tried to keep warm in the pavilion's shade and sipped hot coffee from a white, foam cup.

The Clarkston (Mich.) News

No one wanted a repeat of the band's opening the night before when Pharaoh's premier melted in the heavy rain and left 1,800 fans waiting for the show to begin after mechanical problems delayed show time to 10 p.m.

They proved their mettle that night.

"As far as I'm concerned, the guys really proved themselves as performers last night," Locricchio said. "They waited patiently until we got everything together and then went out there and gave it their best.

"The people out there were yelling and stomping, all the band heard was the sound of irate people. They went out there and blew them away. They're great

"Sam! Incredible sound," Locricchio yelled to his cousin at the mixing board. "It's going to be great. It sounds just like a studio."

The road to that moment took over a year, and Locricchio talked about how he got Pharaoh together.

"I've been in the music business a long time and it seemed to me they were the best players in the city, in their realm, in my estimation," Locricchio said.

"I knew them. I'd watched them for a long time. When the time came I called them up and said, 'This. is happening. It's right now.' "

Some of the men were yanked from bar bands, two were pulled form a Texas university where they were pursuing a master's degrees.

The first five months of practice was during the winter, behind a custom-made plastic dome on the Pine Knob Music Theatre stage. Pharaoh worked to develop the sound Locricchio calls a "street-groove."

Pharaoh broke its style with "Point of Entry," the title cut off their commemorative album. Tenthousand discs were pressed and, according to Locricchio, the mold was then broken.

"We brought out a mobile unit and recorded the 10 tunes. They'll be on Pharoah's second album, which should be out in the stores tomorrow," Locric-

He called guitarist Rick Flores from Equador as a cross between the genius Jimi Hendrix and the classical perfectionist Andre Segovia.

"Rick's a latino and can play the hell out of a guitar," Locricchio said.

"The word pharaoh depicts strength. The pharaohs were power. This band has developed power. They liked the name and agreed. We were suprised in a trademark check that the name had not been taken," Locricchio said.

Locricchio pooled the band.

Promoted them.

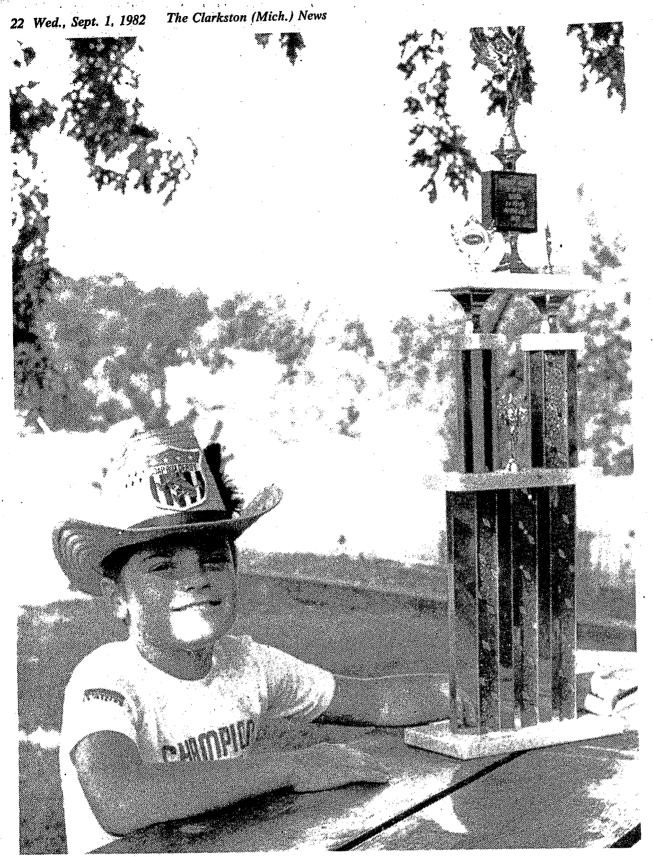

Provided them with the Pine Knob Music Theatre.

Called on his connections in the music world. Designed the set.

Named the band and called all the shots on stage. He's set up their tour of the U.S.A.

The packaging's perfection. A cocktail party before the show meant a longstemmed carnation to every woman, tuxedoed waiters pressive trophy he won for taking top honors at the Detroit Metro Soap Box Derby race.

Soap box car takes him far

Chris Luzi enjoys life in the fast lane—the fast lane of the world of Soap Box Derby racing, that is.

Soap Box Derby competition has taken the Clarkston Elementary School sixth-grader to races in Fort Wayne, Ind., Detroit and, most recently, the ultimate event for all Soap Box Derby champs, the All American Soap Box Derby World Championship Race in Akron, Ohio.

Chris earned the privilege of taking part in the Akron race by placing fourth in the Detroit derby in

He was treated royally during the week in Akron, beginning with a ride in a personal police motorcycle escort in a chauffered limosine to the event's opening ceremonies.

Included in the festivities was a week at Derby Town, the camp that housed senior and junior champions from across the United States and from Canada, West Germany, New Zealand and Venezuela

In addition to activities like swimming, boating and horseback riding, the racers had a chance to meet celebrities like George Takei and James Doohan, Mr. Sulu and Scotty from the Star Trek TV series.

Chris also had an opportunity to work on his racer, take a practice run down Derby Hill and visit the Derby Hall of Fame. Gifts to the campers to mark the occasion included racing jackets and helmets, tennis shoes and watches.

The highpoint of the week came in the Aug. 14 races. Chris won his first race and lost a close second heat in a photo finish, placing in the top third of the 97 competitors in the junior division.

Chris was a little disappointed over not placing in the top three, but in the spirit of a true competitor, he was already sketching a senior car to build for next year's competition during the retur trip home.

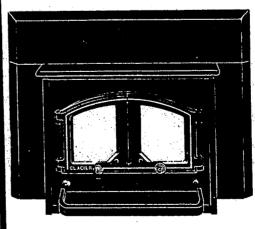

Chris became interested in Soap Box races in 1980 when his older brother Scott took second place in the Detroit Metro Derby.

The same year, Donnie Spangler of Waterford took first place and went on to third place in the junior division of the All American Soap Box Derby. Donnie is the grandson of John Witherup, a long-time Clarkston area resident who has been working with kids building Soap Box racers from the time he built and raced his own car in 1939.

Information on building a Soap Box Derby car can be obtained by calling Witherup at 625-2456.

and waitresses, flowing champagne and tables laden with fresh fruits, cheeses, desserts and crab legs.

Know-how, hype and Pharaoh's talent can only mean success.

"I think rock and roll is here to stay, but I also think people are tired of the heavy metal sound. This is a rhythm band. Their music stays with you and develops a feeling in people. I'm looking for that kind of longevity.

'I made up my mind to do it when I saw the Moody Blues tour. Their sound is not rock and roll, it's more symphonic. They sold out wherever they went. The London Festival Orchestra played their biggest high, 'Nights in White Satin.'

"Pine Knob is the number one entity of its kind in the Americas. When I built this, no one was in this business. It changed the industry across the country with touring groups," he said. And like Locricchio's other adventures, it will change the lives of the eight. men in Pharaoh.

From Pine Knob, they go to Chicago's Popla Creek Music Theatre, San Francisco's Concord Pavilion, Los Angeles' Greek Theatre and the Merriweather-Post Pavilion in Baltimore.

All the gusto that went into the ski lodge, golf course, Hamburger Mansion, amusement park and La Veranda Ristorante has been funneled into

"I try and do the best with anyone, anywhere in the world. I've done my best most of my life. Sooner or later, when that's done, it's recognized," Locricchia

All of Locricchio's projects have been successes. Using the entrepreneur's history as an index, so will Pharoah.

100-piece band joins paraders

Music from the 1st Marine Band, President Lincoln's Own, will highlight the Labor Day Parade sponsored by the Clarkston Rotary Club. The parade is to begin at 10 a.m. on Labor Day, Monday, Sept. 6. Fitting right into the theme of "The Way We Were" will be the 100 member band, dressed in scarlet-coated Civil War style uniforms. The band's appearance is thanks to a joint effort of Rotary and the Business Association of Independence Township, who joined forces to pay the $600 fee. The parade route begins on Church Street at Clarkston Junior High, west to Main Street, and north to Miller Road.

Aura Fine Art: More than just original prints

Karen Weaver's Aura Fine Art boasts a $450 original six-print series by the English artist Hogarth, a commentator on society.

Its title: "A Harlot's Progress."

The work is extremely rare.

With expert knowledge Karen moves from print to print, pointing out the detail that makes it a classic.

Doing business

The black and white prints show the innocent girl arriving in the big city and subsequent travel down the road to exploitation.

"Hogarth was famous for his study in commentary. He made social comments on the times. He made fun of the rich, and was one of the artists of his day to encourage prints. This made art available to the middle class and no longer limited it to the rich.

"He also advanced the art world for dealer

Piano workshop

More than 50 area piano teachers are expected to attend a Schaum piano seminar conducted by Susan Pennington at Evola Music.

The lecture-demonstration is free for piano teachers. Planned Wednesday, Sept. 8, it is to run from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and to include a complimentary luncheon.

Teenagers, adult beginners, preschoolers, recitals, saving lesson time and educational psychology are to be among topics presented.

Evola Music is located at 4977 Dixie Highway, Waterford Township. For more information, call 674-0433.

SYNOPSIS

of Clarkston Village Council Meeting August 23, 1982

Present: Byers, Symons, Sinclair, Basinger.

Absent: Schultz, Raup.

Granted Jennifer Radcliff permission to draft a letter for the Historic District Comm. and have them mailed to 150 residents and real estate co.

Independence Twp. Supervisor Jim Smith would like a joint meeting with the Village Council on Sept. 14 to go over the Cable TV Task Force Report.

Deer Lake lease for the Twp. was turned over to the village attorney.

Pres. Byers read a letter from Jerry Powell that it was necessary for Jerry to resign from the council. Council accepted his resignation.

The council discussed the sign ordinance, it will be taken up again at the next meeting.

stamps and copyrights to protect the artists," Karen said, rattling off art history.

Aura Fine Art specializes in orginial prints and framing, with a full selection of frames in wood, metal and plastic.

The walls are filled with prints. There's a story behind each one, and Karen will weave the tale.

A graduate of Oakland University, Rochester, she is the school's only undergraduate to have interned at the Detroit Institute of Arts, a job that taught her the intricacies of authentication.

She's worked in an advertising agency, as a journalist, and technical writer.

Art, she says, is her passion.

"This is the last place I feel you can get a return on your dollar in the art world. You can get a good deal.

"Also, I want to be able to educate people. To explain the print, talk about its history. I want middle class America to be able to enjoy what I enjoy."

Her goal: To own a Rembrandt print.

"An oil is out of the question. But with a print, if I save a long time... I can have one and that's what it's all about. A Rembrandt is not out of reach."

An original print is "...an image on paper created from a plate on which the artist has personally created the master image," she said.

Art, unlike a bedspread, calls for unique selec-

"While people may say, 'I really like that landscape;' and buy a piece for the living room wall, I think you have to decide on a piece that wears well. Something you can look at every morning at the breakfast table."

Aura Fine Art is located on M-15, north of I-75 at the Cranberry Lake Road intersection. It's open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, and on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Skittish horse adds adventure to MOT poster quest

It all sounded rather elementary: Create a fullcolor poster to promote the Michigan Opera Theatre's October production of "The Haunted Castle," the 1865 classic by the father of Polish opera, Stanislaw Moniuszko.

Independence Township's Suzanne Maierle, a professional model, was chosen to play the part of the fair maiden Jadwiga. Her friend Robert Reis, also of Independence Township, portrayed Prince Stefan, a member of the famed and feared Winged Hussars of Costumes in place, cast and crew are ready to begin the photo session and create a new and stunning poster promoting the Michigan Opera Theatre's production of "The Haunted Castle."

the 17th century, the elite of the Polish cavalry.

A quiet field and old manor house in Brandon Township was the choice for the scene where Robert would stand astride his horse and romantically sweep up the maiden into his arms.

By the time it was over, however, cast and crew encountered some difficulties that almost rivaled those encountered by the Hussars themselves on the

There were the awkward costumes to contend with, which included the large and colorful Hussar wings. (In history, the wings were made of eagle or vulture feathers, set into wooden supports, framed in silver and attached to the saddle. They created a frightening wailing, whistling noise as the Hussars charged into battle, terrifying the enemy horses.)

Everyone had to race to beat the setting sun to start the photo session, and finally, everything appeared to be ready—only to have disaster strike.

The horse used in the shooting, who had been jumping around nervously all the while, couldn't quite cope with the sight and sound of Robert in full regalia, the bells on his Hussar wings jingling as he attempted to mount.

The horse panicked, disappeared down the hill and was gone.

But—just as history shows that the Hussar scored numerous miraculous victories against overwhelming odds-Suzanne and Robert's venture also ended with success.

The horse was retrieved and the shooting went forward without incident just a little behind schedule.

"We all had a great time-although I didn't get home till about 1 in the morning," Suzanne said.

The poster is being donated through the efforts of Don Burzynski, vice president and creative director of the advertising firm of D. C. Frey and Associates; and Gary Ryan, commercial photographer.

Both men are of Polish extraction and welcomed the opportunity to give the Michigan Opera Theatre's production of "The Haunted Castle" a boost.

The Polish opera has been popular for years in Europe, but this will mark its American premier. Six performances will be featured, opening Oct. 1 and running though Oct. 9.

People talking about their experiences growing up, working and raising their families in the smale town of Clarkston provide a glimpse of life over three generations. Because oral history is fun to read and provides us with some knowledge about what went into making the town of Clarkston what it is today, it's the theme wit. chose for our third News Clarkston special sesquicentennial section honoring the Village Clarkston's 150th birthday. We enjoyed reminiscing with the people whose stories are inside. We know you'll enjoy reading what they had to say.

Dick Morgan:

His Clarkston service station buisness spans half century

By Al Zawacky

Down through these past 50 years, Clarkston has been a pretty nice place to do business.

It still is today. Dick Morgan will tell you that. After over 50 years on the same corner at Main and Church streets, it's almost impossible to imagine Clarkston without its resident service station owner.

Just like that first day of business back in January of 1932, Dick Morgan is still there on Main Street.

Blue uniform with the embroidered name on the Hands darkened with the noble grease of an honest day's work.

Today, as in January of 1932, economic times are not the best. But things continue to run smoothly at Morgan's Service Station.

'For me, these aren't hard times," he says, seated in his comfortable Clarkston home on Overlook.

"I'm busier now than I've ever been. I guess being here so long, people get to know you and the type of work you do. He remembers vividly those dark depression days when he started his business 50 years ago.

"My cousin was supposed to go in with me, and we both had to come up with $200 each," Morgan

'He never came up with the money, but got a job at Pontiac Motor. He was smart, and even in those days, they were hiring a few people every now and

"So, my dad said, 'I've got nothing else to o—I'll help you.' That's how I got started."

Even in the these inflationary times, $200 is no

In 1932, however, it was a small fortune. Especially to a lad of 16, out of school and "just looking for something to do" in the way of work. "That was a lot of money, and money was hard to come by," he says. "It took me at least three months to borrow it—it was a rough situation."

There was also a lot of competition in the village back in those days, too. "Right this minute we're the only gas station operating in Clarkston," he says, a touch of pride in his voice. "But do you know how many there used to be? "Six-six right here in Clarkston."

He ticks off location of each one, including a couple that "I'll bet very few remember." They're all gone today, with the exception of Morgan's Service Station.

"I don't know what it is," Morgan says, leaning back in his chair and looking thoughtful.

"Overhead, maybe—our overhead today is tremendous. The taxes, utilities—I can remember when my light bill would be $10. Now, it's $100 and you don't think a thing of it."

It is only natural that Clarkston runs in Dick Morgan's blood. He was born in 1915 just four miles from his service station, not far from the old Clarkston Train Station on White Lake Road.

His father was born on Sashabaw Road in a farmhouse about where the Clarkston Eagles Hall is Colocated.

Dick Morgan has spent his life here, although, as an avid traveler, he and his wife Dora have visited England, Hawaii, Alaska, Florida and the east coast.

Yet, the outside world only leaves him longing for home base.

He breaks into a grin.

"Two weeks is about all I can take on vacation," he says. "After you've lived your whole life in one place—you know, home is still home.

"I really think our Main Street today is a lot more colorful than it was back in '32," he adds. "It's better today." As for Morgan's Service Station, the owner can look back on the past 50 years with satisfaction.

"I don't think I'd do anything differently," he says, gazing back over the last 50 years. "My home satisfies me, and Clarkston has always been good to "People ask me when I'm going to retire. I wouldn't have any future in retirement.

"As long as I have my health, I'm going to keep on working.

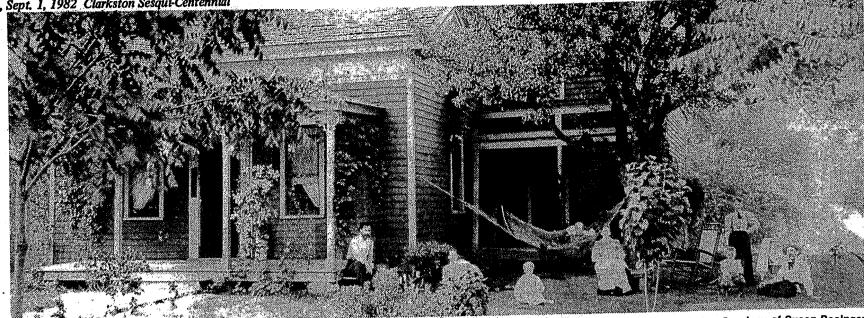

It was the spring of 1941 and Dick Morgan had already been in business more than nine years here on the corner of Main and Church streets. This photo was taken as part of an ad promoting the latest engineering effort of Acme

For 50 years, Dick Morgan has served Clarkston customers from his gas station in downtown Clarkston. At one time there were six gasoline stations in the village area.

He opened first law office in village

William Stamp also served as judge and published The Clarkston News

By Marilyn Trumper

Retired Justice William H. Stamp leans back in the chair and rests clasped hands against a white moustache cushion, as white as the hair on his head. A gold pinky ring glints on his right hand.

Carefully weighing each answer as if it were a court decision, the 86-year-old judge peers through thick glasses with alert blue eyes and puffs on an unfiltered Camel cigarette.

Living just outside the village line he's seen firsthand 50 years of Clarkston. A half century of change, births, death, law, disaster and victory. He marks his career with stops as a lawyer, a judge and one-time publisher of The Clarkston News.

"In fact, I opened the first law offices in Clarkston, right across the street in 1933. Before that everybody went into Pontiac. Back then being a lawyer wasn't as competitive as it is now. I had a general law practice, did a little bit of everything."

Admitted to the bar in 1919, Stamp said wouldbe attorneys could go from high school to law school, and sidestep undergraduate school.

"That's the way I did it. And, I spent a year in the Army. They counted that as a year of law school."

In 1955 Stamp held court for the the first time as Independence Township's District Court judge, an office abolished in 1970.

'The first time they handed it to me. After that I ran for office. Then I was out of a job when they ended the office in 1970. I was 72," Stamp said with a laugh.

"Yes. I guess you could say I was (a strict judge)," he said, recalling the sentence given to 10 neighborhood teens a few years back during an eggthrowing episode.

"There was a band of ruffians, 'young hooligans' The Detroit Times called them, that saw an egg truck and began throwing eggs at passing cars and people.

They hooked themselves up though when they hit a

They came into my court and I gave them 25 days (in jail), trying to keep them in over Halloween. Laughing, Stamp pulls out a worn folder. Inside is a local daily newspaper's front page editorial on the issue, praising the judge for his strict sentencing.

'They used to call me '90-day Stamp' down at the jail." He laughed and lit another cigarette.

was asked why he committed the crime. His response: "Just for kicks."

"So, I gave him a stiff sentence and was a little rough and the young man pointed it out to me and asked me why.

"I said, 'Just for kicks.' "

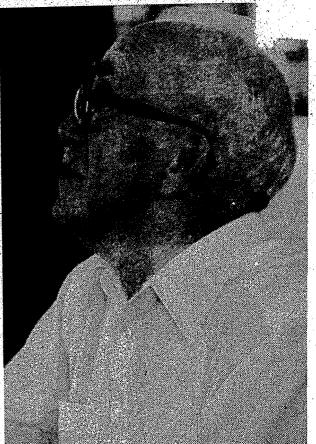

Newspapers have changed in the past 30 years, according to Stamp, a seasoned printer.

"Today, most of the articles are not news. There are more columns and things like that. When I had the paper you had more of Mrs. Jones went downtown to Pontiac to shop. That was big news back then.

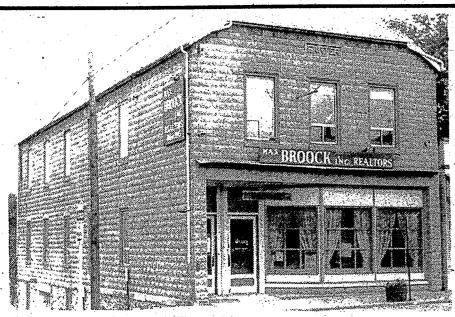

"Today the area's grown so much that nobody knows anybody else. That kind of journalism is out of date," Stamp said.

Like Clarkston's 150 years of evolution, Stamp shares his key to changing and reaching new plateaus.

"We grow in this world. We don't stand still. You've got to keep on growing and being progressive.

Still smoking unfiltered Camel cigarettes, 86-year-old retired Justice William H. Stamp, recalls the years he held court as independence Township District Court judge, opened the first law office in the village and owned The Clarkston News.

Saturday, Sunday and Monday September 4, 5 and 6 OLD FASHIONED COUNTRY FAIR Saturday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Sunday, noon to 6 p.m. Monday, noon to 6 p.m. Clarkston Village Park Depot Road, Clarkston East of Main Street

Behind the Clarkston Mills Mall The Clarkston Business Association is sponsoring fair and the contests, the Clarkston Village Players are presenting melodramatic skits and volunteers for SCAMP are running game booths for kids.

The result is a down-homey, roaring good time for people of all ages at the Old Fashioned Country Fair that covers Labor Day weekend.

To satisfy hunger pangs, there'll be eight food booths ready to provide meals or snacks, plus a roving cookie concession and a beer tent.

Tickets are five for $1 for the games to benefit Clarkston SCAMP, a summer camp program for children who may have special needs. Most of the games cost one ticket and a few cost two. Included in the offerings are Dig for Gold, Ball Toss, Ring Toss, Jarko, Duck Pond, Wishing Well, Roller Score, Bottles Up and Coin Pitch.

The Clarkston Village Players will perform almost continuously in The Red Garter Saloon. One skit planned is "Miner's Daughter." Special appearances by Calamity Jane, villains, desperados and Wild West Women are also planned.

The beer drinking contest has a $1 entry fee, but all other contests are free. Prizes vary from $1 for the children's events to a brand new pair of tennies in the rotten sneakers contest, a trip to a beauty salon in the longest hair competition and special ribbons for all entrants in the pet show. To pre-register for contests, visit the information booth open all hours of the fair, or register just before the event.

Monday, Sept. 6 PANCAKE BREAKFAST 7-10 a.m. Fire Station No. 1 3 E. Church St., Clarkston

Just east of Main Street You won't go away hungry from the all-youcan-eat Pancake Breakfast sponsored by the Independence Township Fire Department. For a donation of $3 for adults and $2 for children, the menu includes pancakes, sausages, applesauce, coffee and milk. All profits go to benefit the fight against muscular dystrophy. The fire station is the place to buy brightly colored balloons, too, with proceeds also to benefit the good cause.

Everybody loves a parade and this year's Labor Day extravaganza has something for everyone. Sponsored by the Clarkston Rotary Club, the parade's theme, in honor of Clarkston's 150th birthday, is "The Way We Were." Music, music, music will entertain paradegoers when the Clarkston High School Marching Band; the Clarkston Eagles Drum and Bugle Corps; and the 100-member 1st Marine Band line the parade route, adding their Civil War style uniforms to the hoopla. There'll be horses, fire engines, antique autos, floats, clowns and the Clarkston Eagles' motorcycles. The parade is to begin at Clarkston Junior High School, head west down Church Street, north down Main Street and end at Miller Road. New this year will be banners carried in front of the winning parade entries. Award plaques are presented to the best float, best theme floats and best costumes and there's a special Rotary Club President's Award. To sign up to be in the parade, call Del Lohff, parade chairperson, at 625-5251 or 625-5777.

> Monday, Sept. 6 ICE CREAM SOCIAL After the parade until 1 p.m. Clarkston United Methodist Church 6600 Waldon, Independence Township

Sponsored by the Independence Township Fire Fighters Association, the local group will participate and others joining in the fun will be members of fire departments from Waterford, Lake Orion, Avon Township, West Bloomfield, Walled Lake and more. The battles with water hoses will each last three minutes, until there is just one winning team in the men's and women's divisions.

> Monday, Sept. 6 CORN-ON-THE-COB ROAST Noon to 6 p.m.

American Legion, Campbell-Richmond Post 8041 M-15, Independence Township Just north of I-75 overpass

Buttered, fresh, Clarkston-grown corn on the cob highlights the 17th annual American Legion Labor Day Corn Roast. The good eating starts after the Labor Day Parade with food fit for yummy picnicking. And, the prices are right—corn for 35 cents an ear, grilled hot dogs 75 cents, chili dogs 90 cents, sloppy joes 75 cents and hard-boiled eggs 20 cents. Chips, ice cream, popcorn, coffee and cold drinks, including pop, beer and wine, will also be sold. There'll be tasty homemade goodies baked by the American Legion Auxiliary members for sale, too. An outdoor tent for dining comfort, a band for enter-tainment, chances to make someone fall into the dunk tank and games for children complete the party package.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday Sept. 17, 18 and 19 CRAFTS & CIDER FESTIVAL Noon to 6 p.m. all three days Clarkston Village Park Depot Road, just west of Main Street Behind the Clarkston Mills Mall

The charm of an open air fair in the country captured by the Clarkston Community Historical Society with its Crafts & Cider Festival. Some 70 artisans and craftspersons will sell their wares and demonstrate their skills in the quaint park with its trees, green grass and flowing millstream providing atmosphere. Munch on fresh donuts, sip cider and herbal spiced tea, crunch into a Michigan apple and sup on hot and cold sandwiches while strolling through the park. Crafts for sale or order during the eighth annual Crafts & Cider Festival include ceramics, baskets, weavings, soft sculptures, needleworks, stained and etched glass, jewelry, dollhouse miniatures, woodcrafts, toys, photographic prints, original paintings and watercolors. Make a day of it by walking just up the hill and visiting the historic 19th century Clarkston village business district. A major portion of the village was recently added to the National Register of Historic Sites.

Who remembers the Dixie Tea Room in downtown Clarkston?

That was the name of the small restaurant that stood at 23 S. Main about 60 years ago, where Patricia's Beauty Salon is located today.

Leola Stageman remembers it well. Her parents opened the business in 1922 after they arrived from her native Bentley, and operated there until a fire destroyed their business in 1925.

Mrs. Stageman recalls waiting on tables and helping her mother with the cooking back in the days when Clarkston was a quiet little farming town and 15 cents bought a slice of fresh homemade apple pie and a steaming cup of coffee.

"We didn't have anything fancy—just short order, things like beef roast, veal, lamb," Mrs. Stageman recalls.

"I remember two steady customers we had—an elderly couple, Mr. and Mrs. Mills, or Miller it might have been. They used to come in practically every evening for dinner."

That comment brings a smile from Mrs. Stageman's daughter Sally Bullen, a dyed-in-the-wool Clarkstonite just like her mom.

"I guess those people just liked grandma's cooking," she says.

Mrs. Bullen's children represent the sixth generation in the family in the Clarkston area. Going back into the 1800s, the family tree includes the names of the Francises, the Greenes and the Folletts.

The Francises, Mrs. Stageman's parents, owned the restaurant, and after the fire in 1925 she recalls working at an ice cream parlor in downtown Clarkston in the very same building where an ice cream parlor opened just a few months ago.

In 1926, Mrs. Stageman graduated from the old Clarkston school on Main Street, the current Independence Township Hall building.

Both mother and daughter left Clarkston and lived elsewhere at some time in their lives. The Stagemans lived in Detroit from 1936 to 1942, and Mrs. Bullen lived in Milwaukee and Toledo before returning to build the Bullen family's present home Independence Township in 1969.

She remembers being struck by the changes in her hometown upon returning.

'It's funny—you used to be able to stand under the street lamp on Main Street for 15 minutes before you saw a car go by," Mrs. Bullen says. "Now, you can't even cross the street.

"I can still remember running to my greatgrandmother's house after school. She had a hand pump in the sink and an old wood stove—she'd always be putting wood in the little hole to keep the fire And there was the old outhouse in back.

'She died in 1959, so things were changing around her, but she kept the old things. That's just the way she wanted it.

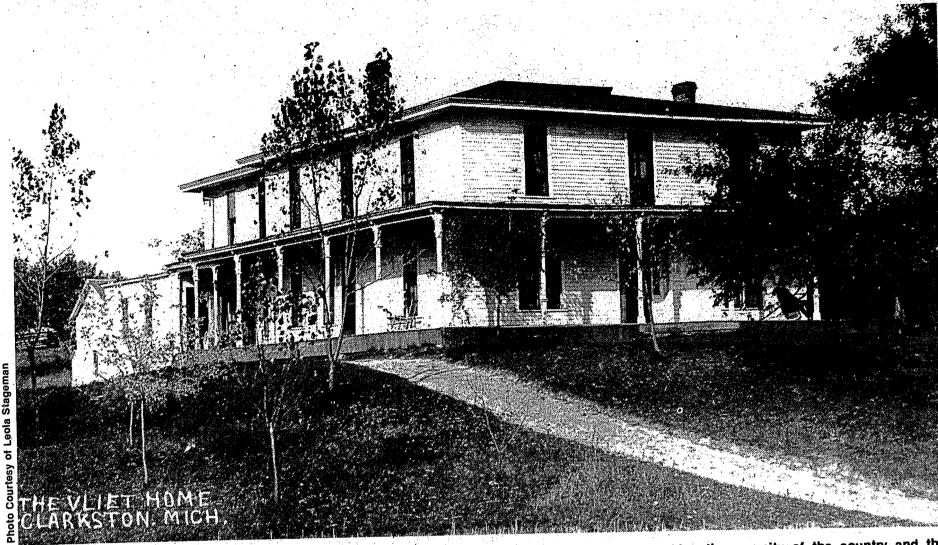

"I guess I feel sentimental about the old

Her mother agrees. Progress, for better or worse, has touched her generation like none before it as the automobile has conquered the roads, television has taken over the evenings and space travel has challeng-

"When you think of all the changes I've seen in my lifetime, it's really amazing," Mrs. Stageman says. "My mother passed away in 1950, and look how many things have happened just since then. A man on the moon-I don't think my mother could've even imagined that. It's still hard for me to believe."

Paraders from past

The Order of the Eastern Star Carnival in 1922 featured a parade down Clarkston's Main Street. Note the almost empty sidewalks—Clarkston parades apparently have grown in popularity over the years. The 1922 event was for a good cause. The new, brick Masonic Temple on the northeast corner of Main and Washington streets had been completed in 1916, but in 1922 the large frame building along its north wall caught fire. The roof and interior of the temple were destroyed, but the walls remained unscathed. The carnival was held to raise money for restoration of the building.

Sisters Phyllis Robinson, Isabel Bullen reminisce

Phyllis Robinson strolls down Main Street during a recent visit to the town where she grew up. She taught at Andersonville Elementary

School 20 years before her retirement and worked from time to time at the Clarkston State

By Kathy Greenfield

Phyllis Robinson's memories of Clarkston go back as far as she can remember. Now 69 and a resident of Florida, she lived most of her life in Clarkston, and she's glad she did:

"I feel it's something living in a small, small village. Everyone should have the pleasure, should have the rewarding thrill of being a small-towner," she says. "The memories of living in a small town are a most valuable possession."

Phyllis took time to reminisce about Clarkston during a recent visit, and after she called to check on some dates with her older sister, Isabel Bullen, Isabel phoned from Florida to add her memories.

The women remember their years as the King girls, sisters and friends, together on most of the following adventures that took place between 1918

During the summer months there were several things to look forward to-on Sunday mornings the place to be was the millstream that crossed over Depot Road.

'The Depot Road going out of Clarkston never had a bridge or anything and we had to ford that little stream," Phyllis says. "Every Sunday morning, it was the important thing, because the men would drive down there, drive into that little stream and wash their cars. We'd paddle around in the water and have a wonderful time while waiting for them to wash the Another fond memory is of a traveling entertainment troupe called the Chautauqua, named after the city in New York where they began their travels to towns across the Midwest.

No one knew the exact date they would arrive, but it would be some time during warm months.

Artifacts

Details over windows, bird feeders, stonework—all provide bits and pieces of the whole look and feel of Clarkston.

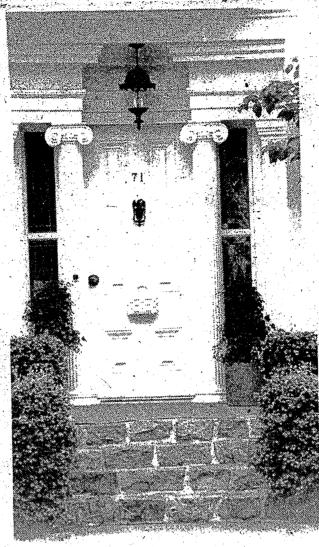

Clarkston Community Historical Society member Susan Basinger pointed out several such artifacts scattered about the village of Clarkston during a recent tour.

The Greek key detail over the windows at the home at 58 N. Main is uncommon—it is not found anywhere else in the village.

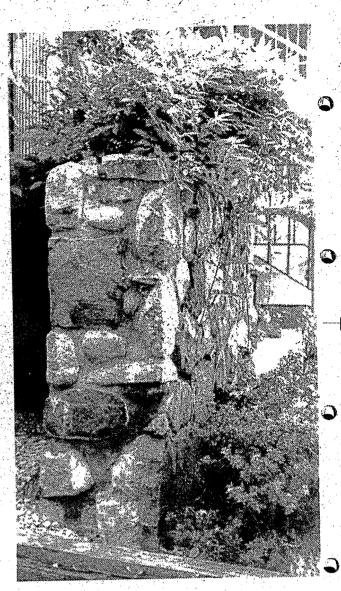

Found on the home at 21 E. Church that's basically Greek Revival in design is a Carpenter Gothic detail—saw-toothed trim over the windows, probably added after the house was built.

THE ASSESSMENT OF THE PARTY OF

The original Nelson Clark home at 71 N. Main includes this example of a Greek Revival doorway—originally the stairs were built across the entire front, giving it the popular look of a Greek temple. The present steps are typical of the stonework found scattered throughout the village, the work of local stone masons who lived in Clarkston years ago.

An old stone wall on the east side of North Main Street near the East Washington Street intersection probably predates the turn of the century.

When horses and buggles provided transportation, steps were needed to ease entrances and exits. Several are still standing in the village, including a line-up on the west side of Holcomb

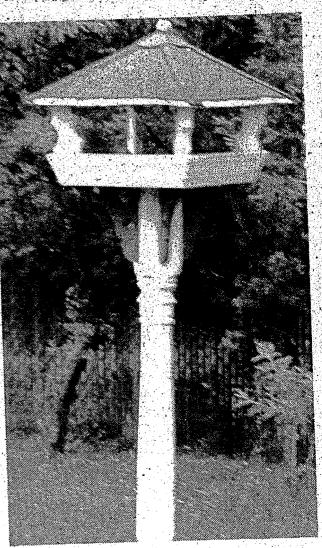

This bay window on the home at 37 E. Church shows Italian Revival influence with its brackets and molding.

Unlike any other window in the village is the oculus or roundel found on a home at 53 E. Church.

This second-story window with its custom made shutters is part of the house located at 35 Buffalo. The window shape is unusual and the shutters are, too. A portion of the house is over 150 years old, but this window is found on one of the several additions made over the years.

Bird feeders, all similar to this one behind the house at 35 Buffalo, are found at several homes in the Buffalo Street-Church Street area. The original feeder was built about 60 years ago by a local craftsman. Frank Hanson copied the design about 20 years ago, building this version of the original behind the Hanson home.

performing behind the building on Main Street that is now Independence Township Hall.

A large tent would be put in place and "it was the most wonderful thing," says Phyllis. "They had entertainment and they'd pass the hat around and you'd give a little bit of money."

For a number of years, the arrival of gypsies was a big event.

"We'd have a band of gypsies roam through town in the summer. The rumor would quickly go through town that the gypsies were here. It was so thrilling to see the colorful wagon and the children in their earrings and colorful skirts.

"Everyone would say, 'Watch your children, because the gypsies take them away,' " she says, with a chuckle over the idea's appeal. "We just couldn't resist the thought that maybe we'd be swept up by the gypsies and taken away."

Phyllis and Isabel spent many hours playing where St. Daniel Church and the Deer Lake Farms subdivision are now located, west of Holcomb Street.

The area was believed to have been former Indian burial grounds and Phyllis recalls mounds of earth, that were probably grave sites, scattered throughout the area.

"I remember finding arrowheads back there, finding some and saying, 'Oh that's not big enough' and tossing them away," she says.

Another lasting memory involves the Ku Klux Klan.

Although details of the event are difficult for Phyllis to remember, she thinks the meeting was held in a large vacant lot just north of the village boundary along the east side of Main Street.

"I was so little, but I can remember the excitement of my dad and mother and neighbors talking. There was going to be a Klu Klux Klan meeting. There were rumors. It was real exciting, because I heard whispers and such.

"We walked up there, stood way in the back, and watched the bonfires and watched the men in the white, peaked caps. I can't remember anything that happened—they just stood around the campfires."

Another adventure involved the large, white pillared house at 71 N. Main originally built by Nelson Clark, one of Clarkston's namesakes. The Irish family lived in the house then, and one of its wings was used to store products from their farm—grain, wheat and dried beans.

"All the kids in town used to go out there and play," says Isabel. "They used the living room area for storage and we kids used to go in the wheat stored there and jump in."

There were also walks into town with visits to Frank Walter's dry goods store in the building where The Clarkston News is now located. Spinning stools were the draw there, and the owners allowed Phyllis to come in for a spin—she remembers spinning around and around until she was dizzy.

Another favorite spot was the Caribou Inn located where the municipal parking lot is now found at the corner of Main and Washington streets.

"I loved to go by the beautiful big inn. The cook would walk out and give me a wonderful fresh roll, and then I'd go down to a candy store with penny candy," says Phyllis.

During winter months, she a Isabel found hours of entertainment Saturdays when they would hitch rides on horsedrawn bobsleds of farmers coming into town to purchase supplies.

Once downtown, the farmers would park their sleighs along Washington Street or Depot Road. Phyllis and Isabel would either walk home or catch a returning bobsled. Then they would wait for another passing sleigh and another ride.

Her earliest memories go back to when the King family lived in the home her father, George, built at 55 N. Main about 65 years ago, Phyllis says.

Just before she was born, her father accepted a post at the Clarkston State Bank.

"My dad was brought out from Detroit," Phyllis says. "He was interviewed by Ray Ackerson, an executive of the Grand Trunk Railroad. He knew my dad worked in (the Old Detroit National Bank), moonlighting at Grand Central Station, and he was interested in living in a small town."

Her father's career blossomed in the growing town. At first, "he was the only one. He was everything, janitor and everything," she says. "He ran the bank."

Dank. He later became president of the Clarkston State Bank and traces of his past remain visible, including the initials "T-K" above the three-unit building on the east side of Main Street's business district. The "T" stands for Teggerdine—David Teggerdine built a home on Main Street next to the Kings' and owned a meat market in town. The "K" stands for King.

Another, more subtle, change that influenced the town was instigated by King behind his Main Street home.

"My dad thought that was a great spot to have a lawn go from the back of the house to the pond—whoever thought of a lawn going down to the pond? Nobody did," Phyllis says, recalling a time when potato fields were between homes and the body of water. Isabel can remember when there was a road "back by the edge of the pond, an old pioneer road, just a shadow of a road."

On August 18, 1934, Phyllis and Charles Robinson were married in a garden wedding on the lawn behind the King home. They celebrated their 48th wedding anniversary this year.

Charles and Phyllis moved away from town, both teaching school for two years before coming back home. They built a house on Robertson Court.

Isabel and her husband Richard Bullen also owned a home on Robertson Court and the two sisters raised their children in Clarkston.

The Bullens and the Robinsons moved from Clarkston about six years ago.

While it's good to come back to Clarkston—"The charm is here yet and it still feels like home," says Phyllis—the families enjoy living in a retirement village in Florida.

"We love to reminisce," she says. "But we don't live in the past. We still anticipate wonderful times."

Built about 65 years ago, the home where the King sisters grew up looks like this today. It is located at 55 N. Main.

Historic commission at work:

Diverse village projects garner approval

The Basingers, Lysle and Jane, wanted to build the orginal porch back on their Main Street home, and did. But not before going to the Historic District Commission for approval.

The familiar lattice work fence meets the stockade privacy fence in the Radcliff yard on Main Street, Clarkston. Jeniffer Radcliff, chairman of the village's Historic District Commission, sought an exemption to erect the fence, found mostly on farms and not in residential areas of the early 1900s.

Says Chairman Jennifer Radcliff

Historic District Commission's doing 'very well'

"Very well" are the words Chairman Jennifer Radcliff uses to sum up the way things are going with the six-month-old Clarkston Historic District Com-

Additions to structures, fences and the village bandstand in Depot Road Park are among items that have come before the commission since it started meeting in March.

"The community seems to understand pretty well what the object of the ordinance is," Radcliff said. "The people who have come before us so far realize the value of the building in the original condition-not just the historic value, but the value of the building to them in the way they want to live or to do business. To interpret, Sweet Sue's has a charm to it and when the awning (was) put up, it really (had) more charm to it."

Rather than concern itself with paint, landscaping and ordinary maintenance, the historic commission's duties involve keeping tabs on structural

'We don't go out looking for things to dip our fingers into, but we do know what the ordinance calls for and it calls for review of changes which are visible from a public roadway," Radcliff se'd

The whole idea, she said, is to preserve Clarkston's history.

"It's not a common village," she said. "It's fragile. More fragile than we would like to think. We can all work to keep it here.'

Monday of each month with special meetings in between if there is something urgent to discuss. Unlike some governmental commissions which serve as recommending bodies to a board or council, the decisions of the historic commission are final.

The village's controversial Historic District Commission, feared by some to be a strong-arm group with strict regulations aimed at all house renovations, has proven the opposite and is working as planned, according to Chairman Jeniffer Radcliff.

This summer the five member commission, whose job it is to ensure the village's historic district maintains its integrity, has approved two projects in Clarkston—erection of the Radcliffs' stockade privacy fence and Lysle and Jane Basinger's porch at 129 N.

While the Radcliffs sought an exemption to allow the fence traditionally not found in a residential area, the Basingers went to lengths to restore their centuryold house on prestigious Main Street row, using aged photos to copy the original porch.

Haunted by trespassers in the backyard abutting a municipal parking lot and the Mill Pond, Radcliff explained the bid for a privacy fence.

"I stepped down from the chairman's seat and went before the commission as an applicant,' Radcliff said. "I explained the problem we have with security...people ignore the signs and come into the yard under the fence and through the gate. They fish in our yard too. It really was just too much. We needed the fence for our own security.'

Radcliff acknowledges the stockade fence is not historically found in a residential setting and is traditionally used for animal fencing.

"But the closest thing we could have come to historically was picket fencing, and we didn't want to maintain that," she said. "This way the wood can be weathered to blend into the trees.'

The commission unanimously approved the re-

In the second arena, the Basingers worked overtime to come up with a plan to restore the house's original porch, a proposal unanimously approved by the commission.

'I really want to thank my mother-in-law, Ruth," Jane said. "She used a magnifying glass to look minutely at old photos and draw a design we could use. She broke her neck to do that. We got the pictures from the lady who owned the house before us. It had been in her family since the early 1900s.

She spent two months doing that. The builders had it finished in two weeks."

Anything other than the original porch would not have worked. Jane said.

"I've really been influenced by Ruth, she's really into restoration. But we didn't see any point in doing anything other than the original."

The builder sent to Philadelphia for the grooved posts, and the porch has a beaded ceiling and diamond lattice work.

The historic commission didn't present the smallest hurdle, according to Jane, echoed by

"We were just thrilled with the plan and appreciate the time and effort they really glad to see it."
