PK to seek additional $30 million

By Marilyn Trumper

Within 10 days Pine Knob plans to amend its $30 million lawsuit against Independence Township for an additional $30 million in damages "wrought by the township's direct interference with contractual relationships, abuse of township power and indiscretion," said Anthony Locricchio, Pine Knob attorney.

In addition, Pine Knob plans to enact power given by the Michigan Supreme Court and question Zoning Board of Appeal (ZBA) members on their review and denial of the ski-run-roof hotel, he said.

Three years ago, Pine Knob Investment Company filed a $30 million lawsuit against the township when it denied a building permit to erect the controversial proposed 20-story hotel.

Angered by the township's push to monitor a 2.5-mile private road network at Pine Knob and its dangling of a liquor license transfer in exchange for delinquent property taxes, Locricchio has moved to amend the lawsuit and call for ZBA depositions.

"They've threatened the livelihood of the business," Locricchio said. "You can't use the power at the township to do this. You can't deny us our rights because we don't pay our taxes. We are still in Chapter 11 and that money is tied up."

"This is direct interference with our contractual relationships, abuse of township power and indiscretion on the part of the township board. They didn't even notify us of the meeting when they discussed our liquor license transfer."

The controversial road network began over a month ago and is near completion. It is designed for private use by the complex, according to Pine Knob co-owner Joseph Locricchio, and therefore is exempt from local control and review.

"We explained to Mr. Smith (James B. Smith, township supervisor) as early as June what that road would be used for," attorney Locricchio said. "(The building director) harassed us with a letter which we tore up because everytime they come on our property it costs us money."

"Smith has admitted it's a private internal road, but they still harass us. So, we're preparing a major suit for interference and we'll file an amendment to the $30 million lawsuit in 10 days, asking for an additional $30 million in damages."

Pine Knob officials were scheduled to meet Monday with inspectors from Oakland County, which last week issued a stop-work order on the road network until a soil erosion permit has been applied for.

According to Locricchio, construction crews have already completed the work that would affect the soil erosion permit and have little else to do except final landscaping.

"The township couldn't do anything to us, so they called the county. It's ironic that they'd call on the erosion, and erosion is exactly what this work is all about," Locricchio said.

"The roadway is designed to prevent erosion. The engineering is fool proof. The concept of roads holding in hills is an old and proven one," he said. "The hill will never erode again."

100-pound squash

"I never saw anything like it. I'll bet it weighs 100 pounds," says Allen Hawke of West Washington Street, Clarkston, about the whopper of a hubbard squash he grew in the hillside garden behind his home. Three smaller ones grew on the same vine. Hawke doesn't know why this squash kept growing but perhaps, he says, it's because squash plants form roots wherever the vine touches the ground and it got nourishment from all over the place. Too big to keep—"I like to get them big enough to put in the oven, but I haven't got an oven big enough"—Hawke gave the 2-foot-6-inch-long squash to Ritter's Farm Market on Dixie Highway, Independence Township, to put on display.

School enrollment predictions 'on the nose'

By Kathy Greenfield

If all the children were the same age, it would mean 11 fewer classes; if they all attended the same school, the school would no longer exist if it was one of the smaller elementaries in the Clarkston school district.

But the preliminary count of 5,990, or 308 fewer pupils, was expected.

"If this holds, it will meet my projection on the nose," said Superintendent Milford Mason at Monday night's school board meeting.

The tally won't be official until the fourth Friday count on Oct. 1, but Mason expects the number to stay about the same.

The formula used to make an estimate of enrollment in order to put together preliminary budgets includes as its base the birthrate in Oakland County 13 years ago for incoming kindergartners and uses, among other things, expected out-migration in tough economic times to adjust the figures, Mason said.

"It's guess work. Coming out close is lucky," he said, noting that last year the drop was 100 more pupils than expected.

The downward trend is expected to continue for several years, he said, because the birthrate in Oakland County is down. But if there is an upsurge in the economy, the number of pupils enrolled in the district could stabilize.

Assistant Superintendent Mel Vaara put the preliminary enrollment figure a bit higher at 6,027, counting 37 full-time special education pupils. Using the higher figure, the loss is 220 elementary pupils and 51 secondary students.

Combined state and local aid per pupil was $1,938 last year and the amount is expected to increase this year, although not as much as in the past when the annual increase was between 5 and 8 percent, Mason said.

Police millage to be on this November's ballot

By Marilyn Trumper

Members of the Independence Township Board are in unanimous agreement: More money is needed for police protection. Just how that money should be spent is a matter of debate.

At the Sept. 7 meeting, the board unanimously OK'd language for a November election ballot request to levy 1 mill for police protection, calling for a "public safety millage" to be used specifically for police and collected for the next 15 years.

After the election, officials are to decide how the tax money will be spent, with some pulling now to make the police fund solvent and others wanting to buy increased services.

If approved by voters, the levy will generate approximately $243,300 each year. The village is exempt from the vote because it pays for police protection from its general fund, contracting the Oakland County Sheriff's Department through the township.

In early discussions, Smith proposed using the first year's collection to hire two additional deputies, and using the remainder to restore proper cash flow to the faltering police fund.

After the meeting, Clerk Christopher Rose and Treasurer Frederick Ritter disagreed, favoring as much an increase in police protection as the money could buy.

"Police protection for the township has always been on the lighter side. It's my belief that we should increase the number of deputies in the township," Rose said.

"If an extra mill will buy five deputies, I think we should hire four and use the extra money to build up the police fund. We need to do it soon. If the vote is defeated, I'll move to get the money from the general fund. The library and parks and recreation will suffer, but we have to do something."

Ritter agreed.

"My intention in going after a police millage is to increase services."

During the meeting, Trustee Dale Stuart favored depositing the funds into the general fund instead of police.

"I don't like the concept of having special little pools of money from special little interests. I think the money can be much better used if we have more flexibility as far as public safety," he said.

Ritter disagreed saying, "The public wants to know they're getting their money's worth."

Local government has sought additional funding for police four times since 1976. The question has been defeated each time.

Currently, the township collects 1 mill for police, and this year used $59,000 in federal revenue sharing to help pay the bill.

Stickney gravel judgment final

Independence Township has the upper hand on the Stolaruk Corp., owners of the abandoned 23-acre Stickney Gravel Pit on Stickney Road.

At the Sept. 7 meeting, board members adopted the amended consent judgment which outlines a $20,000 bond, reclamation timetable and the appointment of an arbitrator to take over in the event the company fails to comply with the agreement.

Township attorney Gerald Fisher was visibly pleased with the unique judgment which he calls "self-executing." According to Fisher, the arbitrator takes over in the event of default, and the township does not have to square off in court.

New officers

New officers sit at the helm of the Independence Township Republican Club.

Elected for the 1982-83 year were President William Vandermark of 6594 Cherrylawn, Vice President Richard Oppmann of 6493 Deer Ridge, Secretary Robert Borror of Myers Road and Treasurer Holly Stephens of 4322 Fowler.

Knob irked at liquor license transfer tabling

By Marilyn Trumper

Attorney for Pine Knob Investment Co. Anthony Locricchio calls the delay in the proposed liquor license transfer "just another form of harassment" by the Independence Township Board.

With little discussion at the Sept. 7 meeting, pointing to outstanding $104,000 in personal property tax due the township and $330,000 in real property tax due the county, the board unanimously voted to table indefinitely Pine Knob's request for a liquor license transfer, and ordered the state to end its investigation until notice from the township.

After the meeting, Trustee Larence Kozma said the strategy "looks like a good idea."

"There could be a possible relationship between the two," he said. "A liquor license is a tremendous responsibility. Paying taxes is a responsibility. There could be a correlation."

The application made in 1980 requests that Pine Knob's liquor license be transferred from two companies no longer involved at the complex, Ogden Foods and Indusco Corp., to Joseph Locricchio and Gary Francell, the current partners of Pine Knob Investment Co.

After the formal transfer, the state was expected to review Locricchio's second request: To extend the license to the theater area and allow Pine Knob to sell beer in the pavilion.

"On the (license) transfer, we cannot do anything until the township board approves it," said Walter Keck, director of the Office of Executive Services for the Liquor Control Commission. "The extension (into the music theater) doesn't require board approval."

Keck added it is not uncommon for local municipalities to hold the issue of unpaid taxes over the heads of applicants, but said the legality of that tack has not been challenged in the courts.

Admitting the selling beer in the pavilion area will be a money-maker, Locricchio has said the move would allow Pine Knob to control and limit consumption of alcoholic beverages during concerts.

The plan has been hailed by theater officials, and has received the official stamp of approval from the Oakland County Sheriff's Department, which is required by the state to review the request before a change can be made on a liquor license.

Clerk Christopher Rose frowns on transference of the license, pointing to Pine Knob in 1978 when he says co-owner Joseph Locricchio, "misrepresented himself."

"At the time we approved the license for the Hamburger Mansion, we were assured by Locricchio that he was separate from that restaurant, that the taxes would always be paid and that the Pine Knob Golf Course would be open to the public.

"Well, when (Locricchio) filed Chapter 11, he listed the Hamburger Mansion as part of the business along with the ski lodge and the rest. The taxes haven't been paid and when the golf course first opened it was private," Rose said.

Treasurer Frederick Ritter balked at dangling the carrot of a liquor license in exchange for outstanding taxes.

"As treasurer I've filed all claims I'm required to ensure payment of taxes. I've attempted to work with Pine Knob to work out a schedule so they can submit it to the court for approval.

"If it's the intent of some to try and withhold a liquor license approval based on payment of any taxes—there's no statutory provision for it and I don't agree with it personally.

"Those taxes," said Ritter, "will be paid. It's a matter of the court telling Pine Knob when to pay it."

County balks at stopping road

Unlike Independence Township officials, it appears Oakland County is in no hurry to stop work on a 2.5-mile road network at the Pine Knob Complex.

Monday afternoon county inspector Karl Randall reviewed the site and said work that would require a soil erosion permit has been completed.

"Pine Knob has applied for an initial permit. They're doing no grading at the present time. As for erosion, I don't see anything that would be a problem to off-site areas. If anything did occur, it would occur on Pine Knob's site," Randall said.

County officials will continue to review the situation to decide if a permit is required, to "arrive at some type of resolution," Randall said.

At the township's urging two weeks ago, the county requested Pine Knob to apply for a soil erosion permit which regulates excavations.

The permit is not permissive, only regulatory. Unlike a Wetlands Permit, it would not prevent the work from taking place only outline how it should be done, according to Randall.

For the last month, township officials, unable to monitor the development of the private road network, have sought to get firsthand knowledge of the project and make on-site inspections.

Pine Knob officials have maintained by law the township has no right to review, and have offered the local government only limited knowledge of the concrete roadway designed to allow access from one end of the complex to the other.

Lots of cabbage

For 16 years, Milt and Shirley Green have grown cabbages, but never has their garden produced one like this year's. Milt's special soil enhancer is cow manure, but none of the other cabbages grew like the 17-pound beauty he plucked from the Greens' half-acre garden on Oak Park Road in Independence Township. "I had six plants all together, and that one just went berserk," he says, and the cabbage, which has a 40-inch circumference, didn't split like giant cabbages sometimes do. Shirley helps Milt with the planting, but then the garden is his turf until harvest time. She may add garden-grown green peppers and carrots to the cabbage to make freezer coleslaw, Shirley says. But then she adds an aside loud enough for Milt to hear, so he'll be prepared for the worst. "I might give that one away to somebody," she says.

1982 tax bills $25

less than last year

Good news and bad news

By Marilyn Trumper

This year's tax roll in Independence Township mixes the bitter with the sweet.

Taxes will be collected—but the average bill will be about $25 less for township taxes than last year because the board waived collection of the sewer ad valorem tax.

At the Sept. 7 meeting, the board approved the tax rate for 1982 totaling 5.3685 mills, which means about $161 to the average homeowner with property worth $60,000 and assessed at $30,000, or one-half market value. The $161 does not include the county or school collection. (One mill is $1 for each $1,000 of assessed property valuation.)

The tax rate includes the police, fire, property purchase, safety path and general fund. Because of the Headlee Rollback and Truth in Taxation, it is down .464 mill from last year's total, according to Clerk Christopher Rose.

This year's levy for the general fund is set at 1.2186 mills, down .09 from last year, and will generate $335,854.

The fire fund millage is set at 2.5943 mills, down .2591 from last year, and will put $715,006 into the fire department coffers.

The ailing police millage was set at .8642, down .939 from last year, and will raise $226,848.

Property purchase, which is designed to raise funds to pay for the condemnation of 80 acres targeted for a proposed gravel mine, is set at .2593, down .0191 from last year, and will raise $71,465.

Finally, the safety path millage was set at .4321, down .0319 from last year, and will raise $113,424.

Track completes year with piecemeal license

By Marilyn Trumper

For the fourth, and final time this summer, the Independence Township Board in a 3-1 vote, approved the Waterford Hills Racing Association permit in a piecemeal fashion.

Trustee Larence Kozma, long on record for compliance of the zoning ordinance, was the lone Sunday, thieves broke into a house on Sashabaw Road, Independence Township, and stole over $1,300 worth of stereo equipment and jewelry.

Sunday, thieves broke into a house on Holcomb Road, Independence Township, and stole $10,000 worth of jewelry.

This information came from reports at the Oakland County Sheriff's Department.

dissenter. Supervisor James B. Smith, Treasurer Frederick Ritter and Clerk Christopher Rose voted "yes." Trustees Dale Stuart and William Vandermark were absent and Trustee Daniel Travis, a life member of the Oakland County Sportsmen's Club, abstained.

Through Oct. 3, the association will hold two race weekends and practices, then shut down for the winter, gearing up for the annual April opening when the track license will again come before the board for approval.

Neighbors of the track who've sought relief from noise and screeching tires since last April were angry at the Sept. 7 meeting, as Supervisor James B. Smith suggested the appointment of a committee comprised of track officials, neighbors and the township, to arrive at an arbitrary decibel limit.

"Why didn't you do this back in April when this first started?" challenged one woman. "What kind of impact will this committee's decision have. If we decide 60 decibels is the limit, will you enforce that?"

Neither track officials nor residents had decided who would be their representatives.

Track officials were warm to the idea of compromise while the neighbors, with hands tied, had no alternatives.

"I feel we're no further behind, it's just another stall," said Joan Hall of Sundale Road.

Neighbor Carole Rudd agreed.

"I've volunteered to sit on the committee, but nothing's been resolved. Our only real option is to enforce the ordinance."

The current zoning ordinance limits decibels to 55 at the residential property line, but officials have gone on record wary of how that ordinance would hold up in court.

Supervisor Smith, armed with information from two sound engineers, had targeted 80 decibels as the desirable reading, a figure sound engineers say can be reached with the construction of a berm.

Trustee Larence Kozma was opposed.

"I think 80 is much too high. First of all, you have a problem with different classes of car. Some are quieter than others. Maybe you should look at limiting the types of cars on the track."

"Second, the decision we make will have an affect on the township. Gravel operations and music theatres will ask why they can't run at 80 when the track can."

"Third, the track is operating under a consent judgment and agreed years ago to use 'reasonable application,'" Kozma said.

The committee is expected to make a report to the board by the first of the year.

The cabling of Clarkston

Like it or not, understand it or not, cable television is coming to Clarkston and the rest of Independence Township. Encompassing this phenomenon is an ever-expanding technology that should lead us into yet another McLuhanesque Age of global communications. Well, maybe.

Prior to the implementation of any cable system in this community there are two matters to be resolved.

First, a cable firm must be selected to serve the area. The task force has deliberated and recommended Multi-Cable Vision to the township board and the village council. It would appear this corporation will be granted the franchise rights.

Equally crucial, but not so controversial, is the adoption of an ordinance and accompanying franchise agreement to regulate cable service in our community.

In a move that some observers considered rather unorthodox, the township board solicited cable proposals without an existing regulatory framework. Although somewhat unusual, there is probably nothing inherently wrong or improper with this approach. Considering the hesitance of some cable operators to bid on rural or sparsely populated areas, it may have, indeed, been a wise and practical course of action.

We must, however, be extremely mindful of the eventual authoring and enactment of a regulatory ordinance and binding franchise agreement with the selected firm. A locally conceived set and standards and procedures is necessary to ensure ourselves of comprehensive and responsible cable service.

Interestingly, there is movement within the Reagan administration to de-regulate much of the communications industry, including cable TV. If such a situation were to develop, any local standards would become invalid and unenforceable.

But, there is no immediate cause for paranoia. While we still can, though, we should enact and maintain every regulative power to which we are entitled. For a while, at least, cable TV needn't become as unconsciously faceless and monolithic as the monopolized utilities.

In the other related issue, a firm must be selected to construct and operate a local cable network. The interested parties have all offered a fairly equal package. It doesn't really matter who owns and runs the system.

What matters is realizing the services that have been offered. In fact, our cable system will only be as sound and thorough as our ordinance and franchise agreement are.

For all the the totally initiated, one clear picture should emerge from the cable promotion onslaught: The communications industry is offering us more of what we already have. With minor alterations, a cable system is little more than an extension of over-the-air television.

And as they should, many are wondering if we really need this cable stuff. Is it just another product for which a need has been created? Has the aggressive marketing done by media hucksters and profiteering technocrats gotten to us? The answer to both of these questions, at present, is probably yes.

If present trends continue, however, this won't be the case. Within a generation, being connected to the cable will become a necessity rather than a luxury.

Although public demand for TV is often fickle, it is, nevertheless, totally insatiable. Reliable studies show that over 65 percent of all Americans are totally reliant on TV for the majority of news and information they consume. An even larger percentage are utterly dependent on televisions for entertainment.

Irreversibly, the trend is toward more and more television. Cable attempts to meet the increased demand.

We'll pay and pay for more of the sports, movies and news we so crave. Someday, there may be a multitude of narrowly defined special interest channels and other consumer and information-oriented services. Something for everyone. We'll love it.

The promised land of 54 to 108 channels isn't likely to turn us into speechless zombies. What it is likely to do is cause us to demand even more video and electronic frontiers to explore. Hundreds of channels, yes, even thousands of channels.

In the broader sense, there appear to be two major camps of thought in this controversial matter.

There are those who genuinely believe in cable TV as part of a magical electronic panacea for modern man's troubles. These people envision a population of intellectually enriched information and entertainment junkies. For them, the messages that flow through the cable will be indispensable fuel for any useful and productive mind. Being constantly "in the know" will become not only a means, but an end in itself.

This group is excited about cable TV, as they are the future in general. Believing in our ability to cause changes and accept those changes, they'll survive quite nicely.

Then, there are others. They don't know just what to think. The future and its gadgetry is somewhat frightening to them. They even become angry at a future that already looks like an endless series of paradoxical and unnecessary changes.

And just like Dorothy Gale as she watched the Wizard of Oz float away in his balloon, they may feel hopelessly marooned in an era that is becoming stranger every day. But, unlike Dorothy, no amount of wishful chanting or heel-tapping will return them to Kansas. Not this time.

An Independence Township resident, Eric Hood is an English teacher at Brandon High School.

A rose

by Kathy Greenfield

"What's in a name? That which we call a rose by any other name would smell as sweet."

—William Shakespeare

That could be debated.

Try this on for size: Rural Agricultural School District No. 3 of the Fractional Townships of Independence, Waterford, Springfield and White Lake.

That was the former name of Clarkston Community Schools. The present district was formed in 1951 from a number of smaller schools including Sashabaw, Clarkston, Andersonville and Bailey Lake.

Herein lies the problem resolved at Monday night's school board meeting: In order to sell the house built on school property last year by the Clarkston High School Building Trades program with a clear and free title, the district had to find proof that the district had once carried the lengthy, outdated name, said district business manager Stanley Darling.

The consolidation of all the tiny schools was made in July 1951. Minutes of meetings on file in the Clarkston schools district begin in August 1951. A telephone call to Lansing netted a projected six-month wait for proof. Oakland Schools was sure the change was made, but couldn't find the papers.

There was one easy solution—have the school board sign an affidavit admitting that the district was, in fact, known as the Rural Agricultural School District No. 3, and so on, prior to July 1951.

There were a few snickers.

"I had somebody say we should leave it the Rural Agricultural School District No. 3 of the Fractional Townships of Independence, Waterford, Springfield and White Lake and put it on our buses," said Mary Jane Chaustowich as she put the resolution before the board.

"I'd like to hear the cheer for that," added an audience member.

The name change was promptly recognized, officially and unanimously.

Jim's jottings

Bridging the gap

By Jim Sherman

We came by the glued-together bridge at Zilwaukee a couple days after a portion of it became a teeter-totter.

None of the occupants (four of us) of the car were surprised at the breaking. We've all lived long enough to be skeptical if anything can be built correctly and at the bid price.

Our friend and fellow publisher from Stan-dish, Ed Perlberg fought the new bridge, editorially, from its inception.

He wrote that it cost a million dollars a second. He was relating to the extra time it takes to take the I-475 route through Saginaw to avoid the drawbridge, to the cost of the new structure.

The Netherlands firm bid $81 million to put the 940 ft. double-laned bridge up 130 feet above the Saginaw river. The I-475 by-pass takes 81 seconds longer than I-75.

Attorney Bob Parenti's reaction upon seeing the "bridge breaks" headline in The Detroit News was, "Wow! What a lawsuit!"

Indeed, what a lawsuit, and guess who will pay for both sides, regardless of who wins?

The taxpayers statewide, many of whom will never cross the structure.

Especially, they won't cross with the recent cracking and resultant closing by OSHA. That split will be remembered long after the concrete segments are glued back together with epoxy.

Consistant readers of this column will remember my writing about my friend Pansy Baldwin. He got the name "Pansy" the way big guys get called "Tiny".

We had occasion to be with Pansy and his wife, Elizabeth, at the Gene and Jean Sura's at Sugar Loaf Mt. recently. At least one amusing tale of the weekend can be told that might even be helpful to someone.

Pansy wears contacts, and generally where he goes he takes his cleansing kit and left-right wash holders. He forgot the kit this trip, and borrowed a couple wine glasses from his hosts. He reminded his wife of his contacts being in the wine glasses before nodding off for the night.

In the middle of the night Elizabeth got thirsty. She emptied one of the glasses, then the shock hit. She searched for, and found the lens, and put it back in the glass, but didn't return the glass to the same spot on the sink.

Next morning Pansy accused her of swallowing his lens. For just a minute she thought she had, and went through another cold chill.

Letters to editor

The Clarkston (Mich.) News Wed., Sept. 15, 1982 7

If you have an emergency, just call 625-3311

On Aug. 15, my wife and I were driving on Clarkston-Orion Road (toward the village) around 11 p.m. and noticed a young man lying on the road (a victim of a hit-and-run driver) in front of Mary Powell's house. There were three hysterical young girls waving and running. They didn't know what to do.

In case of an emergency, I always remember the Independence Township Fire Department's telephone number—625-3311.

I proceeded to run to the Rev. Stewart's home and called that number, and the Independence Township Paramedics were there in a matter of minutes.

I have never been as impressed as I was that night when our township fire department paramedics administered treatment to this young man. Their professional service and dedication were outstanding. Through their expertise, I am convinced they saved this young man's life.

I am writing this letter primarily to tell the people in this community that if you have an emergency situation, remember to call 625-3311. I'm sure you will end up feeling as impressed and proud of these fine young men as I was.

Mel LeRoy Vaara

Work paid off

I would like to congratulate the Clarkston Junior High School cheerleaders for not giving up.

The girls, with minimal adult input, planned, organized, and worked on their Labor Day float. They made flowers, signs and pom-poms, and gave up playing and shopping during those last days of summer so they could enter the Labor Day Parade in a float adhering to the parade's theme, "The Way We Were."

They looked in old yearbooks and contacted former cheerleaders so they could closely depict the cheerleading outfits for the years 1948 through 1981.

Labor Day arrived and with it came rain that wilted all the flowers, ran the crepe paper, and destroyed the signs indicating the years that each girl represented.

Nevertheless, the cheerleaders rode their crippled float down Main Street, cheering as planned.

I would like to express my thanks and appreciation for the wonderful attendance at the tea for my retirement from the Independence Township Library.

Special thanks to the Friends of the Library, the Clarkston Community Women's Club, Independence Township employees, and my friends and all the library patrons who attended the party in my honor.

Thanks, too, to everyone for all the beautiful cards they have been sending.

It's hard to lose a friend. But, the memory of Tim Parke, who died in July 19 in a truck-related accident, is one his friends at Clarkston High School want to keep. A plaque was presented in his honor at Friday's football game. It was purchased with money donated to the Tim Parke Memorial Fund. Dan Harkin (left) and Rob Newblatt made the presentation to CHS

Athletic Director Paul Tungate. It will be engraved each year with the names of the top CHS male and female athletes, chosen by the coaches. Parke, who was 16 when he died, was to play varsity football this year for CHS. The tribute to Parke's friends and the CHS junior class that follows was written by a parent of one of the students.

The recent tragedy that struck the family of Tim Parke was a sad event. Out of this time of sorrow came some good things.

The love and compassion that flowed from the classmates of Tim's was something very special. They were so supportive of the Parke family and each other, you could almost feel the love and concern they felt.

I hope that if I'm ever in trouble, these young men and women will come to my aid. I am proud to say that although I have been associated with this class in a very small way, I have a very special feeling for these kids.

The class of 1984 at Clarkston High School appears to be so very close. Even though they attended different junior high schools and have only been together one year, it does not seem to matter.

I think every parent and the whole community should be proud of these young men and women.

With people of the caliber of these young men and women, there may still be hope for the world.

'If it Fitz. . .'

Spooky nostalgia

by Jim Fitzgerald

Liz Cutler of Milwaukee is the daughter of the Edmund Fitzgerald, the man for whom the famous boat that sank was named. She was in the Detroit Area recently, digging for roots, and my much older sister, Terrible Jean, gave a luncheon to help her shovel. It was a great opportunity for waxing nostalgically — and spookily.

The last time I waxed nostalgically — in a column about iceboxes — I admitted I also waxed senilely. That prompted this note from June Marx of Farmington Hills:

"I can see how you wax senilely. I presume this would occasionally entail your being forgetful of the task at hand, and possibly wondering where you'd put the can of wax. It's a bit harder to visualize how you'd wax nostalgically. Maybe with just a far-away look in your eye as you recalled past (and happier) waxings. In any event, finding you making this kind of grammatical usage, I grow worriedly."

WELL, June Marx may react even more pickily when she reads that I also wax spookily, but that's the way it turned out when I fearfully obeyed Terrible Jean's command to get my wimpy, lazy body out of bed before noon on a Saturday and come meet my distant cousins: Liz Cutler and Chris Sullivan of Milwaukee and Mary Breest, Ann Naceta, Betty Pierce and Patricia Geist, who used to be the four O'Leary sisters of Algonac and now live in Detroit suburbs.

Chris Sullivan, a TV producer, is the granddaughter of my late father's sister. Chris came to town with a TV anchorman, Vince Gibbons of Milwaukee Channel 2, who is her husband. Vince is neat. After using Terrible Jean's shower, he scrubbed the bathroom, leaving it looking better than it has in years, and he left behind the name of a soap powder that's good for getting dirt out of tile cracks. Terrible Jean plans to invite Vince back and send him into her basement.

The other five cousins are granddaughters of my paternal grandfather's brothers. I'd never seen or even heard of these cousins until recently. They said they'd heard of me since I started writing for the Detroit News. I was deeply thrilled to learn that some of the people who don't know I write for the Detroit Free Press are my cousins.

The reason Terrible Jean brought us all together for the first time was Liz Cutler. She is compiling a history of the descendants of William and Julie Real Fitzgerald since they left Tipperary, Ireland, in 1835 and settled on the banks of the St. Clair River north of Marine city, Mich. Mrs. Cutler hoped her Michigan cousins could explain some of the knotholes in the family tree. I wasn't much help.

THE ONLY THING I know about my paternal ancestors is that an inordinate number of the men made their living sailing on the Great Lakes. All six sons of William and Julie Fitzgerald, for instance, were ship captains. A Milwaukee version of this love-of-the-sea dripped down to me. I've had no desire to sail ever since getting seasick on the North Atlantic 37 years ago, but I now live where I can look out the window and see lake freighters and foreign ships glide up and down the Detroit River, and I'm crazy about it.

That's why it was fascinating to meet Liz Cutler, the daughter of the Edmund Fitzgerald. He is still alive in Milwaukee today, but ailing badly at age 87. The doomed ore carrier that Gordon Lightfoot sings about was named after him because he was board chairman of Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., the firm that had the boat built.

The Edmund Fitzgerald was launched in 1958, the same week my son, Edmund Fitzgerald, was born. It was a coincidence. I didn't know about the boat until after my Ed was named.

The Edmund Fitzgerald sank in a Lake Superior storm Nov. 10, 1975. Nov. 10 is my father's birthday. His name was also Edmund Fitzgerald.

So I waxed spookily, as well as nostalgically, when I met the daughter of the Edmund Fitzgerald and five other cousins for the first time. It was splendid. I'm glad Terrible Jean opened up that can of wax.

Eberhardt named to Clarkston Village Council

By Marilyn Trumper

Carol Eberhardt, owner of the resale shop One More Time, has been appointed by the Clarkston Village Council to replace Trustee Jerry Powell who resigned three weeks ago.

Eberhardt will sit on the council through March 31, when she must run for office if she's interested in filling the final year of Powell's two-year term.

With little discussion at the Sept. 13 meeting, the village council in a 4-1 vote approved President Jackson Byers' appointment. Trustee Gary Symons was the lone dissenter.

Symons, a strong proponent of historical preservation explained his vote after the meeting.

"Basically, in my opinion, I don't think Carol has shown a sincere interest in the preservation and maintenance of the historical district," he said.

Eberhardt said she was not "surprised" by Symons' vote, but pleased the majority of the council thought her the best person for the job.

"I felt good about (the appointment). I applied a couple of months ago for the clerk's opening because I really felt the business community needs representation on the council," she said.

"I never would have moved to the village, to the historical district, if I didn't care about it. I love my house. If you're in business in this town you're playing on the historical aspect of Clarkston. The charm of the village is what's important. If we were to destroy that, we'd be cutting our own throat."

Six months ago Eberhardt and family moved to 38 E. Washington Street from rural Springfield Township.

President Byers said the decision to fill the position was a difficult one as he weighed the backgrounds of the three candidates who applied.

"I think Carol will do an excellent job. She has a good business background and has expressed an interest in representing the business community," Byers said.

Free band

They may have been rained out of the Labor Day Parade this year, but the 1st Marine Band, President Lincoln's Own of Howell shall return.

That's the word from Clarkston Rotary Club President Robert Beattie.

"We do have in our possession now a contract that they will be back next year to play in the Labor Day Parade free of charge," Beattie said.

A phone call to the band's director explaining the community and Rotary Club's distress over the rained-out band resulted in the happy solution, he said.

The band had been hired and paid $600 for the Labor Day appearance. The money came from a donation from the Business Association of Independence Township, individual business owners and a small amount from the Rotary club, Beattie said.

But, in line with the 100-member band's contract, when the rain came, the band departed.

"All of their woodwind instruments are wood, and you can't play wooden instruments in the rain," Beattie said.

Here's wishing for sunshine on Labor Day 1983.

Shooting spree arrest made

Police have arrested an 18-year-old Independence Township man on charges of carrying a dangerous weapon and possession of a firearm in the commission of a felony after an early morning shooting spree on Washington Street that left no one injured.

Kim Alan Lair was arraigned Monday before Oakland County District Court Judge Gerald E. McNally and has posted a $2,000 bond.

According to reports at the Oakland County Sheriff's Department, police responded to a call of a gunman at 6570 Washington at 2:45 a.m. Saturday.

Lair was reportedly in the house firing a shotgun, and had shot out four windows and emptied a round into a cabinet.

Listening to his police scanner, Lair knew the deputies were moving to surround the house, police said, and with his girlfriend screaming, "Don't point that gun at me," police watched Lair and the girl get into a car and drive away with Lair yelling, "I'll shoot any cop that comes near me."

According to reports, police followed the car but lost pursuit.

Hours later, Lair returned to the house on Washington Street and was pulled from his front seat hiding place in the car by waiting police.

A shotgun was found in the trunk.

A preliminary exam is scheduled Sept. 24 at the district court.

Quick start nets CHS 27-19 win

By Greg Nelson

It wasn't as easy as it could have been but Clarkston High School managed to escape with a 27-19 opening-season football victory over Swartz Creek Friday night.

Clarkston scored on its first offensive possession and twice held 20-point leads. But the large crowd at CHS Athletic Field saw that lead almost slip away from the Wolves in the second half.

"It was a good win for us. We played good football for a while and then just lost our poise a little bit," said Clarkston Head Coach Walt Wnyiemko.

"We proved to ourselves that we can move the ball well and score quickly," he added.

Clarkston picked up 258 yards in total offense with junior quarterback Craig Kulaszewski accounting for 165 yards in passing, completing seven of 16 attempts. Brian Davies led a balanced ground attack with 68 yards rushing on nine carries while Rob Mortimore added 45 yards rushing.

Opening game mistakes were apparent throughout the game as both teams hurt themselves with costly penalties and fumbles.

"They're a good team. We're a young club and we just made too many mistakes," said Swartz Creek head coach Pete Fusi Jr.

The Wolves looked impressive early as they marched 50 yards on their first possession with Davies scoring a touchdown on a 10-yard run. The extra-point attempt failed and Clarkston led, 6-0.

A Swartz Creek fumble set up the Wolves' second TD, a one-yard quarterback sneak by Kulaszewski. Willie Williams kicked the extra-point and the Clarkston held a 13-0 advantage.

When Kulaszewski hit Kurt Bottorff with a 24-yard scoring pass to extend the Clarkston lead to 20-0 it looked like a rout was in the making.

Mistakes enabled Clarkston to gain their big lead but mistakes also let Swartz Creek get back into the game.

After stopping a Dragon drive by recovering a fumble at their own three-yard line, the Wolves made a costly mistake. They fumbled the ball back to Swartz Creek at the eight-yard line with only 20 seconds to play in the first half.

Three plays later the Dragons scored on an eight-yard pass from Adam McCaughna to Dave Price and the Clarkston lead was only 20-7 at the half.

Clarkston fumbled away an excellent scoring opportunity on its first possession of the second half by losing the football after marching to the Swartz Creek one yard line.

But the Dragons returned the favor on their possession, losing the ball at their own 37-yard line.

Clarkston High School Assistant Football Coach Don Peters checks on an injured Ken Johnson during the Wolves' 27-19 victory over Swartz Creek Friday. Johnson injured an ankle and did not return to action against the Dragons.

Kulaszewski promptly hit Chris Bruce with a 30-yard pass play and Davies took over from there, scoring on a seven-yard run to give the Wolves a 27-7 advantage.

But Swartz Creek wasn't ready to go home yet. While Clarkston was spinning its wheels in its own mistakes, the Dragons were attempting a comeback.

A 38-yard TD pass from McCaughna to Bruce Ruddy cut the deficit to 27-13 with 5:47 to play in the game. And when McCaughna combined with Ruddy for a 15-yard scoring strike, the Wolves were looking over their shoulder. Suddenly the lead was only 27-19 and there was still 3:04 to play.

But Kulaszewski picked up 25 yards in two running plays to move Clarkston from their own 35 on their next possession and the Wolves were able to run out the remaining time on the clock.

Sashabaw buries rival in showdown, 52-0

By Greg Nelson

The first big showdown of the new freshman football season occurred last Thursday at Clarkston High School Athletic Field. But the game was much less of a showdown than the large crowd expected.

Sashabaw Junior High scored early and often while Clarkston never did get its game untracked as the Cougars routed the Wolverines, 52-0.

"This was a big win for us. Our kids did exactly what we expected—they did the things we wanted them to do," said an exuberant Steve Pearson, Sashabaw head coach.

The Cougars dedicated the game to halfback Jeff Davis' 9-year-old sister who suffers from cerebral palsy and that psyched up Davis and his team, said Pearson.

"We just got outplayed in every phase of the game," said Clarkston Head Coach John Craven. "If Sashabaw can stay away from injuries they could well go 9-0 this year."

"The offensive line did a great job for us. Those guys in the trenches never seem to get enough attention," said Pearson.

The credit was well deserved as the offensive line provided for a nearly unstoppable attack which netted Sashabaw more than 400 yards rushing.

Pearson was also pleased with his defense which held Clarkston to less than 70 yards in total offense and the poise his team showed.

Sashabaw started the scoring early in the first quarter when Davis raced 43 yards for a touchdown on the Cougars' third play from scrimmage. The extra point attempt failed and Sashabaw led, 6-0.

The second quarter started with a bang when Davis took a pitchout and ran 20 yards for another score. The extra point attempt was foiled again and the Cougars held a 12-0 advantage.

Dan Lewis intercepted Clarkston quarterback Steve Atkinson's pass and returned it to the Wolverine 48-yard line. That set up a 48-yard touchdown run on the following play by Steve Weidemann. Sashabaw quarterback Bob LaPorte then passed to Tim Weir for the two-point conversion and the score was 20-0 at the half.

Sashabaw picked up in the second half right where it left off at the end of the first half. Following an unsuccessful on-side kickoff by Clarkston, Davis again scampered around the end, this time for 47 yards and his third TD of the night.

The two-point conversion put the Cougars ahead 28-0 and the rout was on.

To close out the scoring, Sashabaw added two touchdown runs by Rusty Swan, one a 23-yard sweep, and a 33-yard TD run by Sonny McCain. Sw. also added two extra-point conversions.

The Cougar defense sparkled throughout the game as Clarkston had trouble getting any kind of consistent drive started. Wolverine quarterback Atkinson was a bright spot for Clarkston although he was continually harassed by a blitzing Cougar defense whenever he dropped back to pass.

The two teams get back into action Wednesday with Clarkston facing Lake Orion East at home while Sashabaw travels to West Bloomfield. The two teams will meet again in the season finale Nov. 3.

Al Zawacky takes a minute to relax and ponder his promotion to the editorial position at the Lake Orion Review. Zawacky, who started at his new position this week, left The Clarkston News where he was a reporter for three years.

New editor of Orion Review

Al Zawacky has been named editor of the Orion Review by publisher James Sherman.

Zawacky, 26, worked three years as a sports and general assignment reporter/photographer for The Clarkston News, also published by Sherman.

He began his new job as editor of the Orion Review, a weekly subscription newspaper in Lake Orion, on Sept. 9.

"I'm looking forward to the greater challenge involved in being an editor as opposed to being a reporter," Zawacky said. "There are many people I'll miss in Clarkston, but this will be a step up for me."

A Sterling Heights resident, Zawacky is single. He was graduated in 1979 from Oakland University, Rochester, with a bachelor's degree in journalism.

Greg Nelson, 21, has been hired to take the position vacated by Zawacky at The Clarkston News. He was graduated this year from Central Michigan University, Mt. Pleasant, with a bachelor's degree in journalism.

Assessor's aid

Judy Shirk will receive aid from Springfield Township in her efforts to become certified as the township's new tax assessor.

Springfield Township Board members voted unanimously, at the Sept. 8 meeting, to reimburse Shirk for tuition payments and for mileage to and from the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

Tuition for the 30 hours of classes will cost the township $150. Shirk will begin the class this week and will be required to pass an examination at the end of 30 hours in order to become certified by Michigan as a tax assessor.

Paul Leninger is the current Springfield Township assessor working on a part-time basis.

Traditionally, the Clarkston Community Historical Society has raised funds for their organization through the sale of bushels of apples, gallons of cider and thousands of donuts at the annual Crafts & Cider Festival they sponsor. This year, Betty Duris came up with a new fund-raising idea—photos taken by a smock, beret and bow-wearing photographer. The project included making wooden backdrops in keeping with the old-fashioned Crafts & Cider theme. Betty's daughter, Ellen, drew the designs that depict (in the photos at left) scenes from the Opera House once located above Hallman's Apothecary, the Clarkston Mill Pond and (above) at the ice cream parlor in the Addis Building. An art designer with the Associated Press in New York City, Ellen was home on vacation when she made the artistic creations. The whole Duris family has participated in the project, and Betty was hard at work Monday when the family dog Blackjack meandered by. When completed, the black portions will be cut out and people can buy photos of themselves stepping back in time. The pictures are to cost $1.25 each.

Raffle craft

Betsy Travis holds her quilted wall hanging that is to be raffled off at the annual Crafts & Cider Festival to be held Sept. 17-19 at the Village Park. The design is of the Crafts & Cider logo and Travis worked on the artwork every day for six weeks in order to complete it. The festival, sponsored by the Clarkston Community Historical Society, will feature 65 exhibitors with crafts and will run from noon to 6 p.m. each day. The raffle includes other prizes as well and tickets can be purchased at the festival for $1 or six tickets for $5.

Seated at the spinning wheel, dressed in period garb, Patti McLaughlin works to turn wool into thread.

Spinstress adores the 1800s

By Marilyn Trumper

Patti McLaughlin should have been born 100 years ago.

Dressed in a white duster-cap and blue and white checked floor-length gown, Patti greets a visitor at the door of her century-old home on Reese Road, Independence Township.

The veteran craftmaker, owner of The Country Mouse, has mastered the arts of quilting, lace-making, spinning, soap-making and natural dying, and she will be part of the upcoming Crafts & Cider Festival, Sept. 17, 18 and 19 from noon to 6 p.m. in Clarkston's Village Park on Depot Road.

Forced by fate to live in the 20th Century, she'll filter in and out of the 1700s and 1800s, and toy with the lives women lived then.

"I love it," she laughs, surrounded by handmade cathedral pillows, quilts, pincushions and potholders.

"I want to learn as many of the traditional handcrafts of the 1700s and 1800s as I can. I appreciate electricity and indoor plumbing, and want it there when I want it, but I really like that old stuff."

Patti says it goes back to an eighth-grade assignment: To learn the family's genealogy.

"I studied the times in depth and learned what people did back then, how they lived and what they did. My interest spread into traditional handcrafts," she said.

Years later, while driving to work via Woodward Avenue, Patti would use time at a stoplight to needle-point cushions and brainstorm for the business. It evolved from a free-time hobby to a full-time firm, and she quit her job as secretary.

Special for the Crafts & Cider Festival is Patti's design of red apples on white cathedral pillows, E.T. pillows with "phone home" and, for the early shopper, Christmas pillows.

Prices range from $4.50 for potholders to $35 for a flower basket wallhanging.

Piled high are Patti's handmade pillows; cathedral pattern, E.T. the movie star, Christmas pattern and the red-apple pattern designed exclusively for the Crafts & Cider Festival.

They'll add their little bit to Crafts & Cider

By Marilyn Trumper

Think small when you think Lilliput Interiors Ltd.

Owners Winnie Taylor and Susan Aulger do. The pair make and sell miniatures, everything from their original Pac-Man suckers to upholstered stuffed chairs and couches, and to dentures. Yes dentures.

And their wares will be sale at the upcoming Crafts & Cider Festival in Clarkston Village's Park.

Both Independence Township residents and members of the sorority Beta Sigma Phi, Susan drew Winnie's name one Christmas as her "secret sister."

Knowing Winnie's penchant for miniatures, Susan began the shopping hunt.

"She only got five of the miniatures," Susan said, laughing. "I kept the rest."

Their love of the small drew the pair together and they began Lilliput Interiors.

Susan's husband Alan, a licensed contractor, makes the puzzle-like portable rooms and shadowboxes. The rooms fit together, some come with outside siding, to make a dollhouse.

Her 73-year-old father William Hutton, a retired upholsterer, makes the couches and chairs and has been featured in miniature magazines.

Small is the key word.

"What's really terrible is when you spend hours making something then drop it in the shag carpeting. That means a new bag in the vacuum cleaner and a go-through on the carpet until it's found," Susan laughed. "The work is so small we're blind."

Prices vary from 50 cents for a Pac-Man sucker to $200 for period furniture.

Susan Aulger and Winnie Taylor, owners of Lilliput Interiors Ltd., showoff a teeny-tiny bed—their creation. The Independence Township residents revel in the small, making and selling miniatures.

Some Christmas cheer in miniature.

I shall always remember
'Twas the seventeenth
And the month was Sept.
We both said I do
And began a New Life
A Happy Husband
And a wonderful wife
As the years go by
Our love is still strong
With the Lord as our guide
How could we go wrong
Yes, we had many ups
And downs just a few
That's a way of Life
And I'm glad it's with you
The world will go on
When we are not here
So just for now and many

Monica's baton flies

By Marilyn Trumper

Monica Schramm can't count the number of times the silver-handled baton has flown up in the air spinning wildly then come flying down at high speed with its hard white-rubber tips landing soundly on her head.

The 10-year-old Andersonville Elementary fifth-grader giggles from a face full of freckles and flips her long brown pigtails to the side.

A few whacks to the head and a few purple and green bruises are nothing compared to the glint of a golden trophy; like the 300 that decorate the front room window, stereo cabinet, TV stand and basement of the Schramm house on Andersonville Road in Springfield Township.

June Lauer of Ortonville says her pupil's a natural.

"Taking lessons was my mom's idea," Monica said. "I started four years ago. I practice three or four hours a day in the summer when it's nice and one or two in the winter when there's less daylight."

The backyard patio is Monica's practice area, and her mom Billie says the petite high-stepper's yet to sacrifice a garage or kitchen window.

Willingly she dons a glittering costume and shows her stuff. She's Michigan's current "Most Beautiful" in baton competition.

"There's really a lot for a little girl to remember," Monica's mom said. "She has to square her corners, keep her knees high, point her toes, watch the judge, have good posture and smile. And that's just the one step."

Monica doesn't care.

Competition in the baton lets her dress with flash, wear makeup, travel all over the United States with her mom and meet people.

A lot of excitement for a 10-year-old.

But not as much as winning.

"Yeah," she smiles. "I still get excited when I win a trophy."

In the backyard shade, 10-year-old Monica Schramm, Michigan's current "Most Beautiful," flips and throws and spins the baton that's won her over 300 trophies. She's been described as a natural by her teacher, June Lauer.

Country Cords expands

In a time when many retail businesses are struggling to survive, Country Cords has expanded with a brand new area devoted to a larger newborn and infant department complete with a crib collection, gift items in all price ranges and a soon-to-be added baby gift registry. "That's what everyone said. They're really pleased—so many people are dropping out that it's nice to see somebody expanding," said Country Cords owner Sandle Bruce. Standing in a portion of the new addition are Sandle and salesperson Cathie Arnould (left). The shop, located in the Clarkston Emporium at the corner of Main Street and Depot Road in downtown Clarkston, continues its tradition of offering quality children's clothing for infants, toddlers, girls to size 14 and boys to size 20. The sales staff has been expanded to three full-time clerks.

Green light for country eatery

A new restaurant in Springfield Township moved one step closer to becoming a reality last week when site plans for the building were approved by township board members after much debate.

The future country-western style restaurant is to be built by Russell Elkins on a 13-acre parcel near the I-75, Holly Road exit in Springfield Township.

At its monthly meeting, held Sept. 8, the board approved the plans after clarifying with Elkins a number of revisions that were suggested by the planning commission, said Collin Walls, Springfield Township supervisor.

Approval of the site plans now gives Elkins the green light to begin construction as soon as he acquires the necessary building permit. The restaurant plans include a Phase II and III, with Phase II involving the development of a hotel.

Oodles of dolls

All the animals and dolls have names, like Fi Fi La Peu, the skunk, held by Henrietta McIlquham, the chairperson of the project. Many of their creations are one-of-a-kind.

They got out their needles, scissors and thread last September, and stitched for a year on oodles of dolls, stuffed animals and doll furniture to sell this summer. About 25 members of the Church of the Resurrection's Episcopal Church Women will put their wares up for sale this weekend, on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 17, 18 and 19, from noon to 6 p.m. all three days. They can be found in front of Rudy's parking lot at the southeast corner of Main and Washington streets in downtown Clarkston. Prices range from $1.50 to $30. All proceeds go toward church projects.

All the hair and all the faces on the dolls were handsewn by Dorothy Hagerty who puts the finishing touches on a duo of old seafaring salts who come with plastic boats.

Muppet fan

There was so much to see that 16-month-old Marie Farhner kept bumping her nose on the glass surrounding displays at the Detroit Institute of Arts' exhibitions, "Puppets: Art and Entertainment" and "The Art of the Muppets." Marie was accompanied by her grandparents, Harry and Donna Fahrner of Clarkston, who called the 350 puppets "worth seeing." The exhibits are open now through Sunday, Oct. 24, on Tuesdays and Thursdays through Sundays from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., and on Wednesdays from 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Admission is $3 for adults and $1.50 for children 12 and under. An hour-long videotaped program, "Here Come the Muppets" with commentary by Jim Henson and Kermit, is free at noon each day in the South Court Screening Room. Also free is a live demonstration, "The Bob Brown Puppets of Washington, D.C.," scheduled daily at posted times. Advance reservations for the exhibition are recommended. Call 832-2730 and use a charge card (there is a 50-cent service charge) or mail three alternate dates and times with your phone number, a check payable to Ticket Office/DIA and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Puppets/Detroit Institute of Arts, 5200 Woodward, Detroit, MI 48202. Group rates are also available.

FOURTH OF FOUR EDITIONS

Timeless photo wins birthday contest

The cover:

The serenity and beauty of Clarkston's Parke Lake at dawn was captured by photographer Lucia Wilford, a village resident. She snapped the picture in mid-July, and the artistic effort won her first place in the general category of the photography contest to honor Clarkston's 150th birthday co-sponsored by The Clarkston News and the Clarkston Community Historical Society. The original photo was taken in color, its subtle tints of green and gray capturing the feeling of a misty morning in the peaceful town. The other winners' works are on Pages 10, 11 and 16.

Events that changed the town

Bob Jones and Dick Morgan share their memories

By Kathy Greenfield

The fires in Clarkston's business district in 1927, 1939, 1943 and 1958; the bank robbery in 1932; and the night the Mill Pond dam went out in 1941—all are events long-time local residents remember like they happened yesterday.

Bob Jones and Dick Morgan got together recently to record their memories of the Clarkston disasters.

Their friendship goes back years—Morgan was born only a few miles from the village and his family moved to the town in 1926 when he was 12. Jones was 14 in 1928 when his family came to Clarkston.

Not all they remember, of course, has to do with disasters, and the men reminisced a bit about things that happened when they were growing up, before they moved on to their careers as Clarkston businessmen. Now retired, Jones was the president of the Clarkston State Bank, and for 50 years Morgan has owned and operated Morgan's Service Station at the corner of Main and Church streets.

"We were always downtown. All the boys from Clarkston came downtown all the time," Jones said.

"The kids did different things downtown then than they do now," said Morgan. "Very, very few of the kids had vehicles—those who did were working or fortunate—so the kids had to find something to do."

They remember Cheeseman's ice cream shop, and sledding down Depot Road hill that was closed to traffic during winter months. In warm weather, a game called "Chase" sent the boys racing through town chasing whoever was "it."

There were also silent movies show in the Opera House above what is now Hallman's Apothecary. Admission was 10 cents. In the summertime, the business owners showed the silent movies outdoors and they were free.

There were also activities a bit mischievous.

Jones and Morgan remember the coal chute used to gain access to the pool room in the Clarkston Masonic Temple after hours.

"I learned to play pool in the dark. You couldn't have the light on," Jones said, noting that the boys didn't dare risk being caught. "You couldn't see the numbers on the balls. I didn't know there were numbers on the balls until I was 25!"

The end of October was another treasured time.

"Halloween night brought out the kid in all of us, and even when we were adults we went out trick or treating," said Jones. "Halloween was a super night for the rough-tough kids in Clarkston. We were angels the rest of the year, but Halloween brought out the worst in us."

They talked about hoisting cars on top of buildings and filling up the four corners of the town with farm animals and assorted goods.

"Of course, we were never involved in any of that," Morgan said, grinning.

The years passed, and Jones and Morgan's friendship was cemented when they married women who had attended school together in Drayton Plains. Uldene Jones and Dora Morgan are lifetime friends, the men said.

They swapped a few more memories.

"The businessmen downtown when we were kids were an average of about 40 years old. We thought they were old, old men," said Jones, and they always wore shirts and ties.

"To me they were really, really something," he said. "They were old men and they really, really acted old. Years ago, men acted older quicker. They were law. You didn't sass them. They were the old patriarchs."

A test of memory is provided by Morgan.

"Can you remember..." He grins. "I almost think you can't... The potato chip factory in Clarkston?"

It was located where a portion of the Clarkston Mills Mall now sits, on West Washington Street, southwest of the alley, at a time when potatoes were a common Clarkston crop.

Ready to keep swapping past experiences, Jones and Morgan together moved on to happenings that changed Clarkston's history.

This photo, taken in 1926 or '27, shows what the block looked like before the 1927 fire destroyed the frame buildings on the east side of Main Street. Among the businesses then were Dunstan Meat Market, Landl-Ronk Groceries and Dry Goods, and the H & H Pool Room.

THE 1927 FIRE

In October 1927 fire consumed four frame structures located between the Maccabee Temple and the Terrace building on the east side of Main Street. The fire was stopped from spreading to the wooden frame Terrace Building by an alley that still exists next to Tierra Arts & Design located in a portion of the old Terrace Building.

Jones did not live in Clarkston, but people talked about the fire for years afterwards, so most of his memories are through others.

Morgan was a schoolboy attending a one-room schoolhouse called the Clarkston Station School. It was located at Andersonville and White Lake roads.

"Jean Lowry was our teacher," Morgan said. "She had an old touring car. She allowed five or six boys to come in the car and look at the smoldering ashes."

"That was the big thing, to see all the businesses gone."

Later, Morgan heard about the role Doris Hursfall played in the event. She was a telephone operator working in the Terrace Building when the fire broke out.

"She stayed by that phone and called for help until the heat drove her out of there."

The stores had burned down, but that didn't mean the shops had to close, Jones said. Most of them found temporary quarters in other buildings in town, including the township hall then located next to the Clarkston State Bank Building that now houses attorneys' offices.

"It wasn't like it is today. One of the business people was on the township board. It was just normal," said Morgan.

And Jones noted the tradition of people helping people.

"Heck, I worked in every store in town practically," he said, explaining that when he was president of the bank, business owners would phone and ask him to tend their shops if they were called out of town unexpectedly.

THE 1932 BANK ROBBERY

The date was July 16, 1932. Jones, then a bank teller, was on the last day of his vacation, so his memories have to do with events that followed the hold-up and what other people told him about the actual robbery. Morgan was in town, tending his gas station.

Morgan began his recollections with something that happened a couple of weeks before.

"It was on a Saturday evening. These boys, one of them was in the station. He had a Model A Ford Roadster and he wanted to trade a part for a part. He sat there on the drive, and all this time he's talking about the bank and talking about the bank, and then he went over there."

Morgan made the connection later when details of the robbery came out, for on July 16, another Saturday night, the Model A was nowhere in sight.

The blaring burglar alarm and guns blasting alerted the town that something was wrong. The bandits rushed to the '32 Chevrolet and drove off amid a spray of gun shots, and they disappeared. Morgan watched from the corner where his service station is located.

Mr. Huntley, who owned the drug store in town, grabbed his deer rifle.

"He gets out in the middle of the road, and he shot twice. One of the bullets lodged in the back of the front seat, and the other one went through the car,"

This photo from the early 1930s shows how the bank looked when the robbery took place.

Morgan said, and he's still amazed that no one was shot.

The car continued its fast pace out of town, heading left on Waldon Road. Later, it was learned the trio of thieves drove to the hidden Model A, changed their clothes to look like country bumpkins and took off to a farm in north Lapeer, passing unsuspecting police officers hunting for the bandits.

Jones, who was on vacation the day of the robbery, learned what went on in the bank from teller Ray Ainsley and Isabel King Bullen, who was on vacation from college and subbing for Jones.

"One stayed in the car out front, and two went into the bank. One guy herded the seven customers into the cashier's office and the other guy climbed over the tellers' cage and when the employees looked around, they were looking at a gun," Jones said.

All the money from the cash drawers was taken and they forced Ainsley to open the vault where they cleaned out the safe. Two shots were fired in the vault, but they both hit the floor.

Despite efforts to stop the thieves and searches by police for them, nothing happened until that fall.

"A young farm boy from Lapeer came in the bank and said he wanted to talk to the manager of the bank," said Jones who was there. "He was the neighbor in north Lapeer to the bandits and he said, 'I've got to squeal on them, because after they told me about robbing the Clarkston State Bank, I had to go on a job with them so I would keep my mouth shut.'"

After the information was passed on to police, Oakland County Sheriff Grennen and Deputy Sheriff Tedder picked up Ainsley and bank President Dave Teggerdine so identifications could be made, and they headed to Lapeer.

"When they got to the farmhouse, Tedder went in the front door, and Grennen went in the back door, and the bandits killed Deputy Tedder and wounded Grennen.

"Lapeer County officers then took charge and Ainsley and Teggerdine took Grennen to the Lapeer Clarkston's first uniformed police officer, Floyd Kimball, was hired in 1935. "He came into town and decided we needed a police force and he needed a job," says Bob Jones. Kimball had his own uniform and equipment that included a hospital. In the shoot-out, one of the bandits was also killed.

"Grenner died in the hospital and a few months later bank President Teggerdine died. Most people thought it was from the shock.

"The money was recovered in a manure pile on the farm and the other two bandits were apprehended and sent to prison."

The money had been replaced at the bank by the insurance company right after the robbery, and the bonding company sold the farm, equipment and horses, Jones said, although he's not certain how the money was handled because the trio of thieves had been involved in other robberies.

THE 1939 FIRE

The three frame buildings that once stood on the northwest corner of Main and Washington streets burned to the ground in 1939. The fire started in the Clarkston Venetian Blind Co. that faced Washington Street and backed up to the alley. The highly flammable lacquer used on the wooden blinds fed the fire, that was marked with explosions. Rudy's Market was totally destroyed by the blaze.

"Pictures don't lie about the ruins of what you could see," Morgan said. He remembers fire fighters constantly hosing the adjoining brick building then owned by Louis Walter that now houses The Clarkston News.

"The fire was so hot coming over the top of the building I thought the bank was going," Jones said, and all the bookkeeping material was removed from the bank so it would be safe.

"We thought the whole town was going. The only thing that saved the Caribou Inn (located across Washington Street) and the rest of the town was that there was no wind."

The fire burned for two or three days, and the men remember a large hole in the spot for a long time.

The temporary coffer dam was put into place under Henry Ford's instructions when work began toward building a small Ford plant in Clarkston where the Clarkston Mills Mall now stands. The dam was the first step in cleaning out the Mill Pond to increase its electricity-producing power, but a storm caused it to give way. Townspeople were not upset, according to Morgan and Jones, but called the dam breaking an "act of God."

Ever wonder how deep the Clarkston Mill Pond is? After the dam broke, work continued to clean it out. A wooden road was built and trucks hauled away the muck. Some of it was gladly accepted in Clarkston residents' yards for rich filler material.

THE 1943 FIRE

The Beattie Ford Garage at the southeast corner of Main and Church streets was destroyed by fire in 1943.

Morgan saw the glow of the fire from his home, but his attempts to get into town and his business were thwarted by fire fighters who were letting no one into town because of the danger of explosions.

"They just advised people to stay away. The only ones there were hosing down the fire, and it was so hot the water was boiling," Morgan said.

Jones was across the street in township hall working on election returns.

"It was midnight and we were counting ballots, and somebody yelled, 'Oh my gosh!' Beatties was on fire," Jones said. "All you could see was the metal door on fire. I never would have believed it, a metal door. Inside it was an inferno. I never saw such a hot fire in my life."

Cars, wreckers and equipment were lost in the fire, Jones said, and the business later moved to Waterford Township, the present location of Beattie Interiors.

Lang and Poole bought the property and built a Chrysler-Plymouth dealership. Part of that building still exists as the Clarkston Corners shopping mall.

THE 1958 FIRE

Built in 1872 as the Demerest Inn, the Caribou Inn was damaged by fire in 1958. It was later torn down, and the site became the location of the village parking lot on the northwest corner of Main and Washington streets.

"It was a highly controversial building," Jones said of the Caribou Inn. Purchased by a Pontiac businessman, the inn became a pizza parlour with large signs.

"It looked like the dickens," Jones said.

"Big red and green signs all over," Morgan added.

"It still didn't go over and it became an eyesore," Jones said. "He couldn't do anything with it and eventually the village thought they would buy it for a parking lot."

"After a few public meetings, the town decided to buy it, but he continued to up the price until it became impossible for the two groups to get together. The village offer was withdrawn and it sat idle for some time."

There had been several smaller fires, but the last one was in 1958, and it was the biggest.

Morgan was a volunteer fire fighter then.

After the fire, the village condemned the property and purchased it for the parking lot, Jones said.

This photo is of one fire fighters dousing one of several smaller blazes that occurred in the Caribou Inn before the last one in 1958. After the '58 fire, the building was condemned by the village and torn down to make way for a parking lot.

Events that changed Clarkston

THE NIGHT THE DAM WENT OUT

The roar that resulted when the Clarkston Mill Pond dam went out was unforgettable. The date was Sunday, April 20, 1941.

"When that let loose, you knew something was wrong," said Morgan. "I was there minutes after—the whole town was there."

Everything was flooded all the way down to Pontiac, Jones said.

The events that led up to the dam breaking began after Henry Ford appeared in town. His plan was to build a small, water-powered plant where the Clarkston Mills Mall now stands. The first step was to build a coffer dam, clean out the Mill Pond and improve the flow of the electricity-producing water.

According to Jones, the townspeople were not upset by the event. "That was an act of God," he says about the heavy rainstorm that washed away the temporary dam. "After it was all over, they were glad."

"The only thing that went wrong was the wells were shallow, and after that happened, most of them went out," said Morgan. "Ford payed for a lot of wells for people who couldn't afford them."

Ford then cleaned out the Mill Pond with 20 trucks on a wooden roadway built along the bottom of the waterway.

There was another bonus, one good for gardens and lawns that was hauled out of the Mill Pond by the trucks.

"Everyone had a lot of muck in their backyards from it," Morgan said.

"Everyone had it," Jones added. "Ford was tickled to death to give it to you."

Morgan also remembers onions in the swamp located south of town near the Depot Road and White Lake Road intersection. Ford wanted to show what his tractors could do.

"He ploughed that whole swamp. There wasn't a bit of vegetation in it," he said, turning to Jones with the recollection. "Don't you remember those tractors getting stuck? He'd have to bring in something bigger to get them out. He planted onions in it. Everything was gone. There wasn't a tree left."

The experiment was a success with a flourishing onion field for a season. Then, the natural vegetation took over again.

The visibility of Main Street and buildings adjoining Independence Township Hall captured first place in the historical category for Joyce

Winner of the second-place prize for a photo of historical significance was Lucia Wilford of Cincinnati, Ohio. The original, in color, captures the brightness of springtime with a tree in the background in full-blossom and flowers blooming in pots on the porch of the Wilford home on Main Street. It was taken in mid-May.

One of Clarkston's oldest

The original structure was said to have been temporary, but as time went on it proved to be just fine for doing business. Additions were made and it still stands today in its original location on the west side of Main Street between the village parking lot and the stream leading from the Mill Pond to Parke Lake. When the building was purchased about 12 years by the present owners, Daisy Dowling and Jim and Gini Schultz, a board in the front of the shop carried the date of 1864 and the back of the building is believed to be older by at least 20 years. Now it houses a shop called Main Street Antiques Country Store, and it has been an antique shop for over 50 years. In the structure's past are other business ventures including Willson Vliet's cabinet and carpentry shop. The photo at right is believed to have been taken some time between 1910 and 1925. It shows cabinet shop owner Willson Vliet (left) and some of his friends enjoying a game of cards in front of the large door that opened the front of the building. Also in the photo is Joseph Tindall (center, with beard). The photo above was probably taken in the early 1900s. Another business structure existed then on the building's north side.

Now it wouldn't be the same without him

49 years ago, Rudy came to town

By Marilyn Trumper

When Rudy Schwarze arrived in the United States in 1933 at the age of 24, little did he know the impact his village market would have on Clarkston.

Rudy, now 74, marks his life with a half century in Clarkston, and he has affected the lives of generations.

Four times, he and wife Elsa opened grocery stores, filled the shelves, butchered the meat, weighed the produce and rang the register, working night and day, seven days a week alongside their two sons.

Fate dealt a cruel hand and two of the four stores were destroyed by fire. Without insurance, the couple lost all they owned.

"Tenacity and German bullheadedness" saw the pair through, according to Rudy, as he thinks back on those black days.

Today Rudy's Market flourishes at 9 S. Main in a fieldstone building, the former Kroger store.

"With insurance up to here," he laughs, drawing a line across his neck.

Dressed in striped pants with a print shirt, the routine uniform of a white apron and white paper Eckrich hat, the heavy, slow-moving senior sits on a plastic lawn chair insulated with a cloth cushion and scans the pages of a major daily paper.

A nearby walk-in freezer numbs the legs and chills the blood of novices to the cold.

Rudy dismisses it. After 50 years behind the counter, cold's no longer felt.

Finishing with an over-the-phone order from a veteran customer, Rudy begins his story.

"I opened my first store in Clarkston in 1933. It burned down in 1936, three years later. I was located where my parking lot is now, next to a venetian blind store. That guy was considered a bad risk. He'd had several fires in a year. So, because I was next to him, they canceled my insurance.

"My wife's uncle had that first store. He lost $2,000 in two months and asked me, 'Rudy, want to take it over?' I said, 'Sure, why not?'"

That was a success through "long hours and hard work," he said, peering through glasses, continuing the story in a recognizable German accent.

"I remember the night it was burning. I was back in the alley watching it go...and the supervisor of the township came up to me: 'Rudy,' he said, 'you have a lot of friends in this town. We want you to set up shop above township hall.'"

Schwarze, the 74-year-old Main Street celebrity, in business in Clarkston for 50 years.

Honorable mention winners in birthday contest

In springtime, Canadian geese cut their paths across the Clarkston Mill Pond in a photo by Lucia Wilford of Clarkston which won an honorable mention award in the historic category. The home in the background belongs to the Cushmans. In the original photograph, the orange color of the house is reflected in the Mill Pond waters, offering striking contrast.

A flag waving in the sky symbolizes what Clarkston means to many—a town that is the way towns ought to be in America. The photo won an honorable mention award in the general category for Joyce Sadoway of Independence Township. The photo was taken in front of Independence Township Hall, 90 N. Main.

The homes along the west shore of Clarkston's Mill Pond are reflected in its calm waters in the photo taken in the springtime by Lucia Wilford of Clarkston. The picture won an honorable mention award in the architectural category. In color, the original shows what the homes look like before leaves appear on the trees, but after the grass turns green.

Young writers show enthusiasm, good ideas

Choosing the top three was a really 'tough job' agree the judges, Jackson Byers and Pat MacArthur

"This was a tough job," said Jackson Byers, a judge for The Clarkston News Young Writers Contest, and the other judge, Pat MacArthur, readily agreed. They selected the three winners in the contest

Winners' works

FIRST PRIZE Why I Like Clarkston By Kellee Duty

I have always thought of Clarkston as a nice, sweet, cozy little town. I always feel very comfortable in Clarkston.

I have only lived in Clarkston for two years and already I love it and I am very attached to it.

There are so many reasons why I love Clarkston. The first, and I think most important, is that the people are all very friendly and everybody seems to be very happy and proud to live in Clarkston. I think that as long as you're happy, that is all that really matters and counts.

I love to walk uptown with my little brother Tommy and my parents. In the summer, we stop at Sweet Sue's and go to Deer Lake, and in the winter we stop at the Bake Shop and have hot chocolate. And there are the restaurants like Foxys and the Clarkston Cafe.

But most of all, I love to go shopping in Clarkston. That is real fun.

One nice thing about Clarkston that I don't know that other towns have is all the special little happenings, like parades and concerts down in the park.

Another thing is Clarkston having their own newspaper. I think that is terrific.

There is a color I think of and it is yellow, because it is so bright, just like my little town of Clarkston.

I know I'll always believe in the saying "Home Sweet Home" because that is exactly how I feel about my cozy home of Clarkston!

SECOND PRIZE What I Would Like Clarkston to Be By Pam Baal

What I would like Clarkston to be is the identical village that it is. I wouldn't want Clarkston to change for anything in the world.

Every time you visit the village you see something new and more exciting than the last time you came.

Clarkston has it all. It's a place to experience new things, meet new people and buy new clothes, or anything else. There are places to eat, places to hang-out, and buildings where craft work and many other things are done.

The buildings are so old looking, it helps bring out more warmth than you had already felt for the entire village.

Aside from all the shopping and the pitter-patter from everything going on, there is a very quiet side of Clarkston. The pleasant side, the way to treasure the peace and quiet the respectful village will give you.

The environment is wonderful and is filled with love and joy. Clarkston is peaceful and adventurous, and I think it's terrific!

THIRD PRIZE Why I Like Clarkston By Jane Selent

I like Clarkston because it's clean
And because most people aren't mean.

I also like it for all the neat shops
Where I make most of my stops.

The Arts and Crafts Show and July 4th Parade are always a blast

I sure hope Clarkston's special events last.

Clarkston's such a great delite
Because it's such a pretty site.

But I wish everyone could see That Clarkston's a great place to be!

designed to give tribute to Clarkston's 150th birthday celebration.

The writers had a choice of two themes: "Why I Like Clarkston" or "What I Would Like Clarkston to Be." Other than a limit of 250 words on length, the only instruction was that the third- through ninth-graders had to write about the village.

Byers is the president of the Clarkston Village Council. An engineer with Buick Motor Division of General Motors Corp., Byers lives in the village.

"These kids really did an outstanding job—a lot of enthusiasm and good ideas," he said. "The depth and perception these kids have about what really makes the village an attractive place to live is great."

Also a village resident, MacArthur is an English teacher at Clarkston High School.

"The thing that impressed me was that a lot of the things I like, that an adult would, you'd think kids wouldn't," she said. "When you read these, you see that the children have the same impression of Clarkston that adults do—that they appreciate the same things about the town."

In addition to the top three winners, the judges awarded seven honorable mentions. The Clarkston Community Historical Society has agreed to provide copies of "Heritage," the hardcover history book of Clarkston published by the society in 1976, to all 10 winners.

Winning first place and $25 is Kellee Duty, 11, who lives on Eastlawn Avenue, Independence Township. Second-place winner of $10 is Pam Baal, an eighth-grader, of Cherrywood Street, Independence Township. The third-place prize of $5 goes to Jane Selent, a Clarkston Junior High School seventh-grader.

Honorable mention awards go to Cindy Baal, Sandy Coulter, Christine Downs, Wesley Harden, Kelley Miller, Tony Richardson and Kim Toretta.

The prizes are to be presented to the winners of The Clarkston News Young Writers Contest on Sunday, Sept. 19, at 2 p.m. at the Crafts & Cider Festival in the Clarkston Village Park.

Clarkston's been home to Robertsons since 1880

By Al Zawacky

It's not a coincidence that Lucille Robertson lives on a street named Robertson Court.

Enter a bit of history.

It was over 100 years ago—in 1880, to be exact—that a physician bought and settled on some property located in the northern end of Clarkston village around Parke Lake.

A native of Glasgow, Scotland, he studied medicine in New York before coming to Michigan. He served his country with honor in the Civil War, serving as a surgeon with the 8th Michigan Cavalry.

Upon returning to Michigan after the war, he eventually settled in Clarkston, where he led an active and productive life until his death in 1901 at the age of 73.

His name: Dr. Charles Gray Robertson—grandfather of Mrs. Lucille Robertson's late husband, who bore the same name.

Yet it wasn't a Robertson's idea to name the street Robertson Court, according to Mrs. Robertson.

When grandfather Robertson's son Milton Gray Robertson decided to subdivide the property his father had owned, he named the street running through it Parke Lake Drive.

But when the village fathers platted the land, they decided on a more appropriate name in honor of one of their community's leading families—the name Clarkstonites are familiar with today.

Robertson Court. It's been Lucille Robertson's home since she arrived in Clarkston in 1928.

"When I first moved to Clarkston, I remember so many women coming up to me and saying how they remembered Dr. Robertson—how he would take off his coat and stay right by their sides until they had their babies," she says.

Originally from St. Johns, Mich., Lucille Robertson moved first to Pontiac before coming to Clarkston.

She's lived all of her life since then in two houses on Robertson Court, witnessing numerous physical changes in the town she calls home.

And yet—Clarkston's heart and soul are alive, well and unchanged. Through the years, Mrs. Robertson has grown to love her home more than ever.

"Nice people seem to gravitate here," she says happily. "There are so many wonderful people here, I have so many wonderful neighbors."

Even the rugged winters don't dissuade her.

"My boys think that maybe I should go to Florida in the wintertime, but I just don't want to be anyplace else.

"I've got the nicest young boy shoveling my walk, and friends to drive me when I need to get someplace. I just put on my boots and away I go."

Mrs. Robertson's son, who bears the Charles Gray name of his great-grandfather and father, feels the same way. He currently makes his home on Hummingbird Lane, but each trip to his mother's house on Robertson Court generates happy memories of his boyhood.

"This is the darndest neighborhood, it always had been," he says. "We were always having picnics together, Christmas parties—everyone was always so close and friendly."

Before he passed away four years ago, Mrs. Robertson's husband was the owner of a number of feed stores, including Regal Feed and Supply on Dixie

Son Charles Gray and mother Lucille peruse through a book of Civil War history published in the 1880s, which includes a reference to the honorable service of Dr. Charles Gray Robertson. Lucille's son is the third Charles Gray Robertson in the family line. His son also carries the name of his father, grandfather and great-grandfather.

Dr. Charles Gray Robertson: Native of Scotland, physician, Civil War vet, leading citizen, and the man who lent his name to Clarkston's Robertson Court. Robertson was 32 when the photo was taken in Pontiac, making the year about 1860.

Forty-seven years have passed since these photos were taken in the backyard of the Robertsons' Clarkston home. Lucille and Gray Robertson are holding their son Charles. The date is August 1935.

Highway in Waterford.

Mrs. Robertson still misses him a lot, but she has continued her active way of life, enjoying her family and home town.

An avid bowler, she has also been an active dance club member back to the days when the club used to meet up above Hallman's Apothecary.

"I love my home, I love my boys—I have so much to be grateful for, I could just bawl talking about it," she says thoughtfully.

"I just want to keep up my good health, that's all I ask."

-49 years ago, Rudy came to town-

"So I did. That was down the street where the lawyers' offices are now. They charged me $15 a month rent.

"No kidding. It was a deal."

In 1941, Rudy's stock and customers had grown, and he moved to expand to a bigger store in the Emporium at the corner of Main Street and Depot Road.

That's where a second fire destroyed all he'd worked to build.

The Kroger store, unable to pay its rent, offered its stock and site to the grocer.

"I bought the building and moved in," Rudy said, speaking of the current site. "I've made a good living at it. I used to sell chickens, fresh eggs and butter from area farmers, and I had my own slaughterhouse in Ortonville behind Arrant Ford.

"When I opened here, there was a grocery store across the street. Within two months I drew all the people over to my side," he laughed.

Clarkston's honored their celebrity grocer with "Rudy's Day," when children turned out dressed in paper hats, glasses and white aprons to copy their friend.

The roots of the Schwarze family grow deep.

When someone died, Rudy would prepare food for the family gathering after the funeral.

"There are a lot of people in this town that would have gone hungry if it hadn't been for Rudy," many have uttered, talking about charge accounts made available to struggling young families.

Charge accounts?

For the seasoned customer that privilege is still available at Rudy's.

As is home delivery.

Orders over the phone.

Always his pockets are filled with sticks of gum and suckers for youngsters.

Barefoot teens are never turned away.

His butchers welcome the chance to slice special cuts of meat.

There's old-time shopping and service at Rudy's Market, still as personal as it was 50 years ago.

Germany's skyrocketing inflation spurned the young Rudy to leave his family and go to the U.S.

He remembers paying for a 90-pound boiled calf with 90 pounds of money.

He remembers his sister Anna who now lives in Holland.

And Essen, West Germany, always home.

For him America was life wound around the grocery store, making a living and building a home.

There'll be no retirement, Rudy said.

"I'll just lay down right here and die."

Congratulations, Clarkston
