Judge rules against group home

By Marilyn Trumper

Vol. 58 - No. 6 Wed., Sept. 22, 1982

The state is expected to appeal a circuit court decision that finds an established group home for retarded adults in violation of Lake Oakland Woods subdivision deed restrictions.

The opinion, issued by Judge Hilda Gage last week, brings to the first plateau a two-year legal battle by residents of the Independence Township subdivision. The residents contend the home for six mentally retarded adults violates the deed restrictions that limit use of the homes to those related by blood, marriage or legal adoption.

In a six-page opinion, Gage said the deed restrictions do not violate the United States Constitution as challenged by the state. The fact the deed is so specific proved the pivot of her decision, Gage said.

State attorney Jon Garret is expected to seek an injunction to prevent the group home at 5127 Timber Ridge Trail from eviction pending the appeal.

The subdivision residents' attorney, Donald Schuster, branded the decision, "landmark," and was pleased with his first-round victory.

"If we had lost, it certainly would have been the first time a deed restriction was ever thrown out for violation of public policy," Schuster said.

"The charges of discrimination bugged me the most. (The retarded) never sought equal rights, they sought superior rights under the guise of the afflicted.

"I think it's important it be emphasized we welcome anybody. Take all the minorities everyone typically discriminates against: a black, Jewish, elderly, retired woman. She could live here. The only thing we ask is that she live by herself or with her family,"

Teacher contract still undecided

By Kathy Greenfield

Negotiations on the Clarkston schools teachers' contract have slowed to a trickle. But, it is likely more action will be taken toward settlement after Oct. 1, the date the official enrollment tally for the school district is made.

It has been decided, said Superintendent Milford Mason, that the contract will cover one year, down from the three-year contract between the Clarkston Education Association (CEA) and the school district that expired in August.

"It's too difficult to predict ahead," he said.
"We're trying to commit ourselves to within our income"

There are still two areas that remain under debate—salaries and class size. The negotiating teams met once last week and one meeting is planned this

Ten teachers at Clarkston High School have more than 180 students, with 180 the limit set in the expired contract, said CEA spokesperson Allen Bartlett, and the dispute of raises or no raises for the teachers remains

"We are looking at avenues for settlement," said Bartlett. "I think the good sign is the teams are meeting. It's just a very slow process, particularly this year.

William Craig, who jointly filed the lawsuit against the home with neighbor Duane Kuzak, was pleased with the victory.

"We're quite excited, although we realize the appeals process will be a long road.

"I still want to stress that we are not opposed to the mentally retarded. We're just not in favor of sacrificing our rights for theirs," he said.

Volunteer fire fighters go on without raises

By Marilyn Trumper

Independence Township's volunteer fire fighters are gearing up to do battle, as the supervisor remains steadfast the township won't be talking raises for oncall fire fighters until the union contract is settled.

In a letter to township hall last week, Independence Township Fire Fighters Association President Dwight Spiker made the second official plea for a retroactive raise from $5 to $9 an hour, a raise that's included in the overall fire department's 1982-83 budget, but not specifically line itemized.

It has been 10 years since the 30-member on-call force has received a raise, according to Spiker.

'No. We're not going to do that. Nothing like that. We're not going to leave anybody hanging. We're just making our pitch to the people."

Businesses, council clash on signs

By Marilyn Trumper

There's a mean game of tug-o-war going on over the proposed sign ordinance between the Clarkston Business Association and the village council with both pulling hard for victory.

Refusing to bend to businesses' pleas to allow overhanging and marquee signs, the council voted 4-2 at the Sept. 13 meeting to return the proposed ordinance back to the planning commission for review.

The move caps years of work to draft an ordinance that outlaws overhanging and marquee (roof) signs. Business owners say they need those signs to advertise and draw customers. The ordinance allows businesses with non-conforming signs to seek one exemption allowing the sign to remain until the property changes owners.

After that, the new owner can go to the zoning board for a variance to allow the sign. In addition, businesses that don't currently have overhanging signs can apply for a variance, but must demonstrate need. Examples of those shops are the Emporium, Sandrella's toy shop and the Clarkskton Mills Mall.

What good is the point in granting me an exemption when the new person who comes in won't be able to have (the overhanging or marquee) sign," challenged Claudia Jakus, owner of Clarkston Travel

"If that's the incentive you're offering then no one is going to change their sign. I know I won't.'

Trustee David Raup solidly opposed an ordinance that would restrict business advertising.

"A sign ordinance is not a tool to make peopole restore their building. Many of these people here tonight do not own their building.

"You're trying to make the mansard roofs disappear. I agree they're ugly. But this is not the way," Raup said to the council.

"I don't believe this ordinance is in the best interest of the business people. If you look uptown you can see the number of businesses that are gone. It's hard to make a buck in this business district. We've got some serious problems.

"I don't want to do anything that would hurt them. I don't think we're being reasonable."

New trustee, Carol Eberhardt, owner of the resale shop One More Time, echoed Raup's concerns.

"If the ordinance is not loosened a bit to something that's more viable, no signs will be chang-

Ronald Galley, owner of The Flower Adventure, pointed to the sign at 6 N. Main advertising a tropical fish store that's been gone for years. The owner there refuses to remove the insert because under the current ordinance he'll forfeit rights to the overhanging sign.

"That fish sign is as much an asinine thing as anything we have here," Galley said. "I would seem to me that anything you can do to help your business district you would do." Trustees Gary Symons and Ruth Basinger voted not to return the ordinance to the planning commission, and after the meeting Symons explained his

"The basic content of the ordinance is reasonable and workable and, quite honestly, I think the planning commission will send it right back to us," Symons said.

"I have gone on record opposing marquee and overhanging signs. The marquee because as they're placed on the building they are not sensitive to the architectural integrity of the building. It's the propagation of one wrong on top of another.

"Overhanging are not an attractive way to communicate signage and are visual clutter."

Trustee Ruth Basinger agreed saying, "The planning commission spent a couple of years on it already. I was willing to accept their findings.'

Floating decoys baffle dog

Wooden decoys placed in the milistream are a tradition, says Dorothy Hyde, wife of the Clarkston Carver. Children are tickled by the scene, and tiny tots sometimes throw bread. But this year is the first time a dog has been fooled. Barking in frustration, the canine couldn't understand why the decoys didn't up and fly away like real ducks do. Watching the encounter from perches on trees are Jeff Galley (left) and Matt Stanley, both of Valley Park Drive, Independence Township.

Delays key complaint against historic board

After almost nine months of existence, the Clarkston Historical Commission finds its meeting time is at a premium and folks are lining up for a chance to make their case.

At the Sept. 13 Clarkston Village Council meeting, Janet Sitar made a plea to revamp the commission's procedure and speed up reviews.

"Their method of review is not timely and someone needs to look at it again and come up with a viable solution to reorganize them from step one," Sitar said.

Since August, Sitar has sought approval to build a chimney on her Church Street home. The initial application was waylaid at the township building department when employes went on vacation.

The next anchor was thrown out when the historical commission struggled to muster a quorum to hear the Sitar case at a special meeting.

According to state law the five-member commission, which meets the third Monday of each month, must approve construction and repairs businesses and outbuildings in the Historic District Commission before a building permit can be issued.

"By this time over three weeks have gone by and right now a meeting has only been tentatively set for Thursday," Sitar said. "This makes it hard on us because we have to begin paying interest on the loan we applied for to do the work whether we use it right away or not. "Also, our contractor has to know what we're going to do. He's scheduling work too.

"Don't get me wrong," Sitar said. "I knew what I was getting into and I think the idea of a historic commission is a good one. But the whole procedure has to run more smoothly.' The council was sympathetic and agreed to review the procedure and to ask the commission to deliver its quarterly report required by law. The report was due in May.

"These are a small group of non-elected people.

with a lot of power. I think you should be keeping better tabs on them," Sitar said.

Since its formation in January the commission has yet to deny a project, according to Chairwoman Jeniffer Radcliff.

"I think the Sitar's case is a rare one and it hasn't been repeated in any of the commission's other reviews," Radcliff said. "I began to process the application as soon as I got it from the building department. I don't think you'd get that kind of service in Royal Oak or Bloomfield or anywhere else.

"We've had so many special meetings that it's difficult to get us all together."

After the meeting, Sitar elaborated her position and said she'll gear up for battle if necessary.

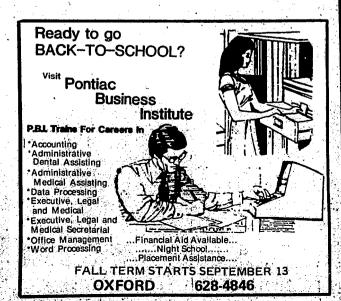

"The real problem is that you have a small group of people with a lot of power. They don't have to maintain these old homes. Maybe aluminum siding is the only way the family can afford to keep up the place," she said.

Zoning law could affect PK

By Marilyn Trumper

Independence Township is weighing passage of a zoning ordinance package that would tighten the strings on review of all future development at the Pine Knob complex.

The proposed amendment scheduled for a public hearing before the planning commission Thursday, Sept. 23, would eliminate a ski resort as a "principal" use and categorize all developments at Pine Knob—the Hamburger Mansion, music theater, golf course and ski lodge—as "conditional" or "special" uses, which traditionally undergo scrutiny for expansion or alteration.

In the past, co-owner Joseph Locricchio has categorized all developments at Pine Knob as "accessory" to the ski lodge. Because there was no procedure to determine if proposed expansions were permissible accessory uses, Fisher said, the result was the planning commission would table a decision and wait first for a determination from the Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA).

Fisher said the amendment is designed to focus on the "issues" so they can first be resolved.

"For example, there was lengthy litigation on La Veranda (restaurant). The issue was whether or not a building permit had been appropriately issued," he said

"In my judgment the litigation floundered without anyone being able to say, 'This use is an appropriate accessory use based on standards X, X and X.' The lawyers didn't have any category.

"The best way," Fisher said, "is to make the determination on a case-by-case basis based on specific criteria set forth in the ordinance to determine if the use is allowable."

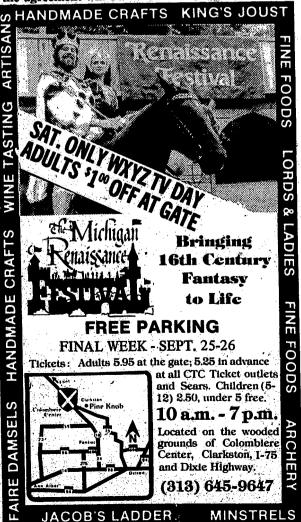

Fire talks fine

It appears township officials and fire fighters have reached a tentative agreement on a contract after nine months of negotiations, but both sides continue to be tight-lipped on specifics.

"It looks good," said Gordon Mason, one of three negotiators for Independence Township Fire Fighters Local 2629. "The township made a verbal offer that looks pretty good. They're supposed to write it up next week and get back to us."

The threat of arbitration has lessened, according to Mason, who said it does not appear that tack will be used this time around.

Supervisor James B. Smith said he is "hopeful" the agreement will be reached.

Fisher points to the expense involved when applicants are forced to go before the zoning board for a use variance or interpretation. The proposed ordinance would classify almost all of Pine Knob as special or conditional use, and eliminate the step at the ZRA

"Maybe this process in the long run will expedite things and make it easier for both sides," Fisher said.

Pine Knob officials could not be reached for comment.

The proposed amendment, with a host of others, is slated for discussion at the Sept. 24 planning commission meeting, which begins at 7:30 p.m. in the Independence Township Hall annex, 90 N. Main, Clarkston.

Clarkston ponders No. 911 for emergency calls

By Marilyn Trumper

Oakland County wants to know how Clarkston village feels about implementation of the emergency number 911. In turn the village is calling on Fire Chief Frank Ronk for recommendations.

Ronk, a two-year veteran of the county's 911 Task Force, has mixed emotions about using the uniform number to summon emergency help.

"I think it's a good idea if its implemented right. It's not a good idea if the (headquarters) are centrally located. The calls come in and are patched out to the different townships.

"I favor having 911 ring directly into the local township fire halls. But then you have four or five different telephone exchanges like 625, 623, 628, and have to make sure they're split to their respective areas. The phone company says it can do this," Ronk

The split would prevent Waterford Township's Emergency Medical Service from answering calls in Independence Township.

Ronk said he favors "E-911" or: "Enhanced 911.

"With E-911 the calls go into a central dispatch that show where the call is coming from. A number is punched and the call goes right to that area," he said. 'That system saves time.

"911 is a good idea only if it's better than the system we have now. If it's parallel, than why have it?" he said.

The council discussed the issue at the Sept. 17 meeting but was hesitant on the benefits.

Past-president Fontie ApMadoc favored the use

"I know I try to keep the emergency numbers at hand so I can use them. Using 911 would make it a lot easier to remember, especially for older people like me," she said. "When you're older and living alone, it's simpler."

Ronald Galley, owner of The Flower Adventure, agreed.

"I think 911 would be a real support to the senior citizens."

Several trustees pointed to the ailing system used in Wayne County and the horror stories of people who've died waiting for emergency help.

After discussion, the council agreed to seek recommendations from the fire chief, the Michigan State Police and the Oakland County Sheriff's Department.

Mill Pondspruceup is his quest

By Marilyn Trumper

James Flemming wants someone, some group, the village council, anyone, to take the initiative and clean up the south end of Clarkston's Mill Pond, land owned by the Clarkston Mills Mall.

At the Sept. 13 meeting, Flemming told the council he'd throw the manpower of the Mill Pond Association into the effort if Trustee Ruth Basinger would agree to head the proposed Lake Beautification Committee.

"We're a lake association and by our bylaws can collect money only to clean up the waters, not the land. If we had the village council behind it would be easier to get money. You are an authorized agency and people would recognize that when we come to call," Flemming said.

Sympathetic to Flemming's request, President Jackson Byers explained the village council can't lend its name to projects involving private property.

But we support what you're trying to do and encourage you. I'd be willing to help. As private citizens we can do anything we want," Byers said. "But as a village council we can't sanction it."

Trustee David Raup agreed.

'I'll help too. I'll get the Cub Scouts to come down on a Saturday and help too. It could be a community project."

Members of the business association proposed

Flemming appear before their next meeting and make the same proposal.

"I think you'll find we'd be very warm to idea," said Laurie Stern, owner of Country Greens. "You have never even approached us and talked to us about your plan.

"And," she asked, "have you approached the people in the mills? You might find they'll be very interested. In fact, I'll put you in touch with them if you like."

Flemming responded.

"I can pick up the phone and call them anytime I like. Their number is in the phone book. I want the village council to take responsibility, the initiative, and clean up that area.

"As far as I'm concerned that's what you're for. I'm surprised the business association hasn't thought of it themselves.

"No, forget it. We'll just leave things the way they are," he said.

After the meeting, Flemming said he would report to the Mill Pond Association and see what tack the group would take.

Letters to editor

A second side to the PK story

It would appear in reading the articles on Pages 1 and 3 of Sept. 15 edition of The Clarkston News that the spokespersons for Pine Knob view the world through terribly distorted lenses.

First is is claimed that the township cannot deny Pine Knob its rights because they do not pay their

While the law provides for for a significant and crippling means by which the township could deny rights to Pine Knob for failure to pay its personal property taxes-padlocking the business-at any time prior to filing of the bankruptcy petition under Chapter 11, the township exercised restraint, and attempted to work out problems by negotiation.

After the filing of the bankruptcy petition, it is the township's understanding that a fairly standard order was entered by the Bankruptcy Judge, requiring all taxes thereafter coming due-1980 and 1981-to be kept current. Again, in the spirit of cooperation, the township exercised restraint and has attempted to negotiate a workout of the problems within the latitude permitted it by law. Second, with respect to the road system under construction, on Aug. 25, the township directed a letter to Pine Knob expressly announcing the township's desire to cooperate with Pine Knob and requesting a disclosure of the specific activities being undertaken.

Pine Knob has never, to this date (Sept. 17), been willing to officially disclose the limits and objectives of the current road project. In fact, in June 1982, referenced by the Pine Knob spokesperson; internal discussions with the supervisor indicated much more than private use.

The irony interwoven into the road circumstance was well illustrated by the actions of the Pine Knob official to whom the Aug. 25 letter was delivered. This letter, seeking cooperation, was torn into pieces by Pine Knob, quite representative figuratively of the response to many other efforts of the township to extend a cooperative hand.

As a third example, following Pine Knob's indication of construction of a comprehensive structural addition to its La Veranda restaurant without seeking appropriate and necessary township approval, the township, rather than pursuing litigation, extended a cooperative effort to expedite site plan review.

One normally expects such cooperative expressions to be received with some message, some understanding that local government in this township seeks to work with its citizens and, specifically, to recognize the investment, effort and dedication of its owners in the development of many outstanding facilities at Pine Knob. No such reception nor understanding by Pine Knob is apparent.

Finally, as regards the matter of the liquor license transfer, it is respectfully suggested that the reporting on this item has been inaccurate.

Regardless of the feelings of one or more members of the township board concerning the failure of Pine Knob to cooperate with the township and/or to fulfill its obligation to pay taxes, the official action taken by the township at its Sept. 7 meeting tabled consideration of the matter in view of the reported position of the State Liquor Control Commission that township consideration was premature.

The township and its officials have duties and responsibilities imposed by law. Attempts to perform these duties and fulfill these responsibilities have clearly been construed by some to be harassment.

If the distorted lenses were removed, the official actions and restraints by the township toward Pine Knob could be viewed in their true light: an effort to ensure compliance with the law in a manner which does not work a hardship upon its citizens and in a spirit of promoting cooperation rather than encouraging litigation.

James B. Smith Supervisor

Editor's Note: The Clarkston News stands by its story on the liquor license transfer.

Some questions for vandals

I would like to address these questions to all the vandals we seem to have in Clarkston.

Did you know it cost nearly $5,000 last year alone to repair the bus seat covers you slit with your knives?

Did you know the gas you keep stealing from the bus garage lot has added up in the hundreds of dollars-not to mention the time and money it takes to repair the fences that you cut?

Did you know that the bus you bombed with eggs in the vicinity of Oak Hill and Reese roads on Friday was brand new, only the second time out, and cost nearly $60,000?

Did you know that your parents, as taxpayers, are paying for all of the above?

"Oh, nothin' much."

We were having these in-depth conversations nightly. This, I thought, is what happens when your children reach their teens. No longer are you told every little detail about their new love in life—the elementary school teacher.

"So, who do you have for geography?"

"I can't remember his name, but he's funny.

'You're staring at my shoes.' "People at school have been laughing at your shoes?"

"Oh, Mother. No. They haven't been."

"I'm sorry. I was just getting desperate for information about school."

The message did eventually get across, although it had always been there-when you want to talk about school, I'm ready to listen to the good, bad or indifferent. I suspect it had something to do with getting back into the routine of school and finally, for my teens, being able to relax a bit. I knew it had all turned around when the

Toughlove: Used when nothing else works

By Kathy Greenfield

Nothing has worked.

"That's the universal cry," says Kay Wellington of Oxford as she explains why people join the parent support group for parents who are troubled by their teenagers' behavior that uses Toughlove principles.

The group is coordinated by Wellington and Lorna Hemmler of Independence Township. It meets every Monday evening—"even on holidays"—at 7:30 in the St. Benedict's Church basement, 40 S. Lynn, Pontiac.

Toughlove was developed by therapists Phyllis and David York. Wellington was introduced to the problems. Others in the family may be on the honor roll, while one skips school, gets in trouble frequently and tends to make home life miserable.

Parents feel they have failed. They're trying, they love the child, but the situation is getting worse. It is affecting all in a negative way.

"This is immediate help," says Hemmler. "We're saying, 'We know you're feeling powerless. We know you're hurting, but you can't stay there. You've got to start taking steps."

"It works. It really works," she says. "They're not alone any more with these problems."

Support from the group involves more than just

But, cautions Wellington, power is a term that must be understood as it applies in Toughlove.

"Not power to control the kid," she explains, "but getting back again their personal power—the right to go to bed and get to sleep without worrying, the right to a kitchen cleaned up, the right not to be physically or verbally abused."

And, power does not mean striking the child or kicking a minor out of your home with nowhere to go, "You've lost everything if you're hitting your kid," says Hemmler.

The women stress that there's no guarantee the program will work, but it has for them.

"This is not risk-free," says Hemmler. "I can think of one example where a child was doing just about everything you can think of. They started with the kid keeping the room clean. The kid ran away."

There are no dues or fees to join the parent support group and it is open to single parents or couples. The purchase of a $6 Toughlove manual is suggested.

For more information on how to join the support group, call Hemmler at 623-6504 or Wellington at 628-5428.

'This is immediate help...They're not alone any more with these problems' program by a co-worker. She went to a meeting in Sterling Heights and asked the woman coordinating the program there to help get one started in Pontiac.

That was in March. Wellington and Hemmler, who attended a workshop on Toughlove in Ann Arbor in June, are now putting the word out for parents who may benefit from the support group.

"Not every kid needs Toughlove, but there are those kids, and they seem to be increasing in number, whose behavior at home is unacceptable—it tends to be that way at school and at work," says Hemmler, "These kids are intelligent, they're very

"These kids are intelligent, they're very manipulative, they're usually good looking and usually there's something in their background the parents feel guilty for, and are trying to make amends, such as divorce, learning disability, adoption, physical problems or overindulgence."

Attendance at meetings now ranges from 10 parents to 30 or 40.

"People come in when they have a crisis, then leave and come back when it rears its ugly head again," says Wellington, adding that the ideal situation is for the parents to continue attending the group, offering support to others.

"The parents are at a loss for what to do—their home situation is tense, stressful and very unhappy," adds Hemmler. "They've tried counseling. What is there left to do?"

Many times, the parent has only one child with meetings. The members swap telephone numbers for help during a crisis, they'll accompany parents for court dates and even open their homes to children whose parents need a break in order to sort out problems

Part of the regular program includes group suggestions for handling problems. While it is made clear that the suggestions do not have to be followed, it's usually easier for others not emotionally involved to offer ideas than for the parents themselves to step back and look at the situation.

"If they go home and try this and it doesn't work, they haven't failed. They come back and get more suggestions," says Wellington.

Meetings follow a set structure. Before anyone joins, they contact Wellington or Hemmler and develop a list of standards and goals. Then, during the first meeting, there is orientation for new members.

The regular meetings begin with success stories and new members state why they're there. Small group meetings follow to establish new "bottom lines" or goals for the next week—it may be something like the child has to keep his or her room clean. Then the large group meets again, with anyone who needs support asking for it.

There are 10 Toughlove beliefs that thread their way through the program. Most of them lead to the return of a sense of personal power for the parents.

If it Fitz. . .

Onward and upward

_by jim Fitzgerald__

An Arab source estimated Israel killed 18,000 people while bombing and invading Lebanon. But an Israeli source insisted that figure was exaggerated and the actual death toll was nearer 4,000.

That's what I call sloppy body-counting, certainly not up to the standards set by the Unifed States in Vietnam.

REMEMBER? The Pentagon insisted each and every dead enemy body be counted. The overall total was reported daily through the media so U.S. citizens could keep track of exactly how much blood they were getting for their tax dollar.

The intrepid Pentagon even did its best to publicly credit individual soldiers with enemy dead by sending news releases to their hometown newspapers saying:

"Pvt. Johnny Jones, a cannoneer in Battery B, 1st Battalion of the 30th Artillery, 101st Airborne Division, and his unit have accounted for 83 dead, 17 captured and 70 tons of rice, salt and corn recovered."

That was superior body-counting, as precise as possible without unnecessarily distressing Johnny's mother, whose name and address were always included in the news release. If she didn't want any of his unit's 83 kills pinned directly on her Johnny, she could tell neighbors she'd just received a letter from him saying he was sending her 30 tons of corn under separate cover.

Some mothers are like that. They don't want to learn that their sons killed another mother's son. They don't want to be reminded that sons die in wars, on both sides of the disagreement, and the mothers of dead bad guys mourn as deeply as the mothers of dead good guys. That's why the Pentagon included grain in its body-count news releases. It gave a mother the chance to claim her son wasn't killing other sons in Vietnam, he was capturing corn.

That slight imprecision in Pentagon body-counting was easily forgiven in the name of compassion for sensitive mothers. It is much more difficult to forgive the type of imprecise body-counting that, such as in the Israel-PLO conflict, results in wildly varying claims that anywhere from 4,000 to 18,000 people-were killed;

Why should the United States care if Arabs or Jews or Irish rebels or any other foreigners don't know how to count dead bodies properly, especially when none of the corpses is American? Because of truth in advertising, that's why.

IN THE ISRAELI INVASION of Lebanon, as in the Iran-Iraq war, weapons supplied by the U.S. proved much superior to weapons supplied by the Soviet Union. Because of this, according to the London Daily Telegraph, "a number of Third World governments are reassessing their own military inventories."

India; Peru, Algeria and Iraq were cited as examples of countries "increasingly anxious to break their dependence on weaponry from the Soviet Union" and start buying it from the U.S.

That's the value of advertising. When U.S. weapons out-kill Soviet weapons, all the world notices and wants to buy the more efficient product. The Soviets may offer faster delivery and easier credit terms, but those are poor sales points compared to the U.S. offer of wider destruction and more dead bodies

Obviously, it is important to the U.S. that there be no undercount of bodies made dead by its weapons, media reports of low body counts could hurt sales and cost our munitions manufacturers billions of dollars.

Thanks to recent wars, the U.S. now has the public image of a superior body killer. To protect that image, we should refuse to sell armaments to any nation that doesn't employ modern methods of body-counting. Vague estimates of 4,000 to 18,000 killed are counter-productive and simply unacceptable if our nation is to get the most bucks for its bang.

If necessary, Pentagon experts with Vietnam experience could be loaned to the more backwardcounting countries to feach them how to erronly on the high side and also, for the sake of Johnny's mother, how to capture corn.

Schools to review evaluation

The Clarkston schools board of education wants to consider a change in teacher evaluation policy.

The matter was brought up at last week's board meeting when it was learned a teacher who taught second grade and fourth grade in the past was recalled from the layoff list to teach ninth-grade courses.

Board member Carolyn Place asked if a teacher could be in a new position and not be evaluated for two years, because of the present policy that requires an evaluation for tenured teachers every two years.

see recall

Eleven Clarkston school teachers have been able to discard the dreaded pink slips they received in June and return to the classrooms.

Two additional teachers were recalled, but they had moved away, so they were required to submit letters of resignation, said Conrad Bruce, Clarkston schools administrative assistant.

So, of the original 36 laid off in June, 11 have been rehired, two resigned and 23 are still without teaching jobs in Clarkston schools.

"That looks like it for a while," Bruce said. "Of course you never know when people are going to leave or whatever."

Last year that wasn't the case. When Clarkston schools voters approved 3 mills in additional taxes (3 mills are 30 cents for each $1,000 of assessed property valuation), about 75 percent of laid-off teachers were recalled.

The district hired two new teachers this year when none of those laid off was qualified to fill the positions of a music teacher at Clarkston Junior High School and a Spanish teacher at Clarkston High

"Any person that comes into a new building will be evaluated that year," said Conrad Bruce, administrative assistant.

But, he said, if the person accepted a different D teaching position in the same building, it was conceivable two years could pass before an evaluation was made.

"I think especially now when we have so many teachers moving into areas they've never taught before, I find it scary myself in keeping our curriculum intact," said board member Mary Jane Chaustowich.

Board President Janet Thomas noted there was merit in review of the teacher evaluation policy and asked that the matter be placed on the October agen-

Once the school board talks over the issue, if a recommendation is made, it will go to the policy committee for consideration, said Superintendent Milford Mason after the meeting.

The three-member committee usually considers three or four policy changes a year and makes recommendations to the school board. The committee's recommendations are expected to come before the board in November, Mason said.

High textbook maintenance costs get attention

By Kathy Greenfield

An $11,000 figure for books in bills paid during the past month caught Clarkston school board member Carolyn Place's eye.

Wednesday, thieves stole a $375 dirt bike from a garage on Oak Hill Road, Independence Township.

Wednesday, police arrested a 29-year-old California man and an 22-year-old Brandon Township woman for possession of cocaine at the Pine Knob Music Theatre, 5580 Waldon, Independence Township.

Wednesday, thieves stole a door wall, well cap and water tank from a construction site on Allen Road, Independence Township.

Friday, thieves stole a $150 bike from a house on Clarkston-Orion Road, Independence Township.

Saturday, thieves entered a garage on Dvorak Road. Independence Township, and stole a $100 amplifier and $125 CB radio.

Sunday, a man driving a camper exposed himself to two girls riding bikes on Davisburg Road, Springfield Township.

Sunday, thieves stole a $130 bike and tools from a car glove box on Big Lake Road, Springfield Township.

Sunday, thieves broke into a house on Whipple Tree Lane, Independence Township, and stole an air compressor and TV.

This information came from reports at the Oakland County Sheriff's Department.

She asked if there were any new series of texts being purchased. The answer was "no," The money went for textbook replacement and rebinding costs.

The $11,000 covered expenses across the district's five elementary schools, two junior highs and high school, said Superintendent Milford Mason after the meeting.

"I suspect before the year's over, the total will be more than that," Mason said.

The cost to keep the district's 6,000 pupils in books is high. There are several reasons, Mason said. At the top of the list is that textbooks are expensive. But there is also vandalism.

In the elementary schools and some classes in the secondary level, the books stay in the classroom and are rarely taken home.

But on the secondary level, books for academic classes are assigned to students. They are stashed in lockers between classes and are frequently taken

While it's always been the policy of the district to charge students for lost or damaged books, getting them to pay was a problem in the past, said Clarkston Junior High Principal Duane Lewis.

So, Lewis came up with a plan used only at

"Two years ago, my building budget got cut by 65 percent," he said, "and a big chunk of the money went for textbook replacement, so I immediately looked for a way to cut costs.

The plan includes having parents sign statements saving they understand the students are responsible for the texts.

"It's more to make parents aware we're doing it and they should look out for their children's books," Lewis said.

The students also take part in the plan by filling out a card noting all existing damage in each book they're issued.

With greater awareness of the responsibilities, the expected decrease in book damage took place—and there was an unexpected bonus. Parents have been more willing to pay for damage or loss.

The bottom line is that while rebinding expenses from normal wear and tear are still quite high at CJHS, but money has been saved.

'We didn't replace many books at all," said Lewis, pleased about the results.

Streaking CHS nets fourth win

By Greg Nelson

A fast start is what every coach looks for from their team at the start of a new season. And today, Dave McDonald could not be happier with his CHS varsity girls' basketball team.

The Wolves remained unbeaten and ran their record to 4-0 with a convincing 54-39 victory over a tough Waterford Kettering team Thursday night. The loss dropped the Captains to 2-1.

As in the first three games, Clarkston was led by senior co-captain, Annette Ulasich. She scored 22 points and pulled down 10 rebounds for the Wolves.

But Ulasich had plenty of help as Sue Ketvirtis added 13 points and 14 rebounds, while Lin Klingler pulled in 17 rebounds and point guard Lori Martin chipped in with seven points and seven assists.

'We beat a very good team tonight. But we've still got a lot of room for improvement. I guess this team's got a lot more potential than I originally thought," said McDonald.

Two keys to the game were the Wolves' ability to dominate the rebounding at both ends of the court and their consistency in making free throws.

"I was especially pleased with the job Julie Beamer, Klingler and Ketvirtis did on the boards. And we also sank a lot of clutch free throws," said McDonald.

Kettering jumped out to an early 6-0 lead in the first quarter behind some fine outside shooting by Gayle Coleman. But Clarkston battled back and took the lead for the first time, 12-10, with one minute to play in the quarter. The Wolves never trailed from that point on.

Clarkston opened up an 11-point lead, 23-12, with 2:38 to play in the first half as the Wolves defense shut down the middle any time Kettering tried to move the ball inside for an easy shot,

The Wolves led 25-17 at the half and 36-29 at the end of three quarters. But the Captains made one last run at the Wolves early in the fourth quarter.

Kettering cut the Clarkston lead to 38-33 with 6:30 to play but Ketvirtis killed any momentum the Captains may have had by converting a three-point play to boost the lead back to 41-33.

Six straight points by Ulasich put the game out of reach and the Wolves coasted in on the strength of clutch free-throw shooting.

Clarkston opened its season with a 48-34 win against Milford. Martin and Ulasich led a fastbreaking attack for the Wolves, netting 18 and 15 points, respectively. Ketvirtis added 16 rebounds.

The Wolves moved their record to 2-0 with a come-from-behind, 43-42 victory over Avondale. Ulasich scored 22 points including eight in the last four minutes to lift Clarkston.

Clarkston's other win was a 56-22 rout of Andover last Tuesday. Ulasich had 17 points while Ketvirtis contributed 13 to go along with her 15 rebounds.

Clarkston returns to action Sept. 21 with a game at Waterford Township before returning home for four consecutive games beginning Sept. 23.

Sue Ketvirtis (left) of Clarkston goes up for two of the 13 points she scored in the Wolves' 54-39 victory over Waterford Kettering. She also pulled down 14 rebounds. Looking on in this case is the Captains' Chris Furtrell. The win boosted Clarkston's record to 4-0.

Netters overpower Milford

Rain stopped the CHS girls' tennis team in the scheduled season-opener Sept. 7, but there was nothing that could stop them against Milford on Fri-

After being rained out against Romeo, Clarkston began its season with a 6-1 trouncing of Milford at Clintonwood Park.

The Wolves swept Milford in the singles action as Mary Smith led the way with a 6-0, 6-0 victory. Other Clarkston singles winners were Kelly Craig, 6-1, 6-0; Anja Holler, 6-1, 3-6, 6-0; and Shellie VanKeuren, 6-0, 6-2.

In doubles play, Jenny Kithill and Sam Mallett of Clarkston combined for a 6-3, 7-5 win while Audrey Campe and Stacy Walker scored a 7-6, 7-5 victory.

The Wolves, coached by Becky Craig, return to action with matches against Rochester and Brandon this week.

Wolves dumped by Lahser

A new challenge lies ahead of the CHS varsity football team this week. It must bounce back and regain the winning touch after dropping a rainsoaked, 14-0 decision at Bloomfield Hills Lahser Sept. 17.

The loss put the Wolves' record at 1-1 as they enter conference play with a game at Waterford Township Friday.

"We played a good football team. It's time to pick up the pieces for Township," said CHS Head Coach Walt Wyniemko.

"Our defense did a great job. Next week we've got to correct our errors," he added.

Defense dominated the game, played in apouring rain, as the teams battled to a scoreless. first half. But Lahser got a big break when it recovered a Clarkston fumble on the first play of the second half.

A few plays later, Lahser's Scott Sugg scored on a one-yard quarterback sneak to give his team a 6-0 lead.

Lahser added a second touchdown on a fiveyard run by Mike Grahm in the fourth quarter to round out the scoring.

Turnovers were the main problem for Clarkston throughout the game as the team lost the ball four times, three times on interceptions.

Lahser's defense held Clarkston to just 57 yards passing and 59 yards rushing in the game. Lahser ran for 189 yards and passed for 29 yards. John LaPorte and Mike Weiler led the Wolves' defensive effort.

Frosh win, lose

After scoring 52 points in the season-opener against Clarkston, Sashabaw Junior High S. ool's football team used a strong deferate to win for the second week in a row, 20-8 over West Bloomfield.

The Cougars stacked up an 11-yard touchdown from Mike May, a 60-yard TD run on a reverse by Steve Wiedemann and an interception return for a TD by Danny Lewis to account for their points. Jeff Davis ran for 125 yards on 11 carries.

In other freshman action, Clarkston Junior High dropped a 37-14 decision to Lake Orion East.

Clarkston, 0-2, got two touchdowns from Scott Rigonan while quarterback Steve Atkinson completed 11 of 17 passes for 125 yards.

JV win evens record at 1-1

With its first win safely tucked away, the Clarkston High School junior varsity football team is aiming for bigger and better things...

The Wolves, after losing their season-opener to Swartz Creek, evened their record at 1-1 with a hardfought 13-6 victory over Bloomfield Hills Lahser Thursday night.

Lahser drove 80 yards on its first offensive possession to take a 6-0 lead, but that would be all the points the Clarkston defense would yield.

And when Troy Wilmont raced 66 yards for a Clarkston touchdown and Mike Galley added the extra point. The Wolves led, 7-6.

Despite being outplayed most of the first half, the Wolves took that slim lead into the locker room at the half.

"I was pleased with the way our kids came back in the second half," said CHS Coach Gordy Richardson. "We weren't prepared for that first game but we showed a lot of improvement."

The teams traded punts most of the second half with the only scoring coming on a big fourth down play at the Lahser 33-yard-line. With CHS needing 14 yards for a first down, Galley passed to receiver Shawn MacCartey who did the rest, scoring to give the Wolves a 13-6 lead.

Bert Skelton intercepted a Lahser pass with 20 seconds to play in the game to clinch the victory.

Decorative shutters

Pretty, energy-efficient and cost-cutting

Ruth Cascaddan's design for energy-efficient shutters grew from her experience stretching fabric prints over frames for wall hangings.

The end result, after conversations with helpful people at the lumberyard and others, is a project that not only looks good, but helps keep warm or cool air inside and is economical to boot.

For two sets of shutters, she spent about $25. The price includes the wood, plastic foam, fabric, hardware and a $4.98 roll of sheet plastic that had lots left

"Everyone's energy conscious," says Ruth, who owns the Church Street Linen Outlet, 61/2 E. Church, Clarkston. "I have customers who come in and tell me all they go through just to save energy—they even take (plastic) sheets and stick them in the window wells without anything else—the shutters look so much bet-

After her shutter plans were complete, Ruth contacted an expert on R values (resistance to heat loss) and was told that many homes have a 40-percent heat loss through windows, and carry an R value of .88 to 1.78. If windows were weather stripped and the shutters were put in place, the R value would increase to 7,

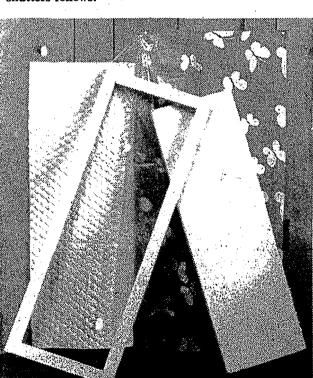

Putting together the shutters was a family project with Ruth's husband Dick, a builder, helping with cutting the wood into proper lengths.
"We had fun with it," she says.

And there's another bonus. Because the material is put in place with a staple gun, it's easy to change whenever the mood strikes.

Ruth chose a butterfly patterned bed sheet designed by Vera for the shutters she made to demonstrate the project. For those who want a more tailored look, white sheeting could be monogrammed and stretched over the frame.

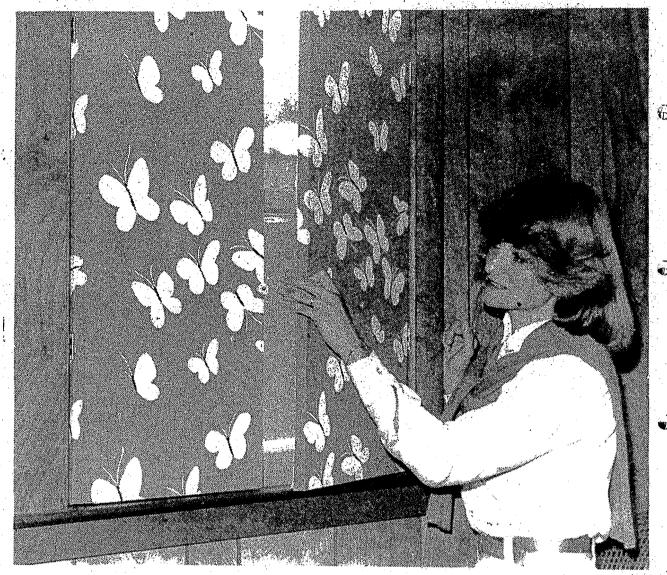

Instructions, complete with diagrams, are free at her shop, as are plans for other projects like pillow

Ruth's step-by-step demonstration for energy shutters follows:

MATERIALS NEEDED

- 1. One-by-two-inch pine. (You can give the lumber company window dimensions and they'll figure amounts necessary.)
- 2. Three-quarter-inch plastic foam cut with a kitchen knife to fit inside shutters. (It comes in two-byeight foot sheets.)
- Quilted fabric for the shutters' street sides. (White's usually best—three layers thick.)
- Decorative sheet or other fabric.
- 6. Tools: Hammer, finish nails, staple gun (may be rented), kitchen or pocket knife, pinking shears, hinges with screws and latches, screw driver, aluminum foil.

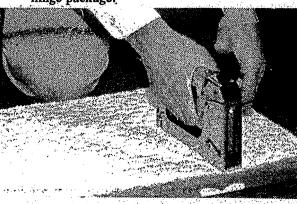

Ruth Cascaddan's energy shutters hang in the office portion of her shop. It cost less than $25

CONSTRUCTION STEPS

- 1. Measure and cut one-by-two-inch pine, either by dividing the inside window dimensions in half for a pair of shutters (eight pieces) or you can make one large shutter (four pieces) for a small, unusually shaped window. Nail together.
- 2. Trace inside dimensions of shutter on plastic foam, cut and insert to fit. (This gets messy-better do it in the garage or outside.)
- 3. Next, cut a sheet of plastic the same measure as the shutter and staple to one side of the shutter face. This acts as a vapor barrier.
- 4. Reverse shutter and cut a strip of foil to extend just over the frame's edges. This eliminates any possibility of light coming through fabric.
- 5. Cut decorative fabric, adding two inches to the length and width of the shutter, and staple to back of frame. Always remember to staple starting with the center and work toward corners, pulling fabric taut.
- 6. Using pinking shears, cut a piece of quilted fabric one-nan-inch iess man me lengm and widm of the shutter, and staple to the unfinished side of the shutter, covering excess of decorative fabric. A ribbon or other trims can be glued in place to cover the pinked edges for an attractive finish.

7. To hang the shutters, follow instructions in the hinge package.

to make the shutters from scratch and Ruth has lots of plastic sheeting left over.

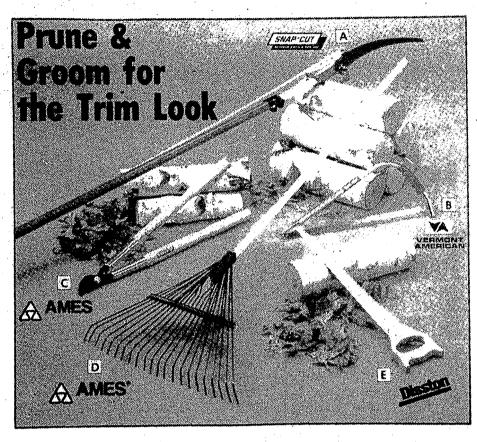

One thing to remember is to always start putting staples in the center, and to work toward the ends, Ruth says.

Plant now for future bursts of color

If you want your yard blooming in springtime, you may want to do your planting now.

"Fall is for planting" is the slogan used by plants that can be planted in the fall to help beautify nurseries across the country this year to promote the your yard. advantages, said Francis Gambino of Bordine's Better Blooms of Clarkston.

"It's suprising how many people don't know that you can still plant during the fall," said Gambino.

Fall planting has some distinct advantages over spring planting. During autumn, root development is enhanced because lower temperatures halt leaf and stem growth. This allows the root system to develop more quickly in the fall than in the spring.

A second major advantage is that fall planting requires less watering, and there is less mund for gardeners to contend with.

Robert I. Theisen, nurseryman at Bordine's, said fall is an ideal time for seeding, and fertilizing lawns.

But it should be done before Oct. 1.

Gambino and Theisen offered a large variety of

The bulb market has traditionally been strong in the fall," said Gambino. "But there are a lot of other plants available." The most common bulb favorites are tulips and daffodils.

One idea you might want to try this year is a system of interplanting. The idea is to plant two or more different kinds of bulbs, that have different flowering times or heights, in a single bed. This simple procedure will prolong your garden's bloom time.

Another flower that is popular and can be ideally planted now is the hardy mum, said Gambino.

Fall is also a good time for planting trees, shrubs

"The most popular shrubs are the ones that show fall colors," said Theisen. A strong favorite is the Burning Bush which displays a bright, red leaf color for weeks in the autumn.

Shrub Dogwoods also provide nice fall colors as does a medium-sized shrub called Regel's Privet. This four-foot shrub provides a rich, dark, red color in the fall. Sumacs also give off nice autumn hues.

Other bushes and shrubs such as Fire Thorn and Tallhedge have brightly colored berries this time of Evergreens can also add variety to your yard and can be planted anytime before Oct. 20. A large variety ranging from Japanese Yews to Junipers and Pines are available.

Orchids & Onions is watching you

There's honor and dishonor in this recognition

The clean-up, paint-up and fix-up is finished. Does it deserve an orchid...or an onion?

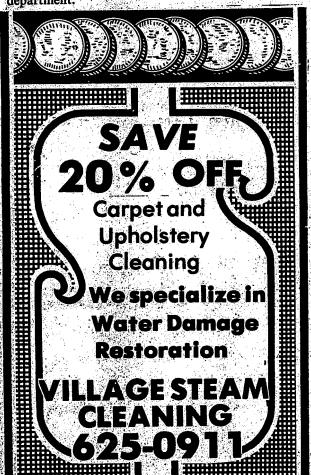

The Orchids & Onions Award program, sponsored by the American Society of Interior Designers (ASID), is accepting nominations through Sept. 27 for the honor, or dishonor, of being recognized.

The purpose of the awards program is to encourage public awareness and response to the buildings which grace, or clutter, the tri-county area. ASID will base its awards on ballots which give the public an opportunity to nominate specific examples of local archtecture and design.

Creative restoration, good planning or landscaping, or good taste in public signs may earn an orchid. Onion awards might be presented for a shopping center without landscaping, a distracting mural painted along the highway, or a monstrocity which detracts from the architectural quality of the area.

Categories include historic preservation, graphic design and signage, landscape design, environmental planning, energy conservation, planning solutions, and interior design in public buildings.

Nomination forms are available at the Birmingham-Bloomfield Art Association, Center for Creative Studies, Colony Interiors in the Somerset Mall, Emily's and Wayne State University's art department.

They may also be obtained by calling Julie Baba or Cynthia O'Hanian at Gorman's at 353-9880.

The information requested on the ballot is brief, and the person making the nomination may remain anonymous.

"Test Thy Skyll—King's Joust" reads the sign and kids can glide toward a ring and try to snatch it with a wooden lance for 25 cents a ride. The look on Algonac resident Cindy Charbeneau's face tells the tale. The place? The Michigan Renaissance Festival. The opportunity to step back into the 16th century and a join a European town's harvest celebration lasts one more weekend—on Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Tickets are $5.95 for adults, $2.50 for children and free for those under age 5. It all happens on the grounds of Colombiere Center on Big Lake Road, Springfield Township.

CAYA-begins its new year

By Greg Nelson

Continued success and involvement is what the Clarkston Area Youth Assistance Committee is looking for in the coming year.

That was the theme presented at the committee's annual luncheon meeting held Monday at the Church of the Resurrection, 6490 Clarkston-Orion.

The committee also named its new officers for the 1982-83 year. They are Charles Barnett, chairperson; Ken Leslie, vice-chairperson; Kathy Nicholson, secretary; and Kay Robertson, treasurer.

The purpose of Clarkston Area Youth Assistance is the prevention of juvenile delinquency and neglect through the involvement of local citizens who are interested, concerned and willing to donate time and skills to help create and promote community-oriented

Some of the CAYA programs in the past year under the direction of outgoing chairperson Al Carter include a youth camp for underprivileged children, a program aimed at single parents, a job-orientation field trip to Detroit, a youth recognition banquet, an anti-shoplifting program and PLUS, which is similar to the Big Brother program.

Barnett, newly elected chairperson, share a moment following the Clarkston Area Youth

Queen Anne's Lace: Late summer's flower

Queen Anne's lace comes into full profusion in late August or early September, along with lengthening shadows as the earth tilts away from the sun.

The flowering weed was named after Queen Anne of England, who reigned from 1702-14 and was fond of lace on her dresses.

The delicate white of Queen Anne's lace creates a memorable picture when silhouetted against a deep green oak or pine tree. Look for the spot of blood in the middle of the flower where Queen Anne is said to have pricked her finger.

Break off a leaf of Queen Anne's lace or pull up the root and break it and smell it. It will remind you of the carrot aroma; it is related to the carrot.

Queen Anne's lace is a biennial which means it produces flowers in the second season of growth. A carrot is also, but we harvest it the first season before it flowers and goes to seed.

The carrot and Queen Anne's lace are both members of the parsley family which provides us with many aromatic herbs—dill, caroway, fennel, cumin and anise as well as parsnips and celery.

Look closely at the flower and you will notice the broad, white medallion flower is composed of small branches growing out of the main stalk and branching yet again into smaller branches, each of which has five incredibly small petals creating a flower. The flowers in the center are small. The outermost ones get larger, creating the round shape.

Smell the flower. It may surprise you that a weed can smell so sweet. Aroma is part of the strategy—many insects are attracted to it. (Have you ever wondered why you get more mosquito bites when you wear perfume?)

When the insects get to the flower, they discover the nectar is quite accessible, so Queen Anne's lace is quite popular in the insect world. This leads to good pollenation so the flower is well on its way to producing the next generation.

When it rains, the flower hangs itself vertically to avoid loosing pollen. When the threatening clouds blow over, Queen Anne's lace looks back at the sun, inviting insects to return to their work.

After being pollenated, the flower curls into a nest, and inside the nest hundreds of spiny little seeds develop. When the plant dries out, the "nest" breaks off and becomes a tumbleweed, carried by the wind to a new location to take root and produce another generation of Queen Anne's lace.

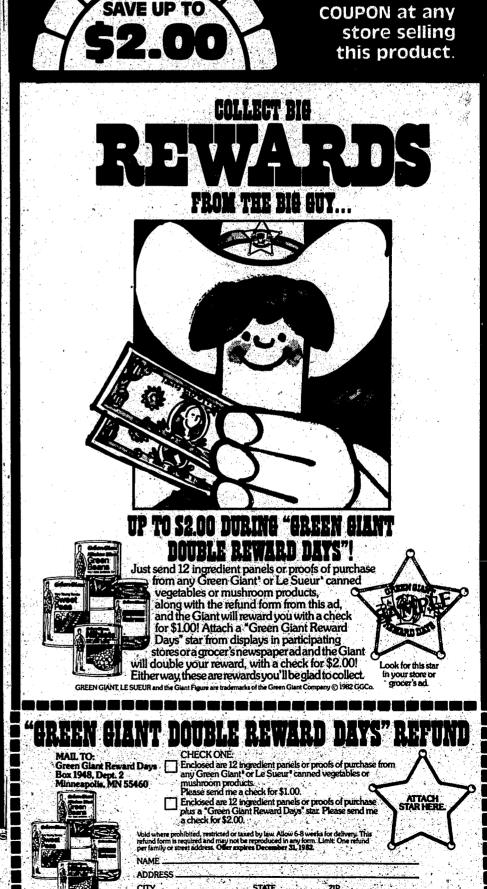

Looking to nature teaches us about adaptation and survival, birth and death, and renewal.

Familiar Queen Anne's lace offers the opportunity to observe and understand our vulnerability as a species and to value the interrelated nature of the universe.
