Levy gets new delay

By Marilyn Trumper

There's a new delay in review of the Edward C. Levy Co.'s proposal to mine 300 acres near the headwaters of the Clinton River.

It will be July 25 before a newly appointed threeman subcomittee makes its recommendation to the Michigan Environmental Review Board (MERB) on the plan.

"The subcommittee was assigned to evaluate hydrology; the value of the wetlands and viable economic alternatives to the plan," said Boyd Kinzley, executive secretary to MERB.

According to Kinzley, 78 people from organizations throughout the state attended the hour-and-a-half meeting in Lansing June 27.

"There was only one pro on the position sheet. It was from the Michigan United Conservation Club. It said, "...This is a good project. There's no excuse for turther delay," Kinzley said.

The subcommittee is expected to make its report to the 17-member MERB July 25. MERB, comprised of citizens and department heads, makes a recommendation to the Department of Natural Resources to approve or deny the plan.

Since 1979 Levy has sought to mine acreage off Clarkston-Orion Road abutting Independence Township's Clintonwood Park and Independence Oaks County Park off Sashabaw Road.

The DNR said Levy's revised environmental impact statement issued late last year was an improve-•Developing within the first five years a township beach on a 12-acre lake next to Clintonwood Park, isolated from the rest of the mining operation.

•Including non-development areas outside the 500-foot buffer along the river.

Teacher's application wins

Grant nets school computers

By Kathy Greenfield

Some Clarkston ninth-graders will soon be writing compositions on computers thanks to a $10,000 grant received by Clarkston Junior High School English teacher Ruth Duling.

Free concerts July 8, 15, 22

There'll be free concerts in the Clarkston village park on three more Friday evenings—July 8, 15 and 22.

The fourth concert was added thanks to the generosity of those who purchased $20 "Band-Aid" boxes, according to Joan Kopietz, concert chairperson.

During the first concert July 1, over 300 people listened to the music of the 31-piece band led by James Morrison.

"It was a good crowd. We were pleased," said

This is the fourth year the hour-long concerts have been sponsored by the Clarkston Village Business Association and the Pontiac Federation of Musicians.

The $1,200 cost for each is paid for with an $800 grant for each from the the national Performance Trust Fund made up of money from the sale of records and tapes.

The remainder of the money comes from individual donations and from the sale of popcorn and soda pop at the concerts.

No money is collected during concerts. "Band-Aid" boxes are located in village businesses for donations, or those who wish to make larger contributions can contact Kopietz at 625-2511.

The concerts begin at 7 p.m. in the Depot Road Park adjacent to the Clarkston Village Hall, 375 Depot, Clarkston.

This week's musical selections feature tunes from "Oliver," the traditional marches and classical music.

Duling received notification last week that her proposal was one of 14 selected from 1,700 submitted nationwide in the Tandy TRS-80 Education Grants Program, "New and Innovative Uses of Microcomputers in Education."

"I felt (computers) ought to be used in English classes because you can revise easier, you can use simple editing and proofreading more quickly, and you can create attractive copies quickly and easily," she said.

"For some kids just the fact that handwriting won't be an obstacle should make it easier for them to start revising their work," she added. "It's a tool of the literary world these days."

She expects to see her students' writing improve through an eagerness to rewrite and make changes.

The computers will also be used in the journalism class, simplifying printing of the school newspaper by eliminating the need for a typist.

The five word processors for students, a computer that includes monitoring capabilities for the teacher and a printer should be in operation at Clarkston Junior School by fall.

They will come from Radio Shack, a division of the Texas-based Tandy Corp.

Duling first heard of the grant last fall, submitted her eight-page proposal in February and received a letter informing her of its acceptance on June 28.

Hang up on phony job offers

If a man telephones and says he's a Clarkston school board member soliciting young people for jobs, hang up.

"They're crank calls. We've checked with our board members and they're not making the calls," said schools Superintendent Milford Mason.

In the past three months, there have been three or four calls made that the district knows about, Mason said.

Guard wanted

The Clarkston Village Council has decided to hire a crossing guard at M-15 and Middle Lake Road, and is advertising the $5-an-hour job.

The council, at its June 27 meeting, unanimously agreed to advertise the two-hour-a-day position.

A month ago village enforcement officer Charles Smalley resigned that post because he was crossing just one junior high student.

But, according to Trustee Carol Eberhardt, a new family has moved to the area with more junior high children which will require a crossing guard at the intersection.

Persons interested in applying should call 625-1559, Wednesday, between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Drivers' ed war stories from 2 vets

By Marilyn Trumper

Clarkston High School driver training instructors Tim Hewelt and Al Bartlett have a combined 23 years of teaching white-knuckled teens to handle cars.

Their thrill stories are enough to stop a veteran driver's breathing.

And some days when they roll out of the car, they've got a few more gray hairs than they had that "I don't know why I keep teaching it," Bartlett laughed, unwinding in the bus garage lounge after eight hours of seat-sharing with novice drivers and overseeing them dodging orange pylons in the blacktop parking lot.

Lighting a cigarette he leans back in the chair and recounts with Hewelt the highs and lows of all their years on the road.

Hewelt: There was the time a student southbound on Sashabaw Road entered an I-75 exit ramp.

Hewelt: The time a student refused to stop riding the brakes, heating up the pads until they wouldn't work. That car rear-ended a Clinton Valley bus filled with patients.

CROWD PLEASER: Floats are always crowd pleasers, and this was no exception. Folks along the parade route from Church Street to Main enjoyed the colorful streamers and crepe paper. AFSCME ratifies its contract

After six months of negotiations, Independence Township and its AFSCME (American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes) workers have agreed on a contract.

Ratified by the 18-member Local 2727 Chapter B two weeks ago, the three-year contract outlines a 10-percent raise spread over the next three years and a 28 cent-an-hour raise in the cost-of-living allowance, according to Linda Richardson, AFSCME president.

The Independence Township Board unanimously approved the contract June 21.

Council re-allocates $834

The Clarkston Village Council reconsidered giving all $834 from the Southeast Michigan Transportation Authority (SEMTA) to the Independence Township Senior Citizen Center for upkeep on their Instead, at its June 27 meeting, the council reallocated half the money to SCAMP, a local summer day camp program for children with special needs.

Trustee Carol Eberhardt explained the decision

"I think that when (Independence) township used their money to buy the Freedom Train to see the fireworks instead of to the senior citizens, like they have in the past, (village President Jackson Byers) had an afterthought and suggested the council consider giving half to SCAMP," Eberhardt said.

The SEMTA funds come from the sale of license

Village appoints 2 to TV

The Clarkston Village Council unanimously appointed its two members to the Cable Casting Board June 27.

Trustee Jon Gaskell, an attorney, represents the council, and veterinarian Bruce Harlton of 61 S. Holcomb is the second appointment.

The length of their terms, and the four appointed by the Independence Township Board and one school board appointment yet to be made, will be determined by lot draw.

The seven-member board is designed to field complaints and suggestions about Independence Township's cable system, currently under construc-

Their duties include reviewing reports and meeting once a month to study cable.

Bartlett: Once a student panicked when Bartlett tapped the brakes on rain-soaked Clarkston-Orion Road. Overcompensating, the student slammed the pedal to the floor and the car did a complete 360-degree turn without leaving the lane.

Hewelt: A student traveling 70 mph, the maximum at that time, was told to roll up his window. Forced into doing two things at once, he passed the center line and traveled into the left lane, then overcompensated and went back into the right lane. Then left. Then right. Then left, then right, throwing Hewelt repeatedly into the door.

Hewelt: Then there's the time a student was told to turn right at the next street. He turned left, only after crossing three lanes.

Bartlett: Or the time a student looked at him and said, "Mr. Bartlett. I don't have any brakes."

And there's the story of the kid driving north on Dixie Highway who pulled over to let an emergency vehicle pass. He pulled over-after crossing Dixie Highway and rolling to the southbound shoulder, facing oncoming traffic.

"Sometimes," Hewelt said, "you get kids that can drive. I had a boy once who had been driving four years, and in the same car a girl that had never driven. The kid was real cocky. The girl was short, and couldn't even reach the pedal.

The girl stalled the automatic transmission 40 times trying to pull away from a stop sign.

Hewelt spent extra time helping her learn to

The boy's driving worsened.

The girl passed.

The boy flunked.

They tell tales of going over curbs at 55 mph. Or kids that ask, "What does P-R-N-D-L stand for?" on the transmission indicator.

Bartlett like the double entendre of the girl who said, "I've got a klunk in my rearend."

And these are the next generation of up-andcoming drivers.

Use those seat belts.

Tax rebate

How and when Independence Township residents will receive a tax refund from Oakland County has yet to be decided.

"It's going to be a long process," said William Hoover, assistant manager of the county equalization department.

"We've been told to meet with the state and set a new State Equalized Value (SEV), but no date for the meeting has even been set yet. We don't know if it will be a refund, tax credit or what."

On June 22 Oakland County won a six-month-old battle when the State Court of Appeals ruled the formula used by the State Tax Commission to figure 1982 taxes was improper.

Expecting a victory when the suit was filed, county officials put $2.5 million aside to cover the rebates.

The court said the state must deliver a new for-

Road paving

A bid of $76,776 for road pavings in Independence Township has been accepted by the Oakland County Board of Commissioners.

To be paved are Pine Knob Road from Clarkston-Orion Road north for approximately 1,500 feet, the approach of Flemings Lake Road at Clarkston-Orion Road and the approach of Rattalee Lake Road west of M-15.

Under the Tri-Party Program, cost of the work will be shared one-third each by the county, the Oakland County Road Commission and the township.

The project was awarded to the low bidder, the South Hill Construction Co. of Novi.

Work is to begin this summer and be completed by winter, according to the road commission.

At that, Julie smiles.

Three years ago, after a hereditary kidney disease forced her to leave Holly High School, she enrolled in the dental program at Northwest Oakland Vocational Education Center (NWOVEC)

The next year that program filled.

Undaunted, she enrolled in the electronics program and if all goes as planned, she'll graduate this January.

"I'd highly recommend any of the programs that I'm back to school," Julie said.

"There are a lot of times my friends will be out having a good time—and I'm home studying. It's all where your priorities are."

For her instructor Donald Peters, Julie has high

From NWOVEC, Julie plans to enroll in Lawrence Institute of Technology in Southfield to study electrical engineering.

Bountiful topic

Since the topic appears inexhaustible to you there I thought it would be helpful to submit my suggestions for articles in re: Chris Rose and/or township clerk.

A. How many ink pens have been consumed by our township clerks since the beginning of time?

B. What will the Roses' mile per gallon consumption average on their drive out east?

C. If there is a Pine Knob in both spots is it possible there is also a Whoopee Bowl, a Rudy's Mkt., or a Millpond, too ...? It's worth investigating. D. How many of our previous township clerks drove Buicks? Or preferred bicycles? And, if so, what side of the road did they favor... further could there be a casual relationship between party affiliation and the side of the road they rode their bicycle?

E. I personally would like to see a float sponsored by the News in the next parade featuring a reunion of all past clerks (still living). Thereafter a contest could be held where the clerks could be pitted against each other to see who could take most grief (without breaking up) from an irate crowd of 30 hand-picked township residents, all the while taking notes with blue Bic pens on notepads.

The possibilities are endless.

Cordially, Zac Bell

Editor's note: And here we thought we'd have to go to press this week without mention of the former township clerk. Thanks, Mr. Bell, for filling the gap.

Bring back the red ones

Kathy Greenfield

Heavy thoughts:

After breaking open a package of M&M's I realized anew how much I miss the red ones.

When we were kids, we used to while away a chunk of time dividing into colors a big bag of the candy treats so they could be evenly shared by the five children in our family.

Red was everyone's favorite. Nobody cared so much about orange, yellow or green. Nobody cared at all about brown.

But if the count was inaccurate for the red ones, vigorous debates would ensue.

Lord knows my family and co-workers know I still like the candies that melt in your mouth, not in your hands.

I'm not even bothered too much about what prompted the absence of my favorite color of M&M's-remember Red Dye No. 2?

What really bothers me is that when I grew up, I couldn't have all the red ones to myself.

Speaking of growing up, the other day a neighbor and I were talking about that childhood -delusions.

We decided it was OK to have dreams. It's part of a whole parcel of idealisms we grow up with—for girls the knight on the white charger, for boys the beautiful princess, and then there are living happily ever after and having a career you enjoy every second.

That kind of sums up all this fascination over England's Prince Charles and his Princess

I have read more gushy stuff about that duo than I care to admit.

Some of it I believe.

I'm going to start giving the year of my birth as 11 B.S.I.T.

Allow me to explain. It's not out of impiety or disrespect for tradition that I'm abandoning 1956 A.D. It's just that I want to impress people.

B.S.I.T. stands for Before State Income Tax. I want everyone to know that I was tough enough to survive back in the dark ages before the state of Michigan began helping itself to everybody's pay check.

I WAS RATHER young back then, so my recollection of those days is apt to be a little foggy. But from what I've heard lately from state employees defending Governor Blanchard's 38 percent income tax increase, it was a period of absolute barbarism.

Without income tax revenues, there were no state universities; no public schools at all, in fact. Starving masses of people, lacking vital state services, wandered the streets. Paved roads were nonexistent, and a mentally ill Michiganian, lacking vital state services, could be found hiding behind every available tree.

And—in the ultimate mark of a backward, unenlightened society—there were no state-paid abortions and lawmakers had to suffer the indignity of only working part-time.

I shudder to think of living under conditions like that, so if the tax increase was our only hope of maintaining civilization, I say hooray for the

Of course, I'd probably be even more enthusiastic about higher taxes if I were a public employee, whose job and pay check depended on tax revenues. But I'm being a cynic. Everybody knows that public employees are concerned about only one thing: maintaining vital services.

So why do public employees sometimes go on strike? It must be because they know that without increased benefits, morale would suffer; and bad morale would have a negative effect on all those vital services they provide to average citizens they intensely care about. And the cow jumped over the

ANOTHER THING ABOUT those dark ages—not only was there no income tax, but there were no millions of dollars in state lottery revenue, either. No funds to maintain vital state services like the governor's recent 9.4 percent pay raises for some of his administration officials; no $400,000 for the vital dredging of Lake Ford in Ypsilanti Township, where the speaker of the house owns a Imagine doing without vital state services like those. But that's the way it was back in 11 B.S.I.T., and I was tough enough to survive it. How, I'll never know.

Down on goose down

For Father's Day I was given a down filled pillow. Actually, I got two of them, but dear Hazel asked me to share.

Since these pillows feel so much different than others I have known, I assume the others were filled with foam, cotton, or straw.

Just in case you have suffered through life with non-feather pillows, let me tell you why you might want to stick with what you have.

Firstly, when you put your head down the down goes down under your head and the down puffs up on the ends. All of a sudden the air goes out from the weight and the ends surround your face. If you have a fear of suffocation you don't want down.

It's eerie at night to see pointed objects out of the corner of my half-opened eyes that close.

At the same time, if you don't bunch up the pillow and stuff it under your head it's like sleeping with no pillow . . . it goes that flat.

This has caused my right shoulder to ache in the morning. I sleep most of the time on my left side and without my head propped up a few inches the weight of my shoulder puts pressure on my neck.

See what terrible troubles I have with down pillows. Incidently, want to know why I sleep on my left side? When hospitalized in 1947-48 I had some minor surgery. It caused gas. Doctors told me if I lay on my left side the gas would be more likely to escape.

I don't know if it works, but I always believe

The pillows for Father's Day gift prompted thoughts of some 'gift' ideas from the past. I remember one time my father gave my mother a spring tooth drag for her birthday. He also gave her a lawn mower once. Dad was always sen-

It's from his gift giving practices I got the idea to give a Model A Ford to Hazel one year. Another year I gave her a corn crib.

The saying is 'it isn't the gift, it's the thought, and thank goodness Hazel has held back expressing her thoughts.

With this column on down pillows you can see I don't have the same goodness.

Typing, computers go hand-in-hand

Remember when advice like "never learn how to type unless you want to be a secretary" was common?

Most of us ignored the thought. We knew typing would be an asset for presenting our work in its best form.

But who would have guessed a nice-to-have skill like typing would rapidly slip into the absolutely essential category?

Yes, we're talking computers.

Right now, there's a need for typing to be taught in elementary schools.

And many students at Clarkston High School, the only place typing is offered in the district, have to wait months to get a typing class because those available fill up so quickly.

While we've been thinking about this need for a couple of years, it again came to our attention when English teacher Ruth Duling received a $10,000 grant for five computers plus a teacher's computer and a printer to use in her ninth-grade classes at Clarkston Junior High School.

Plans are underway to begin the courses with learning the keyboard.

It's a shame that time has to be spent learning a skill that we believe could be taught to elementary school pupils.

We know that computers make writing easier by speeding up the process of being able to make additions and corrections.

Your mind can move more quickly—you're not slowed down with mechanical exercises like erasing, adding or subtracting words or changing them

We wondered what the school district has done to overcome the problem, so we contacted William Neff, coordinator of the elementary school program and member of the district's microcomputer committee.

So far, he said, the matter's been addressed in Clarkston only by purchasing computers that have keyboards very similar to typewriters.

There are schools in the nation that teach typing to kindergartners, he said, and one district in southeastern Michigan that cannot afford to purchase computers but teaches computer literacy to children in an attempt to keep abreast of the times.

In Clarkston, computer literacy is taught beginning in the fifth-grade because there are enough computers to give only a small group of elementary pupils experience.

In all, there are about 65 pupil-access computers in the Clarkston district. The number is increasing at such a rate that keeping track of all new purchases through parent-teacher groups and grants requires using an estimate.

We hope that it's just a matter of time before the need for typing skills catches up to the availability.

Something Neff said gives us hope.

"They're nice problems. They're nice because they put out a job that needs to be done," he said.

"It's also a challenge—something we're going to have to work on to come up with a better way to do it."

Program plusses

Instant correction can be good

While we're on the topic of computers, we listened to the horror in the voice of an interested-in-education person when he talked about computers that correct spelling.

He said he was upset that there's a need for such equipment.

We didn't agree, exactly. Anything that assists in the accuracy quest would be welcomed by those who work with words, we said.

Then we had an opportunity to discuss exactly what dictonary software offers to computer

Apparently it identifies words that may be misspelled.

Consider what that means regarding teaching. If a word was incorrect, it would be identified immediately.

There are times when days, even a week or two, pass before teachers can point out spelling errors.

And there are those errors that are missed—anyone correcting pages and pages of words knows that happens.

The person responsible for the error on the computer would then have to check a dictionary to make sure the spelling was correct, or he or she would have to stop for a few seconds and remember the spelling.

We find ourselves eager for all these things to happen quickly—like waiting for a baby to stand up and take some running steps.

It's really exciting.

Signing away customers

by Jim Fitzgerald

The American Petroleum Institute is recommending that gas stations put up signs warning that gasoline vapors may be dangerous to your health. It will be interesting to see exactly what the various signs

Gas stations have traditionally competed through sign warfare. Years ago, if a Shell station posted a sign advertising regular gas at 30 cents a gallon, the Texaco dealer across the street changed his sign to 29 cents. And the back-and-forth price-chopping often escalated until gas was practically free on both sides of the street and the station operators were exhausted from constantly changing the prices on their signs.

IN THOSE MARVELOUS old days, gas stations also wiped windshields and checked tire pressure for free offered free dishes, and otherwise behaved charmingly in an effort to lure customers. That was before gas became expensive, and sometimes scarce; and the oil companies decided the most cost-efficient way to sell gasoline was through customer self-service.

Today, if you want to pay less than $1.40 a gallon; you have to drill your own oil well without getting your shirt dirty. If you want to go to a party smelling like something besides eau de Amoco, you must pay extra to have someone else rub a greasy rag across your back window. And if you want the Sinclair dealer to hand you free pictures of dinosaurs, you're too old to be driving.

But one thing about gas stations has never changed—sign warfare. Even though a gas fill-up in 1983 costs more than a car payment in 1953, the Shell station still puts up a sign to tell the world it is selling gas for one penny less than the outrageous sum charged by the Texaco station across the street.

So it isn't surprising that gas stations will use signs to warn that self-serve customers might get cancer if they don't use the filter-tip hose. The only question concerns whether the health-risk advertising will be used to increase gasoline sales or to prevent lawsuits.

If the competition centers around selling gas, the least frightening sign will be the most effective. A Shell sign saying "The American Petroleum Institute has determined that breathing gasoline vapors may be injurious to your health" will attract more customers than a Texaco sign saying "Our gas will really kill

But this is a litigious world, with 10 lawyers on every courthouse step, and the Texaco sign may well be the most economically profitable.

THE PETROLEUM INSTITUTE is recommending the health-hazard signs because of what happens ed to the asbestos industry which has been financially decimated by hundreds of lawsuits filed by people who claim manufacturers failed to warn the public that asbestos might cause lung cancer and other ailments.

So far, scientific research indicates that hanging around an Amoco pump won't give you cancer unless maybe you're a rat living in Iceland. But nevertheless, the petroleum institute is taking no chances. It thinks the safest legal posture is for gas stations to post signs putting gasoline in the same risk category as tobacco.

Sure, a mildly worded sign saying Shell made one mouse sick in 1982 will attract more customers than a sign saying Texaco is a morticiants best friend. But how profitable will those Shell customers be if they all sue Shell every time they get a bellyache?

Its scary sign might cost Texaco customers, but the financial loss could be more than balanced by the money saved through fewer lost lawsuits and lower

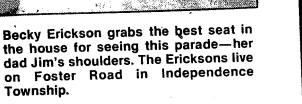

So you may soon see the day when the purpose of escalating sign warfare between two neighboring gas stations will be to deflect customers and avoid lawyers. Across the street from a sign saying 'Three billion customers made ill' will be a sign saying 'Asia the man who died from breathing our vapors—No free

16 people land | Photo Inquiry state jobs

By Kathy Greenfield

Sixteen members of the Michigan Youth Corps will soon be at work for Clarkston schools.

The district is to receive $15,719 from the state program designed to give summer jobs to unemployed 18- to 21-year-olds, according to William Jackson, business manager.

They are to begin work July 11, but three things must happen first.

Official approval has to arrive from the state. The applicants approved by the Michigan Employment Security Commission have to be interviewed. And the insignia members of the youth corps are required to wear have to arrive.

The green-and-white pins, that must be purchased from the state, cost 50 cents apiece, and the order has been placed, Jackson said.

The 16 employes will be paid minimum wage of $3.35 an hour and the length of employment will be about seven weeks, or until the money is gone.

The workers will have jobs in grounds and indoor maintenance and one clerical worker will be hired.

"It will be extra things around the district to make it look nice for school opening in the fall," Jackson said.

Some of the specific jobs are trimming shrubs, work on the Clarkston High School football field, cleaning up paths between CHS and neighboring subdivisions, and scrubbing lockers and desks.

New league barely gets to first

By Dan Vandenhemel

Starting a new baseball league is not easy. Just ask Dick Parker.

This summer, Parker tried to establish a Babe Ruth Baseball League for 16- to 18-year-olds. What he got instead of a four-team league were two traveling teams.

"We wanted about 50 players to come out," said Parker, who manages one team. "That would have given us four 12-player teams."

A solid swat with the left hand sends the small blue ball into the wall. The bouncing return is just out of reach of the opposing player.

The sweat rolls down on the players' foreheads as the game winds down.

While handball is very physical activity, it is not as hard as game as it seems, says Everett Gard.

"After the first couple of weeks playing, your hand gets used to it," said Gard of Church Street in Independence Township. "That's what turns a lot of people off the sport."

Gard's practice partner and teacher of handball, the Rev. Robert Walters uses a slightly padded glove.
"It slows the impact a little," Walters said.
"Really I think it is just psychology on my part."

Gard said he likes the thinner gloves so he can get a better feel with he returns the ball.

"Your hand swells up a little at first," Gard said.
"But it goes down in about an hour."

In April, Gard won the league doubles tournament in Pontiac with partner Steve Davis of Water-

"You're only as good as your partner is," Gard said. "I'd much rather be on a handball court with four guys than playing racquetball with four guys—it can get pretty dangerous out there."

Gard has been playing handball 10 years; Walters has been playing 21 years.

"My greatest satisfaction from handball was teaching Everett to play then teaming with him to finish second in a tournament a few years ago," Walters said. "That will probably be my only athletic title."

Gard and Walters try to play handball twice a week. During the winter, they play at Waterford Hills Courts. The last couple of years they have played outside at Colombiere Center when the weather warms up.

The four cement courts sit in the middle of a field.

"We tried to get out here and do some work on the courts, but it takes time," Gard said. "It's really nice out here. It's a nice slow game out here. You get a better workout inside but this is nice.

"This sport is much better for you than, say, racquetball. It's the only sport where you use both hands. For that reason it's rated right up there with swimming as one of the best sports for cardio-vascular exer-

The two teams play in the nine-team North Oakland Babe Ruth League. Three teams are from West Bloomfield, two from Walled Lake, one from Waterford and one from Highland.

"West Bloomfield tried to get a league going, too, but didn't have enough interest yet either," Parker said. "We would have needed at least three teams to have a league.

"The 16-18 baseball league is a new idea," he said, "Leagues have just gone up to 15 years old before. Independence Township offers a Class D league for 16-18 but they only had four sign up for it this year. I think the last time they had that league was two years ago."

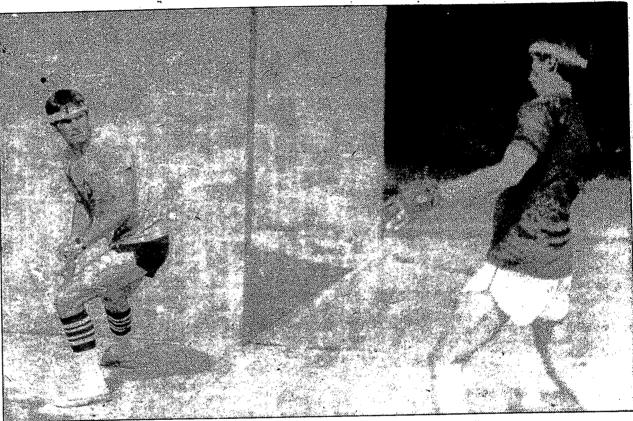

The season started June 12 and the last of 14 games is July 27. The teams play their home games at Clarkston High School on Sundays.

"The Eagle Lodge on Maybee Road gave us permission to fix up their field," Parker said. "I hope we can use it as our field next year. Right now we're just using it as a practice field. The Eagles have been very helpful to us."

The Clarkston teams can draw players from the Clarkston, Oxford and Lake Orion school districts, but most of the players are from Clarkston.

"We only have two players from Lake Orion," Parker said. "We didn't get a very good response in other areas. Here the word got passed around in the high school, but at the other schools that didn't happen.

"I expected a slow start. To be a successful in the first year is to have a complete year so people know we are around. That will give us a good base for next year."

The three-wall cement, outdoor handball court at Colombiere Center in Springfield Township

Resident grouch

- By Dan Vandenhemei -

The world has grown up with puppets, Muppets and other assorted furry critters.

Jim Henson has flooded the market with his Muppets. Sesame Street started the barrage of cute, cuddly creatures.

Now with the Muppet Show and Fraggle Rock, every TV is helping with the invasion.

Kermit, Miss Piggy, Big Bird and Oscar not only abound on shows, but also on store shelves. The marketablity of these "animals" is amazing.

But the scariest things about all the Muppet puppets are the personalities they acquire. Oscar, a famous Sesame Street character, not on-

Good ol' Oscar the Grouch sits quietly on the bookshelf of the desk behind me.

He stares at the back of my head all day long without saying anything: It's enough to get on your nerves.

Driving me batty isn't Oscar's only job in the office.

He cheers people up if they are having a bad day and he helps release frustrations.

The Muppet isn't the only creature in our office.

Freddie the Frog sits across the office from Oscar in an Easter basket waiting for the right moment to lash his tongue out at an unsuspecting passerby.

But it is Oscar who helps the most around the office. He can help you spell or help you look up phone

When asked how to spell Sesame Street, Oscar replied in a deep gravely voice, "S.E.S.A.M.E. S.T.R.E.E.T., stupid."

Oscar is really kind of shy when someone comes into the office other than those who work here.

He keeps pretty much to himself...except for that stare.

Ruth Duling wears many hats

by Nancy Albyn

A woman who wears many hats is a good description of Ruth Duling, former head of the English department at Clarkston Junior High School.

Wearing her English teacher's hat, Ruth developed an alternate English program for eighth-grade students.

She designed self-paced learning packets based on the core units of work for the eighth grade.

The students made contracts for the work they would do, based on their tested abilities, and they were graded on the work that they completed.

This program was followed for half of the year, and a more traditional program for the other half of the year.

Ruth taught this class for seven of her 14 years at Clarkston Junior High School.

As a result of her work, Ruth became a presenter and lecturer at conferences of the Michigan Association of Middle School Educators and the Michigan Council of Teachers of English.

In the summer of 1977, she conducted a seminar for middle school teachers in the Detroit school

"My goal," Ruth says, "is to teach students to express their ideas logically in writing."

To help reach that goal, Ruth takes advantage of community volunteers who come into her classroom and assist in giving individual attention to her students.

"It is this kind of community commitment that shows students that the people really care about a good education," she says.

Because she is an expert in expressing her own ideas logically, Ruth has spent the past four summers writing instructional booklets for Oakland Schools.

In addition, she developed a spelling program for third-graders in the Novi school district.

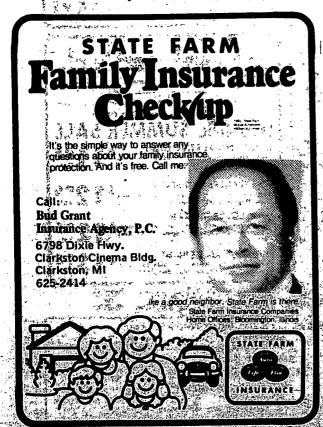

She has also conducted after-school workshops for teachers throughout the country, and an enrichment program at Clarkston Junior High: An Introduction to Computer Programming.

Hers was one of 14 proposals recently chosen from 1,700 for a $10,000 grant from the Tandy Corp. for computer software and hardware to be used in her classroom.

Ruth Duling also wears a scholar's cap.

She earned her bachelor's degree in secondary education at Michigan State University, East Lansing; her master's degree in library science at Wayne State University, Detroit; and her education specialist's degree in curriculum development at Michigan State,

She is currently completing her doctorate degree in curriculum development at Michigan State.

"My goal is to teach students to express their ideas logically in writing"

Ruth is a member of several prestigious honorary groups: Phi Betta Kappa, Phi Delta Kappa, and the Honors College at Michigan State.

Her professional affiliations include the National Council of Teachers of English and the Michigan Council of Teachers of English.

Her article, "Lightening the Load: Rational approaches to the Teaching of English," appeared in The Michigan English Teacher.

Ruth is a devoted wife and mother whose interests include sewing, gardening and canning the fruits and vegetables she has grown.

A hobby she shares with her husband, Tom, and their two children, Caroline and Christopher, is the raising and training of Boxers.

It is not unusual to find the Duling family showing their dogs in sanctioned shows around Michigan and Ohio.

Teacher, developer of new programs, lecturer, writer, scholar, wife and mother—Ruth Duling is a woman who wears many hats with distinction and dignity

We are proud that she is an educator in

Editor's note: An Apple for the Teacher is presented through the efforts of a Clarkston Education Association committee to give recognition to Clarkston educators. It appears bi-weekly in The Clarkston News. This week's author, Nancy Albyn, is an English teacher at Clarkston High School.

Alcohol ban put teens out of work

By Marilyn Trumper

Traditional teen-age jobs like cutting the grass and delivering papers don't quite meet the salary expectations of Steve Zoss and Eric Hofer.

They're into a more lucrative venture: hustling cans and bottles at the Pine Knob Music Theatre.

Those 10-cent-a-shot returnables bought Steve's $800 skiing week in Oregon last winter and financed the $800 down payment for Eric's red three-wheel All Terrain Cycle (ATC).

The days of hustling empties are waning for the 15-year-olds as theater management lays groundwork to outlaw the practice of patrons bringing their own alcohol.

With the liquor license extended to cover the pavilion, managment says it will sell beer and wine from concession stands, and by law fans will no longer be able to bring their own.

"I think it stinks," the freckle-faced, red-headed Steve said sitting on a shaded curb outside the theatre entrance.

"There's no more doing this," Eric said. "We'll have to find some other way to make money.

'We'll both be broke," Steve grinned, flashing

Last summer the teens began seriously collecting bottles and cans.

Clutching black plastic garabage bags they'd scale the back fence and drop into the hill, despite watchful eyes of orange-shirted rangers. "We never went in during a concert, always at the very end," Eric said. "We almost got beat up once by one of the groundspeople.

'For the money and hours you can't beat it. On a good night we'd make $30 to $40. It was about three hours worth of work by the time we collected the cans. walked the half-mile home and hosed (the bottles)

In the boys' honor, Food Town and Kroger put a limit on the number of bottles and cans that could be

"They hated to see us coming." Eric laughed. showing his matching mouth of braces.

From his folks, Eric borrowed the balance needed to buy his ATC, and still owes them $500.

He'd planned to collect bottles and cans this summer to get out of debt.

That's worth a lot of traditional grass cutting and paper delivery.

And the boys know it.

Buying candy bars and soda pop with earnings from traditional teen-age jobs isn't the bag of Steve Zoss and Eric Hofer of Independence Township. They're into collecting returnable bottles and cans at the Pine Knob Music Theatre. That buys them ski trips to Oregon and cycles. But this summer, Pine Knob's put the pair out of business.

SOME START: Alan Solley never won anything before. He wasn't even there on the last day of the National Energy Journal's convention in Columbus, Ohio, when his name was drawn for the brand new Chevrolet S-10 pickup truck. "So the next day one of the manufacturer's reps that we buy woodstoves from called us—we had three or four calls from people who knew us that were there before the journal called," said Solley, the president of Solley's Inc. on M-15 in Brandon Township. He was working in Ortonville that morning and his parents, Alan and Beatrice Solley, took the calls. His mother drove to where he was working. "The first thing she said was she wanted to know if I wanted to send my reservation in for next year, and then she said, 'You won the truck,' and I thought she was just kidding," he said. While he had submitted about 50 tickets for the drawing, he figures there were about 50,000 tickets in all. Solley picked up his almond-colored truck in Columbus about two weeks ago. "I think it's great," he said while sitting behind the wheel. "It's a nice truck." And, he added, he won't miss next year's convention, his fifth in a row. *******

-Business briefs-Ticket can win shopping spree

Imagine grabbing a cart, dashing through a grocery store on a shopping spree...and not paying for what you can gather in four minutes, or one minute.

During the month of July, a fund raiser at the five Food Town stores for the American Cancer Society offers those prizes for the winners.

Supermarket Sweep tickets are $1 each. They may be purchased from cashiers at the stores in Independence Township at 5529 Sashabaw, Oxford, Rochester, Highland and Hartland.

Tickets will be sold through July 31, and all proceeds will go to the American Cancer Society.

The drawings for the mini-shopping sprees are to be held Tuesday, Aug. 9, at each of the five stores. The winners will have one minute to gather up to $150 worth of items at each store at 8:30 a.m. on Saturday,

Following the mini-sprees, a drawing for the grand prize will be held at the Clarkston Food Town.

On Tuesday, Aug. 16, the winner will have four minutes to collect up to $1,000 worth of goods in the Clarkston store beginning at 8:30 a.m.

For more information, contact the American Cancer Society in Southfield at 557-5353.

New dentist joins Dr. Hunt

Bruce Mercado, D.D.S., has joined the family dentistry practice of Dr. Forrest Hunt at 6778 Bluegrass, Independence Township.

Mercado was graduated this spring from the University of Detroit Dental School. He has a bachelor's degree from Michigan State University, East Lansing.

Presently a Rochester resident, he plans to move to the Clarkston area which he got to know while working six years as head lifeguard at Independence Oaks County Park.

"I wanted to stay in Clarkston because I enjoy it and like the environment," he said. "After talking with Dr. Hunt I was convinced that's my best chance to stay in the area."

With Mercado on staff, office hours will be expanded to include weekday evenings and Saturday mornings, said Hunt, who has practiced dentistry in the area 22 years.

Mercado will be on staff at the end of July.

Matteo's seeks license to sell beer, wine

Matthew Vocino hopes soon to be selling select premium beer and wines in his gourmet food shop, Matteo's Select Groceries and Services in the red gothic building at the south end of downtown Clarkston.

On June 27, the village council gave its unanimous recommendation the state approve Vocino's request for a carryout beer and wine license.

He anticipates a 60-day wait before the decision is made on the state level.

Vocino says he envisions filling some of the shop's shelves with select premium domestic and imported wines and beers.

"I'll have California wines that will surpass the Europeans'." he said.

Shannon Grugel [center] smiles as Al Carter checks her name off the list of those heading to camp Oakland. Her mom, Kathleen Grugel, 🤊 shares her daughter's pleasure.

McCarty bid a fond farewell to Shean and Noel's dad, Dave Strong.

Tina Boyd heads for the bus with camping necessities in hand. About 70 youngsters were sent to the 10-day summer camp through the generosity of Clarkston Area Youth Assistance. They were selected by their teachers for the camperships.
