New year looks good to officials

By Carolyn Walker

Two government leaders in the Independence-Springfield area are anticipating the best in 1985, but one has some reservations about the year-to-be.

"I feel good about going into the new year," said Clarkston Village President Carol Eberhardt, who summarized the general feelings of local officials.

"Things haven't looked this good in 15 years," she said. "Financially, the village is in good shape. The files are in order, and we have a good council."

She mentioned several village projects which are under consideration, including a gazebo and new bridge to be built in Depot Park.

"I anticipate community excitement," she said.

"Politically it's going to be a good year," she added. "The relationship between the village and the township is good. I think Frank Ronk is the best thing to happen to this area in a long time. I feel very positive."

Ronk, supervisor of Independence Township, shares Eberhardt's enthusiasm for the new year.

"I'm looking forward to the personal challenge," he said of the office he won in the November election. "It will be rewarding."

"And I'm looking forward to growth in Independence Township," he said, expressing the hope there would be increased activity in developments that have been stalled by the economy and in new projects.

"I hope things will jell in 1985, and that the economy will allow us to go forward. We'll work every way we can."

Unlike Eberhardt and Ronk, Supervisor Collin Walls of Springfield Township is a little hesitant about the new year.

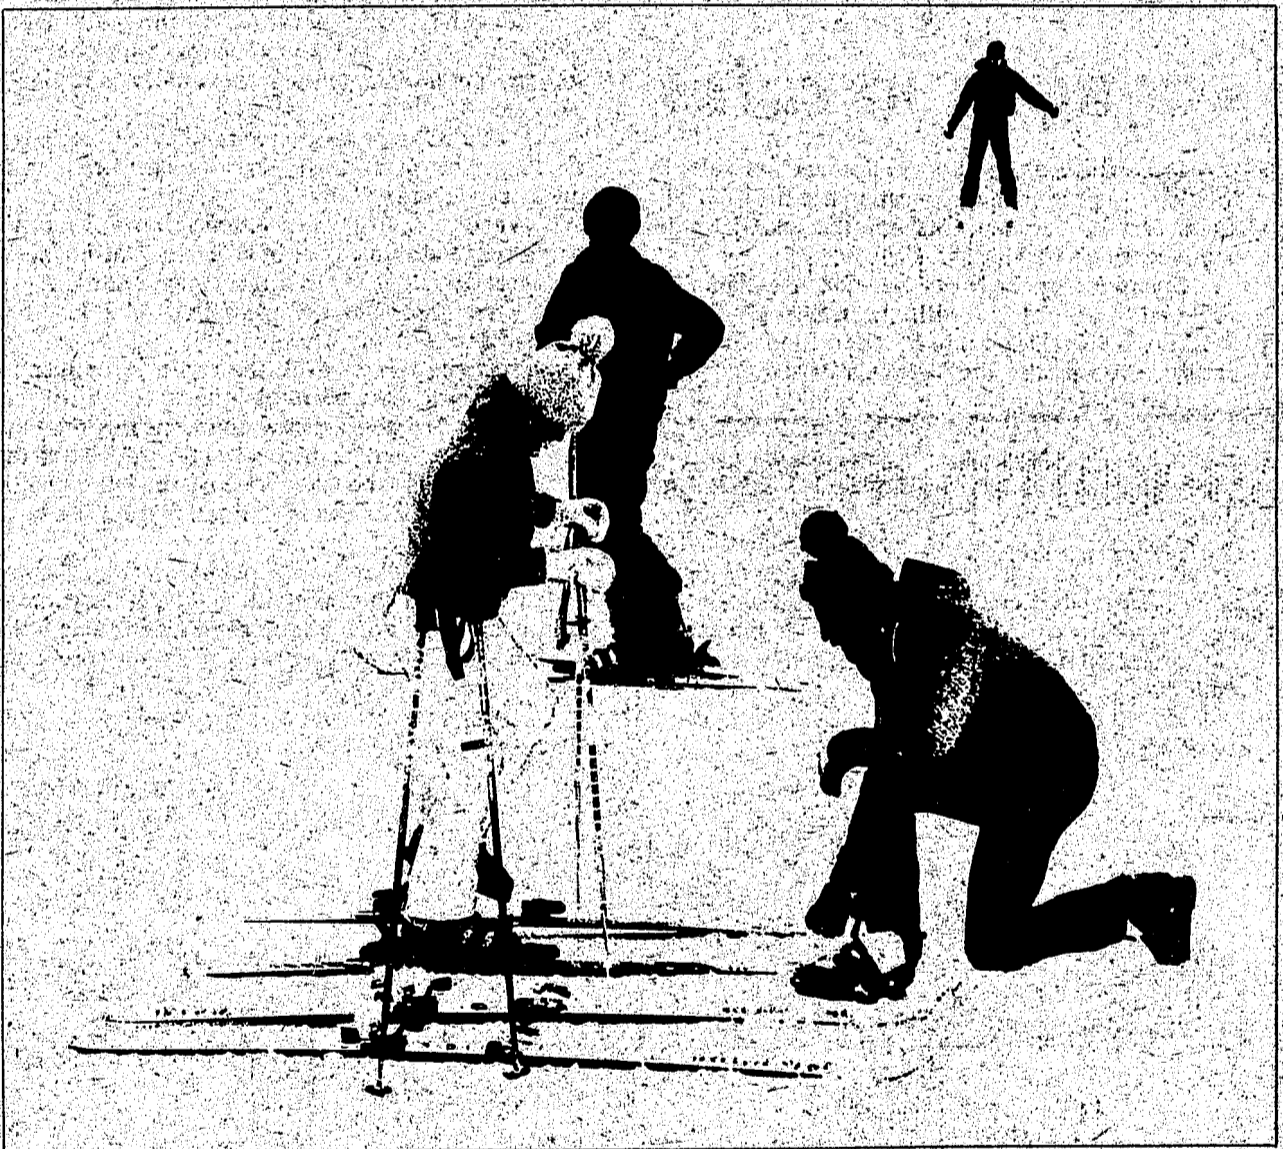

"Interest rates will dictate how 1985 goes," he said. "The economy has picked up a little. And two developers intend to pursue their plats in 1985. Someone has faith in the economy."

Walls said there will be two extremes in Springfield Township.

"More people will be back to work, but those who are still unemployed will be in worse shape," he said.

There will be one significant improvement, according to Walls.

"Tra-tech Ind., a van conversion business, will be coming in," he said. "They will open up 30 to 40 new job positions."

Property ownership in dispute

Suits threaten condominiums

By Carolyn Walker

A dispute over ownership of property proposed for condominiums along White Lake Road has led to lawsuits against the Village of Clarkston and Frank Walker Developer Inc., as well as a lawsuit against the property's former owners.

When contacted by phone, Trish Walker, wife of developer Frank Walker, denied the lawsuit allegations.

"We have an option to buy the property from Welsh," she said. "But, we didn't know anything was amiss."

Walker said she doesn't know how the suits will affect the outcome of the proposed condominium development.

The former owners, Eloise Beach, James and Judy Beach, and Clara Coursen, have filed a $10,000 civil suit against the developer and the village. They seek a restraining order to stop the property from being rezoned.

The Clarkston Village Council approved rezoning the single-family residential property for condominiums at the Dec. 10 meeting. Walker's proposal is for 27 condominiums on the 7-acre site adjacent to Deer Lake Beach.

Walters Lake cleanup hits snag

By Kathy Greenfield

Walters Lake cleanup plans have hit a snag while the lake board tries to determine who should pay the $28,000 annual cost of harvesting weeds and using herbicides.

"We're coming up with a lot of roadblocks," said Independence Township Clerk Richard Holman, a member of the Walters Lake Improvement Board. "Until we formalize a game plan that we can, in turn, bring back to the residents of Walters Lake, we really have nothing to report."

Holman said he expects a second public hearing to be scheduled with residents sometime after the first of the year.

The lake board was formed about a year ago after petitions were circulated and signed by two-thirds of the property owners fronting Walters Lake.

"We have tremendous power," said Holman, who noted the board can spread taxes to maintain the lake without a vote of the residents.

The lake board's members include Holman, who was appointed by the township board; Oakland County Commissioner Richard Kuhn; Deputy County Drain Commissioner James Lenders; and a representative from the Department of Natural Resources.

The first public hearing was held Nov. 26. It included a review of the report and discussion of recommendations in a report by Cleary Engineers Inc. of Auburn Hills.

The controversy involves distribution of costs for harvesting weeds and using herbicides in shallow areas of the 79.6-acre lake located in the northeast quadrant of the township off Clarkston Road.

One recommendation was that the cost be divided among lakefront property owners.

"A number of people in attendance were extremely hostile to that proposal," said Holman.

The study addressed water quality and blamed phosphorus for the lake problems, with the main sources septic tanks (56 percent) and lawn fertilizers (34 percent).

It also cited the large amount of aquatic weeds in the lake, with plant growth existing on more than 60 percent of the lake surface.

Weed control recommendations included harvesting and limited use of herbicides, avoidance of lawn fertilizers, the monitoring of lake conditions with weekly readings and the formation of a lakefront owners' association.

For long-term control, the report recommended education on the harmful effects of fertilizers, replacement of the existing dam, recreational improvements on outlots, reconstruction of the existing problem drain to the lake, selective dredging and the consideration of a sewer system to replace septic tanks.

About a week after the public hearing, the lake board met with the assistant county drain commissioner to discuss other alternatives. Last week another meeting was scheduled between Holman and a property owner on the lake.

Under consideration is spreading the cost among those who have lake access as well as those with lakefront property and the use of four or five different rate structures.

But while residents in the Sunny Beach subdivision have beach property for their use, those in the Thendara Park subdivision technically have access but it's not the same, Holman said.

"Obviously we're struggling to find a fair and equitable solution," he said. "There are so many angles to this decision that we're not going to make everyone happy. If we can't find a fair and equitable solution, this project won't go."

"I really don't know what we'll do at this point and, of course, there's always the possibility we'll do nothing. I really hate to consider that, but it can't be dismissed."

When another hearing is scheduled, a public notice will be printed in The Clarkston News, he said, and it's likely letters will be mailed to those who attended the Nov. 26 hearing.

Workshop topic: changes in rules

Proposed changes in special education rules by the State Department of Education are the topic of a series of four parent workshops this month in Independence Township.

Sponsored by the North Oakland Association for Children and Adults with Learning Disabilities (ACLAD), the workshop is to be led by Linda Treece, a parent advocate with the Michigan ACLAD.

The $15 fee for supplies covers all four sessions. They are scheduled from 1 to 3:30 p.m. on Saturdays, Jan. 5, 12, 19 and 26, at the Sashabaw United Methodist Church, 5300 Maybee, Independence Township.

"If parents come to the workshops, they will find out about the rule changes that are proposed—how it is now and what it could be," said Gail Dickerson, a founder of the North Oakland ACLAD. "If the parents can education themselves, then they can protect their children."

For more information, call Dickerson at 625-5151.

-Correction-

A story in last week's Clarkston News incorrectly listed the board members who cast "no" votes on planning commission appointments.

Trustees Daniel Travis and William Vandermark voted against appointing Joseph Figa and Charles Robertson to the township planning commission at the Dec. 18 Independence Township Board meeting. All other votes were for the appointments.

All hail the Cherry Bowl

The first annual Cherry Bowl in Pontiac Silverdome is a success in just about everyone's opinion. The exception would be the Spartan football team and its ardent followers. Even they had to enjoy the halftime spectacle, the enthusiasm of the Army cadets, and the general atmosphere a Bowl game brings. Photographer Kevin Batchelder was on hand to bring this paper's readers a first-hand photo report.

Cadet Bill Kime, 78, chats with West Point Superintendent Lt. General Willard Warren Scott.

The Spartans got on the board with four minutes to go when Bob Wasczenski caught a Dave Yarema pass in the endzone. There to greet him were Matt Buckner, 22, and Doug Pavsek, 27.

Kevin Batchelder

Once in a while there was something for Spartan boosters, such as this one, to cheer about.

No game is complete without a banner these days.

When the West Point Alma Mater is played, the cadets stand at attention, a long standing tradition at the academy. Gordon Scott, 48, stands with The Black Knight of the Hudson mascot. Army won, 10-6.

Garage attracts gobblers

By Carolyn Walker

Robert Laurie's turkeys like garages. He admits it.

"They have a propensity for going in garages," he says of his nine thoroughbred Pennsylvania wild turkeys.

His Reese Road neighbor, Charles Rash, however, doesn't appreciate turkey "pawprints" on his car.

Rash called the Oakland County Sheriff Dec. 22 and filed a complaint against the wandering gobblers. The birds had scratched the paint on an automobile parked in Rash's garage, the report said.

"They are usually penned up," said Laurie.

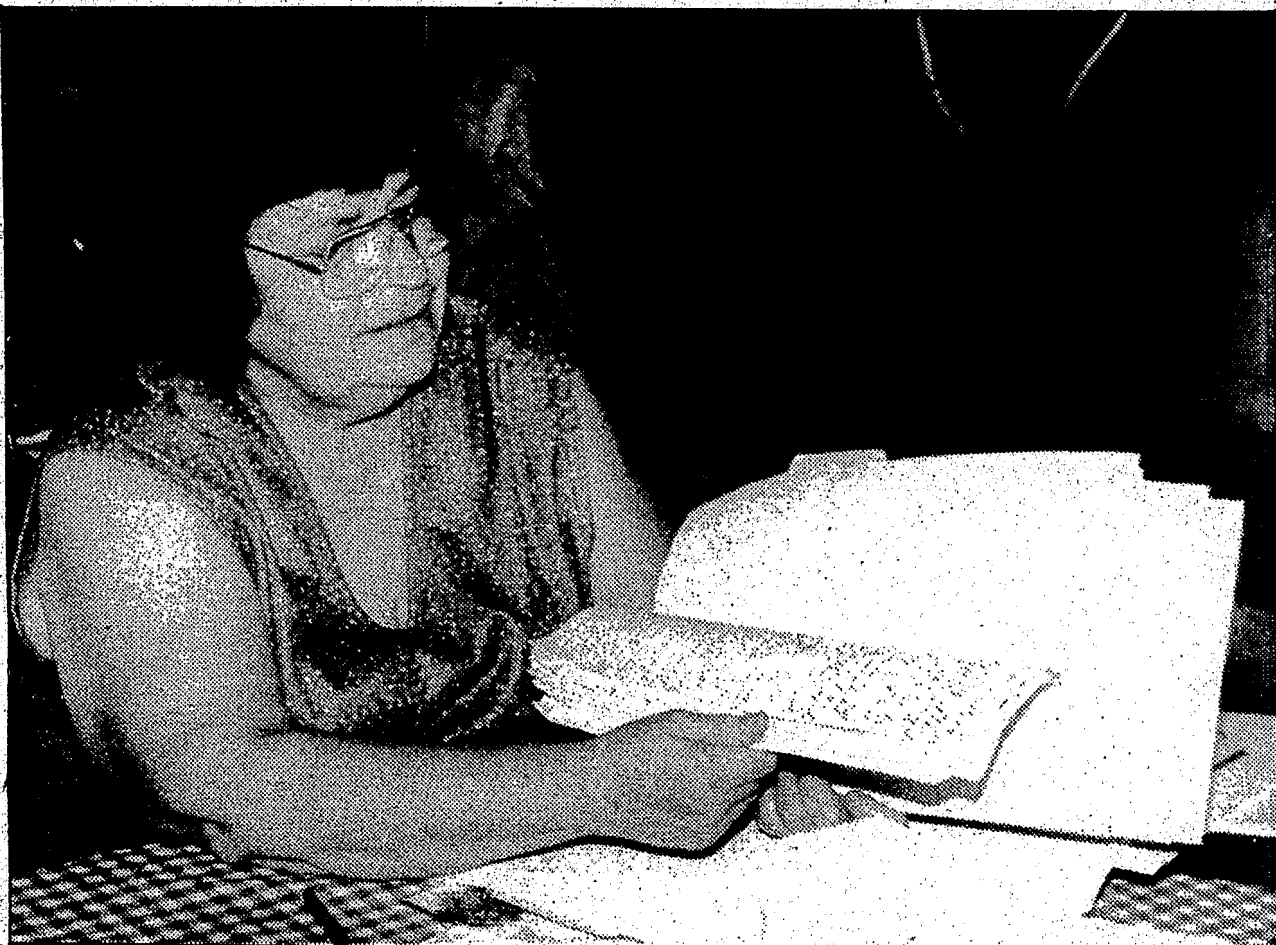

"My daughter was home from college and she let the turkeys out."

According to the police report, Laurie agreed to better restrain the birds, which he obtained in August from a Grand Rapids breeder.

"I intended to raise them and turn them loose in Clarkston," he said, noting that the Michigan Department of Natural Resources began importing wild turkeys, which were once common in Michigan, from Pennsylvania about 10 years ago.

"Then I found out it's against the law to turn them loose," he said. "I guess I'll probably give away six of them and keep three for breeding. 'I'd never eat them.'"

Rash declined comment on the situation.

Proposed condominiums stir land dispute

The Beaches and Coursen are also attempting to recover their property and damages in excess of $500,000 in a civil suit against property purchasers, Gary and Barbara Welsh of Lake Angelus, co-partners of Qu'Appelle Co.

The suits were filed in circuit court in December 1984.

According to court documents, the property was inherited by the Beaches and Coursen and sold to Qu'Appelle Co. in November 1981 for $200,000.

Court documents allege that the Welshes defaulted on their payments in August 1984.

The Beaches and Coursen have asked the court to issue a restraining order preventing Qu'Appelle from selling or transferring ownership of the property.

"Gary and Barbara Welsh have assigned their interest in the property to Frank Walker Developer Inc. . . . and stand to make a tremendous profit if said property can be rezoned for condominiums," the lawsuit says.

The lawsuit alleges that Frank Walker knew the property was in default when he petitioned the Village of Clarkston for rezoning.

" . . . on December 10, (when the village agreed to rezone) Frank Walker Developer Inc. knew that the property was in default, knew the Welshes owed $152,073.17, and knew that the Welshes had sued for rescission of the contract," the document says.

The lawsuit further alleges that the Village of Clarkston was negligent.

" . . . the Village of Clarkston had a statutory duty to ascertain the names of the fee owners of said property and provide notice to them prior to taking any action concerning their property interest . . . and that the Village of Clarkston breached said duty," the document says.

In a related lawsuit, Qu'Appelle alleges that the Beaches and Coursen misrepresented the acreage of the property when they sold it by saying there were 7 acres.

Qu'Appelle alleges there are 5.8 acres in the complaint.

The Welshes have sued the Beaches and Coursen for return of their money in exchange for the property.

" . . . this action was taken to stall the Counter-Plaintiffs (Beaches and Coursen) from foreclosing on this contract and to allow Frank Walker Developer Inc. more time to get the property rezoned," says the lawsuit.

Attorneys for the parties in the suits were unavailable for comment.

Christy Ann Schroeder's as bold as can be as she talks to Santa, but she doesn't let go of her dad's finger.

A 20-year tradition

For believers

By Kathy Greenfield

A little girl hurries over to her parents.

"Santa Claus talked to me!" she says.

"What did he say?" asks her dad.

"I can't remember," she says.

But she never stops smiling—and when her dad asks if it was all good, she says yes.

Another Believers' Party is underway at the home of Laura and Andrew Creamer of Independence Township.

The annual event spans 20 years. They've had similar parties in Connecticut, Lansing, Grosse Pointe and, for the past five years, in Clarkston.

"It started when our youngest son (Warren, 24) was in kindergarten and he now plays Santa Claus," said Laura.

About 150 people visited the Creamers Dec. 23. There were three parties, each lasting about one-and-one-half hours. The party invitations went out to the believers, who were asked to bring along parents or grandparents.

The festivities follow a time-hewn pattern, beginning with Christmas carols led by Andrew at the piano. Then, when everyone has arrived, the whole crowd yells for Santa. Sure enough, he walks through the front door.

Even after all these years, the intensity of the children's caring for Santa continues to surprise and delight Laura.

"One little boy from Clarkston gave Santa Claus a picture of the planets so Santa Claus wouldn't get too close to the sun and get burned," she said. "It left me absolutely speechless."

And she shared a story from a Christmas past: "One time when the oldest boy was Santa Claus he had a broken hand, and he told the children Rudolph stepped on it." Later, "one little boy told his grandparents they couldn't have any big presents because Santa Claus couldn't handle them."

Each of the Creamers' four sons have filled the role of Santa—Drew, Charlie, Mark and, now, Warren.

Charlie brings his family from Lansing to attend the Believers' Parties. Other guests this year came from as far away as Port Huron.

The parties have always been geared for children. Hot chocolate and cupcakes are the main treats, and each child receives a candy cane from Santa.

"We do have punch for the adults, but that's the only attention the adults get," said Laura. "Everyone else gives a cocktail party and we give a cocoa party."

"We have had some wonderful times."

Away from the crowd of children still circling Santa, a little girl holds onto her candy cane and stands near the doorway Santa entered.

An adult walks by. She looks up and points toward the living room.

"There's Santa Claus," she says. "He gave me a candy cane!"

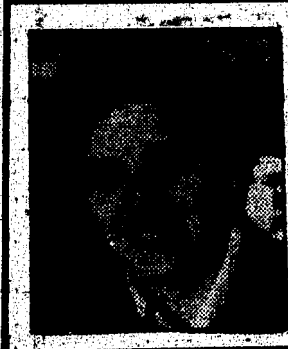

Jennifer Zorza takes her turn in Santa's lap while many of the children at one of the Creamers' three Believers' Parties gather round to share their Christmas wishes.

Daniel Wimmer's sound asleep when his mom, Billie, places him in Santa's lap. When the toddler wakes up, he just snuggles into that soft beard. Later, when he gets a close look at who he's with, Daniel's eyes open wide as can be—but he doesn't cry.

I'll tell you
Kathy Greenfield

Some things I've been meaning to tell you:
My absolute favorite typographical error has yet to make it into the newspaper.

The typing error happens because the keyboard on the computer is slightly different than that of a typewriter, especially when it comes to symbols and some punctuation.

On this keyboard, the dollar sign is below the exclamation point. On a regular typewriter, the exclamation point is someplace else and the dollar sign is the shift key above the number four.

In any event, I frequently push the shift key when trying to type a dollar sign. Then I get 140,000 instead of $40,000, or whatever dollar amount I'm trying to type.

The ! frequently seems more appropriate.

Long ago somebody told me the fastest typists think in words, not in letters. If your brain has to slow down enough to think of each letter, the race for speed is over.

All that came back to mind when I was playing Trivial Pursuit and was asked what letter was found next to another letter on the keyboard.

If I know nothing else, I should be able to handle a typewriting keyboard question. Deep inside my brain, the typewriters' keys are emblazoned on my subconscious.

That's why it was so frustrating to have to give up on answering the question. I simply couldn't remember.

Speaking of subconscious, that could explain why Christmas seemed to fly by this year. I think it had something to do with the weather.

I can remember the first snowfall we had near the end of November, before Thanksgiving, and feeling a bit of the old holiday zip.

As we meandered through December, though, it was too warm for my subconscious to react. I didn't even begin to get a yen for Christmas carols until Dec. 23.

Now I'm forced to look forward to Christmas 1985. And I do.

Jim's Jottings

I swear I've been full for three weeks. Maybe longer. Do you feel the same way? Like you was born with one hand picking up a cookie, piece of candy or peanuts from just before your morning coffee through 'just one more' before you go to bed?

Well, bulging Bunkie, this has got to stop. It's to the point that every time I see a starving person in Ethiopia, and tv has shown plenty of that this season, I get an urge to eat.

A person's jaws have just so many chews in them, and I've picked up eight years since November 22.

I've been watching my weight for about six years, making sure it didn't vary more than four pounds. I haven't given up watching my weight during the holidays, it's just that I've got quite a bit more of it to watch.

I'm growing by multiples of four. I know I'm not alone. I've seen you out there, probably at the hors d'oeuvre table. That's one of my main weaknesses. That and eggnog.

Use local people

A fire chief and three firemen. Should these appointments be advertised in tri-county newspapers?

Would it not be better to fill the chief's job within the ranks of our local department, as we have talented and experienced personnel?

Three firefighters to be hired, would this not be an opportunity to allow three of our local and experienced on-call firemen to have a full-time job in the township where they reside and pay taxes?

I personally feel if our township promotes and hires within their own ranks, it would allow the local firefighters something to work toward in the future.

Do the City of Pontiac and other areas advertise for a new chief when a vacancy exists?

Let's utilize our talents, experience and tax dollars to remain in our own township!

Forever eating

me and I'll make Dagwood Bumpstead's late-night sandwich look like a Wheat-thin.

If a magnet had as much attraction to metal as a dish of sour cream, catsup, horseradish, and crab meat has to me, it could pull a battleship 37 miles across land.

I sat down to a Christmas feast, feeling full from many days of devouring everything edible, including a basket of pistachios on the premises, and had two helpings of each of the 47 delectable dishes that passed.

That's ridiculous! There's no reason to do that. There were two young boys at the table, 2- and 3-year-olds who know more than I do about eating.

One took a couple bites and left the table. I should have followed him. He didn't gain 10 pounds at one setting.

And, worse, a hour after gorging myself, the hostess asked if anyone wanted ice cream, and the 3-year-old and I were the only ones of 18 to raise their hands.

I keep asking myself, even now (I haven't had a nibble in four hours): Why?

I needn't ask. I know why. I like food!

I like the taste of everything on the menu. My idea of dieting is to forgo a tossed salad at the buffet table and go to the cheeses, strawberries, olives, 9-bean salad, macaroni and potato salad, etc.

Taking lettuce on a salad plate means you're taking a lot of air. These other foods I mentioned are solids. You get more on a plate.

It's been so long since I've felt a hunger pang, I'm not sure I'll recognize it.

For a while during this increased-tonnage period I stayed away from the scales. I let the addict-reasoning prevail. "My pants are tight because I've been through a lot of strain lately, which has created a lot of gas."

Then there was the one that went, "This full feeling is only because the prunes lost their power in the draught (or was it early frost)."

Anyway, my senses have returned. I just wish my old belt size would.

Job applicant's story

Lapeer County Press Publisher Ben Myers tells the following story of a young woman who applied for a $4 to $5 per hour front office job at his paper recently. It's a true story, and unfortunately, it is all too indicative of our times.

A young woman applied for a job with us. The local MESC (unemployment office) sent her along with 5 other applicants. This gal has been unemployed for quite awhile.

The job was in our front office. It pays from $4 to $5 per hour.

Front Office manager Mary Lebo had rejected the other applicants. She asked me to meet this young woman before she was hired.

The application and tests said she was a high school graduate, typing was fine, spelling and math were probably better than mine.

In addition to her skills, she was reasonably attractive, and had a bright spunky personality. Just the kind of person we want working with our customers and classified ads and subscriptions.

The young lady waited until we were alone in the conference room. Then she said: "This is a nice place. I'll make a bit more here than I do on welfare but I'll have to work all day long."

She went on: "Right now I can sleep in late, clean a few houses for cash and be home by three. So I don't want your job."

"If you hire me and force me off welfare, I'll be the most miserable employee you have ever had. Eventually, you'll have to fire me. Then I'll sue you for sexual discrimination."

"I'll get a free attorney supplied by the state. Eventually I'll collect something and be back on welfare."

She didn't stop there. "While I'm suing, you will have to take time out from work to defend The County Press. You'll also have to hire an attorney."

"So my advise to us is sign my little MESC card saying I'm not qualified and you'll never hear from me again."

Now, I knew why she was so bright, she had the welfare system figured out and was living well on it.

I signed her card. She doesn't work here. Welfare is the right thing to do. Without it, the disadvantaged starve or freeze. The unlucky suffer when the economy sours.

But Michigan's system stinks. There are a lot of examples, but when you can get cash change back from your food stamps to buy cigarettes and booze, that's not right. When you can stay on the dole, sleep late and get home early with money in your pocket, the system is wrong.

Michigan's welfare is so liberal, people move here from other states just so they can draw on it.

Now the state has yet another program. Workfare. It costs us taxpayers $21.5 million a year. It is the biggest single program of its kind funded by any state. Its purpose is to teach people how to get back to work.

Michigan's welfare system already costs us $3.2 billion.

Carol Ostentoski of the Thumb area training consortium, a state group involved in workfare says: "One problem with the welfare system is that people get stuck in a program rut. They lose the desire to find a job on their own."

"He's right. The young lady I tried to hire tells the story."

But instead of making simple cuts like no cash change back from food stamps, the state is throwing $21.5 million at a training program to teach people how to work.

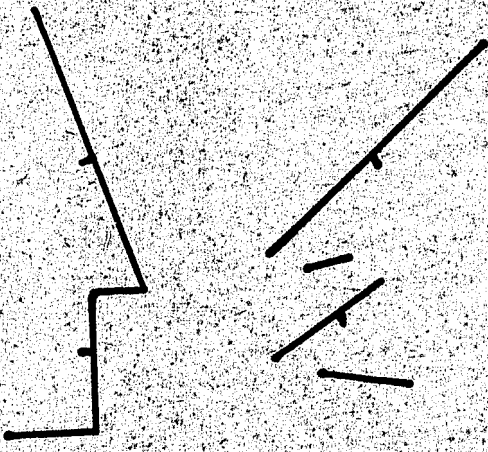

I remember how my dad taught me to work. Around age 10, I was told there would be no allowance if I didn't mop the floors and empty the waste baskets at The County Press every Saturday.

No allowance meant no Bismarks at Kruth's Bakery.

I wonder if cutting off the luxuries like cigarettes and booze (like my doughnuts) would keep the poor and unlucky fed, and give the lazy the kick in the pants they need.

Mapless in Charleston

Jim Fitzgerald

It was dumb of me to take my wife to Charleston, S.C. Historic Charleston is full of old stuff that our ancestors never knew enough to throw away. Every time we toured an antebellum home, she ponted at the ancient furnishings and said: "If people didn't save things, there would be no history."

Currently, she is trying to find room in our apartment to save everything her mother and grandmothers never threw away. And she eagerly seized upon our Charleston experience as the ultimate example of how future generations will suffer from history loss if I refuse to give up a bathroom to make space for a 120-year-old china cabinet.

With unassailable logic, I pointed out that in Charleston we were standing on the same stone floors where George Washington once stood, and walking through the fort that received the first shot fired in the Civil War. The old stuff in Charleston memorializes great events that shaped this nation's TV mini-series for generations to come.

But it is unlikely that tourists, in 2084, will be interested in pausing behind the velvet rope strung around the china cabinet that in 1984 forced Jim Fitzgerald to regularly run to the corner gas station.

MY WIFE REJECTED my unassailable logic, thereby preserving tradition. I don't mean the new tradition of our home containing more china cabinets than china dishes. I mean the old tradition of her rejecting my unassailable logic. Although she never throws things away, she does lose them. In a Charleston suburb she lost the packet of clearly routed maps the Auto Club had given us to keep from getting lost while driving 2,000 miles. She noticed it was missing immediately after we left a theater and, in her position as chief navigator, she was unable to tell the pilot how in hell to get back to our motel.

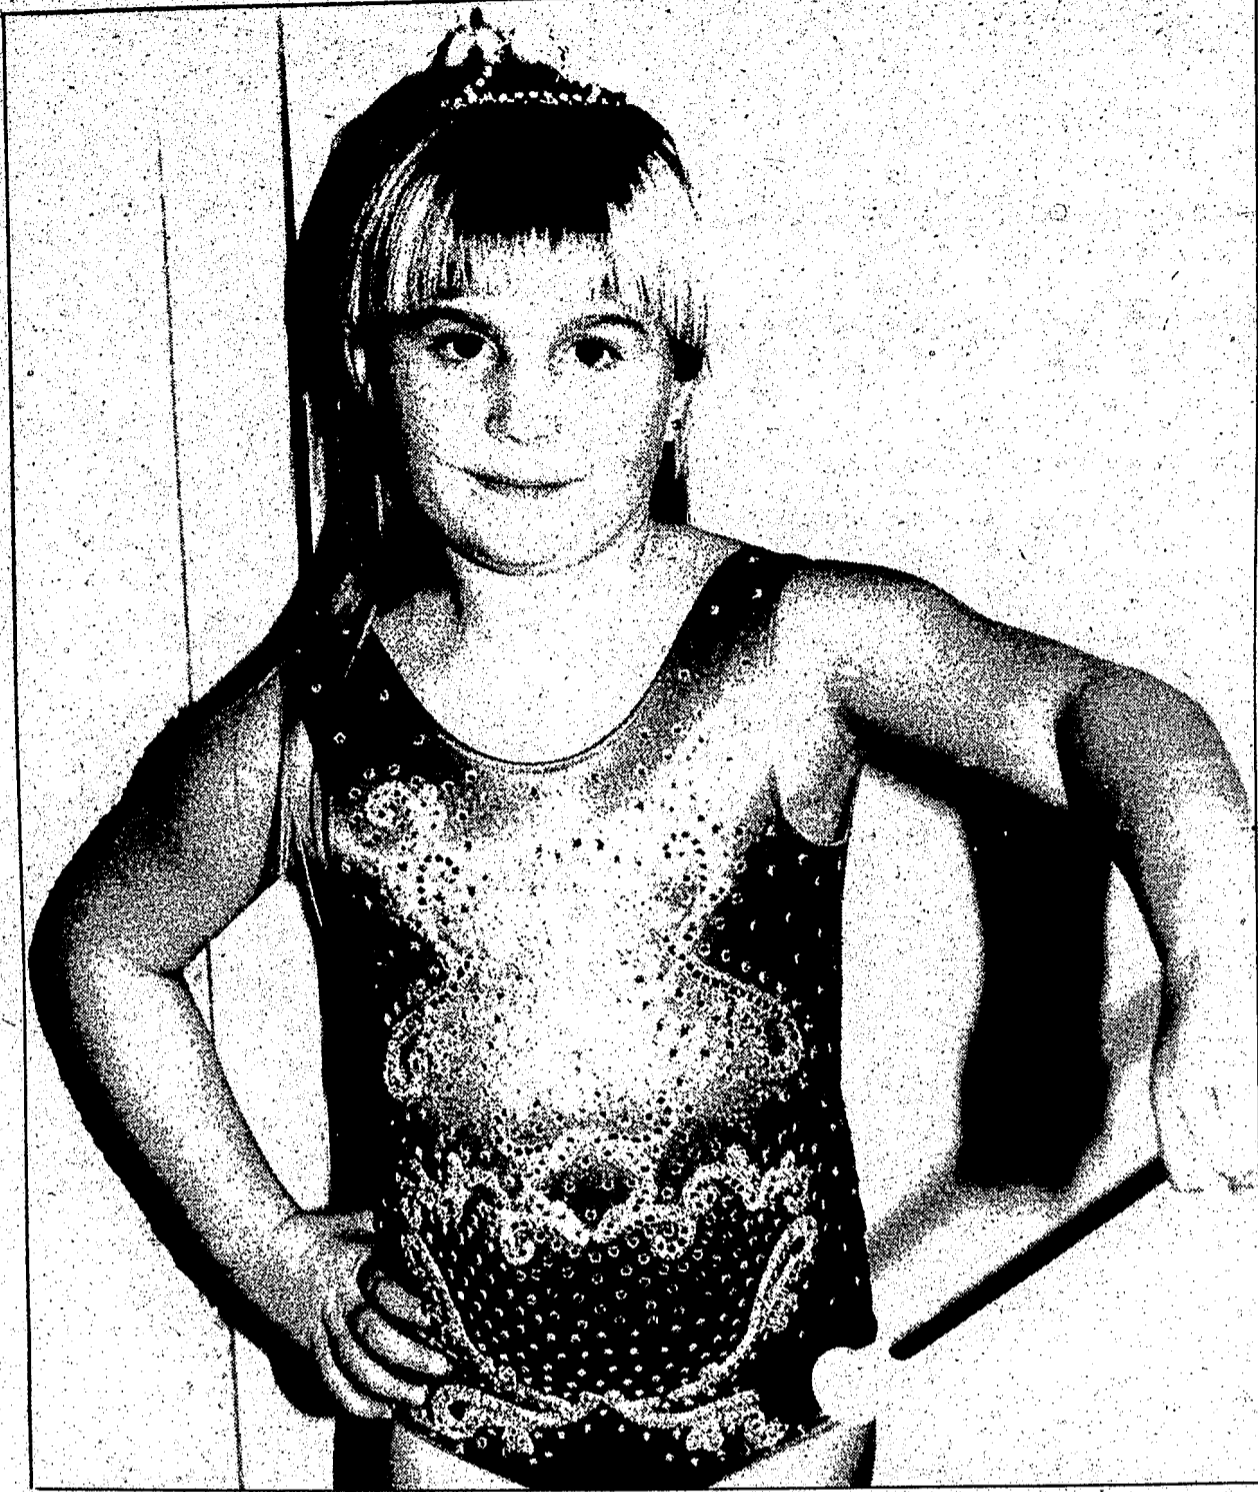

My first suggestion was that the map packet, half the size of a football, had probably been mislaid within the confines of her purse, twice the size of a football field. But a 15-minute search, made while rolling on the wrong road, proved fruitless, although it did raise the fascinating question of why one woman would carry 32 ballpoint pens and 12 half-empty Kleenex boxes in one purse.

The next step was to retrace our steps to the theater, which was possible only because the navigator could follow my teardrops on the road. The pilot always hangs his head out the window and cries when he fears he will never again return home to see his remote-control TV switch. The switch is what I missed most while lying on motel beds across the room from TV sets that constantly needed channel changes. Otherwise I would have writhed my body into untieable knots while watching local newscasters suffer from the terminally embarrassing cutesy disease which is sweeping like the plague through TV stations everywhere.

ANYWAY, WITH the aid of an usher and his flashlight, my wife searched the theater auditorium and rest room for the map packet that might have dropped from her purse. Meanwhile, I was prostrated on the parking lot, searching under cars. We both failed.

Finally, to get rid of us, the usher provided directions back to our motel where the map packet was found on the bed where my wife had left it. Later I will tell you how unassailably the pilot reacted to this brilliant bit of navigation which, in at least one family, will surely go down farther in history than a china cabinet. I have to write a lot more about Charleston so I can deduct a truly historic sum from my income tax.

Lauer's youngest students, she shows a lot of potential, according to her teacher.

Courtney twirls to four awards

By Carolyn Walker

Dynamite comes in a small package. So does 6-year-old Courtney Grimes, local baton-twirling wonder.

"After only two months of baton lessons, Courtney walked away from her first competition with four first- and second-place awards," says her proud mother, Debby Ballard.

"She won first places in Beginner Basic Strut and Best Costume and second places in Advanced Basic Strut and Queen of the Day, a dress-modeling event. She won over other 4- to 7-year-olds from Michigan, Ohio and Indiana."

Courtney competed in the Drum Majorettes of America Regional Tri-State Competition held Dec. 9 at the Waterford CAI building.

"I like twirling best," says the Pine Knob pupil, who also enjoys ballet, jazz and tap dancing.

Courtney began taking private lessons from June Lauer in October.

"She has a real good attitude and lots of talent," says Lauer, a 1961 winner of the Purdue Golden Girl award.

"She shows a lot of promise."

BB lodges in face

By Carolyn Walker

Eric Barna, 15, of Clarkston Road, Independence Township, was shot by a BB as he walked along a road near his home Dec. 27.

The BB entered his face one-half inch from his right eye, said his mother, Vivian.

The incident occurred at 7:02 p.m. as he was walking on Clarkston Road near Clintonville Road.

"From the entry wound, I would say it was shot from a passing car," said Mrs. Barna.

"He was walking with his head down in his coat because of the cold," she said. "If he would have had his head down a little farther, he could have lost his eye."

"People think BB guns are harmless, but they're not."

Eric removed the BB himself, and did not require medical treatment, according to his mother.

Mrs. Barna said she filed a police report with the Oakland County Sheriff's Department in case something like this happens again in the area.

"They have the BB for comparison," she said, adding that she thought life in Clarkston would be safer than in other communities.

"Welcome to Detroit," Mrs. Barna said, quoting a relative she spoke to after the incident.

Road closing opposed by board

Residents say traffic is too heavy

By Dan Vandenhemel

Residents of Big Lake Road want the Oakland County Road Commission to abandon their road, but the Springfield Township Board doesn't think it's a good idea.

Supervisor Collin Walls said if the county abandons the road it would become private and the residents would be responsible for the upkeep of the dirt road including snow removal.

Residents of the one-half to three-quarter-mile stretch that borders Big Lake between Scott and Ormond roads want to keep out through traffic. The proposed abandonment calls for two cul-de-sacs at the west end of Big Lake.

"There's about 30 homes involved," Walls said. "We had a public hearing Nov. 19 and about 45 people were there. They asked the representative from the road commission to not maintain it. He said it's the first time anyone asked for that. The residents said the rougher road brought the speeds down."

A traffic count by the road commission showed 98 cars made the trip each day. Walls said that was an underestimate.

"The residents make that themselves," he said at the Dec. 12 board meeting. "Maybe 20 years ago, but not now."

Trustee William Whitley said he's opposed to abandoning the road without looking at all the possibilities, such as signs limiting usage or lowering the speed.

The board unanimously voted against recommending the road commission abandon the road.

"Obviously there's a problem out there," said Walls. "Personally, I think the road should be improved, not abandoned."

Some residents whose homes sit very close to Big Lake Road say they wouldn't mind if the Oakland County Road Commission stopped performing snow removal tasks.

3 hospitalized in accident on Sashabaw

By Carolyn Walker

A three-car accident on Sashabaw Road near the Pine Knob Ski Resort sent three people to the hospital Dec. 19.

The accident occurred at 4:55 p.m. during a snowstorm, according to Deputy Marc Gallo of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department.

Christopher Rollman, 18, of Eastlawn Avenue, Independence Township, slid onto Sashabaw Road from a Pine Knob Resort driveway and struck a north-bound auto driven by Robert Edwards, 47, of Whipple Shores Drive, Independence Township, according to a police report.

Edwards' car subsequently spun around and was pushed into a third car driven by Roy Breault Jr., 42, of Waterford Township.

Edwards and his wife, Barbara, a passenger in his car, were taken by Fleet Ambulance to Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital. They both were in good condition Friday, said a hospital spokesperson.

Breault was admitted to Pontiac General Hospital where he was in good condition Friday, according to a hospital spokesperson.

Rollman and Brian Kowalik, 18, of Curtis Lane, Independence Township, a passenger in Edwards' car, were not injured, according to police.

Opponents look up to Wolves

Added height and returning players are key to success

By Dan Vandenhemel

There's a bumper crop of height at Clarkston High School and most of it's showing up on the volleyball teams.

The varsity and junior varsity Wolves are boasting taller teams this season. And the height will help, said Nancy Foster who's beginning her second year as varsity coach.

Five of the players are over 5-8, topped by Wendy Learmont at 5-11; Jill DeShelter, Michelle Taulbee and Beth Springer at 5-9; and Kecia Powell at 5-8.

"We look pretty tall," Foster said. "Usually there's one or two that tall. We're just a lot taller."

Last year, the Wolves won the district title and lost to Flint Kearsley in the first round of regionals. They ended with a 26-5 record.

Foster has the Wolves working hard to repeat as champs and the added height is letting her do some things differently.

"We're looking at different defenses right now, one defense for junk that's thrown against us and one more for power teams like Kearsley," she said.

"We just got overpowered by Kearsley. We didn't play bad, they just blocked a lot of our shots."

Along with the height advantage, Foster said she expects strong performances by Learmont, Laura Hurren and Roseann Hirneisen, who are returning first team All-League selections.

Rounding out the 12-player squad are Kim Ottman, Tricia Butler, Tammy Pittman, Laurie Brandt and Sue Kithil.

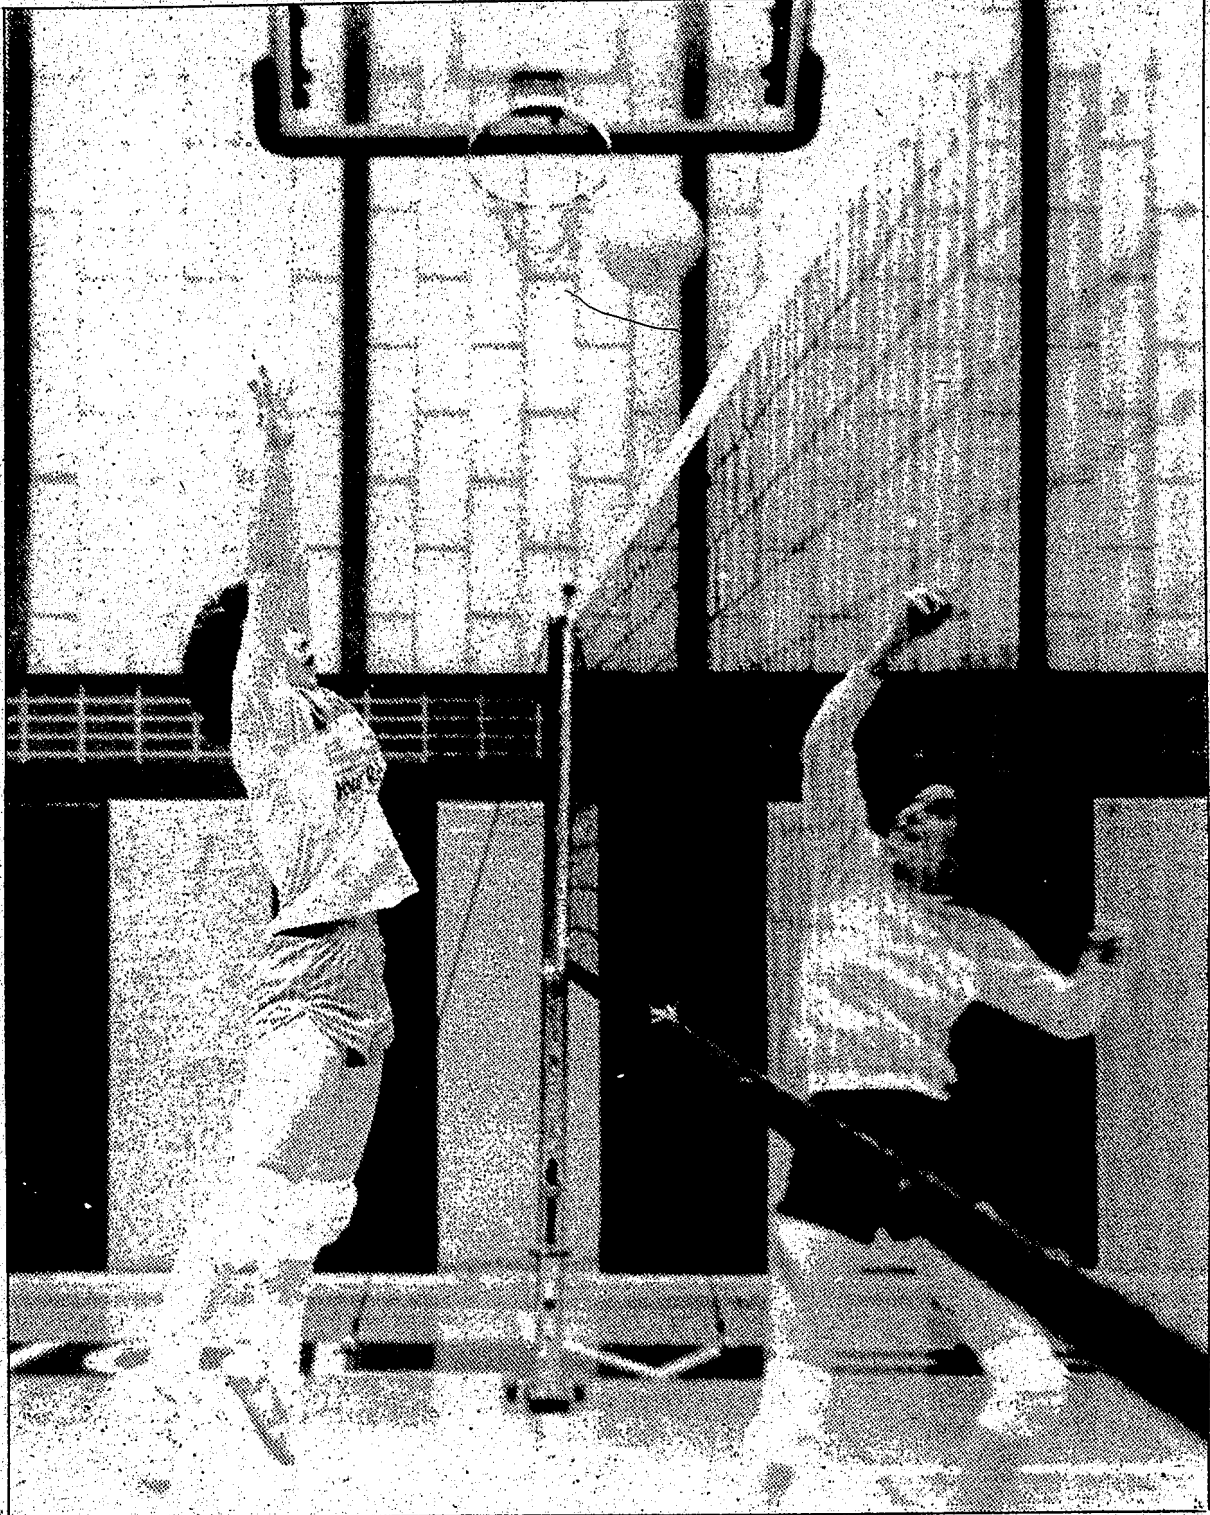

"We've got a strong nucleus with Wendy in the front row, Laura as the setter and Roseann in the back row," said Foster. "Roseann is a lot stronger than last year. She's a real powerhouse. She's my best all-around player."

Foster is a little leary of the league this season. Last year, the Wolves breezed through the Greater Oakland Activities League with an unblemished mark.

"It's going to be a lot tougher this time around," she said. "Lake Orion only lost one starter, and Kettering brought three players up from junior varsity late in the season and they have some experience. I don't know if we'll go undefeated this year, but we won't be able to cruise through it either."

Hopes high for JV netters

By Dan Vandenhemel

The new version of the junior varsity volleyball team at Clarkston High School is looking to match last year's 21-4 mark. But that's the only thing the Wolves are looking up to.

This year's squad stands above previous teams, but that doesn't automatically mean success, says coach Gordy Richardson.

"We're considerably taller than last year. We've got a lot of good average size," he said. "We should be able to block quite well, but we still have to be in the right place, make the right move at the right time."

That's Richardson's job: to work the 12 girls on the team into shape for the Jan. 7 opener with Waterford Mott.

On the team are co-captains Shelly Heyman and Beth Tilley, Wendy Cohoon, Maggie Gdula, Missy O'Dell, Jessica Shoup, Gina Houck, Dawn Diederich, Kelly Laidig, Joanne Beck, Stacie Jensen and Coreen Hummel.

Richardson is looking for help throughout the year from Heyman, Tilley, Cohoon and O'Dell.

The even number makes it easier on practices. With 12 players, Richardson can have the team scrimmage itself and get a lot of work done.

"It's a very workable number," he said. "This way we don't have a team with four players on it and ... the team with the player advantage won't work as hard as they should."

Getting the team ready for the first match isn't the only problem facing the coach. He also has to prepare the players for the adjustment from junior high to high school play.

"Volleyball is a very aggressive game," Richardson said. "You attack, then sit back. It's a very different atmosphere. There's a lot of momentum change. The skill level is better here, too."

Wrestlers come up short at county meet

By Dan Vandenhemel

Greg Gwisdalla has some expectations of his Clarkston Wolves wrestlers. They didn't quite make them at the recent Oakland County Meet.

Teams from around the county converged for two days, Dec. 21 and 22, at Rochester Adams and Troy high schools to determine the best team and individual wrestlers.

Of the 46 schools and close to 600 wrestlers, the Wolves as a team finished 33rd and Brent Gwisdalla earned the only individual medal with a sixth place at 126 pounds.

Along with the younger Gwisdalla, returning the next day to wrestle were Jackie Basham at 145 pounds and heavyweight John Haddad. Gwisdalla holds a 10-4 season record and Basham is next with a 9-4 slate.

"I thought we'd do better than that, at least in the top half," the coach said. "We had some injuries that hurt us and some other efforts that I'm disappointed with."

Rocky Tucker, at 105, hurt his left side and could barely lift his arm, and Todd Olsen injured his knee and couldn't continue. Gwisdalla wouldn't mention the names of those lacking in effort.

The first-year coach couldn't pinpoint the problem but did say the two-day event is hard on Brent Gwisdalla is the Wolves' leading wrestler so far this season with a 10-4 record and a sixth-place finish in the Oakland County Meet.

everybody involved. Gwisdalla said they were in Troy until midnight on Friday and had to be back at 7 a.m.

"It's like a mini-state tournament. A lot of coaches feel that way about Oakland County," Gwisdalla said. "There's a lot of tough competition."

The Wolves had a busy week besides the county meet. Most recently, they lost 44-27 to Bishop Foley on Dec. 18. Taking matches for Clarkston were Rocky Tucker at 112 pounds, Marc Morales at 119, Gwisdalla at 132 and Basham at 145. Mark Ice at 98 pounds won by a void.

Clarkston also won three times in a triple dual meet Dec. 12. They defeated Almont, 70-6; Cranbrook, 45-30; and Pontiac Catholic, 63-10.

Winning three matches that day were Jeff Funck at 105 pounds, Tucker at 112, Morales at 119, Gwisdalla at 132, Basham at 145, Ken Stuk at 155 and Todd Olsen at 185.

Coming out on top twice were Rich Sedorchuk at 138, Jerry Alley at 198 and heavyweight Haddad.

Recording one victory were Ice at 98, Rob Lund at 126, Todd Edmunds at 167 and Troy Castle at 167.

Prevent Colds & Infections With Vitamin C

Vitamin C can help defend us against viruses and bacteria, plus reduce the symptoms and duration of any infection. Some animals produce vitamin C internally, in the liver or kidney's although humans do not. The amount of Vitamin C found in the average diet is nowhere near the amount we require for optimal health. If we attempted to obtain all our C from dietary sources we would quickly consume enough calories to make us obese.

Dr. Pauling recommends that all adults take a preventive dose of 10 grams (10,000 milligrams) of Vitamin C daily. In his research, Dr. Pauling has discovered that high doses of C could destroy harmful microbes. Vitamin C comes in tablets, capsules, crystals and liquid form. We carry all kinds. Natural sources of Vitamin C are, tomatoes, citrus fruits, rose hips, corn, broccoli, etc.

PRAYER TO THE Holy Spirit- Holy Spirit who make me see everything and who show me the way to reach my ideal. You who give me the Divine gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue, want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you, no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you and my loved ones in your perpetual glory Amen. Thank you for your love towards me and my loved ones. Pray this prayer 3 consecutive days without asking your wish; after the third day your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this prayer as soon as your favor has been granted. Wish granted. T & S. IIIIX-52-1
