Insurance costs soar

By Dan Vandenhemel

Skyrocketing liquor liability insurance rates, up as much as 300 to 800 percent, are forcing some businesses to go without coverage.

The increases are due to a higher number of lawsuits and the low rates previously available, said

Last year, the American Legion post paid $500 and had $300,000 worth of liability. This year the coverage dropped to $100,000 and the price tag was $3,600.

Kelly Kammer, an independent insurance agent with Kammer and Sons in Clarkston.

Three Independence Township establishments contacted by The Clarkston News are in the midst trying to cope with the change.

The general membership of the American Legion Campbell-Richmond Post 63 voted to drop coverage, but other factors forced a change in the decision, said Treasurer Denny Warden.

Last year, the post located on M-15 paid $500 and had $300,000 worth of liability. This year the coverage dropped to $100,000 and the price tag was $3,600.

"It's almost too much for us to handle," Warden said. "We voted to drop it but if we don't keep it, the officers would be liable. We'd never be able to keep any officers."

"So many places have been hit (by lawsuits) that the cost has gone out of sight. A lot of places have totally dropped their coverage."

Chris Nicholas of Alexander's on Dixie Highway said they've called their insurance agent to find out what is going on.

"I'm 'up in the air,'" Nicholas said. "Some lawsuits could knock out a business. The money that people are asking for is something else. No place is worth that much. Some are taking chances by not having liability until they get hit."

The Pine Knob Beer and Wine Shoppe on Maybee Road has dropped all liquor liability, at least for now.

Part-owner Mike Bahri said last year they had $1 million in coverage for about $400. This time around, the cost was closer to $2,000 and the coverage was probably less than $500,000, he said.

"I'm not sure exactly how much, but probably just enough to keep us in the ball game," Bahri said.

Businesses face court action

By Carolyn Walker

The owners of two area bar/restaurants, the Clarkston Cafe and the Club Players of Waterford Township, have recently been on the receiving end of lawsuits stemming from the Michigan Dram Shop Act.

Under the act, licensed bar and restaurant owners can be sued for selling liquor to visibly intoxicated patrons who are later hurt, or hurt someone else, in an accident, said attorney Richard Campbell.

Campbell, former attorney for Independence Township, is the sole stock owner of The Club Players.

Managed by his brother, Tom, the Club Players was sued by a widow and her two children for serving drinks to her husband who was subsequently killed in a car accident.

The suit resulted in an annuity settlement of an estimated $5 million, Campbell said, adding that the money is to be paid in installments over the lifetime of the survivors.

Campbell said he is opposed to the years-old act, which he said stems from an English tradition in which a bar owner would buy a family groceries if the head-of-the-house spent all his money at his establishment.

"I don't believe the act to be fair or reasonable," Campbell said, calling the modern interpretation of the act a "perversion."

"I don't think that bar owners have any control over what they're being made liable for. The problem with the Dram Shop Act is you can't tell when somebody's intoxicated. You don't give them a questionnaire."

Many variables, such as the partaking of liquor or drugs while driving, must also be considered, Campbell said. "Those are all things that happen."

The owners of the Clarkston Cafe are being sued for selling liquor to a patron who subsequently was involved in a Brandon Township auto accident in which three teenagers were killed.

Leon McNew, a co-owner of the cafe, declined comment on the issue pending the outcome of the trial, which is currently in Oakland County Circuit Court.

The case is scheduled to go before the jury Wednesday, he said.

Liquor liability rates soaring

'The small neighborhood bars are going bare'

"It's very bad. We just can't afford it. "Everybody is in the same boat. They're dropping their coverage down. We'll get it again, you can't go without it. You have to have something to survive. I can see if you make a mistake you should have to pay for it, but not go broke."

Only recently have the coverage costs gone up, Kammer said.

"It's a mess right now," he said. "Insurance companies have had to raise the prices of all the coverages to cover costs."

Kammer, a former tavern owner, said many bars are going without any coverage at all.

"They (bar owners) have it the most severe," he said. "People go there to drink. At a party store or restaurant, it isn't so bad."

Kammer mentioned the Dram Shop Act, a law that enables people to file lawsuits against tavern owners and holders of liquor licenses if someone served alcoholic beverages is later involved in an accident.

"Until they change the law, there'll be a problem," Kammer said. "We all want drunks off the roads but some of the liquor license holders are not responsible for accidents.

"The small neighborhood bars are going bare, they simply can't afford it."

Correction

Information under a photograph of a Dixie Highway medical-office complex by MBM Associates in last week's Clarkston News contained two errors.

The information should have said that MBM is continuing plans to construct a second building at the site. They received lot-split approval and final site plan approval from the Independence Township Planning Commission in January.

In addition, the planning commission is recommending that an ordinance preventing more than one building per lot be amended. If approved by the township board, the amended ordinance will allow more than one building in areas zoned for multiple residences or in other districts when a petitioner obtains a special land use permit.

Gas and liquor sales issue still unresolved

By Carolyn Walker

The controversy surrounding the sale of packaged beer and wine along with gasoline at the Dandy Oil Station continues.

At the July 16 meeting of the Independence Township Board, members debated the issue with Dandy architect David Donnellon.

The board contends that Dandy owner, Dan Huffman, told the planning commission last year he had no intention of selling liquor.

Donnellon, who attended the commission meetings, says Huffman is doing what the law allows.

Gasoline and packaged liquor sales were permitted under a state law, providing separate records were maintained, when Huffman received his SDM license on January 23.

That law was changed to deny such sales in February.

"I think this matter is kind of out of proportion to the reality of the situation," Donnellon told the board. "He's (Huffman) made a valiant effort to follow all the rules and regulations. I struggle to comprehend all your efforts."

"This was something we had not anticipated," responded Trustee Carol Balzarini, who is also a member of the planning commission. "It was represented to us that this (the sale of liquor) would not occur. We felt it was a misrepresentation on the part of Mr. Huffman."

Balzarini, whose son was seriously injured in an alcohol-related auto accident July 4, went on to appeal the issue, obviously struggling to control her emotions.

"There are a great number of alcohol-related traffic accidents," she said. "Some I know of quite well. I personally don't want it in my township. It's the whole principle of the thing."

Trustee William Vandermark concurred with Balzarini.

"For all purposes you folks lied to the planning commission," he said. "You said you didn't intend to do that (sell liquor). The fact is you didn't tell the truth. I'm sorry, but I don't believe you."

Donnellon expressed sympathy for Balzarini's situation, but went on to say that the law was on the side of Dandy Oil.

Members of the board briefly discussed with township attorney Gerald Fisher the feasibility of a lawsuit against Dandy Oil. The matter was tabled for further investigation.

Rose nominated

Former Independence Township Clerk Christopher Rose has been nominated by the township board for honorary membership in the Oakland County Chapter of the Michigan Township Association (MTA).

The board voted 6-0 on July 16 to recommend Rose for the honor.

"Chris was a very active member in the Oakland County Chapter of the MTA and was very highly regarded as a township official," said Clerk Richard Holman. "We wanted to encourage him to remain active."

Rose served as Independence Township clerk for seven years before leaving to take a position as town manager in Littleton, N.H., in 1983.

He is now the village manager in Lake Orion where he is also a resident.

"It certainly is a surprise," Rose said. "I'm very honored they nominated me. I enjoyed working with the township."

Split classes topic of study session

By Kathy Greenfield

Class sizes and split-grade classes on the elementary school level are the topics of a work-study session planned by the Clarkston board of education.

Following the third consecutive appearance at board meetings by Clarkston Elementary School parents, the board decided to meet to discuss the issues and, in the words of Superintendent Milford Mason, "crystallize a position."

The session is planned Thursday, July 25, at 7:30 p.m. in the administration building on Clarkston Road.

Eric Haven has served as spokesperson for the "Parents for Quality Education" at Clarkston

Elementary at all three meetings.

At the May school board meeting, the group presented a survey that attributed 80 of 101 parents with a willingness to "support any petition to eliminate 'split classes' and to decrease class size."

At the June meeting, the group discussed their concerns for about an hour, making it clear that split classes were not wanted.

At the July 8 meeting, Haven talked about a study that determined 40 pupils are transported to Clarkston Elementary from outside the school's attendance area.

While not opposed to the open school policy within the district, he said the parent group did "feel that 40 students is a considerable amount of influx."

Haven had departed when the board again discussed the issue near the meeting's end.

"We are getting nowhere. I just think it's so redundant every meeting," said board member Mary Jane Chaustowich, adding that the discussions at three meetings had not "increased knowledge or changed opinions" of the parents.

Mason suggested that a presentation of factual information and discussion at a work-study session would help the board take a stance.

"I question whether or not anything we're going to do (will stop the complaints), unless we hire a teacher," he said.

"And we're not going to do that," Thomas said.

Path authorized

New safety path construction is planned for Pine Knob Road.

On July 16, the Independence Township board approved construction of the 1,350-foot path connecting Bailey Lake Elementary School to Clarkston Road at an estimated cost of $43,000.

The action follows a request by the parents of pupils who must walk along the road enroute to school from Pine Knob Subdivision 2 on Clarkston Road.

The board previously considered constructing the path in segments because of a lack of money.

They have decided, instead, to borrow the necessary money from the general fund and do the entire stretch, according to Clerk Richard Holman. The general fund is to be repaid from the safety path fund when taxes are collected in December.

In 1980, township voters approved one-half mill for 10 years for the construction of safety paths. One-half mill is 50 cents for each $1,000 of assessed property valuation.

New safety paths are also scheduled for construction on Sashabaw Road near Waldon, when improvements are made at the intersection this year.

Chief in hospital

Fire chief Dale Bailey of the Independence Township fire department was admitted to Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital Friday.

Bailey was at work when he complained of not feeling well, according to a spokesperson at the fire department.

After being treated by Dr. James O'Neill, Bailey was transported by ambulance to Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital, where he remains pending the outcome of tests.

Hats off to success

The Rev. Charles Cushing, left, stands with Dr. James O'Neill, right, and some of the men who helped construct a new grotto to Mary at St. Daniel's Church on Holcomb Road in Clarkston. The grotto, called "The Way" was dedicated during an outdoor service at the church on Sunday. It is a place of worship and is constructed from stones gathered from the O'Neill farm. The workers labored approximately six weeks constructing the grotto. They include, in addition to O'Neill, [from left] Danny O'Neill, Jimmy Moore and Tom Muhleck. Mike O'Neill, Marlene Romzek, Matt Werner, Chris Hennig, Pam Hennig and Mikel O'Neill also worked on the project.

Colleges give credits at NWOVEC

By Kathy Greenfield

College credits are available for high school students who successfully complete programs at Clarkston's Northwest Oakland Vocational Education Center.

The credits from Oakland Community College and Ferris State College range from two to 26. They do not cost the student money, because the minimal test fees are paid by NWOVEC.

To be eligible for the majority of credits, students must pass written and/or performance tests. In all cases, the credit is granted upon successful completion of advanced courses at the participating college.

NWOVEC Principal Daniel Manthei provides two reasons why colleges allow credit for technical skills learned at high school vocational centers.

The first is "what didn't happen 18, 19, 20, 21 years ago—the declining birthrate," he said. "Colleges and universities are starting to experience declining enrollment."

The second involves competition for students by private technical and business schools.

"The colleges are interested in recruiting quality students who have demonstrated an interest and ability in a technical area, in contrast to someone walking in off the street," he said.

Manthei is also out to fight the sometimes negative image of high school vocational centers.

The schools are sometimes viewed as place to send students not succeeding in traditional high schools, according to Manthei.

"That isn't true," he said. "We want the public to know our students are receiving recognition and advanced placement as well as traditional academic students who go onto a college or university."

The most recent advanced placement agreement involves Ferris State College and a similar agreement began three years ago with Oakland Community College.

At OCC, students from all vocational education centers in Oakland County can receive up to nine credits for culinary arts, up to 12 for auto body repair, up to seven for secretarial sciences and up to nine for retail marketing.

This year, a new agreement at OCC allows up to 26 credits for electronics students, and plans are under way to include credits for students in climate control, diesel mechanics and machine shop.

Also at OCC, commercial art students from NWOVEC can achieve up to nine hours of credit.

"We have the only vocationally approved commercial art program in Oakland County, here at the center," Manthei said.

Ferris State's list of advanced placement possibilities includes up to 10 credits for auto service, drafting, machine trades or truck and bus mechanics; up to nine for auto body; up to eight for industrial mechanics or welding; and three for building construction technology, heating and air conditioning, masonry, printing or refrigeration.

In addition, up to 11 credits are available for Oakland County vocational education students who complete the dental assistant program.

Students generally use the credits toward a two-year associate's degree, which requires about 62 college credits.

Star song

Carolyn Walker

It was music of the highest order. The kind that soars from the human spirit and re-affirms the belief that life is, after all, a song.

It was spontaneous. It was enchanting. It was special.

The year was 1983 and the big, hot sun of summer afternoon came to rest on the camp piano. Dozens of Clarkston SCAMPers crowded around it, a whispered hum of anticipation in the air.

"Are you ready to sing?" asked the music director of the eager crowd, with a mischievous grin. Of course they were ready. A song is always within the reach of a child.

Composer and singer John Denver, in town for a performance at Pine Knob Music Theatre, entered the room amid a roar of welcoming cheers.

He looked like a camper himself in shorts, T-shirt and baseball hat. A hush immediately followed his arrival as the piano player started the introduction for "Sunshine."

Denver stood respectfully as the children began: Sunshine on my shoulders makes me happy.

They sang timidly at first, gaining confidence with each lyric.

Outside Sashabaw Junior High School, where the singing SCAMPers gathered, a throng of Clarkston youth peered through the windows, a look of envy on their faces.

The kids inside were stars that day.

For the benefit of any hard-of-hearing persons present, the SCAMPers, all physically or mentally handicapped, slowly signed Denver's song in the language of the deaf, Sunshine in my eyes can make me cry.

A serenity not easily explained, overcame the onlookers. For a brief few minutes, everyone present was acutely aware of just how grand life could be when lived on the up beat.

The spirit of friendship, caring and hope was overwhelming. No one was aware of racial differences, or the effects of mental retardation and crippling diseases.

Each child was only a song away from his fondest dreams.

If I had a day that I could give you. I'd give to you a day just like today. If I had a song that I could sing for you, I'd sing a song to make you feel this way.

Denver seemed most touched by the performance. He attempted to sing and sign along at first, finally standing quietly, almost reverently.

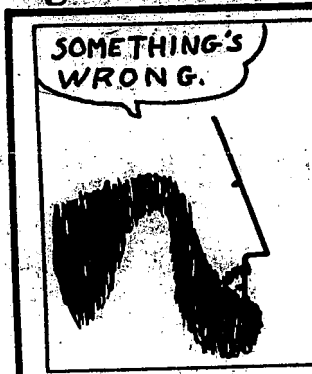

When the music stopped, Denver turned his back to the audience and gave a hug to a young woman with Down's Syndrome, who had inched her way to his side.

If the other people present saw the mist in Denver's eyes, they never mentioned it.

Perhaps it was because of the mist in their own.

Birthday wish

Kathy Greenfield

The gift Tommy requested for his third birthday made me want to be a child again.

It made me think about things that age and experience change from magic to mundane.

I've made a partial list:

Touching the ceiling.

Showing off the newly learned skill of tying shoelaces.

Skipping.

Wearing that first pair of patent leather buckle shoes.

Counting to 100.

Reading a book and knowing all the words.

Receiving a telephone call from a friend.

Reaching a light switch.

Stringing a chain of dandelions together and making a necklace and bracelet.

Holding a real, live baby—without help.

Wearing a ring.

Feeling a caterpillar walk across my hand.
Finding a cocoon.
Chasing a butterfly.
Hearing "caw-caw" and knowing the sound came from a beautiful black crow.
Knowing a puppy liked me—a lot—because it just licked my face.

Whistling.

Blowing a chewing gum bubble.

We end up taking all these things for granted—and experience the joy once again through our children and grandchildren.

That's how I know what Tommy wanted for his birthday. His grandfather, Stu McTeer, works at The Clarkston News and he told us about the wishes.

Tommy requested a lawn sprinkler and hose of his very own. And a red umbrella.

Jim's Jottings

Jim Sherman

Rollan Melton, columnist with the Reno Gazette-Journal came up with a whole bunch of one-liners. He gleaned them from various Friars Club roasts.

Surely, you've witnessed some of the roasts, often hosted by Dean Martin on television. The roaster I like most is Red Buttons, who cuts someone up then says, "Even he didn't get a dinner."

Here are some of Melton's:

I've known _____ for 50 years and I don't like him any more as a man than I did as a boy.

Following _____ to the dias is like giving a kidney transplant to a bedwetter.

He's a man with a physical handicap. He's hard of spending.

He's an intelligent man. He only hits women and midgets.

_____ is the only actor I've seen who is mentioned in both Who's Who and Kinsey Report.

I was born poor and I will die poor. In between I'd like to be rich.

Politically savvy? Not really. For 20 years he thought Henry Cabot Lodge was a motel in Burbank.

Conceptual? Yes. Why, 10 years ago he successfully predicted this would be 1985.

_____ has a God-complex. Last night he took a walk and was nearly run over by a motorboat.

Hollywood is the only place in the world where a person works all his life to become recognized, then wears dark glasses so nobody will know who he is.

She saw a sign, 'Help The Handicapped,' so she married him.

You know what a conservative is? That's a liberal who has been mugged.

He's got girlfriends so young he doesn't know whether to feed them or burp 'em.

You can sum up his whole career in one word—lucky.

I know an actor who is so famous that now he's got an unlisted wife.

If you can't say anything nice about people, let's hear it.

Robert Benchley, commenting on a Hollywood sex queen who died: "She sleeps alone at last!"

Las Vegas is the only town in America where you can have a good time without enjoying yourself.

_____ has never changed his religion. He still thinks he's God.

Somebody suggested I see a psychiatrist, but I told them I'm not going to pay anybody $100 an hour just to squeal on my mother.

His family lived in a Chicago neighborhood so rough that Al Capone was the Avon Lady.

_____ is a charitable man. Last year, an old-age home came to see him and he gave them a tremendous donation—his mother and father.

Got any names you'd like to put in some of the blanks?

Photographs appreciated

Camp Fire-North Oakland Council would like to thank Carolyn Walker for the fine photographs covering our day camp that appeared in The Clarkston News July 17.

The photographs were well done and certainly depicted our Camp Fire children having a good time at camp.

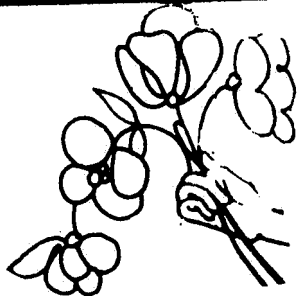

We appreciate the time and effort. The photographs may enable other children to join in on the summer fun at Camp Oweki.

Thanks again for helping us help children!

Thanks to bikers

Dear Bikeathon Helpers,

Thank you very much for all the work you did to make the bikeathon a success. We appreciated it greatly.

A special thanks to Betty, Terry and Sue Haran, Laura Brown, Donna Smith, Linda Irwin, Kay and Chuck Robertson, Scott Luzi, Claire Needham, Gini and Jim Schultz, Jeanette Vandermark, Helene Russell and Elizabeth Brown.

To those members of the community who made financial pledges to the bikeathon, our thanks. We couldn't have done it without you. Thank you SCAMPers for the gifts.

DUMB QUACK?: The season is wrong for hatching ducklings and ducks don't build their nests in trees. So, who's going to tell that to the white duck sitting 12 feet up in the crook of a willow tree in the backyard of Rick and Mary Beth Huttenlocher on Parke Lake? The Huttenlochers found a duck egg under the tree and thought their black Labrador retriever was carrying around found eggs again. Then they spotted the white duck sitting on the nest. The duck has been swimming with the mallards on the lake for a couple of years. While no one's sure how the ducklings-to-be will handle getting out of the tree after they hatch, for now they're safe. [Photo by Kathy Greenfield]

'If it Fitz . . .'

Some things gramps can't do

Jim Fitzgerald

Because of what happened to Michele, I am remembering how sweet it was to be 15 years old, with school out for the summer, with my first real job, and finally old enough to drive the family car.

Michele is my oldest grandchild. Last Saturday, while riding her bike near her home in Frankenmuth, she was hit by a car.

The big advantage of being a grandparent is you're usually not around when something bad happens to your grandchildren. You hear about it later, over the phone, often after the worst part is over and you can be immediately assured no one is going to die.

Generally, a grandparent doesn't have to receive that first terrifying call saying a child you love has been injured; the call that puts the sudden feeling of raw fear in your stomach, somehow more tangible and frightening than the worst physical blow. Grandparents usually aren't required to rush to the hospital and wait in anguish for the first report from a doctor.

Parents have to do all that awful stuff, and it's a good thing. I am no longer up to the job. I can remember doing it when I was a young parent. We lived right across the street from the hospital and some years, I'll swear, my kids went there more often than they went to the bathroom. But I can't remember how I stood the strain; how I kept from crumbling under the certain knowledge that my family enjoyed no special dispensation from God and it was entirely possible that someday I could be called to the emergency room for something a lot less funny than a two-year-old son falling headfirst into a can of house paint.

I think most 30-year-old parents are simply too young to know better; too far removed from their own mortality to worry about anything fatal happening to their children. Grandparents have been around long enough to know no one is safe; long enough to know life is unfair, otherwise there would be some way to transplant broken bones from a granddaughter to her grandfather.

My summer plans didn't call for much more than sitting around and reading a lot, and writing a little, and watching some baseball. But Michele's summer was going to be something special. She had her first job, in an ice cream store, and she was going to earn money to spend on cool clothes. She was going to complete driver's training and, on her 16th birthday in August, take legal control of her mother's car.

But now everything has been put on hold. Michele's left wrist was badly broken when the car knocked her loose from her bike. She will be wearing a cast for many weeks, and won't be able to do all the great things she wants to do.

It could be worse, and we should be grateful. That's what grandparents and parents always say when a kid is hurt or sick. I can't even write how much worse it might have been for my beautiful Michele. But I also can't help realizing she must think this summer has turned out plenty rotten enough for her.

I was her age the summer I got my first job—also at a soda fountain. And that was the summer I was first allowed to drive my father's 1940 Plymouth. It was a marvelous time and I would have been devastated by an injury that put me on the bench.

But it would be OK this summer. I'm too old to hear the first report on my granddaughter's traffic accident, but just the right age to sit around and do nothing for two months. I never wanted to wear my baby son's paint can for him, but I want to wear Michele's cast for her. Grandfathers should be allowed to do things like that.

Obituaries

Thelma G. Webb

Thelma G. Webb, 76, of Independence Township died July 20. She was retired from the personnel department of Consumers Power Co.

Surviving are her sister, Ila Macklem of Independence Township; and cousins, Beulah Shaw of Waterford, and Gerald Orton, Clifford Ryall and Freda Heaton, all of Leamington, Ontario, Canada. She was preceded in death by her husband, Lawrence.

The funeral service was held July 23 at the Goyette Funeral Home, Clarkston, with the Rev. David Eshelman officiating. Burial followed in Ottawa Park Cemetery, Independence Township.

Madalyn Stickley

Madalyn Stickley, 75, of Independence Township and formerly of Lake Orion, died July 13.

Surviving are her children, Mrs. Michael (Sandra) Tanner of Clarkston and Raymond Stickley of Ocala, Fla.; and three grandchildren.

The funeral service was held July 16 at the Goyette Funeral Home, Clarkston, with the Rev. Douglas Trebilcock officiating. Burial followed in Pioneer Cemetery, Roscommon.

Charles B. Whipple

Charles B. Whipple, 75, of Royal Oak died July 16. A senior clerk retired from Pontiac Motor Division of General Motors Corp., he was raised in the Clarkston area.

He was a member of the Royal Oak Golf Club.

Surviving are his wife, Eleanor Ann; children, Pamela McKinstry of Madison Heights and Charlene Zack of Clearwater, Fla.; five grandchildren; and sister, Mildred Mahaffey of Holly.

The funeral service was held July 18 at the Goyette Funeral Home, Clarkston, with the Rev. Douglas Trebilcock officiating. Burial followed in Lakeview Cemetery, Independence Township.

Village ponders lot improvements

A lack of parking spaces in the Village of Clarkston has become a problem with a potential solution.

In what could be a two-phase project, members of the village council agreed July 23 to investigate obtaining land in an alley behind the Clarkston Cafe and adjoining shops to improve and increase parking facilities. There are currently parking spots at the site, which has a steep incline.

"It's like a circus back there," said President Carol Eberhardt, referring to the difficulty some have in parking on the hill, especially during icy weather.

The council appointed members Jon Gaskell and David Raup to investigate the feasibility of obtaining the land and to propose a financing package.

A study recently submitted to the council suggests that as many as 59 parking spaces could be built at the site for an estimated $57,040.

In a second phase of the proposed project, an additional 25 spaces could be installed at the site of Fire Station 1 on Church Street, if it is torn down as anticipated.

Ted Thomson, a former president of the village council, said the township obtained the fire station from the village for $1 during the early 1950s.

If the fire station is demolished, it is not yet known whether or not the township will sell the land, he said, adding he feels a similar $1-deal would be in order.

"If they're going to abandon something that we gave them for a buck...we should be able to acquire it for a buck," he said.

A University of Detroit student-volunteer prepares to hand water to triathlon competitor Beth Mitchell, 21, of Williamston. Mitchell went on to win second place in the women's overall event. Over 900 men and women athletes competed in the Bud Light U.S. Triathlon series last Sunday. The contest featured swimming, bicycling and running. It began in Waterford Township and wound its way through Springfield and Independence townships.

Triathletes cruise through race course

By Dan Vandenhemel

Over 900 athletes converged in Waterford Township July 21 to test their skills and push for endurance.

Pontiac Lake was the starting point for the Bud Light U.S. Triathlon Series that had 962 entries, including seven from the Independence-Springfield township area.

Tom and Jody Faulkner, Todd Doyton, Scott Banks, Reed Swanson and Rosemary Dorich of Independence Township and Frank Hamby of Springfield Township all competed in the event.

Because of a computer mix-up, the final times of all participants were not available at press time.

Banks turned in a fast time for the course in two hours, 18 minutes and 33 seconds. He placed eighth in his age division (15-19) and 115th overall. Dorich, 36, was ninth in her division and 108th overall with a time of 3:16:17. The two triathletes qualified for the National Championship, Sept. 28, in Hilton Head, S.C.

The race started with a 1.5k (0.9 mile) swim in Pontiac Lake, then a 40k (24.8 mile) bike race that took them through Springfield and Independence townships, and finished with a 10k (6.2 mile) run near Pontiac Lake.

Overall winner of the event was Scott Molina of DeMar, Calif., in a record time of 1:53:06. The winner for the women was Elizabeth Butman of Columbia, Mo., in 2:07:57.

Elizabeth Muhich concentrates on the road as she peddles her way through Springfield Township.

Robert W. Sprunger Jr., No. 24, focuses on the journey ahead as a competitor looks toward the ground. The two were part of the Bud Light U.S. Triathlon.

Up My Alley

Just think

Dan Vandenhemel

Could it be?
Is it really happening?
Well, just think about it. The acreage commonly called Downtown Detroit is starting to look pleasant.

It seems appropriate that a statue called "The Thinker" is located in Detroit.

Many people are thinking about it and an afternoon in Hart Plaza shows that.

The riverfront was buzzing on a recent Wednesday afternoon. People at lunch, people reading books, people watching people, people goofing off, were all downtown.

But why?

Isn't this the same place everyone, at least those in suburbia, were afraid to go to?

Improvement in the buildings has to be one of the reasons if not the only reason. The Renaissance Center is the project that started all the improving.

The most recent addition that will draw people into the city is Trapper's Alley. Set up smack-dab in the middle of already popular Greektown, Trapper's Alley can't help but survive and thrive.

I was in the formerly broken down alley on a Wednesday afternoon and, though it wasn't crowded, it was far from empty. The stores and restaurants that occupy the five-floor structure are surprisingly attractive.

It's not that I'm a big backer of Downtown Detroit. I am glad the powers that be are trying to save the city by bringing the fleeing suburbanites back in the middle of the city.

Even the farce of a people mover has good possibilities. Mayor Coleman Young's mass transit could be attractive but not very practical.

If the two-story high people mover never comes about, the track would make a fantastic hanging flower garden.

It could be the eighth wonder of the world. The Hanging Garden of Detroit.

Just think about it.

Grid players bruised in accident

By Dan Vandenhemel

A traffic accident almost canceled the football season for five members of the Clarkston High School team.

Jim Hall, Dan Jokisch, Chris Poulos, Bob LaPorte and Matt DeBoer along with 13-year-old Jason Poulos were hit by another car as they made their way to a practice July 17.

Hall was driving south on Dixie Highway near Maple Road in Independence Township about 6:30 p.m. when a car driven by Cindy Spencer turned in front of Hall.

Spencer, 23 of Waterford Township was ticketed by the Oakland County Sheriff's Department for failure to yield the right of way. She and her passenger, Juanita Watson, 47, of Pontiac were injured in the accident. Spencer was treated and released from St. Joseph Mercy Hospital while Watson remains there in stable condition.

Jokisch and the Poulos brothers were slightly injured and went to the hospital on their own. Jokisch had a tooth knocked out.

Clarkston varsity football coach Walt Wynnemko said he was concerned about the accident but glad everyone came out all right.

"Any time you're in an accident, it's serious," he said. "I'm pretty positive they'll all be able to play."

The players were heading to an optional practice at Orchard Lake St. Mary's. About 25 players attend the six-week program. It's similar to a camp the Wolves attended last year at Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti.

The team starts conditioning for the season July 29 at the CHS practice field at 7:59 a.m.

Wynnemko said the different starting time is to help the players remember the time. Full workouts begin Aug. 12 with the first game scheduled Sept. 6.

Golf scramble

Another golf tournament is approaching at Springfield Oaks Golf Course.

On Aug. 10, the three-man scramble begins with a shot-gun start at 8 a.m.

The cost for the 18-hole tournament is $75 a team. Deadline for entry is Aug. 7.

Prizes will be based on the number of entrants. Springfield Oaks is located on Andersonville Road in Springfield Township.

For more information, call 625-2540.

Librarian wings to windy city

A trip to Chicago was most gratifying, according to Library director James Hibler. The Independence Township board on July 2, authorized $700 in expenses for Hibler to attend an American Library Association Conference in the windy city July 5-10. At the conference, he toured exhibits of books, machinery and furniture and listened to speakers on such subjects as special library collections, local history and budget.

Annual Concours D'Elegance brings cars to Clarkston

Jim Thatcher and his 1960 gold Corvette are among the entries to compete for trophies. The cars are grouped according to age for the club's annual competition.

Angie Bray gives a once-over cleaning to her 1984 Corvette roof at the North Oaks Corvette Club's ninth annual Concours D' Elegance. The competition was held Sunday at Bowman Chevrolet on Dixie Highway. [Photos by Carolyn Walker]

After working on a friend's car, Bob O'Reilly puts a lick-and-a-promise cleaning to his.

Gary Morgan, who brought his orange and white 1956 Corvette convertible, had one of the oldest cars on display.

Women may become more intoxicated than men

Dear Cat Paw:

My sister drinks every weekend and whenever she can during the week. What can I do to help her stop?
Confused

Dear Confused:

Your sister's excessive drinking may indicate a potential problem. You can help her by giving her support and encouragement to change.

Ignoring her problem or simply expressing sympathy won't help. You can help by clearly stating your recognition of her problem, your concern and the availability of help.

Do not try to solve her problem yourself. Seek professional help in your community. They are listed in your phone book. 🌸

Dear Cat Paw:

Are women drinkers different from men? Do they get drunk faster or the same?
Lush

Dear Lush:

Recent research indicates that women may become more intoxicated than men on the same amount of alcohol, even when body weights are the same.

One explanation for this is that a woman generally has less body fluid and more body fat than does a man of the same weight.

Since alcohol does not diffuse as rapidly into body fat, the concentration of alcohol in a woman's blood will be higher, even if she drinks the same amount as a man.

Also, it seems that a woman will often be more affected by alcohol right before the beginning of her menstrual cycle. 🐾

Dear Cat Paw:

How do you know someone is addicted to cocaine?
Wondering

Dear Wondering:

Cocaine addiction is defined by the same behavioral criteria that apply to alcohol and heroin abuse and all other forms of addiction.

- Loss of control—the inability to resist the compulsion to use cocaine. This occurs even when there is a strong desire to stop using the drug and the user is not able to resist.

- Continued use in spite of consequences—the inability or refusal to resist the compulsion to take cocaine despite damaged or lost relationships, threats of financial ruin, loss of one's job, threat of legal punishment, sickness, even the threat of death.

- High involvement with the drug—cocaine becomes the central and most important focus of the addicted user's existence. It is his first priority, above everything including his own survival.

• Symbolic use—using cocaine, or giving it to someone else to use, can be the expression of an unspoken psychological dynamic operating between two or more people. 🌸

Dear Cat Paw:

Hey, I been smokin' dope since sixth grade. I'm a senior now, and I feel my brain has hindered. There are times I wish I had not even started. What can I do to stop?
Seriously Concerned

Dear Concerned:

Please go to your family doctor. Tell your doctor what you told me and trust him or her.

You need professional help and since you sound like you want help, I hope you take it.

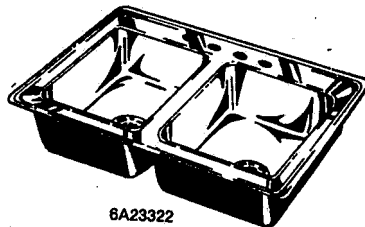

Please write back and let me know how you're doing. I really do care! Good luck. 🌸

New arrivals

Daniel and Karen Badgely welcomed their first child into the world July 12.

The Snowapple, Independence Township, couple's daughter, Kristina Lynn, was born at Sinai Hospital of Detroit.

She weighed 8 pounds 2 ounces and measured 21 inches long.

Grandparents are James and Geraldine Kelush of Burton and Mary Badgely of Flint.

Great-grandmother is Wilhemina Badgely of Ohio.

***

It's a girl for Michelle and Harvie Fulk of Ortonville.

Janelle Lee was born July 17. She weighed 7 pounds 14½ ounces and measured 19½ inches long.

She was greeted by big sister, Jennifer, 2.

Grandparents are Pat and Ed Johnson of Clarkston and Dorothy Fulk of Pontiac.

Great-grandparents are Bertha Pekkala of West Palm Beach and Arne and Miriam Johnson of Lantana, Fla.

At college

David Zawacki is heading to California to spend his junior year in college at Sonoma State University.

Zawacki, who lives on Greene Haven Drive in Independence Township, is taking part in the National Student Exchange program through Oakland University, Rochester.

A business major, he has attended OU for two years. As a member of the exchange program, he is to attend Sonoma for a year and return to OU to complete his studies toward a bachelor's degree.

Zawacki graduated from Clarkston High School in 1983. His parents are Arnold and Marilyn Zawacki.

Artist's posters at jamboree

A pink and purple iris is featured in the poster created by Independence Township watercolor artist Pam Kessler for the Waterford Friends of the Arts.

The poster is to be sold in connection with the Waterford July Jamboree on Sunday, July 28, at the Waterford Community Center, 1415 Crescent Lake Rd.

"I was thrilled by it," says Kessler about the limited edition print, her first ever.

Her former art teacher at Waterford Kettering High School, Bob Seeburger, is gallery director for the Waterford Friends of the Arts.

Now retired from teaching, Seeburger's admiration for Kessler's work led to the selection of her artwork for the poster.

"It was nice after all those years having the support of your high school art teacher," says Kessler.

Two types of posters are for sale: 200 are printed on good quality poster stock and will sell for $8 each; 125 are printed on the finest museum quality paper that resists fading, yellowing and brittleness of age—signed and numbered by the artist, they will sell for $30 to members and $40 to non-members.

Kessler's work is currently in a major American watercolor exhibit touring the United States and is represented in a number of corporate and private collections.

For more information, call Seeburger at 666-4563.

Two exchange wedding vows in Oxford

Vivian E. Guillemette and Ronald H. Craven were married July 6. The Rev. R.C. Hollis performed the ceremony at the Indianwood Community Baptist Church, Oxford.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Guillemette of Timmins, Ontario, Canada, and the late Mr. Guillemette.

The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. George Craven of Clement Road, Independence Township.

Serving as bridesmaid was Theresa M. Blair of Ortonville, the bridegroom's niece.

Best man was the bridegroom's brother, Michael Craven of Pontiac. Ushers were Colin Craven of Surfside, S.C., and Raymond Blair of Ortonville, brother and brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

The newlyweds will reside near Charlotte, N.C.

Trumper-Samra

Victor and Maxene Trumper of Mt. Clemens announce the engagement of their daughter, Marilyn S., to George Samra, the son of Fred and Evanthisa Samra of Farmington. The bride-to-be is a 1980 graduate of Oakland University, Rochester. A former reporter with The Clarkston News, she is employed as a night editor by the Mt. Pleasant Morning Sun. Her fiancé, a 1979 graduate of Michigan State University, East Lansing, is a State Farm Insurance agent in Farmington. A November wedding is planned.

Club notes

George Tuson of Pontiac Lodge 810 was recognized as the newly elected Exalted Ruler at the 121st Convention of the Grand Lodge, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks in Seattle, Wash.

Tuson, an Independence Township resident, is one of more than 2,250 Exalted Rulers nationwide. Each Exalted Ruler is elected by his lodge in March and takes office in April.

First, you scrape

This is the year you've decided to paint the exterior of your old house.

How do you begin?

Most old house owners are do-it-yourselfers either by choice or necessity, and it is for them this advice is intended.

Lesson number one—patience!

No matter how great the temptation to get the job done, it is best not to rush out on a sunny weekend intending to paint the entire exterior, especially if there are areas of blistering, cracking or peeling paint.

While owners often blame such recurring problems on bad paint, careful examination usually reveals improper preparation or unresolved moisture problems.

It is usually best to deal with one problem, one area, one side of a building at a time. Many old house owners apply this valuable technique to all maintenance.

Such prudence and patience can prevent a job from becoming overwhelming.

Begin by checking some of these exterior sources of moisture problems:

1. Loose or missing roofing materials around chimneys and vent pipes.
2. Loose or missing roofing materials.
3. Clogged or missing eaves troughs.
4. Downspout drainage which runs toward instead of away from the building.
5. Porches, stoops and patios which drain toward, instead of away from, the building. Ground level should also drain away. (In many old structures, the clapboard may stop as close as 1 inch to the ground. In such cases, the earth should be kept from touching the wood.)
6. Foundation shrubs and plantings which are dense and close to a building may prevent ventilation and cause the wood to hold moisture.

If the moisture comes from the interior of the building—condensation from cooking, bathing, etc.—you will need to check for proper ventilation and insulation.

In the last 10 years or so in the rush to make all houses energy efficient, many improper, unsuccessful methods have been used and some owners have compounded moisture problems, finding peeling paint a constant problem on the interior as well as the exterior.

Once the problem sources have been identified, you can begin to repair the damage.

With old structures, especially those which may be considered historic, it is always advisable to repair the original material rather than replace it.

As stated in past articles, it is the original which maintains its value. While replacement of badly damaged wood was once the only alternative, now there are new epoxy products available to repair rotted wood.

These are being used in national restoration projects and they show great promise.

The nationwide interest and activity in the field of restoration has spawned a revitalization and growth in the building materials industry.

It is difficult to peruse a building or home decorating magazine without seeing an article or an ad dealing with restoration products or methods.

A note of warning—not all products billed as such are actually preservation or restoration materials (those which would maintain the integrity and value of a historic structure.)

It is best to check with a preservation authority or a reputable preservation publication about a questionable product you are interested in using.

One of the great advantages of dealing with wooden buildings, as opposed to those constructed of masonry, is work may often be done piecemeal.

It is possible to repair or replace a single clapboard without disturbing an entire facade.

The same is true of many porch, window and doorway elements; and it is especially true of many purely decorative elements, such as brackets, finials and fretwork.

Missing wooden architectural elements may be reproduced at local millworks, purchased as a reproduction ready made through a number of sources, or purchased as reclaimed originals through architectural salvage companies.

A recent article in the National Trust's "Historic Preservation" provided a list of some companies.

Now that you've repaired the damaged wood and taken steps to see that there will be no further damage, it's time to paint!

Well, almost.

First, you must decide how much of the old paint to remove, and how best to remove it.

The June 1976 issue of the Old House Journal has an excellent article which can help with these and all preparation decisions.

Briefly, if you must go beyond scraping and sanding a few areas, there are several methods which may be used alone or in combination to remove paint—heat, chemicals and mechanical abrasion among them.

Heat guns and plates are relatively inexpensive and cause minimal damage to wood clapboard and trim, but can present a fire hazard. Use with caution and proper safeguards.

Chemical strippers (except those with lye which leaves a residue posing a possible paint adhering problem) also leave clapboard and even the smallest, most intricate architectural details intact.

However, they are messy, hazardous, as they can burn skin and damage vegetation, and they are laborious to use.

Mechanical abrasion, whether done with water, sand or grit, is the least desirable method, even though it may seem quickest and most thorough.

Abrasion, or "sandblasting" as it is commonly known, can obliterate architectural details and raise the grain and destroy the heartwood of clapboard, columns and pilasters leaving the building even more vulnerable to the elements.

Authoritative advice on restoration and preservation methods and materials and their sources may be obtained from many books in the Independence Township Library.

Community cable guide

Shows ranging from singing kindergartners to music in the village park comprise the line-up on cable-TV Channel 11 this week. The programs are broadcast from the Clarkston studio of Tribune/United Cable Communications.

Wednesday through Friday
July 24-26

7pm—"Pedro and Pete" tells the story of the little boy who prays for his parents, "Please, Sir, Jesus, make them not fight anymore." The "This is the Life" series is sponsored by St. Trinity Lutheran Church of Independence Township. The Rev. Michael Klafehn, pastor of St. Trinity's, provides an introduction and conclusion.

7:30pm—"Dedication of Independence Oaks Nature Center" presented by Oakland County Parks and Recreation.

8pm—"Spring Sing" features the voices of Clarkston Elementary School kindergartners.

8:35pm—"The Amazing Grace Show" is a Bible story presented by the Rev. Clarence Bell of the First Baptist Church of Clarkston.

9pm—"Concert in the Park" features the July 13 performance in the Clarkston village park by the Jim Morris Concert Band.

Next Week, Monday through Friday

7pm—"Who is Rudy Dorfman," the next episode in the "This is the Life" series, involves a swastika that touches off a violent conflict between a teenager and his father.

Programs on cable Channel 11 begin at 7 p.m. weekdays only. Other times, the station features a billboard with community service announcements and the schedule of the evening programs, updated daily at 2 p.m.

Rambling his way toward first base is Nathan Pitser. One of the small players on Drayton Motors in the Independence Township Parks and Recreation T-Ball league, 7-year-old Nathan seems to have trouble finding a helmet that fits. Drayton beat Moore's Disposal in this July 22 game, 20-13.

At the ball yard

Photos by Dan Vandenhemel

The crowd of family and friends gathers early to watch the T-Ball league action. Drayton Motors and Moore's Disposal are in the middle of the pack in the standings.

Batting helmets are in fashion for T-Ball game spectators, [from left, counter-clockwise] Andy Auten, Kevin Larive and Keith Larive.

"I'm here looking for the big one," says Marie-Louise O'Connell as she helps sift through soil at the Shelton mastodon dig in Brandon

Township. Marie-Louise is joined in her efforts by Dennis Sawinska, a teacher from Wayne State University, who predicts they may start uncovering Chinese artifacts soon, referring to the old notion that if you dig deep enough you'll reach China.

More bone fragments unearthed

"I could go for a little fresh air," said Harold to Cervalces scotti. "Twelve thousand years is a long time to lie face down in one spot."

It takes a stretch of the imagination to envision the two, a mastodon and a giant moose, respectively.

Both are extinct creatures and have been hibernating under Brandon Township soil for ages.

They surfaced in 1977, when two young boys found a mastodon tusk and skull pieces near a freshly dug pond on the farm of K. Harold Shelton, located on Seymour Lake Road east of Sashabaw Road.

"They thought it may have been a cow horn," said Sandra Lash of the tusk find. Lash is a middle school science teacher at Roper City and Country School in Birmingham. At the site, she assists supervisor Hezy Shoshani, a Ph.D. candidate from Wayne State University, Detroit.

With the cooperation of Shelton, researchers and students from Oakland Community College, Wayne State University and Cranbrook Institute of Science have been excavating the animals five weeks each summer for three years.

The work requires long hours of dedication and patience as the excavators labor seven days a week, all day, Lash said. They perform their tasks with shovels, brushes, toothpicks and small sticks.

Bone fragments of the animals have been found scattered over a wide area of the site and researchers say they are puzzled.

The animals may have been the victims of scavengers, although there is no evidence of scratching on the bones, Lash said. They may also have rolled to their positions or have been washed there by the waves of a lake which covered the area eons ago.

The mastodon, nicknamed Harold by the students, was a teenager of about 15 when he died.

Mastodons were similar to modern elephants, although they had more hair.

The natural life span of an elephant is approximately 70 years and was probably comparable for a mastodon, Lash said.

Harold most likely stood just over 5 feet tall at the shoulders.

Cervalces scotti, the giant 5-year-old moose, was larger than a modern moose.

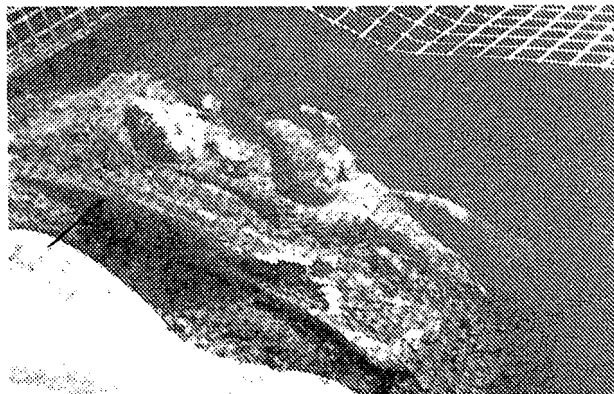

The discovery of his jaw and teeth, much of which are intact, is really the highlight of the find, Lash said.

No similar bones from this type of creature have been previously found in Michigan, although antlers and footbones have been discovered, she added.

Along with the animals' remains, the excavators have discovered arrowheads belonging to paleo-Indians of a yet to be determined era.

One of the arrowheads was found under a mastodon rib, which suggests it was older than the animal, according to Lash, who said, "We're getting very interesting material."

A mastodon spinous process, or spine bone, resembles a stick in the ground.

Michael Roberts (left) and Doug Buuck, students at Wayne State University, say they find the mastodon dig very exciting. Buuck calls it "simply fascinating."
