Cop tax on the way

By Julie Campe

The additional 1.5 mills for the police fund approved by Independence Township voters Nov. 4 have an excellent chance of appearing on December property tax bills.

On Nov. 19, the State House and Senate unanimously approved a bill with an amendment allowing the spread now instead of waiting until December 1987, the normal waiting period for a tax approved so late in the year.

The bill also gives Waterford and White Lake townships the option of spreading their police millages, also approved by voters in November, this year.

Gov. James Blanchard has 10 working days to receive the bill and 14 working days to sign—or veto—the bill before it automatically takes effect without his signature.

"I'm excited," said township Supervisor Frank Ronk. "The people, I'm sure, who voted for it wanted it spread this year. . . . I'm excited that we were able to get this done in such quick order."

Help from senators, representatives, lobbyists, sheriff's deputies and local people expedited the process, said Ronk.

Clerk Richard Holman credited State Rep. Mat Dunaskiss (R-Lake Orion) and State Sen. Richard Fessler (R-West Bloomfield) with working hard to get the bill passed.

"Things get wild and wooly in lame-duck sessions," he said. "This is no exception."

In a lame-duck session—the time period after an election before new officials take office—no new bills may be introduced. The township's special request

Wolves ousted by Kettering

By Chris Gerbaui

Dave McDonald probably wishes Charlie Shires had given up his Waterford Kettering girls basketball coaching job this year rather than the boys coaching position.

Shires' Captains did it again to McDonald's Wolves Saturday, winning their district playoff game at Waterford Mott, 55-42.

The victory gave Kettering two wins in three meetings against Clarkston this season, but more importantly, kept its season going.

The Wolves end their year at 17-4, while the Captains are 19-3 and met Pontiac Northern Monday night for the district championship.

McDonald and Shires have coached against each other for several years and Shires had also coached Kettering's boys team until stepping down this year. The Wolves lost to the Captains in double overtime in the district final last season.

Shires' teams are known for their pressing defense and that's what made for a depressing evening for Clarkston.

"They just outplayed us tonight," said McDonald. "They had us the whole game."

The Captains pressed from the outset and numerous steals helped them to a 16-9 lead after one quarter.

They increased that to 24-9 behind three straight corner shots from senior guard Kristi Lyons.

[see WOLVES, Page 2A]

Campbell resigns

After about 15 years of service, Independence Township attorney Richard Campbell resigned from his duties in a letter to the township board members last week.

His partner, Gerald Fisher, currently a township attorney as well, is to continue the service.

In his letter, Campbell listed time constraints as the main reason for resigning and thanked the board for the opportunity to work with them.

Supervisor Frank Ronk and Trustee Daniel Travis complimented Campbell's service.

"Dick Campbell has done an excellent job for us," said Ronk.

Wolves' season comes to an end

Missy Odell and Michele Wyniemko then went to work for the Wolves. They hit from inside and outside for a 12-4 run which made the score 28-21 in favor of Kettering at the half.

Odell and Wyniemko were high scorers in the game with 15 points each.

Clarkston sank just seven of 16 free throw attempts in the half, while the Captains did not get an attempt. Neither coach seemed pleased with the officiating throughout the game as pushes and arm-hacking often went uncalled.

Police tax

was added to an already existing bill in order to allow the Legislature to vote on it in this session.

The existing bill, an amendment to the general property tax act, established a method for collecting property taxes by the state if a local government cannot, said Dan Guftafson, legislative aide to Dunaskiss.

With the additional 1.5 mills, the township plans to hire six more Oakland County Sheriff's deputies to begin Jan. 1, 1987. The 1.5 mills were approved by voters for three years.

"This will not solve all our problems, but it's certainly on the way to solving them," said Holman.

One mill is $1 for every $1,000 of assessed property valuation. The 1.5 mills means a homeowner with a house worth $90,000, assessed at half its market value ($45,000), would pay an additional $67.50 for police coverage.

Added to the existing 1 mill collected for the police fund, the total amount paid by the same homeowner would be $112.50 a year for police coverage.

The existing 1 mill expires in 1990.

The Wolves continued their comeback in the third quarter. Odell connected on two outside shots and when Michelle Baker hit two free throws with 4:08 left, the game was tied at 30.

But Clarkston would never lead. Kettering came up with a couple more steals on the press and went up 40-32 going into the fourth quarter.

"They (Clarkston) kept their composure," said Shires. "Teams not as good or without as much character as they have would have folded. But we kept our composure, too. Whenever they made a run on us, we'd get two or three steals to get it back."

"That's what beat us, their press," said Wyniemko. "We didn't play together."

Baker and Lisa Ladd made back-to-back layups for one last push which cut the lead to 40-36. The Wolves then pressed much of the quarter, but without much success.

"We got a little bit down on each other at the end because we wanted it really bad," Wyniemko said. "We played their game. Usually when we play other teams, we play our game, but we get so nervous when we play them that we play their game."

McDonald's five starters played almost the entire game, while Kettering had a balanced scoring attack.

"I played it close to the vest," said McDonald. Kelly Kraft topped the Captains with 12 points, Kris Davis had 11 and Lyons hit for 10.

Both teams got 12 free throw tries in the second half, but Clarkston was just 12 for 28 overall.

Snow's no problem

Thursday's snow did not affect car drivers; people still ran into each other.

Assistant fire chief Gar Wilson said there was a typical number of accidents in Independence Township that day.

"There were three or four, but there wasn't anything abnormal," Wilson said. "There were some good accidents, but nothing that serious."

Goodfellow papers

for a good cause

The good fellows will be out and about selling Goodfellow Papers in the Clarkston area Friday and Saturday, Dec. 5 and 6, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Once again this year, the Independence Township Fire Department and the Clarkston Rotary are co-sponsoring the sale.

The Goodfellow Papers have been a tradition in the community for 36 years. Proceeds from the sales help purchase shoes, warm clothing and food for residents who have a need due to unfortunate circumstances.

Referrals are given to the Goodfellow organization by area churches, schools and other community groups. All referrals are screened by a committee to ensure they are truly in need.

Health Center moving on time

By Julie Campe

The Clarkston Health Center is moving along on schedule, said pediatrician James O'Neill, developer of the project.

New EDC members

When pediatrician James O'Neill requested Economic Development Corporation assistance for a proposed medical facility, two additional members were appointed to the Independence Township EDC board.

At the Nov. 18 Independence Township Board meeting, Roger Olney of Hidden Lane and James Brueck of Middle Lake Road were appointed to the existing nine-member board because they live in an area adjacent to the property in question.

They will serve on the EDC board only when it considers questions involving the Clarkston Health Center, a proposed medical development on Dixie Highway, adjacent to Hidden Lane and behind O'Neill's present office building on M-15.

The EDC was established to encourage commercial development by approving the financing of local developments with tax-exempt bonding, if the development meets federal regulations.

The proposed medical facility on Dixie Highway, Independence Township, is to combine on one floor the practices of some area physicians and 24-hour urgent care.

Also included in the center plans are outpatient surgery, outpatient mental health services, daycare for mentally and physically disabled adults, community education programs and a medical library.

It's a new concept in health care, he said, and there's nothing like it in the area.

"To get all the physicians in one town together . . . and build is rare," said O'Neill.

The project is not meant to compete with area hospitals, he said, although it's a step in the right direction to stop the "hospital bed sprawl."

"We feel you should support those hospitals and quit trying to duplicate service," he said.

The new three-story, 80,000-square-foot building is to be constructed behind O'Neill's present office building on M-15.

The center is to use his current building as well as the M-15 office building housing the Clarkston Village Clinic/Clarkston Ambulatory Care Center.

The project received conceptual site plan approval from Independence Township last summer.

Last week, it received the first in a long line of approvals for consideration from the Economic Development Corporation (EDC).

The EDC allows the financing of local developments with tax-exempt bonding if the development meets federal regulations.

Private investments will also finance the project, O'Neill said.

Additional approvals from the planning commission, EDC, and township board are necessary before construction can begin.

Planning Commission Chairperson Neil Wallace called the center innovative.

"The building is important to Clarkston and to the state as a whole," he said.

Board reaches a compromise

By Julie Campe

After hearing six residents speak, and after about 20 minutes in a closed session, the Independence Township Board came up with a compromise to solve a pending lawsuit.

The lawsuit was filed by Welcome Homes seeking to revoke a zoning board of appeals decision to deny a variance on a non-conforming lot on Allen Road.

The board decided to allow Mike Hofer, owner of Welcome Homes, to build a house on the site if it meets the requirements set by the township. The board approved the solution unanimously Nov. 18.

Hofer must increase the area of the house from 1,650 square feet to 1,850 square feet; adhere to the specifications set by the planning department; and drop the lawsuit.

The board's decision on the compromise came after much input from the surrounding residents on Allen Road.

"I'm opposed to this kind of home here," said Pat Biernat, who lives near the property in question. "If it's built there, it will decrease the value of my home by $8,000 to $10,000. I think it's criminal."

Other objections raised by the residents included: The proposed house is too small and does not match the quality of surrounding houses; the septic field is inadequate and may cause pollution problems in the future; construction of the house could lead to more of the same type homes in the area.

In answer, Carl-Gunnar Karlstrom, attorney for Hofer, said the proposed house is the minimum size they would build; the septic field meets Oakland County standards; and Welcome Homes doesn't plan to build any other homes of that type in the area.

Board members also addressed the problems. "As a resident of a rural area, I feel I speak for the rest of the residents," said Trustee Carol Balzarini.

"There was a time that when you moved to a rural area, anything goes—the size of the houses, the number of buildings, the type of animals," she said. "Now the idea is changing. . . . People are more concerned about what's surrounding them because they're closer together."

The 1,800-square-foot house is to have a brick front with natural wood sides, two baths, a fire place and stained trim inside.

The property is non-conforming because its 40,000 square feet is too small for the township's requirements in rural residential zonings.

Planners support new zoning

Property at the southeast corner of Sashabaw and Clarkston roads may be rezoned to research office.

Currently, the 29.26 acres owned by Sharon Alexander are mostly rural residential with a portion holding a local commercial zoning.

At the Nov. 13 meeting, the Independence Township Planning Commission voted unanimously to recommend approval of the rezoning. The request still has to be approved by the Independence Township Board.

A request to rezone to commercial and research office was tabled at a previous meeting.

Several members of the commission commented:

"I'm very much in favor of the zoning change as proposed," said John Gray.

Joseph Figa and Holly Stephens agreed.

"It provides a reasonable buffer between Pine Knob and residential areas," said Stephens. "It's an improvement over the recent proposal of research office and commercial."

A special land permit is required under this zoning, said Chairperson Neil Wallace, which means prior to development of the land, approval of the specific use is required.

The commission will have better control over traffic, waste disposal and wetlands protection under this zoning, he said.

Building approved for industrial park

Four existing businesses in the Valentine Industrial Park Subdivision on Andersonville Road, Springfield Township, will soon be joined by a fifth.

On Nov. 12, the Springfield Township Board paved the way for Beardsley Enterprises to begin building this year or early 1987.

The board unanimously approved a site plan for a 5,000-square-foot industrial building. The firm is to manufacture parts for small engines.

Preceding the approval, the board rescinded an earlier policy decision that no building permits or site plans would be approved until the Valentine subdivision was completed.

The policy decision stemmed from a lawsuit filed a year ago by the township against Al Valentine and others to require completion of the industrial subdivision, originally approved in 1979.

Because the plat is considerably improved at the present time, the board agreed to waive the policy decision, but stressed that the action was not intended to give up any legal rights in the still-pending lawsuit.

Valentine indicated that he could have landscaping and other improvements completed in the 28-lot subdivision by the end of December, weather permitting.

New deputy busy

In the first week of patrol, Clarkston's additional part-time Oakland County Sheriff's deputy was busy.

Working four-hour shifts on Nov. 18 and 20, the deputy wrote 15 tickets for speeding, running red lights, and other reasons, said Frank Millard.

Millard, a trustee on the Clarkston Village Council, is in charge of monitoring the situation.

The council hired the deputy to help remedy traffic complaints of village residents.

The deputy is to work varying shifts every week at least until the end of the year, said Millard. At that time, the council will evaluate the results.

Thanksgiving is for memories

Thanksgiving is a day for memories—personal and historical.

For personal memories with a historical touch, kids are the best observations. They can recite the whole story of Thanksgiving. They know about the pilgrims and mean kings and a long, hard trek across the ocean.

They may not be sure of where the voyage originated, but they know there was a voyage.

This was demonstrated recently at my sister's kitchen table. Nancy's 4-year-old and her neighbor's 5-year-old were having a hot discussion about Thanksgiving and how it began.

The 5-year-old was doing most of the explaining. The 4-year-old, who still thinks Thanksgiving only means a turkey feast, was fascinated by his friend's historical tale.

She told him all about the pilgrims and how they came on a boat. They came from Africa, she said. My nephew was amazed. "From Africa," he repeated. "Yep," came the reply.

Nancy tried to tell the children that the pilgrims came from England, but they preferred their own version of "history." And they preferred to move on to more exciting activities.

Children may know the origination of Thanksgiving Day, but it is up to us to explain its preservation.

It's up to us to let them know the importance of our freedoms and the hardships our country has gone through to maintain them.

We must develop their sense of patriotic pride and an appreciation and respect for the basic freedom the pilgrims sought in this land—the freedom to worship in the way that best suits each of us.

On Thursday, listen to a child; talk to a child. Build some history of your own, and have a Happy Thanksgiving.

Charlotte Wall

Thank you for . . .

Kathy Greenfield

I've selected something really obscure to be thankful for on Thanksgiving Day—and why not? Everything else is pretty well covered in thoughts-per-day.

Besides, anyone my age who remembers a prayer of grace learned in Brownie Scout days—and still enjoys it for its simplicity and profoundness—isn't the type who would go on and on with a detailed list.

The prayer is this: "Thank you for the food we eat. Thank you for the birds that sing. Thank you, God, for everything."

Lovely, isn't it?

The item I've chosen for specific thankfulness surged to the forefront because I know several women who are pregnant (not me).

Discussions have led to the inevitable: "What are you going to name the baby?" and talk about how my children's names were chosen, where brothers' and sisters' names came from, the origin of our own names, and so forth.

There's one overwhelming conclusion that can be drawn from all the information thus far accumulated during these discussions. Many of us are walking around with names our parents chose as compromises.

Parents-to-be often learn, for the first time, that a name one spouse adores is despised by the other spouse because "I once knew someone with that name . . ."

In our case, we named our daughter after a character in a Broadway play we saw when I was pregnant. Our son's name came from one of those "name your baby" books because we both liked it.

All of the above leads to the other names that have to be chosen—the ones in the middle.

We settled on a name we both liked for our daughter and a great-grandfather's name, which we also liked, for our son. Great care was exercised in that department because of my middle name.

These are my sisters' and brother's middle names: Ann, Lynn, Susan and James.

Mine is Louise.

It shook me up for years—and I was not appeased by my parents' reassurances that it was an honor to carry the name of my great-grandmother in the middle of my other names.

Then, suddenly, during all these name conversations I've been having, I realized that I no longer dislike my middle name. I even kind of like it. I'm not sure why, but I figure it must be one of those benefits that goes with age.

And for that I'm thankful—and why not?

Jim's Jottings

Monday, driving back from our annual 2-day deer hunt, I commented, "Isn't it great feeling good?"

All day Wednesday I repeated to myself, "It's hell being sick."

I think the latter was the too quick withdrawal from the good life of over-eating, etc. but, wow, it must be 25 years since I stayed away from the office because of illness.

The next day things were much better. Chills were gone, as was the fever. Food sounded good again.

Recently we took a week in Carefree, Arizona. In a way it's hard to describe where that town is. We usually say it's 25 miles north of Phoenix.

The thing that's wrong with that is Phoenix, Scottsdale and Mesa are all in a bunch, surrounding poor Tempe. And the big three are landgrabbers.

Phoenix grabs north, west and south as best it can. Mesa goes east and Scottsdale heads north right to the city limits of Carefree, which is about 25 miles from the middle of Scottsdale. The last 15 miles is practically open desert.

I mention all this to put Jack Nicklaus' latest golf course into geographic perspective. Called Desert Mountain, the developers have bought 8,000 acres of desert on which they are building three 18-hole golf courses.

The city of Scottsdale will bring water and sewers all the way up there for the millionaires' playground. You gotta have bucks to buy there. The very minimum lot, far from a golf hole, and down between hills, is $130,000; 5 percent off for cash.

A golf course lot is $335,000, with the same 5 percent off for cash.

Golf resort developers have to be some of the greatest risk takers in the world. Within 10 miles of Desert Mountain is Desert Forest, Boulders, Troon, and Desert Highlands, all very exclusive.

A lot at Troon was quoted at $400,000, and they are not exactly hot items. The initiation fee is $25,000. The same price range prevails at Desert Highlands, home of the first Skins Game of golf. We know a lot owner there who can't find a buyer.

Mind you, that's only a lot cost. It also costs to play golf, association dues and assessment dues.

Desert Mountain development is so exclusive they don't even call their lots, lots. They are "building envelopes," and you can't change the looks of the envelope when you build on it.

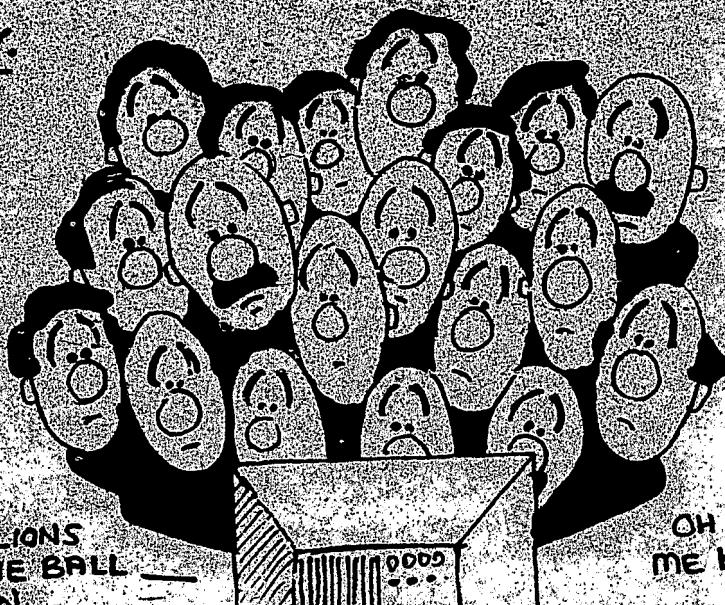

When it's all done, the poor folks will be unable to play two of the 18-hole courses. Actually, poor folks will hardly be able to play the original 18 next spring. You're probably looking at a hundred dollar bill for a round.

If you're interested in it, buy now. There's no dues or assessment until Jan. 1, 2000 for charter members.

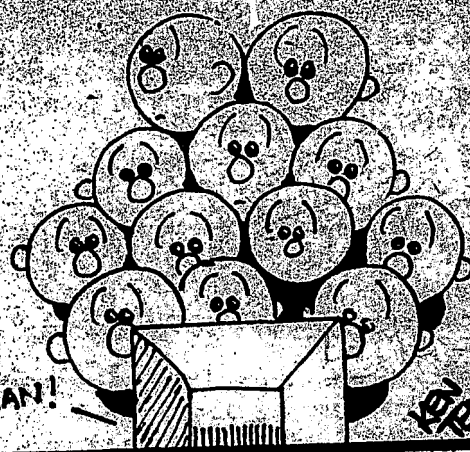

THANKSGIVING IS THE TIME WHEN 50 RELATIVES JAM INTO YOUR HOUSE, AND YOU GIVE THANKS, IT HAPPENS ONLY ONCE A YEAR...

Letter to the editor

Common ground

Mr. Gerbasi,

It's about your "Me" column. I liked it. Surprised—well maybe I liked it because I think we have some experiences in common.

On about Dec. 15, 1962, I was preparing for my first varsity basketball game as a Franklin Patriot. I experienced some of those great moments long before you did. While you were back in Miss Buckman's second grade class, I had already finished my football career at Western Michigan University.

Livonia is where I grew up and I must say that I really enjoyed it. Just reading a few lines about home really caught my attention.

Yes, I think we have some things in common—Livonia, Clarkston, athletics, Italian? goals—the Lotto, thrills, etc.

My wife and I teach in the Waterford schools and we have chosen Clarkston as a great place to bring up our kids (Sarah, almost 10 and Torre, our son, 3 1/2).

I hope I was right about some of my assumptions. I just wanted to let you know someone enjoyed it.

I'm around town and I'm sure I'll run into you before long at a game or wherever, as I will introduce myself.

Lastly, let me say if you were trying to tell us you were getting old, maybe I let you feel young again.

Sam Antonazzo, F.H.S. Class of '65

P.S. I'll look for you at "open gym." I still love going full court for a couple hours.

'If it Fitz . . .

They're people, not statistics

Jim Fitzgerald

What do you say to a man who just learned he will soon lose his job when a General Motors plant is closed for good? He has a family to support, a hefty mortgage and car payments. How about saying:

"You should have been fired a long time ago."

Or maybe you would put it this way: "It's hard to see anything bad about you getting laid off forever. For years I've been saying you should be dumped."

Heartless? Sure. It's easy to be heartless when your own job is safe and you're so impressed by statistics that when GM announces it will cut costs by eliminating 29,000 jobs, you forget that each of those jobs is held by a real live person.

The words are sanitized, bloodless. The tone is intellectual. But the meaning is the same as in the two rough quotes above. Listen to Maryann Keller, vice-president of a New York investment firm. When asked what she thought of GM's recent announcement that it will close nine plants, Keller said:

"GM's costs are too high and its market share is declining. The decision should have been made years ago."

Or listen to Joseph Phillippi, an automotive analyst for E.F. Hutton & Co. You remember E.F. Hutton. It's the brokerage firm that last year pleaded guilty to 2,000 counts of fraud. There were no prison sentences. It's hard to fit a brokerage firm into a prison cell.

Phillippi said the GM shutdown announcement was "long overdue, and it's hard to see anything negative about it."

WELL, THERE ARE 29,000 people who might see something negative about it. But what the heck. They can always sue GM the way Thomas Feaheny sued Ford Motor Co.

I mention Feaheny, who has been in the news a lot lately, to illustrate that there's more than one way to lose a job in the automotive industry. When Feaheny was removed as a corporate vice-president, he accused several of his bosses of conspiring to ruin his career and took them to court. Testimony indicated that many autoworkers probably don't put enough value on their services, or they would hire a lawyer to protect their incomes.

It was revealed that Feaheny rejected Ford's offer of a separation agreement worth about $1 million, including a $400,000 lump-sum payment and a three-year, $100,000-a-year consulting contract.

Instead, according to tapes played at the trial, Feaheny demanded $5 million to remain silent on certain issues including, perhaps, the safety of Ford products. Feaheny, who had been a witness for Ford in product liability cases, hinted that without the $5 million, he might begin earning $250 an hour as a consultant to people suing Ford, and he also might write an unfavorable book about the company.

How about that? Feaheny is one fired autoworker who did not go quietly into the unemployment line. His example might well inspire the thousands of GM workers whose bosses recently conspired to ruin their careers. How big of a lump would they like to see in the sum required to buy their silence about cars made on Mondays?

COME TO THINK about it, just in case Lee Iacocca is interested, I could still write a book about the Chrysler factory that laid me off in 1946.

Happily, a judge just ruled against Feaheny, but he can still appeal. He can provide further evidence of the gigantic gap between those whose market share is declining and those whose unemployment pay ran out last month.

Most of the blame for our auto industry's troubles must go to the overpaid executives who, for making stupid decisions, don't get laid off but are offered million-dollar separation agreements. The least blame goes to those who suffer the most—the production workers.

And the least we can do is remember they are people, for God's sake, not statistics.

Chairman Wilford strives to control traffic

By Julie Campe

When Jerry Wilford moved to Clarkston 32 years ago, not many cars traveled on Main Street.

His neighbor on North Main Street, Guy Walters, used to have a dog that would sleep in the middle of the road and hardly ever have to move.

Current traffic problems are a far cry from those serene days.

Appraiser added

Increased construction in Independence Township has prompted the assessing department to seek help.

"The new construction is just overwhelming," said township tax assessor David Kramer at the Nov. 18 township board meeting. "We can't keep up."

The department is in the process of transferring all of its records to computer, as well. The process should take another two to three years, said Kramer.

The township board approved, 6-1, the hiring of another full-time appraiser to help with the workload. Without comment, Trustee Dale Stuart voted "no."

Applicants should be high school graduates with a Level One Assessor Certification and a valid driver's license. Experience is preferred. The salary is $19,448.

Responsibilities include assessing property, collecting data, performing drawings of buildings and plot plans, inspecting buildings and converting existing records to the computer assisted appraisal system.

New service counter

A new service counter is to be installed outside the Independence Township Parks and Recreation and Assessing offices.

The township board approved, 6-1, the lowest of three bids for construction of the project.

Stanwood Industries of Pontiac is to charge $2,399 for cabinets including cupboard space and a removable countertop.

The offices in the basement of the township building are to share the new 13-foot long counter, which is to be built across the hallway between the two offices.

The new design is to prevent congestion between the current counters, which now extend in a "u" shape from the offices on either side of the hall.

Trustee Dale Stuart voted "no," saying $2,399 was too much to pay for a countertop.

Wilford's observations and concern prompted him to join the village M-15 study committee, formed to assess the situation and recommend solutions to the Clarkston Village Council.

"A lot of it was simply seeing the traffic—just living here and seeing it," he said.

The retired magazine editor is chairman of the committee this year.

Ultimately, the committee's goal is better control of traffic on Main Street, he said.

A 1981 study showed 20 percent of the traffic between I-75 and U.S. 10 (Dixie Highway) came from north of I-75. The figure is probably greater today, he said, since the population in that direction has increased.

The committee also hopes to convince the state department of transportation to install more traffic lights.

One light is to be installed at the corner of Waldon Road and Main Street, but that is not a result of the committee's efforts, he said.

The light won't reduce the traffic flow, Wilford said, but would control the speed.

Another concern of the committee is the truck traffic on Main Street. A traffic light could help with that problem as well, he said.

With a light at the I-75 entrance onto M-15, trucks with no business in the village could then be persuaded to take an alternate route: north on Dixie to south on I-75 to M-15.

Some of the trucks now travel north on Dixie to White Lake Road and to Washington Street in order to make a left turn onto M-15, he said.

With a light at I-75 and M-15, the trucks could make the left turn. Right now, there's not enough time between cars for big truck to turn, he said.

The alternate route is about two miles more, but only about 4 to 26 seconds difference in time, according to his calculations, Wilford said.

Another concern is the state's M-15 widening project, scheduled for 1990. The current plan to widen a portion to five lanes could make a bottleneck at the entrance into the village, he said.

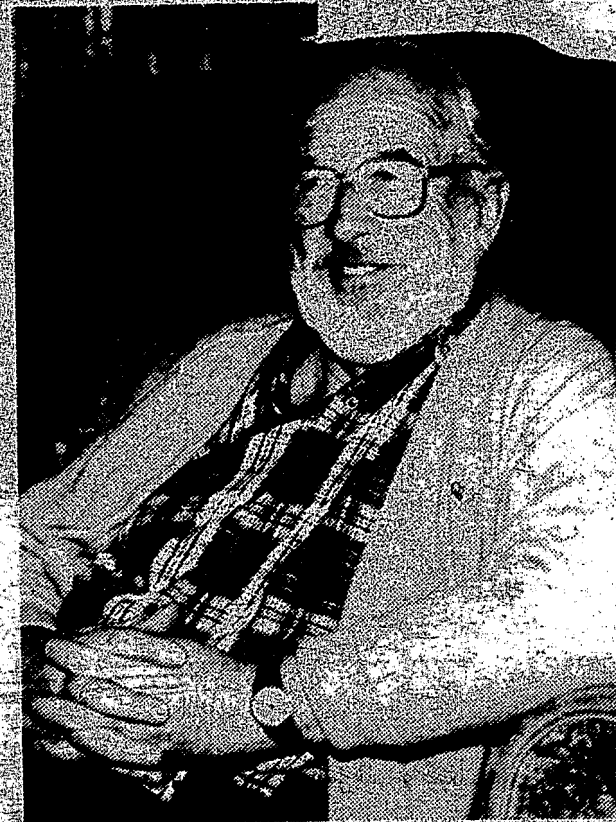

"Left turns are so bad now, I don't know how people will make a left-hand turn onto M-15 from the businesses (if M-15 is widened)," he said.

While the committee as a whole is studying the problems, several members are working on solutions. Village council President Sharron Garallo is looking at the feasibility of the village buying a portion of Main Street from the state.

The village would then have control over traffic, but also the responsibility of maintenance, snow removal, street repair and upkeep, he said.

Other options include consulting with Sen. Richard Fessler (R-West Bloomfield), traffic committee chairperson for the State Senate, the Southeastern Michigan Council of Governments, and the Michigan Department of Transportation.

M-15 traffic committee chairman Jerry Wilford has lived on Main Street for 32 years.

A time to give thanks

Thanksgiving is a day explicitly set aside to give thanks. It may be the one day of the year people consciously think of why they are thankful.

In preparation for the holiday, 28 fifth-graders at Pine Knob Elementary put in some serious thinking about the topic.

Teacher Rosemary Krause asked her pupils to complete this sentence: These are the things for which I am grateful at Thanksgiving 1986 . . .

Excerpts from what they wrote follow:

Jeremy Rettich

"I am thankful for my mom, my dad, my brother, and my bird. I am glad that I have a dog and I am thankful for my teacher."

Tom Brazler

" . . . for the house that we live in and that my parents have good jobs. Some people take those things for granted but we should be grateful."

Danny Dick

" . . . that my grandparents are alive and teach me things like the names of rocks and how to whittle on wood, that they can go snowmobiling with me and go picking mushrooms."

Chris Klein

" . . . even the automobile, the radio, or the bicycle. For Thanksgiving when our relatives all meet and have a big turkey dinner."

Michael Credit

" . . . because my family gets together and aunts, uncles, grandmothers and cousins all get to see each other."

Theresa Hopper

" . . . for nice food, for moms and dads to have jobs . . . for our community and schools."

Rusty Mitcham

" . . . for my country and our freedom. A lot of people think nothing about their freedom but they should. People in some countries get killed because they go to church or because of their religion."

Luke Larson

"I am thankful for the friends that I have and that I am alive, for our freedom, for a good teacher."

Gavin Navarro

" . . . for the clothes we wear to keep us warm, for the food we eat to keep us alive, for our houses which give us shelter."

Alexia Klayman

" . . . that there is not a war going on and for a nice mother and a nice father."

Troy Highlen

" . . . that I can run and jump and that I have clothes and shoes to put on my feet."

Dale Bills

" . . . for food, a wonderful family, that we're not at war, for school and a good education."

Brian Parks

" . . . for my dad's job and for my house and my friends."

Ian McCrory

" . . . for the privilege to live in America, to be free, to be able to pick where you want to live and what religion you want to be."

Rena Yanna

" . . . for us not being in a war, our nice friends, our clothes, and for ourselves."

Jill Fuller

" . . . that my parents love me. For my room and everything in it."

Matt Rule

" . . . for my family, my sister, my dad, my mom. People take these things for granted but they should be thankful."

Mike Baumer

" . . . for the family getting together, for my food, for my clothes. I like Thanksgiving because you can eat lots of food."

Tina Mowery

" . . . for everyone who has helped me and stood by my side or cheered me up when I was sick."

Rebecca Bartlett

" . . . for not being crippled, able to read and write, able to run, jump, play and laugh."

Matt Hicks

" . . . my dad doesn't have to go to work on that day. Thanksgiving is a day the Pilgrims ate with the Indians. I am thankful for my family, for my life."

Heidi Schneider

" . . . for baby kittens, for my intelligence, for my friends, for my family."

Tina Brown

" . . . for the food that I eat. Some people don't get anything for Thanksgiving."

Shawn Grimes

" . . . for my family's good health, for our nice house, our nice clothes, for our neighbors, our nice neighborhood."

Nathan Oliver

" . . . for all the things we accomplish and for all the things that are passed from generation to generation like the tools we use."

Brad Shires

" . . . for the freedom of my country and that my dad and mom have good jobs."

Brian Stewart

" . . . for having somewhere to live, for a roof over our heads, for something to do on a rainy day."

Tony Lucca

" . . . for our food, our friends, our country not being at war, for our parents, for our teachers who teach us to write these words on this paper."

Dixie rezoning quest riles property owner

By Julie Campe

After over an hour of debate Nov. 20, the Independence Township planning commission recommended the rezoning of property on Dixie Highway—contrary to the owner's wishes.

The commission voted 4-1 at the special meeting to recommend the rezoning from highway commercial to multi-family residential for approximately 4 acres between Balmoral Terrace and Maple Road.

The rezoning must be approved twice by the township board before it takes effect.

Trustee Carol Balzarini, also a trustee on the township board, voted "no."

"To take property on Dixie and rezone to residential would make it unusable," she said. "If we recommend rezoning to the township board, it would damage the credibility of the planning commission."

Other members voiced their approval.

"The notion that multiple residential doesn't belong on Dixie is not well-founded," said Chairperson Neil Wallace, naming several examples of multiple residential uses on Dixie Highway.

"To make a blanket rule that you can never take commercial and change it to residential would be a mistake. There are times when it's appropriate," he said. "This is one of them."

Trustee John Gray said the rezoning would reduce possible traffic volume.

"And it's a contiguous use of the asset that Waterford Hill is to the township," he said.

Other members also predicted a potential traffic problem with the current zoning.

"To change it to multiple would not decrease the value of the property, because it will enhance the quality of the property development behind it," said Holly Stephens.

The current owner of the property is in the process of developing Clarkston Bluffs condominiums behind it.

At the Nov. 13 planning commission meeting, he voiced his disapproval of the rezoning.

"I've had a family history with the property for over 30 years," said Jeffrey Leib. "My family was instrumental in developing the south side of (Waterford) hill, a source of pride to the residents."

"It was my father's dream to see the north side of the hill developed in multiple with the front side on Dixie commercial."

This property has been tentatively sold by my family to a group who is interested in developing it.

"We're sorry that whatever development goes will create more traffic, but Dixie Highway is a major state highway."

Also at the meeting was Red Beattie, owner of Moon Valley Furniture adjacent to Leib's property.

"To rezone to residential would definitely deteriorate the value of my property," said Beattie. "I definitely would not like to see it developed (as residential)."

Three residents from the area also spoke regarding the potential traffic problems.

Leib was not present at the Nov. 20 special meeting and declined comment on the commission's decision until he after reads the minutes.

Trustees Brent Bair and Joseph Figa were absent. Wallace, Stephens, Gray and Jo Fussman voted "yes."

More gas pumps

The Clark Oil property at Sashabaw and Oak Vista roads may be rezoned to allow improvements to the station.

On Nov. 18, the Independence Township Board unanimously approved a first reading of the zoning change from highway commercial to motor vehicle service station.

The new zoning would allow the construction of another gas pump island and an overhead canopy.

Approvals from the planning commission, zoning board of appeals and another township approval are necessary before construction can begin next spring.

The property currently holds two 10,000 gallon gas tanks and one 8,000 gallon tank. No additional tanks are to be added.

This is the second time Fessler has been elected Majority Whip.

He represents District 17, which covers the townships of Holly, Groveland, Brandon, Rose, Springfield, Independence, Highland, White Lake, Milford and Lyon; most of Commerce, West Bloomfield and Bloomfield townships; the cities of South Lyon, Walled Lake and Bloomfield Hills; and the villages of Holly, Ortonville, Clarkston, Milford, Wolverine Lake, Orchard Lake, Franklin, Bingham Farms and Beverly Hills.

Board of education gets millage tips

By Kathy Greenfield

If Ned Hubbell were to write a book, he could call it "The Making of a Millage."

The director of public relations for the Michigan Department of Education shared his opinions on how to get millages approved by voters with the Clarkston board of education on Nov. 13.

After a brief introduction by board President Janet Thomas, who said Hubbell was speaking about the "planned district facilities improvements," Hubbell talked, practically non-stop, for 1 1/2 hours.

Hubbell was invited to speak because the board is considering asking voters to approve about $25 million for a new high school and another $19 million for repairs, remodeling and renovation to existing school buildings.

He organized his tips into three categories: When to vote, What to vote, How to campaign to bring about a successful election.

The worst time to vote on school millage is in "the dead of winter—January, February, March," he said. "You lose the possible yes vote. The no votes will be there—on a Skidoo if necessary."

April—when federal tax payments are due—was another time to avoid. "People are more tax-conscious," he said.

Hubbell recommended several positive times including the first 10 days in December. "People are upbeat," he said, because of the holiday season—and campaigns can use a red and green color scheme.

He noted that a successful campaign for a new elementary school in Pontiac occurred during that time period. Campaigners used Christmas colors and the slogan "A New School for the Little People."

He also recommended that school be in session when millage requests are on the ballot and specifically named very early in the school year as an upbeat time. "September is a pretty nice time of the year," he said.

Talk about "what to vote" touched on the need for the school board to be unanimous in its opinions on ballot proposals. The necessary elements are a "united board, supportive staff and an army of citizens," he said.

With the Clarkston district's needs covering everything from new roofs to a new school building, it could be difficult, he said.

Hubbell strongly recommended no more than two questions on the ballot rather than the method of offering several options.

When districts use "the bedsheet approach, the citizens say, 'If you can't decide what you want, and tend to turn down all options,' he said.

When deciding what to put on the ballot, Hubbell said the first step should be a scientific public survey by telephone, in which residents are asked how they feel about the options.

"All that is is a snapshot of opinion at a point in time, (but) it tells you how far you have to go and how high the mountain is, if you do it right," he said.

Hubbell went on to list "Ned's Necessary Nine Plus One" for a successful election.

The ingredients included a citizen-led campaign, identification of yes-voters—not by guessing but by canvassing, small-group meetings, making the campaign child-centered, a campaign period of only three to four weeks, easy-to-understand explanations, and a massive effort to get out the yes-voters in the last 24 hours before the election.

Because people are easier to reach on Mondays than Sundays, Hubbell called for a never-on-Monday approach for elections and, accordingly, suggested a possible slogan: "Let's make Tuesday good news day for Clarkston's kids."

Imperative in an election, he said, are letting people know "what the community's going to get out of a better school system—an improved town and more tax dollars to the tax base because good schools attract good people."

Medical office set for Dixie

A new medical office is to be built on Dixie Highway across from the Clarkston Cinema.

Anthony Aenlle, doctor of internal medicine, received conceptual site plan approval for his new office from the Independence Township Planning Commission on Nov. 20.

The one-level brick and wood building is to double the size of his current office on M-15 with 4,000 square feet of space.

With eight examining rooms and a larger waiting room, Aenlle and his partner, Dr. Barbara Bober should be less crowded, he said.

"We've just outgrown our space," he said.

There is also space for other physicians in the building, he said.

Final site plan approval from the planning commission is needed before construction can begin next spring, he said.

The commission gave unanimous conceptual approval to the plan, with suggestions on landscaping and the garbage dumpster location.

Rudolph carries load

Santa Claus sure knew what he was doing when he chose reindeer to pull his sleigh.

While reindeer are quite small—usually around 3 1/2 feet tall—they have great strength and endurance. A healthy reindeer usually weighs about 150 to 250 pounds and can pull its own weight in cargo on sleds across the tundra—or the rooftops!

Cable vacancy filled

Gordon Mason was appointed to the Independence Township cablecasting board last week to fill a vacancy left by the resignation of the Rev. Alexander Stewart.

Chairperson Bruce Hariton and Janet Thomas were reappointed to three-year terms at the same Nov. 18 meeting.

The five-member cablecasting board was established to review and recommend expenditures for the United Cable Co. public access studio in the township.

Show boasts 50 booths

The 6th annual Davisburg Christmas Craft Fest will offer over 50 craft booths—and a chance to stroll back through time.

A walk through the 1800 village scene will take shoppers by such stores as "Ink Tinkers," "Thimble Things," "Cellar Dwellers," "A-Doughables," "The Thread Mill," "Secrets in the Attic," "Gingerbread House" and much more.

The festival is planned from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Dec. 6 and 7 in the Springfield Oaks Activities Center, 12451 Andersonville Rd., Springfield Township.

The Davisburg Scotties will offer special desserts from the "Scotties Country Kitchen" and lunch or snacks will be available.

In addition to a wide array of handmade craft items from wooden toys to pretzel houses, there will be 11 working craft demonstrations. There will also be instant color pictures available with Santa on Saturday from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m., and again on Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m.

In conjunction with the craft fest, the Davisburg Historical Society will have an open house across the street at the Davis House.

Admission and parking will be free.

Feast freedom

Most of us are looking forward to Thanksgiving Day with delight. Overflowing with the season's first wave of holiday spirit, we will drive hours to spend hours with each other. With the day off work, we'll lounge around watching parades while the turkey gets stuffed, and then stuff ourselves on the turkey.

We will then crawl away from the dining room and wallow on the couch, where we'll watch football game after football game. Later, we'll migrate in mass back to the kitchen, to munch turkey sandwiches and devour leftovers. Yes, Thanksgiving is a wonderful day, unless of course you are the one hosting dinner.

The Thanksgiving Day host has a slightly different perspective on this holiday than everyone else does. The host spends the week before cleaning the house, the day before fixing different fancy foods, and lots of money on a naked fowl.

The host has to find matching guest towels for the bathroom, room in the refrigerator for everything, enough sets of matching silverware for all invited, and space around the table for the three extra people who happened to show up. The host has to act pleased as punch to see everyone coming to destroy the house, and drink all that leftover punch in the weeks that follow.

Last year my sister was the lucky host who had to act nonchalant as relatives from three states spilled things on her carpet. Having finally finished off the remaining frozen turkey in late August, she swore she would sell her house and move to an efficiency apartment to prevent ever being roped into such responsibilities again.

In the face of all the stress and strain of hosting such a feast last year, though, she still managed to do a wonderful job. Thus, all 37 of us are meeting at her house again this year to honor her.

This year though, Thanksgiving dinner will be different. This is the year for the turkey to be too dry, as last year it was under-cooked. Since the pumpkin pie I baked was a bit crispy, all right, charred, I have been given a chance to redeem myself.

This year I will keep dessert simple, as requested. I am taking a large bowl of leftover Halloween candy. Sis has a plan for keeping the floor clean as well. The first person to spill something hosts Thanksgiving next year.

I hope you all have a Happy Thanksgiving, and have a lot for which to be thankful. I know I do. I am thankful for all you readers, for my family including all the crying babies and fighting nieces and nephews who will be gathered around the table, and for the job that allows me to be better dressed than the turkey, to name just a few blessings. I am also thankful that I am not hosting Thanksgiving dinner.

Share the holidays with wildlife

Why not make wildlife part of your holiday season?

Adorning a tree with pinecones dipped in suet or peanut butter makes a sumptuous Christmas feast for birds and animals.

Popcorn, raisins and cranberries strung on the branches are also treats for wildlife and give the tree a festive look.

The best decorations, however, are those that come to feast—birds and nature's other living ornaments.

Repairs to douse leaking fire roofs

Two leaky fire station roofs are to be repaired as soon as possible.

On Nov. 18, the Independence Township Board approved, 7-0, spending $2,800 from the fire fund, waiving the bid procedure, in an attempt to fix the leaks before bad weather makes them worse.

Price Brothers of Pontiac is to do the work on fire station No. 1 on Church Street, Clarkston, and station No. 3 on Maybee Road, Independence Township.

Water is currently leaking on the fire apparatus in Station No. 3, said assistant fire chief Gar Wilson, so the repairs are needed immediately.

Station No. 2 is not as bad, but it probably couldn't last the winter, he said.

130-IN MEMORIAM

IN MEMORY OF Mike Allen, who left us 10 years ago, November 19, 1976. Today may the road rise up to meet you, may the wind be always at your back. May the sunshine warm upon your face, and may the rain fall soft upon your fields. And until we shall meet again, may God hold you in the palm of his hand. We think of you everyday, your Dad, Mom, Grandma, Brothers, and Sisters. !!CX46-2

Jokisch holding onto all options

By Chris Gerbasl

The tall, lean young man leaps and effortlessly puts the basketball through the hoop again and again for the photographer.

It's a small demand on his time, as was the trip to Detroit that same day for a newspaper all-area photograph. They're demands he's probably used to already, but the exposure may be just beginning for Dan Jokisch.

At the end of Clarkston's basketball season, the senior will sit down with his family and coaches and decide where he will attend college.

At the moment, his top three choices are Michigan, Michigan State and UCLA, each having fine football and basketball traditions and highly visible sports programs.

Jokisch admits that if he's leaning toward any school, it's Michigan, to follow in the footsteps of his brother Paul, who is winding up his football career with the Wolverines. At 6-feet-7, 205 pounds, he's similar in stature to Paul.

"Some schools don't want to mess with me because they already think I'll go to Michigan to play football and they don't want to waste their time," said Jokisch. "I don't know why they'd do that."

A tougher decision for Jokisch might be whether to play football or basketball in college. The questions don't end there, though. If he decides on football, he could play safety or split end. Jokisch made all-league this season as a safety, while his receiving totals were down from last year.

"I could've caught more passes, but we won," said Jokisch of the team's 8-1 record. "I think I'll have a good year in basketball. I never thought about playing football at college, I always thought about playing basketball. It's a tough decision to make."

Jokisch started receiving letters from colleges for basketball as a freshman and football coaches started calling after his junior season.

The Jokisch family is used to the recruiting process, having gone through it with sons Paul, who played basketball at Michigan before switching to football, and Dave, who is a junior basketball player at Lake Superior State.

"The coaches come in and tell you what you want to hear and never tell you what you don't want to hear," said Paul Jokisch Sr.

"Ninety percent of it's not the truth, but you live with it," he said. "They tell you how super great you are and what position you'll play and how well you'll help the program. We're more cautious now."

Aside from the boys, Paul and Penny Jokisch have three girls. Connie, 24, starred in basketball at Southfield Christian and is now a nurse. Rhonda, 14, was the leading scorer on the Clarkston Junior High basketball team this season. The oldest child, Cathy, 25, somehow went into music rather than sports and then went on to nursing school.

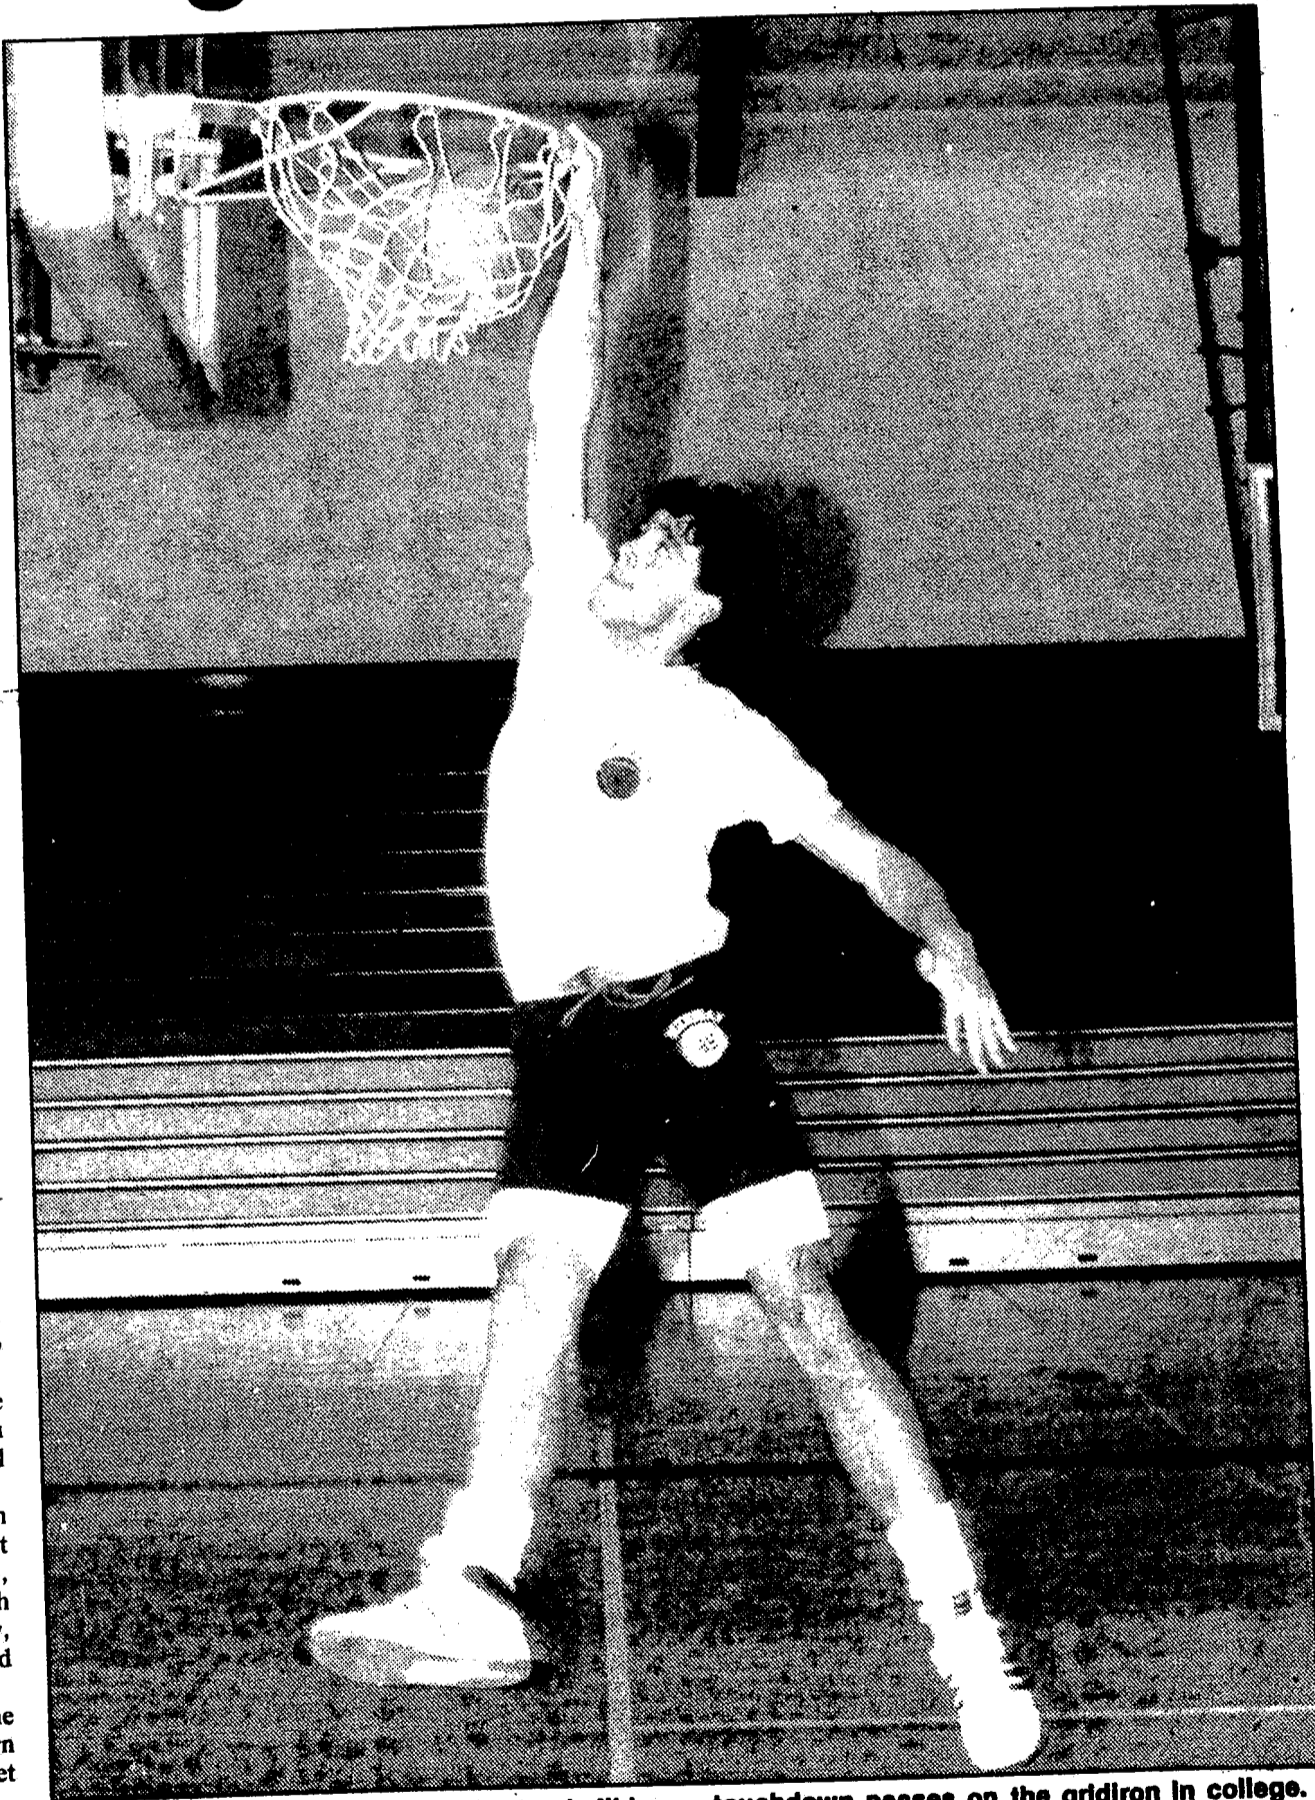

But sports dominated the household. When the children were young, the family lived in Auburn Heights. There was a Boys Club right down the street and that's where it all began.

Since then, there's been a lot of games played and Mr. and Mrs. Jokisch have always had something to do.

"We get along so good," said Dan. "We help each other and play with each other. When we were little, we never went to friends' houses to play, we just played in the back yard together."

"They've (his parents) helped a lot, too," he said.

"A lot of parents don't care or don't push, but they

Dan Jokisch doesn't know yet whether he'll be jamming basketballs on the court or hauling in pushed me a lot. I've never begged down or quit any sport."

"I've supported him by being at the games and staying after games, win or lose," said Penny Jokisch. "I talk to him before games and give him little pointers. I'm not the coach, but I can still tell him some things."

touchdown passes on the gridiron in college.

The basketball coach is, of course, Dan Fife. Both he and Jokisch expect a good year out of Jokisch to keep the college coaches knocking at the door.

"He's probably a Division I college player," said Fife. "He's the man to perform this year."

[see JOKISCH, Page 4B]

Can Wolves win big again?

"It's difficult anywhere to repeat as champs," Clarkston coach Dan Fife, November 1986.

By Chris Gerbasi

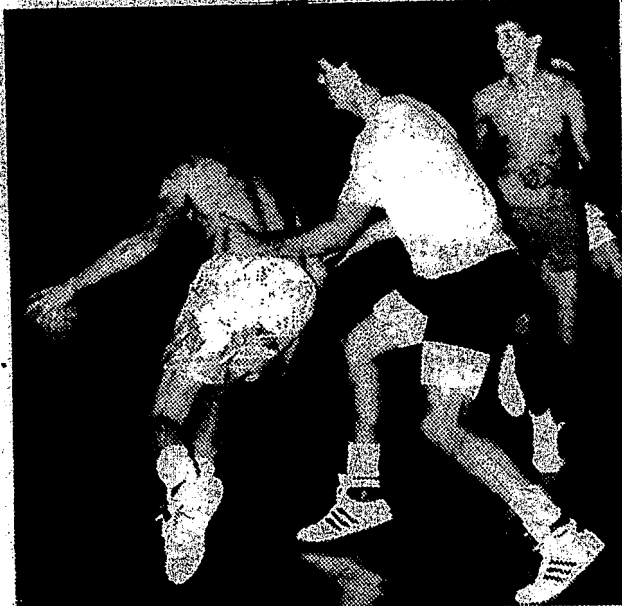

Those words might prove to be a theme for this year's version of the Clarkston boys basketball team.

Fife is optimistic and likes the group of players he has to work with, but it won't be easy for the Wolves to match last season's accomplishments.

Clarkston went 21-3 and tied with Pontiac Northern for the Greater Oakland Activities League championship.

The Wolves then won the district title with a triple-overtime win over Northern before being knocked off in a double-overtime regional game against Flint Northwestern.

Graduated from that team are starters Ed Whitaker and Mike Walters and four other players.

A Clarkston varsity basketball player looks for an opening in the shirts-and-skis game at practice.

"Walters was probably the best leader I've ever been around," said Fife. "And we'll miss Whitaker's ball-handling and game presence."

But Fife has six more seniors this year and he's impressed with their attitudes.

"The seniors asked me to do more conditioning," he said. "They really want to work. I've never had a team ask me to run them more."

"They said, 'Coach, let us handle conditioning.' That shows that they understand your principles and the importance of conditioning."

The seniors are forwards Dan Jokisch and Jim Hall, center Steve Secatch and guards Keith Mercier, Craig Chamberlain and Jeff Billig.

"We expect good things from these guys," said Fife. "They're all strong leaders, they're comfortable with their positions on the basketball floor."

Juniors counted on to contribute are Mike Barnes, Josh Newblatt and Jeff Tungate, as well as Keenan Powell, Rob Sanderson and Eric Helms. Barnes plays guard while Newblatt and Tungate can swing between guard and forward.

Fife expects nine or 10 players to get plenty of time on the court. He also said the team may not be as quick as a year ago, but will be stronger.

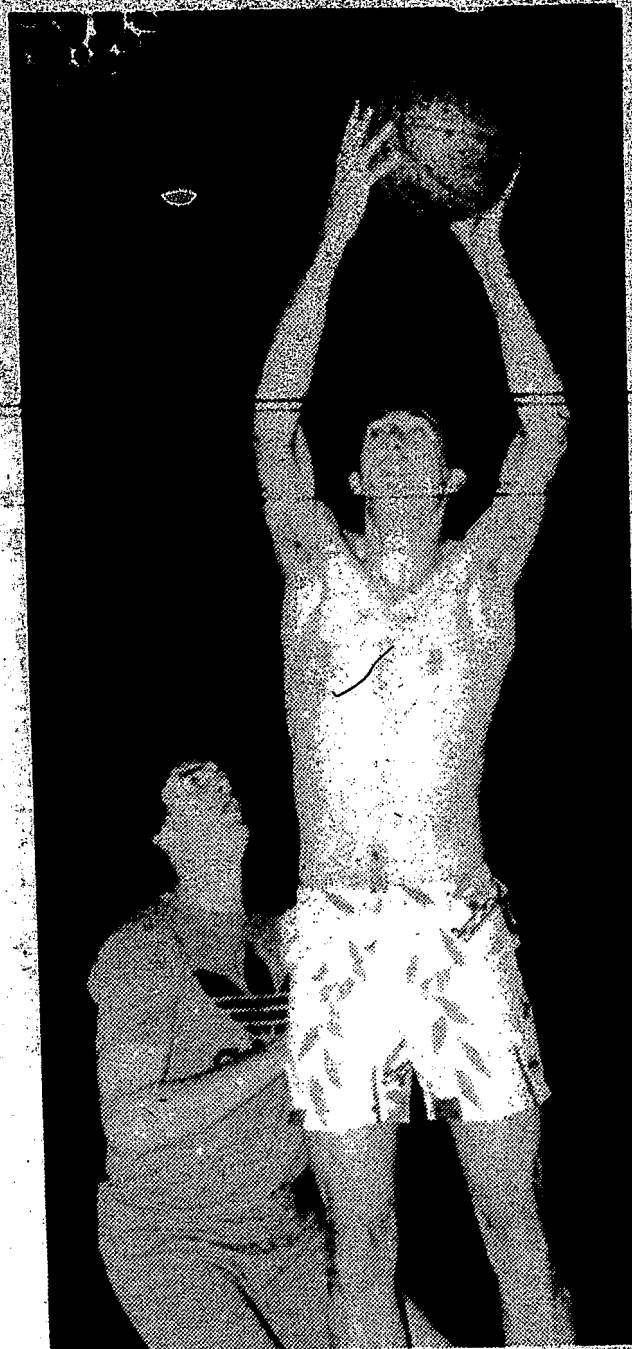

The Wolves will have to be strong right away as they have six tough games to start the season, all on the road.

They open at Detroit Catholic Central Dec. 5 and then travel to Pontiac Central, a team they lost to in overtime last year.

Clarkston then plays at the Catholic Central Christmas tournament, which also features Howell and Wayne Memorial, followed by games against Class C power Detroit Country Day and archrival Pontiac Northern.

"I told the guys, we could be 0-6 and still be a heckuva team," said Fife. "If we come back 6-0, we'll be pretty good."

"We're excited about the challenge," he said. "I think we'll be a different team this year, in a good way. I think we'll surprise some people."

The shirts-and-skis action is run-and-gun and nonstop.

Cagers grab half of GOAL title

Details of the Clarkston-Kettering playoff, Section A

There must be something about Lake Orion that appeals to Clarkston sports teams.

The Wolves' girls basketball team won a share of its first ever Greater Oakland Activities League championship with a 47-38 victory at Lake Orion Nov. 18.

The victory gave Clarkston a 7-1 league mark and a 17-3 regular season record, identical to co-champ Waterford Kettering.

Ironically, Clarkston's football team captured its GOAL title in Dragon territory in double overtime back in October.

The hoops game didn't go into double overtime, but it wasn't easy for the Wolves.

"I had a feeling about this game," said coach Dave McDonald, who has coached the team eight years, since the GOAL was formed. "I was as nervous as the game against Kettering. They're (Lake Orion) a tough team. They played us tough the whole way."

The first half was low-scoring and the Dragons led 13-12 late in the half. Clarkston's Michele Wyniemko was sitting on the bench with three fouls, but the Wolves scored the last seven points of the half to go up 19-13.

McDonald gave the officials an earful at halftime and the play loosened up a bit in the final two quarters.

The Wolves pressed effectively in the third quarter and led by 11 most of the way.

They continued to apply pressure in the fourth, but Lake Orion closed the gap to 42-34 with two minutes left in the game.

When Jean Drumb put in a rebound with 35 seconds left, the score was 44-38. But Wyniemko sank three of four free throws late to preserve the win.

She had a game-high 15 points and Lisa Ladd contributed 13 points for the Wolves. Jennifer Rosenmund topped the Dragons with nine points and 12 rebounds.

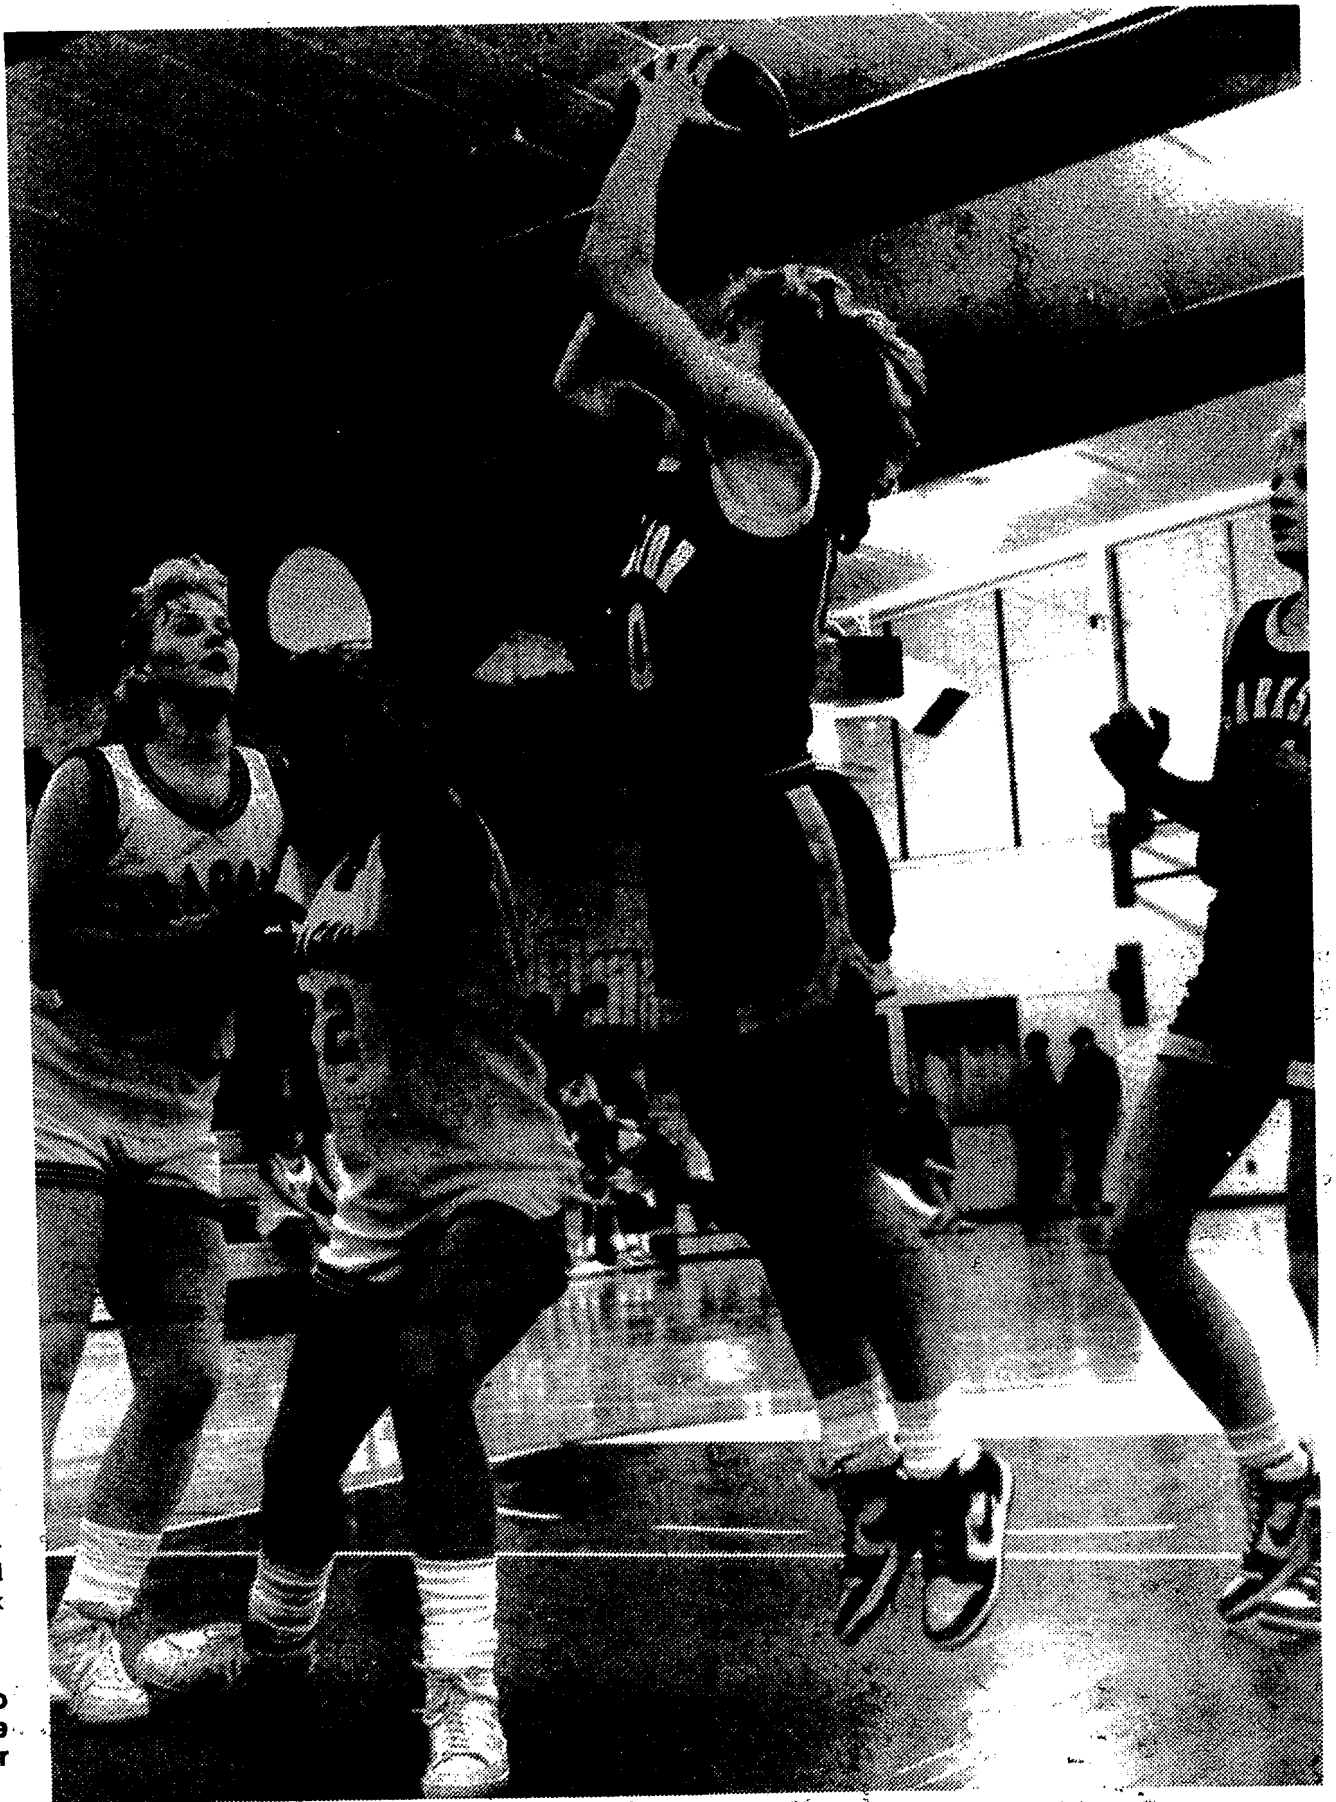

Clarkston was 13-7 last season and lost seniors Michelle Taulbee, Sue Lovelady, Melanie Upcott, Kecia Powell and Sue Stefanski to graduation.

"A share of the league, 17-3, I'll take it," said McDonald. "It's nice. It feels real good."

The junior varsity Wolves finished the season with a 45-15 victory over Lake Orion and a 16-4 record. They were 15-5 a year ago.

Cindy Beal led the way with 11 points and 10 rebounds, followed by Jenny Grohs with 10 points and seven steals, Evonne Atkin and Stacy Shurtz with six points each and Stacey Grutza with five.

Lisa Ladd scored 13 points to help Clarkston to a 47-38 victory over Lake Orion last week. The win gave the Wolves a share of the Greater Oakland Activities League championship.

But Jokisch doesn't feel any added pressure to perform. He has great confidence in his teammates, many of whom he's played with since ninth grade when the junior high team went 18-0.

"We know what it takes to get there (to regionals) now, to pull it off," Jokisch said. "I think we have the talent to do it."

Whenever the season ends for the Wolves, Jokisch will then have to make up his mind.

"I love to play football and I love to play basketball," he said. "I'll sit down when everything's over and see what I'm going to do."

Wrestling Wolves will look to experience

By Chris Gerbaai

If experience counts for anything, the Clarkston wrestling team should be stronger than a season ago.

Coaches Scott Strickler and Greg Gwisdalla have 12 seniors to work with, compared to just two seniors on last year's squad, which was 7-8 in dual meets.

"That's going to help early in the year," said Strickler. "The toughest part of our schedule is before Christmas."

Actually, the coaches have a lot of wrestlers to work with in general, considering about 40 athletes turned out for the first week of practice.

There's 13 weight classes and we'll definitely fill out every weight," Strickler said. "We'll have some depth."

Two of the more experienced Clarkston wrestlers are Rob Lund and Matt Stark, both three-year varsity competitors. Lund wrestles at 132 pounds, while Stark goes at 185.

Mark Oswald, a junior, has a lot of potential in the heavyweight division and Strickler also likes the group of sophomores who have arrived on the scene.

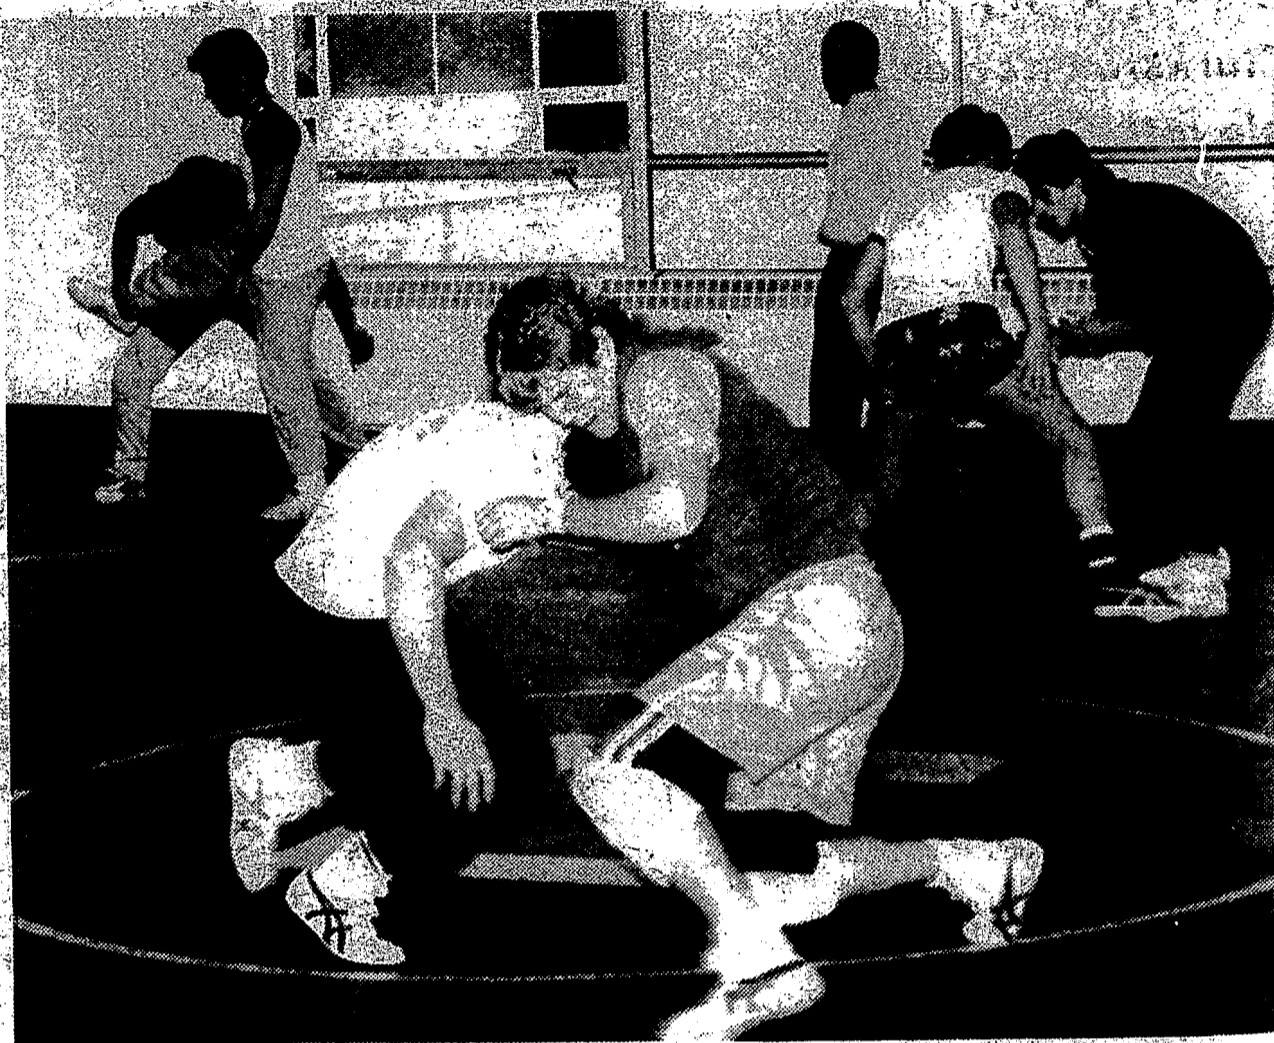

"There's good programs at both the Clarkston and Sashabaw schools," said Strickler, who is in his second year at Clarkston and first as head coach.

"Compared to last year at this time, we're weeks ahead," he said. "They know what to expect and they're working out hard. Normally, I'm not too overly optimistic, but I'm looking forward to see how they gel as a team."

The Wolves had a fairly rough schedule in 1985, grappling with four top-10 teams, and Strickler believes the Greater Oakland Activities League will be a tough conference this year. He sees Waterford Kettering as the favorite to win the league.

But he's trying to rebuild Clarkston's reputation for wrestling and the Wolves will get their first shot at home against Milford Dec. 2.

"They're not really expecting a lot out of us, but we'll see if we can get into the swing of things," said Strickler.

Head coach Scott Strickler remains in the background as he watches over his wrestlers, but the Wolves could move to the forefront of their league if their experienced grapplers have big years.

Sports still a big part of Powell's life

By Chris Gerbas

In 1961, Bill Powell was part of the present Clarkston High School's first graduating class. There were 173 members.

Twenty-five years later, Powell saw his oldest child, Kecia, graduate in a class of 469.

In between, Powell and his wife Jane had four other children and have lived in the Clarkston-Waterford area for 22 years.

It's no accident that Kecia played three sports in high school or that her brother Keenan also participates in three sports in high school.

Their father competed in basketball, baseball and track at CHS, with the baseball and track seasons going on at the same time.

"They allowed us to do both," said Powell. "As it turns out, because you had to be at the track meets and the baseball games, you didn't have enough time to practice."

Still, Powell set school track records that stood up for a number of years. He held marks in the 100- and 220-yard dashes as well as in the long jump. His long jump distance endured until 1975.

But basketball may have been his best sport. The teams Powell was a part of won three district championships under coach Dom Mauti. A 102-62 trouncing of Clarenceville in 1961 still represents the most points a Clarkston team has scored in a game.

Powell received a few scholarship offers, the most notable from Central Michigan, but he decided to go into the Army for three years instead.

"Sometimes I think I would've liked to play at the college level," he said. "But there was service ball in the Army. There were lots of college players in the service at the time."

Powell then got a job with General Motors and has been working there 22 years. He and former teammates including Gar Wilson and Ron Applegate have remained in the area, as have many Clarkston athletes over the years.

Wolves Update

"The village itself (Clarkston) has not changed," Powell said. "The outlying areas have grown considerably. This particular area is an automotive area and employment has been fairly steady. People haven't gone elsewhere to look for work."

Eventually, Powell and his wife, a Waterford Kettering grad, began a string of K-kids. Actually, the Powell family has more K's in it than a Dwight Gooden stat sheet.

Jane liked the name Kecia, Bill liked the name Keenan and after that, they couldn't stop. They were followed by Kyle, Kammy and Clinton.

The Powells have rarely missed a game Kecia or Keenan have played and Powell admits that the high school athletes of today may be better than in his era.

"The biggest difference is that it's almost specialized (today)," he said. "You need more time to put into a sport if you want to excel at it."

"Overall, the training is better, there's more advanced techniques. The training has made them better athletes."

But Powell may have passed on some of his athletic ability to his children.

"I like to think that," he said. "I don't know if it's necessarily true. We tried to encourage them. We made (sports) available to them."

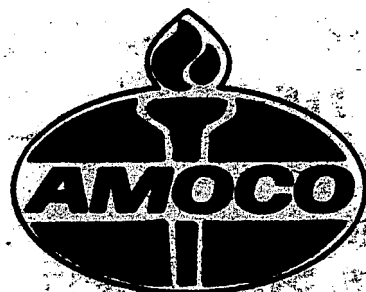

Former Clarkston athletic standout Bill Powell is flanked by son Keenan and daughter Kecia.

Powell played three sports for the Wolves, as did Kecia and as Keenan is doing presently.

Pearson sees all sides as coach, deputy

By Chris Gerbaal

Steve Pearson might be viewed as a good guy-bad guy by some people.

The people he likes to help most, teenagers, are sometimes on the receiving end of punishment Pearson must enforce.

Pearson wears two hats: one with "Wolves" emblazoned across it, which he wears as one of Clarkston's junior varsity football coaches; and one which signifies his full-time job as an Oakland County sheriff's deputy.

The Clarkston High grad has coached JV football for two seasons and previously coached at Sashabaw Junior High for three years.

Knowing so many of the athletes makes it hard on Pearson when he has to break up the occasional party that gets out of hand.

"It's difficult when you work in the area where you coach and live," he said. "I know the potential of the kids. I guess I shouldn't feel this way, but I get so angry at them. It's so frustrating when they're so open (with alcohol or drugs) and they don't understand or don't care."

While Pearson the police officer has encountered some Clarkston athletes on the job, when he switches hats, it's all football. He wants the jobs to be separate.

"I don't want to use my position or authority to command respect," he said. "I want respect on the football field. I believe in discipline; it's a must in any program. I don't expect any kid to take me to lunch, but, hopefully, I get the kids to respect me."

While at Clarkston, Pearson played football and basketball, but he speaks most fondly of playing first base for the 1976 state championship baseball team.

"We were quite a defensive team," he said. "I don't see too many of the guys. We've all gone our own way."

Pearson played football and baseball briefly at Ferris State before graduating and went into police work when he liked what he saw as a student rider with the county deputies. He got into coaching with the help of his good friend Kurt Richardson, who coaches at Sashabaw and is a reserve deputy.

Steve Pearson can be seen around town behind the wheel of an Oakland County deputy's car

Pearson likes working with people, so he likes both jobs, but the coaching position can be a release. He's been on the road as a deputy for 10 months and he sometimes sees tragedy. The players can ease his emotions.

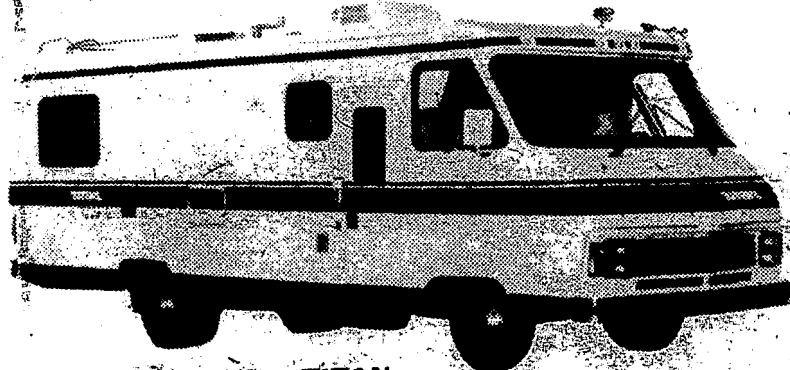

"It's the greatest thing every day to go to practice," he said. "It's a new world. I separate myself from my job and I'm just with the kids."

"They refresh a lot of things. Maybe you had an unpleasant situation the night before or you're down and, during the fall, on the sidelines as a Clarkston junior varsity football coach.

for some reason. The kids bring the best out of you." Working with the kids is obviously one of Pearson's primary purposes, so while they sometimes disturb him—"Why throw away your football career for a beer?—ultimately, his work has its own rewards.

"It's the sense of closeness between the players, the coaches, the team," he said. "To walk into that lockerroom and they're tired, they're hurt, they're in pain, but you see that smile on their face because they came out on top."

Wheels in motion

The Oakland Wheels of Fire athletic team is getting ready to defend its wheelchair basketball title.

The Wheels' 15 or so players, including Bruce Swain of Clarkston, have begun practices at Troy High School in preparation for the "C" league season. The Oakland County Parks and Recreation department also sponsors "A" and "B" leagues, with players grouped by severity of injuries.

The Wheels won the state title in an eight-team tournament at Oakland Community College last season. They work out with the "B" team, the Spinners, who finished second in the tournament in their division.

"It gives us something to do," said Swain. "We don't have to sit around all day, we can work our arms and it's a lot of fun. I enjoy the heck out of it. I like the team spirit and friendship."

The Wheels season is expected to get under way in early December and they'll face teams from areas such as Detroit and Sterling Heights. Many of their games will be at Troy.

"It's relatively expensive to pay fees, for officials and gyms, but we get this gym for free," said coach Pat Langlois of Rochester.

She's coached the team for seven years and her son Rick is a member of the team. "We appreciate the county's support," she said.

Jr. high cagers fall in Romeo

The trip to Romeo was not worth it for the Clarkston and Sashabaw junior high girls basketball teams last week.

Both schools lost the first two games of the week-long tournament and were scheduled to face each other in an afternoon game Nov. 22.

But rather than drive an hour to play each other for a third time this season, coaches Dennis Bronson and Jayne Bannister decided to skip it.

"We thought it was in the best interests of the girls not to play," said Wolverines coach Bronson, who added that some of the girls needed to start volleyball practice.

Clarkston finished its season at 5-12, while the Cougars were 4-12.

The Wolverines lost 42-36 to Romeo Powell Nov. 19 and 42-29 to Grosse Pointe North Nov. 17, when they shot only 9 percent from the floor. That was their first game in about two weeks.

"The two-week layoff killed us," said Bronson. "But I was pleased overall with the improvement the girls had (over the season)."

Feast time: Thanksgiving is cause for this annual family celebration

By Julie Campe

Thanksgiving traditionally is the time to gather with friends and family, to eat a lot and to talk and laugh. Even in today's fast-paced lifestyle, families manage to get together.

But for the Sans and Muscat families, it's filled with even more traditions.

Every year, the two families take turns hosting the feast. This year, it's the Sanses' turn.

And the Sanses, on Rattalee Lake Road, Independence Township, really know how to celebrate Thanksgiving.

They don't exactly kill the old red rooster, but they do kill old "Tom" turkey.

Living in the country as they do, their 10 acres

"It's wonderful that you do the same thing year after year and it doesn't get old."

—Betty Sans

provide a home for sheep, roosters, a turkey and a horse.

Usually, they have a whole flock of chickens and turkeys, but this year, a minor tragedy struck while the family was away from home. Neighboring dogs came and killed the fowl, leaving only one turkey and two roosters.

But the remaining turkey should be enough. It weighs about 25 pounds.

In order to fit it into the oven, Betty Sans will remove all the racks and put furnace bricks on the bottom of the oven. She'll use a heavy-duty metal pan to hold the bird, and she'll put it on the bricks. It just barely fits, she says.

In order to fit the 20-plus people in the same room, they'll take all the furniture out of the family room and put it in the garage. Then, they'll set up tables in the family room.

"We can all be together that way," says Betty. "It's more festive."

The effort is well worth it, Betty and her sister Mary Muscat of Robertson Court, Clarkston, agree.

Maggie holds the turkey dinner two weeks before Thanksgiving. The Sanses raised the big

"I think I look forward to it more than the kids do," says Mary.

Betty and Mary have five kids each. All of them, plus in-laws and friends will be at the dinner Thursday.

Betty's children are: Jeff and his wife Cinde, Elizabeth, Artha, Peter and Maggie.

Mary's children are: Dan and his wife Carol, Jim,

"Tom" on their 10-acre farm on Rattalee Lake Road, and they'll share the meal with relatives.

Jon and his wife Connie, Terri and Cathy.

Usually, the kids watch the Thanksgiving Day Parade on TV. This year, they'll be going to Detroit to watch it live.

They'll be back in time to eat.

The menu this year at the Sanses' is: turkey; dressing; cranberry sauce; mashed potatoes; candied sweet potatoes; green beans almondine; corn; zucchini casserole; bean salad; broccoli, cauliflower and carrots with ranch dressing; and cranapple, pumpkin and chess pies.

"I think we're inclined to prefer plain food," says Betty. "It's bountiful."

"But it's good," says Mary.

What's their favorite part of the Thanksgiving feast?

"I think I look forward to (gathering for Thanksgiving) more than the kids do."

—Mary Muscat

Maggie and her mother Betty Sans (left) and Mary Muscat pose for a picture in the Sanses' kitchen. Betty and Mary are sisters, and the two families spend Thanksgiving together.

"The company," they both answer in unison. "That's something I think is really special," says Mary.

"It's wonderful that you do the same thing year after year and it doesn't get old," says Betty.

At midnight Thursday, Betty and her daughter Maggie will leave for Cincinnati so Maggie can compete in Irish step dancing the next day. That's OK, though, says Betty.

"It's a very busy time for us," she says.

Besides, they've got Christmas to look forward to—and that's a real party, she says.

Restaurant chefs talk turkey with timely carving tips

On Thanksgiving Day, many will labor in the kitchen preparing the traditional turkey dinner. Hours are spent planning and cooking the feast, but usually little forethought is used on carving the big bird.

Tour offers peek at Christmases past

The annual Victorian Christmas Open house at the Pine Grove Museum and Wisner Historic House is planned Sunday, Dec. 7, from noon to 4 p.m.

Visitors will take a peek at Christmases past in the former home of Gov. Moses Wisner, recently restored through a gift from First of America Bank.

For the open house, the residence will be decorated for the holidays as it would have been in the 1800s.

Special events include schoolhouse pageants by Burt School, Waterford; musical selections from Victorian times; refreshments; and the Potpourri Gift Shoppe with handmade items.

Admission is $3 for adults and $1 for children under age 12. Proceeds will benefit the Oakland County Pioneer and Historical Society.

The home is located at 405 Oakland Ave., Pontiac.

Also available are Victorian Christmas Special Group Tours from Dec. 4 through Dec. 12 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Call 338-6732 for more information.

What comes out of the oven a culinary masterpiece is often spoiled with the carver's knife.

The Michigan Restaurant Association asked Tom MacKinnon, owner of MacKinnon's Restaurant in Northville, and Master Chef Milos Cihelka of Southfield's Golden Mushroom for their turkey carving tips.

From these suggestions, the MRA developed the following guidelines sure to make carved turkey as appealing to the eye as it is to the palate.

1. Chef Milos says carving the breast meat is much simpler if you remove the wishbone before cooking the turkey. The wishbone is located directly in front of the breast and is easily eliminated with a knife.

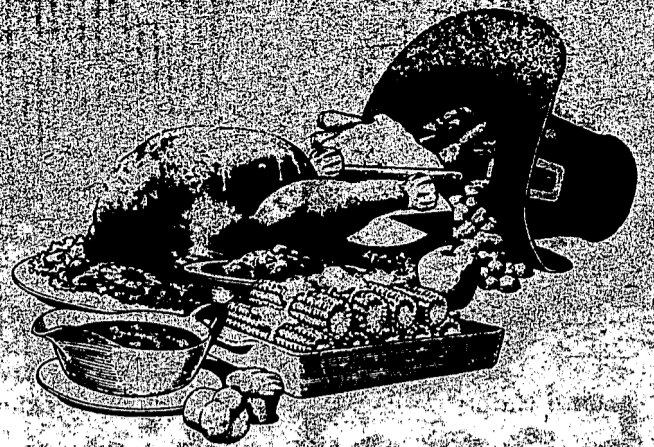

2. Wait 20 minutes after taking the turkey out of the oven before carving. A slightly cooler turkey is less awkward to handle and slices easier.

3. When you are ready to carve, MacKinnon says to place the turkey on the counter in front of you, breast side up with the legs to your right; neck cavity to your left. Gently pull the leg away from the body and cut through the joint, removing the leg (thigh and drumstick).

4. Place the leg on the service platter and cut through the joint between the thigh and drumstick to separate.

5. Slice the drumstick meat by holding the drumstick upright and cutting down toward the plate. Turn the drumstick and slice from all sides.

6. Next, hold the thigh firmly on the service plate with a fork and cut slices of meat parallel to the bone. Drumsticks and thighs from turkeys under 10 pounds are usually served without slicing.

7. Now slice the white meat of the breast. Begin by making a deep horizontal cut into the breast just above the wing. Then, beginning at the front and starting halfway up the breast, carve thin slices down to the cut. Chef Milos suggests angling slices so they follow the line of the bird. This enables carving against the grain, avoiding stringy or coarse-looking meat.

8. As you continue to cut, gradually angle slices inward, toward the tail, ending when all meat is removed from the breastbone.

9. Turn the turkey and follow steps three through eight on the opposite side, until enough meat is cut to serve all guests.

10. Arrange turkey slices on a platter. Add your favorite garnish and you have a feast for the eyes as well as the palate.

Kids provide lesson in creative approach to Christmas gift-giving

By Pat Young

It's almost that time of year again: Christmas. It brings to mind good aromas from the kitchen, special church programs and pageants, decorations on the tree—and shopping.

Almost everyone is faced with the question of what to get all the family members on their Christmas lists.

This year, the third-graders in Cheryl Dodd's class at Bailey Lake Elementary School have a few ideas of their own about Christmas gifts they'd like to share.

Bryce Nelson suggested a stuffed frog as the perfect gift. In fact, he's planning to get one for his frog-loving brother.

And while we're on the subject of stuffed, Doug Macalpine plans to buy his father a stuffed deer. He said it was for bow and arrow target practice, but he didn't indicate whether or not his dad brings home the real thing.

Lisa Herron wants to buy her sister an 8-foot teddy bear.

Cindy McFalda wants to get her sister a teddy bear too, even though she already has "tons of 'em."

Jennifer Aitchison is looking for a tape box for her sister, "because she uses an old cigar box."

Kristen Wicklund's brother yearns to fly, so she wants to buy him a "flying bike." (This one may be a little tough to find.)

Some of the third-graders aren't planning to be quite so sweet to their siblings.

Beth Bills wants to give her sister a Barbie doll—and a black eye.

Josh Gillette wants to offer his sister a non-stop rocket ride.

And Matt Haran wants to create an elaborate remote control device attached to an electronic snake in his sister's bed "to freak her out." Some Christmas spirit.

Coping with those holiday leftovers

Everyone loves holiday meals, but holiday leftovers can be a different story.

Ideas for turning leftovers into taste treats—and tips for food safety—are offered by Debra Stone, home economist with the Oakland County Cooperative Extension.

"Always consider proper storage for leftovers," she said. "Turkeys, hams and roasts should be frozen if not used up within two days. Leftover vegetables can keep for two to three days."

She suggests the following ideas for re-serving leftovers:

- Stir a few tablespoons of sour cream into heated gravy or add curry powder to give new zest.

- Marinate leftover vegetables in Italian dressing and serve cold.

- Perk up leftover squash by reheating with a little maple syrup.

- Make a completely new salad by whirling any remaining gelatin salad in a blender with a little whipping cream or cream cheese. Refrigerate until set.

- Leftover or stale bread can be used in bread pudding.

- Use turkey bones and some meat to make a delicious soup.

For more information, call the extension service at 858-0904.

Turkey... and gossip

Stephanie Bechtel

Thanksgiving is a time to come together and be thankful for all we have.

It is also a time to come together and gain five or 10 pounds.

It's a time when families and friends get together and talk about what good things have happened. They catch up on the latest events. They gossip.

My opinion on gossiping as a holiday pastime is one of confusion. Thanksgiving is a time to be thankful for what we've got, not what we saw through our neighbors' windows!

Thanksgiving is a terrific holiday. When else can who married whom and where and why?

When else can you learn a person's entire life story without ever having laid eyes on them?

Thanksgiving is great, so enjoy.

Enjoy the hot turkey, smooth mashed potatoes, steaming vegetables, endless desserts and last, but definitely not least, eat up the gossip!

Stephanie Bechtel, a ninth-grader at Sashabaw Junior High School, is working with The Clarkston News this school year through the SJHS Mentorship Program.

Kids have fun with pretend gifting

But when it came to parents, most of the students had thoughtful ideas.

Troy Klein wants to get his dad clothes "because he works in a clothing store and doesn't have many shirts." He was also thinking of buying dad an '86 Corvette "to replace his junky Pinto."

Jason Dunk wants to buy his dad a BB gun "to hunt deer with."

Brandon Williams thought he might get his dad a new clock radio, "because his broke. It only gets AM."

Mandy Dye was thinking along the lines of a shiny minivan for her mom, "so she could drive dad around in it."

The mother of Regina White may get a "grapevine wreath with nice decorations."

The family of Amy McClanahan may get something a little more unusual. She wants to get them a "Newfoundland dog to ride around on."

Josh Gillette thought he might get his dad a Jeep, "because he likes climbing mountains."

Beth Bills, on the other hand, thought she'd treat every member of the family to three Super Lottery tickets and a Christmas tape.

There may be a bowl of goldfish under the Christmas tree at Marcus Teague's house, because that's what he's thinking of buying his mother.

And Regina White thought she might solve her grandfather's problem of "always wanting candy" by getting him a picture of a bowl of candy.

Jennifer Aitchison even plans to buy her puppy a gift. Well, actually it is more of a replacement. She wants to get a stuffed animal to replace the one the puppy ate.

The gift ideas these third-graders came up with ranged from modest to grandiose, and all were no doubt beyond the monetary means of 8- and 9-year-olds.

But no matter. Kids have got so much else to give—imagination, spontaneity, love, themselves. There isn't a mom or dad around that would trade a stuffed frog or an 8-foot teddy bear for all of that.

New lights for downtown

Rotary brings Christmas cheer

By Kathy Greenfield

The tradition is back. Christmas lights will shine from the light poles in downtown Clarkston this year, unlike last year when the poles were without decorations for the first time in some 30 years.

The Clarkston Rotary Club will, as usual, be responsible for the pole decorations, brand new ones purchased in Frankenmuth this summer by the club at a cost of nearly $6,000.

And on Nov. 24, when the 8-foot trees with lights are hung with care on 11 poles, the decorations will be plugged into sockets on each pole.

Individual Rotary Club members paid the plug installation fee of $250 for each pole. The plugs were installed last month by Detroit Edison.

After years of refusals by Edison to install individual pole plugs, Rotary took a stand last year, refusing to hang decorations until Edison changed its policy.

Following newspaper articles, letters and phone calls from community members and meetings between Edison officials and Rotary members, Edison agreed to install the plugs.

"The Rotary Club appreciates the support of the people of the township on putting pressure on the people where it needed to be put in getting the poles electrified," said Lew Wint, club member.

Wint, Ken Winship, John Steckling and Jim Vollbach made up the committee that selected the decorations in Frankenmuth.

"We're excited because they're brand new and they're different than anything we've ever done before," said Wint.

New this year is a garland with a wreath and lighted lantern that will extend across Main Street along the cable at the south side of town between Morgan's and Max Brook.

Wint's memories of decorating the town with fellow Rotary Club members go back 27 years, when he joined the group.

"When I first came to town, they used natural garlands and lights," he said.

Club members have always been proud of their role in preparing the town for the holidays.

"It's a service club doing something normally that a municipality would," said Wint. "We've looked at it that we were unique."

While the styles have changed over the years, traditions have been built around the annual good deed.

When the men meet in the basement of the Pontiac State Bank, there's always chili from Rudy's Market and cheer ("for medicinal purposes only") from Hallman's Apothecary.

For years, Ken Winship's been the Rotarian in the bucket, riding the boom in the vehicle loaned by Clarkston Community Schools.

The other "tradition" has to do with the weather. "Invariably, it's the coldest night of the year when they go up and the coldest night when they go down," said Wint. "You can count on it."

holiday decorations that will hang on 11 light poles in downtown Clarkston.

Tradition with a twist

Betty Wagner

Does your family expect holiday dinner menus to be the same every year, or can you serve variations on the same theme?

Traditional foods of dressing, cranberries and pumpkin can be prepared with a different twist.

Combine microwave cookery with traditional oven browning for turkey in half the time.

Pumpkin Cheesecake and Cranberry-Nut Bread are best if made the day before the festive dinner, or prepare them a few weeks ahead and freeze.

If you prefer a crisp, brown turkey, but in half the normal time, start the bird in the microwave oven and finish it in the conventional oven. This allows you ample time to prepare vegetable dishes in the microwave oven.

Honey-peach glaze adds a sweet taste to the turkey and aids in browning. Use the glaze for a whole turkey, a turkey breast or turkey parts.

Honey-peach stuffing is moist and sweet, but oh-so-delicious for the peach lover.

HONEY PEACH-GLAZED TURKEY with HONEY PEACH-PECAN STUFFING

3 slices honey whole wheat bread

1 cup sliced celery

1/2 cup chopped pecans

1 8-ounce can sliced peaches

1/4 cup melted butter

2 tablespoons honey

Stuffing:

Cut bread slices into cubes. Spread on a microwave-safe cookie sheet or on waxed paper placed on bottom oven tray.

Microwave at high 4 to 5 minutes, stirring cubes every 2 minutes. Stir from outside to inside each time. Let cool, then set aside until ready to use.

Drain peaches; reserve juice. Cut peaches into quarters. Melt butter in 8 cup measure or 2 quart Pyrex bowl at high power for 60 seconds. Add celery and saute 2 minutes or until soft.

Mix honey with reserved peach juice. Add bread cubes, pecans, peaches and peach juice to butter.

Toss to coat. Loosely stuff prepared turkey.

To prepare turkey:

Wash turkey. Season inside with salt and pepper, if desired. Stuff with Honey-Peach-Pecan dressing. Tie legs together and secure wings. Close neck skin with firm wooden toothpick.

Place breast side down. Cover with waxed paper, place on microwave-safe bacon rack or in Pyrex baking dish and microwave at high 4 minutes per pound. Turn half way around with breast still down after half the cooking time.

Remove waxed paper, brush with glaze and place in 350 degree oven, uncovered, 45 to 60 minutes, or until done. Internal temperature should be 180 degrees.

Brush with glaze occasionally during oven roasting. Allow turkey to stand, covered with foil, 20 to 25 minutes before carving.

Glaze:

2 tablespoons honey

3 tablespoons peach schnapps

1/4 tablespoon dark brown sugar

Mix glaze ingredients together in jar and shake to combine.

RUM-PUMPKIN CHEESE CAKE

1 1/4 cups graham cracker crumbs

5 tablespoons butter

1 20-ounce can pineapple rings

1 cup dark brown sugar

3 eggs, beaten

1 1/2 teaspoons pumpkin pie spice

What are you thankful for?

By Julie Campe

People are thankful for many reasons, and Thanksgiving seems to be a good time to think about them.

We asked several people who work in the area to share their thoughts. Some gave funny answers, and some gave thoughtful answers, but everyone had something to be thankful for.

Some even had reasons not to be thankful.

"I am not thankful for snow," said Collin Walls, Springfield Township supervisor. "I am thankful for friends, family and the community."

Village Council President Sharron Catallo gave a glimpse of the upcoming Thanksgiving feast with her response.

"Cranberries," she said, then added "health, health, happiness and a happy Thanksgiving" to the list.

Dr. Robert Bruek, Clarkston High School principal, is most thankful for his family and the opportunity to work at Clarkston High School.

Several other people mentioned family.

Clarkston Schools Superintendent Milford Mason is thankful for the support his family gives him. He also mentioned his excellent colleagues and a great community in which to live and work.

CHS Athletic Director Paul Tungate appreciates his supportive family, as well, among other things.

"I'm thankful for the athletes we have had," he said. "We have a good bunch (now), athletically and their characters."

Independence Township Supervisor Frank Ronk also put his family at the top of his list, followed by good health.

"I'm thankful for the way things are going in the township and in our operation," he added. "And I'm

... They do a good job."

Two people mentioned freedom in their answers.
"I'm very thankful for free enterprise, freedom of speech and freedom of assembly," said
Ivan Rouse, director of the Clarkson Conservatory of Music.

As an example of what it would be like without freedom, he said, "Can you imagine the village bakery bugged?"

Ginny Farmer's response was along the same line.

"I think the real celebration of Thanksgiving is that we are celebrating our freedom," said the Clarkston Adult Education coordinator. "It causes us to remember that freedom that we take so much for granted."

"I'm thankful that I work in education," she said. "I'm thankful that I do, especially with the population I work with. ... It gives people a second chance at education."

Joan Kopietz, owner of Tierra Arts in Clarkston, thought long and hard about her answer.

"I'm thankful for all the people who appreciate me," she said, on the same day she received a community award.

"I'm thankful that our business has done as well as it has. This has been an exceptional year. We're thankful we have good help."

"I'm thankful that Mandy has tamed down to be a wonderful store cat. She takes every day like a cat
now. She just sleeps all day, and people pet her."

She paused, then seemed to catch the spirit of Thanksgiving with her next statement.

"I'm thankful that I have a good life—that life has been good to me," she said. "I have a good husband, good friends and a good town to live in."

Chemical dependency: the disease

By Pat Young

Marianne and Ed are young, attractive, intelligent, and lucky. They are both recovering from a chemical dependency that could have ruined their lives, or worse, it could have killed them.

They opened the first of four workshops on drug education sponsored by the Clarkston Area Chemical People and Clarkston Community Schools by telling their stories.

"I had big goals in high school, but I lost them because I was an alcoholic and addicted to drugs," Ed said. "My problem was overlooked because I was a good kid."

He went on to say that he looked happy on the outside, but was hurting on the inside. Alcohol and other drugs helped him cope with the world, and he had the misconceived idea that an 18-year-old couldn't be an alcoholic, that only old men were alcoholics.

"I learned a lot through other people's pain," he said, "and I learned how to appreciate sobriety."

Marianne grew up in an alcoholic family where her father threw things in anger and her mother always had bruises. She, too, grew up to become an alcoholic.

"We were encouraged to just go to school and act like nothing was wrong," she said. "The first rule was always: Don't talk."

"Tough drug laws are all well and good," she said, "but we need to work on the dynamics of the problem, too. You can take the drugs away from a person, but inside, there will still be a little girl or boy who hurts."

"If I teach you and you teach me, together maybe we can help," she said. "We need to listen and keep an open mind. It can happen anywhere."

"I had big goals in high school, but I lost them because I was an alcoholic and addicted to drugs. My problem was overlooked because I was a good kid."

—Ed

This last point was emphasized by Sis Wenger, coordinator of the workshop.

"Chemical addiction affects all ages, all walks of life, all kinds of people at all levels of income," she said.

Wenger gave some startling statistics: At least one in every 10 high school graduates is already chemically addicted.

Knowledge, intervention and prevention really work," she said. "It is one of the most treatable diseases. The recovery rate has risen into the 80 percentile, and that's a great improvement."

The first workshop dealt mostly with the most common drug—alcohol.

Alcoholism was declared a disease by the World Health Organization in 1951 and by the American Medical Association in 1956. It is one of the most frequent conditions seen by health professionals today.

There are other grim statistics:

Alcoholism cost the United States $125 billion in 1983, and the costs keep rising.

Alcohol abuse shortens the lifespan by 10-12 years, and half of the fatal traffic accidents involve alcohol.

An estimated 3.3 million drinking teenagers are showing signs that they may develop serious alcohol-related problems.

It is a disease of the spirit and a disease of the family. By any name, it directly affects over 12 million Americans, and many more indirectly. And it happens to the average man and woman. Less than 5 percent of alcoholics are found on Skid-Row.

Alcoholism progressively affects the physical, psychological and social aspects of a person's life, and the alcoholic does not realize that alcohol is the cause of his or her problems. Denial is more common in people with the disease of addiction—any chemical addiction—than seeing the problem for themselves.

A four-phase model of alcohol addiction is useful in recognition and treatment of the disease:

Pre-alcoholic phase: Drinking is socially motivated, but soon becomes the standard means of handling stress. An increase in tolerance gradually develops.

Problem phase: Warning signals include experiencing blackouts or memory lapses, sneaking drinks, gulping drinks, guilt about drinking. Alcohol is no longer just a beverage; it is a need.

Crucial phase: The key symptom is loss of control once taking a drink. Rationalizations for drinking behavior begin and attempts are made to control drinking by periods of abstinence, changing drinking patterns or changing jobs or geographical locations.

Chronic phase: Intoxication almost daily, frequent benders, marked physical changes occur, tolerance for alcohol drops, tremors and indefinable fears develop, excuses no longer work. The disease is apparent to the drinker and to others.

But alcoholism is a treatable disease, and an alcoholic need not go through all phases to be helped.

"Every time you do something to help an alcoholic, the pressure's on, and you help that person

Alcohol "is an anesthesia, just like ether, and it affects you the same way."

—The Rev. Joseph Martin

"raise the bottom" of when he will seek help," Wenger said.

Although there is no known cure for alcoholism, recovery is possible.

Some people are at higher risk. Children of alcoholics have a 50 percent chance of becoming an alcoholic. But it is a myth that people have "addictive personalities." All kinds of personalities become alcoholic; they just become more alike in addiction.

There is also the potential for cross tolerance. An alcoholic may easily become addicted to other drugs. Alcohol has some other unpleasant effects. It raises the natural histamine count in the body, aggravating respiratory problems. Alcoholism also leads to high blood pressure, stroke, damage to the brain, liver, pancreas and kidneys, and birth defects, to name just a few alcohol-related diseases.

Father Joseph Martin, a well-known lecturer on

"Chemical addiction affects all ages, all walks of life, all kinds of people at all levels of income."

—Sis Wenger

chemical dependency, puts alcoholism into plain language:

"Alcoholism is one of the oldest diseases, and one of the most destructive," he said (via a film lecture). "So why do people drink?"

"Well, we drink water for thirst, milk for health, soda for taste, but then you get into a new category with coffee," he said. "It is learned. And with drugs, it is curiosity."

He described alcohol as the "social lubricant." And the biggest reason for drinking alcohol is euphoria.

"It is an anesthesia, just like ether, and it affects you the same way," he said. The body goes through exactly the same stages. Though many people think alcohol is a stimulant, it is really a depressant.

"An alcoholic is one whose drinking causes problems," Martin continued. "How much is excessive? That which causes trouble—blackouts, gulping, sneaking, loss of control, the eye opener, drinking alone, anti-social behavior.

Alcohol abuse shortens the lifespan by 10-12 years, and half of the fatal traffic accidents involve alcohol.

"The effect on families is tremendous," he said. "The only answer to alcoholism is complete abstinence."

Years later, a recovering alcoholic can still become an alcoholic. The disease doesn't go away, but treatment like AA (Alcoholics Anonymous) can help.

"You can help an alcoholic, even if he doesn't want it," he said. "You can offer him alternatives."

"And if any of you think you have a drinking problem," he concluded, "I hope to God I just spoiled your drinking."

The series begins

This story is the first in a series of four drawn from the four-day program, "Chemical Dependency: The Community, the Family and the Schools," sponsored in November by the Clarkston Area Chemical People and Clarkston Community Schools.

Sis Wenger and Associates, of Birmingham, coordinated the workshops. A drug education consultant and trainer, she is also founder and present manager of the Henry Ford Hospital Maplegrove Community Education Program.

The second story, which will appear in next Wednesday's paper, will deal with teenage issues in the drug problem.

Paleobotanist Oglesbee ogles fossils

By Kathy Greenfield

Cameron Oglesbee should change his name. Or at least adopt a nickname. The Pied Piper of Fossils would do.

The amateur paleobotanist began his lecture Nov. 20 on "Life From an Ancient World," by telling the about 80 people gathered at Sashabaw Junior High School that science is something to enjoy.

"Before the evening's over, we're all going to have a good time," he said.

Oglesbee proceeded with a slide show. He provided the animation.

He wiggled to illustrate how a now-extinct trilobite must have moved—32.5 million years ago—to encourage new growth after shedding its shell.

Of his trilobite fossil, he said, "I'm so proud of him. I dug him out of a quarry near Sylvania, Ohio."

He pantomimed crossing a stream, climbing a hill, digging and carrying heavy rocks while on a search for fossils.

He laughed, and chatted, and complimented the 5-year-old he selected to press the button to change the slides.

And when a few children moved to the front of the room for a better view, he encouraged more to follow.

Meanwhile, Oglesbee shared scientific facts about the world and about some of the 1,500 specimens of fossils, volcanic glass and Mayan pottery spread on tables around the room. He boasts one of the largest private collections of fossils in the state.

His lecture was sponsored by the North Oakland Council of Academically Talented and paid for by donations from all Clarkston elementary parent-teacher groups and Dr. Susan Coleman. Fossils of ferns, that grew some 400 million years ago to heights of 50 to 100 feet high, were his oldest specimens.

"These are extinct, gone from the earth," he said, noting that they grew in a time when there were no birds, no animals and no flowers on Earth.

He talked about glaciers flowing 10,000 years ago and carrying fossils from one place to another, and he explained how the Great Lakes area was once part of a massive ocean.

When the slide show was over, Oglesbee popped a question: "Did you people enjoy that?" Hearty applause was his answer.

He then invited the crowd to get up and touch many of the artifacts on display—but first he dashed from table to table, pointing out specific items he wanted everyone to notice.

Many of the children got up with him—and followed his lively steps, peering up at each specimen as he held it high for the audience to see.

The Pied Piper of Fossils had attained his goal.

Adults get into the act after the lecture when Cameron Oglesbee (left) oversees the breaking open of fossil rocks he provided. Greg Trase of Sashabaw Road, Independence Township, found some fossilized bark inside this stone, which he got to keep.

As old as the hills

An interest in fossils brought Clyde Phipps of Mary Sue Street, Independence Township, to the lecture.

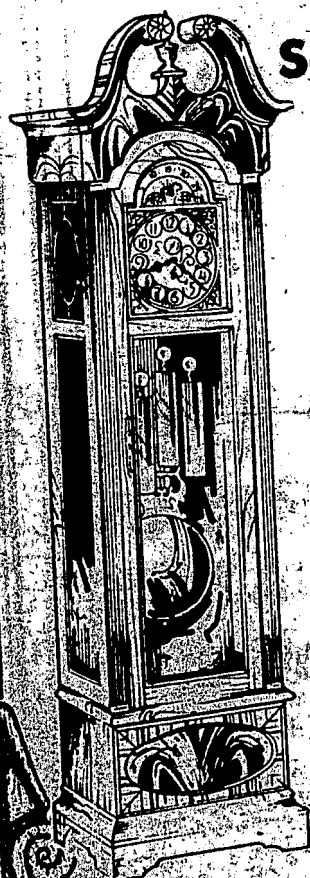

Matt Hirsch's face lights up with the discovery of yet another fascinating fossil. The 4-year-old shares the delight with his mom, Linda.

Steven Zerba and Raymond Kenny, both second-graders at Bailey Lake Elementary, move from table to table, quietly discussing the treasures they see.

Pediatrician from Bangladesh is part of Clarkston practice

By Julie Campe

Medicine is in Dr. Mohammad Amin's blood, so to speak.

"Except for my mother, everyone in my family went into medicine," said the Independence Township pediatrician.

So he's well accustomed to the fun and not-so-fun aspects of private practice. The only difference for him is the country in which he's practicing.

Amin's parents still live in Bangladesh, that "small" country surrounded by India and Burma on the Bay of Bengal.

The people in Bangladesh speak Bengali, but they learn English in grammar school, he said.

Amin got an extra dose during medical school because all courses there were taught in English.

His father teaches radiology at the same medical school now. And his two sisters and brothers-in-law also practice some form of medicine.

After Amin finished medical school, he came to the United States in 1981 to visit his sister in New York. He had intended to stay for a short while, but then he met his future wife.

He and Nazma were married, and he set out to meet the American standards of medicine.

Before he could practice in the U.S., he had to pass the medical board exams.

"My wife was supporting me while I was studying, so she deserves a lot of credit," he said.

Eventually, the couple moved to Michigan so Amin could serve a three-year residency in pediatrics at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, Pontiac.

"After three years, I liked the place, especially the extremes of weather," he said.

So the Amins stayed.

Now he works 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. with pediatricians James O'Neill, Charles Yee and Irving Kernis at 5885

M-15.

"I enjoy working," he said. "It's a good thing, because he also works 7 p.m. to 8 a.m. at the Ambulatory Care Center, 5905 M-15."

"It's a very busy practice, and it's very interesting in that I get to see many different types of patients," he said.

"All the facilities of modern medicine are within our reach here. We're in touch with three good hospitals—St. Joe's, Pontiac General Hospital and Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital."

"It's nice to deal with nice people also," he added.

Amin chose his specialty because he likes working with children.

"I like their natural instincts, their innocence, the beauty of the children themselves," he said.

"Some are so spontaneous. Some are apprehensive."

"It's a very good art, for pediatricians especially, to know how to deal with children, to get their confidence."

Amin is grateful for the opportunity to live and work in the U.S. He plans to become a United States citizen as soon as he can, but it's a long process, he said.

His parents have been instrumental in his development, he said.

"I'm grateful to my mother and my father, which I should never forget—especially my mother. All my life, she was always an inspiration and good friend."

O'Neill commented on the new addition to the staff.

"I think he's fantastic," he said. "He's such a warm, caring human being. Moms and dads and everybody has responded in kind."

"He doesn't worry about money or time off."

He's concern is the patient. He's a people person.

"He started 25 years to the day after I did. That's a good omen," he said.

Dr. Mohammad Amin was born and raised in Bangladesh and has chosen Michigan as his home. The Pontiac resident has joined pediatricians James O'Neill, Charles Yee and Irving Kernis at their practice at 5885 M-15, Independence Township.

What exactly is a burnout?

Dear Cat Paw:

When I first started smoking, I used to get dizzy and then it stopped. Why did this happen? And what is it about cigarettes that causes people to get sick and die?

Young Person

Dear Young Person:

The nausea and dizziness felt by beginning smokers is caused by low-level nicotine poisoning, which the body eventually adapts to.

Carbon monoxide in tobacco smoke appears to be the villain in cigarette-caused heart attacks and strokes. Tar carries the cancer-causing compounds.

Dear Cat Paw:

What exactly is a burnout when kids call each other that? Are they the ones in black shirts and stuff?

Stupid

Dear Stupid:

Burnouts are people who are dull, move slowly, have trouble thinking and remembering and can't stay tuned into their surroundings because of drug use.

The manner of dress a person chooses has nothing to do with his or her drug use. During the David Toma visit, we saw many, many students in all types of clothing who were very heavy long-time drug users.

Dear Cat Paw:

I've tried going to Al-Anon meetings and I don't like them. Why should I go when I don't think they're any good? I've gone twice.

Got Any Ideas?

Dear Got:

You are a newcomer. You will learn that all meetings are good and some are better than others. You don't have to enjoy a meeting to benefit from it; you just have to be there.

Try another meeting and remember, no two meetings are alike. If you still don't like going, shop around and find another Al-Anon chapter with different people you might enjoy more.

Also, remember that you are an equal member at those meetings and you can help set the mood.

Dear Cat Paw:

What is methadone?

Curious

Dear Curious:

Methadone is a synthetic opiate that acts by depressing the central nervous system. It is used legitimately as an analgesic, as it is slightly more potent than morphine.

It is also used as a substitute for heroin in addiction maintenance clinics throughout the country.

When used to maintain addiction, methadone is available only at treatment clinics and cannot be prescribed by a doctor.

Cat Paw author Jeanette Sanders, a Springfield Township resident, is a state certified drug abuse counselor and a member of the Clarkston Area Chemical People, an organization devoted to the prevention of substance abuse among the community's young people.

Christmas Fest is coming

Davisburg home bustles with craft activities

By Pat Young

Charlotte Tinker's home in the Davisburg area is generally full this time of year—full of handmade strawberries, plaid bows, Christmas pine cones, and yards and yards of burlap banners.

Tinker makes personalized banners to hang on doors, walls or anywhere in the home. She makes banners that say Happy Holidays, Noel and banners that just say Welcome and can be used year round.

Her biggest sellers are personalized banners that she puts people's names on, and the banners that people "personally design" themselves at her Christmas booth. They pick out the decorations and Tinker puts the banner together for them in less than five minutes.

For five years, Tinker has had a booth at the Davisburg annual Christmas Craft Fest, and this year will be no exception. But she didn't always sell banners at the festival.

"Actually, I first got into this because I was making gingerbread houses for my nieces and nephews, and Helen Vergin, who more or less started the Davisburg craft festival, suggested I sell them there," says Tinker. "I also sold homemade Christmas cookies, but I haven't had time to do the baking this year."

But she will sell cookies, in a sense. Tinker sells cookie dough, ready to roll, and is apparently well-known for the "secret recipe" sugar cookies that her mixes create.

"It's an old, old recipe, over 100 years old, in fact, that a friend gave me," Tinker says. "It is the best, not-too-sweet old-fashioned sugar cookie you've ever tasted."

She sells the mix in white, red and green packages, complete with directions for making the cookies. She recommends rolling out the white dough for the basic cookie, and then cutting the red and green dough for decorations.

"You don't need frosting," she says. "All you do is sprinkle a little sugar on them."

Tinker is already thinking of new ideas to sell at future festivals including handmade Christmas ornaments for next year. But she plans to continue making the banners, because they have been so successful.

Her husband, Jim, a builder and subcontractor, cuts all the wooden hangers for the top of the burlap banners.

"My children used to help me a lot making the crafts, but they're all grown now," Tinker says.

Her 18-year-old son, Matt, even had a craft booth of his own at the Davisburg Craft Fest for a year or two.

Now Matt and his 21-year-old sister, Karen, are both Oakland Community College students and 22-year-old Jim is a carpenter, so it's pretty much up to mom to do the crafts.

"This time of year, I spend several hours in the morning and sometimes work again at night, too, getting ready for the shows," Tinker says.

She cuts out all the red felt letters by hand for the words on the banners, and says they are of washable felt, so they will not fade if the banner is hung outside.

The materials for creating banners spill over into her kitchen, where the table is covered with more banners, bows and red felt letters.

Her kitchen is efficiently set up so she can get on with her other love—baking.

"I haven't even started on the cookie dough yet, but I will," she says. "People will be looking for it at the craft festival."

"I love to bake, especially fancy things," she says. "And I very seldom use someone else's recipes."

She doesn't use patterns for her crafts, either. And, oh yes, there will be other personalized items at her booth this year.

She is making wool socks to hang over fireplaces on Christmas Eve.

Charlotte Tinker has been busy preparing items for her booth at the Davisburg Craft Fest, scheduled Dec. 6 and 7 this year.

Sarah Kortge's brocade costume hales from styles of the mid-1800s, the setting for "Cyrano de Bergerac."

Jennifer Leech appears as a Southern belle from the 1880s in a lime green chiffon gown with a bustle. She carries an antique fan to complete the ensemble used in "Another Part of the Forest" by Lillian Hellman.

All dressed up and no place to go

Looking kingly, Jim Tyrrell laughs as he displays the costume of Henry VIII in "A Man for All Seasons," set in the 1500s. "You knew the king would steal the show," he said.

Sue Kiser, a Sashabaw Junior High School teacher, wears a 100 percent silk Civil War era gown, that cost $600 to make for the Meadow Brook Theatre production of "The Heiress." Silk was essential because women wanted to rustle when they walked in the mid-1800s, said

Julie Glynn, coordinator of special projects for the theater. Glynn presented "Costumes in the Classroom" for three classes at SJHS on Nov. 19. She encouraged the students to touch the fabric as Kiser walked through the aisles to provide a close-up look.

Theater in the classroom

Drama costumes presented at Sashabaw

By Kathy Greenfield

The thought of appearing as a beggarwoman before his classmates did not appeal to Mark Benedict, a Drama I student at Sashabaw Junior High School.

He put on a grin of chagrin when told of his assignment for the "Costumes in the Classroom" presentation by Julie Glynn, coordinator of special projects for the Meadow Brook Theatre.

Minutes before the program began for Drama I, Drama II and Art III students Nov. 19, Mark climbed into the costume.

If really was an actor's costume, worn as a disguise in a play, said Glynn, and she assured Mark she would relay that fact to the audience.

She put the final touch in place—a large babushka—and said, "You hold it over your face so they can't see who you are."

"That's good!" said Mark. The others waiting to appear in their costumes from Meadow Brook Theatre had to laugh.

They, too, were dealing with unfamiliar getups: bustles and hoop skirts for females; tights for males.

But they all performed like the troupers they represented during the 45-minute program, provided free-for-the-asking as an educational service by Meadow Brook Theatre of Rochester. The presentation and because theatergoers would notice if they ap-tion at SJHS was arranged by drama teacher Jan Inman.

Because the costumes are tailored for individuals peared time after time, they are only used once, Glynn said.

"This gives the costumes another chance to be used rather than hanging in a storeroom or tossed in the garbage, or whatever," she said, noting that every five or six years many of them are put up for sale.

During the program, Glynn explained the process of "building a costume," from sketches by the designer to fabric selection to fitting.

A great deal of effort goes into making period costumes authentic, from fabric selection to attention to details, such as handsewn beading on Juliet's gown.

from "Romeo and Juliet" and 100 percent silk used in a $600 Civil War era worn in "The Heiress."

Each volunteer model stood before the students as Glynn pointed out specific details on his or her outfit.

When Mark appeared, she noted that "not every costume in the theater is glamorous. Some are downright ugly, such as this costume."

Mark continued to hide behind the babushka as she explained how the beggarwoman disguise featured a "breakaway" design with Velcro for quick removal backstage so the actor could be ready for the next scene.

Then she demonstrated—and Mark, exonerated, emerged with a happy face.

Moon Valley House is home to antiques

By Julie Campe

If you walk into 1868 Moon Valley House, you may feel like you've been there before.

The two-story farmhouse, now holding a business, still looks lived in. It has a definite stamp of "home."

Built in 1868 (hence the name), the antique and interior decorating store at 6485 Dixie Highway is

-What's new- -in business-housed in an actual antique.

A true antique is anything over 100 years old, said the owner, Rose Head.

She's been looking for 10 years for a house such as this, she said, and she shared its history.

In 1834, Stephen Moon purchased the property, and he built a house for his son on the site in 1868. The area at the north side of Waterford Hill has since been known as Moon Valley.

It used to be a 360-acre plot reaching from the north side of Waterford Hill, across what is now Dixie Highway, to Maybee Road.

At one time, it was one of the most successful stock farms in Oakland County, said Rose.

The house still has most of the original panes of glass and all of the original tea moldings and solid wood doors.

A 12-inch black walnut beam is in the center of the basement, and the pine boards in the roof are 12- to 18-inches thick.

"It's a wonderful house," said Rose. "I feel like I've been here half my life, I'm that comfortable in it."

The outside is still intact, although the house has been through some changes.

A shed has been converted into a garage, and a washroom for the hired help is now a storage closet. The current bathroom used to be a pantry. And a wood stove has been removed.

But with Rose's display of antiques, as well as a room of antiques belonging to Connie Corent of Clarkston, it looks like a home again.

Sofas, chairs, washstands, pitchers, dry sinks, 17th and 18th century lighting, and more are on display.

Rose's favorites include an oak trunk that probably emigrated from Germany with its owner around 1860. It's made with wooden pegs, no nails. The original iron handles and lock are still in good condition.

A dry sink from around 1840 still has the original copper lining. Plus, it has a cupboard top, which is rare, said Rose. It's built with square nails and has the original paint.

The store also sells "country" items, things that aren't antiques but would be compatible with antiques.

Rose uses artisans from all over the country to supply quilted pillows, dolls, ceramic apples, dyed wool, homespun fabric, children-sized hickory tables and chairs, and toys.

The business also has a bridal and gift registry and a finders service—a way to find exactly what a customer is looking for, she said.

The interior design service includes wall coverings, carpets, rugs, furnishings and accessories, and window treatments.

By January, the two bedrooms in Moon Valley

House should be ready to showcase the interior design work, she said.

For Rose, no other occupation would be quite as fulfilling.

"I've loved antiques every since I was a little girl," she said. "I was very curious to find out what everything was."

"My grandmother lived to be 101, and a great-grandmother had a long life, too," she said, attributing them with influencing her.

Rose Head, owner of 1868 Moon Valley House, sits in an 1870s Victorian sofa with French provincial styling.
