Residents balk at five-lane M-15

BY JULIE CAMPE

Clarkston News Staff Writer

At the M-15 widening public hearing June 25, suggestions from the about 60-member audience included using Sashabaw Road as M-15, making part of M-15 a boulevard and doing nothing until further studies have been completed.

Twelve members of the audience spoke at the nearly two-hour long hearing, following a presentation by Philip Chisholm, public hearings officer of the hearings and mitigation section of Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT).

MDOT recommends building a five-lane roadway with curb and gutter and enclosed drainage in the about one-half mile stretch between Dixie Highway and Paramus Drive in Independence Township, said Chisholm. The center lane is to be a left-turn lane.

"The main reason for considering the improvements to this road is traffic congestion," he said, adding M-15 averages about 16,000 vehicles per day and could average 24,000 vehicles per day by 2010.

Accidents also frequently occur on the half-mile stretch of M-15, he said.

A separate drainage project is to be included from M-15 to Dollar Lake, west of M-15. The storm drain is to be established by the Oakland County Drain Commission (OCDC), Chisholm said.

The widening, estimated to cost $840,000 (not including the township and OCDC portion of the drain cost), would require the acquisition of about 10 feet of property on each side of the road, he said.

After Chisholm's presentation, the public hearing began.

James Schultz, Clarkston Village Council trustee, voiced concern over five lanes turning into two lanes. He asked Chisholm to show him an example where that works without problems.

Bruce Robertson, a Balmoral Terrace, Independence Township, resident, said MDOT should have more seriously considered a boulevard—a divided four-lane highway with a landscaped divider.

Celebrate on July 3 and 4

A concert, pancake breakfast, town clock dedication and parade are to be featured in the July 4th festivities in Clarkston this weekend.

Concert in the Park: On Friday, July 3, the Emil Sutt Band is to set the tone with the first Concert in the Park in the month-long series. From 7 to 9 p.m. in the Depot Park, 375 Depot Rd., Sutt's 17-piece band is to play patriotic music as well as swing tunes, popular music and a children's march, said Joan Kopietz, concert organizer.

Pancake Breakfast: At 7 a.m. Saturday, July 4, a pancake breakfast with sausage, scrambled eggs, orange juice, milk and coffee is to be prepared by the Clarkston Masonic Temple Board in the Clarkston Masonic Temple at the corner of Main and Washington streets.

Clock Dedication: After breakfast, the town clock, purchased in honor of Independence Township's Sesquicentennial, is to be dedicated at 9:45 a.m. on Main Street, just before the parade begins.

Although the antique clock won't arrive until next week, they plan to place it on the south side of the Pontiac State Bank building on Main Street, said Rita Burdick, organizer of the event.

As honorary chairperson of the sesquicentennial committee, Elizabeth Ronk is to perform the dedication, said Burdick, adding Saturday would be a good time for residents to wear their township sesquicentennial T-shirts. More shirts are available at T-Shirts & Neat Stuff, 6 N. Main, Clarkston.

Parade: At 10 a.m., the parade, sponsored by the Independence Township firefighters, is to begin at Clarkston Junior High School, go west on Buffalo Street, north on Main Street and end at Miller Road.

Clowns, floats, cheerleaders, old cars and Michigan Renaissance Festival characters are to be included in the parade.

CHS adds summer school program

With the success of the fledgling summer school program at Clarkston High School, plans are to expand the program next year, says Dr. Robert Burek, principal.

During the pilot six-week summer school program, 60 students are enrolled in government, creative writing and two portions of United States history.

The half-credit courses meet from 8 to 10:30 a.m., with the second half of the history course from 10:40 to 1:10 p.m.

Summer school had not been offered at CHS since the early 1980s, so the school was very interested in getting it started again, said Burek.

"We wanted to provide an opportunity for enrichment and remediation for students at CHS," he said.

Next year, likely courses to be added are mathematics, personal typing and social studies. The goal is to make summer school self-sustaining, and the first session came close to the goal, Burek said. Students must pay $60 tuition for each class.

"I would hope that next summer we will see our enrollment and number of classes double," he said.

Concert series begins Friday

With patriotic music, the Emil Sutt Band is to kick off the Concert in the Park series at 7 p.m. Friday, July 3, at the Clarkston Depot Park, 375 Depot Rd.

In his fourth season with Clarkston, Sutt's 17-piece band will also perform swing tunes, popular music and a children's march, said Joan Kopietz, organizer of the event.

The concert is the first of five in the month-long, Friday-night series to be dedicated to Ted Thomson, a Clarkston resident who died last month, said Kopietz.

"Ted has always been a band concert supporter," she said. "We're dedicating all five concerts to him."

So far, donations for the concerts have been steady, said Kopietz.

"Contributions have been real strong. It's the same people every year," she said, adding a few new ones also help.

Band-Aid boxes for contributions are to be available at the concert time and are now placed in the village businesses, she said.

The majority of the concert costs are paid by donations. The music is co-sponsored by the Village Business Association and the Pontiac Federation of Musicians, which uses a national grant from the Music Performance Trust Fund to pay a portion of the costs.

This year, the village's portion of the cost is $1,400. Contributions may be made by using the Band-Aid boxes or by contacting Kopietz.

In her fifth year of organizing the concerts, Kopietz is looking for help, she said.

To donate or volunteer to help, call Kopietz at 625-2511.

$115,140 to close school corridor

Construction this summer to close an open corridor in the Northwest Oakland Vocational Education Center (NWOVEC) will cost about $115,140.

Money for the project will come from the one-half mill (50 cents for each $1,000 of assessed property valuation) in taxes collected annually in Oakland County for vocational education. There are four vocational high schools in the county and the millage is expected to raise about $8.5 million for the 1987-88 school year.

The Clarkston school district oversaw the budget for NWOVEC, which is on Big Lake Road in Springfield Township.

At a special meeting last week, the Clarkston board of education voted 4-0 to approve the following construction bids:

- Concrete: $13,500 by Gilardone Co. of Farmington Hills.
- Masonry: $36,455 by Roy A. Seelbinder Construction of Troy.
- Carpentry: $17,245 by Westwood Carpentry Co. of Birmingham.
- Folding partitions: $3,150 by Superior School Equipment Co. of Farmington Hills.
- Painting: $3,950 by Morgan Watt Painting of Detroit.
- Resilient tile: $1,800 by A.R. Kramer Co. of Livonia.
- Mechanical: $17,100 by Ecker Mechanical Contractors of Flint.
- Electrical: $16,940 by Scheper's Electric of Utica.

There were no bids for the ceiling work, but the board authorized Charles Sherman Associates of Pontiac, the architectural firm serving as general contractor for the project, to issue a contract for up to $5,000.

The corridor is in the west section of the vocational center. Previously, greenhouse and landscaping students were required to walk through the open corridor past the diesel mechanics work area to reach their classrooms.

"The fire marshal was there and said this was not an ideal situation and recommended closing the corridor," said William Jackson, business manager for Clarkston schools.

Construction is expected to begin this month and be completed by Sept. 2, the first day of school this fall for students.

Peace Corps volunteer plans to spend 2 years in southeast Asia

BY PAT YOUNG

Clarkston News Staff Writer

Brian Hasselbalch, a 1980 graduate of Clarkston High School, was in town last week visiting family and friends. It would be his last chance for almost two and a half years.

Not long before his 1986 graduation from the University of California at Riverside with a degree in anthropology, Brian decided to join the Peace Corps. He leaves for Thailand July 18.

He spent last week at the Independence Township home of his mother, Ann Kammer, and her husband, Ken, of K.W. Kammer and Associates Insurance. Brian is also the son of the late George Hasselbalch.

After his visit home, Brian was heading back to California to visit family and friends there before his adventure as a Peace Corps volunteer begins.

Brian reflected on his decision to join the Peace Corps and talked about the philosophy behind the 26-year-old organization.

"The Peace Corps has a lot of programs in developing countries," Brian says. "My goal, after the Peace Corps, is to go to graduate school and study international affairs. This will be good background."

According to figures published by the Peace Corps, over 120,000 volunteers have served in about 90 countries since the organization's inception in 1961. Currently, there are more than 5,200 volunteers in 60 countries worldwide.

John F. Kennedy proposed an organization such as the Peace Corps during a campaign speech at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, campus on Oct. 14, 1960. He later asked Hubert Humphrey, who had suggested the Peace Corps idea several years earlier, to introduce a bill to the United States Senate.

President Kennedy signed an executive order creating the Peace Corps in 1961.

It serves the same objectives today as it did then: to send trained workers where they are needed; to enable volunteers to learn about other cultures; to teach people in other countries about the U.S. and to enable Americans to learn from returned volunteers about the needs and hopes of those in other countries.

One doesn't just run off to join the Peace Corps. In fact, Brian points out that only one in every seven who apply actually join.

"Some find their motivation just wasn't there, to spend two years overseas," he says. "And some maybe

"I chose aquaculture over teaching, . . . because I wanted to work at the subsistence level with the people. I felt that fish farming was more important at that level than teaching English, for example."

—Brian Hasselbalch

lack the skills or the background needed."

Brian went through a 10-week training program at a University of South Carolina research plantation for the program he will be involved in—aquaculture.

"I will be working with fish farmers as an extension agent," he says. "The principles are the same as with field crops. It provides a good source of food and income for the people."

"I chose aquaculture over teaching, which I might have been more qualified for, because I wanted to work at the subsistence level with the people," he says. "I felt that fish farming was more important at that level than teaching English, for example."

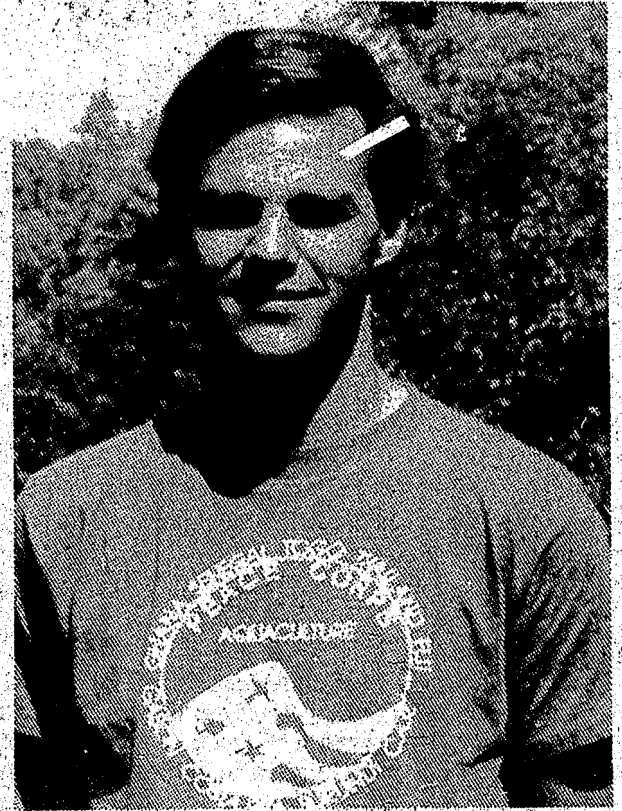

During his aquaculture training, he was one of only two social scientists in the group. Most were biologists or in related fields.

The Peace Corps encompasses a wide range of people. The average age is 30, with a range of about 20-year-olds to retirees and mid-career people.

The numerous programs include forestry, fishery, agriculture, architecture and building, science, engineering, trades and business, home economics, health and teaching.

When Brian reaches Thailand, he will go through an intensive, 10-week language and cultural training program. This will be the first trip overseas for the 25-year-old college graduate, and he learned as much as he could about Thailand before leaving.

While there, he will be paid by the host country at local pay and work side-by-side with host country partners. He will live at the local level, though most of the host countries perceive Americans as wealthy people.

Brian Hasselbalch leaves for Thailand July 18. He plans to serve as a Peace Corps volunteer for two years.

When his two-year experience is completed, he will be paid a readjustment allowance by the Peace Corps, and he will always be a Return Peace Corps Volunteer. RPCV's frequently re-enlist, and they are used to train other volunteers. Many find their RPCV status a plus when going on to another career.

Brian, who has a minor in Soviet studies and speaks Russian, says the Peace Corps duty will give him time to make up his mind about a career.

"My interest is in ethnic relations," he says.

Brian says joining the Peace Corps was something he had looked at, but not really decided on before the fall of 1985.

"I guess there's a lot of people like myself who've grown up with the Peace Corps," he says. "It's just something that's always been on my mind."

Building to go up

An office center is planned for the 52nd District Courthouse complex on Lorac and Citation roads in Independence Township.

On June 16, the township board unanimously approved the final preliminary plat for the Clarkston Office Center.

When developer Tom Rademacher applied for the final plat approval in May, building director Beverly McElmeel discovered the preliminary plat approval had expired in February 1986.

The board approved an extension of the preliminary plat and tabled the final plat at the June 2 meeting to await a written agreement from the owners to be special assessed for a municipal water system when the system becomes available to M-15.

An extension of the township system is planned for 1989 or 1990, said Supervisor Frank Ronk at the June 2 meeting.

The 15-acre center consists of 14 lots; 11 are still available, said co-owner Dick Ayers after the meeting.

Construction of an office building is scheduled to begin in two weeks, he said.

The center is intended for medical and professional offices, said Ayers, adding the Clarkston Post Office is considering a site in the center.

Efforts are being made to coordinate Citation Drive with the proposed Clarkston Health Center west of M-15, according to Ayers. Eventually, Citation Drive may cross M-15, travel through the health center site and exit onto Dixie Highway, he said.

"The widening of M-15 should help the center," said Ayers. "We're just proud of the development, and we'd like to build more."

M-15 widening could arrive here in 1988

"It would be more practical," he said. "It seems it would control the traffic better. It would be more attractive and might increase the value of the land."

Bob Manor, MDOT engineer, said they didn't seriously consider it because they would have had to acquire too much property on each side of the road and there wouldn't have been enough left for parking.

Sharron Catallo, village council president, said she preferred the three-lane widening plan.

"I think the consolidation of driveways is important no matter which way you go," she added.

Eric Haven, village council trustee and member of the M-15 study committee, said MDOT should wait for two studies.

After MDOT removes the green arrow and replaces it with a red light on northbound Dixie Highway to M-15, MDOT should see what effect it has on congestion, he said.

Also, the M-15 committee is working with state Rep. Mat Dunaskiss and state Sen. Richard Fessler to create a bypass of M-15 south of I-75, using Dixie Highway and I-75, he said.

MDOT should study the results of the changes and see if a three-lane alternative wouldn't be better.

"We would like to see other alternatives studied which would reduce overall traffic flow," Haven said.

Iva Caverly, a Waldon Road, Independence Township, resident, said she helped gather petition signatures for stoplights at Sashabaw and Waldon roads and at Waldon and M-15. The latter is on the way, she said.

Caverly suggested using Sashabaw Road as M-15; MDOT has the power to change it, she said.

John Stuetzer, a Holcomb Street, Clarkston, resident and member of the village planning commission, said the widening of M-15 would be the initiation of a major highway through downtown Clarkston.

"By being a well-kept community, we've created our own little monster," he said, adding growth north and south of Clarkston affects the village.

Main Street is "going to become an uninhabited place, as Dixie has become uninhabited and is now commercial."

—Jennifer Radcliff

"I am concerned with the people who live and do business in downtown Clarkston... (If Main Street were widened, too,) we'd have two subdivisions, Clarkston East and Clarkston West," he said.

"The steps we take today will affect those homes down the road," said Stuetzer.

David Taylor, a Hidden Lane, Independence Township, resident said he was concerned about the environmental impact of the drain to Dollar Lake.

He also asked if M-15 and Dixie Highway would be widened at the same time.

Chisholm said Dixie in Independence Township was scheduled for widening sometime this year, and the earliest M-15 widening could begin is 1988 or 1989.

Jerome Wilford, chairman of the M-15 study committee, said traffic lights, speed control and a truck or passenger car bypass of the village would impact the M-15 traffic. He asked that MDOT wait to study the impacts before widening M-15 to five lanes.

Jennifer Radcliff, a Main Street, Clarkston resident, was a member of the M-15 Task Force for one and a half years during the planning stages of the M-15 widening.

"When all was said and done, ... the three-lane alternative ... came up the winner for reasons which still stand," she said.

Clarkston is on the state register of historic places and on the national register of historic places, she said, and if M-15 is widened to five lanes, the pressure will be there to widen Main Street, too.

"It's going to become an uninhabited place, as Dixie has become uninhabited and is now commercial," she said.

Chisholm responded by saying a five-lane road wouldn't generate traffic. The traffic is already there, he said.

"Growth is going to occur no matter what," he said. "Traffic today is not accommodated by roads today. A three-lane roadway would not handle today's volume."

Five lanes are "a safer highway, and it doesn't cost us any more," he said.

William Basinger, a village council trustee, said the MDOT pamphlet was misleading in some statistics and did not adequately address the social, economic and environmental impact of the five-lane road.

The pamphlet said that only 3 percent of the M-15 traffic traveled to or from north of Clarkston. In peak times, 28 percent is an accurate figure, said Basinger.

Until the issues are seriously addressed, the widening shouldn't take place, he said.

Frank Millard, a village council trustee, said the widening could create a dangerous bottleneck at Paramus, where it narrowed to two lanes.

He asked Chisholm if he could offer assurances to the village of Clarkston about widening pressures downtown.

"If we have traffic accident problems in the village, we would have to respond," said Chisholm, adding he could offer no assurances.

MDOT plans to buy about 10 feet of property on each side of M-15 to complete the widening, Chisholm said.

Panic attack

Kathy Greenfield

I have a feeling the squashed petunias are only the beginning.

I noticed the tire marks over the flowers after the two cement trucks thundered into our back yard. After all these years, we're adding some space to our house.

We'll have more than one bathroom, a few more closets and a kitchen that doesn't require blazing lightbulbs at noon.

People have been asking me if I'm excited about all the changes. The answer could be yes, but I'm not sure.

While visions of not waiting to use our single bathroom and sunshine streaming into our kitchen dance in my head, I'm too much of a realist not to feel a bit of panic.

The first big event was a sea of mud in the back yard following a heavy rain. No problem. We haven't been able to use the back door anyway since the porch was torn off.

Now the petunias are in trouble. I've been trying to grow something in the next-to-the-driveway flower bed for years.

Perennials have said farewell after one season and annuals have done their scraggly best to gasp along for a few months.

This year, I decided to try petunias as a last ditch effort—and they thrived. I love success stories and I had one in the making.

Now I'm worried about such things as curtains, wall coverings, cupboards, carpeting, bathroom fixtures, light fixtures and furniture.

If I'm lucky, I'll have all these matters settled in a decade or so. That's about how long it took me to decide petunias would probably grow where no other flower could survive.

Clarkston in jeopardy with 5-lane M-15

After talking with people who attended the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) meeting about M-15 last week, we have but one conclusion:

If M-15 is widened to five lanes for one-half mile from Dixie Highway to Paramus Drive, it will be a disaster.

The Village of Clarkston is in danger and the people of our community need to rally to its defense.

MDOT officials have made it clear that increased accidents are almost certain to occur when five lanes narrow to two lanes at Paramus. The accident statistics will eventually lead to the elimination of parking in the village so four lanes of traffic can breeze through town.

If that happens, the village as we know it will be gone, both as a business district and as a superb residential community—and it will probably happen in less than 15 years.

Other changes in the works for the town will also take their toll. A fire station at the corner of M-15 and Waldon Road will require more lanes and will infringe upon the residential area behind M-15.

The homes just south of the business district will probably make way for commercial enterprises, and the homes between there and Paramus on both sides of M-15 will probably be doomed as well. Without a village ordinance to protect historic buildings, they can be torn down without a ripple.

In place of the residential buffers will be businesses with dumpsters, fences and delivery trucks.

In the early 1980s, an M-15 task force made up of township and village residents studied the impact of five lanes versus three lanes for the half mile from M-15 to Dixie Highway.

The task force recommended the three-lane alternative. The highway department was presented with the report and MDOT officials seemed to agree with the task force's conclusion.

Everyone sat back and enjoyed the security of knowing the village would be spared.

Meanwhile, it appears that MDOT officials got out their maps again. Without considering anything but the roads, four lanes through Clarkston makes sense.

But somehow officials have to be made to realize what an important resource the Village of Clarkston is.

We continue to support the three-lane concept between M-15 and Paramus, and MDOT needs to know that residents of the entire Clarkston community support the three-lane concept.

The time to make our opinion known is now before rights of way are purchased by MDOT to make way for five lanes.

Jim's Jottings

No one would call me a movie buff. I'm not like columnist Jim Fitzgerald who remembers every person who ever had a part in any movie made since 1938.

While I like movies, I seldom go to a theater, and seldom stay awake long enough to watch the finish of tv movies, or movies on tv.

When I did go to the movies, in courting and pre-courting days, I never missed the musicals and comedies.

I never missed the Fred Astaire extravaganzas. I saw the "road" pictures with Bing Crosby and Bob Hope, the Marx Brothers, and Ritz Brothers.

Dance, sing and laugh; not guns, fights and jungles.

The passing of Fred Astaire, the greatest dancer who ever lived, prompted this recall of the 30s and 40s, and his television years.

Oh, I liked Gene Kelly and Donald O'Connor and the tall Dan Dailey, but no one moved like Fred Astaire. He did a 5-minute routine dancing with a hat rack that could never be choreographed for today's hoofers.

The man was a marvel in tap shoes, and I hope he knows how many of us watched in wonderment at his gliding, at his suave, and at his great talent.

He's gone. Bing Crosby is gone. Bing Crosby, most of the guys I knew in those growing up days mimicked him. I spent a lot of time with George Talbot in Morrice, and he'd say, "Listen to this, Sherman", and sound out "Ba ba ba blue", just like Bing. Well, almost like Bing.

We all thought we could sing as good as Bing Crosby, it looked so easy and effortless. Never mind the years he spent in night clubs before ever getting on the silver screen. We didn't think of that, just that if we could sing like that we'd have all the girls we wanted, and forget the shiny car.

For great laughs there was Red Skelton, Fred Allen, Jack Benny, and Harpo Marx. All are favorites of mine in different ways.

I loved the running feud on radio between Allen and Benny, with such great put-downs.

Silent Harpo Marx with his bulb horn, curly hair, and oversize jacket made me laugh in all his movie scenes.

My all-time favorite comedian is Red Skelton.

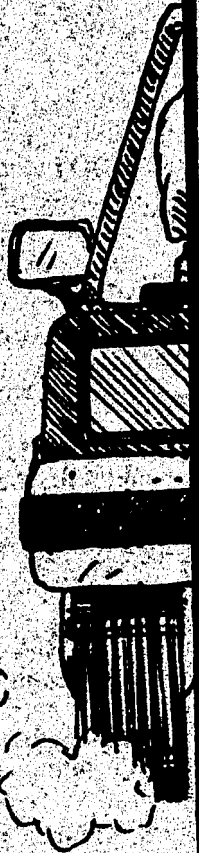

Give him a hat and a chair and the stage, and the audience was his. Remember Gertrude and Heathcliff, the two seagulls? The "I'm a ba-a-d boy" closing to weekly routine? His drunk and bum miming? Great clean comedy.

There are many, many more comics and singers we enjoy, even some of more recent vintage. There's still time for us to remember them in print, but the passing of Fred Astaire made me realize my time for praising him and others of his era, who gave us so much pleasure, is gone.

I can still praise them, but they can't read it. I wish they could.

If it Fitz . . . Grandpa goes to graduation

Jim Fitzgerald

Every spring, when refusing to attend someone's commencement exercises, my favorite thing to say is: "I didn't go to my own commencement exercises when I graduated from college, so why in God's name should I go to someone else's?"

To me, this is a marvelously persuasive argument, exceedingly logical and fair. To my wife, it is proof that I am an old grump.

It is my contention that all commencement speeches are boring, usually delivered in a stifling hot gymnasium, and none of the graduates care one bit if I stay home.

This has been my attitude ever since I can remember. I can't remember my own high school commencement exercises 43 years ago. Surely I attended - my mother was a lot like my wife concerning such matters - but there isn't the slightest memory of where the ceremony was held, who spoke, or whether that was the day an old grump was born young.

However, I clearly remember my graduation from Michigan State University just a few years later. By that time, I was educated enough to request that my diploma be mailed to me. I remember how delighted I was to skip joining an immense horde of gowned captives forced to hear an oration by J. Edgar Hoover. I remember how much fun it was to celebrate my scholastic achievements in a saloon 200 miles from the MSU campus.

Obviously, if the commencement I dodged is so much more memorable than the one I attended, I am a very perceptive fellow who knows what memories are made of. And my wife doesn't know beans.

She does know, however, that no way would she remain married to a man who wouldn't go to his own children's commencement exercises. I never argued the point. In fact, I agree parents should listen to their children's high school commencement speaker; it serves them right for having kids. Three times I acquiesced in this parental responsibility, and I don't remember one thing said or done at any of the ceremonies. My wife remembers that I grumbled at regular intervals.

Fortunately, college is something else. I always hoped that higher education would teach my children to avoid pomp at all costs, and I wasn't disappointed. Even my youngest daughter, the family scholar, opted out of the university commencement exercises at which she would have been singled out for honors. I was never prouder of her.

For many years I blissfully believed the 1976 high school graduation of my youngest child would be my last commencement appearance. My anti-commencement stance became so inflexible that my wife gave up suggesting that I watch nieces and nephews go out into the world in caps and gowns.

IT WAS A STUBBORN stance that served me well when I became a famous columnist (strangers often compliment me on something Neal Shine wrote) and fair prey for schools desperate for commencement speakers. Naturally, I couldn't be hypocritical enough to deliver what I wouldn't receive. Even my wife agreed on that.

But did I think my grandchildren would never grow up? Did I think 17-year-old Michele would get a driver's license but not a high school diploma? Her commencement exercises were last week and the old grump was there. As usual, the gym was hot and I don't remember a word the speaker said.

There was a moment when I looked at lovely Michele and her weepy mother - my daughter - and counted the years between their graduations. Twenty. I almost wept myself. I could live 20 more years. I could attend the commencement exercises of my great-grandchildren!

Michele's school reserved folding chairs for grandparents unable to climb into the bleachers. That's a good idea. I have five grandchildren so far. There are a lot of graduation ceremonies in my future. I will grump about having to attend each one of them.

If I'm lucky.

Laws ignored

Summer has arrived in Clarkson and "Our Youths" are on vacation from school, which is visible from the amount of bicycles, skate boards and mopeds frequently visiting our downtown area.

Another year has passed and the youths are still unable to read "Walk Bikes," which is printed on the sidewalks in large letters!

It is difficult to expect our youths to obey the laws and ordinances when parents are violating our laws concerning "No Turn on Red" posted at the corner of Washington and Main streets.

Also, the "No U-Turn" signs (11 of them) are still going unnoticed by our home-town drivers!

It sure would be nice if parents would take 10 or 15 minutes to explain to their youths why they are unable to ride bikes on the sidewalk in the business district and explain the moped laws to them, as they have to abide by the laws of the State of Michigan!

Maybe the youths in turn could help the parents learn how to park their cars between the white lines in our downtown business district.

Wouldn't it be nice if everybody would show consideration for each other and make Clarkson a better and safer place to shop, visit and live?

Violators will be ticketed.

A memorial

By Bruce A. Stewart

Immeasurable the significance of life
No war obtains its blessing
I've never escorted the tormented
The precarious are invariably guessing.

Each daybreak I endure is made of cake
Propositions I encounter can only teach a lesson
Life's not on a nerve's edge
I survive without aggression.

Day by day I know what to expect
Minute by minute I judge my plans
Less and less the soldier holds hope
More and more his beach loses sand.

I only know that of the good life
Never have I walked with the dead
Sanctuary the only setting for sanity
The realness I'll always dread.

God bless men of past wars
Let their minds be put to rest
They cannot give much more
God knows they've done their best.

Bruce A. Stewart resides in Independence Township.

Friendly faces

It's a habit

BY JULIE CAMPE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

An upbringing in Clarkston may have had something to do with Donna Paulson's friendliness, although she won't admit she's friendly.

At 2½, Donna moved with her family to Clarkston and she's been here ever since, now living on Wealthy Street in Independence Township.

For almost three years, she's been manager of the Main Street Deli, 5801 S. Main St., Independence Township, and was manager the previous 14 years when the business was known as Christine and Ziggy's.

But she doesn't understand why someone would consider her friendly, even though two people nominated her for the Friendly Faces column.

Yes, she talks to people, even if she doesn't know them, but that's how it was done in Clarkston when she was young, she said.

"Clarkston has changed over the years. It's funny because when I was growing up, I used to walk down the street and I'd know everybody. Now, I don't know half of them," she said.

"It's habit, I guess," she said about greeting everyone, whether she knows them or not.

Still, she doesn't think of herself as friendly.

"I remember when I was in school, I'd take an 'E' before I'd get up in front of the class. Now, the teachers come in, and they can't believe I talk to people," she said.

She likes her job, and that contributes to her happiness.

"The people are the thing I like best," said Donna. "They're friendly. The lunch crowd is the best. We have fun at lunch. No matter how busy we

Donna Paulson's duties at the Main Street Deli include opening in the morning, preparing sandwiches and catering items, and making sure the store runs smoothly.

get, people are really patient."

If people ask, Donna recommends roast beef, corned beef or salami for lunch. For dessert, she'll suggest the cheesecake and for a bread, the rye.

The catering aspect has changed the most since she's been in the delicatessen business, Donna said.

In the beginning, catering was simple, she said, with offerings of meat, cheese, bread and salads.

Now, they make hors d'oeuvres and all the fixings.

"We can cater absolutely anything anybody wants," she said. "Most people are from a two-parent family and they both work. When they have something (planned), they don't want to do it, so they come to us."

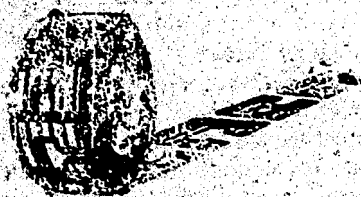

Of all the items Donna makes, she has a favorite.

"Lasagna," she said. "It's easy. To me it's easy, being Italian."

One Christmas, her employees gave her a white Michigan State University T-shirt for Christmas with "Rigatoni down!" on the back.

When she's not working, Donna likes to spend time with her 11-year-old daughter Krista, going to the beach or shopping.

Do you know someone who works in the Clarkston area and deserves recognition for a job well done? We'd like to share your praise. Call The Clarkston News at 625-3370 weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. or drop us a line at 5 S. Main, Clarkston, MI 48016.

Mostly, Curn will miss his co-workers and the builders and contractors in Independence, he said, adding he's seen a lot of township boards in his day.

Randy Laszewski puts some work into making sure the tires shine on his 1978 Corvette. The concours on Sunday was at Bowman Chevrolet at M-15 and Dixie Highway.

A father-son team, Larry and Derek D'Angelo, check under the hood of their 1976 Corvette to make sure no spots were missed before the

The Waterford Hills Road Racing track in Independence Township is the only track in America owned by the members. Races are scheduled at the track twice during May and the last weekend of every month from June until September.

Waterford Hills attracts many drivers

Weekend racers head for the 'Hills'

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

All of the thrills, chills and spills associated with car racing happen close to home at the Waterford Hills Road Racing track throughout the summer season.

But that's not all that makes the course something special.

Located in Independence Township on the grounds of the Oakland County Sportsmen's Club, the track is unique because it's the only one in America owned by the members who race there, said Ted Wollesen, a Waterford Hills Road Racing board member.

"These people are very serious about what they are doing," Wollesen said. "This is the best run course that they can go to."

Races are conducted the last weekend of every month from May through September for registered drivers. The track offers courses to teach people how to race each spring.

This spring, Waterford Hills graduated 57 new racers.

Once the drivers test out the course at 27-year-old Waterford Hills track, they're hooked.

The family atmosphere only adds to the attraction. For example, Wollesen's wife, Mary, also drives at the course and their children help out in the pits.

The thrill of racing provides the driver with a feeling beyond description, Wollesen said.

"If you get into a car with terminal cancer and when that green flag drops, you're cured!" he said.

While auto racing does provide plenty of excitement for the driver and the spectator, dangers do exist.

Safety is the number one priority for all the members of the club, said Wollesen. Each car is equipped with a fire extinguisher, roll cage and full seat belts. Drivers are required to wear protective racing gear from head to toe as well.

The harder curves are lined with rows of tires to cushion cars should they run off the track.

A typical weekend competition starts Saturday morning and ends early Sunday evening. All of the drivers are allowed time on the track to warm up their cars and then qualifying heats are conducted to determine the starting positions.

On Sundays, drivers once again get to warm up their racing machines but there are no qualifying

[See WEEKEND, Page 23]

Ted Wollesen makes a few final adjustments to his car before heading out on the track for Sunday's race at the Waterford Hills course.

Time out

A new idea

Peter Auchter

Many people often wonder how columnists come up ideas for the things they write about week after week.

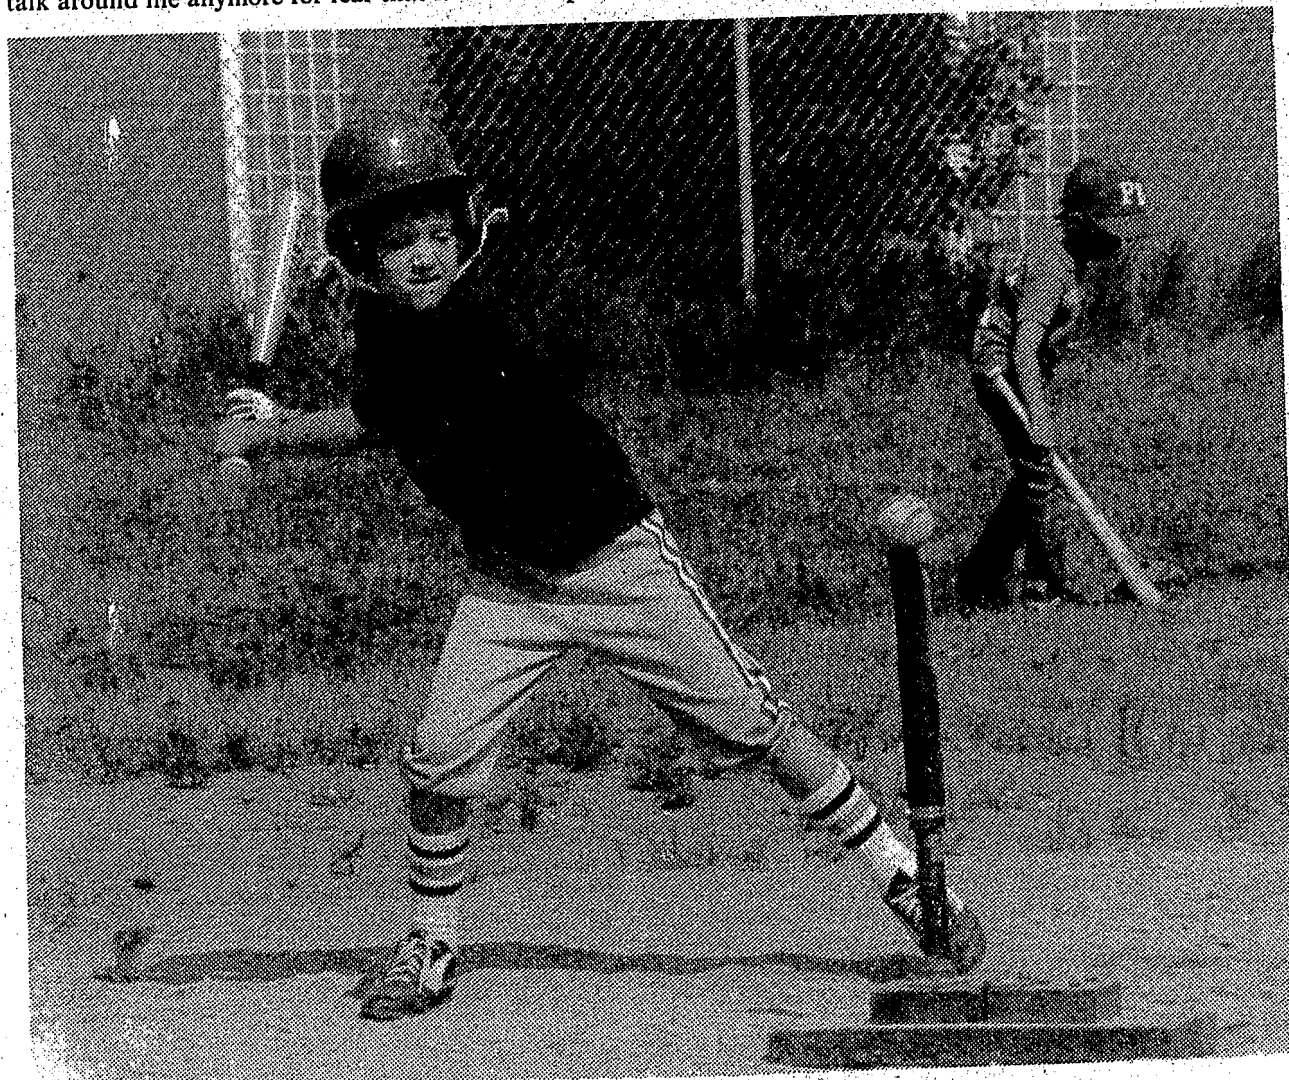

My friends and family don't wonder where most of my material comes from—they know. I get it from them.

It's gotten so bad that some of them won't even talk around me anymore for fear that it will end up in a future column of mine.

This week, I'm ready for a change of pace. I promise to leave my friends alone for a while and pick on somebody else. After all, I wouldn't want my personal well of ideas to run dry this early in the summer.

That leaves my co-workers at The Clarkston News. An interesting thought was brought up during a recent conversation about sports.

BATTER UP: Aaron Saffor, of Morgan's Service team, prepares to smack the ball into play during a T-ball game against Prudential Bache.

Morgan's eventually won the high-scoring game to hand the Prudential team its first loss of the season. [Photo by Peter Auchter]

The idea was to develop a women's wrestling and a men's volleyball league. Both would probably draw a lot of interest from the general public. Just imagine what it would be like for a moment.

Wrestling is a good clean sport that's been around since the beginning of time. (How do you think Eve persuaded Adam to eat the apple?) There is no reason why a high school girls division couldn't be developed.

There might be a lack of interest at the start, but that is natural for a new program. Start it small and let it grow. There are women wrestlers in the World Wrestling Federation, so it's logical to assume that at one time they were little girls who wanted to wrestle.

Why not give them the chance to develop their skills at an early age against their peers?

The girls might even end up doing better at wrestling than the guys do now. (Maybe that's the reason behind not starting this sport!) Let's give it a chance and then decide whether it's a good idea or not.

Then imagine a real professional league for women wrestlers being formed. I think Margaret Thatcher would be a perfect person for this sport. A natural, as they call it.

The only problem would be finding someone willing to grapple with her.

The story is totally different when the talk turns to volleyball.

Men already participate in recreation volleyball leagues during the summer, so there is interest.

For some reason that interest wanes when football season rolls around.

While I'll have to admit nothing can beat a good football game on a cool and crisp fall Saturday afternoon, there is room for another sport.

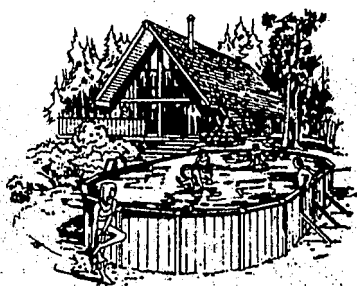

A way to interest all of those football fans in volleyball is to draft former NFL pros into the league. Players like Dick Butkus and Alex Karas would draw big ratings.

They would add new meaning to the phrase power volleyball. The league could even get Miller Lite to sponsor this new invention.

But until the day comes when these new leagues arrive, people will have to be satisfied with the sports we have now.

By the way, how many days are left until football season starts?

Soccer programs to start soon

To further promote the growth of soccer in Oakland County, Independence Township Parks and Recreation Department will sponsor youth soccer leagues.

Five age groups (under 10, under 12, under 14, under 16 and under 19) will play an 18-game schedule during the fall and spring.

Participants must play in the age bracket that corresponds with their age as of Jan. 1, 1988.

The games will be played on Mondays and Wednesdays at Bailey Lake Elementary School or Sashabaw Plains Park.

In the under 16 and under 19 leagues, games will be played on weekends.

Independence is also offering a youth instructional scrimmage league designed for children who would like to learn the game of soccer.

The five-week program will be held at Bailey Lake Elementary and basic fundamentals will be stressed. The cost is $12 and all participants will receive a T-shirt.

The league will run during September. Registrations will be taken from July 1 until Aug. 21 at the parks and recreation office.

heats. The starting position is determined by where the driver finished the day before.

A feature race that puts together cars from several different classes caps off the weekend.

Drivers race around the course 10 times (15 miles) in each competition.

"It's a pretty intense 15 miles," said Wollesen "It demands 100 percent of your concentration."

Despite breaking an axle rod in the sixth lap of Saturday's race, Wollesen finished with the best lap time in his class.

That's not bad considering the competition. People from across the state, Canada and Ohio come to compete at the track.

"We draw from about a 200-mile radius," said Wollesen, who has raced at the course for six years.

The racers who compete at the tough Waterford Hills course have a distinct advantage over other drivers when they travel to easier courses, Wollesen said.

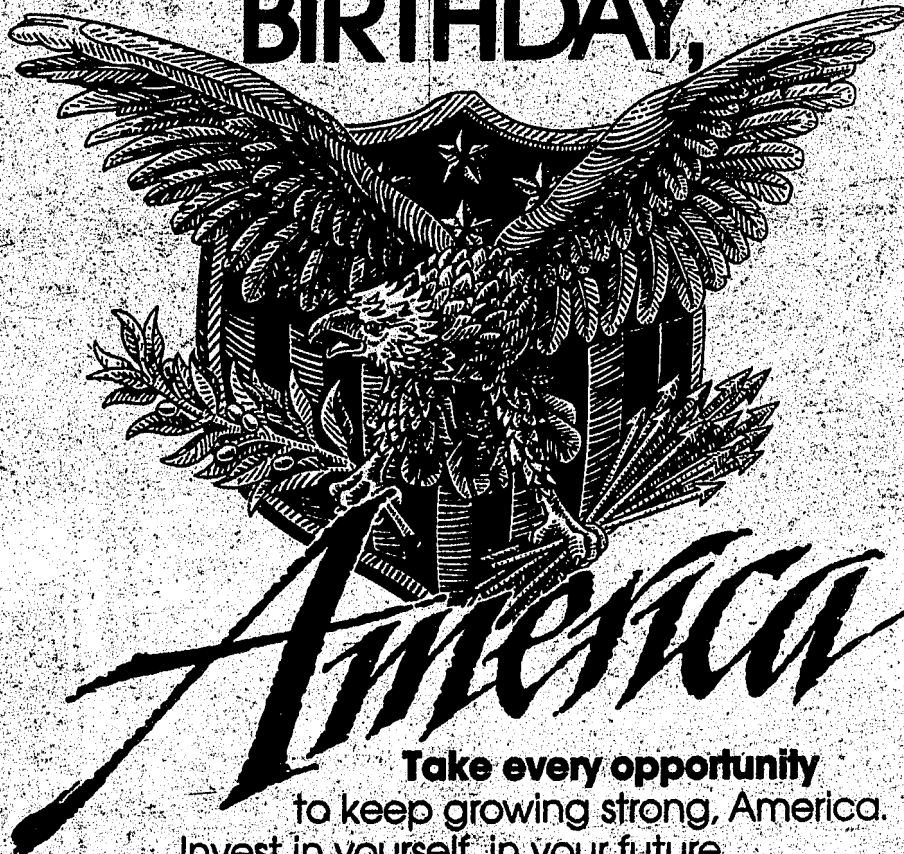

"Waterford (Hills) people do well at other tracks," he said. "It's fun to see that happen."

Barkley visits McCormick camp

For the second year in a row, kids turned out in remarkable numbers for the Tim McCormick basketball camp at Clarkston High School.

McCormick, who played basketball for the Wolves at CHS before starring at the University of Michigan and then the National Basketball Association, came home to sponsor the camp for area kids.

The week-long event ran from June 22 through 27 and was capped off by a visit from Philadelphia 76ers forward Charles Barkley Friday morning.

Barkley came to Clarkston to help his teammate McCormick, a former Springfield Township resident, explain how important it is to set goals for yourself and then do what it takes to accomplish them during the second annual summer camp.

He also used humor occasionally to get his point across to the more than 150 campers in the gym. A large group of parents were in attendance as well to sneak a peek at the man they call "the round mound of rebound."

At one point during his talk, Barkley ask for a show of hands of all the kids who were doing poorly in school grade-wise. When only one brave soul responded, Barkley said, "Well, then I guess it's just me and you kid."

Barkley went on to explain that while he didn't graduate from college, he is presently taking night classes and will earn his degree someday.

He said that the reason he left college early to play in the National Basketball Association was that school wasn't fun because he was getting poor grades.

"You have a lot more fun in school when you are doing well," he said.

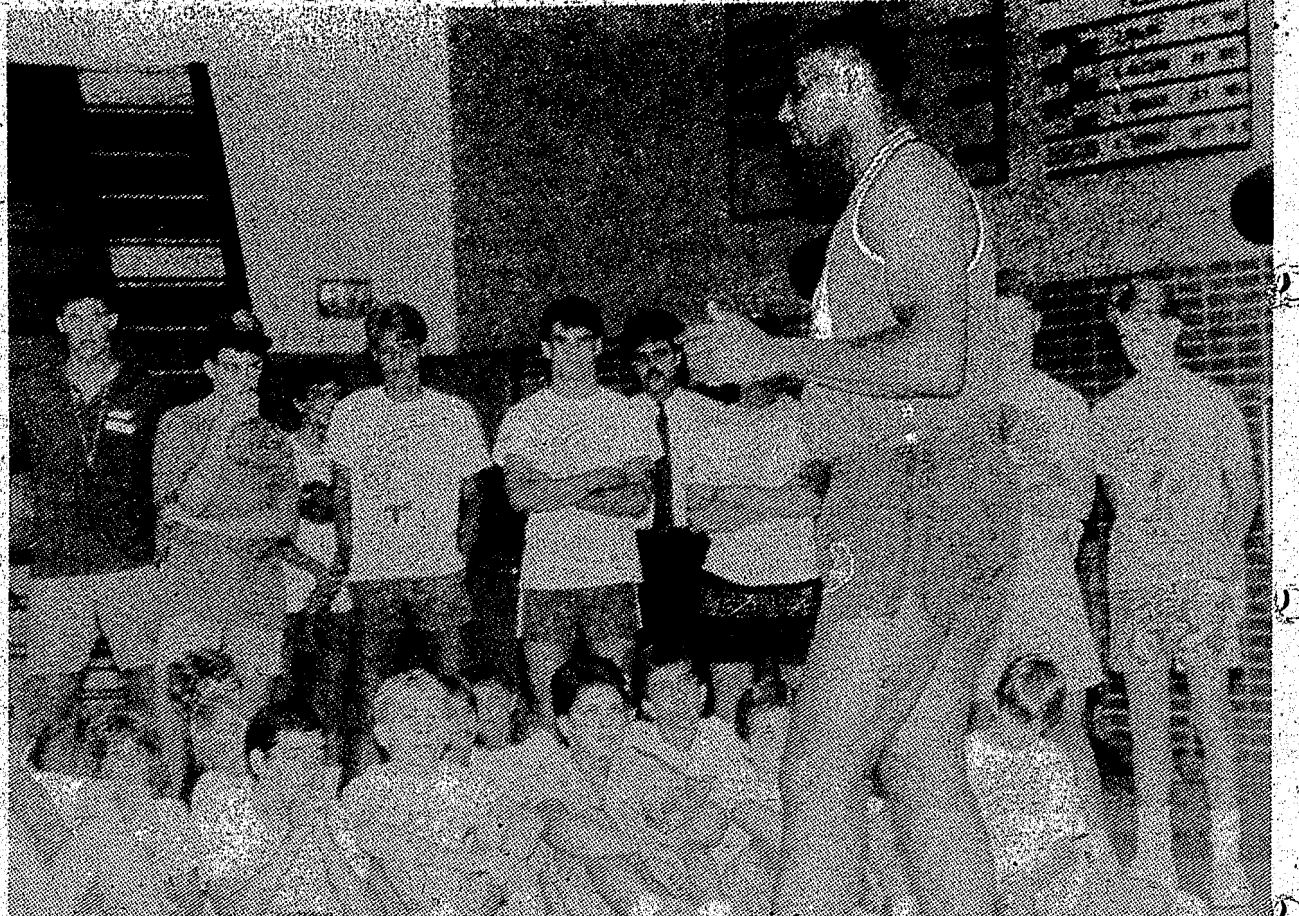

Before the speech became too serious, Barkley asked the kids if they would like to see a few slam dunks. He then proceeded his assault on the bucket—and a few of the campers.

When Barkley missed a couple of the vicious jams while warming up, the ball bounced crazily into the unsuspecting crowd—much to the delight of the kids.

Then it was time to get back to the business of basketball for the kids in the camp. Barkley handed out autographs and posed with campers for a few pictures before leaving.

Charles Barkley, a pro-basketball player for Philadelphia, visited Tim McCormick's basketball camp at Clarkston High School Friday to provide a little inspiration for area children.

Fireworks facts stress cautious approach

The Chinese are accredited with the discovery and development of fireworks nearly 2,000 years ago. Since that time, fireworks have been enjoyed by people all over the world.

The day we usually associate fireworks with in the United States is July 4th, Independence Day.

Unfortunately, over the years many people have been burned or seriously injured in some way by the misuse of fireworks.

Every year, all across the nation, thousands of people sustain injuries ranging from minor burns to amputated limbs. The majority of firework-related injuries are sustained by boys under the age of 15.

Three out of five injuries caused by fireworks are due to the actions of the user.

Young children who have gained access to fireworks are often unaware of the potential danger associated with them and use the fireworks in a careless manner.

Fireworks that are thrown at playmates or placed in bottles and cans may result in serious injury.

Tampering with fireworks to make a larger explosion can backfire on the user. The resulting fireworks may be very unstable and create an explosion much greater than expected by the user.

Accidents also occur with illegal fireworks that have not been inspected and tested for quality and reliability by the government or trade associations.

Illegal fireworks are unpredictable at best and the user is asking for trouble from the moment of purchase.

If you choose to use fireworks, follow these safety rules very carefully:

- Make sure that the fireworks you purchase are within the law and have been tested or checked for quality.

- Examine the fireworks carefully for the manufacturer's name and for sturdiness of construction and fusing.

- Any fireworks that appear old or are leaking should be avoided.

- Always read the safety directions with any fireworks before using them.

- Don't let children of any age use fireworks without adult supervision.

- Use fireworks outdoors only in an area clear of flammable materials.

- Light only one firework at a time.

- Keep a bucket of water nearby for emergencies.

- Faulty fireworks that didn't explode or go off when lit should be soaked with water from a hose or pail. Do not pick up fireworks that don't go off or explode. Wait or use water.

- Never experiment with fireworks. Avoid taking them apart and mixing them together, and don't put them in bottles or cans before exploding.

The above report was provided by the Oakland County Cooperative Extension Service.

Be alert to lawn mower hazards

Several safety tips can reduce accidents related to lawn mowing, said Gar Wilson, acting fire chief of Independence Township.

From the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, the tips for riding mowers are:

- Drive up and down slopes, not across.

- Avoid sudden turns; slow, wide turns reduce the chance of tipover.

- If the machine stops when you are moving uphill, disengage the blade first, then back down the hill slowly.

- Don't allow children on the mower. Make sure children are out of the mowing area and supervised by an adult.

- Before backing up, look down and behind the machine. Children are often attracted to the mower and the mowing activity.

- Keep guards, shields, switches, and safety devices operational at all times.

- Clear lawn of objects such as rocks, toys, wire, etc., which could be picked up and thrown by the blade.

- Finally, read and follow the operator's manual. Riding lawn mower accidents result in 75 deaths and 18,000 hospital-treated injuries a year, said Wilson.

Tips for walk-behind mowers are:

- Keep children out of the mowing area.

- Keep guards, shields and safety devices operational, and remove any objects on the lawn that could be thrown by the blade.

- When mowing on slopes, always mow across the slopes, never up and down.

Walk-behind rotary lawn mowers were involved in 37,000 hospital-treated injuries in 1986, said Wilson.

College grad is glad she attended NWOVEC

BY KATHY GREENFIELD
Clarkston News Editor

When Natalie Potvin, 23, was a sophomore at Brandon High School, she decided college wasn't in her future.

Now a graduate of Western Michigan University, Kalamazoo, Natalie smiles as she remembers that time and the decision she made to attend the Northwest Oakland Vocational Education Center (NWOVEC) in Springfield Township during her junior and senior years in high school.

She has never regretted the decision to learn advanced secretarial skills.

"I tell everyone when they say, 'You went to vocational school?' I learned more in two years there than I did in the four years I went to high school," she said.

The statement is not a criticism of high school, Natalie said, but it is high praise for the vocational school that serves students from the school districts of Brandon, Clarkston, Holly and Waterford.

Natalie's father, William, is the principal of Clarkston Elementary School. Her mother, Kay, is a legal secretary. Her father had some influence on Natalie's decision to attend NWOVEC.

She can remember him saying, "All Natalie wants to do is get married and have kids." It was true, she said, she was serious about a young man she no longer sees. But career preparation was on her mind as well.

She can also remember her dad telling her about the vocational school, but she doesn't recall any undue pressure.

"My dad doesn't push me into anything," she said. "He advises and lets me think about it and I decide."

Her decision came after she attended a NWOVEC visitation day sponsored by her high school.

"It was so clean and so nice, and everyone seemed to be working independently. They told us you go at your own pace," she said.

Natalie worried about leaving her home high school for half of each school day—she didn't want to miss any high school experiences.

But looking back, she said the experience allowed her to grow in unexpected ways.

Besides enhancing her typing skills and providing an introduction to computers through an accounting course, both of which helped in college, NWOVEC provided an opportunity to enhance her social skills.

"It's like college, in a way, where you have a lot of different people from a lot of different backgrounds," she said, and it was good to expand her circle of friends with students from other school districts.

The instructors at NWOVEC insisted on professional behavior. The students had to punch a time clock, perfect attendance was rewarded and the wearing of jeans and T-shirts was discouraged.

"It helped me grow up," said Natalie. "You realize you can't get off wearing jeans and T-shirts at work so why should you at high school?"

"They still let you be kids," she added, "but it's an excellent transition."

When the NWOVEC students graduated from high school, they didn't have to wonder, "Now what am I going to do?" Natalie said.

By that time, she had decided college was her goal. She also had a secretarial job, which she obtained after Bob Olsen of Oakley-Olsen and Associates of Clarkston called the school and asked for students to interview.

She kept the job during summers throughout her college years.

Her first year, Natalie went to Oakland University, Rochester, where she majored in business. The next year, she transferred to Western Michigan University, Kalamazoo, and started out as a child psychology major before switching to elementary education.

As a recent graduate, she's looking for a teaching job. Meanwhile, Natalie has found a full-time job using her secretarial skills at a medical insurance billing company in Troy.

"If I hadn't gone to vocational school, the (secretarial) skills I have wouldn't have been polished," she said, adding that when she interviewed for jobs, people "were shocked at the skills I had."

NWOVEC Principal Daniel Manthei said he would like to see more college-bound students who develop vocational skills beyond the handful of courses offered in high schools.

"This is something we have tried to stress to parents—going to college doesn't preclude learning a skill and learning a skill doesn't preclude going to college," he said.

Natalie is "a classic example of a student who's done both," he said.

Natalie Potvin's part-time secretarial job at Oakley-Olsen and Associates of Clarkston provided a summer income during her college years. She got the job when she was a high school student at the Northwest Oakland Vocational Education Center in Springfield Township.

Clarkston karate kids go to Korea

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Although they couldn't stomach the food, three Clarkston area Tae Kwon Do students said their trip to South Korea was exciting.

Reese Vogel of Fawn Valley Drive, Mark Fry of Paramus Drive and Ian McCloskey of Snowapple Drive were three of 70 Tae Kwon Do students and instructors who recently took a trip to the northeast Asian country for the International Conference of Martial Arts.

The trip was sponsored by Kiel Soon Park, president of the International Council on Martial Arts Education, and he wants the American students to return in '88 for the games if he can get them tickets.

Park and Joe Sanders, the Clarkston students' instructor, are friends and that's how Sanders found out about the trip.

The Clarkston students enjoyed their short eight-day stay in South Korea, even with the bad food.

"I'd like to go back someday," said Fry, 16, who will be a senior at Clarkston High School in the fall.

The one problem with the food—besides the way it tasted—was the menu, Ian said. They were served the same dish seven days in a row.

The group took off from Detroit June 14 and returned June 22. The flight to South Korea took 21 hours, with stops in Denver and L.A.

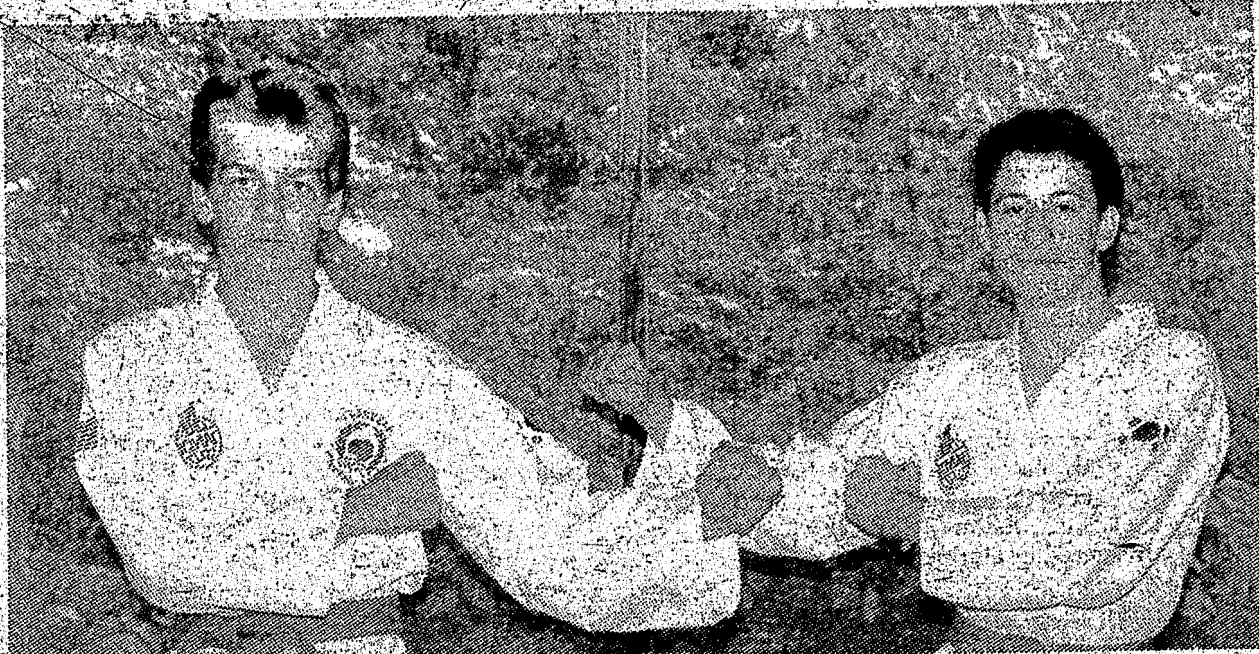

In between, the students saw both the good and bad side of South Korea.

Some of the highlights were their visit to a Buddhist temple in the mountains and dinner with the vice president of the country.

The lowlights were maniac drivers, uncovered sewer holes and riot police patrols.

The group didn't see much rioting, said Vogel, but the site of riot police was unnerving all the same.

Besides the sightseeing, the student group also visited Tae Kwon Do colleges in South Korea to attend demonstrations, where the American students for eight days in June to find out more about Tae Kwon Do.

Reese Vogel (left) and Mark Fry were just two of the 70 Americans who traveled to South Korea

were shown just what it takes to become a true champion in the sport—the hard way.

"I was thrown by a gold medalist," said Vogel, 14, of his experience at one of the demonstration camps.

The group visited Kukkiwon, the headquarters of the world Tae Kwon Do federation, to witness a exhibition by 8-year-old students.

The display of talent just reinforced the American students' idea of what Tae Kwon Do is all about.

"It's not your typical sport, but it's a lot of fun," said Ian, who just finished school at Pine Knob Elementary.

The students covered a lot of ground during their stay in South Korea, seeing both ancient temples and modern facilities.

One of the new places the group visited while in Seoul was the stadiums to be used for the upcoming Olympic games. One of the old was a Buddhist temple in the mountains that held a mammoth-sized statue.

Before they left Seoul, the group went to the shopping district to pick up a few souvenirs. Items like T-shirts, shoes and radios were hot sellers.

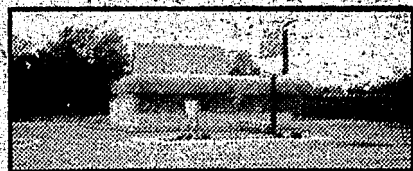

Soon it was time for the group to head back home with a new appreciation for the little things in life.

"I was glad to get back to good old American hamburgers," said Fry.

Friend to friend

Am I fickle?

AWARE

Dear Friend to Friend:

I have been dating a boy for a year and he's perfect. He adores me and never cheats on me, but I'm bored and I'm attracted to other guys.

Should I break up? How do I know if this is the right relationship for me? Or am I just fickle?

Fickle or Bored?

Dear Bored:

What you're feeling is not at all unusual. One of the problems is that it is difficult for teenagers to just talk to each other about how they feel.

For instance, you may just feel like you're missing out on meeting and being with (or even dating) other people.

One alternative is to reach a compromise where you break up your steady relationship, even though he may be near perfect, but you continue to date each other. This option would allow you to date other boys as well.

If you start a discussion about breaking up, be prepared to accept the consequences. You may lose your boyfriend altogether because he may not be able to accept any alternative relationship.

We think you should follow your heart in this decision. You can't follow anyone else's advice (including ours) when it comes to your love life.

Dear Friend to Friend:

I just found out my parents haven't loved each other for many years and now they are talking about a separation, maybe even a divorce.

My brother and I have talked about this and we wonder how we can keep them together and what we can do to help.

We knew they didn't get along all that well, but we never thought they didn't love each other or that they would split up. What can we do?

Confused

Dear Confused:

No matter how old you are, it still comes as a shock when you find your parents don't love each other.

You should not, however, play the role of marriage counselor and try to patch up their relationship. Also, you should avoid being dragged into the middle of their fighting as they terminate their marriage.

You will perhaps remain confused and in conflict for many months about their feelings toward each other. But don't take sides and don't be tempted to give advice to either one.

There are some things you can do. Be aware that you will have many feelings as a separation and divorce proceeds. That's natural and normal.

Be sympathetic to both but don't get involved in either their fights or in trying to keep them together.

Talk frequently to your brother and compare notes about feelings and how both of you will survive during this period.

If necessary, both you and your brother could have a session or two with a psychotherapist to assist you in sorting out your feelings and emotions.

Good luck—we know it won't be easy.

Letters to Friend to Friend are answered by a panel of Clarkston High School students working under the sponsorship of Aware, a community group devoted to action and education against chemical dependency.

Students can submit letters by placing them in the designated "problem locker" at CHS, Clarkston Junior High or Sashabaw Junior High. The problem lockers remain available for use during the summer.

Letters can also be sent to Friend to Friend in care of The Clarkston News, 5 S. Main, Clarkston, MI 48016.

Clarkston composer shares music

BY JULIE CAMPE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Even Bingy, one of Mary Conklin's cats, loves music. Mary's love of music is contagious that way.

A music teacher in Clarkston schools for eight years and past music director for the Church of the Resurrection, Mary loves to share her music, especially her compositions.

But she was surprised when Bingy became interested.

"When I go into the music room to play the piano, the cat will come in and either crawl under the chair or the piano or sit on my lap and listen," said Mary.

When she used to teach piano in her home on Northview Drive, Independence Township, Bingy would come in and sit if an advanced student was playing. Bingy would stay away if a beginner was playing.

"She has very discriminating taste," said Mary.

Mary began playing the piano when she was 5 and now also plays the flute and organ. She was born and raised in Bryan, Ohio, and moved to the Clarkston area 19 years ago after studying music in college.

"At that time, I thought (composition) was easy and fun," she said, but she had only written music for school assignments.

Then, while she was an aide for SCAMP in Clarkston, they needed little songs to teach specific concepts to 5- and 6-year-olds, so Mary whipped up a few.

As a teacher at Clarkston Junior High School, she created them as needed.

Her church gave her the opportunity to compose her favorite types—sacred choral music.

Two weeks ago, while studying music at Vander-

Fourth of July decorations delight motorists

BY KATHY GREENFIELD
Clarkston News Editor

In the beginning, Joan Bachor tied yellow ribbons around the old oak and other trees surrounding her Stickney Road residence.

She was following the yellow ribbon welcome-home tradition that became popular when the American hostages from Iran returned to the United States in 1981.

A year and one-half have passed since Joan's first yellow ribbon was tied, and son Paul is no longer in the Navy but son Phillip is still a Marine. Now when the yellow ribbons go up, Phillip's friends know he's coming home.

Joan didn't stop there. She continued decorating the Independence Township roadside for Halloween, Christmas and Easter.

Her latest endeavor involves the latest holiday, July 4th.

"Uncle Sam is up," said Joan when she called The Clarkston News. "It's certainly been a car-stopper, I'll tell you."

"I have this mannequin—of course I had to turn her into a man," she added. "She still looks kind of feminine. If you get up close, it's hysterical."

The night before, right after Joan put up the display of flags and Uncle Sam, laughter from people in stopped cars could be heard in the Bachors' home.

That's fine with Joan. She's pleased that her work is giving others pleasure.

A favorite story involves a family that lives down the road. When Joan's Easter display was up, the young children and their mother made daily outings to see the Easter Bunny fashioned from stuffed garbage bags.

Joan's husband, Sylvester, "gets a kick out of it," she said. He won a photo contest at work with his pictures of her Christmas display complete with Santa Claus, plastic candles and large boxes wrapped in foil.

Her mother-in-law Irene Schimantowski, who lives with the Bachors, helped out with Uncle Sam by sewing the red and white striped trousers and blue jacket.

Eventually, Joan said she would like to decorate for all the holidays, including Mother's and Father's Day.

She stores her decorations in the barn and garage rafters and has plans to accumulate more—especially Christmas items.

"I keep hunting garage sales for people who want to get rid of that stuff," she said.

The mannequin used for Uncle Sam was a real find. Joan bought it at a garage sale for $1.

A former nurse, Joan Bachor fills her days gardening, caring for the horses, pony and rabbits—and decorating her front yard on Stickney Road for the holidays.

bits—and decorating her front yard on Stickney Road for the holidays.

View from on high

David Kwasnick

Senior! It's finally time to be a high school senior! It's sort of a fitting term, "senior." In one sense, it can be thought of as high school's last act. A time of confidence because you know that, at least for this year, you are on top.

It's also a time for that proud distinction that comes with being a senior—a distinction of achievement that all other classes, whether it be in sports, school activities or class rivalries, for the most part, respect.

And it's time for relief. The kind of relief you feel when you smile upon seeing a sophomore or junior because you know that they're still going to be here when you won't.

"Senior," however, can be applied in a much broader sense. It can be thought of as the end of an era—an era in which to look back upon your years as a "kid," for you know this is one title you will not hold much longer.

Senior, in this sense, can be thought of as the last stop before you are, like it or not, given your independence.

Unlike other times, this independence will not mean being able to stay out until 2 in the morning or throwing a party when your parents are out of town.

It will mean making your own decisions and having to live with them.

Whether in college or pursuing a career, it will be a time for self-reliance, when you determine your own success or failure.

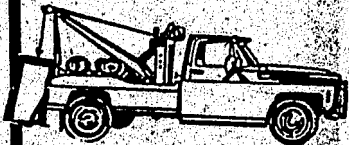

When you think about it, all this can be quite scary. But therein lies the beauty of being a senior; it does not have to be dealt with . . . yet.

David Kwasnick begins his senior year at Clarkston High School this fall. He also writes for Wolf Tracks, the CHS newspaper.

Music is constant companion

Cook College in Chicago, Ill., Mary created another piece.

"Most people when they go on vacation take their bathing suits and towels. Well, I take my staff paper and pen," she said.

It was a whimsical composition that the whole group performed before she left.

"It was fun," said Mary.

Writing comes naturally for her now.

"I've found the best way (to write) is to find a quiet area away from the piano, so I can hear it in my head," she said. "I go to the piano later and correct the little mistakes."

"I have to clear my mind of everything else that's going on in my life," she said. "Once I clear my mind, it's filled with music, and it's very easy to compose."

It's just having the persistence to finish it.

For Mary, music is a constant companion.

"There's always music going through my head," she said. "If I take a walk, I hear tunes, usually something I'm creating."

"Creative expression is so exciting. I enjoy teaching. . . . I enjoy playing the piano. I enjoy performing. . . . but there's something special about being able to create," she said.

One of her goals is to study further in composition and to be published one day.

"It's so personal, I'm not sure I'm ready to put it out in the public yet," said Mary.

When Mary finds herself on the listening side of music, classical from early renaissance to contemporary is her preference, especially Vivaldi.

"There's a simplicity to his music, and yet it's beautiful," she said.

But Mary likes all kinds of music.

"I . . . find the popular music written today is more complex than the '50s," she said. "The harmonic chord structures are more advanced. They're more interesting to perform and listen to."

"Kids today love the music of the '50s. For some reason, it's very singable for junior high school kids," said Mary, adding she always includes at least one song from the '50s in her students' repertoire.

Mary is creative in other ways as well. She likes to paint and would like to study that subject as well. She writes some of her own lyrics, and she enjoys reading.

"My day is incomplete if I have not spent at least half an hour reading," she said.

When they have time, she and her husband Keith and children Todd, 14, and Keith, 12, like to travel all over the United States.

Mary always takes her staff paper and pen.

"Music is my job, but it's also my hobby and my life, almost," she said. "I thoroughly enjoy music. I never tire of it."

First grade's her favorite

by Dorene Cutshall

An Apple for the Teacher

Lucille Richley, a first grade teacher at Pine Knob Elementary, grew up as the youngest of nine children near Arcadia, Mich.

After teaching in Arcadia and Bloomfield Hills, Mrs. Richley came to the Clarkston schools. She and her husband, Walter, live in Waterford.

Lucille Richley's teaching career spans 33 years.

Educationally, Mrs. Richley received her bachelor's degree from Wayne State University, Detroit, and her master's degree, which includes a specialization in reading, from Oakland University, Rochester.

She has continued enhancing her education by involving herself in many on-going workshops. She enjoys incorporating new-found activities to make learning really fun. Chisanbop is one such activity used in computing math.

Although Mrs. Richley has taught all grades from kindergarten through the eighth grade during her 33 years of tenure, she enjoys teaching first grade the most. She has held that post for 16 years.

"It is the thrill of observing young minds grasping concepts and using learned skills that will influence their lives that makes teaching such a rewarding and enjoyable endeavor," she says.

Mrs. Richley leads a busy life alongside her teaching career. She particularly enjoys traveling.

She has traveled in England, Scotland, Mexico, the Caribbean Islands and throughout the United States. Currently, plans are being made to visit Hawaii.

In addition to traveling, she enjoys cross country skiing and aerobics. She also participates in many activities of her sorority, Alpha Delta Kappa.

Because of Mrs. Richley's concern about substance abuse by and sexual abuse of today's youth, she participates in a program called BABES (Beginning Alcohol and Addictions Basic Education Studies).

The program is primarily geared to educating children about the dangers of substance abuse and to recognize the elements of sexual abuse.

Mrs. Richley and her husband are actively involved in their church, St. Stephen's Lutheran. She teaches vacation Bible school and Mr. Richley has served on various boards of the church.

The Richleys have two children, Brenda and Brian. Brenda is a graduate of Concordia Junior College and the University of Michigan with a degree in music. She currently lives in Ann Arbor and is busy being a wife and mother to the Richleys' three grandchildren, Christine, Laura and Ian.

Brian is employed by Midwest Millwork, the family business which specializes in architectural millwork.

To sum up, Mrs. Richley is a busy and dedicated educator.

An Apple for the Teacher is provided through a committee of the Clarkston Education Association. This week's author is Dorene Cutshall, a fifth grade teacher at Pine Knob Elementary School.

Push for perfection

BY ALISA NASS

Clarkston News Special Writer

When buying a custom 1966 Corvette Roadster three years ago, Gregg and Vickie Marble of Brandon Township never imagined they would become so fussy.

This past winter alone, they spent $3,000 just on chrome for under the hood. "Any part that has Corvette on it is expensive," said Vickie.

"Every stone chip you get taking it down the road is like a mortal wound," said Gregg, and to repaint a car could cost $3,000 to $4,000.

"It's really funny what the car has done to us," said Vickie. They can't wait until May and the first nice weather to take the car out on the road. "It makes you feel like a teenager."

If they had to move, the house would have to be on a paved road, said Gregg.

Prior to owning the Corvette, living on a dirt road wouldn't have been a factor, but dust has become a concern.

It takes two days of cleaning in order to prepare the car for a show, said Gregg. Even when you get to the show, the job's not finished. The couple of hours before the judging is spent removing the dust from driving and attending to last-minute preparations.

All aspects of the car, including under the hood, are considered by the judges. "You wash under the hood and wax part of the motor," said Gregg. "On our regular car, the only time you open it (the hood) is to check the oil."

"You could eat off anything under the hood of the car," said Vickie.

"People actually take toothpicks and pick the stones out of the treads of the tires. That, I thought I would never do," he said. By the second show they attended, he did.

The most recent show the Marbles entered was the 11th Annual Concours D'Elegance in Independence Township on June 28. The show was sponsored by the Clarkston-based North Oaks Corvette Club, of which the Marbles are members.

The club, which has around 60 members of all ages, is active in parades, shows, fundraising for charity and "cruising," which is driving around as part of a group.

The Marbles are looking forward to participating in more of the club's activities this summer.

Last year, their time was limited due to the building and opening of their restaurant, Country Coney Express, in Ortonville. In addition to the restaurant, the couple work at Tuff-Kote Rustproofing and Seco Products Truck Equipment in Pontiac, businesses owned by their families.

Gregg and Vickie Marble of Brandon Township prepare their 1966 Corvette Roadster for a competition at the 11th Annual Concours D'Elegance show sponsored by the North Oaks Corvette Club. The Marbles took home the first place trophy in their class.

Christine Forton is joined by her daughters, Andrea, 5, and Laura, 2, in front of a display some of the items she sells from the Country Home Collection.

Different home parties

BY ALISA NASS

Clarkston News Special Writer

Almost everyone is familiar with Tupperware or Mary Kay home parties.

Christine Forton of Olde Sturbridge Trail offers home parties of a different sort. Her parties feature homemade, antique reproduction items by Country Home Collection.

Response has been very positive, she said. The Country Home Collection company is based in Warren, Ohio, and recently started to nationally advertise its items in country magazines.

What's new in business

"Everything is really quality," said Forton. "There's a price range for everyone."

Among the collection's offerings are American Heritage Woodenware, 19th century baskets, Friendship Pottery Spongeware and salt-glazed ware. Prices range from $10.99 to $79.99.

The Friendship Pottery Spongeware, a dinner service, is microwave and dishwasher safe, said Forton.

"It's something that not only looks like an antique, but can be used," she said.

"I had my first open house to let Clarkston know I was here May 2," she said. Since then Forton has been busy. "I have constant bookings, I've done shows as far away as Mt. Clemens to Holly."

Forton, her husband, Jim, and daughters, Andrea, 5, and Laura, 2, moved from Macomb Township to Clarkston in January.

"Because of the kids, I have been limiting myself to two parties a week," she said. The shows are always at night so her husband is able to watch the children.

"My motivation is to start slowly and then eventually open up a shop in Clarkston," she said.

Forton first became interested in being a consultant after giving a home party. She is the only consultant for the company in the area.

"I decided I wanted to own my own business, pick my own hours and decided I wanted to invest in it," she said.

Art at the Water's Edge, a craft show at Campfire Camp Oweki on Gulick Road off Waldon Road on June 27 and 28, is Forton's first craft show.

Brenda on beauty

A beautiful person

Brenda Ward

Lately, I keep thinking of an incident that happened in early spring.

My grandmother was visiting from out of town. She came into the salon one day for a visit with me and a facial. After her facial, she had her hair cut and styled by one of the stylists.

When Grandmother was finished, she did look wonderful, relaxed and radiant.

After Gran left, the stylist excitedly came to talk to me. "Your grandmother is a remarkable woman," she said.

I was a little surprised. After all, I had warned the stylist in advance that after being a hairdresser and educator for almost 50 years herself, my grandmother could be quite picky if not downright difficult in the chair.

"Yes, you did an excellent job with her hair," I replied.

"No, not what I did to her. She is a beautiful woman. What a great spirit and courage she has. I've never met anyone like her," the stylist said.

As she was speaking, I knew it was with genuine sincerity. And then I thought about Grandmother . . . a lot.

She is a small lady, only about 5 feet tall. Her once extremely shapely figure is now softer and slight. Her hair is a lot thinner now and she has resigned to accept all the gray without coverage, not because she's any less vain. It's just easier that way.

She sits tall and proudly with back straight and shoulders held high, despite a radical mastectomy. It's just a sign of victory over cancer. She's since worn a bathing suit in Hawaii.

Her walk has slowed a little and sometimes if she's tired, you can detect a little limp. She generally uses a cane.

You certainly would never know that the leg was not hers but a prothesis from the knee down, just a symbol of a determined battle to walk again from bed to wheelchair to walker to cane.

She triumphed over amputation surgery and months and months of rehabilitative therapy. She didn't always smile, but she kept her chin tilted toward heaven.

Sometimes they were filled with tears, but her eyes always sparkled. "Walking is too important, and after 70-some years, I've gotten pretty used to it," I'm sure she reasoned.

Her skin is soft as butter smooth leather. I only count the crinkles and lines around her eyes and mouth as measures of how much she's laughed or cried over children and grandchildren and the passing of life and lives.

She is beauty personified.

One of my hobbies is antiques. People are going mad over antiques these days. Ripples and cracks in depression glass are desirable. Distressed paint or lacquered finishes add character.

The older a piece of art, furniture, jewelry, the more valuable. Even brand new worn-looking blue jeans are among the most expensive.

Beauty, indeed, is in the eye of the beholder. When we look at our elderly and as we evaluate age on ourselves, we should think not of decline or fading glory.

Stop to recall all the moments and events and loves and lives our elderly have experienced. Then you may be able to smile.

Look fondly on some of the visible markers of time. Lines, wrinkles, laughter, love, life.

As antiques become fragile with time and require tender care, so do we with one major difference. We will always be more priceless. Next Wednesday, you will be older. Have a beautiful week.

Brenda Ward, a Waterford Township resident, works in Independence Township as a skin care specialist, makeup artist and manicurist.

Readers with beauty questions can write to her in care of The Clarkston News, 5 S. Main, Clarkston, MI 48016.

Learn about Indians

Inquiries about Indians have resulted in the purchase of two books by the Clarkston Community Historical Society for the Independence Township Library.

The most common Indians in the Clarkston area were the Potawatomi and there was some Ojibway influence, said Jennifer Radcliff, historical society president.

Now on the library's shelves are "People of the Three Fires" about the Ottawa, Potawatomi and Ojibway Indians of Michigan and "Atlas of Great Lakes Indian History."

"It sort of fills a gap in people's resources. I have been asked (about Indians) so many times and I know about as little as anybody," said Radcliff.

The books join between 150 and 160 purchased by the historical society for the library.

They were ordered through the Historical Society of Michigan using the local society's discount.

"This is the first time such good-quality Indian books have come up," Radcliff said.

The Pioneers of U of D-Clarkston

Of the campus's 23 first graduates, 15 were there from the beginning

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Among the many students at the University of Detroit's commencement exercise in May stood 23 unique individuals—the first graduating class from the school's Clarkston campus.

When the university opened for business in the Colombiere Center four years ago, 25 students enrolled at the rural Jesuit campus.

Fifteen of those original 25 students graduated this spring. Three others transferred to the campus downtown on McNichols and completed the course work for their degrees at the same time as the 15.

One of the original students—they called themselves the Pioneers—was Independence Township resident Dan O'Neill.

O'Neill lived in the dorms at the McNichols campus one year and then transferred to the Clarkston campus when it opened since it was closer to home.

Good times were a big part of the experience at the rural campus, said O'Neill.

"I'll never forget it," he said of his college days.

O'Neill said the small size of the university helped the learning process more than hurt it.

"Since everybody knew each other the discussions usually were pretty deep," he said. "They were more to heart than at the other campus."

During the university's first year only one class

"Since everybody knew each other the discussions usually were pretty deep. They were more to heart than at the other campus."

—Dan O'Neill

was taught at a time and all 25 students attended. That allowed time for lasting friendships to develop, O'Neill said.

An annual event for the students at the Clarkston campus was to put together a float for the Fourth of July parade. They have done this for the past three years and O'Neill said they will gather again later this summer to do it one final time.

Since the campus was located in a remote area far from the exciting nightlife that a big town can offer, the students had to find other things to do.

The students put together an annual Halloween party and invited students from both the Clarkston and McNichols campuses. Last year the party drew more than 200 people, said O'Neill.

O'Neill also formed a ski club at the university and last winter members took trips to various resorts for a little fun.

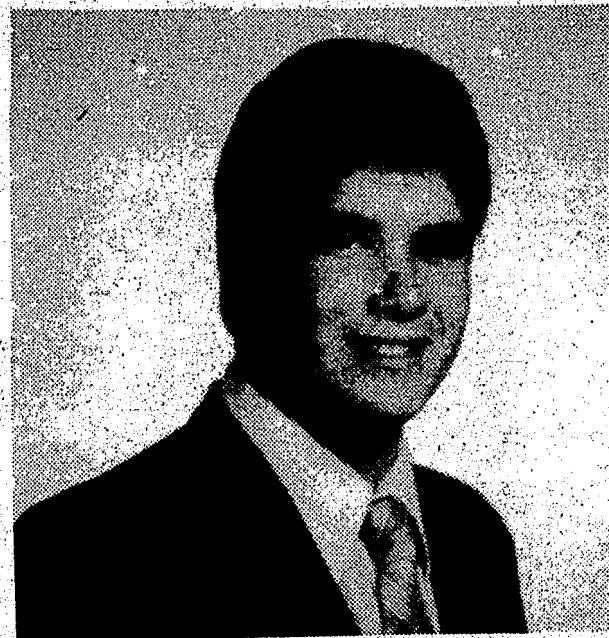

The Colombiere Center had a gym that the students could use and allowed them to play softball and football on the outdoor fields.

All of the special activities didn't stop for these students when classes began. The small student body provided an excellent teacher-pupil ratio.

"Help is always there if you need it," said O'Neill. "The Jesuits are incredible people. They devote their lives to the students."

A typical day for students at the Clarkston campus was starting school at 8 a.m. and finishing shortly after noon. They would go to school Monday through Thursday.

"The schedule was definitely arranged for the commuter," said O'Neill.

The U of D Clarkston Campus was perfectly suited for active students like Independence Township resident Dan O'Neill.

But while all the students commuted, there was no lack of communication between the students.

One thing O'Neill will miss most about his days at the Clarkston campus was the socializing that occurred at the end of every school week.

"The pressure was off and we talked about what we were going to do on the weekend," he said.

The weekend before the graduation ceremony May 16, the members of the Clarkston campus had a party at the Main Event restaurant in the Silverdome.

Assistant Director Martina Kuechle read off all the graduates' names before the banquet dinner and then the group watched the Reds Wings-Oilers playoff game on television.

Now that graduation is over, O'Neill plans to take a little vacation to California but it will be hard for him to forget the good times he had at the Clarkston campus.

"I enjoyed seeing the campus grow," he said. "It's been a unique experience."

23 make up first graduating class

University of Detroit's Clarkston campus started out small, but four years later it's picking up steam.

The university enrolled 25 students during its first year of operation and has added 25 more each year.

Currently 120 students are enrolled at the school, said assistant director Martina Kuechle.

The only degrees that can be earned without attending the Detroit campus are liberal arts and business administration degrees, but students in other majors can attend the university and then transfer elsewhere.

A student could major in economics, for example, and take all but five courses at the Clarkston campus, said Kuechle.

The university site may be different, but students get many of the same advantages as their counterparts in Detroit.

Professors from the McNichols campus travel out to the Clarkston location at the Colombiere Center to teach the classes.

"You have to give those teachers a lot of credit," said one of this year's graduating students, Dan O'Neill. "They were shuffled around and some really had to move around a lot."

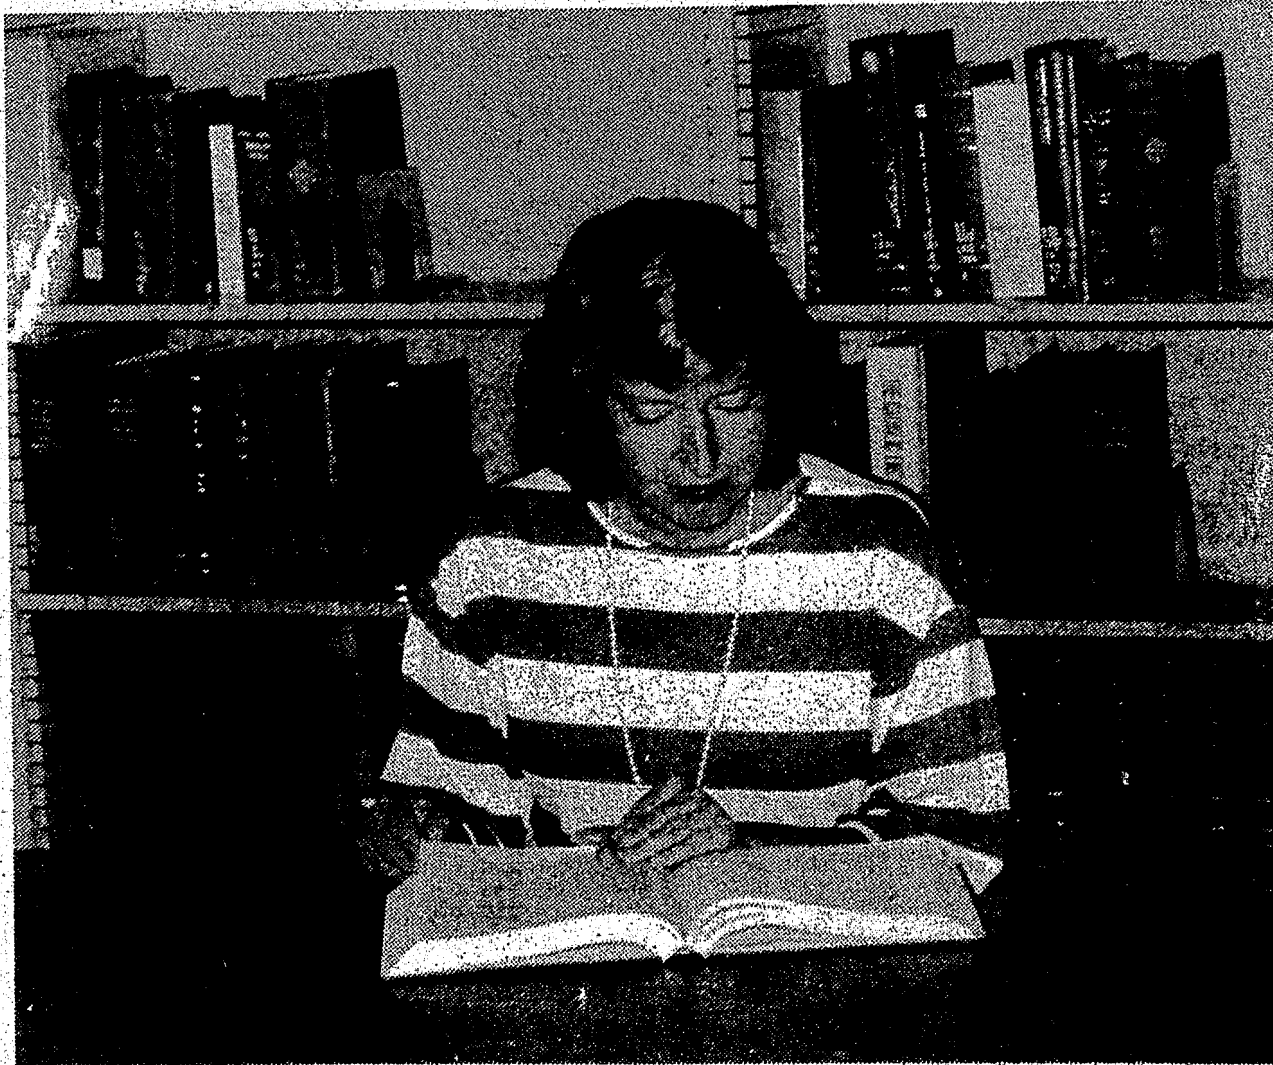

Some Detroit campus students liked the atmosphere at Clarkston so much they enrolled in a few courses, said Kuechle.

But a lack of publicity helps to keep the university from the public's eye.

"It's not uncommon for people to say they haven't heard of us before," said Kuechle adding that the first graduating class should help boost enrollment.

The following is a list of the 23-member first graduating class from the U of D Clarkston campus. Of the 25 students who started in the program four years ago, 15 graduated this spring.

Jacqueline Bell, Patrick Berryman, Kathleen Black, Darrin Campbell, Michael Ciaciuch, John Dumas, Frank Gorski, Paul Harrington, Michael Houston, Jill Johnson, Gabriel Locher, John Lucier, James McAlindon, David McCatty, Mary McGough, Daniel O'Neill, Kenneth Perry, Sara Pidd, Carolyn Schulte, Paul Slifco, Ann Rene Telmos, Tracy White and Randall Wilkins.

Assistant Director Marty Kuechle studies one of the many books in the University of Detroit's Clarkston campus library. A librarian is on the full-time staff during the school year.

The giant swing attracts all ages Friday during the Summerfest at St. Daniel Catholic Church on Holcomb Street, Clarkston. Clowns gave free helium-filled balloons, and children ate cotton candy and won all sorts of prizes in the carnival games.

At the carnival

As the merry-go-round passes, Derek Barker, 3, smiles at his grandfather from Florida, Bud Barker.

Though the ride spun round and round, it didn't scare Racheal Bird [left], 8, of Heath Avenue, Independence Township, and her friend Leslie Salyer, 10, of Dayton, Ohio.
