

Cityhood?

Village pursues change

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Pressure from the growing township that surrounds it may force Clarkston to incorporate so it can "preserve the unique character of the village."

Petitions were recently circulated in the village requesting that the State Boundary Commission consider the incorporation of the village as a city to be called the City of The Village of Clarkston.

All seven village council members signed the petition as citizens of the community along with 135 other people.

The State Boundary Commission was created to investigate requests to incorporate cities, said Trustee William Basinger.

"It is our understanding that the commission will first review the petitions for legal sufficiency," he said.

Should the commission agree with Clarkston's request, the commission will schedule a public hearing on the issue in the village within 220 days so all interested parties can voice their opinions.

If the commission approves cityhood and 5 percent or more of registered village residents request an election on the issue, one would be scheduled, Basinger said.

Passing a charter is one of the things Clarkston would have to do if it were to become an incorporated city, he added.

The main goal of incorporation would be to preserve the village.

"It's to protect the village's rights," Basinger said. "It's not the township's fault" it is growing so fast.

A village council resolution reads in part: "The village council supports the view of the petitioners that cityhood may be necessary to preserve the unique character of the village in the face of inevitable growth in the surrounding township."

Chamber endorses school tax hikes

The Clarkston Area Chamber of Commerce has taken a positive stand on the 5.5 mill operational increase and the 5.2 million dollar building renovation bond issue for Clarkston schools that will appear on the June 13 ballot. Eleven of the 18 directors on the Chamber board were present as were several other Chamber members when the board unanimously supported a motion to endorse the millage increase and bond issue.

"It was brought up at our (May 5) meeting by a group of the directors who thought it might be nice to take a positive public stand on (the school election)," said Chamber President Bruce P. Mercado. "This not only affects schools, but property values, businesses and the entire community."

"Even though the Chamber represents the business community, it reaches out into other areas of the community," he said. "We feel we represent both business and private sectors."

Mercado said the board hopes that by publicly announcing this endorsement, their opinion will encourage voters to vote yes.

Layoffs to occur if millage fails

BY PAT YOUNG
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Thirteen non-instructional school employees will be laid off by the end of June. The Clarkston Board of Education authorized the layoffs Monday night, completing staff reductions necessary by the end of this school year.

Five clerks will be laid off effective June 17: Kathy Garwood, Patricia Nienstedt, Carolyn Gill, Sally Curry and Marjorie Carlsen.

Five media paraprofessionals will also be laid off effective June 17: Shirley Condron, Martha Wilson, Doris Britt, Patricia Brewer and Sally Inman.

One custodian, Steve Partlo, will be laid off effective June 30, and two bus drivers, Valerie Hudson and Phyllis Pendley, will be laid off on June 17.

The layoffs are necessary, according to Superintendent Milford Mason, because of the overall financial posture of the district, anticipated reductions in state aid funding and program cuts which will result in less staffing.

If voters approve 5.5 mills for operational purposes on June 13, which would increase taxes by $5.50 for each $1,000 of assessed property valuation, board President Janet Thomas said she anticipates that most, if not all, of these employees would be reinstated.

If the millage is approved, it would also mean reinstatement of most teachers cut from the payroll at last month's board meeting.

Twenty-nine of the 38 teacher cuts are due to the financial posture of the district, Mason said. The remaining teacher cuts were due to decreasing enrollment at Northwest Oakland Vocational Education Center and the expected return from leave of higher seniority teachers in other Clarkston schools.

Evening hours offered for voter registration

The last chance for voters to register in time for the June 13 Clarkston school election is 5 p.m. on Monday, May 16.

To make it easier for those who can't register during the day, an evening voter registration is scheduled for Thursday, May 12, from 7 to 9 p.m. in the lobby of North Sashabaw Elementary School, 5290 Maybee Rd.

Representatives of both Independence and Springfield townships will be on hand to register people that evening.

Voters may also register during regular hours at any Secretary of State office (there is one on Dixie Highway in Independence Township), at the Independence Township office at 90 N. Main St. in Clarkston, or at the Springfield Township office, 650 N. Broadway in Davisburg.

Cafe plans expansion into adjacent shop space

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Patrons of the Clarkston Cafe soon may have a Deerwood III plat change is praised

Deerwood III received a quick and unanimous approval for a revised tentative preliminary plat May 3 from the Independence Township Board.

The board approved the first plan in March, but after developers negotiated further with two adjacent property owners, they returned with a "better" road configuration.

The agreement solved a dispute over a private road easement, which would not have allowed the improved road configuration. The change also added five lots for a total 160 lots on the 182-acre parcel off M-15, north of I-75.

Township Planner Richard Carlisle said the planning commission originally favored the new plan and was disappointed when the developers and the property owners couldn't agree initially.

Trustee Carol Balzarini, who also serves on the planning commission, agreed.

"This went back and forth at the planning commission," she said. "I think we can call this Deerwood III, Part III."

Developer Stewart Mahler said nearly all of the 240 lots in Phases I and II are sold.

"If development stays strong, this would be a three-to five-year development. But who knows," he said.

A tentative preliminary plat shows the intentions of the developers and includes the layout of the roads, utilities and lots. Two additional township approvals are required before construction can begin.

much shorter wait for a table during prime eating times.

The village council gave site plan approval May 9 to an expansion proposal made by Lee McNew, who owns the restaurant at 18 S. Main street along with her husband Patrick and father Don Hayes.

McNew purchased the building next to the Cafe at 14 S. Main Street on April 18 with the thought of expanding the dining area of her restaurant.

Two seven-foot high openings would be made in the present wall separating the two buildings to provide access. There would be no access from Main Street to the addition except as a fire escape.

Currently, the Cafe uses about 15,500 square feet of space. The addition would tack on about 4,000 more square feet.

The basement of the addition would remain empty and the three apartments upstairs would also remain the same.

The only issue the village council and planning commission discussed before approving the plan was the question of whether or not there was enough parking to handle the extra customers.

The planning commission said it was properly zoned.

"It's an existing building in existing use so it fits the zoning," said Chairman John Stuetzer.

Using an engineering formula that divides the number of square feet by 400 to determine the proper number of parking spaces required, the Cafe had more than enough, the village council decided.

"I am not asking for additional parking," McNewsaid. "Just extra seating."

Most of her business usually occurs after regular business hours anyway so disturbances of neighboring businesses would be minimal, she added.

The addition would house only a dining area and no kitchen facilities. Approximately 40 extra persons could fit into the new part of the building, McNew said. The Cafe now seats about 85 people at capacity.

Most customers who would fill up the addition are presently waiting in line outside the door and using up parking spaces so the parking problems would not increase if the proposal is approved, she added.

"I think that people would like more seating," she said.

She also said that the Cafe would be more than willing to maintain the parking lot behind the building as it always has in the past to alleviate people's fears.

"We attempt to keep the parking lot lovely and always sweep it," she said.

McNew must obtain a building permit before beginning work on the project. She had no idea when it would be opened.

Health care chaos

Doctor speaks out about problems facing medical field

BY JULIE CAMPE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Clarkston pediatrician James O'Neill is concerned over the chaotic state of health care in this country, and he says it will get worse before it gets better - although it will get better.

As the trend leans away from private health care, patients are losing their individuality; doctors are losing their rights to treat patients as they see fit; costs are skyrocketing; payment from government and insurance companies are becoming more restrictive; technology has surpassed ethics and morality; drugs are ravaging society; children are malnourished and neglected; the mentally ill are ignored; and enough money is not spent on preventive measures such as education, he said.

Adding to the confusion are blues, greens, HMOs, DRGs, IPAs - "alphabetic soup," as O'Neill terms them.

Between patients during the night shift at the Clarkston Ambulatory Care Center, M-15, O'Neill talked about the progression of health care and what may lie in the future.

A poignant moment characterizes the entire movement in medicine, said O'Neill. He was visiting an elderly priest in a hospital, and the priest asked, "Do I have enough DRGs?"

A DRG, or Diagnosis Related Group, is a method of payment from government and is based upon the diagnosis rather than the length of stay and services rendered.

Other health care systems use similar types of payment, said O'Neill. Now a patient is a member, and a doctor is a provider.

"We've begun to put generics on everything," he said. "That's sad to me. We all grew up in the practice of private medicine, and ultimately that's the best system in the world."

Even the Soviet Union has always had a private medical system, but the payment is potatoes and sausage, he said. Around the world, national health care systems, such as Great Britain's, are collapsing.

"That doesn't mean that national health care systems can't work. You can't leave it all to the whim of a bunch of bureaucrats," O'Neill said.

To sort through the many aspects of health care, the circumstances of today should be put into perspective, he said.

Of the great hallmarks of medicine - the discovery of germs, anesthesia, antibiotics and the standardization of medicine - the most recent is the flashy field of "glitzy machinery" of "magic lanterns" - scans and ultrasounds, said O'Neill.

They're needed and necessary, he said, but it's a double-edged sword. To cover every base and to prevent malpractice suits, the expensive tests are ordered frequently.

Also, young students are attracted to the magic lanterns because it's a chance to make money - rather than the primary reason of the old days - the chance to help people.

"The glamorous parts of medicine are getting very often the best and the brightest and the most affluent," said O'Neill. "We need our smartest and best kids out in the trenches."

Medicine has become so highly technical that a chasm has developed between the practitioners and the patients, he said.

"I don't think it's reasonable to give care to a 90-year-old terminal cancer patient who doesn't even want it when around the corner there are kids who haven't had their vaccinations. ... If that were rare, I'd say terrific. But it's not."

Dr. James O'Neill has been in practice for 27 years.

Technicians replaced some of the roles of physicians, and in the cracks, medical malpractice crept in, driving the costs of medicine even higher.

"All of a sudden, our technology has totally outstripped our morals and ethics and everything we know," he said.

As an example, O'Neill cited giving expensive laser and intensive care for 95-year-olds.

"We're giving unwanted, unnecessary, expensive care to people who don't need it and don't want it. ... Nobody knows when to quit. I'm not talking euthanasia. I'm saying this person has dignity," he said.

"I don't think it's reasonable to give care to a 90-year-old terminal cancer patient who doesn't even want it when around the corner there are kids who haven't had their vaccinations. ... If that were rare, I'd say terrific. But it's not."

Some insurance regulations don't allow certain procedures, such as organ transplants, after a certain age, such as 65. But every patient is different, and treatment should depend on the individual, he said, adding bureaucrats are trying to ration care and are losing common sense in the process.

"Nobody wants to take the responsibility for an individual decision on an individual person. ... Now it's a benefit, whether it's a benefit or not."

Treatment, or benefits, are designated by groups who don't know the particulars of the individual. That type of decision-making runs contrary to physicians in practice, he said.

"(Physicians) have enough guts to look you in the eye and say, 'I think you have this, and I think you need this.' They like being doctors. They like being a friend and a confidant. They don't like being a provider."

"It happens because people don't say, 'This is my doc, and my doc will send me where I need to go.'"

The ultimate decision in medicine has become an economic one, when the most important person is the patient, O'Neill said.

"Let the medical profession take back their territory. Doctors have got to take control of medicine. We don't like people telling us we've got three days. What's supposed to happen in three days? Is the patient going to die?"

"Everybody is trying to do a quick fix. That just breaks my heart. But people know if you care about them. They know we're caught in the system. They're frustrated. They know in their guts it's not working."

A symptom of the trend is that parts of the population are receiving no care; a few are receiving intensive care; and people are losing track of the root of the problems, he said.

"Medicine has outstripped our economics, the cost of doing things for everybody, not just the privileged or the poor because they've always been looked after - it's the middle people.

"People will pay $20,000 for a bypass but wouldn't pay for a high school education to teach things that would prevent cardiovascular disease in the first place," he said, listing no smoking, low salt, low fat, exercise and proper nutrition as prevention.

While the system will probably worsen in the short term, the long term will probably be an improvement, he said.

"I'm confident ... because big (insurance) companies are losing tons of money because they're not focusing on the primary thing - taking care of the patient."

"Everybody is trying to do a quick fix. That just breaks my heart. But people know if you care about them. They know we're caught in the system. They're frustrated. They know in their guts it's not working."

Two segments of care need more attention - mental health and pediatrics, he said.

Increased mental health care could solve drug, prostitution, AIDS and economic problems, he said.

"Drugs are scourge in this country that is a worse threat to our well-being than anything that has ever happened. And AIDS is connected."

"They're going to take down our society. I'm not a bleeding heart, but I know that you can't take 37 million people and not help them."

Alcohol problems are astronomical, he said. "When people can least afford us, they need us the most - when they've had a mental breakdown, are out of a job," he said. "Most doctors are there."

In addition, he said, "Some people don't fit into our society, and we don't know what to do with them."

For example, there's no treatment available for the child molester.

"I don't know where they belong. We don't know how to treat them," he said.

With children, suicide is a big killer, and still psychological treatment isn't widespread. Eventually, the children become adults and may become addicted to drugs or may not adjust to society.

"We're not investing money in these people at a young enough age," he said.

As a solution, public education and medical care should be considered together, he said.

"If you're not socially, psychologically, spiritually, educationally intact, there's not a h-- of a lot we can do for them," he said.

Discrepancies in health care used to occur because of racial problems, he said.

"Now, it's the haves and have-nots. People just don't care anymore. They're willing to pay money to welfare to keep them out of sight."

Without education, the welfare system will perpetuate itself.

"People from lower economic groups just don't have the access to our profession," he said. "It's the money."

Of physicians, less than 3 percent are black and minorities.

"The only breath of fresh air I see - a lot of women, which are natural care givers, are filling our ranks," he said.

On the up side, problems are becoming obvious. (See COMMON SENSE, Page 19)

Lot split raises residents' ire

Neighbors protested the splitting of a 2.5-acre parcel into three lots, but the Independence Township Board unanimously approved the plan last week.

The preliminary plat for the property on Olde Oaks Road at North Eston Road met all ordinance requirements and the board has no control over deed restrictions, board members said.

Further, said developer Lynn Kacy, the platted lot is not covered in the deed restrictions for the rest of the neighborhood, which limits minimum lot size to 2.5 acres, despite the township's single family residential zoning that allows a 15,000 square foot minimum lot.

Residents were frustrated at the split and voiced their concerns.

"We moved from Rochester to here so we could be in a country setting," said Bob Stewart of Olde Oaks. "... This is going to end up just like Rochester. The road can't handle the traffic. Last year was a disaster because of the snow. ... It's really unfair to the rest of the residents."

Olde Oaks resident Tim Ameser said the board was acting within its legal bounds but should still help the residents with deed restrictions.

"I'm very concerned with what's going to happen to my property values," he said. "It's just going to deteriorate that area. We bought it, thinking it would be an open area."

Trustee Dale Stuart said, "I'm not unsympathetic. ... I don't know that we have a choice."

Trustee William Vandermark agreed.

"It would be much more in keeping with the character of the neighborhood if this could remain a large parcel," he said. "... I don't think it can remain that way because of the zoning."

Kacy plans to build on two of the lots or to sell them.

A house already exists on one of the lots.

A tentative preliminary plat shows the intentions of the developers and includes the layout of roads, utilities and lots. Two additional township approvals are required before construction can begin.

Opinions

Roomy room

Kathy Greenfield

We have living rooms, dining rooms, bedrooms, bathrooms and kitchens. These room descriptions have remained virtually unchanged as long as I can remember.

The room I'm most curious about, since its name is still under evolution, is the rumpus room, recreation room, family room, which has most recently become the Great Room.

No one I know says "rumpus room" anymore. Too bad. I was rather fond of the phrase. The definition of rumpus is "noisy disturbance," so the name apparently described a place where people could cut up a bit; get noisy, fast dance, bounce on the furniture, and so on.

Classical music and knickknacks had no place among the rumpusing going on - so in massive communal agreement, we quietly dropped the awkward "rumpus" from our vocabularies.

Recreation room was a bit more sedate. One would have to have a pool table, dart board, checker board, chess board and a shelf or cupboard full of games. When the TV and stereo were added, it must have been too noisy to concentrate on the other things.

Ditto for family room, although in those one could imagine a family with nine children and a place for getting together and talking, playing games or snacking.

Probably people without families, or at least without nine offspring, refused to even consider calling a room a family room.

So now the label has changed to something decidedly nebulous. What does Great Room mean, anyway? Is it a room large in size, a room that's simply wonderful - or what?

Most great rooms that I've seen have been huge - large enough to allow for a rumpus, for recreation, for several generations of a family to gather together.

But when people say, "Let's sit in the great room," it's all I can do not to say, "This room is just great," and then try to find some reason to move somewhere more cozy.

Given the choice, I'd rather visit the parlor.

A mother's stream of consciousness

Carolyn Walker

Mother's Day, heck. What a Mother's Year this has been! I got a baby and bifocals in the same time span, not to mention a heavy infiltration of gray hairs.

All chores aside, the ultimate in maternal experiences has got to include the juggling act I performed during the last 12 months: A teenager's love and social crises, a 10-year-old's monthly series of "there will only be a half day of school tomorrow due to teachers in-service" and an infant's feeding and sleeping schedule.

To think that people have the nerve to ask me, "Do you work?"

Why, in just the last two weeks, I: threw a pajama party for eight, dug up the front yard, sent my middle child off to camp without finding time to label her possessions, went to 20 women's clothing stores seeking a dress for the ninth-grade dance (and I don't even have a date yet), sat in several doctors' offices and got my third rejection slip for a story I wrote.

I also: fought with our insurance company, took my son to get his first picture taken (he fell off the platform and smacked his face), conducted two interviews, attempted to diagnose the rattling noises our old car is making, had my mother-in-law for dinner, took my oldest to buy her first pair of heels and gained three pounds.

In addition I: cleaned and dusted the teenager's room (desperation), plunged the toilet, hit five garage sales and one flea market, looked for our missing (and presumed run-over) tiger cat, fixed the bathroom door jam, reglued several fallen bathtub tiles, took my other daughter to get a new leg brace, thatched the lawn, listened to the Voice of Doom (a.k.a. The Perfectionist), counseled the love-stricken teen and attempted to get my son off the bottle per doctor's instructions (as you can probably guess, the doctor's a MALE).

My son does not want to give up his bottle, that icon of plastic and rubber. He also does not want to eat his baby food meals.

He prefers, instead, an appetizer of bite-sized Legos (the 10-year-old's) followed by a five-course meal of cat tail (Siamese flavor), kitchen floor dust, carpet fuzz, filet of sole (of shoe) and news of paper.

When he can get it, he also enjoys dining on the teenager's makeup, with a chaser of toilet water.

This boy has many other endearing qualities. He's the only family member who can locate long-lost items (for example, he this week located a singular, missing-for-months M&M under a six-foot pile of the teenager's dirty laundry).

Where his sisters sometimes fail, he shuts cupboard doors (10, 15, 20 times in a row. Bam! Bam! Bam!), flushes the toilet (10, 15, 20 times in a row) and empties the garbage pail (Hmm. What's in here?).

Mind you, I'm not complaining. I wouldn't exchange these maternal experiences for anything in the world, not even a highly coveted anchor-woman position.

There's nothing quite like the sounds of children's voices: "Mother, get him out of my room. He's drooling on everything!"

"Can we get a dog?"

No.

Jim's Jottings

Jim Sherman

Automobile makers cause considerable commotion when they bring out a new car. In recent years these model introductions have given more emphasis to letters of the alphabet. The emphasis isn't new, of course, we've had the Model-T forever.

TR-7, K-body, IROC, XT, T-1,000, and RX-7 are some of the current issues. Most often letters with sharp sounds are used. K. X. R. The Ford LTD sounds crisper than MLU. No one would buy a Ford MLU.

Now then, since the car companies have the harsh letters cornered, and newspapers need better identity, I'm proposing that newspapers adopt a new set of initials each year and announce them with fanfare befitting the return of the Studebaker.

We would keep our true name, but we'd add a letter, letters, or go really hog wild and put a number with 'em.

We'll go with soft letters and nondescript numbers. No 1,000 or 6,000, 7 or 1. We don't want to be as pushy as the car people with our attention compeller.

I think I'll announce The Oxford Leader-UOL 385 in late September or early October. That's as close as car companies come to naming their introduction date. Many have gotten so far away from a fall introduction they have new models in January, May and August.

It probably has something to do with Japanese, Mexican and German holidays.

"U-or O-wn L-eader, 385 days a year". We'll add on 20 days or 60,000 miles, whichever comes first.

The Clarkston News 521 AOW has a nice feel to it. "Start sending me the 521 AOW", the more astute weekly newspaper observer will say.

Initials and numbers don't have to stand for something any more than RX should be taken to mean Rated X; though that could have been the initial suggestion at an ad agency brainstorming session.

Maybe we could get into rhyming with the fall introduction of The Lake Orion Review. The Review U-2? Naw, the U-2 lost its usefulness when that spy plane went into Russia.

Better, The Review Is 4 U. Makes a great bumper sticker slogan, and it's soft enough so we won't have to worry about car company lawsuits over infringement into harsh letter copyrights claims.

Our Auburn Argus, "THE" weekly newspaper of Auburn Hills, should adopt a set of numbers-letters befitting its high-tech surroundings. Trouble is, 'tech' calls for harsh letters. "The XKTR Argus" would surely attract a lot of tire kickers.

That's really too crisp for such a young newspaper. Besides it doesn't stay with the creamy sounding letters I feel newspapers should adopt. We want to reflect the image of smooth running and long lasting, not the 'built-in obsolescence' cry car owners have been heard muttering as they near the end of their 48-month payment schedule.

So, give me softness of an N, an E, a W and an S.

Chamber support Kids deserve best

The Clarkston Area Chamber of Commerce has officially taken a positive position on the upcoming Clarkston schools millage proposal and bond issue, which faces the voters on June 13.

At the regularly scheduled board of directors meeting, which was held on Thursday, May 5, the directors unanimously supported a motion to endorse the 5.5 mill operational increase and the 5.2 million dollar building renovation bond issue.

The entire Clarkston community, which includes the retail, commercial, office, real estate and residential interests, will all benefit from voter approval of these proposals.

We hope that by publicly announcing this endorsement, our opinion will encourage voters to vote yes/yes on June 13.

Clarkston Area Chamber of Commerce
Bruce P. Mercado, D.D.S., president

Kids deserve best

Beware property owners! Want to get hit where it hurts? Do not support your school millage and observe as property values skyrocket downward!

Want to get hit where it really hurts? Neglect your communal responsibilities; do not support your school millage and observe as you spoil the Clarkston children's chances of obtaining secure, quality education.

This is fact. If the millage does not pass, the Clarkston children will be attending schools whose class sizes are too large, whose extracurricular activities are substantially decreased, whose accreditation with colleges and universities throughout the entire country is damaged.

The Clarkston community has strived for and achieved excellence on many occasions - this is not a community working toward adequacy. The Clarkston children deserve an excellent education and certainly more support from their community.

If your discontent is with taxes and/or educators, take it to the administrative meetings. Don't take it out on the Clarkston children. Come on!

Please, understand that when you decide the fate of the millage, you are deciding the fate of Clarkston children. Consider who prospers and who is really hurt.

Read every word

Be informed - read all of every article. Clarkston News 4/27/88.

Headline: Board cuts 38 teachers from payroll. In large print: We're laying off people because we can't pay them. It's not because we don't have the kids.

In regular print reasons given are expected decline in enrollment at the vocational school and some of the 38 are being replaced by the return from leave of higher seniority teachers.

HOW MANY POSITIONS ARE ACTUALLY BEING ELIMINATED?

Don't count those retiring, taking leaves or shifted to another position. A new twist has been added for this promotion. BRAINWASH GRANDPARENTS in front of their grandchildren during their special day at school.

I am a Clarkston graduate, our four children as well, and we have grandchildren in the system. Caring people will respond but only to true need, out in the open and no hidden facts.

Done our share

I think the presentation on Grandparents Day at Pine Knob Elementary was in very poor taste.

Most of these grandparents live on less than $10,000 a year, and they didn't need to come to this program and made to feel guilty because some teachers are being pinked-slipped.

Most of us have paid school taxes for more than 40 years and have done our share. We have needs, too, and need to count our pennies. If we can't pay our taxes, we lose what little we have left.

There is no millage vote for Mr. and Mrs. John Doe, because they can't make ends meet. We can not afford more taxes.

Not disappointed

Thank you for sending a reporter/photographer to cover our 9th Annual Spring Fashion Show. The students were anxiously awaiting the day when the newspaper came out to see if any of their pictures would be in the newspaper.

They were not disappointed! Several of the students brought The Clarkston News to class to show their pictures to the other students.

Thanks again for covering our show and making several students elated to see their pictures in The Clarkston News.

Rebuttal reaction

In reading "Letters to the Editor," the rebuttal letter concerning the anonymous letter of the preceding week caught my eye.

I was dismayed by the letter written by a member of the Independence Township Planning Commission. It wasn't a letter requesting a change in the anonymity policy of The Clarkston News, but a guise to fire off a volley at an organization called COG.

If Carol Balzarini has a problem with this organization (COG), then she should just come out and say so and discuss that issue as she deems fit. If the letter was not signed, as it wasn't, then how does one know that it was written by a member of COG?

One in Ms. Balzarini's position should be well aware that it is most important to have all the facts (who wrote it) before one makes a judgment ("is one of COG's so-called 'surveillance team'").

Innuendoes are not facts. I am not a member of COG, but I am a registered voter.

Swings That Grow Silent in the Dew

By Tom Erickson

Swings that grow silent in the dew,
Days that grew from April to blue.
And the only sound,
Is the sound of dew;
Falling from leaf to leaf ...
Insects floating from blade to blade,
Birds, from tree to tree.
And I know,
That in this life,
I will never be,
As free.

'If it Fitz ...'

Car's
a goner

Jim

So this is how it ends, after 12 years of faithful service, in a dusty metallic graveyard. Someone should play taps.

I'd like to play taps on someone's head. That's what I thought Saturday as I stood in a tow shop storage lot, viewing the remains of my 1977 Oldsmobile, recovered 10 days after it was stolen. I have owned several two-doors and four-doors, but this was the first no-door.

Why would someone take four doors off that battered, poorly repainted old car? I wasn't surprised the wheels were missing, also the radio, CB and speakers. But those doors were beginning to rust through and were prime evidence that, as my wife often said, I shouldn't be allowed within two miles of a can of spray paint. Is there really a market for such shoddy auto parts?

Sure, according to police. My doors were most likely stolen on order for a repair shop that needed them - cheap - to restore a wrecked car for less money than an insurance company was paying. That's maddening. There would be fewer thefts if there weren't so many "respectable" businesses eager to buy bargain merchandise they know damn well is stolen.

I was surprised at how bad I felt to see my old Olds reduced to junk. To me, cars are nothing more than transportation. That's why I keep one as long as it runs decently. I couldn't care less about sleek styling, powerful engines or chic nameplates.

A car packed with memories

But when you drive a car forever, it picks up precious memories. That '77 Olds took us to California for a family wedding, with frequent stops so my youngest daughter, pregnant with Emily, could throw up. It returned me to Camp Polk, La., for the first time in 35 years, and my wife was so excited by my World War II reminiscing that she slept for two days straight.

Most eye-watering, that car was the last in which I took my mother and her two sisters out to dinner. They thought it was a grand car, and I drove it to their funerals. For me, it was a grand car, and it deserved a better fate than to be torn apart by creeps.

Patrick Stanley, an east-side businessman and New Baltimore resident, also had his car stolen. His 1987 Chevrolet wagon disappeared from Greentown on April 24. Four days later, Stanley received a phone call from a private security officer who'd seen the car parked near Rivard and Warren. He'd had no trouble getting Stanley's identification from inside the car because the front window was broken the ignition smashed and the radio ripped out of the dashboard.

A two-year-old moron could see it was a stolen, burglarized car. But get this: There were three parking tickets under the windshield wiper. They'd been written on three different days by the same officer.

The victims have to pay

This Municipal Parking Department officer did not report the obviously stolen car. If the security officer hadn't reported it to Stanley, and to police, Stanley's stolen car might still be getting a ticket a day from the same intrepid parking officer.

Subsequently, according to Stanley, a police officer said he'd have to pay the tickets. A friendly way for the city to treat a crime victim.

"I won't pay," Stanley said. God bless him. It was the third car he's had stolen in Detroit.

As for my old car, I had to pay a $35 towing fee to kiss it goodbye. Police questioned the man who pawned the golf clubs from the trunk for $10 but said there was no way to disprove his story that he'd bought them for $5 from "some guy named Larry," address unknown.

My car was stripped in a residential neighborhood on the east side. For a minute, I was naive enough to wonder why some citizen didn't observe this obviously criminal behavior and call the cops. But then I remembered the three tickets on Stanley's car, and I laughed out loud at my stupidity.

Auto theft is a rinky-dink crime in this drug-infested, shoot-em-up city. Most of the public, including Stanley, perceives Parking Department officers as regular cops, more than just "meter maids." And if a cop doesn't give a damn about your missing car, why should a citizen?

SCAMP Home Tour tickets go on sale

A peek into the past and a look at contemporary lifestyles are the benefits of the Clarkston SCAMP Home Tour of six Clarkston area homes June 4 and 5.

The $50 Golden Patrons evening tour on Saturday, June 4, begins with a 6:30 p.m. registration and a 7 to 9 p.m. tour, followed by a private champagne reception at the home of Clarence and Sharron Catalo.

The Catalo home is a restored Methodist church of Italianate design and structure, built in 1873. Some of the church features have been retained by the Catalos.

The $15 Sunday, June 5, tour lasts from 1 to 4 p.m., with registration from 12:30 to 2 p.m. A complimentary reception follows at the Clarkston Cafe, Main Street, Clarkston.

Both tours begin at the registration tent in the parking lot at the northwest corner of Washington and Main Streets, Clarkston. A shuttle van is furnished for transportation.

The sixth annual tour features four historical homes in the Village of Clarkston, one historical home in Springfield Township and a contemporary home in Independence Township.

For example, the Himburg home in Springfield Township is typical of the farm homes that still exist near Clarkston, and the land deed dates to 1835.

The contemporary Orlando home near Deer Lake shows modern architecture and contemporary interior design and is set in natural surroundings of trees and water.

The Clarkston SCAMP Home Tour is sponsored by the North Oakland SCAMP Funding Corp., a non profit group. All proceeds go to operate the SCAMP Summer Program for approximately 200 children and young adults with special needs in north Oakland County.

For more information or to buy tickets, call Bunny Newmarch at 625-3330, or write the North Oakland SCAMP Funding Corp., 6590 Middle lake Road, Clarkston, MI 48016.

THE BRUNI HOME, built in 1856, is registered historically. The Main Street home was formerly owned by the Harris family, who were visited many times by Henry Ford Sr. during the '40s. The home has been extensively restored for modern use.

AWARE keeps on working to fight drug abuse

BY PAT YOUNG
Clarkston News Staff Writer

AWARE, a group with the slogan "Aware Declares War on Chemical Dependency Through Action and Education," is looking back at accomplishments since the group's inception in late 1986-early 1987 and looking forward to goals for 1988-89.

The communitywide AWARE group was formed after chemical abuse workshops were sponsored by the Chemical People and the Clarkston Community Schools. In an effort to make the fight against drug abuse even more of a community involvement, people from the schools, the Chemical People and the community banded together to form the new AWARE group.

"I think AWARE helps keep sensitivity about the drug abuse issue before the general public," said the Rev. William Schram, who, along with Katie MacKay, is spokesperson for the group.

In addition to Schram and MacKay, Barbara Burge and Mary Beth Huttenlocher round out the coordinating committee for AWARE.

The AWARE organization is open to anyone in the community who is interested in making an impact on substance abuse, said MacKay, who is coordinator of Clarkston High School's SEARCH program (Support, Education, Awareness, Resources for Chemical-Free Health).

In 1987-88, AWARE co-sponsored five students and one adult supervisor at an educational training program for positive health concepts and drug abuse prevention skills. They also co-sponsored a repeat of the successful 1986 four-day workshops on drug abuse, attended by people from many areas of the community and schools.

They raised money for fighting drug abuse through cookie sales at the Crafts and Cider Festival and through the sale of AWARE T-shirts.

They participated in Clarkston parades and ran ads in The Clarkston News to raise the community's awareness of the drug abuse problem.

They co-sponsored training of high school students to make Just Say No presentations, as well as co-sponsoring a Just Say No rally for the five Clarkston elementary schools.

They initiated a successful "Friend to Friend" column in The Clarkston News, which is done by an anonymous group of teens under the supervision of MacKay at the high school.

AWARE also compiled a list of hospitals, clinics and therapists in North Oakland County with substance abuse programs, sponsored a "Safe Home Pledge" and supported efforts at the high school to fight abuse, as well as supporting the school's SEARCH program.

"I think some of the best things we've done so far are the Friend to Friend column and the four-day workshops," Schram said. "And we are pleased to support Just Say No Clubs and help provide a link for the SEARCH program to people in the community."

Plans for 1988-89 are to continue many of the above-named projects and to add a few new ones.

AWARE wants to follow a plan developed by the Birmingham-Bloomfield Families in Action to educate merchants such as hotels, party stores and limousine services to SAY NO to high school students about all drugs, especially alcohol, during this high-risk season of proms and graduations.

The group plans to meet with the new Clarkston school district superintendent, Gary Haer, after he assumes his duties July 1, to keep positive steps in place to fight drug abuse in the schools.

They plan a large Just Say No rally to support current Just Say No Clubs and encourage the rest of the schools to start clubs.

They may publish pamphlets to educate people about substance abuse, and they plan other efforts to educate the community about the problem, possibly even a "drink-out day."

"The biggest factor in educating children is the example we set for them," Schram said.

AWARE will continue to support school activities and programs that fight substance abuse.

If the school millage fails in the June 13 election, SEARCH will be one of the victims of the budget cuts. AWARE would attempt to keep a parent group intact. The schools have substance abuse committees, but both Schram and MacKay feel nothing would replace the momentum and success of SEARCH at the high school.

"When David Toma came to Clarkston, we raised $22,000, which raised everyone's awareness about the problem," said MacKay, referring to an earlier community effort to fight the substance abuse problem. "Everyone was involved."

"Now, community involvement is needed again, and consistently," she said. "If the millage goes down and SEARCH goes down, we have to work even harder, because it's not a school problem, it's a community problem."

"If the millage goes down and SEARCH goes down, we have to work even harder, because it's not a school problem, it's a community problem."

Computer purchase to ease village printing expenses

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Instead of sending its publishing needs elsewhere at great cost, the village council decided it would invest in a computer system and do the work itself.

The village council unanimously approved spending no more than $5,000 for an Apple McIntosh SE computer and a laser printer for official business purposes.

Trustee William Basinger looked at several computers before recommending the purchase of an Apple to the village council during its regular meeting May 9.

Because Apple provides its merchandise at a discount to governments, it made good sense to purchase it, he said.

Other village council members agreed that the expenditure is a good one for the village.

"It makes the typewriter obsolete and you never have to retype anything," said Trustee Eric Haven. "It's really nice."

Another advantage to the Apple system is that it can run both Apple and IBM-based software packages. An IBM can only run its own software, Basinger pointed out.

"Apple is very big in government programs with software ideas," he added.

The village's current computer, used mainly by Treasurer Artemus Pappas, is IBM based. Since it is more than four years old, it would be too costly to upgrade this computer, Basinger said.

When the village needed to have its zoning ordinances sent out to be edited for clarity and then retyped, the village council got a bid of $6,000 for the job.

Now that the village will get its own computer, village employees can learn the Apple system and retype the ordinances themselves. Then, whenever changes are needed a new copy can be printed at minimal cost, Basinger said.

Village officials also can print out agendas and other items on the computer to speed up the process and eliminate many errors, the village council said.

The McIntosh SE complete with all the necessary equipment such as an extra disk drive would cost the village about $2,725. The laser printer costs about $1,900.

The village also may add a hard disk drive to the system to increase its memory potential so it can permanently save a copy of its ordinances on disk for easy reference.

Zoning law change nears final OK

A proposed zoning ordinance change would restrict one building to one lot in single family residential areas in Independence Township.

The current ordinance applies to every zoning except multi-family residential zoning.

The township board unanimously approved the first reading of the change. A second reading and adoption are necessary before it takes effect.

Planner Richard Carlisle explained the reasoning behind the "one building, one lot" ordinance.

"There is no correlation in the number of buildings per lot and good planning, necessarily," he said. "We have adequate control and restrictions under our ordinances and... site plan review. We do not have to have this additional burden placed on people."

In addition, the ordinance can be circumvented by splitting a lot, he said.

Path system grows

About 2,000 feet of safety paths are planned for Independence Township this summer.

An about 1,000-foot extension will connect the path on Waldon Road in front of Clarkston Elementary to Paramus Road. Village of Clarkston officials are considering extending the path to Main Street.

Another about 1,000-foot-long path is planned for White Lake Road, connecting the Dixie Highway path to the path in Clarkston, near Deer Lake.

The board unanimously approved the projects and the estimated $100,000 cost on May 3.

The money comes from the safety path fund, financed by a .5 mill levy on township property owners, or 50 cents for every $1,000 of assessed property valuation. Village residents do not pay the tax.

The 10-year safety path millage expires in 1989, and a 10-year continuation request is to appear on the Aug. 2 ballot.

State Representative's Report

'Phantom' state employees

Mat Dunaskiss

My recent discovery of two "ghost employees" in the Treasury Department prompted me to introduce a House Concurrent Resolution this week to end the practice of such "phantom" employees in state departments.

People were shocked a few months ago when a ghost employee named Fred Johnson surfaced in the Department of Natural Resources. Now I've found ghosts in the area of tax collection, and this entire matter is a serious breach of public trust.

The discovery of two nonexistent employees in the Sales, Use and Taxes Division of the State Treasury Department resulted from an investigation that my office started in response to a constituent complaint.

Bill McCardle, a businessman from my district, sold a used company car to his wife and subsequently received a threatening and intimidating letter from Treasury employee Scott Shepard.

The Treasury had placed a much higher value on the used car than what his wife paid for it and was attempting to collect additional tax on the difference. I learned that not only was there an apparent problem in how the value of a used car was determined but also that Scott Shepard does not exist.

The Sales and Use Taxes Division of the Treasury will also send a letter from Susan Sadler, another fictitious employee, if the department needs proof that a used car was sold to a relative. The owner of a used car purchased from a family member is exempt from sales tax, but the tax form does not convey that information.

Sales Tax Division employees explained that they use fictitious employee names as a tip-off and a screening system to respond to incoming phone calls.

This system may help the Sales Tax Division, but it hurts the credibility of the government tax collection system and requires a citizen to respond to a nonexistent state employee. It also adds a level of deception and complexity to the bureaucracy. To condone the use of ghost employees is to condone a lie.

My resolution to end this misleading practice has been nicknamed the "ghostbuster," and I hope that it will help to restore confidence in the tax collection area and in all departments of state government.

Bands receive highest honors

Ratings of 1, the highest attainable, in state level competitions belong to the Clarkston High School Symphonic Band, Wind Ensemble and Jazz Band, as well as the Clarkston Junior High School Eighth Grade Band, all directed by Cliff Chapman.

"So it's a clean sweep," said Roger Diederich, Clarkston Band Booster vice president.

But there's more to the story. Accolades from unexpected sources greeted the high school band members as they were traveling to and from the competitions in Grand Rapids on April 30.

The bus driver, who has driven groups in motor coaches for 22 years, said that "this is the best group he has transported anywhere," Diederich said.

At the restaurant, the manager made it a point to seek him out and say that he had never encountered "such an orderly, mannerly group."

"Those two very positive comments were nice to hear," Diederich said.

The Symphonic Band's state festival was at Godwin High School in Grand Rapids on April 30, the same date of the Wind Ensemble competition at Grand Rapids Christian South High School.

The Jazz Band's state festival was April 23 at Clarkston High School.

The Eighth Grade Clarkston Junior High School Band's state competition was May 7.

In order to be eligible for the state competitions, each band also received the highest ratings in district-level competitions.

Stonework at Lakeview

Crumbling stone walls at Lakeview Cemetery are to be repaired and two stone gateposts erected this summer.

Low bidder Creative Stone of Clarkston is to perform the work for $7,194. The expenditure was approved unanimously by the Independence Township Board.

COMPUTER WHIZZES Leif Galligan (left) and Paul Jensen won a $1,000 scholarship from the Detroit College of Business-Filnt when the Clarkston High School students placed third in the fourth annual "Copu-U-Tition 1988" contest sponsored by the business college on April 23. Eleven teams from seven high schools ranging from Holly to Flint Beecher participated. Galligan and Jensen, both seniors, won $50 apiece for solving four programs correctly in two hours. Neatness and originality were taken into consideration by the judges, they said. The students were sponsored in the contest by teachers Jim Ashmore and Lydia Kazewych.

State opts for Thumb area camp

BY PAT YOUNG
Clarkston News Staff Writer

A work and learn camp for juvenile delinquents, vigorously opposed by North Oakland County residents, will not be located anywhere in Oakland County, according to Ken Visser, Michigan Department of Social Services special adviser.

Visser said Pioneer Work and Learn Center, Southfield, has been awarded a contract to develop a 50-bed work and learn camp in Tuscola County, in the Thumb area of the state. Last week, the state approved a $4.1 million, 18-month contract for the camp.

This is a second, smaller contract for a youth camp

Common sense may work best

said O'Neill.

"Medicine has become such an enormous economic monster that the government doesn't want to touch it. ... I would hope for the first time in their lives, they'll listen to the medical doctors. The AOA (American Osteopathic Association) and the AMA (American Medical Association) have given d-- good advice.

"Organized medicine, if we're to survive in this country, we're going to have to grab the legislators by the throat and tell them that drugs, AIDs, (lack of) nutrition are ruining our country. ... We're not being our brothers' keepers.

"All the alphabetic soup isn't going to get it. Maybe we need chicken soup, common sense. ... The people know that."

approved by DSS. The first was a $7.7 million, 29-month contract for a 100-bed facility with International Field Studies last year.

A site near the community of Davisburg was considered for the camp, but residents of Springfield and Rose townships opposed the location and questioned whether the camp was the best solution to the youth crime problem.

The contract with IFS was canceled in December when the firm was unable to procure a site for the camp. Following the contract cancellation, IFS president Robert Lipsitz returned $154,731 of a $534,692.41 advance given IFS by DSS. According to Visser, the state may sue for as much as $357,592 more from IFS.

Visser said DSS had an audit done and reviewed what costs were allowable by IFS, per the contract language. The audit determined that IFS owes $272,610, allowing some costs after the contract cancellation date. But DSS doesn't feel IFS is entitled to anything beyond the contract date, Visser said, and is asking for a "bottom line" of $357,592.84.

DSS communicated all this to IFS in a letter, Visser said, asking for a refund by the end of April. Lipsitz did not respond.

Visser said that DSS intends to go to court, but will wait 90 days, per contract language, so the parties involved can try to resolve the issue.

Meanwhile, North Oakland County residents are breathing easier, while residents of the Thumb area are already gearing up to fight the location of a work and learn camp in their area.

The news that Oakland County was out of the running for the youth camp didn't come as any surprise to Springfield Township Supervisor Collin Walls.

"Once in a while, the people win one," he said. "In my opinion, this is the result of some very dedicated residents who went to bat for what they believed in."

July is music month

Music of all kinds will once again emanate from Depot Park this summer.

Free concerts in the park, sponsored by the Clarkston Area Chamber of Commerce, during the five Fridays of July were approved by the village council during its regular meeting May 9.

Three of last year's bands will be making a return engagement due to their popularity, said organizer Joan Kopietz.

The 17-piece Emil Sutt Band will open the concert series on July 1. Jacob Ramig and the Polka Lieder Band will play the following Friday evening.

On the third Friday of the month, the Len Heller band will make an appearance. The final two dates have not been filled yet.

Rezoning pass 1st test

The first readings were approved unanimously for the rezonings of two parcels of land in Independence Township.

Between Almond Lane and Walters Road on Waldon Road, 4.61 acres of rural residential, which has a three-acre minimum lot size, are to be changed to single family residential, a 15,000 square foot minimum lot size.

"It's part of an island of rural residential surrounded by a sea of single family residential," said Richard Carlisle, township planning consultant.

At most, the parcel could be platted for seven or eight lots, said Carlisle, or it could be split four times.

On White Lake Road near Andersonville Road, about 28 acres are to change from heavy and light industrial zoning to single family residential.

Owner Dan Proctor plans to request a planned unit development for about 40 condominiums and a 2-1/2-acre lake and park.

A second reading and adoption are necessary before the rezonings take effect.

Sashabaw Junior High Mason 4, Cougars 3

May 3 - Visiting Mason squeaked past the Cougars in a well-played contest, said Coach Tom Smith.

Darren Masters pitched an excellent game for the home team. He lasted seven innings and allowed four hits, struck out eight and walked just two batters. Masters also scored two runs.

Mike Stanton had an RBI hit and Tom Hackbardt collected two runs batted in off his one hit.

Sashabaw, ahead 3-2 after five innings, committed only two errors in the game but still was out-fielded by Mason.

Cougars 10, Clarkston 4

May 5 - Chris Wasilk allowed three earned runs and fanned 10 Wolverines en route to picking up a victory against Clarkston at home.

Ryan Roberts smacked a bases-loaded triple and Masters added two hits, including a triple, and one RBI. Hackbardt scored twice and collected one hit.

"We had the bats going in this one," said Smith. A six-run fourth inning broke the game wide open, he added.

George Crouch and Wasilk also got in on the action at the plate by adding a run batted in apiece.

Mike Stanton turned in an excellent performance catching for the Cougars. Batting, he had two hits and two runs scored.

The victory ups the team's record to 6-2.

Clarkston Junior High Wolverines 13, Brandon 8 (8)

May 3 - Clarkston picked up its first win of the season in extra innings.

Jerrod Johnson was the Wolverines' hot hitter. He went five-for-six at the plate and hit for the cycle (single, double, triple and home run). He also knocked in six runs.

Larry Loehne added three hits and Kevin Juzysta added two to the Wolverines' offensive output.

Clarkston trailed by a run (8-7) in the top of the final inning with two outs and nobody on base. The Wolverines were able to rally to tie the game and send it into extra innings.

Clarkston scored five times in the top of the eighth to seal the victory.

Sashabaw 10, Wolverines 4

May 5 - Johnson with three hits and Loehne with two paced Clarkston in its loss to rival Sashabaw.

Wolverines 11, Sashabaw 1

McChesney was the winning pitcher. She threw a three-hitter, fanned six batters and walked only four. She also clubbed a home run, triple and single to pace the offense.

Cruz added three hits for the victors, who only committed two errors in the game.

"I'm real pleased with that," said Bronson.

The victory ups the team's record to 7-2 with six games to go.

STEVE HOLLIS serves up another good point against Waterford Mott en route to helping the Wolves down the Corsairs in a key GOAL battle for first place.

Track team ready to do battle

The kid gloves will come off now that the varsity track team heads into the toughest part of the schedule, said Coach Gordie Richardson.

After breezing through the first part of the spring with relative ease, the Wolves will face challenging opponents the rest of the way.

As a result, the team will have to be at its best day-in and day-out. The margin for error is rapidly shrinking. "We need to do some good things," Richardson said. "We have to run the best time we can."

Clarkston headed into a clash against Greater Oakland Activities League rival Pontiac Northern May 10 with a week's worth of rest since a May 6 meet against Flint Carman-Ainsworth was canceled.

Results of the Huskies-Wolves battle was not available at press time.

Once Clarkston gets done with Pontiac Northern, a tough squad from Lake Orion is waiting in the wings to knock off the high-flying Wolves.

Sofar this year, a young crop of underclassmen have meshed well with the small returning core of seniors to lead the team. Richardson said their efforts are needed to beat the really good teams that lie ahead.

"We will have to perform at our level," he said. "We will test a lot of sophomores and see what they can do."

The Wolves' last tune-up for Pontiac Northern was their home meet against Brandon on May 3. Clarkston won easily, 107.5 to 20.5, to put the team members in the right frame of mind for the coming challenges.

"We ran some pretty good times," the coach said. "We are coming around."

Ali Fedio anchored the field events by winning two for the Wolves. She finished with a 31-foot, 1-inch throw in the shot put and a 115-5 toss in the discus.

Nicole Hocking won the high jump (15-3) as the Wolves took control of the meet right from the opening gun.

Chamber plans first golf outing

The Pine Knob Golf Course is the site of the first Clarkston Area Chamber of Commerce Golf Outing planned Friday Aug. 5.

Spots for 128 teams of four are available, said Dr. Bruce Mercado, Chamber president.

Using a shotgun start, the teams will use a best ball scramble format. The $90 a person fee will cover breakfast from 6:30 to 7; 18 holes of golf with a golf cart; lunch of steak, chicken and 20 salads; and eligibility for contests and door prizes.

Every person who participates will win at least one door prize worth about $30, Mercado said. The major prize - a 1988 Chevy Blazer - will be won only if someone gets a hole-in-one on a specific hole. Other on-course contests are closest to pin, longest drive and a skins game.

Hole sponsors are needed. For a cost of about $100, the sponsor will have a sign with his or her name at the hole and will receive recognition at the banquet.

Proceeds from the outing will be used to fund Chamber-sponsored events, such as information exchanges and business forums, Mercado said.

Registration forms for the golf outing are available at the Chamber office at 21 S. Main, Clarkston, or by calling 625-8055.

Help a cause on the course

Golfers can help a worthy cause and themselves during the second annual benefit for the National Foundations for Ileitis and Colitis this weekend at Spring Lake Country Club.

For $50 per person, participants get 18 holes of golf, use of a golf cart, beverages (beer and pop) on the course and a "cook your own" steak dinner with baked potato and salad at Club Victor in nearby Drayton Plains.

The event is scheduled Sunday, May 15, with a tee-off time of 10 a.m.

Trophies will be awarded to the top men and women golfers. Numerous prizes and souvenirs will be available as well.

Proceeds will go toward education and research into the cause and the cure of ileitis (Crohn's disease) and ulcerative colitis, diseases that affect one out of 100 Americans, 200,000 of whom are children.

To register, call 354-6080 from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. on Friday. Spring Lake Country Club is located at 6060 Maybee Rd. in Independence Township.

SCAMP benefit on links

The North Oakland SCAMP Funding Corporation is announcing the First Annual SCAMP Golf Outing to be held at Heather Highlands Golf Course, 11450 E. Holly Rd. in Holly, on Friday, June 24.

The outing will include 18 holes of golf, golf cart, continental breakfast, and luncheon with prizes. Lew Wint will be featured as master of ceremonies.

The cost is $60 for the complete outing, or $20 for the luncheon only.

Tickets are available at area Clarkston businesses, including Tierra Arts, Country Value Hardware, Speedy Printing, Savoy Insulation and the Special Services building of Clarkston Schools. Tickets must be purchased by June 10.

All proceeds will benefit Clarkston SCAMP, a five-week summer program for children and young adults with special needs.

For further information, contact Buck Kopietz at 625-2511 or Bunny Newmarch at 625-3330.

Director needed

Independence Parks and Recreation is seeking a volleyball league director for this summer.

Interested persons should contact the parks and recreation department during the week at 625-8223.

Time out

Who's who?

Peter Auchter

Will the real Wolves please stand up? Watching the varsity baseball team last week during its home double-header against league foe Brandon turned out to be quite confusing.

Which team is real: the 13-4 losers of the first game or the 18-8 winners of the second?

Because the softball and baseball teams play at the same time, I usually end up shuffling back and forth between the high school and Clintonwood Park in an attempt to catch as much action as possible.

Last Thursday, I started out at Clintonwood watching the girls beat up on Brandon in the first game of a double-header. Then I walked over to the tennis courts to see how our team was handling Waterford Mott. Things were going well.

Thinking I was on to something, I decided to rush over to the high school to hopefully see a clean sweep in Clarkston sports. I could hardly wait.

I started to become suspicious when a couple people were heading toward the parking lot while a game was in progress.

"You don't have to write about this one," one fan, who was clutching a seat cushion, yelled as I approached the ball field.

Yipes - and good day to you, too.

Much to my surprise, the scoreboard told a nasty tale. The visiting team was ahead by a lot of runs. Nobody knew how such a tragedy could have happened.

Luckily, the home team got it together in the nightcap and romped to an easy victory. The ball must have looked like a watermelon for Wolves' hitters. They were really teeing off on it.

Everyone went home happy or at least a little mollified after the big win.

With only eight games left before tournament play, the time is now for the Wolves to make a wild run for the money.

The whole season, along with the spring weather, has been marked by inconsistency.

One day is good, the next day is bad. One game the Wolves are hot; the next kind of cool. It's all so confusing. Who's got a program? ***

More confusing questions: What's the deal with coaches and managers in the professional ranks lately?

Why are they picking on the officials when calls don't go their way?

I don't mean calling them names or saying their mothers wear army boots or anything childish like that (this behavior wouldn't come as a surprise, though).

I'm talking about beating up on people.

In hockey, it's the norm for fights to occur. But that's OK in my book when it's between two willing adults. In fact, sometimes it's the hockey players' job to beat up on opponents. All in a night's work for some toothless goon.

But when Jim Schoenfeld, coach of the New Jersey Devils, gets suspended for allegedly pushing an official he didn't agree with, things have gone too far.

This incident followed on the heels of Cincinnati manager Pete Rose's altercation with an umpire on the baseball field.

I just have one thing to say, "Hey guys, settle down and grow up. It's just a game. The sun will rise tomorrow. Grin and bear it. Count to 10 before you do anything else."

Had enough yet?

Record setter

Paced by a record-setting performance by Jody Lueck, the boys track team finished in the middle of the pack at the Ashley Relays Saturday.

Lueck won the high jump with a leap of 6 feet, 6 1/2 inches to set a track record. He also took home a third-place finish in the long jump with a leap of 20-7.

Twelve other teams competed in the relays, and Pontiac Central finished atop the pack. Pontiac Northern took second and Lake Orion ended up in third. Both Northern and Orion are in the same league as Clarkston.

"There was some good competition there, some excellent competition," Coach Walt Wymienko said. "It just goes to show you how tough our league is."

Other top performers for the Wolves included Brian Garwood in the long jump with a leap of 20-1. Pole-vaulter Jeff Locher finished sixth as he soared over the bar at 10-6.

The four-mile relay team of Chris Vandermark, Paul Reading, Jason Wenger and Jim Hotary crossed the line in 19:28 good for a third-place showing.

Reading also turned in a good time by himself in the grueling two-mile run. He finished fourth with a time of 10:13.

Chris Blimka, Marc Pierson, Jeff Shupe and Mike Barnes did well in the sprint medley relay by finishing in fourth place with a time of 2:35.6.

In the shuttle hurdle relay, Garwood, Ed Gilleland, Locher and Lueck finished in sixth place.

The heavy man relay race didn't count in the team standings but was run just for fun. Clarkston's team of John Mahler, K.C. Baran, Ross Rosenthal and J.J. Price took third with a clocking of 1:48.7.

Soccer team wins, barely, over Milford

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Although the girls soccer team allowed more goals on May 4 than it had in any other game this season, Coach Hana Olsen was far from upset.

In fact, she had plenty of good things to say about her team after the Wolves nipped visiting Milford, 5-4, to up their record to 3-2-2.

"It was a good game, an excellent game," she said. "The offense was a lot better and the defense was pretty good."

The victory was especially pleasing since it followed an unexpected loss to Waterford Mott.

The visitors pressed Clarkston right from the start and opened the scoring early in the game when they stole the ball deep in the Wolves' end of the field.

Nancy Carosella tied it at a goal apiece a short time later, when she raced down the left wing and punched the ball into the far corner.

Bridget Brown knocked a shot off the corner of the crossbar and goal post during a direct free kick to nearly hand Clarkston the lead moments later.

The Wolves continually swarmed around the Milford goal in an effort to get the go-ahead goal and were rewarded for their hard work and diligence when Erin McAuliffe scored on a crossing pass from Jackie Jablonski.

But the never-say-die Milford team rallied to tie the game before the half ended. Both squads continued their assaults during the final 40 minutes of play.

HEATHER LUCHENBACH turned in several excellent pitching performances for the varsity softball team last week to help the Wolves up their season record to 15-9.

Wolves lose against top competition

The varsity softball team was eliminated in style from the Royal Oak Dondero tournament Sunday, getting the boot from the eventual champion.

Clarkston, now 15-9 on the year, started out the two-day tournament with a lopsided 14-1 loss to Warren Cousino. Jackie Patrick knocked in the Wolves' lone run. The team had only four hits.

To make the first-day cut, the team would have to win the rest of its games that day. It did just that.

Clarkston's first win came against Harper Creek by a 7-2 score.

Kris Castillo went 4-for-4 at the plate with a double, triple and two RBIs to pace the offense. Stacey Shurtz also knocked in two runs and had a double. Dana Austin made two hits.

In its final game of the day, Clarkston upended Ypsilanti, 2-1, to advance into the next round of competition.

Heather Luchenbach was the winning pitcher. Shurtz picked up one RBI, the other run scored on a passed ball. Heather Behrens and Castillo also had hits for Clarkston.

The next team on the Wolves' hit list was eventual champion Mount Clemens Chippewa Valley.

Clarkston lost by a 5-2 score in a well-played game, said Coach Carla Teare. Chippewa took advantage of several walks and bloop hits to score its runs, she added.

Wendy Scroby had a triple for Clarkston, as did Behrens who scored a run. Austin knocked in a run with a hit.

After they were eliminated, the Wolves returned to the diamond one more time for a consolation game against Sterling Heights. Clarkston won the game, 6-1, behind the hitting of Marci Morgan (double, two runs scored) and Shurtz (two RBIs).

Baseball team gets bombed, returns favor in nightcap

Inconsistency plagues varsity squad

For the varsity baseball team, it was a case of hit or miss last week. Either they hit the ball and played well or missed it and looked terrible.

Brandon and the Wolves took turns beating up on each other May 5 during a double-header at Clarkston High School.

In the opener, the Blackhawks scored four times in the first inning, four times in the last inning and routed the Wolves, 13-4, in a Greater Oakland Activities League contest.

The breaks went to Brandon in the first game. "Everything was going in for them and they hit a lot of bleeders," said Coach Roy Warner. "But you have to give them credit, they hit the ball."

Only the first game counts in league standings this year, so the Wolves' GOAL mark fell to 3-3. It was their third straight league defeat.

Things improved rapidly in the nightcap for the home team as they humiliated Brandon, 18-8, in five innings.

Just as the Blackhawks' hits were falling in earlier in the day, the Wolves were able to cash in big on their hits.

"We had a little bit of a reversal," said the coach. Jeff Briggs was the winning pitcher for Clarkston. The Wolves scored three times in the opening inning to get out in front early. Brandon tied the score in the top of the second with a two-run home run and an RBI single.

Clarkston broke the game wide open in its half of the second when the Wolves scored six times.

Doug Lederman had a run-scoring double and Jeff

Tungate, who is batting .432 with one home run and 12 RBIs, added an RBI single.

Erik Mackson and John Koslosky walked home a run apiece, and a wild pitch got home another. Darin Brandt then bunted home the final run of the inning.

The hit parade continued for Clarkston in its next time at bat when the team scored nine times to stake itself to a commanding 18-3 lead after three innings.

A two-run home run by Ben Underwood got things started. Underwood is the team's top hitter with a .435 batting average, two home runs and 14 RBIs.

Brandt chipped in with a two-run single. Lederman added another RBI. The other runs scored on wild pitches or errors.

Brandon mounted a futile comeback attempt in the fourth and fifth innings by scoring five times.

The victory upped the team's overall record to 7-6. Earlier in the week, Clarkston lost to GOAL rival Waterford Mott, 9-2, on the road May 2.

Underwood had two hits and Mark Galan added a double as the top hitters for the Wolves.

Clarkston rebounded the next day against Bloomfield Andover with an 8-4 victory. Aaron Hesse (batting .357) and Galan (.379) collected two hits apiece for the victors.

Zach Brown pitched a complete game and picked up the victory. He fanned 10 batters and allowed only three earned runs.

Josh Newblatt and Brown both had doubles. Top winners on the pitching staff for the squad are Underwood (2-0 record, 2.63 ERA) and Brown (2-1, 4.63 ERA).

JEFF TUNGATE slaps the tag on a Brandon runner in an attempt to pick him off first base during the second game of a double-header split Thursday afternoon.

KEITH TURNER keeps his personal record unblemished by downing a Mott opponent with solid returns.

Tennis team slips past Waterford, ready to challenge for GOAL title

Boys squad sports fine 8-1 record so far

As far as Coach Dick Swartout is concerned, the boys tennis team is right on schedule.

He thought a 9-2 record for the team was easily within reach before the season began and the Wolves are living up to his predictions.

The team's latest conquest came May 5 over Greater Oakland Activities League foe Waterford Mott at Clintonwood Park.

Clarkston downed Mott, 5-2, to up its record to 8-1 with two dual meets left.

All three singles competitions were won by the Wolves. Keith Turner beat Rick Schill, 6-1, 6-3, at No. 1 singles, Ian Halleran beat Jim Sparre, 6-3, 6-4, and Steve Hollis beat Bob Door, 6-3, 6-3.

In doubles, Kevin Ortwine and Todd Cook beat Pat Wultman and John Alt, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, and Eric Chambers and B.J. Deloney beat Scott Turpine and Lais Jungi.

The victory brought the Wolves closer to clinching the GOAL championship. Only one league meet, against Waterford Kettering, remains.

Turner, a sophomore at No. 1 singles, sports an 8-1 personal record this year. Chambers and Cook are unbeaten in doubles competition (9-0).

A day before the home match against Mott, the Wolves traveled to Lake Orion to battle the Dragons. Clarkston slipped past Orion, 4-3.

Winners for the Wolves included Hollis at No. 4 singles over Dave Clark, 6-2, 6-1. In doubles competition, Ortwine and Cook beat Rob Daily and Andy Busse, 6-1, 6-1; Deloney and Chambers beat Steve Benninger and Kirk Swensen, 6-2, 6-0; and Brad Dedrick and Cory Whisner beat Tim Muif and Farhad Hamadi, 6-0, 6-0.

Clarkston's last tough opponent before the regular season ends was Bloomfield Andover on May 10. Results were not available at press time.

Waterford Mott will host the league meets this year on May 17. Swartout expects the Wolves to challenge for the title and be among the top three teams in the GOAL.

Wolves rally

The second half began the same as the first half, when Milford jumped out in front with an early goal, making it a 3-2 game.

"It was really a tight game," the coach said. "The pressure was really on us the whole way."

McAuliffe responded under pressure to notch her second goal and begin a scoring blitz by the home team.

Tami Mitchell drilled one into a crowd of players in front of the Milford net and Jablonski tipped it home for a 4-3 Clarkston advantage. The goal turned out to be the game-winner.

Karen Lowe collected the Wolves' last goal of the night off a direct kick midway through the second half.

A testimonial from one of your Clarkston neighbors

Throughout the years, I've been to 4 different programs trying to loose weight. I lost weight but never have been able to keep off the weight. The difference that I have found at NEW LIFE WEIGHT CONTROL CENTRE is not only have I lost the weight, I have learned a new way of properly eating to maintain my weight loss. I also received the support and confidence to stick with the program FOREVER.

The program is very easy to follow—you don't have to cook one meal for your family and a separate one for yourself. Because of this wonderful program and the continual support of the staff, I've even lost 1 1/2 pounds recently while on vacation in Florida. It really works!

Even though my maintenance program is over, I still feel free to check in, this constant reminder helps me keep on top of things so pounds don't start creeping up. I stop by also because I need them for their support and enjoy their company.

FUN DAZE MAY 21
STRIVING FOR A GREATER "INDEPENDENCE"

FUN DAZE ALERT: As the annual Fun Daze nears, a crew from Michigan Bell hangs the banner across Main Street. This is the second year in a row that outside plant technicians Joe Swagler and John Charette (in the bucket) have performed task. Said Swagler: "We enjoy it very much. It's nice to help somebody out. People get to know us, too. We wave at them and they recognize us as the banner hangers." Said Charette: "We're into community service." Independence Township resident Jeanne Hawley designed the banner with removable numbers so the date can be changed to coincide each year with the Saturday before Memorial Day.

Magic, kites, runners, 'Big wheelers' and fun

A lot of firsts will occur during the all-day second annual Fun Daze event in Clarkston on May 21.

Many new and different events were added to the schedule from last year's successful venture, said Chairman Dick Greenfield. But some will remain the same.

One of the returning acts from last year's Fun Daze is magician Doug Sheer.

just a lot of fun, she said.

"There will be a lot of things going on," she said. "I don't perceive it as a large kite fly, just a real casual type of thing."

Applications for the running races are available at the township parks and recreation department, 90 N. Main Street, and Runnin' Gear, in the Harvard Shopping Plaza on Dixie Highway.

There are many good reasons for people to join the 150 others who have all ready signed up for Fun Daze, said Greenfield.

"For fitness, fun and fellowship," he said. "This is the year to take care of yourself."

He hopes to draw about 500 runners to Clarkston for Fun Daze this spring.

The cost to participate in the various runs and walks scheduled during Fun Daze are as follows:

● $3 for the one mile fun run/walk or the 5 kilometer walk.

● $10 for the 5K or 10K runs. These racers receive a free T-shirt. Others can purchase shirts for $7.

The Clarkston News will publish a complete listing of events along with a race course map and other Fun Daze features in next week's edition.

Reflections

Wednesday, May 11, 1988

The Southfield resident has been doing magic shows for more more than a decade. He will perform two 20-minute shows, one at 10 a.m. and another an hour later.

A new event is the "Big Wheel" race for kids of various ages in the parking lot of St. Dan's beginning at 11 a.m. Children must bring their own vehicles and registration begins a half-hour before the races.

Participants will be divided into three age groups: 3-and-under, 4-year-olds, and those 5 and older. Prizes will be awarded to all who enter the races.

Those who prefer a less taxing endeavor can take part in a kite flight at St. Dan's.

From noon until 3 p.m. during Fun Daze kites ranging in price from $2 to $160 can be purchased from Mary Wright, owner of Just Right Paperbacks.

There will be no strict competition between flyers.

Jaycees elect 1st female leader

BY JULIE CAMPE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

When she was elected 26th president of the Clarkston Area Jaycees last month, Kate Kuechle set a record - a record that shouldn't draw too much attention, she said.

"It's an honor, but I don't want it to be a big deal," said the Waterford Township resident. "Woman or man, ... to me, it's not an issue. I'm just another person doing the job."

As the first female to hold the title, Kate said her election is a reflection of the times.

"It comes from the way I was brought up," she said. "My parents were very supportive in letting me try different things."

Kate summarized their encouragement: "They said, 'Don't ever let anything stop you. If you're interested, go for it. ... You should never hold yourself back. Just jump right in, and you'll discover if it was meant for you or not.'"

"One thing I learned - your voice does matter," she said. "Even though you might be small in the whole scheme of things, if you're willing to step out and speak up, your voice does matter."

(See HELPING, Page 42)

AS PRESIDENT of the Jaycees this year, Kate Kuechle hopes to attract more members. "It's a good way to meet people," says the Waterford Township resident.

Cat Blue purrs along to ripe old age of 25

BY PAT YOUNG
Clarkston News Staff Writer

There are several kennel pets who are always on hand to greet visitors at Burney's Ark boarding kennel in Brandon Township.

In the front office, there is Beau, a gregarious blue and gold macaw who greets people with a "Hello, how are you?" (Sometimes they respond before they realize a bird is talking.)

There is Zeke, the black and white resident cat, and Patches, a tortoise shell cat who comes to work with her owner, Sally Harroun. Sally and Ann Burney co-own the kennel on Granger Road.

And then there is Blue, who constitutes the senior citizen portion of Burney's Ark residents.

Blue is a 25-year-old smokey-gray Persian mix. If cats do have nine lives, Blue intends to use every last one of them.

He arrived at the kennel about 15 months ago for "a few months" while his owner was working in California, but as the job became long-term, Blue's stay at the kennel did too.

It is rare for a cat to live beyond the teens, Sally says, let alone to 25. Blue is still in good health, but has some of the ailments that go along with old age, such as arthritis.

One day Sally came in and found Blue with a broken hind leg. He lay particularly still in his "home" - cage two in the new cat room of the kennel. The situation looked pretty hopeless.

A call to the owner in California got the reply, "Do what you have to do." The vet said euthanizing was the answer, because Blue's brittle old bones just wouldn't heal.

"But the fact is, I just couldn't do it," Sally says.

She kept him on a blanket by her desk, carrying him around, coaxing him, and finally, he started walking.

His heart was strong, so the vet put a splint on Blue's leg, which he slowly adapted to. Several months later, Blue is back to normal. He walks a little stiffly, and certainly a little slower than in his younger days, but he's happy.

"He just had the will," Sally says. "He wanted to keep on going."

Blue strolls over and sits watching Sally. He seems to know he is being discussed, and displays mild curiosity about the conversation.

Blue has the run of the place during the day, so he can exercise his arthritic joints and keep tabs on the staff, all of whom have a special place in their hearts for Blue.

And so the kennel patriarch may live out his retirement years, unless his owner comes home soon. But he checks on Blue all the time, and when he paid the vet bill for Blue's broken leg, he wrote to the kennel staff:

"This is probably the happiest check I've ever written. Your phone call that our friend was still with us is somewhat of a miracle, brought about by your love and caring. (I) can't thank you enough for all the TLC you've given him."

BLUE IS HAPPY to still be enjoying life, at the ripe old age of 25. The smokey-gray Persian mix resides at Burney's Ark, a Brandon Township kennel.

Warm family home nestled in an Oak-Dogwood forest. Beautiful views from all windows. Brick floors, cathedral ceilings, gourmet kitchen, screened porch and open deck. Four bedrooms, two fireplaces, study, family room, security system and private beach. $249,500.

Dramatic design inside and out enhanced by its 7.5 acre retreat like setting. Extensive use of ceramic tile and oak adds to the sophistication of this three bedroom, two and a half bath home. Second floor laundry, attached green house, six panel doors and that's only the beginning. $189,900.00.

Visitor

Long-time Clarkston fan Phyllis H. Roberts stopped in last week during a visit to her sister Betty J. Spratt and family.

"With Clarkston, I love the walking and chatting with people. Everyone's always been so friendly with me. They don't have to be. I'm a total stranger," said Roberts, a resident of Prospect, Ohio, a small town north of Columbus.

She's been coming to town at least twice annually for "years and years," she said, adding that her visits to this general area of Michigan began in the 1930s.

Roberts also told us she'll turn 70 in June, so we'll take this opportunity to wish her a very happy birthday!

Friend to Friend

Letter from a friend

Dear Friend to Friend,

One of my best friends is starting to get involved with a guy that I am concerned about. He seems like a really nice guy but ... he has a lot of problems.

His mom and dad separated; he lives with his mom and dislikes his father a lot. Now his mom has just gone into the hospital and is dying.

He is the type of guy who is very possessive. He beat up his last girlfriend new boyfriend and put him in the hospital.

I really think he is a neat person, but his temper scares me. I don't want my friend to get hurt or stuck in a relationship like that. How can I help both of them to make other choices?

MUTUAL FRIEND

Dear Mutual Friend,

You didn't say how long your friends have been dating. We agree that you should be concerned for both of your friends.

One thing to remember is, you CANNOT make decisions for them. You must be supportive of your friends, be a sounding board for them. We understand how hard it is to stay out of a situation like this and be unbiased.

First, you need to help your female friend to sort through her feelings.

Is she staying with this guy because she feels sorry for him and wants to change him? Does she really care about this guy? How long have they been dating? Are these problems starting because of his mom's situations? How does he treat her?

Let her make the determination on these questions, but be supportive when she wants to talk to you about it. Keep asking her if what choice she has made is the best decision for HER.

As for the boy in this relationship, he needs to get some help to deal with his grief surrounding his mother, and perhaps surrounding the divorce. Maybe he is so possessive because he feels all the people who mean something to him leave him.

He needs some professional help to work through this. He probably is very angry inside, and he has never dealt with those feelings about possibly being abandoned by his father. Now by his mother? And that might explain why his temper is so bad.

Talk to his school counselor or the school social worker. Or the hospital where his mother is will have a social worker on staff trained in dealing with the families in these situations.

It is such a tough situation to watch friends that you care about hurt, but it is important for you to remember that you can't make choices for them, and that they really need your objectivity, support and friendship through these trying times.

Dear Friend to Friend,

I am submitting this probably because the type of attitude I have affects others and hopefully my attitude will have a positive effect on you.

I am just another face in the halls of this high school, a student who is as unique as every student.

I am writing this as a friend to everybody, tossing away all the stereotypes that we see so easily label people with.

In school, how do you feel when you see two people, friends, come up and hug. These could be a boy and girl, two guys, or two girls. Are you shocked? Why are we so frightened to show affection?

Now in school, I admit, a display of intimate affection is not always appropriate. Yet I believe a display of intimate affection is quite appropriate when it is positive and adds to the quality of the other person's life.

It affects how that person's day goes and how they affect others around them. The fact is that you are in control of the quality of your own life, and how your life affects others determines the quality of the whole picture.

So, to sort of sum up what I've said, picture yourself on a day when you're feeling the blues and if you see someone like that, think about how a kind word would make you feel.

Also, think about what you say. Words sometimes have deeper meaning to people than you think, and once you've said them, it is hard to take back what it meant to that person.

ANONYMOUS

Dear Anonymous,

We enjoyed reading your letter - it made us all step back and think.

We agree that words can be very biting and hurtful and that there are the little things people can do to make Clarkston High School better.

We disagree with you, however, that you are "just another face in the halls of the high school."

By your letter, it sounds like you are a very special person with much to offer. It takes everyone on an individual basis to make a contribution to begin to make a difference on how people treat each other.

We agree that hugs do make people feel much better, but the way people react may depend on the type of environment in which they were raised.

Some people may never feel comfortable with this type of display of affection; you can allow for this and still show affection in your own way.

And if other people are teasing you for this display of affection, you have to keep in mind that it is THEIR problem not yours (unless you choose to listen to them!).

We also agree that there is a difference between a friendly or comforting hug, which is appropriate, and some of the extreme hugging and kissing done between classes, which might be saved for another time and place.

Many times in a large high school, students feel isolated and alone - lost in the crowd. That is why it is important that we all take the time to care about each other.

8-week visit to Norway awaits CHS junior

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

For nearly eight weeks this summer, one Clarkston High School junior will see Norway as a Norwegian would.

Through a student exchange program, Heather Cooper will travel to Norway and live with a family on a farm. Through information received through the mail, she knows that the family she will be visiting includes four brothers and one sister, all older than her.

HEATHER COOPER plans on making her summer in Norway an exciting and educational experience.

To help American students get the most out of their brief stay abroad, the program directors ask participants to get as involved in the project as possible.

"It's going to be a cultural experience," she said. "I'll be a member of a family and not a guest."

The trip also will help when it comes time to enroll in college. Many schools take the exchange program into consideration when deciding which students to accept, she said.

She looks forward to corresponding with her host family a couple of times before she leaves for Norway on June 27.

At 125,181 square miles, the country is slightly larger than New Mexico and occupies the western part of the Scandinavian peninsula in northwest Europe.

Cooper found out about the student exchange program last fall when a representative came to the high school to pass out brochures.

She originally had planned to spend a year in Australia, but when that fell through Norway was her next choice.

Because English is a dominant language in the country - unlike many other foreign nations - the culture shock won't be as severe, she said.

"It's a beautiful area," she said. "And there are a lot of English speaking people."

This trip won't be the first traveling experience for the West Church Street, Independence Township, student.

She has visited places such as Mexico and Europe with her family during past summer vacations. But this time it will be totally different, she said.

"It'll be a little scary, but I'm looking forward to it," she said. "It seems interesting."

Until it's time to leave, Cooper will keep herself busy with schoolwork, tap dance and ballet lessons, and her job at a bookstore.

Take care near electrical lines

A child's fate may be hanging by a string when flying a kite near an overhead electric line.

Now that spring has officially arrived, Consumers Power Co. is issuing advice for children who are emerging from their wintertime cocoons to fly kites and climb trees.

Kite flying should be done in dry weather in open areas, away from electric lines, trees or other obstructions. If a kite gets tangled in an electric line, don't try to get it out - let it go.

Never climb utility poles, trees or broadcast towers to retrieve a tangled kite. It's not worth endangering a life.

When buying or making a kite, make sure it is constructed of wood, plastic and paper - do not use anything made of metal.

Use dry string when flying a kite. Do not use wire or anything metallic.

When climbing trees, make sure there are no overhead electric wires in or near them.

If it's a major fire, or a minor oddity, we want a call at The Clarkston News. 625-3370

Mid-morning feast

When graduations or other spring celebrations call for a weekend brunch, here's the perfect casserole to feature.

The suggestion comes from the recipe box of Grace Heike, gal Friday at The Clarkston News.

HEARTY BRUNCH CASSEROLE

- 8 eggs
- 2 tablespoons milk or water
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 pound bulk pork sausage or bacon
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 pound frozen, loosely packed hash brown potatoes
- 1 1/3 cups sour cream
- 1/3 cup minced scallions
- 1 cup (4 ounces) shredded cheddar cheese
- 1 tomato, cut in thin wedges (optional)

Grease 2-quart baking dish or souffle dish; set aside. In medium bowl, lightly beat eggs and milk or water until blended.

Melt butter or margarine in 10-inch skillet; pour in egg mixture. Without stirring, cook over medium heat. As eggs set, lift up edges with spatula to let uncooked eggs flow underneath.

When eggs are softly set, gently slide onto a cutting board and cool to room temperature. Cut into 2-by-1/2-inch strips; set aside.

Crumble sausage into large skillet. Cook over medium heat until browned and no longer pink, using fork to break up sausage. Or cook bacon and crumble. Drain and discard drippings of sausage or bacon.

In same skillet, heat oil and add potatoes. Stirring occasionally, cook over medium heat until golden brown. Spread browned potatoes in bottom of greased dish. Spread half of sour cream over potatoes.

Layering each in turn, top with all of scallions, cooked sausage and bacon, cooked egg strips and remaining sour cream. Sprinkle cheese over top.

Place casserole in cold oven. Turn oven to 350 degrees. Bake 30 to 40 minutes or until cheese melts and mixture bubbles. Garnish with tomato wedges, if desired. Serves 6 to 8.

Pet of the Week

They're just ducky

Many little Easter chicks and ducks wind up, unfortunately, at the Michigan Humane Society after the holiday is over.

Nine domestic pekin ducks, ranging from six weeks to three months old, are awaiting good homes at the shelter right now.

The "former Easter presents" are very friendly, and easy to care for, according to a shelter staff member, who also says the ducks think they are "little people" because people are all they have known. Given the chance, they follow the shelter staff around.

All they need are duck pellets to eat, a little pool of water and shelter for the nights. Prospective owners must also be sure their local ordinances allow ducks.

These domestic, white ducks can be adopted at the Michigan Humane Society, 3600 Auburn Rd., Auburn Heights, 852-7420. Hours at the non-profit shelter are 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

The shelter is requesting a $5 donation for a duck. The cost for more than one duck is negotiable.

'To Sir, With Love' . . . CHS-style

BY PAT YOUNG
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Banners on the walls of Clarkston High School proclaimed Teacher Appreciation Day (May 3) with expressions such as: "Teachers are the Best Creatures" and "Teachers are the Apple of Our Eye." The messages were light hearted, but the meanings were deep felt.

"It's nice to have the kids tell the teachers how much they're appreciated," said CHS principal Dr. Robert Burek.

AN APPLE FOR TEACHER Larry Rosso was cheerfully delivered by CHS Blue and Gold members (from left) Jennifer Rieves, Marni Banker, Stephanie Tedder and Kara Kurz.

The occasion was Teacher Appreciation Day, May 3, and all CHS teachers received apples, notes and certificates of appreciation, snacks and flowers.

Teacher Appreciation Day is observed statewide on May 3, Burek said, but Clarkston really makes a major effort.

CHS students who are members of the Blue and Gold service organization delivered snacks, certificates of appreciation, coffee and flowers to all teachers during first hour (7:30 to 8:20 a.m.).

During fourth hour (10:15 to 11:05 a.m.), they delivered apples and notes personally written by students to all teachers.

Teacher Appreciation Day was organized at CHS by Blue and Gold Club co-chairmen Kristi Martin and Kirsten Kuehl, and by Blue and Gold committee chairmen Kellee Duty, Kara Kurz, Tammy Smith, Darren Miller, Marni Banker, Kelly Saunders and David Woodruff.

Dozens of other Blue and Gold members helped pass out the teacher appreciation favors and helped decorate the library for a Teacher Appreciation Day luncheon for all staff during the lunch hour May 3, which Burek and assistant principal Brent Cooley helped coordinate.

Blue and Gold members also arranged to have their appreciation advertised on the marquees of several local businesses. Motorists may have noticed these words along Dixie Highway on May 3: "Thanks CHS Teachers."

Helping is rewarding

The Jaycees provides a perfect outlet for helping others and for making a difference, said Kate, mentioning the help the Jaycees gives to muscular dystrophy, Clarkston Area Youth Assistance and other community groups.

"If they knew how much benefit there is in seeing someone smile and helping the community, (everyone would join)," she said. "You're helping the community grow within itself. I can't believe everyone isn't a Jaycee."

Kate, a 1979 Clarkston High School graduate, joined the Jaycees a year ago.

"I wanted to pass on what I felt I received from the community when I grew up - the closeness, the caring, the feeling you get in the community that people care."

An accounting manager at Walker International Sporting Goods, Kate likes to run, ski, play tennis and to weave and cross stitch.

Letting it all out

Suzanne Baumann

This morning when I woke up, I found a wet spot on my pillow. There weren't any leaks in the ceiling, so I was able to narrow it down to either of two things: I was crying or drooling in my sleep.

Personally, I hope I wasn't drooling. To me it seems more noble to roll over into teardrops than saliva. Don't ask me why.

People don't usually go into their crying habits, so I'll never be completely sure if I'm like everyone else when it comes to shedding tears.

Not counting what crying I might be doing in my sleep, I'd say I cry about twice a week, on an average. My reasons are very wide range, if I have a reason at all.

They say crying can cause a temporary loss of memory. I can relate to that.

In the middle of nearly two-thirds of my crying episodes I suddenly dry up and say to myself, "Wait a minute ... what the heck am I bawling like this for?" I draw a blank, shrug, and start right back up again!

If this happens to any of you (and if it has, you've never mentioned it to me), you know what catches you most off guard: Those too-eager-to-help individuals who run to your side before you can say, "Boo-hoo," to ask to hear the entire problem. You've forgotten what the problem was!

You can't very well be truthful and say, "I forgot." I've tried it before and folks just think you're hiding something.

Another dumb move is denial, such as touching your face, acting surprised, and exclaiming, "Hey, you're right! I am crying! Thanks for pointing it out!"

There's always lying. You could say you were dumped by your dead boyfriend who stole your dog, but that usually leads to more discussion - one thing you want least in the middle of a lie. What's worse, they might try to get you help.

Violence is often effective. Just say, "It's none of your %*O?!#@ business what I'm cryin' for!" and beat them until their faces cave in. Of course, that could make you feel guilty and just lead to more crying.

You could blame it on a physical problem. A hormone imbalance. Something on your eye. A spontaneous sunburn. You've been eating too much salt and you're trying to get rid of it.

Sometimes I do remember my reason for crying. It always seems to happen that the person who asks what's wrong is the person who upset me in the first place.

Sometimes I'll tell them; sometimes I say I'd rather not talk about it. It depends on the circumstances.

Do you have to be upset to cry? That's what we've been told, but nine times out of 10 it isn't the case. I'm usually hit most in the middle of a line from a movie, book or song that has a special meaning to me.

If I feel a tightness in my chest, a good sob can get the air back in my lungs. If I'm frustrated with a homework assignment, it's a discreet option to screaming.

I once read a story about a man who collected all his tears in a saucepan and then set it on the range. He'd watch all his cares evaporate and then go on with his life.

I don't exactly know why people cry, except maybe for something poets can write about, but all in all, I guess it's good that we do it. How else could I get inspired?

Whether we know someone or not, it doesn't take much to make some feel good with a smile, a compliment, a kind word and, yes, even a hug!

11-year effort brings organ to church

BY JULIE CAMPE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Behind the pulpit at Calvary Lutheran Church, dozens of tiny musicians crowd behind a ceiling-high cabinet, producing beautiful, breath-taking sounds that penetrate almost to a person's soul.

Or so it seems, with the help of modern science. The church on Bluegrass Drive, Independence Township, still holds the familiar figure of the organist, solemnly playing the organ. But Yvonne Lowe's fingers and feet are busier than usual, as she plays music for the pipe organ, harpsichord, glockenspiel and chimes.

It's as if the organ contains a tape recording of each tone from each instrument, said the Rev. Robert Walters.

Computer chips hold the sounds much more efficiently than cassette tapes, and recent technology has released the sounds so accurately and clearly, that even the "puh" from the air-blown pipes on a pipe organ is audible - but just barely, so as not to overdo, said Sharon Scott, who helped choose the organ.

"The best thing is it really sounds like a real pipe organ in this place," said Walters. "It's not meant to sound like the Westminster Cathedral. It's meant to sound like a pipe organ here. It's main goal is to accompany worship."

Technology is advanced enough that a floppy disk could perform all of the music, replacing the organist, but Yvonne convinced the committee members not to buy it, she said, laughing.

The $27,000 German-made Bradford-Ahlborn computer organ was 11 years in coming, and the entire cost was paid for by congregation members whose donations in memory or in honor of someone ranged from $5 to $1,000, said Walters.

It began when the church underwent remodeling about the same time the old Pine Knob Mansion was renovated, and the mansion's 25-rank pipe organ was donated to the church, he said.

However, just to house the 32-foot pipes would have required a huge addition, and storing the instrument in the meantime was expensive, as well, said Walters.

Sadly, the organ was sold to someone in Pecos, Texas. The proceeds provided the basis for the organ fund.

An eight-member committee made the final selection based on the reviews of three committee members who made a 24-hour round trip to Florida - the only other location in the United States where the new Bradford-Ahlborn organ is used.

"When they came from Florida, I knew it was right," said Walters. "They were dead-tired, and still enthusiastic."

The had left Michigan with high standards formed after the entire committee had attended a 1986 convention of the American Guild of Organists, where they first heard the sounds of a prototype Bradford-Ahlborn, he said.

"It sounded the most like a pipe organ," said Yvonne. "We were looking for a special sound. ... We really like it. ... It's really a nice addition. It's nice to have something you enjoy playing and enjoy practicing."

"We had an excellent organ committee. It was well rounded - technicians, business people, music."

IT'S EASY to get carried away while practicing the new computer organ, says music director Yvonne Lowe, who lets her 19-month-old granddaughter, Samantha Lowe, try the chimes for the audience of the Rev. Robert Walters and Sharon Scott.

Herb gardening is topic

The pleasures of herbs are many. There's the simple beauty of a field of lavender or a garden path laced with creeping thyme, the intoxicating scent of a bowl of potpourri, or the pungent flavor of lamb grilled with rosemary.

The Clarkston Community Historical Society is sponsoring an "Herb Gardening" program on May 25 at 7:30 p.m. in the Clarkston Village Hall.

The demonstration and discussion will be led by Theresa Monte-Grabill, an herbalist from Metamora. The Clarkston Village Hall is located on Depot Road, just west of Main Street in downtown Clarkston. The program is free and open to the public. Monte-Grabill will offer some of her products for sale.

TWO MISS POPPIES who represent Chief Pontiac American Legion Post 377 are (left) Heather Rollison, Post 377 Miss Poppy and 18th District Miss Poppy; and Shannon Chapple, Dept. Jr. Miss Poppy. Chapple is a fifth-grader at Jayno Adams Elementary, Waterford, and Rollison is a fifth-grader at Scotch Elementary, West Bloomfield.

Poppy Days are here again

Chief Pontiac Unit No. 377 of the American Legion Auxiliary will participate in nationwide Poppy Days May 19, 20 and 21 with poppy sales throughout the area.

The poppy is hand made by hospitalized veterans and is made available to the public during Poppy Days. Legionnaires, auxiliary members, juniors and sons of the American Legion will be out in force offering the poppy to the public.

Money from the poppy sales helps veterans and their families who are in need. It also helps many hospitalized veterans enjoy their lives a bit more.

American Legion and Auxiliary members remind people that by buying poppies, people are helping those who helped to keep our country free.

Novus makes house calls for windshield repairs

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

After eight years as a used car salesman, Jay Karrow decided it was time he worked for himself.

Four months into their first venture into the business world, Karrow and his wife, Dani, have a budding partnership under way.

The Oakland Novus windshield repair shop at 5904 Dixie Highway in Independence Township specializes in preventing small cracks from spreading and forcing costly replacement.

DANI AND JAY KARROW, co-owners of Oakland Novus, work side-by-side in their windshield repair service on Dixie Highway and hope to expand to a new location soon.

What's New in Business

Business is going so well, in fact, that talk of expansion into a bigger building on Dixie Highway has all ready begun.

"I'm looking for property on Dixie Highway to put up a shop," said Jay, who is originally from Bloomfield Township. "I would like to have a few shops."

During his days on the used car lots, Jay dealt closely with Novus personnel as a purchaser. Car dealerships have known about the cost-saving procedure for many years, he said.

Because of his close association with the Minneapolis-based company, the decision to open his own Novus franchise was a simple one to make, he said.

Jay and Dani went to the Novus headquarters in Minnesota for factory training before opening up shop on the first of the year.

Jay moved to Independence Township because his wife is a life-long resident of the area.

Both owners are confident their business will be successful. There are many reasons to opt for repair over replacement, they said.

● Some of the newer windshields can cost anywhere from $200 to $2,000 to replace.

● Replacement requires leaving the car at the repair shop for a day and then letting the car sit undisturbed until the seal sets.

● Most insurance companies will waive the deductible for this type of service. The customer pays nothing.

● The factory seal on the windshield is not disturbed during repairs so leaking is not a problem.

Oakland Novus offers both in-shop and mobile unit service. Work can be completed in about 45 minutes, Karrow said.

"We can do the job in the parking lot while the customer is at work," he said. "All we need to do is set up a time and place to meet them."

Best results occur when the repair is done soon after the damage is noticed. Once the crack spreads it may be too late. Once job is completed, only a dot where the pellet hit the windshield remains.

The shop offers a guarantee on their workmanship for as long as the customer owns the car.

Dean Murphey, a first-grader at Pine Knob Elementary, dons the papier-mache head of a crocodile and then assumes the role as the reptile during a musical called, "The Elephant's Child." The play was staged by Ruth Powers' class on Monday afternoon for the schools' pupils and again Tuesday night for the parents.

Trunk show

Photos by Peter Auchter

PINE KNOB students, most of the time, keep their eyes glued on the stage waiting for the next exciting moment of action (above). The lead character of the musical is the little elephant played by Jenny Sucher (upper left). While waiting their turn to speak, the young actors and actresses giggle among themselves while enjoying a good time entertaining their friends and classmates (lower left).
