DNR to monitor situation

Fuel spill could contaminate wells

BY JULIE CAMPE Clarkston News Staff Writer

Ground water has a chance of contamination even though environmental specialists dug the earth until 3 a.m. after the Friday, June 10, jet fuel spill on I-75 in Independence Township.

The specialists returned Wednesday, June 15, to finish the job, while Flemings Lake Road resident Bonnie McVeigh watched their every move.

Water worries

BY JULIE CAMPE Clarkston News Staff Writer-

Although the dry spell isn't critical yet, township officials recommend conserving water.

George Anderson, director of the Independence Township Department of Public Works, suggests that the 1,648 customers of the township's water system alternate days when watering their lawns.

"Right now, it's just a suggestion," said Anderson. "If things get worse, we'll make it mandatory. We haven't had any problems so far, but we're doing it so we don't have any problems. We're just anticipating.

"We can supply the water for domestic use, but fire service becomes a problem," he said. Supervisor Frank Ronk was also concerned about

This year's July 4 parade through downtown Clarkfeature.

When the spill was originally estimated at under 500 gallons, Bonnie was told that contaminated soil81/2 feet deep would be hauled away and replaced all in the same day - Friday.

But when the job was left unfinished, she began making phone calls and discovered that the spill actually involved 1,500 gallons of jet fuel, and that the environmental company, Enmanco of Mount Clemens, didn't plan to return to the site until the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) gave permission.

When Bonnie called the DNR, she was told that DNR officials wouldn't have time to inspect the site for about a week.

Bonnie was concerned.

"My well is about 100 feet from the spill," she said. "We could see and smell jet fuel. We couldn't even sleep with our bedroom window open. I was frustrated. My biggest problem was that no one would listen.'

In desperation, she called the Environmental Protection Agency in Washington, D.C., and within an hour, DNR officials were inspecting the site, she said. Bonnie stayed home from work June 15 to watch the progress.

"Some people might think I went too far in calling Washington, but we don't have any (water) alternatives up here," she said. "We're isolated."

After driving in the parade, members of the Clarkston Touring and Chowder Society are organizing an antique and classic car gathering in Clarkston's Depot Park Those who own such vehicles are welcome to add their vehicles to the gathering and the public is invited to view the cars.

The parade, sponsored by the firefighters of Independence Township, has a theme of "Volunteers of America" this year, honoring all volunteers that give of their time to help others.

Starting from the parking lot at Clarkston Junior High on Waldon Road, the parade will travel west on c Church Street to Main, north on Main through down, town, ending at Miller Road. The lineup will begin at 8:45 a.m., with the parade. scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. The firefighters invite all those with special ve-hicles, marching groups, clowns, floats or bands to participate in the parade. Tears of joy from blooming plant

X

BRAGGIN' BLOOM: When a bloom appeared on Gertrude Petersen's snake plant (sansevieria), she was amazed. The plant was a gift to her husband some 15 years ago and it had never bloomed. Mrs. Petersen, who celebrates ner 85th birthday Aug. 15. telephoned Bordine's for an expert opinion. "They told me was very lucky to have one blooming because it doesn't happen very often," she said in Florida, snake plants grow outside and send up light greenish feathery spikes of flowers each year. As house plants, they only bloom when the plant is well established and conditions are perfect - the soil on the dry side, a warm room and full sun. But old, wellestablished specimens that bloom are apt to repeat the performance, said Jean Ranshaw, a volunteer with the Garden Hotline for the Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service. Meanwhile, Mrs. Petersen said she's watching her bloom "like a hawk, and she's fascinated by the beads of liquid that cling to the blossom stem. "That's inter-esting, ien't it, how it cries?" she said; adding that they're tears of joy. (Photo by Kathy Greenfield)

MILFORD MASON accepts an award from Clarkston school board President Janet Thomas at his last official board meeting on June 9.

Board bids superintendent fond adieu

BY PAT YOUNG Clarkston News Staff Writer

A special presentation was made to retiring Clarkston schools Superintendent Milford Masoh at the board of education meeting June 9 - the last board meeting he will attend as head of the school district.

"He got a lot of mileage out of millage," said board President Janet Thomas as she gave him a plaque acknowledging his efforts while superintendent of Clarkston schools.

The plaque was signed by central office administrators as well as board members, and included a color photograph of the administration building.

"He never missed a board meeting in 12 years," said Assistant Superintendent Mel Vaara. Mason culminates 27 years with the Clarkston school district on June 30, the last 12 as superintendent. The new superintendent, who will take over July 1, is Gary Haner, 44. He is currently superintendent of Pinckney schools near Ann Arbor, but began his teaching career in Clarkston in 1966.

Thomas praised Mason's efforts as superintendent as well as the contribution he and his family made to the community. She also said the district is recognized in Oakland County as one where the superintendent and board work well together.

"I've really appreciated his support. He's made my job easier," she said.

Upon accepting the award at his last board meeting, Mason said, "I'd do it all again."

Smoothing the way

Gravel roads in two areas of the township are on the way to possible paving.

The preliminary engineering was OK'd by the Independence Township Board for Perry Lake Road, from 1-75 to Cranberry Lake Road; and for Clarkston Estates - a set of private roads off Clarkston and South Eston roads in the northeast portion of the township. The preliminary engineering by Hubble, Roth and Clark, the township's engineering consultants, will produce an estimate of the paving costs. The next step will be a public hearing on taxing the people who would benefit from paving the roads:

The Clarkston (Mich.) News Wed, June 22, 1988 3 The Clarksion (Mich.) News Wed, June 22, 198 Voter turnout believed to be all-time high

BY PAT YOUNG Clarkston News Staff Writer

There are an estimated 15,000 registered voters in the Clarkston school district, and of those, a record 7,028 votes were cast in the June 13 school election. That's about 45 percent of the voters.

By almost a two-to-one margin, voters approved a 5.5 operational millage increase and a $5.2 million bond issue for school repairs. Also in the election, John Needham was re-elected to the school board, and Thomas Howard won the school board position vacated by . Thomas Bills, who did not seek re-election. . .

By comparison surrounding school districts, according to unofficial results published following the election, had low voter turnouts. Clarkston had by far the highest number of voters, even among much larger school districts.

Clarkston Superintendent Milford Mason, who retires on June 30, says he believes the voter turnout in Clarkston is a record. Independence Township Clerk Richard Holman agrees.

"I have to believe it is," Holman says. "Certainly in the five years I've been here it is."

Why was this election so successful?

"There was greater community awareness," said Alberta Ellis, director of curriculum and administrative liaison for the election committee. "And we had a steering committee of 50 people who each had their own worker committees.

"At one time we had over 600 volunteers on our worker list," she continued. "We've never had that many before. We even had citizens who took vacation time to help. Since I've been here, we've never seen that kind of dedication.

Millage campaign co-chairperson Barbara Johns agreed with Ellis, adding that part of the success was due to the organizational skills of Ellis, "who kept the entire steering committee revolving around her optimism."

"Also, there were almost the same number of no votes, but lots more yes votes," Johns said #The difference was the yes voters were touched this time. It was an emotional election."

On election day and the evening before, a large pool of volunteers worked hard through telephone contacts to get voters to the polls, according to election day activities chairperson Carole Kammer. The committee was allowed one poll watcher per precinct, who checked names off a master list of identified positive voters. Those who hadn't voted by 4 p.m. were called again.

"I'm sorry if some people were called a couple of times by mistake if they already voted," Kammer said, referring to the fact that a few people complained about the calls. "But the phone calls are what helped make this a record election.

Some village tax bills will increase

Clarkston residents whose state equalized valuation increased this year will see a proportionate jump in their tax bill from the village.

Village officials didn't raise Clarkston's operating millage from last year's 7.4-mill rate but since some property assessments rose, so will the tax bills. A "Truth in Taxation" hearing Monday evening in Village Hall to provide residents with an opportunity to discuss the situation with village officials. Nobody from the public attended the meeting. Treasurer Artemus Pappas explained that those residents who were raised $1,000 in assessments for their property would see an increase of $8.40 in their taxes this

Milford Mason is not going to California to appear in raisin commercials when he retires June 30, but he did make a brief appearance,

The only other problem that developed on election day was when a few pro-millage voters showed up to vote wearing blue-ribbon committee T-shirts or blue ribbons. Elections rules state that there cannot be any kind of political statement within 100 feet of the entrance to polling places.

"Rick Holman was correct in his ruling (not to allow the pro-millage ribbons and T-shirts) because it was a symbol of the way a person was voting," Mason said.

We had a few calls, but I think the pro-millage people did a fine job of getting the message out (that people should not wear these to the polls)," Holman said. They even provided shirts to cover up with at the polling booths.'

The blue ribbons may not have had a place at the polling booths, but they provided a positive atmosphere, and perhaps a forecast of the positive results to come everywhere else around town. There were yards and yards of it tied on telephone polls, porches, street signs, and even on the sign at the entrance to the Village of Clarkston.

Clarkston schools publicity director Barbara Banker borrowed the blue ribbon idea from an Ohio school district where it was extremely successful. For whatever reason - blue ribbons, door-to-door campaigns, telephone calls, emotional pleas for the schools - the election of June 13 will go down as one of the most along with several millage campaign volunteers, in an "I Heard It Through the Grapevine" skit at a post-election celebration at the Spring Lake Country Club on June 13.

successful elections. Clarkston schools has seen The fact that it passed by that much tells me the community is ready to unite and work for the schools," said Ellis.

Needham, Howard top vote-getters

When the Clarkston Board of Education meets in July, there will be a new board member at the table.

Thomas L. Howard won a four-year school. board term with an unofficial vote total of 1,831. Incumbent John H. Needham won another fouryear term with 2,026 votes.

Eight candidates ran for the two school board positions in the June 13 election, bringing the comment from school board President Janet Thomas that it was a "fine field of candidates, and we appreciate the fact that so many people were willing to stand up and be counted.'

The other candidates and their unofficial vote totals are:

year. "If their state valuation remains the same, then their taxes will remain the same," he said.

The Independence Township assessor, by state law, controls property valuation in the village, said Trustee William Basinger.

"I think that it is important to note that we (village officials) have no control over assessments, "he said: President Sharror Catalo kept the special hearing open for 15 minutes and closed to when no one from the public arrived.

Doyle resigns from township post

BY JULIE CAMPE Clarkston News Staff Writer

In a move surprising to staff and other department heads, Timothy Doyle resigned after serving 17 years as a director of the parks and recreation department in Independence Township.

Although hisletter of resignation was received June 7 the information wasn't released until lune, 17, said? Supervisor Frank Ronk

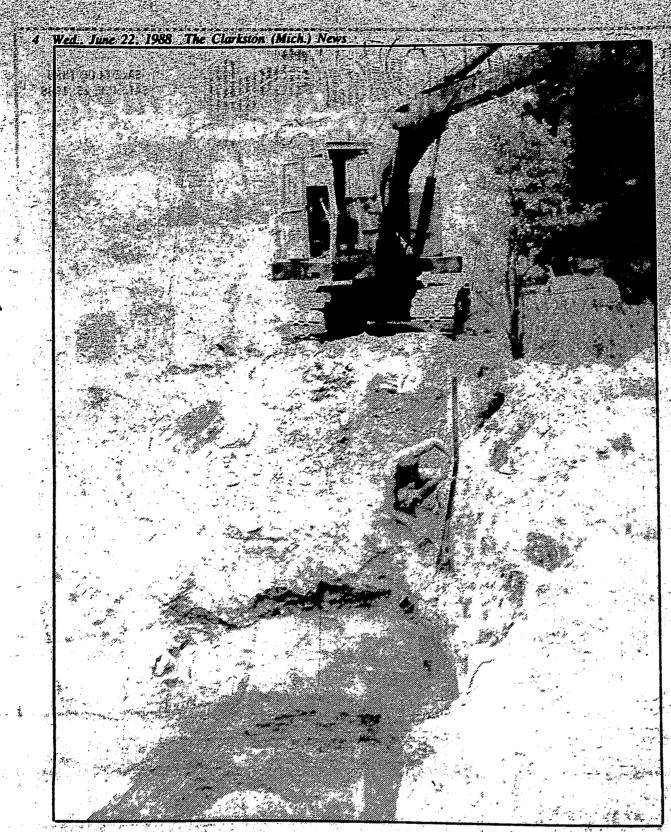

"He was a good employee and did a lot of good, things over the 17 years in programing and in advancing the recreation and seniors' programs to where it is today," said Ronk.

"He's done some excellent things, and he'll defi-nitely be missed." he said

The board was to consider hiring an interim direc-tor at the June 21 meeting. Hiring a permanent director could take six to; eight weeks:

Juit's going to slow us down a little, but we will go on," Ronk said. "The programs will continue to flow." Ronk noted that when Doyle started as director 17 years ago, the parks and recreation budget was around $30,000, Now, it's close to $1 million Doyle, whose last day was June 21, could not be reached for comment.

4. monitoring wells will track fuel direction

Now that the soil - 15 feet deep - has been replaced, Bonnie is feeling a little more assured.

"The company (Enmanco) was really good .... They were all very nice. But I wasn't leaving. I stayed all day. ... It was just something I had to do for my own peace of mind," she said.

Beneath an initial layer of clay, the excavators found sand and gravel, which allowed the fuel to travel more quickly, said Bonnie. The DNR and Enmanco are to install four monitoring wells to track the direction the fuel is traveling and to discover if any nearby wells become contaminated.

But the fuel could take a year to reach their well, and the monitoring wells will only be checked about every four months, she said.

"I'm satisfied that they're putting down wells. They say they're going to test every four months, but is that enough?"she asked. "I'm going to be worried about it for a long time."

But she'll stay on top of it and keep calling, she said.

Jim Barnum, president of Enmanco Corp., and Cheryl Wallace, environmental quality analyst with the DNR, confirmed Bonnie's information about monitoring the wells.

"We're going to see if anything got in the ground water and to see where it's going and if we need to treat it," said Wallace.

Testing every three or four months should be enough, she said, adding that substances sometimes take a long time to travel a short distance.

Baby furniture was not the norm around Emily's house, so when her mom was taking care of an infant, Emily got curious about how it might feel to sit in a high chair.

In she climbed, fastened the tray in place ... and was trapped. When you're 8 years old, being stuck in a high chair can be most embarrassing.

When Emily's mom couldn't release the tray, she telephoned the retired man who lives next door, who happens to be my father. As I grew up, I quickly learned that my dad could fix anything, from broken skates to faulty transistor radios.

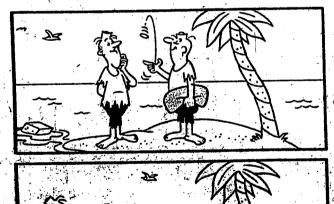

As I grew older, I realized that this faith in his abilities wasn't a simple case of childhood awe. He can fix almost anything, a fact that Emily's mom has also realized, apparently.

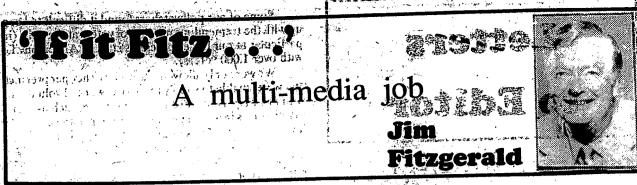

It took him several minutes, but finally a screw driver applied to the proper point freed Emily.

As my mother told me the story, she chuckled over Emily's plight. She said Emily had been crying, but knowing my father and mother, I could imagine, Emily smiling, the tears melting in her eyes as they worked their magic.

My father's soothing voice would tell Emily not to worry, because he would get her out. My mother would share a similar incident of one of her five children getting stuck somewhere. They would laugh in a sharing sort of way, allowing Emily to see the humor in the situation.

Since Father's Day was celebrated last weekend, I thought this story would be an appropriate tribute to my father. You may have noticed praise for my mother slipped in here, too. Somehow, that seems appropriate.

The chief law enforcement officer of Oakland County is also the full-time host of a daily radio show. That's bizarre. It's as if J.P. McCarthy were county prosecutor, or Dick Purtan were sheriff.

Because I much prefer sound-alikes to the ubiquitous look-alikes, I'll say one thing for Oakland County Prosecutor L. Bizarre Patterson of WXYT-AM: He sounds exactly like Noah Nelson, a reporter for NBC-TV news.

Just listen, Nelson is on Channel 4 most evenings at 6:30. Patterson is on WXYT-AM during drive-time every weekday morning. They both have the same clear, crackling, pleasant voice. You can't tell them apart.

Come to think of it, Nelson usually narrates off camera; I've never seen his face. Maybe he's really Patterson talking under an assumed name. There's no telling how many moonlighting jobs it takes to keep the Oakland County prosecutor busy enough to stay awake for an entire working day.

Patterson also is a stockbroker selling investment advice. At least he was last year when I wrote a column comparing Patterson's multi-employed situation to that of two Oakland County sheriff's deputies suspended for moonlighting as lawyers.

Impropriety double standard

Sheriff John Nichols said it made no difference that the two deputies practiced law only on their own time and took no cases conflicting with the sheriff's department. The crucial point, according to Nichols, was that deputies have access to records and files not available to most lawyers. "The way I view it, it would be a public perception of impropriety," he said. "On the other hand" <sup>J</sup> wrote at the time, "there is "On the other hand" <sup>J</sup> wrote at the time, "there is nothing illegal about Patterson holding a second job to supplement his $73,818 prosecutor's salary. Some people, however, have questioned the propriety - the ethics - of Patterson using his position and reputation to get a sales foot inside a door that might be slammed on a less powerful public official - a sheriff's deputy, for instance." Now, a year later, there is the question of whether a county prosecutor, by virtue of his powerful position, has access to records and files - and government officials - that an ordinary radio show host couldn't hope to get near.

But that's not important. What's important is that the prosecutor doesn't become bored and stale from not having enough prosecuting to do. He must be allowed to take however many moonlighting jobs required to keep him from falling asleep in office and thereby not giving taxpayers their money's worth.

But what of the successor?

Which brings up the question of Patterson's successor. Before adding the radio job to his extensive repertoire, Patterson announced he was a lame duck. In fact, there are some unbelievers who insist Patterson wouldn't have the gall to join WXYT-AM while still on the public payroll if he had to ask taxpayers for re-election.

But that's not important. What's important is who's next, and will the successor be the type of county prosecutor willing to take a second job in order to keep busy enough to stay awake? There are several candidates, but I'm betting on Richard Thompson, presently the chief assistant Oakland County prosecutor. Many veteran political observers say Thompson is so much like Patterson you can't tell the difference without drawing blood samples.

I believe it. Thompson recently called a news conference to bravely announce he's against casino gambling in Detroit, a stance as controversial as saying Tuesday follows Monday.

"Oakland County is not going to become a bedroom community for the mob," Thompson declaimed in a brilliant stroke of demogoguery and publicity-seeking that must have made even Patterson, the recognized master of such tactics, drool in envy.

To ensure victory, Thompson has to do just one more thing. He should announce that, if elected prosecutor, he will do whatever moonlighting is necessary to stay awake, even if it means replacing Bill Bonds at Channel 7.

Captain Bob Lewandowski said, "Fishing isn't fun. It's work!"

I agree. At least it made me more tired than I want to be after a day of work.

Thank goodness, Flag Day was quiet... three of the four of us are subject to sea sickness. Actually, it The four of us casted just under a million times. We caught a lot of fish, but couldn't get enough that counted until our time was up about 3 p.m.

That's 7 hours of fishing by four people, five if you count the first mate, who added to our take. Thirty five hours, no time out for lunch. I and Keith Curtis sat out the last half hour. Pansy Baldwin and brother Dair Sherman continued to the end.

was probably too quiet for good fishing.

For those of you who are like me, can't remember what we had for breakfast, June 14 was a record-heat day and the wind quit at 1:30 p.m. No wind, no waves, less motion, for fishing lures.

Last year we filled our limit in a few hours. This year it took seven Let me qualify that "we". Actually, three men caught the fish. I was ill the entire windblown, high-sea day.

I understand golfers who get 7 a.m. tee times, but that's late for fishermen. We were up at 5:30 and in line at a Maynew's restaurant for breakfast at 6:00. That's right, in line at this packed place Fishermen get up too early;

Anyway, with Big John lures and a bucket ($17.50 worth) of night crawlers, we set out for a 40 minute ride to "where they were hitting yesterday." They weren't Tuesday. Captain Bob moved the boat a dozen times as we kept throwing back Sheep's Heads and too small walleye.

each felling the other about their luck or lack thereof. Over the speaker we learned all experienced the same low numbers and small sizes. Maybe the big fish communicate, too.

One observation we all noticed and talked about was the large number of boats you see in all the marinas. Then, the large number of boats you see on the lake. It's a wonder there are any fish left. Then you look around and realize, boy, there's a lot of water, and you have to be lucky to be in the right place at the right time with the right fure and wearing the right hat to catch a keeper.

You also have to be a little bit nuts to stand in one place, bracing your legs against the boat, and repeatedly throwing a worm 40 feet out into the water, reeling it in time after time for seven hours. It's ridiculous to do that for seven hours. It would have been just right to have quit after six hours.

Call for manners

As a former student of Clarkston Senior High School, I was absolutely appalled at the actions of some of those parents, friends and relatives that attended commencement exercises last Wednesday evening. So very often adults are quick to expect young people to have poor manners and the inability to know what is appropriate behavior, and yet it was the adults who greeted our graduating seniors and underclassmen with those social errors.

The enthusiastic graduates behaved properly, and I am proud to call them peers.

Seated all around me, however, were many adults who found it necessary to sit as our national anthem and flag were presented to us. Sure, the heat was uncomfortable, but surely not so bad that a person could not handle standing for three to four minutes.

An even more disgraceful act was the talking, waving to graduates and cat calls as the invocation and Lord's Prayer were shared with students and friends.

As a former Madrigal Singer, I know that the Lord's Prayer was not taught to us as a piece of music but as a piece of literature to be shared with those we sang it for. Whether the audience was Buddhist, Protestant,

Jewish or Catholic, it was too bad that those young adults did not have the role models that could appreciate and teach them to be respectful for just what it was; a prayer. In any setting or religion a prayer deserves respect whether the audience believes in it or not. Therefore, the talking should have subsided for a few moments. Young people always learn from their elders and adults. I wish the Class of 1988 the very best of luck and the wisdom to have learned something from their parents that night.

Phone call reasons

As chairperson of Election Day activities for Clarkston's recent millage election, I wish to extend my sincere apology to the woman who wrote the letter printed last week and all other voters who felt we were harassing them on election days

Please let me explain why this activity was vital tovictory Invretrospect, with a 1,400-vote victory margin, our victory. maybe only one reminder phone call may have been:

Some of our pollwatchers found it difficult to keep up with the tremendous number of voters at the polls (in particular at our larget precincts such as Andersonville with over 1,000 voters).

We were only allowed one pollwatcher per precinct and were unable to supply these overworked volunteers with any help. Also, mistakes were made, such as identifying voters in wrong precincts, missing/names, etc. We hope to improve the system in future elections.

As for "invading privacy" in our identifying those who have voted, whether or not you vote has always been public record, available information to anyone who requests this information: "How? you vote is private, not "if" you vote.

Those dedicated men and women who phoned you TE were all volunteers - moms, dads and citizens concerned about our children and their future.

They did not enjoy making those second, third and fourth phone calls any more than you liked receiving them, but they know they had to be done.

Again, please accept our apology but understand

Carole Kammer

You came through

Thank you, Clarkston. As a student of Clarkston High School, I would like to thank the residents of Clarkston for voting to pass the millage and bond issues.

After two earlier millage failures, we began to wonder about the community's support of our schools, and as June 13 rolled around, we began t worry. But you came through for us.

I realize that the state needs a better way to fund schools, but I am very grateful that the community of Clarkston could look past the dollar signs and see the needs of our youth

Thanks to you, we will keep many of our favorite teachers, we will still have all of the valuable extracurricular activities, we will save our precious accreditation and have our much needed building repai All this means a lot to us, and it would ve been disastrous to lose

Once again, thank you, Clarkston residents and especially the Blue Ribbon Kids Committee. I am proud to live here, knowing that our community cares about us and our future.

Stumps do count

I can remember when I was about 7 or 8 years old when my father took me out on Flecter's Floodwaters and all-I could see across the lake were stumps.

The very biggest boat motor that could be used was a 25 horsepower because of all the stumps everywhere.

Over Memorial Day weekend, I was up at Flecter's Floodwaters and there were hardly any stumps there. Also, the fishing was so lousy that all we caught was one keeper-size bass. Every year at Flecter's, I have always caught pike and bass, but it seems that the lake is useless. I'm mentioning this because of the recent fights over at Lake Oakland. Please, do nature a big favor and use the stumps as survival means for the fish!!

Don't fence it in

As a Clarkston resident and homeowner whose property abuts Lakeview Cemetery, I feel it is my responsibility to inform the tax-paying citizens of Independence Township of the fencing project for Lakeview Cemetery.

It is my understanding that fencing was considered in the past and was strongly opposed by the residents of Independence Township as an unnecessary expenditure.

The caretaker of Lakeview Cemetery at the present time has started the process of fencing in the cemetery. The fencing is not only extremely costly, but it is not necessary.

As a resident close to the cemetery, I view all kinds of favorable activity and have observed no vandalism The cemetery is not only a place to visit loved ones, but it is also a pleasant place to take walks and rediscover the history of our community.

Are we fencing something in or everyone out? Is this the choice of the residents of Independence Township or one person's choice? Will the park be next?

Board accepts bids for 5 school buses Call The Clarkston

Five new buses will be purchased for the Clarkston school district.

The board of education approved bids for two 72passenger buses and three 19-passenger special education buses at the June 13 board meeting.

Cost for the 72-passenger buses is $39,425 per bus, for a total of $78,850. Cost for the special education buses is $21,195, for a total of $63,585.

"We needed six, but the board only purchased three in February because of the financial situation," said Mel Vaara, assistant superintendent and director of auxiliary services. "And now we will add two more."

Vaara said many of the school buses are 15 years old, have over 150,000 miles on them and need frequent costly repairs. He added that the special education buses are also old and have over 150,000 miles on them.

"We are replacing two of them, and adding a third because we've added a route," he said.

The new special education buses are also a little larger than the older vehicles.

Opinions sought

Nearby residents may want express their opinions on a proposed rezoning of four acres on the south side of Indianwood Road, west of Bullard Road.

A public hearing is scheduled for 7:30 p.m., Thursday, June 23, at the Independence Township Planning Commission meeting at the Township Hall Annex, 90 N. Main Street, Clarkston.

Donna Stephens proposes the rezoning of four acres from rural residential to suburban residential. Suburban residential requires a minimum 33,000 square feet of land and 125 feet of road frontage. Rural residential has a three-acre minimum lot size.

For more information, call the building department at 625-8111.

Walk skateboards?

An ordinance banning bicycle riding on downtown Clarkston sidewalks already is on the books and plans are under way to add skateboarding to the list.

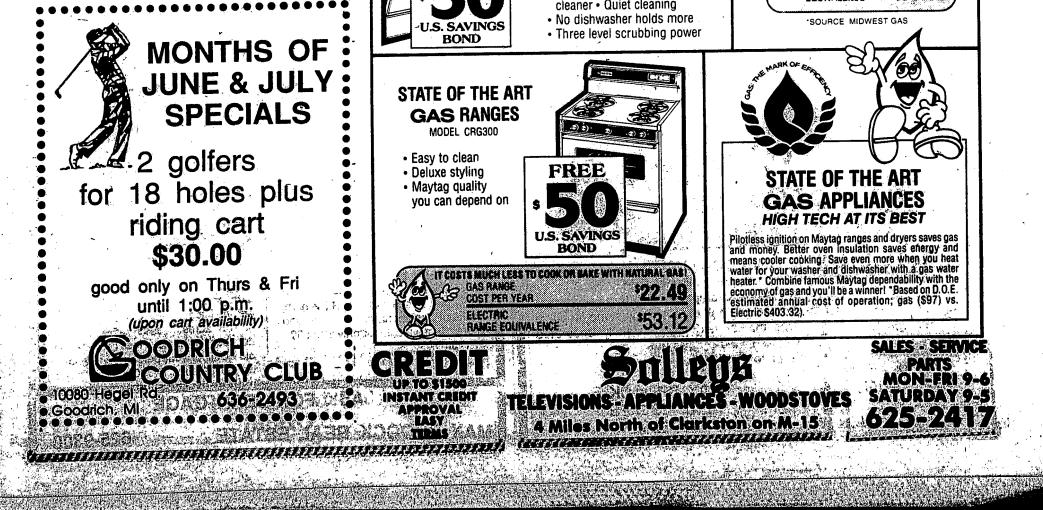

During its regular meeting on June 13, the Clarkston Village Council instructed its attorney, John Steckling, to research the issue and find the best possible route to take.

Either the no-skateboarding rule will be added to the bike ordinance or a separate document will be written, Steckling said.

Rochester has a separate ordinance dealing with skateboarders, said Village Clerk Norma Goyette.

Council members agreed that the skateboarding that occurs downtown should be stopped.

"I think that it's good idea," said Trustee Eric Haven. "They can't ride their bikes on the sidewalks."

Students protest high school graduation policy

BY PAT YOUNG Clarkston News Staff Writer

A small but vocal group of people in attendance at the June 9 Clarkston school board meeting made it very clear they were not happy with graduation policy regarding required credits

"There are some kids who can't graduate because they have to make (classes) up," said Cecilia Gritzinger. "I think they should be able to go through commencement if they (are short) a credit or less. It's only once."

School Board President Janet Thomas told Gritzinger that the student handbook was very clear on the subject.

"It is not a new policy. It's a five- or six-year-old policy," Thomas said of the Clarkston High School building policy, which states that no student may graduate without the required credits.

"It was not that way when I graduated in 1969. I was half-credit short and got to go through graduation," Gritzinger said. "I want to change that policy. The kids don't care (if the ones who are short go through commencement ceremonies)."

Gritzinger demanded to know why the policy was changed and who changed it.

Thomas told her the board approved the policy, and that if they wanted to discuss it, they would have to come to the board meeting when policy is reviewed.

Karri Reoch, a CHS senior who is short a credit or less this year, was with Gritzinger at the meeting.

"I'm a high school student who was supposed to graduate. This is hurting me, not you," she said. "I have a son, but went back to school and I was denied. I cannot go through commencement now."

Thomas said, "You already made a decision, young lady. You chose to do something different," adding that it wouldn't be fair to the rest of the students who fulfilled their graduation requirements if she were allowed to graduate with less.

Reoch and Gritzinger said they would be back this summer when the board discussed policy.

The angry group left the board meeting, but not before Reoch; in tears, cursed the school board.

Superintendent Milford Mason explained later that the graduation policy was changed in the mid-70s, because it was a gray area.

"The staff and administration decided on a change because it went from half-credit short to 1 credit short, and it was hard to draw the line," Mason said.

"There is a policy, and we're not going to make an exception," said CHS Principal Dr. Robert Burek when contacted after the meeting. "Lunderstand where they're coming from. It's an emotional issue.

"They want desperately to march across that stage. It's a landmark in their lives," Burek said. "But the integrity of a diploma requires full credits (16 credits this year, 21 by the time sophomores graduate two years from now):"

Burek said he didn't think any policy is immune from review, but added, "I'm a strong believer that, if it is considered, staff should be considered, too.

"I don't see a change (in the policy) this summer, but, sure, it's possible there could be changes down the road," he said. "I think it's a fair policy, but I see both sides of the issue."

He said Reoch came to him and told him she was going to the school board about it.

"I understand her position," Burek said. "It's a toughie. It's a close call. But I wouldn't touch any policy during the summer without staff, students and parents involved."

Dry weather could force ban

(WEATHER, from Page 1) the water supply and asks that everyone voluntarily limit their water usage - even those with personal wells.

"It would be a good idea to limit ... water because of the water table levels, especially shallow wells," he said, adding that wells at 35 to 40 feet are dangerously low.

Fire Chief Gar Wilson said burning has been banned for three weeks in the township because of the hot, dry weather.

"Until we get a significant amount of rain, we probably won't allow burning permits," he said.

Firefighters haven't had problems with low pressure because they haven't had to fight any large fires probably because burning is banned, he said.

Grass fires are up, though, mostly along I-75 and other major roads - probably due to people flicking their cigarettes out of their car windows, said Wilson.

"People should remember to put their cigarettes out in the ashtrays of their cars," he said. "People don't realize what one cigarette can do." Although the fires haven't been serious, they tie up manpower, he said, mentioning that two medical emergencies occurred Sunday at the same time as a grass fire.

On the whole, people have been cooperative and understand when they're told they can't burn, said Wilson.

"We're getting very few complaints," he said.

House to make move

Ed Salter of Springfield Township received permission from the township board on June 9 to move a house from one lot, a lakefront lot on Long Point, to another lot on Hillman.

The house moving is to take place as soon as permits are in order and the move can be arranged. It requires about a 1/4-mile trip in the Big Lake area of the township.

Salter is moving the home off the lakefront property, where he plans to build a new home, to the Hillman lot, where he plans to redo the older home.

2 public hearings set for June 30

Residents have a chance to voice their opinions on a busy intersection and on an addition to the zoning ordinance.

Public hearings are scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday, June 30, before the Independence Township Planning Commission at the Township Hall Annex, 90 N. Main, Clarkston.

At the intersection of Sashabaw and Maybee roads, planning commission members propose reducing the intensity of usage by rezoning the back portions of some residential lots from highway commercial to single family residential; Bob Gott's auto repair business from highway commercial to local commercial; Ken Winship's photography studio and other retail businesses from planned shopping center to local commercial; and another parcel from highway commercial to local commercial.

To improve the zoning ordinance, township planning consultant Richard Carlisle and township engineering consultant Dave Lakin proposed adding engineering design standards to the ordinance that would cover the design and construction of subdivisions and site improvements including: sanitary sewer, storm sewer, water main, site grading, retaining walls, safety paths and paving.

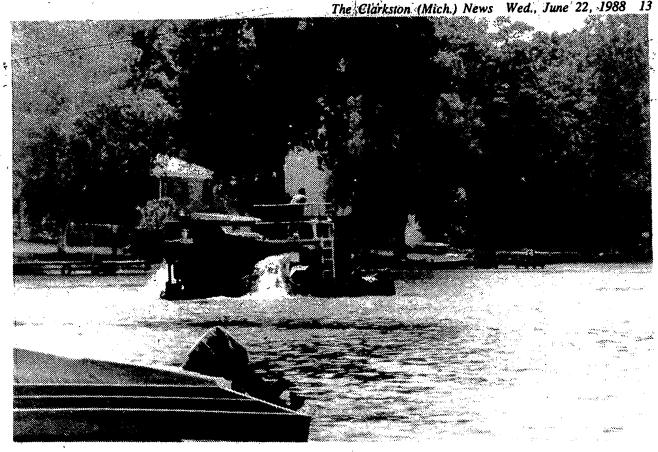

For more information, call the building department at 625-8111.

Bid to keep offices cool

O'Brien & Gary's Heating, Cooling and Plumbing of Pontiac was the successful bidder on air conditioning the newly renovated office space in the basement of the Springfield Township Hall.

The new office space, approximately 1,100 square feet, houses the assessor and parks and recreation department for Springfield Township.

O'Brien & Gary's bid of $1,800 was for a 2 1/2-ton unit for the basement area.

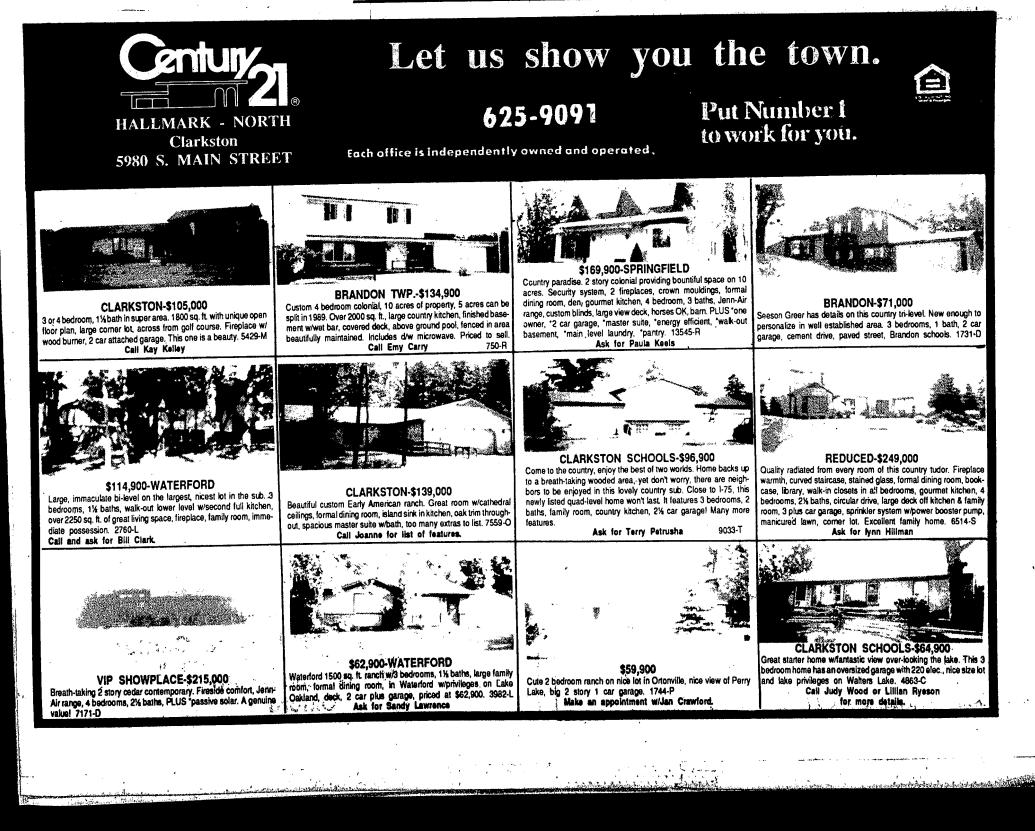

WEED HARVESTING on Walters Lake is to become a twice-a-year event. The next harvesting is scheduled for the end of July or the beginning of August, said engineer Gerald Cleary, whose Auburn Hills firm planned the weed control program for the lake in the northeast quadrant of Independence Township off Clarkston Road. Chemicals were applied in May to the shallow parts of the lake, where the harvester wouldn't work, he said. Removing the weeds also removes nutrients, so weeds will have a tougher time multiplying, he said. The harvesting program compensates for lawn fertilizer and septic tanks that feed the lake. Lake residents pay for the weed control. (Photo by Julie Campe)

Airports - with all their hellos and goodbyes - can leave a person feeling thoughtful and strange, or even sad. On May 23, Don Phillips didn't even try to hide the tears as he sat on the commuter plane in Sacramento before flying to San Francisco to catch a flight home to Detroit.

Later, he tried to explain the feeling during a break from his job as zoning inspector for Independence Township. He gazed off into the distance and shook his head, remembering. "It was very hard to say goodbye to all of them," he said. Only on his way home did the affects of the recent events hit him fully. The Union Lake resident, adopted in Pennsylvania at three weeks of age and raised as an only child in Michigan, had finally met his birth mother and his brothers after searching for 12 years.

The experience was such a good one that happiness at finding them and sadness at leaving them left him a jumble of emotions when they parted.

"I never expected to find anybody. I had given up. I could understand if Mom didn't want to see me. But I wanted to find my brother - then to find out I had three of them - it was kind of a shock," he said.

"We had so much time to make up and only five days to do it. We never got a chance to touch on half the things."

But the events have changed his life.

"I have a different outlook on everything now," he said. "Whereas everything was just kind of so-so, I kind of feel like there's a whole new life opening up. It's hard to put into words."

After 12 years of searching, the 34-year-old received a phone call March 9 from his brother in California, who had been told about Don by Roy Fandrei, a witness listed on his mother's birth certificate.

Don was shocked but ecstatic. Letters and phone calls flowed between the two states, followed by Don's visit.

His oldest brother, Mike, and his wife, Kitty, met Don at the airport and took him to see his mother, Sharon Noland, where she worked caring for an elderly person.

"I walked up to her, and I could see she was apprehensive," he said. "I said, 'Mom, long time no see.' She kind of laughed and cried. That kind of broke the tension."

After that, they talked non-stop, and Don learned about his family and met all but his niece, Angie.

"I felt almost an immediate bond with all of them," he said. "It's a real different feeling than you would have if you had met a friend. It was a totally different feeling. It was great. I wouldn't mind having that feeling more often."

There were Mike and Kitty and their children, Wendy and April (who shares Don's Jan. 3 birthday); Bill, and Mary and their daughter, Angie, (and another one expected in August); and David Jones, the youngest brother. "They're just very nice people," said Don. "They called me brother. They treated me just like I hadn't been in for a few weeks instead of 34 years. They were very warm and friendly. There was no holding back. They were very open. "It was fantastic, It couldn't have been any better."

He and Bill, who look alike (they favor their grandfather), share a lot of similarities - the same hair and eye color, beards and the same tastes in music, books and sports teams.

"Between Bill and I it was scary," he said. "We both had the same number of cars. We had the same types, only the years were a year apart. ... Many times, we'd both go to say something at the same time, and it would be the same thing. It was like we were tuned into each other's wavelengths and what we were thinking."

- He shared the same sense of humor with all of his brothers.

And his mother was wonderful.

"I felt a bond with her. It was hard for me to leave ber," he said. "She's a very sincere person. She seems very caring. She had some guilt about what she did. I told her, "There's no need for it. You did what you had to do, and I don't hold it against you."

"She's very close to the boys. She's a very loving mother. ... She's proud of all of them, and I can see why. They're a great bunch of guys."

He found that he's a mixture of Scottish, English, Irish and Sioux Indian. He's also a second cousin to Leo Gorcey of Bowery Boys fame.

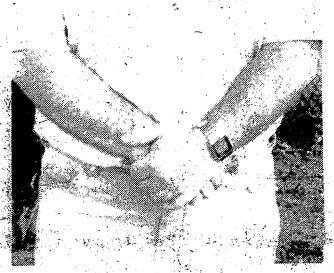

In asking about his heritage, Don discovered the circumstances surrounding his adoption. It was traumatic for his mother, and she would not want the story told in a newspaper, he said.

told in a newspaper, he said. "I understand what she did. I don't hold anything against her," she said. "She was depressed for a long, long time (afterward), to the point that she knew my name but blocked out my last name. So that when they told her Don Phillips was trying to get in touch with her, she didn't know who I was."

His mother plans to visit in October, when she'll meet Don's wife, Denise, and their children Jessica, 13,

"She's never been to Michigan, but she loves water, so I thought I'd take her to one of the Great Lakes," he said.

As Don spoke about his adventures, his eyes sparkled, and he couldn't stop a smile from invading his face.

"It's probably one of the best experiences I've ever had," he said. "There was nothing bad about it at all. ... You never think it's going to happen, and it does."

Michigan State freshman caps season by making varsity golf team

BY PETER AUCHTER Clarkston News Staff Writer

Sports

In high school, Gunnar Karlstrom tried all kinds of sports. But his heart held a special place for only one. The 1987 graduate of Clarkston High School recently topped off his freshman year at Michigan State University by making the five-man varsity golf team. His success is directly related to the sporting atmosphere at his Sashabaw Road, Independence Township, residence.

"I don't think there is a Karlstrom on this earth that doesn't golf," he said, and his parents are avid golfers.

But that doesn't necessarily mean success came easily. At Michigan State, the roster for the varsity team is decided in the fall by a 144-hole tournament. Karlstrom didn't make the cut and he had nobody to blame but himself.

"I surprised myself," he said. "I played just awful in the fall qualifier. My short game needs to be worked on."

Spartans coach Bruce Fossum red-shirted the freshman. For all intents and purposes, he was told, "Wait until next year." Then came the Spartan Invitational.

Playing like a seasoned veteran, he finished fifth in that tourney. He was rewarded for his fine effort when Fossum placed him on the five-man traveling team to finish out the spring season.

Once he made the grade, everything seemed to fall into place.

"I had a really good year," he said. "I want to repeat my performance - and maybe even get a little better - but I still have a lot to learn."

During the spring, the golf team stays busy by entering tournaments every weekend. Players are gone from Wednesday until Saturday or Sunday most weeks. The team traveled to Hawaii, New Mexico, Florida and all around the Big Ten.

Score-wise, atournament at Kent State (10th place) was his best performance for the Spartans. For entertainment purposes, however, the Ohio State meet held a lot of interest for him.

Karlstrom spied a short, older blond man watching the players on the course while walking from hole to hole. The man resembled Jack Nicholas, a superstar of golf, but he just wasn't sure.

He discovered later Nicholas' son, Gary, plays for Ohio State and that the elder sportsman sometimes drops by to see him play.

Now that Karlstrom's home for the summer, his days will be filled. He's working at White Lake Oaks and plans to get in plenty of golfing.

His father will be around to make sure he doesn't lose his competitive edge during the summer months.

"There is a pretty good rivalry here," he said.

Registration up for hoops camp by CHS grad

Due to the tremendous response, the enrollment for the third annual Tim McCormick basketball camp has been increased.

Originally, the cut-off number of kids was 150 kids, said Mike McCormick, Tim's younger brother and one of the coaches in the camp. But an extra 10 spots have been added for the camp that begins June 27.

"We decided to step it up a little because of the great demand," he said. "We are trying to expand every year and this is going to be our best year."

Last summer the camp drew 155 kids from grade four through nine to the gym in Clarkston High School.

Every aspect of basketball is emphasized at the camp. Offensive fundamentals, in...ding shooting, ballhaudling, passing and teamwork, will be stressed. Defensive work such as stance and footwork will be covered as well.

While there is a lot of work involved, everybody has a lot of fun. including the coaches.

"We have as much fun as the kids do," McCormick said.

He spent two seasons with Seattle before he was traded to the Philadelphia 76ers in 1986.

The CHS grad developed some friendships with 76ers teammates and one of them - All-Star Charles Barkley - made an appearance at the camp last year.

"That was a once in a lifetime experience for Clarkston," McCormick said.

The camp, running from June 27 until July 1, will be divided into two sessions, one for those in grade four through six and another for grades seven through nine. Registration at the door is not guaranteed.

NBA memorabilia will be awarded to the campers throughout the week as well as official camp T-shirts. A teammate of McCormick's on the New Jersey Nets may make an appearance one day for a special treat.

Weekend warriors of the sporting variety take heed. I'm onto your little mind games.

Sure, you pot-bellied guys can go for the gusto with the best of the playground athletes for about five minutes and then wither away to nothing but a pile of sweat in tight shorts.

Instead of admitting you're tired and out of shape, the "in" thing to do today is to say, "OK, guys, it's halftime."

Then while everybody spends a few minutes catching their breath or quaffing their favorite refreshment, friends begin to talk among themselves in a shady area.

The next thing you know, the game's over and everybody's happy. Hey, what happened to the game?

Has this ever happened to you? What can be done to combat people who constantly avoid physically taxing situations?

I fell for this new trick of the terminally lazy hook, line and sinker twice over the weekend.

First, "we" (a generic term for me and the guys) started a game of street football. My team scored on its first two possessions - mainly because the opposition was too busy laughing at my quarterbacking ability - and the other guys scored once in one attempt. Arena Football here we come.

Then, just when the sweat started seeping out of my pores like rats on a sinking ship, somebody has the nerve to call halftime. The next thing you know, we're sitting on the porch watching the world go by.

Strike one!

Later that same day, we decided to switch to basketball. But instead of following the rules, we made up our own as the game went'on.

No out of bounds, no fouls and no traveling violations. We made it easy for all to play and enjoy. Anything short of murder was allowed if you thought it could net your team two points.

This time around, the contest lasted a little longer. But sure enough, before anybody collapsed due to exhaustion (or from quaffing too many fluids) some wise guy called "halftime."

You can guess what happened next. Everybody kind of went their own way and the game was over.

Strike two!

Much wiser, I went home for Father's Day.

After giving Pop his present, it was time once again to hit the courts. This time the opposition was my little brother, who is now both taller and bigger than me.

Before we got started, the plan was to play a best two-of-three series to determine the household champion.

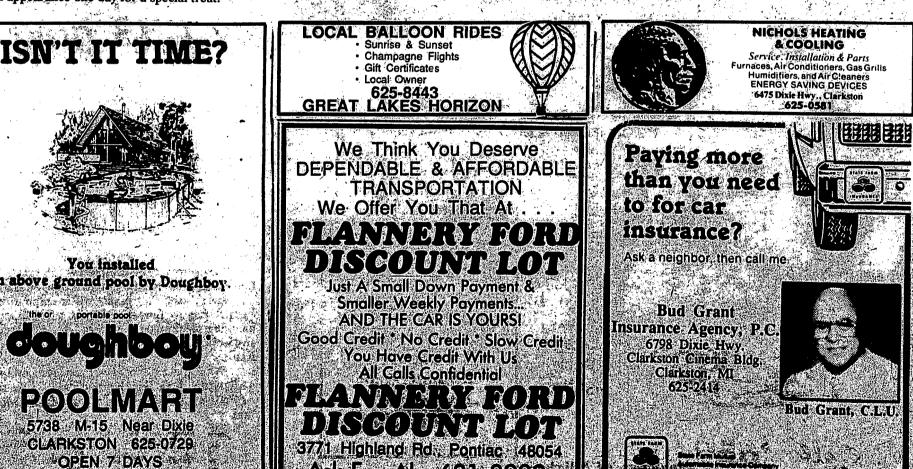

After an extremely long first game - I imagine I raced back and forth down the driveway at least five or six times - I finally realized something:

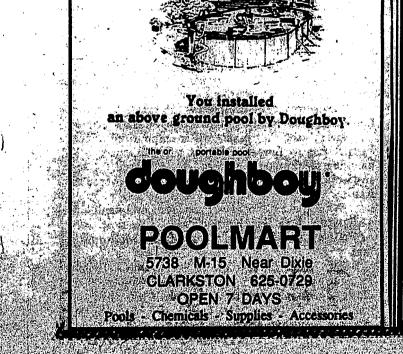

Halftime (of the permanent variety) isn't all that bad.

I guess an old dog can learn a new trick.

present reasons they like school

BY PAT YOUNG Clarkston News Staff Writer

A flurry of activities during "Appreciation Week' (May 23-27) at Clarkston Elementary School honored staff, parents, volunteers, support staff and students for their efforts. There were luncheons, appreciation certificates, buttons and other related events and mementos.

In another end of-the-year activity, the school initiated a new program - the V.I.P. Day. Students could bring any adult as their special guest to the school on June 3. An afternoon program offered V.I.P.'s the opportunity to visit the classroom and to attend a half-hour presentation on the school.

But perhaps what summed up the year best for students and staff at Clarkston Elementary was an appreciation booklet prepared for the occasion.

'The main part of this booklet contains students' responses to our asking them to finish the sentence, 'I love Clarkston El because ...' There was no editing of the kids' comments," said Principal William Potvin. "I think they are refreshing, honest, off-the-cuff comments of 5to 12-year-olds."

Following are a few excerpts from the book.

Kindergartners finished the sentence with some enlightening responses reflecting their first year of public education:

"... Mrs. Allison is so nice and riding my invisible horse." Jessica Nowak

"... of recess, Centers, and teacher and the bus." Lauren Stout

"... we have dinosaur puzzles." Joshua Simpson "... I have friends." Steven Parks

By the time pupils make it through first grade, their school experiences have broadened:

"... they have nice teachers and I like recess and I

... I have a funny teacher." Megan Krigbaum

"... of recess and the work that we do is fun, like writing stories on Fridays, I have a lot of friends and at recess I like to jump rope with my friends. All day we do it too. I like the teacher. She is very nice and I like her a lot because she lets us do nice things." Alison Kolody By second grade, pupils reflect more "worldly" views:

... there are a lot of cute girls." Peter Matthews

... no one takes drugs." Angie Fortuna

"... we have a super-duper school." Laura Tatu

"... I like the lunches and I like the teachers. I love math and I like Mr. Malone because he cleans the school." Jeremy White

"... the teachers are very very nice. Recesses are very long. You learn a lot. I love the BEAR club. I love Mrs. Wenger." Angie Thomas

"... I don't have to walk far to get home !!" Elizabeth Osterkamp

The third-, fourth- and fifth-graders illustrated how their horizons have broadened even further through a variety of responses:

... it has taught me more and the extra stuff is better and at my old school they didn't even have that." Mike Allingham

"... the principal is grrrrrreat!" Chris Gehrke "... I'm learning some very neat things every day."

Nikki Larson

"... all my friends are here and the school is full of spirit and spunk!" Becky Moore

"... of the great knowledgeable teachers and because of Clarkston Elementary's great kids." Brad Agar "... it has funny and nice teachers and friends and they give you a smart brain." Kevin Kinley .. of my great friends and a good clean education." Tina Surre

"... the salad is good. Tlike their pizza and egg salad playground and nice teachers." Ryan Rosenthal

"... the teachers teach well, and they make sure we learn the things so we can get a job when we grow up and have money for food and clothing." Becky Moore

"... it's rad we get to play Frogger. Frogger is a game that is when a person swings you go through them and that's the game. Art is cool!" Jennifer Fitch

... I like the principal because he is nice and smart and makes the rules." Scott Watson

"... I can trade baseball cards. It's really neat! I could trade a Benny Santiago for a Mark McGuire." Shaun Manning

"... they always let you have another chance." Heidi Olafsson

"... there are nice people and I like how they explain things." Heather Jewell

"... my mom is a volunteer again. Everyone is cool." Derek Bannasch

... I like the work. The recesses are fun. I like to swing. The pizza is great on Tuesday." Jeff Fredericks ... I have many friends and when we make poems

I like it very much." Andrew Szykula

Hoedown day at Clarkston El.

Masterminded by super-mom room mothers Corena Bell and Lisa Pambid, an all-day program at Clarkston Elementary School gave third-graders a living history lesson.

Parent volunteers and other resource people donated their time and expertise to teach the children about historical figures and events during the "Reach for the Stars" program.

When half-blooded Indian Victor VanHentenryck, a former Clarkston resident, told about Indians, he also mentioned the origin of fringe - that part of the leather clothing that is cut into thin strips to hang from the sleeves or pant legs.

Before the students ended the day by square dancing with the Virginia Wheel dance group, they learned about the following people by doing the following projects: Benjamin Franklin, making a kite; Neil Armstrong, playing a race to the moon game; Beethoven, making chimes; Amelia Earhart, making an airplane; Rembrandt, finger painting; Babe Ruth, making Baby Ruth candy bars; Alexander Graham Bell, making a telephone from two cups and string; Einstein, inventing something out of a collection of miscellaneous items; George Washington Carver, making peanut butter items; Helen Keller, coloring a Braille clown blindfolded; Jack Nicklaus, playing Frisbee golf.

The Clarkston (Mich.) News Wed. June 22, 1988 Realtors help homeless check for $2,000 was recently donated by the North Oakland County Board of Realtors to help start up a new program for the homeless.

"The association is concerned not just with homes, but also the homeless," said Jim Fuller, president of the board of realtors.

The check was given to the YWCA Referral and Resource Center for the Homeless in Pontiac, in conjunction with the National Association of Realtors American Home Week. The money was used to purchase office equipment and telephones for the new program.

"We just helped them get started," Fuller said.

The donation was raised during a Las Vegas Night benefit at the Deer Lake Racquet Club in April. Additional money raised during the event will be used to help needy individuals in North Oakland County with home repairs, Fuller said.

The North Oakland County Board of Realtors is comprised of over 1,000 realtors in the area.

Speed caps asked

Three new requests for 25 mph speed limits were considered by the Springfield Township board on June 9:

-Bigelow Road from King to Davisburg -Bridge Lake Road from Davisburg to Rattalee Lake Road

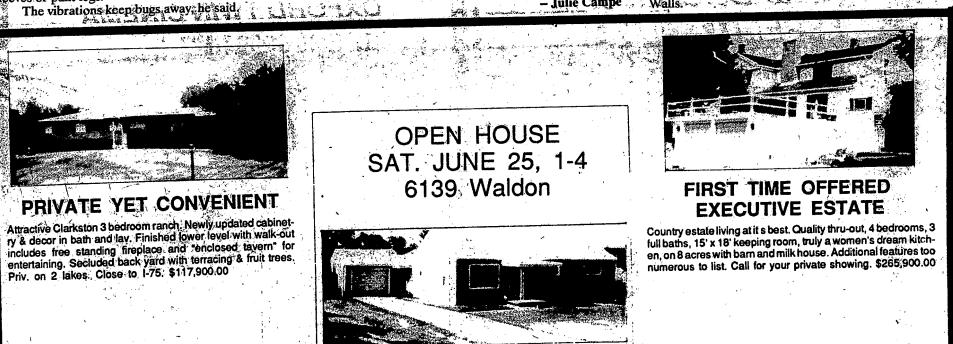

-Oakhill from Dixie Highway to Kier

The board voted to forward residents' petitions on the Bigelow Road request to the Oakland County Road Commission and request that the area be posted as residential, meaning a 25 mph speed limit.

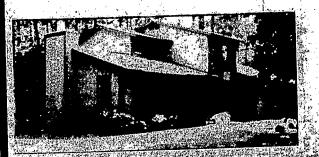

In the case of the Bridge Lake Road request, they voted to forward the request to the road commission, but only from Rattalee Lake Road to Holcomb, because they did not believe the other portion of the road qualified under the residential requirement.

The board voted to turn down the request on Oakhill Road for a residential speed limit.

"Oakhill Road is maintained at a width and quality to support higher speed limits," said Supervisor Collin Walls.

Artist shares painting talents through teaching

BY PAT YOUNG Clarkston News Staff Writer

From the basement studio of her tree-shaded home on Kingfisher Lane, Nola Hall keeps up a hobby she acquired 20 years ago.

Nola says she "dabbled in painting" when she was in school, but began the hobby in earnest when she married her husband, Dennis, and wanted to decorate their home.

She was also inspired by her sister-in-law, Charla, who is also an artist and has a studio in Hudson.

The Halls lived in Troy, then spent a year in Washington, D.C., before moving to the Clarkston area three years ago with their daughter, Christi, who will be a junior at Northwood Institute in Midland this fall.

Dennis; a General Motors manager in future products, was part of a special staff investigating synthetic fuel for Congress while the family was in Washington.

Nola says she didn't paint for the year they were in Washington, D.C., but resumed her hobby when they came back to Michigan.

She also teaches her art to others. She taught adult education painting classes through Clarkston schools and taught two winters at the Independence Township Senior Citizen Center. Two days a week, she instructs in her basement studio.

"I enjoy teaching people and seeing their excitement when they take home a painting," she says. She does demonstrations as well, recently entertaining 62 guests at a mother-daughter banquet at Clarkston Eagles 3373.

Though she has done commissioned work and frequently sells her artwork, Nola still thinks of her painting as a hobby. She never enters her work in shows.

"The enjoyment for me is getting other people to produce work they are thrilled with," she says.

When her daughter was in grade school, Nola says she would volunteer for art projects when plays and school fairs came up.

"I always liked doing that sort of thing," she says. The petite, blond artist likes to paint landscapes, seascapes, florals, still life and groupings of paintings. She usually paints in oil.

"Oil is the easiest to teach," she says. "It's forgiving."

But teaching and painting don't take up her entire life. She says she is very "stingy" with her time on weekends, preferring to go up north with her family to their Higgins Lake cabin or their boat at Charlevoix. In the winter, they enjoy skiing weekends.

At home, though, Nola says she enjoys her hobby. "It's a release, and it makes you so much more aware. You look at things more intensely," she says. "I've had students tell me they never noticed how the clouds looked or how blue the sky was before they started painting."

Mini-sub for Springfield

Barnett Acres, a six-lot subdivision, received final preliminary plat approval in a 6-1 vote by the Springfield Township Board on June 9.

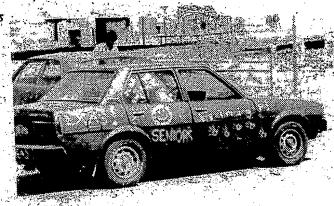

Supervisor Collin Walls voted "no" because he wanted utility poles moved rather than left spanning the parcel of land.

Developer Dave Carter of Carter MacIntosh Group Inc. said it was unreasonable to go to the expense of moving the poles, because only a couple of lots would be involved and there was plenty of room to build without being affected by the poles.

Building cannot begin until state and county requirements are met and final plat approval is granted by the township board.

Carter estimated that it would probably be September before a building permit would be pulled on the development at Hall and Andersonville roads, which has CLARKSTON HIGH SCHOOL seniors decorated their cars with various sayings last week to show the world they were ready for graduation on Wednesday, June 15.

Sign law change likely

Springfield Township residents won't need permits to put political signs in their own front yards if an ordinance amendment is approved.

The township board approved the amended ordinance on first reading at the June 9 meeting. It will be published for second reading, and a vote on final approval, at the July 14 meeting.

Under the proposed change, residents would still need permits to place political signs anywhere other their own yards.

The political sign ordinance has been in effect through two elections and worked well, according to Supervisor Collin Walls. One purpose is to keep signs from being posted illegally (illegally posted signs are removed). Another is to get them removed on a timely Parents who watch their kids play soccer at Clintonwood Park will soon have a better parking lot.

About 1,900 feet of bumper blocks are to provide parking spaces on the new gravel lot next to the new fields on Clarkston-Road, Independence Township.

The board approved the $3,875 cost for 250 concrete bumper blocks from low bidder Nu-Cast Step and Supply Co., Redford. The price includes installation.

Sewer cleaner bought

Orion Township can have its sewer jet back; now hat Independence Township doesn't have to borrow it. The township board waived the bid procedure and unanimously approved the purchase of a new sewer jet, a tool to clean sewers, to cost $78,398, less an $8,000 trade in allowance on the township's used sewer jet. The GMC chassis diesel-powered sewer jet was ordered through Oakland County to get a better price in a bulk purchase; said George Anderson, director of the township Department of Public Works. The county purchases from Jack Doheny Supplies Inc. of Northville, which handles over 20 percent of all sewer cleaning equipment sales in Michigan.

Bluebirds find happiness at park

BY PAT YOUNG Clarkston News Staff Writer

30 Wed., June 22, 1988 The Clarkston (Mich.) News

Visitors to Independence Oaks County Park may be pleasantly surprised to find that a long-time Michigan resident with a beautiful song and a bright blue coat is making a comeback.

Thanks largely to the efforts of a Royal Oak couple whose love of the outdoors and interest in ornithology turned a hobby into a wildlife project, the eastern bluebird has a home, dozens of them in fact, at the county park. off Sashabaw Road in Independence Township.

Mary Karshner and her husband Lee Deneweth, along with other family members, donated over 224 hours last year to constructing, installing and monitoring 42 bluebird houses at Independence Oaks. They added about eight this year plus another 18 at Orion Oaks County Park in Orion Township.

All but four of the houses at Independence Oaks were inhabited in 1987, yielding 37 bluebird fledglings, as well as tree swallows, chickadees and house wrens.

"Mary and Lee have been coming out to the park and participating in programs for years," says Lynn Conover, assistant naturalist at Independence Oaks. "They wanted to give something back."

Conover says the bluebird population is even higher this year, compared to the population at this time last year. And that's good news.

Once one of the most common songbirds, the eastern bluebird population has declined 70-90 percent in the past 50 years. There are several reasons for this, Karshner says.

Because bluebirds don't eat insects during flight, preferring to take insects on the ground, they have been exposed to the long-time problem of DDT. They also face loss of natural habitat, because the use of metal fences and the loss of dead timber eliminates potential nesting sites.

Bluebirds are harmed by nesting competition from the starling and house sparrow, which are not native species to North America.

Close monitoring of the boxes is essential, according to Karshner, to prevent other birds from getting in and harming the bluebird eggs or adults. The volunteers count the eggs and collect other data as they monitor the boxes.

The eastern bluebird, with its rusty red breast, resembles its cousin the American robin. Bluebirds are a friend to farmers because they eat many harmful insects.

At Independence Oaks, they bring pleasure to visitors, many of whom tell Conover they haven't seen bluebirds since they were children.

"There is a positive thing from this," Conover says. "So many people are seeing them for the first time because there are so many bluebirds around here now.

"Perhaps this will raise people's awareness and make them come out and use the park more," she says. "And after all, that's why we're here."

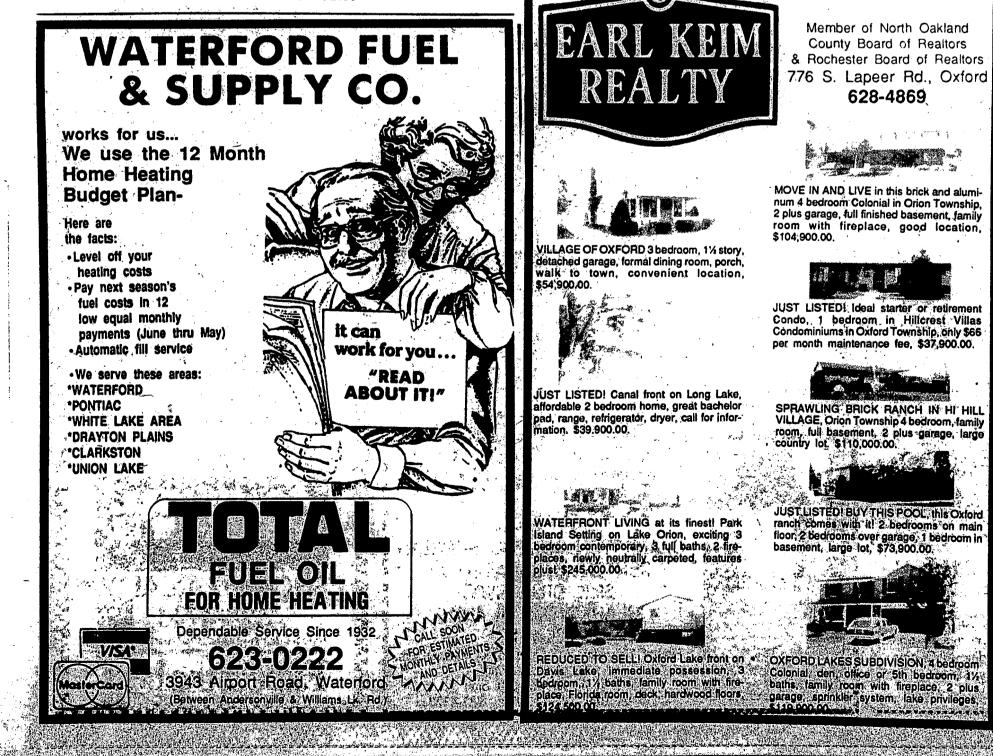

While the naturalists refer to the program as the "bluebird trail," boxes are established all over the park as well as along the trails. Bluebirds can even be seen outside the windows of the nature center. Inside, a bluebird exhibit has been set up for visitors.

Conover not only encourages people to come out to the park and discover what's in their own back yard as they plan summer travels, but she encourages them to set up their own bluebird boxes if they have the natural habitat (meadows, pastures or prairies with a scattering of trees).

"They can learn more about how they can help by talking to our naturalists," Conover says, adding that the park has a variety of programs available all summer for families to learn and experience more about nature.

LYNN CONOVER, assistant naturalist at Independence Oaks County Park, points out one of the bluebird boxes established at the park by volunteers.

Making of a monument

Next fall, a large granite slab will greet those entering Clarkston High School thanks to the combined efforts of two student groups.

The Class of 1988 and student council worked together to raise enough funds to pay for the $2,500 sign that will be placed on the corner of Waldon and the front drive to the school sometime in the fall.

Flower sales, car washes and magazine sales were just three things students did during the past three years to raise money for a senior gift to the school, said Class of 1988 president Kelly Saunders. The decision to purchase the monument was an easy one to make.

"It's something that we always wanted to do," said Kara Kurz, vice-president of the student council. There were several possibilities of gifts, but talk always returned to the granite sign, she added.

"We wanted to leave something more lasting," Saunderssaid of the monument featuring a Wolves' head in black on a light gray granite surface.

Because of the work involved, the sign won't be put in place until September.

According to Charles W. Sherman, architect for the addition, response was good for the bidding. Cost of the

Planners stay on board

Joe Gorka of Woodland Trail and Zona Sommers of Clark Road were given extensions on their appointments to the Springfield Township Planning Commission.

The township board authorized extensions of the terms through December, because several members of the commission are running for election or re-election, which could require planning commission changes at the end of the year.

"This will also be an opportunity for other residents to be considered (for the commission)," said Supervisor Collin Walls. The planning commission is made up of six resi-

"LLIKE TO SEE it all come together," says Steve Facione, the Springfield Township resident in charge of the renovations for Fox Theatre in Detroit. The theater and 10-story office building are to receive a new marquee, and the surrounding area is to become a shopping, eating and entertainment district, says Facione, vice president of Olympia Are-oversees Fox project

nas Inc., which also manages. Joe Louis Arena and Cobo Arena, and is a subsidiary of Little Caesar's Enterprises, which will move its corporate headquarters to the building.

Local man

If you ask, Steve Facione will clearly describe what "The Fox" will be like in December and the following vears

It's going to look beautiful," he says. "You're definitely going to know that you've arrived in the theater district. The whole place will be alive with people."

"It's the most exciting project I've ever worked on in my entire life. It's become a labor of love. Everybody is taken back by the beauty of it. Everybody wants to do it right."

and the 10-story ceiling in the theater.

After careful restoration, a golden five-foot-high elephant head emerged at the top of the stage - close enough to touch, with the help of the scaffolding.

After workers removed the damaged plaster, that was "falling like snowflakes," some of the original mural designs had to be completely repainted, says Facione.

Beneath the old, ragged red carpet in the grand v, a beautiful terrazzo floor was found - w never been seen by the public since the lobby had been carpeted almost from the beginning.

Facione. "This is a once in a lifetime opportunity for all the guys working on this job."

The theater, erected in 1927 by movie producer William Fox, is planned as only one portion of an entire theater district, to be complemented by the nearby State and Gem theaters. The State Theater is negotiating for a contract with the Detroit Metropolitan Opera Company. The Fox is to hold stage shows, concerts, plays and movies.

The revitalization project is a joint effort between Michael Ilitch, owner of Little Caesar's Enterprises - the parent company to Olympia Arenas, and Chuck Forbes Management, which owns the property on the east side of Woodward, across the street from the Fox.

Olympia Arenas is the management company of Louis Arena and Cobo Arena, and now, The Fox. Joe

The City of Detroit is to contribute $4 million from tax increment financing for the construction of new roads, sidewalks and pedestrian lighting, to begin in July.

The Fox - with retail stores and restaurants on the first floor and Little Caesar's corporate headquarters in the offices adjoining the theater - is to serve as the focal point of Ilitch's $30 million renovation portion, comprised of five buildings on Woodward, Montcalm, Park and Columbia streets.

The historical Fox Theatre, on Woodward at Montcalm in Detroit, is to be open for business in December. By then, the renovation of the 60-year-old building should be finished.

Facione, 35, a resident of Harbortowne Road in Springfield Township, is responsible for the daily operations of the restoration and will be in charge of the theater operations after it opens,

His enthusiasm is obvious and contagious. It's the most exciting project I've ever worked on in my online flic," he says. "It's become a labor of love. Everybody is taken back by the beauty of it. Everybody wants to do wright."

Treasures are found daily beneath the years of grime. With the help of 2,500 frames of scattolding, workers can reach the sucstory ceiling in the grand lobby

An old Wurlitzer organ, in need of repairs and cleaning, was found on the stage near the orchestra pit, which rises as needed by a production. The organ still works.

"My dad used to come here as a kid, and the organ would rise right out of the ground - the guy would be playing," says Facione.

Much of the plaster, marble and brass work is in progress outside of the building - in workshops of skilled tradesmen all over Detroit.

All in all, renovations to the 10-story theater and office building require the skills of over 100 workers who are repairing the entire roof, hand-washing the walls and ceiling, hand-painting the murals and wall designs, recovering the 5,060 chairs, replacing plaster walls and ceilings, polishing brass and marble and terrazzo throughout the theater and replacing 5,000 pounds of carpeting.

We have a lot of good people working 'says infee of the buildings are to be torn down this summer, and retail stores and restaurants are to take their places. A 1,100-car parking lot with an eight-story glass elevator is already in the works for Montcalm, adjacent to The Fox.

The Hughes & Hatcher building, on Woodward and Montcalm, is to become a restaurant and night club. "This is more than just a restoration of a theater," says Facione. "We want to take an entire area and revitalize it and restore it to a real alive theater district. This is probably the most exciting project going on in the state of Michigan right now."

With a new pedestrian mall area combined with the existing Detroit police academy and a Detroit police administration office in two buildings near The Fox, the area should appeal to even those unfamiliar with Detroit arcalitesava

Students honor CHS government teacher

BY PETER AUCHTER Clarkston News Staff Writer

Winning a student-voted award is the best possible praise, said a Clarkston High social studies teacher: Larry Rosso, who teaches a variety of government classes, recently won the "Teacher of the Semester" award from the National Honor Society.

"I'm quite honored," the father of one said. "We are evaluated by administrators, but with the kids you never know how effective you are."

Besides teaching about government with textbooks, he travels with students to Washington, D.C., to show them how American democracy works during the week-long Close-Up Program.

He also likes to keep up on current events by bringing breaking news topics into the classroom for discussion. It's interesting to see how the students react to the news, he said.

"The kids are more sensitive to humanitarian and social issues" compared to his high school days, he said. "We are getting more reaction from kids. I'm impressed with the level kids are showing."

While he was singled out for praise by the students, Rosso said his fellow teachers deserve some of the credit.

"I work with some excellent colleagues," he said. "We exchange ideas and they are a great group of teachers."

Personal involvement in the subject matter has kept his interest peaked throughout his 21 years in the teaching profession. During Rosso's college days, in the midst of the Vietnam War, he decided that teaching would suit him best in life.

"I enjoyed working with people - especially young people," he said of his decision. "The kids today detract from the aging process."

He studied at Eastern Michigan University and earned both his bachelor's and master's degrees there with some course work done at the University of Michigan and the University of Munich, West Germany.

The Independence Township resident spent a summer term in the early 1970s in Munich learning about a different way of life. "I'm glad I took advantage of it," he said. "I enjoy all aspects of government."

During his college days, he developed a keen interest in politics and participated in political campaigns, youth organizations and the Young Republicans.

Today, Rosso still considers his involvement in politics to be one of his favorite hobbies, ranking right up there with fishing, traveling and sports.

While politics make up a large chunk of his daily routine, he has his priorities in order when the final school bell of the day rings.

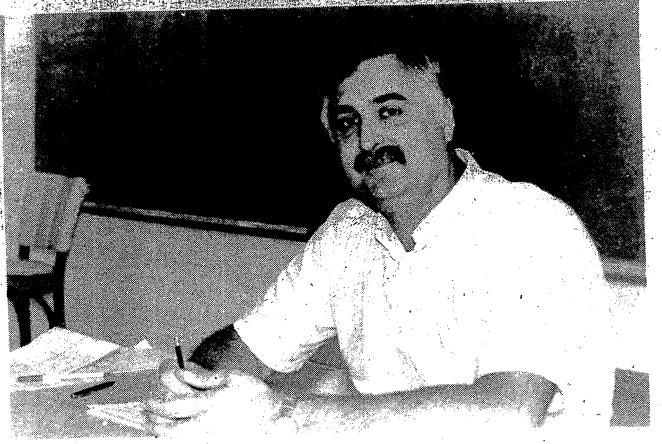

"I thoroughly enjoy the family," he said of his wife, Mary, and 3-year-old son, Steve.

As the recipient of the "Teacher of the Semester" honor, Rosso received a certificate and a dinner for two at the Clarkston Cafe.

The NHS sponsors the award and the entire student body votes. Rosso received the highest number of votes among teachers who had not received the award in the last two years.

Principal Robert Burek was pleased with the students' choice.

"I've enjoyed working with him in my two years at Clarkston," he said. "I'm delighted he was selected."

LARRY ROSSO, a government teacher, was pleased when he discovered the students at

CLAIRE KAMMER of Springfield Township earned first prize in contest this spring by creating a birthday message for an imaginary friend from another era.

5th-grader wins national contest

While home sick from school one day this spring, 10-year-old Claire Kammer made good use of her time. She entered a contest sponsored by Pleasant Company, maker of the American Girl dolls she collects, and found out June 13 she earned a first prize.

Claire, who will be a fifth-grader at Clarkston Elementary School this fall, had to write a birthday message to an imaginary girl from earlier times, inviting her to a present-day birthday party, explaining why it would be different than in her day.

She had a choice of three historical dolls to "invite.", One was Kirsten, an 1854 Swedish pilgrim to America, another was Samantha, a 1904 Victorian girl, and the third was Molly, a 10-year-old from 1944 whose father was in the war.

Claire chose Kirsten, and designed a three-dimensional "pop-up" birthday card to send her. She invited Kirsten to a scavenger hunt, explaining that she should wear shorts rather than her white pinafore. She described what bug repellent was, because it would be needed at the outdoor party.

The contest took place in March, April, May and June. Claire, the daughter of Kerry and Carole Kammer of Springfield Township, won a first place among 140 entries in the March contest. She received a set of three hardcover birthday books, written about the same young doll characters, plus balloons and hair ribbons.

Prend to Prend AWARE Think before you talk

Dear Friend to Friend.

I am a student at a high school and I think that one of my teachers is an alcoholic. I think she drinks during the school day because I can smell it.

I have never seen her drink but her moods switch - I have her in the morning and again in the afternoon; and there is a definite change. If this were a student, he or she would be suspended, but because it is a teacher, she can get away with it.

I don't think this is fair. What should I do?

CONCERNED STUDENT Dear Concerned Student;

We know that one out of 10 adults is chemically dependent and teachers are not immune to this. Many of us feel like it is a no-win situation because it is very difficult to go up against a teacher on any subject, letalone such an emotional issue.

First, you have to get your facts together and find out more on alcoholism, such as what you have described as mood swings,

Is the teacher missing a lot of work? Has she even failed to remember what has happened an hour before or a day before? Has anyone expressed concern over the teacher's usage besides you?

If, upon further investigation, you still feel that this teacher has a problem, you may want to seek professional help. We think that an out-of-school source (someone in the community) could be a big help and could also cut down on gossip and/or give an unbiased opinion.

If you go to CHS, we suggest that you go to the principal. We feel that he would never excuse it among the students OR the faculty.

Someone who is drinking on the job or at school needs help, and it takes a lot of courage to take the step to try to intervene. Doing nothing only adds to the problem (which is called enabling). You are enabling them to keep using.

We want to support you on taking the initiative as a caring human being to get this person some help.

Dear Friend to Friend,

Summer's coming and I still don't have my license. I am 16 and a half and I have been driving since last summer on my permit.

My sister was in three accidents her first year, and my mom is very paranoid that the same thing will happen to me. I wish she would just give me a chance.

She is always complaining that she always has to drive me places, and my sister and stepdad are tired of me always asking for rides: (And they let me know!) There is nothing I can do. My mom won't let me drive myself.

I'm even buying my own car! But I fell like, "What's the use?"She doesn't have any confidence in my driving. Maybe I will kill myself in an accident, but so could anybody else. I just want a chance!

How can I get my mom to realize that she needs to let me drive on my own. I am getting really upset! STILL DRIVING WITH PARENTS

Dear Still.

First of all, keep in mind that parents are very protective of their children, not because they don't believe in you but because they love you: We understand that you are suffering from your sister's experiences.

19 57 461

2 in the new Party

Next, we can only suggest that you sit down with your mother and calmly discuss your feelings. Prepare this ahead of time so you come across confidently and rationally.

Map out such things as:

• You are not the same as your sister, and even though you cannot guarantee you won't get into an accident, it is unfair to compare you to her.

• List ways that you are showing responsibility; for instance, buying your own car, grades, jobs, friends.

• That you deserve a chance to prove yourself and be willing to set down some guidelines between the two of you.

• Point out the advantages of allowing you to drive (picking up things at the store, not running you all over town)

Keep in mind that you must stay calm during this discussion because when you start yelling, you go back to that "immature person."

If this does not work, you have no other choice but. to wait it out and keep showing your mom responsible behavior. Just think of all the calories you're burning by walking!

Friend to Friend is written by a panel of Clarkston High School students working under the sponsorship of AWARE, a community organization devoted to action and education against substance abuse. Letters may be written in care of The Clarkston News, 5 S. Main, Clarkston, MI 48016.

"EVERY SQUARE INCH has been touched in some way," says Steve Facione, describing the painstaking work by crews in restoring the ceiling in the historic Fox Theatre. With 10 stories of scaffolding, the renovation provides a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to touch the ceiling. The Fox will be the focal point of a $30 million revitalization project of the theater district on Woodward Avenue, Detroit. The Fox, with a seating capacity of 3,100 seats, is owned by Little Caesar's, which also owns Joe Louis Arena and Cobo Arena.

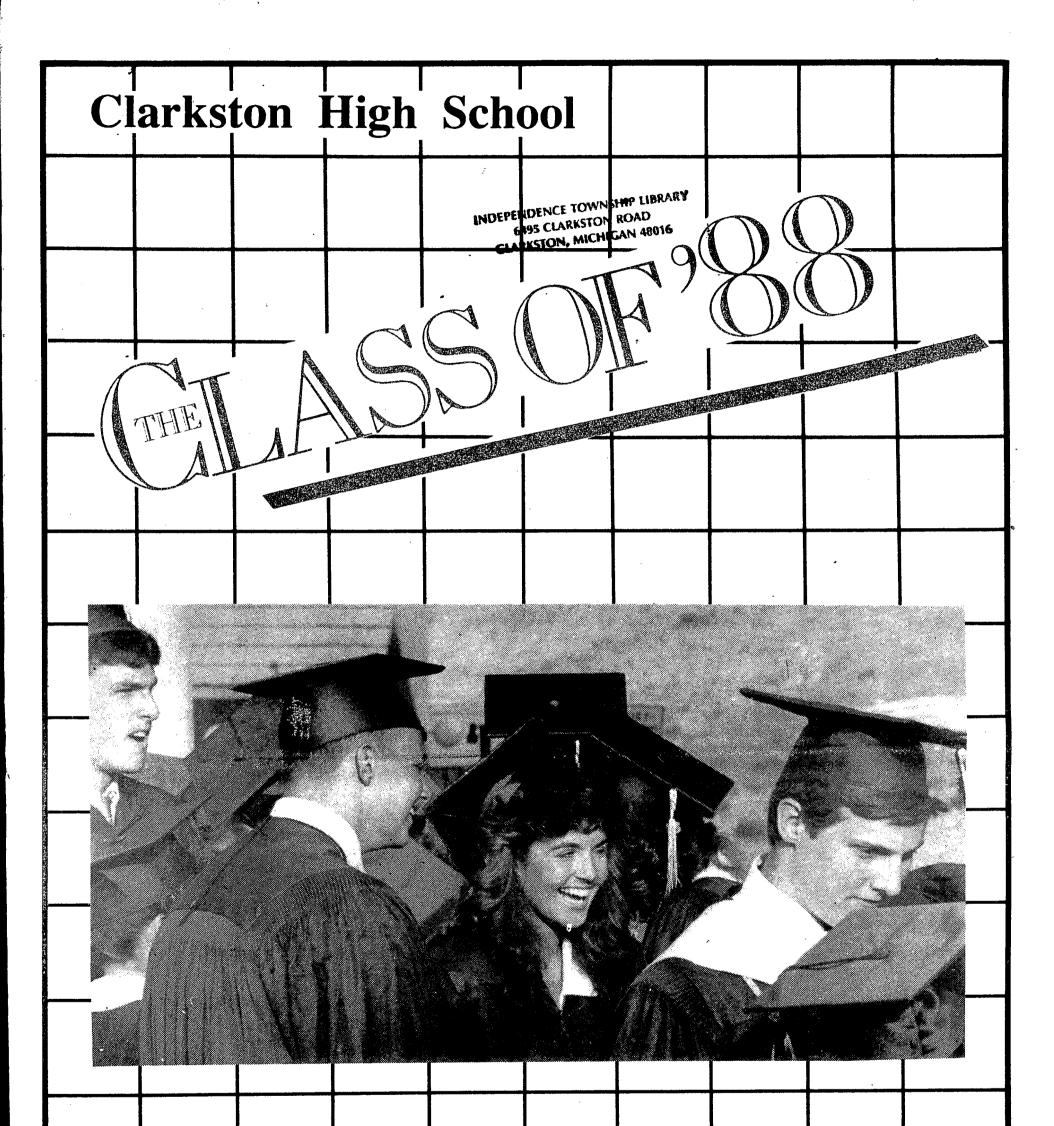

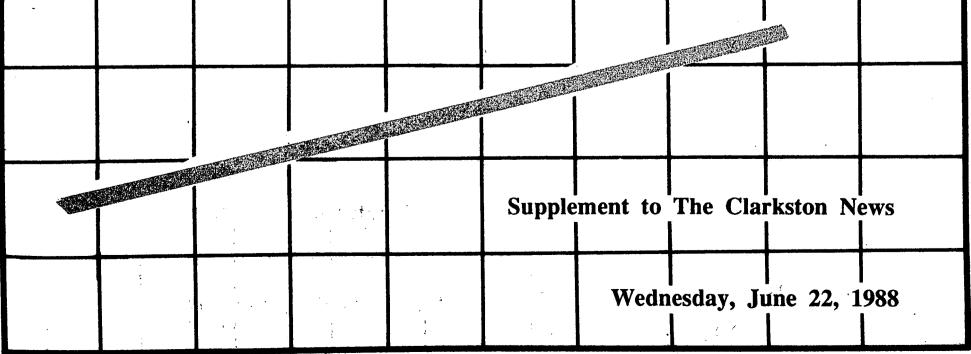

In touch with the past

FIRST STRIPPED to its natural finish, the Grand Staircase scagliola, or faux marble, will be policined and restored to its original condition - before it was carpeted in 1928, soon after the theater opened. The terrazzo floor in the grand lobby will also be pollshed.

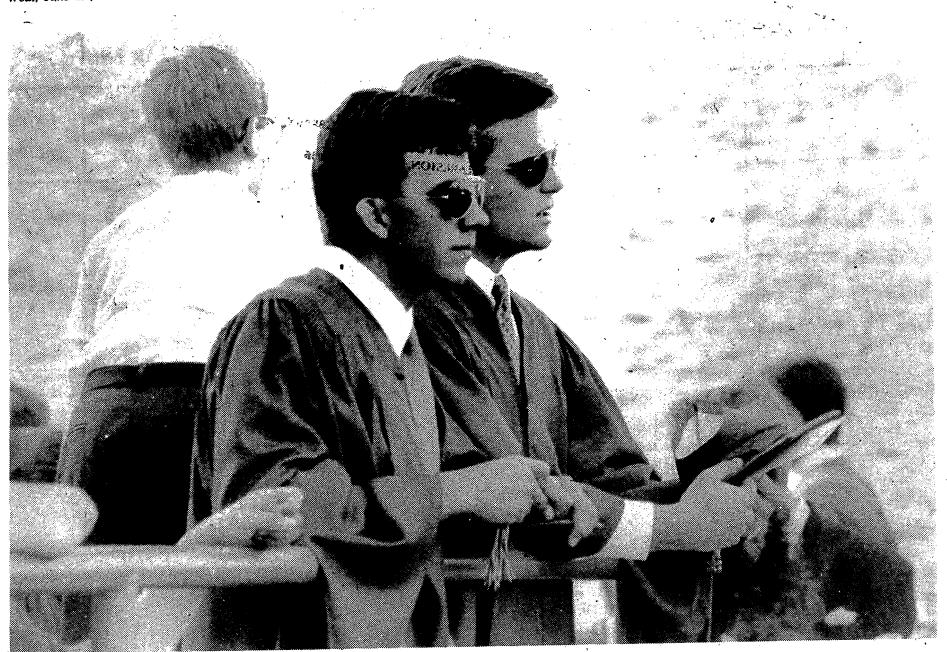

THE ELEPHANT HEAD at the top of the stage is a popular place for photos of workers and their relatives who tour The Fox, says Springfield Township resident Steve Facione. The elephant's golden crown was not visible until restoration removed years of grime.
