Man charged with burro's death

BY PAT YOUNG
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Ronald Keen, 48, of Springfield Township was charged with cruelty to animals and malicious injury to property of another in connection with the death of a burro adopted under a Federal Bureau of Land Management (BLM) program.

The preliminary examination is set for Friday, May 5, before Judge Gerald McNally in 52nd District Court, Independence Township. Keen is out on a $1,000 personal bond.

The charge of malicious injury to property of another over $100 — a felony — carries a maximum $2,000 fine and up to four years in prison. Cruelty to animals is a misdemeanor and carries a maximum sentence of 90 days and a $500 fine.

The felony charge stems from the fact that the burro, confiscated from the Keen farm on Feb. 25, was technically still the property of the BLM, according to David Wills, executive director of the Michigan Humane Society. The adoption was never completed for the burro.

The Keen family had the burro since 1986. When neighbors complained to the Michigan Humane Society about neglected animals on the property, investigators found the burro in a barn in a small area which was surrounded by plywood and hidden from view.

He was badly malnourished, dehydrated and neglected, with overgrown hooves.

Dubbed "Milton Burro" by humane society staff, he died five days after being taken from the farm, despite efforts to save him.

Reading from a press release issued by the humane society, Wills said, "The charges against Mr. Keen were brought by the Michigan Humane Society because the 9-year-old burro, which should have weighed 900 pounds, weighed only 410 pounds. He suffered from chronic malnutrition, and his hooves had grown 8 inches beyond normal, giving him a 'rocking horse' appearance. The twisted and deformed hooves made it painful for him to walk."

The burro's body was taken to Michigan State

Spring road work heats up

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

With spring comes a slew of headaches for commuters as they negotiate their vehicles through another maze of seasonal construction.

This year is no exception — the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) has unveiled a long list of projects for 1989, along with an explanation about why there is so much work to be done.

In all, MDOT will improve 550 miles of state highways this year, including a stretch of I-75 in Independence Township.

The widening of Interstate-75 from Joslyn Road north to M-15 in Independence should be completed this year.

But while work on state roadways continues, the number of people using them grows much faster.

Traffic on Michigan roads has grown 29 percent since 1980, while roadway construction has grown just six-tenths of one percent, according to MDOT statistics. Most of the growth is in residential streets.

"We're doing a good job on preservation," said state transportation Director James Pitz, "but we're not keeping up with the obvious need to upgrade the system to accommodate the growth in traffic and economic development all across the state."

Determined neighbor thwarts robbery

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Not many people have the courage to interfere with a crime in progress, but that's what happened on Big Lake Road in Springfield Township March 31.

Shortly after noon last Friday, an alert neighbor spotted a strange car at the house next door and noticed two men walking toward it with their arms full of electronics.

In the moments that followed, the neighbor chased the two, let the air out of their tires, dodged a knife one was carrying and escaped to call police.

After setting up roadblocks, police tracked the license plate of the vehicle, and two suspects were arrested a short time later in Waterford, according to an Oakland County Sheriff's Department (OCSD) report.

Grant Wilder, 18, of Pontiac was charged April 3 with breaking and entering and felonious assault. He was taken to the Oakland County jail on a $5,000 bond pending his April 13 preliminary exam before Judge Gerald McNally in 52nd District Court, Independence Township.

University, East Lansing, for a necropsy, the animal equivalent of an autopsy. Charges were not filed sooner because investigators were gathering information and awaiting results of the necropsy.

The federal government, concerned about the burro's death, also assisted in the investigation. BLM District Director John Winnepenninkx met with Humane Society investigators in early March to review the case.

The adopt a burro program which finds homes for burros, multiplying in numbers since the gold rush days when miners left them behind, has come under fire by animal rights groups who claim there is not enough follow up to the program.

According to Gerald Poisson, Oakland County Chief Assistant Prosecutor, during the preliminary examination the court will determine whether a crime was committed and if there is probable cause to believe that the defendant committed that crime. If so, Keen would be bound over to Oakland County Circuit Court for trial.

The Keen family has been active in 4-H and scouting activities for many years.

"It's a tragic case," said Poisson. "To me, this is more than not paying attention. I think there was malicious intent to destroy an animal."

However, Wills stressed that, "Although charges have been filed, Mr. Keen is presumed innocent until proven guilty."

Neighbor catches robbers in action

The other suspect, a juvenile, was petitioned to juvenile court and was released to the custody of his parents.

Police were called to Big Lake Road about 12:15 p.m. to investigate the robbery, and road blocks were set up immediately at Andersonville and Big Lake roads and at White Lake and Big Lake roads.

The neighbor, a Waterford Township firefighter who did not want to be named, told police he saw a strange Pontiac Sunbird parked in his neighbor's driveway.

When the neighbor braked in front of the house, two suspects dropped several items and ran toward the back of the home.

After the neighbor was unsuccessful in chasing the two, he returned to their car and let the air from their tires.

The suspects returned to the car wielding a stiletto-type knife and told the man to get away from the car. As the men approached, the neighbor picked up a rock, dropped it and ran to call police with the car's license number.

Police traced the vehicle to a Waterford residence, and when the police arrived at the house they saw the vehicle through the partially opened garage, the report said.

The two suspects were arrested inside the home.

"I've been trying to reach (the neighbor) all day to tell him job well done," said Lt. Don McLellan of the OCSD.

According to police, the two had entered the Big Lake Road home through an unlocked door to the greenhouse. One of the suspects had reportedly crawled through a window into the kitchen which was also unlocked.

Among the items that were taken and later recovered were compact discs, stereo equipment, a camera and a VCR.

Thendara Park paving project starts to roll

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

More than 100 Thendara Park residents packed the Bailey Lake Elementary School gymnasium to standing-room only capacity March 30.

Residents asked about the progress of the road-paving project, and they questioned how the township created the assessment roll, which determines how much each property owner will pay for the paving.

The assessment roll will affect owners of about 255 sites, who will split the cost of the $2.45 million dollar project over a period of 15 years — about $9,394 for an average homeowner. The township is contributing $50,000.

Residents were told that construction could begin in July if two conditions are met. The Oakland County Road Commission must agree to the conversion of roads from private to public; and easements must be obtained from about 20 property owners.

An easement grants the right to use land belonging to another for such things as roads, or utilities.

Any litigation resulting from the paving project may also hold up construction, Clerk Richard Holman said. "So if you grant us easements and don't sue us (it should go smoothly)," Holman said.

Many residents questioned whether details about their property would affect their assessment.

"I'm assessed along two different roads, and along Algonquin the grade is in excess of 45 degrees," said Les Bruscha, whose home fronts Minne-wanna.

Township Assessor David Kramer told residents he did not consider topography when making his assessment because it is frequently subjective.

"I tried to be as objective about dealing with the rate formula as I could," Kramer said.

Dan Beer, of Waburn, questioned whether deep cuts made to his property for the drainage project might affect his payment schedule. He was told that he would receive just compensation for damage to his property.

Residents were told that if they sold their homes, the assessment could be assumed by the new owner only if the bank or mortgage company would allow the township to take first priority if the home is repossessed.

The statement was met by grumbles from those in the audience who argued that few lenders allow the practice.

Kramer said the declining rate system he used to determine how much each site would be assessed has been used by the Oakland County Road Commission since 1974.

"It's stood the test of time for 15 years," he said.

The average property has 196 feet of frontage along the area to be paved, so 196 feet is considered one unit of benefit. The cost per unit of benefit is estimated at $9,394.

Those with 196 feet frontage or less would pay that amount. Those with more frontage are assessed accordingly.

Several residents clutched the estimate for their property which had been mailed to them earlier in the week.

Clerk Richard Holman warned them that the amounts they received could change.

If an owner disputes his assessment, the resulting change could affect everyone on the roll, Holman explained.

"Our only obligation is to notify you what our best guess is," Holman said. He explained that, by law, the amount could change by 10 percent before another public hearing would be necessary.

Those wishing to protest their assessment go through the Michigan Tax Tribunal, Kramer said.

Anyone with questions should contact Kramer at 625-8114.

Reporter's Notebook

One thing about working in a newspaper office—you constantly get "new material" for stories.

Last week the business office received a call from an irate person who had placed a classified ad for two weeks. The conversation went something like this:

"The bill said my ad is for two insertions. I've been through this paper five times and I can't see where it's in there twice."

The News received a call from an Edmond, Okla., resident who wanted us to send copies of articles we've written on Pine Knob Music Theatre-related incidents.

Seems the Nederlander Service Corp. is planning to build an outdoor amphitheater identical to Pine Knob, and residents in Edmond wanted to be prepared for possible problems such as noise, traffic and crime.

The caller said Edmond has about 51,000 residents, but only two small roads lead to the proposed site, which is on agriculturally-zoned land adjacent to residential property.

I guess when you read one newspaper, you've read them all. At least that's the consensus here at The News after we received an interesting press release from an area college.

While the contents of the hand-addressed envelope didn't necessarily inspire us, the address certainly did. It read: "Detroit Free Press Sports Editor, 5 South Main, Clarkston."

Hmmm, now that's something to shoot for, I guess.

Board puzzled over bond defeat

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

"Puzzled" describes Independence Township officials after voters defeated a $1.5 million dollar bond issue March 28.

The bond issue would have paid for the costs of moving the township's central fire station to the former Hosler Pontiac property on M-15. The Oakland County Sheriff's Department (OCSD) planned to locate a substation in the facility, and the state police had discussed moving to the structure as well.

"People in this precinct area missed out on a facility that certainly would have enhanced their area," said Supervisor Frank Ronk. "They did themselves a total injustice."

"There was no opposition in the papers or any bad comme n the street," said Fire Chief Gar Wilson. "There no indication it was going to go this way."

Later turnout was primarily to blame for the issue's defeat, Ronk said. Only seven percent of the township's registered voters cast a ballot in the election.

"I'm not disappointed in the people who voted no; that was their right. I'm just disappointed in those that didn't get out and vote," Ronk said.

Wilson speculated that the township's recent assessment notices and residents' worries about taxation also may have affected the bond issue.

Wilson said his concern now was what to do about the cramped conditions at the existing central fire station on Church Street, Clarkston.

"I've got to look at some other type of possibility," Wilson said.

"We're in a growth stage here. I don't want to spend money (on renovation of the existing building). It would be like throwing good money after bad."

OCSD officials said their space was crowded, but deputies will continue to work from the existing OCSD substation on Main Street.

"We're disappointed," said Capt. Carl Matheny at the OCSD. "Obviously we would have gotten better quarters. That would've been nice. And the state police locating there—that would've been a novel thing. There are some advantages to that."

"If the board moves us, we'll work with them," Matheny added.

Township board members had begun negotiating the cost of the property with its owner, Lehman Investments, owned in part by Ed Adler, who also owns the Clarkston Mills on Washington Street, Clarkston.

Adler did not return several phone calls.

Township officials said it is too early to say whether another site for a public safety complex would be targeted in the near future.

Wilson said there are few options to choose from.

"We have to stay on M-15. That's a major road for us," Wilson said. "Unless it's between Dixie and, say, Cranberry Lake Road, it's just going to increase out time of response. We can't go much farther than that."

"I still say that the (Hosler) site was the best location for us," Wilson added.

Architect proposes high tech for high school

BY PAT YOUNG
Clarkston News Staff Writer

With a little discussion as to how much technology would be included immediately, the Clarkston Board of Education supported the proposal of architect Tom Chen of Greiner, Inc.

At a special board meeting March 28, six members of the board agreed that the answer to the district's problems would be: A new high school with some integrated technology, a new elementary school with minor additions to the current schools, and conversion of the current high school to a middle school as well as renovating the other middle school.

The seventh board member, John Needham, suggested major additions to the current elementary schools rather than adding a new one. Otherwise, he supported the proposal.

He added, "I feel very strongly that it should have quality and flexibility."

No action was taken on the proposal. That will come at the board's regular meeting on April 10. But the discussion set the stage for what board members will consider at that time. Voters will be asked to approve a bond issue for the project in the June 12 election.

Numerous configurations of the following options were considered:

O Major additions to current elementary schools to accommodate a projected enrollment increase of about 260 students in K-5 within five years: The additions would include special education classrooms, art, music and science rooms, cafeterias and regular classrooms. Pupil population at the schools would approach the maximum of 700 in each.

O Minor additions to elementary schools plus construction of a new elementary school: Additions would not include regular classrooms but all other special rooms, and student population would be about 500 in each school.

O Renovation of Sashabaw Junior High School to a middle school for grades 6-8, renovation of the current

"As a potential employer of college graduates with technical backgrounds as well as tech center graduates, it is important to have applied technology."

Durham Downs, a GMC engineer

high school to a middle school, and also include a middle school autistic program area (funded by Oakland Schools) in the building: Anticipated populations at Sashabaw and Clarkston middle schools would be 700 and 800 respectively.

O Build a new 1,800-student high school with an integrated technology curriculum delivery system throughout the academic classroom area (which includes video capability for classroom study at about 60 teaching stations).

O Or build a new 1,800-student high school wired for integrated technology in the future, and a limited integrated technology system (perhaps 10 teaching stations — one for each department) at the present time.

O Or build a replacement high school for 1,800 students without any provisions for integrated technology.

Board Secretary Mary Jane Chaustowich said she agreed with the proposal to build a new elementary school and at least have some integrated technology in the new high school.

"I don't see it as visionary but as essential."

Carolyn Place

"Economically, it's much better for the district to do this," she said. "The difference in millage is quite little for what you get in return."

Her opinion was echoed by board members Tom Howard, Steve Werner, Carolyn Place and Board Treasurer Elaine Schultz, as well as Board President Janet Thomas.

"I don't see it as visionary but as essential," said Place.

Thomas added, "With modifications, it satisfies the space needs at all three levels."

Werner asked Chen about a cushion for population growth. "What if we grow more?" he asked.

Chen said the state would only allow a 5-year projection. His proposal allows about a two-classroom, 50-student cushion, but there is flexibility in the plan.

Residents in the audience also seemed in favor of the plan.

Durham Downs and Bob Wyatt, who co-chaired the Facilities Advisory Committee, both voiced approval, but urged the district to include not only integrated technology, but laboratories for applied technology.

"As a potential employer of college graduates with technical backgrounds as well as tech center graduates, it is important to have applied technology," said Downs, a General Motors Corp. engineer.

Wyatt, also a GMC engineer, agreed. "What Tom (See BOARD, next page)

School board discusses its plans for expansion

(Chen) has discussed are right-now things."

He said interactive video is used throughout GMC today and suggested perhaps video carts to save money by purchasing fewer monitors for the schools.

Linda Irwin, who works at Clarkston Junior High and the Clarkston Learning Center, expressed concern over plans for the current junior high building.

"There is a lot of sentiment attached to the building," she said. "I would like the board to state their plans for it."

Chen said the cost of completely renovating the building was prohibitive but that proposed uses of the building include community education activities, perhaps alternative education.

Others in the audience, including teacher and coach Gordon Richardson and Pine Knob Elementary School Principal George White, supported the proposal.

One parent, Roger Diederich, supported the proposal but expressed concern about the cost projections.

Chen said he thought the project could be done for under $70 million and that his firm had a track record of coming in within 5 percent of estimates.

A $65 million bond issue would require an estimated 7.54 mills under the Michigan School Bond Loan Fund Program, with 19 years in the loan fund program and a total of 27 years for the life of the bond. One mill is $1 for every $1,000 assessed property valuation.

The difference of $20 million (for instance, a $65 million vs. $45 million proposal) amounts to about a third of a mill cost (per year) to a homeowner, or about 33 cents per $1,000 of assessed property valuation. But the language in a bond election reads in millions of dollars, not in mills.

"We have to sell what we're (proposing)," said Thomas. "The trick is to make people understand."

On April 10, the board will also have to consider the operational millage necessary to operate the expanded facilities if the proposal is approved.

Howard asked Superintendent Gary Haner if there is consensus among the administrators for the proposal.

"I think collectively we couldn't be more pleased with the board's feelings tonight," Haner replied.

School agenda set for April 10

Members of the Clarkston Board of Education probably face a long evening on Monday, April 10.

The regular school board meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. in the board offices, 6389 Clarkston Rd.

The April meeting includes a long list of employees to be recognized during the employee recognition segment. Then, a Clarkston High School all-state skier will be recognized, as well as five CHS students who were winners in the Michigan Mathematics Competition.

On a more somber note, the board is to consider a probationary teacher not receiving tenure, and expulsion of a CHS sophomore.

The board also is to vote on a resolution setting matters for the annual school election to take place June 12. And they will discuss the scope of the June bond issue regarding new buildings and/or additions to existing buildings in the school district. The bond issue would also be considered by voters during the June 12 election.

CJHS computer use noted in national study

Clarkston Junior High School students' use of computers has been made common knowledge to hundreds of English teachers across the nation.

A study by a Clarkston Junior High School teacher was used as a reference in the January 1989 English Journal. The Journal is a national publication for teachers of English in secondary schools.

Dr. Ruth Duling studied CJHS ninth graders who used word processors to revise their hand written drafts. Her study found that there were fewer errors in the final drafts when word processors were used.

Duling's study was referenced in an English Journal article by Gail E. Hawisher, who said, "For the past several years, a great deal of attention has focused on word processing as a facilitator of both writing and writing instruction."

Although studies she cited revealed that how often and how well students revise with computers is a subject of dispute among researchers, Hawisher concluded that the same studies also suggest that "computers lend themselves to the promising capabilities of students in writing classes." She encourages teachers to consider using them.

According to administrators at CJHS, Duling has contributed greatly to the use of computers at the school.

"Dr. Duling has been a leader in using computers in the classrooms in Clarkston," said Assistant Principal Ginny Farmer.

Opinions

The Scientist

Julie Campe

When we were kids, curiosity often got The Scientist in trouble. He was older than I, so he was usually the leader, which meant I sometimes got in trouble with him.

He always wanted to know things — how they worked, what would happen if ...

My parents say the first instance occurred when I was around age 3 and The Scientist was 5.

My mother was doing laundry and had the bed stripped. When she returned to the room to put the clean sheets on, she found the mattress slashed up and stuffing coming out.

She was shocked to say the least. They finally deduced that it was The Scientist and me. We had apparently found a set of knives under the bed that were to be given as a wedding present. Funny thing was, they had been returned neatly to their box and re-wrapped almost as neatly as The Scientist had found them.

I have no recollection of this.

But I do remember my fifth Christmas when I received a bright red kids' watch as a gift. I couldn't tell time, but it was neat to watch the black thing move under the glass.

The day after the busy holiday, The Scientist said he was going to figure out what made that black thing work.

He tried to pry open the back, but it wouldn't work. So he set up a little laboratory. We solemnly sat on our knees around a small step stool, on which we placed the watch. The Scientist had already found the perfect delicate laboratory instrument with which to perform the experiment.

When the time was right, he swung the hammer, and it came smashing down on the watch. That black thing immediately stopped moving.

That time, I got in trouble with him.

One fall, The Scientist went around the yard, pointing out cocoons to me. They were yellow and fuzzy and pretty. So The Scientist put a few in his pocket, which he later emptied on his bedroom shelf where they were soon forgotten.

A few months later on Easter Sunday, we returned home from church and found two butterflies in his bedroom.

It seemed like magic, and we gently carried them outside, where they fluttered their wings in the wind — trying to dry themselves off, The Scientist said.

That spring, The Scientist found a sluggish garter snake warming itself in the sun.

He let me hold it for a while before putting it in his pocket. It was nice and dry and warm, and it seemed to want to cuddle.

The Scientist figured that was a good sign, so he decided to keep it as a pet for a while. In order to convince my mother of his plans, he built a comfy cage for the snake and told my mother all about the garter's nice, harmless habits. He took pains to point out the holes in the wire mesh — much too small for the large garter to squeeze through. She relented but insisted that he keep his bedroom door shut.

Later that week, we returned home from church and immediately went to change into play clothes. When my brother opened his bedroom door, he laughed with delight. The floor was covered with baby snakes.

My mother screamed in horror and shut his door, but the cute little things just casually snaked their way out beneath the door.

The Scientist was heart broken at having to find them all a new home.

Letters to the Editor

School problem sets bad example

For several weeks no I've been reading, listening and gathering information on Miss Jan Gabier's dismissal, now I believe lessened to a demotion-relocation. Many questions and solutions come to mind, however.

Why is a 28-year veteran teacher-administrator, who should or could be principal by now, even being considered for dismissal?

Is she really incompetent, or does she get the job done in a different way than the new administration would like to see it done? Incompetence isn't the issue really! That's been proven by the dismissal withdrawal.

Why aren't Miss Gabier's administrator colleagues trying to work together to find a solution to this problem before accepting a termination of a 28-year veteran?

Is the new administration making an effort to communicate to all of their colleagues and staff? Are they appreciating and recognizing each one's capabilities and strengths, or are they unwilling to see and accept a difference of personality or (administrative) style?

A team approach begins with the leader working TOGETHER to achieve the desired result.

Is this the proper role modeling the community and board of education wants to present to the young people of Clarkston who are entering the work force?

Work hard and strive to always to your best just to be dismissed or demoted-relocated on unjustified accusations because they no longer fit into the big picture?

What really is the problem at CHS, and whose problem is it? Why is a 28-year veteran teacher-administrator "all of a sudden" doing an unsatisfactory job? Why isn't communication open to resolve this conflict which is looking more like a witch hunt?

I hope the school board and the Clarkston community are looking over all of the facts. If parents and students can share their opinions, then the teachers should also be heard.

I am a 1981 Clarkston graduate who worked in the high school office and witnessed daily what the administration was up against.

The issue here isn't Miss Gabier's competence. She was always professional and skillful in dealing with students, parents and the staff.

Our school environment was conducive to learning because of her. She is also a sensitive and understanding individual who cares deeply about others.

One of the final questions to ask yourself is: Is moving Miss Gabier to a new location and/or job position necessary and/or even appropriate? Is the new job going to be a lasting one or just a way to eliminate her eventually?

The Clarkston community votes for competent people for the school board to ensure that our administrators don't use their power incorrectly. I hope and pray that communication between one another wins over the out-of-site, out-of-mind mentality.

Jim's Jottings

In January, 1978, I wrote the following column. I could repeat it this week - and I will.

Long before I heard ex-University of Detroit coach Dick Vitale, the phrase, "That's what it's all about" was getting to me.

Soon after Vitale gave his tearful farewell speech as Titan coach he went on WJR as color man for a U of D basketball game. Three times during the game he cited three different parts of the game as being the particular thing basketball is all about.

None of them had anything to do with sportsmanship, making better citizens, or rounding out a player's education.

Even casual listening to various people on radio and tv makes one aware of the overuse of the term ... that's what it's all about.

Howard Cosell uses it very frequently. "Getting the ball over the goal line ... that's, etc." If an end goes high in the air and catches the ball without regard for being hit on the way down.

If the coach calls the right play, if the quarterback ignores the coach's call, if a referee blows a play dead too soon, if he makes a right call, if he makes no call. The Mouth claims "that's what football is all about."

Vitale and Cosell would have the world believing sports alone is what life is all about, and the very reason man is on earth.

But this phrase is not peculiar to sports. I recently heard a politician on CBS' "60 minutes" claim some cause he was fighting for was "what it's all about."

When businesses are accused of making profits, the leaders proclaim that's what it's all about. The same is true of editors and columnists who spew their opinions regularly, preachers have been known to say it about church attendance, chairmen of fund drives about donating to their particular charity.

Salesmen will tell you that updating your machinery or washing machine is what it's all about.

You've noticed by now that the phrase doesn't leave any sideways movement. That is, the user of the phrase means that whatever they are referring to is exact!

They never say, "That's part of what it's all about." Or, "In varying degrees, that's what it's all about."

Also left is the definition of what "it's" is. I take it to mean life itself. If I can't catch a pass, shoot a basket, go to church, or make a profit I might as well go fishing.

Which brings up the point I've been trying to make. Let's all go fishing, or golfing, or vacationing. ... That's really what it's all about.

Editorial

History foretells economy's future

"Watching the Fed" is a new, popular pastime for economists.

Watching the Fed has, in many cases, taken the place of watching Dow Jones averages and other stock market reports.

Nick Hevron, a former Oxford Bank officer and now an investment consultant with Heber Fuger Wendin, is a Fed Watcher.

Fed is the Federal Reserve, Martin Greenspan director. He said he wants to see zero inflation in this country. He has moved the Fed's prime lending rate to help achieve this goal.

Since the inflation rate is creeping up, Greenspan is expected, by Hevron, to increase interest rates soon, to a high of 12 to 12.25 percent before starting it down again.

Past upward moves of rates by the Fed has squelched building, this slowed inflation.

The risk to this is, of course, bringing on a recession. That's the balancing act Greenspan, the Fed, is trying to achieve . . . zero inflation-no recession.

Hevron, who is an Oxford Bank consultant, sees the economy slowing in the mid 1990's, bringing on a mild (hopefully) recession.

Some of Hevron's reasoning is based on history. He said, "We don't have to have a recession, but a winding down (of the economy) always does occur."

It's the old story, it has to end somewhere. The current good times economy is on its longest upward climb in history. And, it has to end sometime.

Like winning and losing streaks, like office holders, like life itself, everything has to end sometime. We would hope there would be a more exacting way to predict something than just "it has to end sometime."

But, in the case of the economy, perhaps that's the only way, plus "watching the Fed". JAS

The Roads We Travel

Why mass transit won't work here

Brent Bair

As traffic volumes grow and our roads become more congested, a common criticism is that instead of widening all the roads, we should be increasing public transportation services.

This seems to be a popular solution to some who are looking for ways to get those "other guys" off the road.

I've suggested that traditional public transportation, as you may have observed it in more dense urban areas such as New York City or even parts of Detroit, may not provide an immediate solution for our road congestion problems in Oakland County.

I suggested that due to the diverse commuting patterns to the various work sites in Oakland County, establishing bus routes along major roads or even commuter rail lines would not be able to serve enough trips to justify the cost of running them.

So how can I say this?

Past surveys of employees at major work sites in Oakland County have indicated diverse commuting patterns.

But you can observe this for yourself. Look around your neighborhood and identify those neighbors who work near where you work.

How many people did you come up with that might catch the same bus as you, and how close would a normal bus stop be to all of your homes?

What incentive would there be for you and your neighbors to walk that distance, wait for a bus, and wait while riding it, for the bus to pick up other riders along the way?

If the price of gas is cheap, employers provide free parking, and family incomes are high enough to buy the necessary number of vehicles for everyone to drive who wants to, the necessary incentives for overcoming the inconveniences and using the more traditional forms of public transportation may simply not be there.

There are unconventional forms of public transportation that are more convenient, more flexible, and thereby a more viable partial solution to our congestion problems.

Those alternatives are sometimes referred to as paratransit, and include such things as carpools, vanpools, dial-a-ride, subscription bus services, taxis, jitneys, etc.

Obviously some people are already involved in such things as carpools and vanpools. Note the park and ride lots at the I-75 interchanges. (Also note that the number of vehicles parked there have decreased since the price of gas went down.)

The regional planning agency, Southeast Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG), offers a service to employers in the southeast Michigan area.

SEMCOG staff will survey employees at larger work sites to see who would be interested in participating in carpooling or vanpooling.

The addresses of the interested individuals are then matched by computer, and those people living close to each other or on a common route to work are put in touch with each other.

If there are enough people in one area to support a van, arrangements are made for leasing a van with the cost being shared by the riders.

One of the employees volunteers to be the driver, in return for reduced cost or personal use of the van.

Dial-a-ride service is currently being provided in Oakland County, principally for the elderly and handicapped. A paid driver is provided, and riders call in, sometimes a day or more in advance, to receive the service.

Subscription bus service is similar to dial-a-ride. Commuters sign up to be picked up at or near to their home every morning and delivered to a specified destination.

A return service is provided at a given time in the afternoon.

The driver and vehicle may then be used for dial-a-ride type services during mid-day.

Can more be done with all these various forms of paratransit, and could it help with our congestion problems?

Yes, a lot more could be done, and it could help (although not solve) our traffic problems.

Higher fuel prices would be an obvious incentive. If employers were to start charging for parking spaces, that would help also.

Unfortunately, many of those individuals who voice support for these more unconventional services assume that all those "other" people clogging the roadways will use them, but he or she will not have to.

Providing services for "the other guy" to use, seldom works.

We all enjoy the privacy and relative convenience of our own cars.

What would it take for YOU to give up that privacy and convenience?

Complainers invited to court

Jim Fitzgerald

In a Jan. 30 column, I offered to give Municipal Parking Department Director Helen Irving damning evidence of one of her officers cheating on the job. All Irving had to do was phone me. She didn't.

That was no surprise; Irving had ignored similar offers in the past. I've heard from dozens of people who received overdue payment notices for parking tickets they swear they never got. In many cases, they said their cars had never been in Detroit at any time, let alone the date they were allegedly ticketed. I wrote about several of these ghost violations, but there was never any response from Irving or anyone else at the parking department.

But Friday, Irving returned my phone call. She said she had hesitated to talk to me because I often write unfair things about her officers who, she insisted, are hardworking, honest people, deserving much better publicity than I give them.

I conceded that the vast majority of meter officers are undoubtedly pure. But would Irving concede that perhaps just a few of them wrote phony tickets to make it look like they were working harder than they were? After all, could all those people be lying when they claimed their cars were never parked where the overdue notices said they were?

Sloppy handwriting blamed

How about the parking department insiders who say some officers get license numbers from computer files and write tickets against out-of-town cars, knowing that in most cases the victims will pay the $20 to avoid a court hassle? And, if there's an investigation, the officers simply shrug their shoulders and say they must have made a mistake writing the license number.

How about the witnesses who swear they've seen officers throw tickets in the gutter rather than attach them to cars?

Couldn't some of these charges be true? No. Irving would concede nothing except that some mistakes might occur due to an officer writing down the wrong license number or using poor penmanship. Otherwise, she needed indisputable verification to believe one of her officers screwed the public.

How about Mary Rager of Detroit, who has documentation proving her car was in the repair shop from Dec. 6 until Dec. 20 because it had been stolen and damaged? Rager received an overdue notice for a parking ticket issued Dec. 7. She thinks an officer got her license number from a list of stolen cars. What other possible explanation could there be?

Maybe an employee of the repair shop borrowed the car for a few hours and parked it illegally, Irving suggested.

Oh my. So how about the case described in my Jan. 30 column? A Wayne State University student retrieved a piece of paper he saw a parking officer throw on the ground and step on. It was the "violinist's copy" of a parking ticket written minutes earlier, two blocks away.

Officer's good record cited

I gave Irving the ticket number and she called back later to say the officer involved has a good record, and she couldn't believe the officer would do such a terrible thing. But Irving said she'd investigate further if the witnesses were willing to testify.

Irving's advice to all alleged victims of a phony ticket is to fight it in traffic court, because a judge has much more leeway than the parking department when it comes to believing an aggrieved citizen might possibly be telling the truth. Never mind the hassle and cost of going to court for a lousy parking ticket that probably will be dismissed because the complaining officer doesn't show up to testify.

State Rep. William Runco, R-Dearborn, recently responded to constituents' complaints by proposing legislation that would make it a misdemeanor for an officer to discard a parking ticket rather than attach it to a car. The punishment would be a fine of up to $500 or 90 days in jail.

I asked Helen Irving what she thought of Runco's action, which currently indicates it is widely believed that there's a slight problem in her department. She said she had no comment.

I'm surprised Irving didn't say it wasn't really Runco; it was someone who borrowed his office for a few hours and used it illegally.

Lake doesn't need chance of oil spill

Extraordinary as it may be, even in this day of oil spills and desecration of the landscape, the kinder and gentler people at the U.S. Department of the Interior are about to give the oil and gas diggers another chance to ruin one of Oakland County's most attractive lakes, Lakeville Lake, just a few miles north of Rochester.

As the owner of a cottage on the lake, I got a letter from the Bureau of Land Management inviting me to comment. I am enclosing ... a copy of my reply.

This is a repeat of a similar try five or six years ago. I didn't like it then, and I dislike it even more today.

I have your letter of March 22 inviting my comments on your idea of ruining beautiful Lakeville Lake, a residential and recreational lake of nearly 500 acres, in Oakland County by soliciting oil and gas drilling smack in the middle of the lake by speculators.

My opinion is that it's a lousy, stinking proposal to rape this invaluable, irreplaceable water resource so somebody might make a greedy buck or two and at the same time destroy a lake that's home to many long-time residents, including senior citizens and a camp for kids.

Furthermore, this lake abounds in wildlife; it's a pretty fair fishery, although now not as good as some years ago; ducks, honkers, swan, sea gulls use it as a refuge; and many bird species populate it.

Boating and canoeing make the lake a popular retreat, plus (there's) ice-fishing for pike in the winter. The lake, of course, is open to the public through the DNR dockage facility.

The worse thing in the world we should entertain is an Oakland County duplicate of the horrible oil spill mess currently savaging Alaskan waters at Prince William Sound.

What in h— would happen on Lakeville Lake when the oil pipes burst and the oil starts to spurt in every which direction?

Prevent this before it happens by discouraging all oil and gas drilling operations on and in Lakeville Lake.

Someone may say I have a vested interest in the lake because I spend a great share of the spring, summer and fall there at our cottage, sailing, fishing, etc. You can say that again.

Why some voted no on bond issue

It might be a shame that the voters turned down the bond issue for the fire station. It could be that the relocation of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department being included had something to do with the no vote.

After all, why would they want to move from their present location at the Village Bake Shop?

Our arrogant boys in brown are constantly waddling in for doughnuts, sometimes two cars at a time. I suppose this also keeps the bake shop from ever being robbed.

First Carriage Heights home going up in May

Carriage Heights, a 40-acre subdivision planned for Tindall Road in Springfield Township, got an extension on a final preliminary plat which was originally granted back in the early 1980's.

The Springfield Township board unanimously approved the extension March 9.

Carriage Heights is adjacent to Carriage Trail Estates near Eliza Lake. The original final preliminary plat was approved when Charlie Bowles of CB Custom Builders began plans for the subdivision.

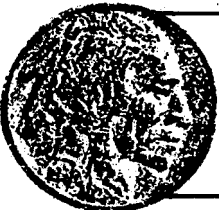

Springfield Corporation purchased the development and obtained an extension on the final preliminary plat two or three years ago. Lee Ann Oliver, president of the Springfield Corporation, was on hand at the board meeting last week when the current extension was granted.

Oliver said that extension was necessary because the construction plans were just approved by the township engineers.

Springfield Corporation will be back to the board for final approval within two months, which is the final step for the 19-lot subdivision.

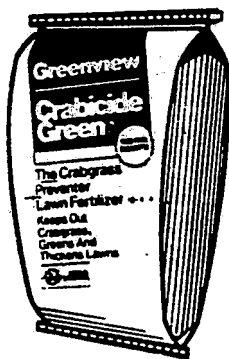

"It's actually two subdivisions," Oliver said. "One goes off Buggy Whip Road, with 11 really wooded lots. The other subdivision has eight rolling lots."

She said the lots will be on the market within the next 60 days, and the first home is going up in the sub in May.

Road work across state to continue

There were 61.5 billion motorists on state roadways in 1980, compared with 78.7 billion on Michigan roads last year.

In the same period, Michigan's 117,000-mile highway, road and street network has increased by less than 700 miles.

Michigan's Interstate system is 97 percent complete, with only 32 miles still to go, Pitz said.

The last segment of I-696 (Walter Reuther Freeway) in Oakland County is to open this year, and the final sections of I-69 east and west of Lansing in 1990 and 1991, he said.

In addition, new federal highways scheduled for unveiling this year include a seven-mile stretch of US-131 Freeway south of US-10 near Ludington.

Among other projects slated for work in the 1989 season:

- 11 miles of I-96;
- 33 miles of I-94;
- The widening of I-75 between Joslyn Road north to M-15.
- A two-year program to renovate the deck of the I-75 bridge over the Rouge River in Detroit.
- 8 miles of concrete recycling of I-75 south from I-275.
- Widening of I-75 from Joslyn Road to M-15.
- 10 miles of I-75 in Genesee County
- 9 miles of I-75 north from I-675 in Saginaw and Bay counties.
- 12 miles of I-75 east of US-10 freeway in Bay County.

The department also plans to take bids on county road and city street projects eligible for federal aid this year.

The work will support more than 11,000 jobs on the construction sites and in supplier business and industry.

Calcote Country is blooming this spring with all our new arrivals. Original artist's wares from all over the country are represented in the store. The state of Louisiana is represented by sculptured "almost new" dolls by Carol Manning. Reproductions of Nantucket baskets are coming in from Vermont.

From Williamston, Michigan we have Blue Bowl Pottery and Beth Borgeau-Richards' limited edition watercolors "Moments of the Hearts" are here from Romeo, Michigan.

If it is country furniture you are looking for the Ramsey Collection from Rockford, Illinois is here. Country Is from Arkansas and Country Memories from Wisconsin are also here for your choosing.

We also have the Stevens linens from Maine and Austratex from the textile mills of Austria.

This is just a few items, too many to mention for all your spring pick me up shopping and your gift giving occasions. So stop on in!!

LIABILITY COVERAGE TO PROTECT YOUR ASSETS

Many people ask me, "Why do I need to carry liability coverage in a No Fault state?" I have found that many people only carry the minimum liability as required by the State, which is $20,000. each person/$40,000. each accident. This is not adequate coverage for a homeowner.

An injured person in an auto accident in Michigan can sue you . . . and collect . . . if the injury is serious, such as a death, disfigurement, or disability. In this type of injury case, a judgement could be for many thousands of dollars, perhaps more than your liability limit. If the judgement exceeds your limit, you could be held personally responsible. This could jeopardize your future wages or cause your home or other assets to be sold to pay the amount awarded by the court.

The more you own, the more you should protect yourself. Also, if you are at a higher risk, such as . . . owning a swimming pool, live on a lake, have young drivers or have a high paying job, you should carry higher liability. As you become more successful, the chances of you being a target for a large lawsuit are greater.

Increasing your auto and homeowner liability limits will cost only a few dollars and could save you thousands in the event of a loss. A personal umbrella policy is also available to increase your liability coverage over all your personal property and can be for 1 million or more.

Call me to discuss your needs!

Forest of the Green Frog

By Tom Erickson

A deer's breath beyond the golden forest
 Stood,
 A man
 Who knew life through his hands.
 Aging, he'd been
 Through the silent killing
 Of a foreign war.
 Stood he, from I
 Not far.
 He, A generator
 From which the universe
 Could freely converse.
 Knowing the worst
 Of mankind,
 Held he the love of life
 Tightly
 Within his forest of the green frog.
 The love
 Of sharing
 A July afternoon
 With me
 Resounds in my thoughts.

I then knew
 That I could
 Too
 Live life
 In the way
 I'd always Knew it could and should Be.

My Friend

By Bruce A. Stewart

It has been many years that I've missed you my friend.
 Life can be so unkind and relentless to change.
 I see you now as I knew you then.
 Body and soul with heart in hand.
 Wet is my face from a salty stream.
 I will visit and dream then wave goodbye.
 Those tears that you've lived have finally dried.

Love,
 Bruce A. Stewart

Disposal firm eyes Rose Township

BY PAT YOUNG
 Clarkston News Staff Writer

One of the nation's largest waste disposal firms, Browning-Ferris Industries (BFI) announced plans to purchase the former Marlowe landfill in Rose Township and open a landfill/recycling center.

BFI signed a purchase agreement with the Marlowe family for the original 146-acre landfill site and an adjacent 360-acre parcel on East Rose Center Road at Pepper Road. The firm is submitting permits to the Department of Natural Resources for approval, a process that could take 120 days, and will complete the sale after DNR approvals.

Once approved, BFI could proceed with plans to create a combination landfill, recycling and composting site that, according to Ken Wishnick, divisional vice president of BFI, could handle up to half of the county's solid waste.

They chose the Rose Township site because often people are concerned about groundwater, he said. So his firm picked a site already suspected of contamination and will make it better.

The Marlowe landfill is listed by the state as a source of contaminated groundwater and was voluntarily closed in 1983 when State Act 641 restrictions regulating landfills took effect. The landfill had been in operation since 1948.

BFI officials said at a press conference last Friday that the entire landfill that exists now, about 30-35 acres, would be dug up and lined. Safeguards would exceed state requirements.

"BFI is prepared to take full responsibility of any clean up," Wishnick said.

The proposed new landfill would be 125 acres and have a life of a minimum of 10 years. The recycling center would incorporate about another two acres, and BFI officials said they are looking at about 20 percent recycled waste. The composting area would use about 10 acres.

At the end of the landfill's life, BFI proposes to construct a public natural area including lakes and trails and wildlife habitats.

"We would bring the open area back to something enjoyed," Wishnick said. They would also be open to discussion from the community about what to do with the land once the site is closed.

BFI has a 30-year responsibility, by law, to maintain the land, he added.

BFI officials also said they had contacted residents within a 1/4-mile radius of the site and offered to purchase their property at fair market value if they decide to leave because of the landfill. BFI has also proposed paving portions of Rose Center Road to accommodate traffic. Up to 200 trucks could travel to the site daily.

Milt Handorf, director of public works for Oakland County, said BFI made a brief presentation to them last Thursday. He said they are taking a look at it to see what the impact would be on the county's ACT 641 Solid Waste Management Plan.

He said the county's reaction to the plan was "interested."

The county is currently involved in a $650-million solid waste program that would include incinerators, landfills and recycling facilities. A siting committee is in the process of choosing a landfill site in Oakland County with at least 460 acres.

BFI said they would handle waste from all over Oakland County, and the recycling center would handle materials that residents would separate at their curbs before pickup, a process the county is considering making mandatory for all residents.

The landfill would not take toxic waste or incinerator ash, Wishnick said.

BFI officials declined to say how much the property cost, but did say they would spend "tens of millions" on the project. They would hope the facility could be open by 1990, and it would also be open to area residents for drop off as well as to trash haulers.

The BFI facility could create another 25-50 jobs in the area. The firm operates 95 such facilities throughout the country and employs about 21,500 people.

When asked if the site, renamed Pheasant Ridge, could potentially be the county's answer to the landfill problem, Bob Line, vice president of BFI of Southeastern Michigan, said, "We'd be happy to work with them."

Is there an alternative to the common belief that pain killers are the only answer for relief from pain? YES! Landmark College geared toward dyslexic

For Troy Cook, 19, of Independence Township, academics have always been difficult.

He attended Clarkston schools for 15 years -- getting C's, D's and sometimes E's -- until he was diagnosed as dyslexic as a senior in high school.

Dyslexia is a neurological disability that inhibits the ability to recognize symbols and process them.

Troy began tutoring one hour a week to help him cope with his disability, but true assistance came when his mother heard about a special program in Vermont.

Troy now attends college at a facility known as Landmark College in Putney, Vt., the only college in the country exclusively for dyslexics or learning disabled students.

Troy is now enrolled in the College Skills Program and is taking English, mathematics, speech communication and algebra.

In contrast to typical programs for college-age dyslexics, students at Landmark College build their language and study skills so that they can perform college-level work without the help of taped books, note-takers oral exams, or other bypass learning techniques.

The college's 146 students are split into small classes of six, and each student has a one-on-one daily tutorial. At the end of their program, students graduate with an associ-

Pre-school program

Parents of pre-schoolers can learn how to promote success without stress and what options the Clarkston school system offers kindergarteners through a new program.

"Off To A Good Start," presented by Judy Freitag (of Huron Valley Schools), Cynthia Omans (Bailey Lake) and Debbie Licata (Andersonville), is sponsored by Clarkston Area Youth Assistance and will help parents learn about school readiness, what is normal for youngsters and many other things.

The presentation will be conducted at North Sashabaw Elementary, 5290 Maybee Road, on Wednesday, April 12 at 7:30 p.m.

ate's degree in general studies and leave with a better understanding of their disabilities and how to handle it.

Before acceptance to Landmark College, students are expected to have upper high school level reading, writing, study and analytical skills. Those who do not are enrolled in Landmark's Skills Development Program, where language skills are taught to prepare students for college work either at Landmark College or at another institution.

In Troy's case, he wrote to Landmark, filled out the application materials and traveled to Landmark for an interview.

"I decided that Landmark was for me," Troy said, adding, "The only way I made it through high school was from the help and support of my mother."

The rummage sale will take place from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, April 15, at the V.F.W. Post, 1690 Airport Rd. near M-59 in Waterford Township.

There will also be a dessert table, hot dogs and beverages available.

Donations of rummage sale items and baked goods are also being accepted. These items should be taken to the post between 7-10 p.m. on April 14 or between 6:30 a.m. to noon on April 15.

More information about the rummage sale is available by calling 673-9198.

Clarkston area sends 2 to finals

Winners at Chef's race advance

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Some people are born to cook. Others to ski. Two Clarkston area residents were able to combine the two and win a free trip to Sun Valley, Idaho.

Don Balzarini and Lori Walker, representing Pine Knob Ski Resort's cafeteria, finished first in their respective age divisions in a recent qualifying event at Boyne Highlands for the annual Grand Marnier Chefs Ski Race.

Although the object was to raise money for the hungry and to have fun, it was by no means a cake walk for either skier.

"The competition, especially in the younger age groups, was terrific," said Balzarini. "The course was quite 'turny.' The best skiers won."

Walker, who competed in the 21-to-30 age division agreed.

"It was exhausting and nerve wracking," she said of her first attempt at the Grand Marnier event.

The slalom competition — open to all chefs, restaurateurs, cooks, caterers, culinary students and other food professionals age 21 and over — began in 1975 at New York's Hunter Mountain by several top chefs who wanted to honor an injured colleague, Jacques Pepin.

The event has since snowballed into five regional races and a national championship, drawing nearly 1,500 competitors from Maine to California. Proceeds from the Midwest Regional at Boyne Highlands go to Michigan Chefs Against Hunger.

The organization was founded in 1986 by a group of prominent Detroit area chefs including Keith Famie of Les Auteurs, Edward Janos of The Money Tree and Milos Cikelk of the Golden Mushroom. Money raised goes to the Capuchin Community Center Soup Kitchen, which provides emergency food and clothing to the needy.

But that's not the race's only claim to fame. The Grand Marnier is an unusual and exciting event for competitors and fans alike because of the required racing gear. An apron emblazoned with racing number, the tall white hat (called a toque blanche) and a white chef's jacket which the participants can decorate with his or her restaurant's logo make for quite a sight on the snowy hills.

Sometimes, this rule can cause a few inconveniences for the racers, said Balzarini.

"You have to hold down the hat with your goggles," he said.

Despite the whimsical gear, the event follows NASTAR guidelines. Entrants are divided into five age categories for men (21-30, 31-40, 41-50, and 60 and over) and three for women (21-30, 31-40, and 41 and over.)

To compensate for those who skills are better on a kitchen range than a mountain range, a free trip to the finals as a spectator is awarded for the best decorated coat.

Balzarini was proud of the coat he wore; his wife, Carol, designed it.

"There were some well-designed and beautiful coats," he said. "Mine came out nice."

Although this was his first attempt at the Grand Marnier — a magazine advertisement caught his attention — he brought along plenty of first-hand slope experience.

He has 21 years of coaching experience, including six at Clarkston High School where he tutored Walker along with many other students. Both also compete in the Miller racing series at Pine Knob.

Walker, a 1986 graduate of Clarkston High School, credits her success to Balzarini and looks forward to the nationals.

"I'll be nervous," she said. "I've never been skiing out west before."

Pine Knob supported both racers by paying their fees, Balzarini said.

He also added that the Clarkston area is strong in skiing from the high school on up to the Miller sponsored racing program.

Soccer team to challenge in G.O.A.L.

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

With an impressive 6-3-4 record a year ago, the girls soccer team at Clarkston High earned respect.

The Wolves set their goal a little higher for 1989. They want a Greater Oakland Activities League (GOAL) title.

"We are looking to capture the GOAL," said Coach Hana Olsen. "That's our goal for this year."

Clarkston's strength will lie with its midfielders and defense, the coach said. Katie Rieman, who played defense a year ago, will take over the goaltending duties.

Other returning players from last season include Tami Mitchell, Karen Lowe, Nancy Carosella and Erin McAuliffe. Strong performances also are expected from Kim Kolody, Sabre Lachman and Amy Fuchey.

Overall, there are 18 girls on the team. Olsen hopes for a continuation of the good times the Wolves enjoyed last season into 1989.

"It should be a pretty good year," the coach said. "We are working hard on midfield and putting the ball into the net instead of out of it."

The Wolves opened the season on April 4 with a road game against Lakeland. Look for results in next week's paper.

Baseball team to rely on defense, pitching

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Coach Roy Warner doesn't expect to see many games like the 13-8 loss to Rochester Adams in pre-district baseball action last spring.

Defense will be the key if they Wolves are to finish with a winning record in 1989.

"We can't give them (the opponents) a big inning," the coach said. "We have to keep the runs down."

Although half of the 18 boys on the team are seniors, Warner considers it a young squad. And one without much home-run punch.

"We will have to do whatever we can to score," Warner said.

With students gone on Easter vacation for a week and wet weather on their return to school, Warner hopes for at least one outdoor practice before the season begins next Tuesday against Rochester Adams. But he's not holding his breath.

Here's a quick glance at the Wolves' roster for 1989:

Pitchers are seniors Ben Underwood, Erick Phillips and Erik Mackson; juniors Corey Olsen, Mike Spiagle, Kevin Keilitz and Todd Bennett; sophomore Chad Hetherington.

Junior Marc Sanderson and Underwood will see time at first base. Senior Matt Carson, junior Todd McLaughlin and Mackson are listed at second base while senior Bill Larkin and Carson will handle shortstop. Senior John Koslosky and junior Larry Liford are third-basemen.

Hetherington and junior Jack Garnett are the catchers. The outfielders are seniors Darin Brandt, Bill Jawlik, Doug Lederman, Phillips, Keilitz and Bennett.

First nine holes ready for golf

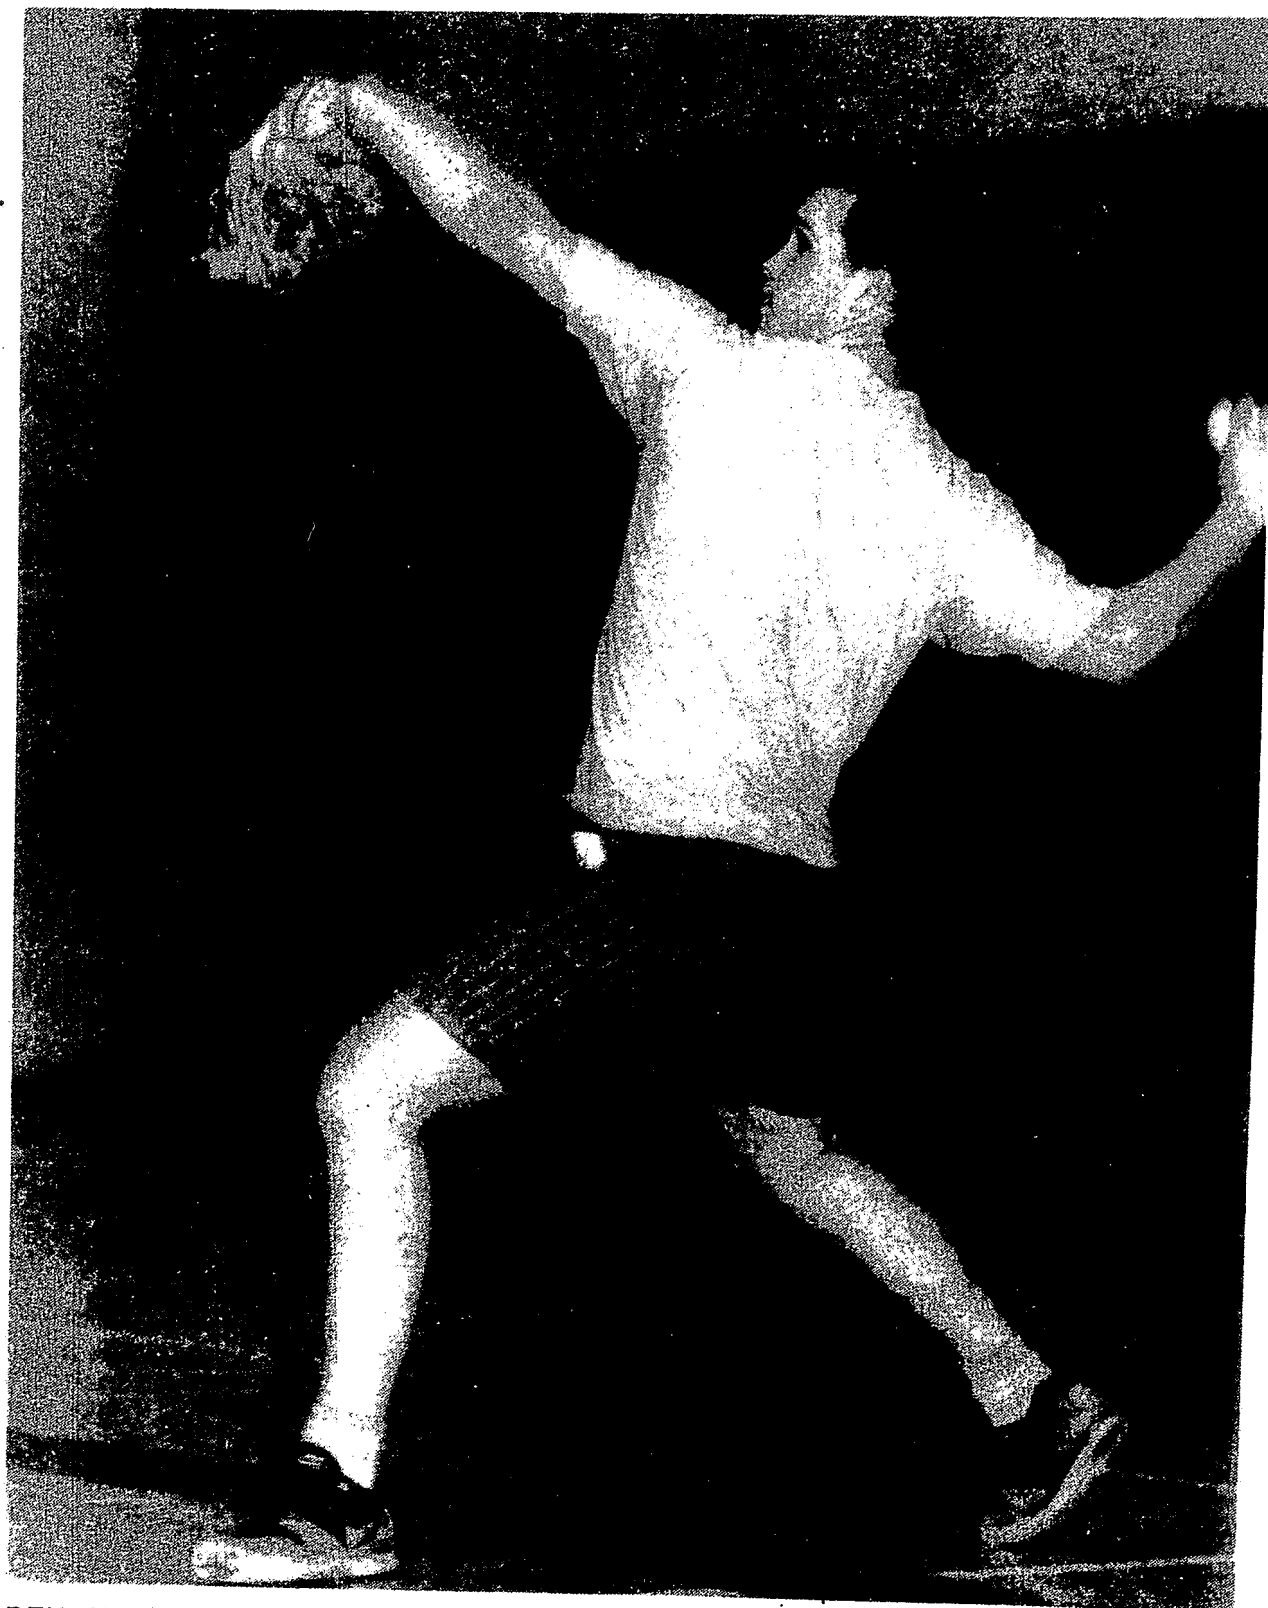

Nine holes of a planned 18-hole golf course at Indian Springs Metropark will open for business in early April. The second half of the 6,703-yard course is expected to be finished sometime this summer.

Golfers must provide their own equipment, however, power carts, hand carts and a limited number of accessories are available at the trailer, which is a temporary starter building at the site.

Power cart rentals are $8 for nine holes while hand carts go for $1.50 each. Rates are $8 for nine holes on weekends and holidays and a dollar less on weekdays. Juniors (17 years and under) and senior discounts are available during the week only (except holidays) and cost $4 for nine holes. They also can take advantage of reduced cart rentals.

Entrance to the park is along White Lake Road, between Teggerdine and Cuthbert roads in Springfield and White Lake townships. The course opens at 8 a.m. and closes at dusk daily with earlier times on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

For more information, call Indian Springs Metropark toll free at 1-800-24-PARKS.

BEN UNDERWOOD winds and delivers another pitch to Chad Hetherington during a varsity baseball practice session at the high school Monday afternoon.

Hey, hey, hey the kids are back in school (A songwriter I'm not), and spring sports are on the way. After a long and lonely Easter break, I can sympathize with the Maytag repairman.

As of this writing, the girls soccer team has christened the season with a season-opener against Lakeland on the road.

In a bold prediction, available exclusively to Clarkston News readers, I say the team won. (By now, I could be feeling a little silly since this material is written before game time.)

Last season, the Wolves fought to play their home games on the high school field and won. The battle must have inspired the troops to greatness because an excellent season followed. I'm looking forward to more of the same in 1989.

The track teams begin play two days after the soccer team, with a home meet against Milford. Here's hoping the weather cooperates. Temperatures in the 70s and clear blue skies would do nicely, mister weatherman.

On Friday, the boys tennis team kicks off its season at Rochester Adams, always a tough match. But don't worry what happens, be happy the season has begun. (Hey, maybe I'm not such a lousy songwriter after all.)

The following week, the baseball and softball teams get into the swing of spring, so to speak. All in all, life is good again.

Has anyone out there in newspaperland caught the television commercials for the new flick, "Major League"?

If not, baseball fans, you're in for a real treat when this one's released. With Charlie Sheen, Bob Uecker and Tom Berenger acting out what the Cleveland Indians perform each summer for the silver screen, it'll be the feel good, can't miss movie of the summer. Two thumbs up. Four champagne glasses (with plenty of bubbles). On a scale from one to 1,000 I'd give it a 1,000+. That's even before I've even seen the darn movie. The commercials are a scream.

I just hope the good old boys in marketing didn't overdo it and show all the funny parts in the little commercial clips to whet our appetites. It certainly has the makings of a powerhouse killer in the box offices of America.

Spring tune-up

If the Tigers are playing baseball, can spring be far behind?

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Special to The Clarkston News

"Ladies and gentlemen, at game time the temperature in Detroit is 37 degrees, in Lakeland, 82 degrees."

That's the way ballgames start in the grapefruit leagues. No one hollers "play ball." They announce the temperatures, the fans cheer enthusiastically, and the games begin.

In mid-March when these pictures were taken, the Tigers were in the middle of their annual tune-up for the baseball season. It seemed odd to see a sign announcing the winter home of the Tigers when it felt exactly like summer.

Though other camps may have had turmoil, Tigertown appeared to be relaxed and comfortable.

Big-time stars like Guillermo Hernandez hung out their hotel doors. Minor leaguers dreaming of a contract hung around the pool and talked to the tourists.

A lot of Michigan fans attended both home and away games. Some make the trip annually, some live in Florida year-round or just for the winter. Players are pretty accomodating, signing autographs and posing for pictures.

The Tigers were scheduled to open their regular season last night in Texas, where the temperature was near 90 degrees. They begin their home season Friday at Tiger Stadium.

Annette Kingsbury is a reporter for the Oxford Leader.

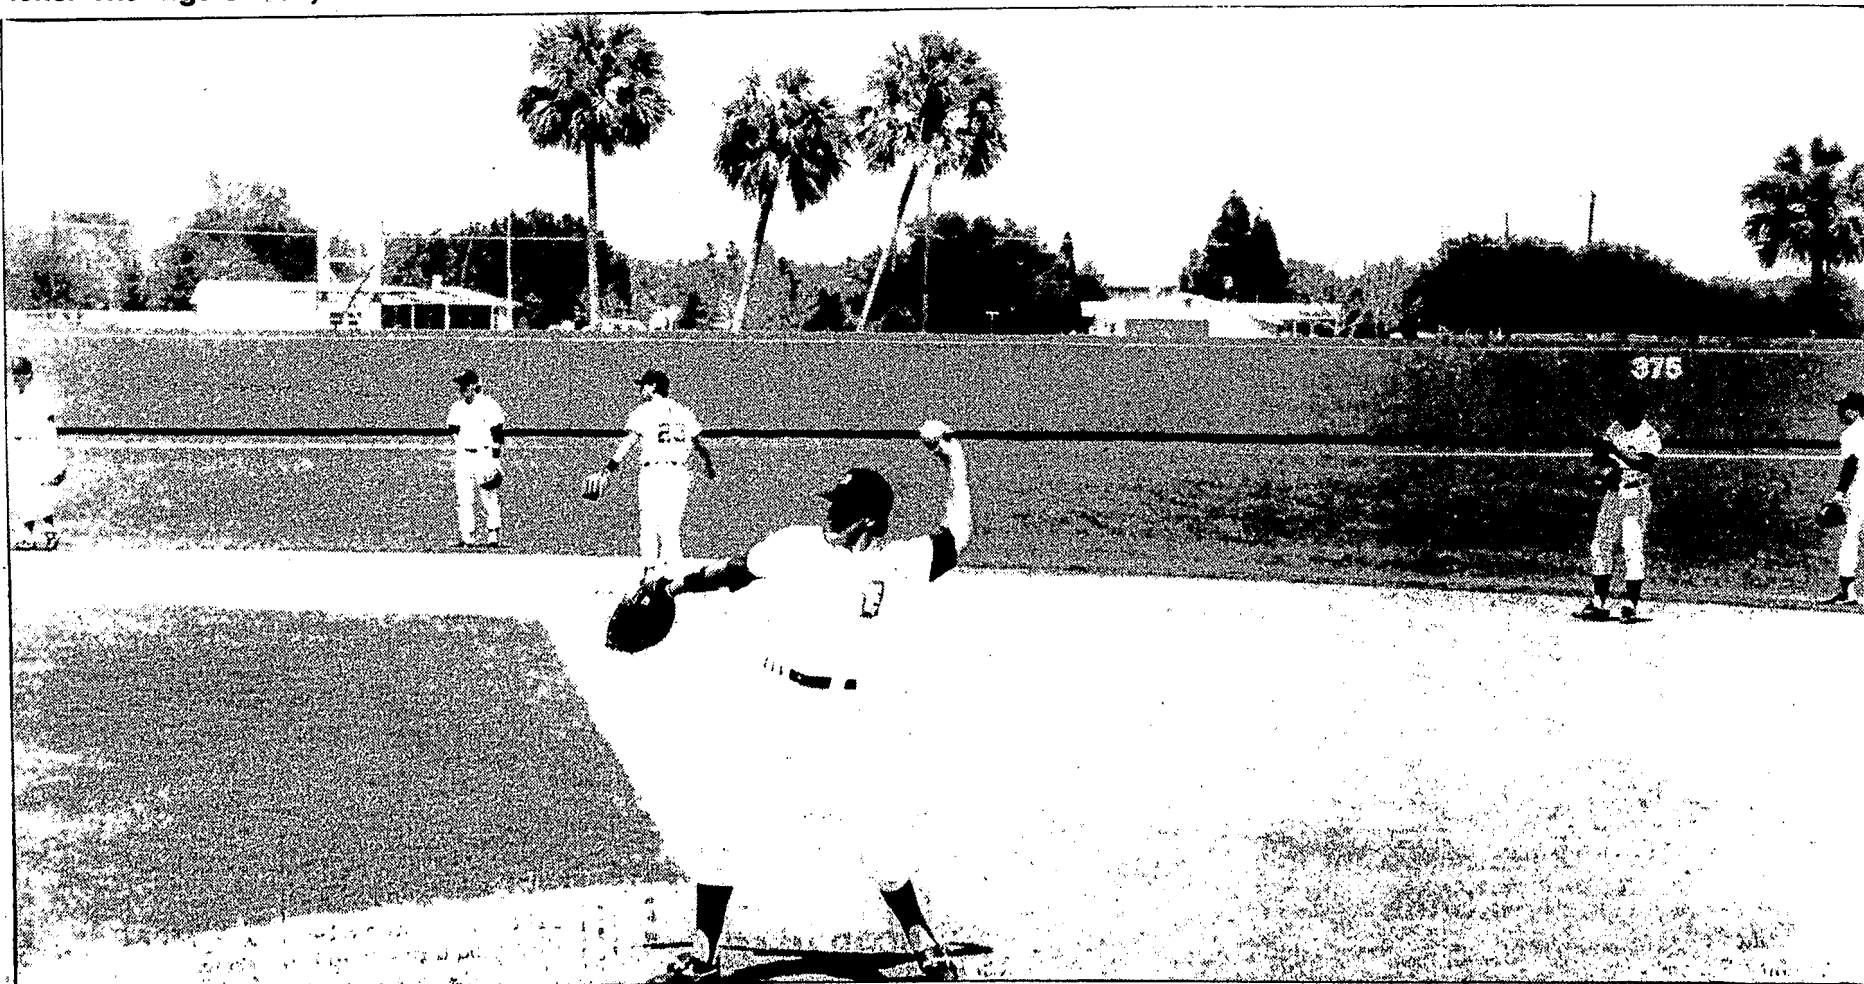

SPARKY ANDERSON, a clear crowd favorite, trading gulps with some fans before a game against the Dodgers. The stadium was packed to see the defending World Champions. The Tigers won, 11-3.

MATT NOKES has become a crowd favorite since the departure of Lance Parrish.

DAVE BERGMAN takes infield practice with his teammates before a game. Note the palm trees beyond the outfield fence. Game-time temperature that day was 82 degrees.

New truck safety regulations are in place

BY DON RUSH

Help is on the way to reduce those aggravating cracked-windshield accidents caused by trucks on area highways and byways.

On April 1st, a new law took effect aimed at reducing truck-related accidents. The legislation will: 1) require covers on trucks carrying loose loads; 2) increase fines for trucks operating with unsafe equipment; and 3) impose stricter brake requirements.

"I'm in favor of it (the law)," said Oxford police chief John LeRoy. "It won't stop 100 percent of windshields being chipped, but it will cut it back."

According to Sgt Kenneth Griner, of the Pontiac Weigh Station (I-75) the new law requires loads of sand, gravel, stone, or anything that can blow from trucks to be covered.

"Trucks will not need tarps when their loads' center of gravity is 6 inches below the boards," he said.

Currently, for example, gravel can be loaded into a truck and the edges must be below 6 inches from the top of the trailer — however, the center is crowned, and above the boards.

Time to sign up for March of Dimes walk

Time is running out to register a team in the largest Walk-A-Thon in the nation. The March of Dimes "WalkAmerica TeamWalk" will take place in Clarkston on Sunday, April 30.

TeamWalk participation is highly visible — scores of people march down Main Street wearing tee-shirts with the name of a company or organization. While other WalkAmerica volunteers walk as individuals, TeamWalkers join forces to promote exciting challenges among different companies or groups.

To enter, call 423-3200 for more information.

"Now, it has to be flat, and you won't be able to see the load. If it's 6 inches flat, and something blows out, they can still get a ticket," he said.

Tubular loads, such as logs or metal, don't need to be covered, but must be chained to the truck's frame. The same applies to vehicles being transported to the scrap yards.

"I think most (truckers) will comply," Griner said.

According to a report from AAA Michigan, truck covers are expected to sharply reduce an estimated $18 million annual cost for shattered windshields on passenger cars.

The law requires trucks to have brakes on all wheels.

The AAA Michigan report also states, "Operating an unsafe truck can now result in fines up to $300, formerly $100. Penalties can be levied for violating state-mandated standards on brakes, tires, steering, lights and turn signals, if these result in a truck being taken out of service for

Derby winners from Bailey Lake Elementary

The annual Pine Wood Derby sponsored by Cub Scout Pack 341 from Bailey Lake Elementary on March 9 resulted in six different winners. A list of top finishers in each category follows:

Best looking car: Griffin Parker. (Boys in pack took vote to decide winner.)

Pack champs: Brent Zorka, first place. Steven Kotschedoff, second place. Eric Rood, third place.

Tiger cub winners: Eric Vordeburg, first place. Ryan Lucken, second place. Jason Gronlund, third place.

Wolf winners: Kotschedoff, first place. Matthew Crigger, second place. Matthew Anderson, third place.

Bear winners: David Havenstick, first place. Justin Nelson, second place. Jeffrey Sitko, third place.

Webelo winners: Zorka, first place. Rood, second place. Kotschedoff, third place.

repairs."

Mike Acton, president of TKMS Ltd, Glaspie St, a trucking company, said the laws are overdue.

"I think they are good laws and I'm in favor of them... but they (the state) should have given us more time to get our units tarped. They gave us 4 months, which is not enough time to find tarps and to experiment with different types.

"I have spent $42,000 to tarp our units (17 trucks) and this time of year everything is slow. As it is, I won't have all the trucks tarped by April 1. We just won't run those trucks until they are tarped," Acton said.

TKMS Ltd hauls gravel. They have been in business for about 20 years.

Acton predicts the new laws, especially where equipment standards are concerned, will weed out unsafe drivers.

"We have a maintenance garage and we've complied. This law shouldn't be a problem if people have a regular maintenance schedule.

"Overall, it will make the roads safer. The majority of truck drivers are safe. The thing that discourages me is what people think of truck drivers, and maybe it's our own fault that we let these (unsafe) drives continue on the road. These laws will help," Acton said.

Don Rush is the editor of the Oxford Leader.

A peculiar plant

To many Americans, the gourd is an organic oddity. But for millions of people around the world, it's a multipurpose tool.

International Wildlife magazine reports that gourds aren't much of a meal, but their skin is easily dried. The result is an amazingly useful shell.

People have shaped them into spoons, jugs and bowls. Gourds are also used by musicians to make rattles, drums and a symphony of other instruments.

Clarence G. Catallo a Buffalo Street, Clarkston resident, was recently promoted within PaineWebber, Inc.

Catallo, a senior vice president of the company, is now the manager of the firm's new, expanded North Central division, said Joseph J. Grano Jr., president of retail sales and marketing.

In his expanded role, Catallo is responsible for PaineWebber's 65 retail branch offices located in North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and western Pennsylvania.

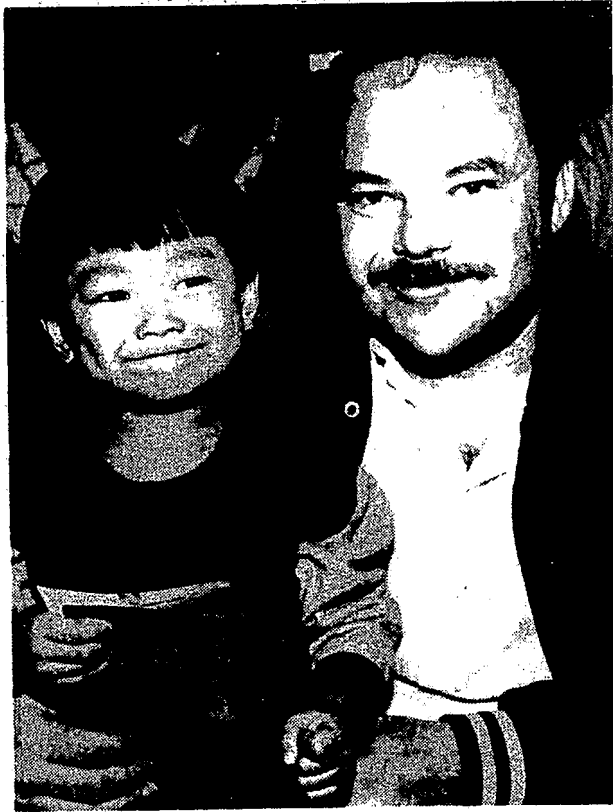

He joined PaineWebber in January 1988 from E.F. Hutton, where he had served as executive vice president and manager of the Great Lakes region, Hutton's most profitable branch region during 1987. He was also a member of Hutton's internal board of directors.

Catallo joined Hutton in 1965 as the firm's first trainee in the Detroit area. In 1968, he became assistant manager in Detroit and was subsequently named regional commodity manager.

He also built and managed Hutton's most productive office, the Southfield branch. Since then, he was successively promoted to sales manager of the Great Lakes region, district manager for Michigan and Indiana and regional manager for the Great Lakes region.

Catallo earned his bachelor of arts degree from the University of Detroit. His wife, Sharron, is the president of the Village of Clarkston, and they have two children.

PaineWebber Inc. is one of the nation's leading full-service securities firms, with more than 280 offices and 4,300 investment executives worldwide.

KEVIN MYERS of Clarkston, with his dad, Mark, won Showcase Cinema passes at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital's Children's Day celebration on Saturday, March 11. The event is designed to show parents and children what it's like to be hospitalized.

Teachers pay visit to electric plant

Two local educators learned first hand how the Detroit Edison Fermi 2 power plant produces electricity.

Chuck Keegan and Gerald Ostrom, both of Clarkston, took part in a Nuclear Energy Teachers Workshop held March 17.

Ninety educators from schools in five counties inspected the plant's control room simulator and its twin 400-foot cooling towers, where non-radioactive water used to condense steam in the plant is circulated for cooling.

The newest nuclear power plant in Michigan, Fermi 2 can produce 1,100 megawatts of electricity—enough to meet the needs of one million people.

It began commercial operation in January 1988, and provides about 12 percent of the electricity used by Detroit Edison customers. The plant is named after Enrico Fermi, the Italian physicist who led a scientific team in creating the first self-sustaining nuclear chain reaction.

Bruce Bordine of Bordine's Better Blooms was named Grower of the Year during award ceremonies at the annual spring convention of the Michigan Floral Association March 2-6 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel, Dearborn.

The award was one of six given by the 1,100-member association, each honoring a different segment of the floral industry.

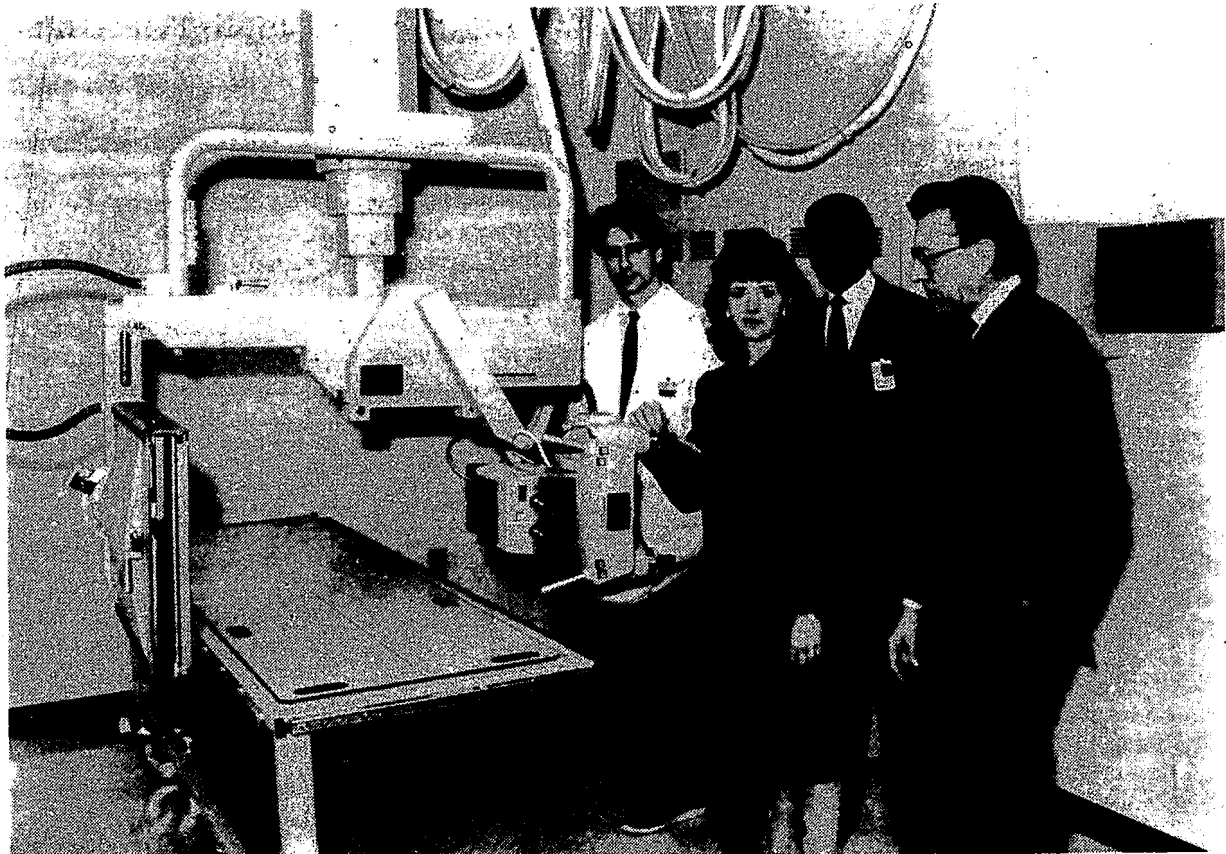

Bordine operates one of Michigan's largest combination retail florist-greenhouse-nursery-garden centers in Rochester Hills and a second location in Springfield Township.

According to Jim Gaunt, awards committee chairperson, "Bruce Bordine is a firm believer in excellence and service to the customer. He hires highly qualified personnel and spends substantial sums of money on proper training for his employees in all phases of his business."

Elected chairman

Charles Harding of Clawson Tank Co., Clarkston, was elected chairman of the Steel Tank Institute (STI) at the association's winter meeting held in mid-February.

Opinion of Bill Myers

Maiming the English language

William A. Myers is a retired Lapeer County editor and investments manager from Boca Raton, Fla.

Dan Rather, in describing a big train wreck in India, on the CBS Evening News, Jan. 16: "In addition to the deaths, there were hundreds maimed for life."

Well now, maiming is seldom temporary. Really, it extends beyond life, to the grave and thereafter.

Dan had another bad moment when he was making light of President Bush's fondness for pork rinds with tabasco sauce.

"I'm from Texas," said Dan, "and you don't eat pork rinds with tabasco."

What are pork rinds, Dan?" asked someone else on the program.

After posing as a rind expert, Dan could only stammer, "You know what bacon is . . ."

"Yes, Dan."

"Well . . . you know what bacon is . . ."

The subject changed.

The Wall Street Journal had a four-column head on the editorial page, "... he doesn't give a tinker's damn."

I hurried to the dictionary (New World Edition), and there it said the phrase was derived from the lowly speech of tinkers, and lowly breed of handymen. It also said the spelling "damn" was acceptable.

Nothing like quarreling with both the Journal and the dictionary, but I think they are both wrong. If you know otherwise, drop me a line.

Among the jobs done by a tinker is fixing pots and pans, and this involves soldering. When the tinker melts the solder, he keeps it in a little pool in a receptacle. To keep it from overflowing, he has a little stopper called a dam. It's worth only pennies, and from this comes the phrase, "... not worth a tinker's dam."

I noted a no-argument bobble in the Journal the same day, the use of the word "principle" in referring to a class of funds, as opposed to "interest," for example. The Journal, I assume, knows better. In case it doesn't, the word is "principal."

Speaking of tinkers, that's the term for gypsies in Ireland. As they are all over the world, they are roving lot, reputedly never up to much good.

I heard this story in Dublin, about a young Irish fellow who came into the insurance agent's and announced:

"I want to buy some life insurance."

"That's fine, my lad. What is your name?"

"Timothy Riley, sir."

"What is your father's name?"

"I never had a father."

"Well then," said the agent, "what is your mother's name?"

"I never had a mother."

"Come, come my lad - everyone knows who his mother is."

"Well, if the truth be known sir - there was this tinker fellow came to town, and he took advantage of me aunt."

Florida has tried some of the "college savings" bonds designed to keep pace with rising college tuitions. We took a look at them in a recent column and found they were not so attractive.

The people of Florida didn't go overboard for the things. The first sign-up produced only 40,000 applicants - half as many as expected. Michigan brought out a similar plan last fall and drew 85,000 enrollees.

Still another plan, available to all, is the U.S. government's special deal on Savings Bonds, now called EEs.

Bonds bought after 1989 (according to Business Week) exempt the interest if it's spent on college fees.

Catch is that your income must be under $60,000 when you cash them in. Exemption slides down to 33 percent at $80,000 income. They pay about 7.35 percent now, but this varies with U.S. Treasury bond rates. The money must be used for the tuition of your dependent, in the same year they're cashed.

Maturity is about 11 or 12 years, rates staying around where they are now.

All this red tape is a pain in the neck.

Better you should get some tax-free zero coupons. Buy them to mature when Tiny Tim will be in college. No tax now or later. If Tim doesn't go on to school, you're not locked in.

The other day I bought some State of Hawaii zeros for some new parents. The AA state bonds are due in 18 years. Yield is 7.10 percent. For $9,300, Mommy and Daddy got $35,000 in bonds, which will take care of maybe all Tim's schooling.

Better this than getting entangled with the bureaucrats.

What is Reflexology?

Reflexology is a therapeutic technique in the Natural Health field, which deals with the nerve endings that are located in the hands & feet. These nerve endings act as reflexes to each gland, organ & part of the body. (7,200 nerve endings in one foot).

Toxic acid deposits form & crystallize causing blockage of proper blood & nerve supply to reach the reflex area. These deposits are caused by stress, improper diet, lack of exercise, injury to a gland, organ or part of the body. These deposits are formed in other areas of the body, but more so in the hands & feet for they are the farthest from the heart.

Reflexology's purpose is to free these nerve channels which is done by the hands of the Reflexologist. Once these deposits are broken down - they are picked up by the blood stream, dissolved instantly & brought through the eliminating system. Since 24 qts. of blood pass through the heart every 3 minutes & the blood transfer is made in the hands & feet, one usually notices results during & after the 1st treatment.

TRYING OUT his racing legs, a 2-day-old foal stays pretty close to mom. Del and Bob Miller have the largest thoroughbred horse farm in Michigan. The couple began the 102-acre farm on Knox Road 15 years ago and race their horses nationwide.

Artist draws on farm experience

BY PAT YOUNG
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Fifteen years ago, Del and Bob Miller designed and built a spacious, wing-shaped ranch home overlooking their 102 acres of land on Knox Road in Springfield Township.

Starting with two fillies, they have since built the largest thoroughbred horse farm in Michigan.

Reflections

Outside the wood-framed expanse of living room windows on a sunny spring day last week, several mares kept watchful eyes on frolicking babies trying out their racing legs. Nearby, other mares with swollen bellies waited for their time to come.

This scene and many others on the Del-Rob Farm — ducks paddling around a quiet pond, gently rolling hills neatly sectioned with wooden fences and framed by

DEL MILLER says hello to an older mare in one of the pastures. She and her husband, towering trees—give Del inspiration another activity she enjoys.

Bob, built a custom ranch and began the horse farm 15 years ago.

"I've painted all my life," says the artist.

Even as a child she drew and at one time wanted to go into design. Her talent influenced the design of their custom wood and fieldstone home. And her artwork graces every room.

Bob, a former Detroit Lion football player who is semi retired now from his metal stamping business, devotes much of his time to the thoroughbred horses the couple raise and race. Del enjoys horse racing as well, frequently photographing jockeys and horses in action for later paintings.

While Del works in all mediums, including oil, watercolor, collage and mixed media, her favorite is oil. But she says watercolor is one of her best.

She paints abstract to impressionism to realism. Appropriately, horses are a frequent focus of her art. She has an ample supply of models outside her home.

Del and Bob have around 100 horses, some at their farm and some at Ladbroke Detroit Race Course in Livonia.

"I do a lot of racing paintings," she says. "It's more exciting."

She also takes commissions for horse portraits.

"Most people want portraits in oil," she adds, "But I do my racing paintings in watercolor. It's such a fresh medium and has such brilliant colors for the jockeys' silks."

Del occasionally paints other wildlife as well.

She recently had work in two juried, invitational shows, one with the National Arts Club in New York and one at the Somerset Mall in Troy.

The Somerset Mall show, "Animal Life in Contemporary Art," was in part a benefit for the American Horse Protection Association, Inc., a non-profit organization based in Washington, D.C., which is dedicated to the welfare of wild and domestic horses.

Del also recently sold eight of her works to Michigan National Bank.

She studied art at the Birmingham-Bloomfield Art Association, the Pontiac Art Center, at Ceasar Cerigliano in Stuart, Fla., and at the South Florida Art School in Hollywood. Her work has been exhibited in shows from Georgia and California to Michigan and Wisconsin.

Racing takes the Millers even further around the country. They recently returned from wintering and racing in Louisiana and Florida. But even when she's traveling, Del paints. She just packs up her supplies and takes them with her.

"I'm very involved in art," she says. The two things she enjoys most in life are painting and "watching her horses win."

"Horse racing has highs and lows, it's emotional," she says. "And painting is a very consistent thing."

Del also likes to paint landscapes.

"It doesn't have the excitement of racing," she says.

"But maybe that's why I relish it, the quiet and solitude. And here you have a lot of vistas."

Del says her interest in art probably comes from her heritage. She has an aunt and uncle who both painted.

"It's probably inherited," she says. "It's something you have to do with your hands. It's like exercise. You miss it."

When she's not traveling, she works in a studio attached to her Clarkston-area home. Brightened by skylights and picture windows, the spacious studio has everything she needs—plenty of room for easels and supplies, overhead lights, a sink and clean-up area.

Pictures in progress and sketches of pictures yet to be are visible throughout the studio.

Del looks around, then outside to the farm beyond and says, "It's exactly what I always wanted."

DEL MILLER, an accomplished artist, finds many models to paint on her thoroughbred horse farm. She paints action pictures of jockeys and horses racing when she and her husband race their horses across the country. She frequently paints landscapes, too.

Sculptor's career takes shape with county award

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Authenticity means a lot to artist Patrick Smith from Independence Township. If he can't do a project justice he won't do it, the 34-year-old sculptor said.

His hand-carved totem pole recently won the Pontiac Oakland Society of Artists Award during the 1989 Oakland County Art Show at the Summit Place Mall.

Before beginning his latest project, though, Smith collected all of the necessary information. Usually he spends more time researching a subject than completing the sculpture, which in this case took two weeks.

"I wanted to follow the rules as the Indians made it," he said. "It's not easy, but with the proper study... they have turned out real well."

His sculptures have turned out so authentic that teachers from Cranbrook, where Smith is a volunteer worker, use them as exhibits during classroom assignments.

Since his works of art aren't the real thing (they only look as if they are) students can handle the objects without fear of damaging original Indian artifacts, he said.

People in the Holly area see Smith's work on a regular basis. He completed a 14-foot tall totem pole for a recreation area and works with students at Patterson Elementary, helping them create their own totem pole.

While Indian artwork is his latest adventure, it by no means is his only artistic outlet. Currently, he is doing architectural-type carvings, free form and large panels. He also has done quite a few masks in the past.

Walking through the rooms of his parents' house shows the different stages he has gone through during the past 12 years.

When he was eight years old, Smith first came into contact with artists during an open house at Clarkston High School in the early 1960s, where his father taught Latin.

He took up sculpting seriously 12 years ago during a trip to West Germany. When he returned to Michigan he heard about a Bavarian wood sculptor named George Keilhofner who lived in Frankenmuth. The father of two studied his craft there for three years.

"You don't hear about (sculptors)," Smith said of his mentor. "He is such a master at his work. It's not only chicken (that makes Frankenmuth famous), it's George."

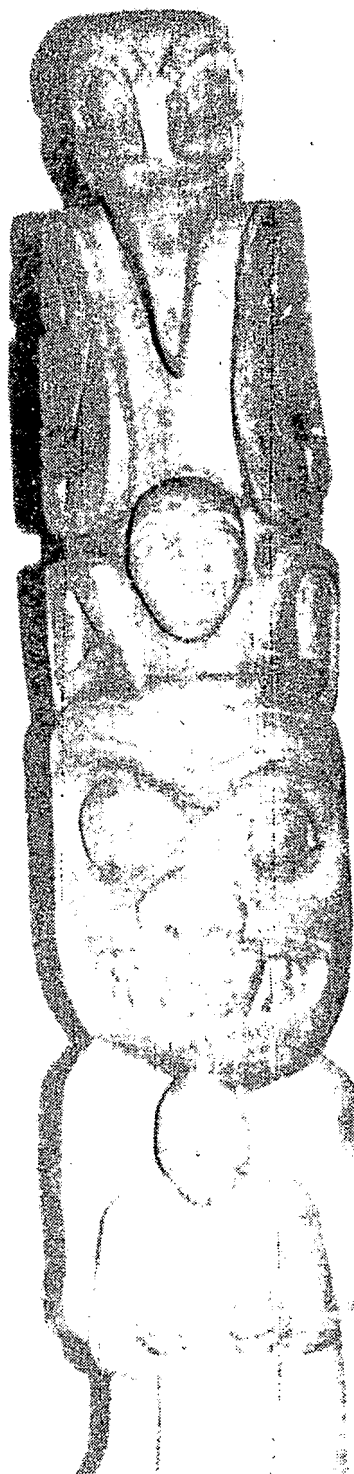

Since he began his artistic career by watching and learning from others, Smith enjoys teaching his craft to others. He has taught adult education classes for sculptors in Holly and Clarkston and had a cable television series aired last year.

He offers any interested artists-in-waiting one piece of advice should they consider learning how to become a sculptor.

"It's a lot of work," he said. "Mainly, it's a lot of studying. I really study these things."

But, at least in Smith's case, the hard work paid off in something tangible -- the award from the Pontiac Oakland Society of Artists.

"I'm very glad to have been rewarded," he said. "The recognition is important to me."

PATRICK SMITH of Independence Township stands next to the sculpture he entered in the 1989 Oakland County Art Show at the Summit Place Mall in early March.

Five Clarkston bands dominate at district festival

Clarkston's instrumental music program is making a name for itself across the state.

At the district level of competition, Clarkston schools sent eight bands, and five of them walked away with the highest ratings possible, allowing them to compete at the state level in April and May.

The other three bands also performed well.

The competitions are in the form of Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association District 4 Band Festivals.

The high school festival was held at Berkley High School March 11, with the CHS Wind Ensemble and Symphonic Band earning first and second division ratings respectively.

The Wind Ensemble is to enter the state festival at Farmington Harrison High School April 28.

Three bands each entered the competition from Sashabaw and Clarkston junior high schools at the junior high festival March 17 and 18 at Berkley Anderson Middle School.

She's off to the state geography bee finals

Cari Sundquist, a student at Sashabaw Junior High, will compete for Michigan's first National Geography Bee on April 7 at Central Michigan University, Mount Pleasant.

The state bee is the second level of a national competition sponsored by the National Geographic Society. There will be more than 100 fourth- to eighth-graders competing. They will be tested orally on geographic knowledge.

Spectators are welcome and admission is free. Gary Manson, a member of the geography faculty at Michigan State University, will be the moderator.

The winner of Michigan's bee will earn $100 and an all expenses paid trip to the national finals in Washington, D.C., on May 18-19. The national champion will win a $25,000 college scholarship.

Setting a record for the instrumental music program at Clarkston, the ninth-grade bands and the eighth-grade bands from each school earned first division ratings and qualification in the state festival set for May 6.

The seventh-grade bands from both schools each earned second division ratings for their performances in their respective classifications.

All of these first division ratings add up to five bands from Clarkston encompassing students in grades 8 through 12 who will compete at the state festival — a rare feat for one school district in Michigan.

To receive the superior rating, each band performed for a panel of adjudicators a concert program of selected and required music. The bands also sight read — performed selections of music not previously rehearsed or performed.

Directors of the bands are: Cliff Chapman, Doug Doty and Jeri Blough.

Words that aren't but should be

A dictionary and a thesaurus are unquestionably useful, but there are some words that you just can't find in them. The spelling specialists call these sniglets, or words not found in dictionaries but should be. Here are some examples composed by the Kim Boose's Clarkston Adult Education English composition class.

Fastilicious: Fast food place but is still pleasing and delicious to the taste.

Tastease: Things that you eat that are tasty; it teases the taste buds, so you want more.

Swellegant: Shoes that make your feet swell but you wear to look elegant.

Viocalm: Someone who becomes violent and needs to calm down.

Violax: Someone who is violent and needs to relax.

mind that the odds of winning are one in a zillion.

Ignominious charge-aholic: Any person using a charge card to purchase items of small cash value whereby making the vendor fill out a large and tedious charge slip form giving him great emotional stress.

Wonderful Willy

When found as a stray and brought into the shelter, Willy the Great Dane was only 70 pounds. But after two months of tender loving care in a foster home, he's well over 100 pounds and ready for a good home.

Willy is a wonderful guy. He's housebroken. He's good with children, good with adults, good with any animal he comes in contact with. He's just an all-around good guy with manners to match.

Willy, of course, is quite large. And he's a handsome, blue-colored dane (a grayish color).

He can be adopted at the Michigan Humane Society, 3600 Auburn Rd., Auburn Heights, 852-7420. Hours at the non-profit shelter are 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

The adoption fee for Willy is $67, which includes his neutering before leaving the shelter.

To begin

Kristin Bilicki

Where should I begin? That was the question that was gnawing at the back of my mind. How should I introduce myself? I couldn't just plainly state my name: Kristen Bilicki.

Also I couldn't quote facts and statistics about my life, describing my family, school life, my hopes, dreams and aspirations. In some way I had to create an interesting setting, to capture some attention on the part of the reader. I began to find that was more difficult and involved than I had imagined.

I then switched my way of thinking to current events. I could discuss: politics, travel, corruption, terrorism, religion. ... Even these topics seemed to lack the opening sentences that I was hunting for.

In other words, I was at an absolute loss for words. As I began to write, numerous subjects came spewing forth; I just had to grasp onto one of them, but for some reason my fingers kept slipping away from everything I reached for.

It could have had something to do with the fact that I felt some nervousness with the concept of writing for a paper. I began to think of all the people who read the Clarkston News. My confusion and dismay began to grow.

Continuously, I would make my way to the kitchen, pick up the paper from the counter top and thumb through it. This did nothing for my self esteem, and to say the least, it only succeeded in terrifying me more. Yet I was determined to write; I was centering my thoughts on a topic, planning my words, building my sentence pattern, when suddenly the thought was lost.

"I'll bet you had lots of time to think about what you're going to write about."

These inspirational words came from my mother. Let me tell the whole story now of how I came to this terrible mind blank that engulfed my thoughts, forbidding me to write my first column.

I had an operation. I planned to reveal my personal accounts of a horrid hospital stay and a long and drawn-out recuperation period.

I was going to relate my misery to print and express my woe as I watched the small children play in the street outside my window as I sat alone in my room.

Instead, these few words spoken by my mother shook me from my self-indulged pity. They made me realize that I, too, should be outside, living and feeling the warmth of the sun. I should experience the gentle blowing of the spring air.

Feeling sorry for myself served only to prolong my mental block, and before long it could stifle any positive thoughts that I could possibly have.

So on the advice of my darling mother, I went outside. I walked a little and watched the sun set into the color of a violent, yet awe inspiring fire and then slowly fade, dimming into the blueness of the night. Peacefully I began to feel the livelihood of spring. Thankfully, my mind cleared; and before long, I had composed the thoughts you see before you.

In writing, I found the true beauty and enlightening power spring has, and it opened me up to an inner feeling of security and certainty. Still, when I woke up this morning, I was in pain from my operation, and the sun had disappeared into a cold and gloomy, overcast day. There must be some ironic message in this somewhere.

Verbal abuse hurts a child as much as a fist

A great deal of attention recently has been focused on physical abuse and its effects on children. The National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse is warning that verbal abuse can also be damaging. Among their teachings:

What is verbal abuse?

As surely as one can break a child's bones, one can break a child's spirit. Constant belittling, insulting, criticizing and demeaning undermine a child's sense of self-esteem and well-being.

Verbal abuse is just that — the continuous name-calling, ignoring or rejecting of a child.

"I wish you were never born."

"You're so stupid."

"You're worthless."

These are words that children can believe when they hear them from parents or teachers or others whom they love and trust. While children are resilient enough to bounce back from the occasional insult or criticism, the constant barrage can damage a child's personality.

Regardless of whether verbal abuse occurs simultaneously with physical and sexual abuse or on its own, the effects can be devastating.

How big a problem is verbal abuse?

There are no good statistics on how large a problem verbal abuse is. In the last year, in the U.S., about 225,000 cases of emotional maltreatment were reported to the authorities. This is probably a great underestimate of the size of the problem since verbal abuse is seldom reported.

Why be concerned about verbal abuse?

The effects of verbal abuse are considerable. A child's emotional and psychological development can be dramatically hindered.

Children can experience a lifelong pattern of alienation, self-deprecation, depression and failure — growing up to become those awful names they were called when they were young.

Children who have difficulty establishing trusting relationships with others, who have difficulty in school, who get into trouble with drugs and alcohol, and those who seriously consider suicide are often those who have suffered from verbal abuse. The same is true of those adults who verbally abuse — the cycle repeats itself.

How can verbal abuse be prevented?

Verbal abuse occurs for many of the same reasons physical abuse occurs. Parents feel isolated, under stress, unable to cope.

A troubled childhood characterized by abuse and low self-esteem contribute to a parent's abusive behavior. What sets verbal abuse apart from physical abuse is parents' lack of awareness of how damaging their words are.

Parents who verbally abuse typically do not understand the impact of their words. Thus, one primary prevention strategy is to educate parents that words can hit as hard as a fist.

MICHAEL MILLER captured first place for boys in the 1989 Optimist Club Oratorical contest. His speech began with an attention-getting shout, and was delivered from memory.

Challenging their summits

If the thought of giving a speech sends shock waves through your system, you can imagine the difficulty of addressing not just an audience, but one filled with peers, parents and several judges.

About 20 Clarkston-area teens braved the elements to write and deliver speeches at a recent oratorical contest sponsored by the Clarkston Area Optimist Club.

The young orators were instructed to design a speech of no-more-than-five-but-no-less-than-four minutes, on the topic of Challenging the Summit.

The contestants spoke of their hopes and dreams, challenges and accomplishments. Some spoke softly and hesitantly; others spoke boldly from memory.

In the end, both a boy and a girl were awarded first-place medals and an opportunity to represent Clarkston in the next round of competition.

Cricket Myers, a sixth grader at Clarkston Junior High; and Michael Miller, an eighth-grader at Sashabaw Junior High, will now compete in the Optimist Club Oratorical Zone contest at Eastern Michigan University, Ypsilanti, on March 15th.

Once that summit has been climbed, zone winners face a final speaking challenge in state competitions.

~Tracy King

CRICKET MYERS delivered her Challenge the Summit speech while on tip-toes, addressing the audience over the tall podium. She captured first place for girls in the 1989 Optimist Club Oratorical Contest.

Frame shop spotlights endangered species in April

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Among the work on display at Frames-N-Art, Inc., on Dixie Highway, Independence Township, is a poster of one of those adorable baby seals, known as Canadian harp seals.

ENDANGERED ANIMAL SPECIES are spotlighted at Frames-N-Art on Dixie Highway, Independence Township. Along with a special window, the store is donating a percentage of sales to several wildlife organizations.

Its caption reads, "SAVE US," and a tiny tear is dripping from the seal's left eye.

"That poster had all of us in tears when we looked at it," said Terri Douglas-Ronk, Frames-N-Art co-owner.

Douglas-Ronk's obvious concern for animals has developed into an Endangered Species month at Frames-N-Art.

During the month of April, framed posters of several endangered animals and plants will join the harp seal in the shop's prominent front display window.

Five dollar donations will be made to wildlife organizations for each purchase over $50, as well.

Customers will be asked to choose from three groups for their donation: The National Wildlife Federation, The Center for Marine Conservation, or Greenpeace.

"We wanted to give customers a choice," said Douglas-Ronk.

Although she credits the girls at Frame-N-Art for developing the endangered species month idea, Douglas-Ronk said her father has inspired her concern for animals.

"He has donated to organizations for years, and I developed a vested interest," she said.

"We're doing it because we really care about it," she added.

When asked which animals she was concerned about, Douglas-Ronk quickly rattled off a list that included dolphin, whales, seals, pandas and elephants. And the harp seal, of course.

Further scrutiny of the small print on the seal poster revealed that slaughter of the baby seals is ongoing.

Since trade restrictions in 1984, the number of seals taken has risen from 19,000 a year to more than 60,000, the poster read.

"The harp seal is our main focus," Douglas-Ronk said.

"When we're done we're going to total up the amount we donated," she said.

The posters have captured what the frame shop wants to set free, and viewing them makes every effort seem worth it.

New cable-TV series addresses depression

A new cable-TV series covers depression and offers hope and encouragement on Independence-Clarkston Channel 65.

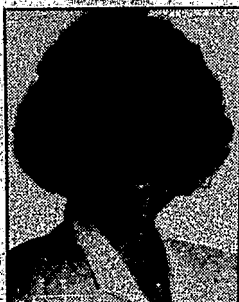

"Happiness Is a Choice," sponsored by North Oaks Community Church and hosted by the Rev. Kurt Gebhard, airs 7-7:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Fridays.

Whether depression is felt mildly or acutely, temporarily or persistently, it strikes just about everyone, according to Gebhard.

The program answers such questions as, "What is depression? What brings it on? Why would a person commit suicide? Does depression indicate a spiritual problem? What hope for conquering depression does the Bible offer?"

Giving expertise and guidelines for recovering from depression are Gebhard's guests, physicians Frank B. Minirth and Paul D. Meier, officers of the Minirth Meier Clinic in Richardson, Texas.

Why is it so easy for some people to be THIN?

Ever notice how easily thin people turn away seconds, snacks and desserts? Doesn't it make you crazy every time they say "No thanks, I'm full."

Thin people think differently about food. They eat to nourish themselves, period. Stress and nerves don't send them running to the refrigerator. And when they celebrate, they don't reach for chocolate and rationalize, "I deserve it."

Because thin people have a different attitude about eating, food doesn't have any power over them.

Permanent Results for Chronic Dieters

Now you can learn to think about food the way a thin person does with THE ANTI-DIET PROGRAM. If you're a chronic dieter in search of permanent results, THE ANTI-DIET PROGRAM is for you.

Because of the unusual nature of THE ANTI-DIET PROGRAM, it can produce success where ordinary diets fail. Listen to this woman from Elizabeth, New Jersey: I was desperate before beginning and highly skeptical because other approaches had failed. Luckily I forced myself to go and it worked!...The program was a remarkably effective approach to gaining control over my body and eating.

Thousands of other people across the country have achieved striking results with THE ANTI-DIET PROGRAM—without diet, deprivation, or struggle. You won't have to count calories, take supplements, prepare special meals or follow a strict menu. THE ANTI-DIET PROGRAM changes your thinking, not your lifestyle.

No-Obligation Preview Session

Developed by a psychotherapist after successful work with overeaters, THE ANTI-DIET PROGRAM is now available locally.

To find out more about this unique program, come to our two-hour Preview Session. Admission is $10. Space is limited, so please call early to reserve your seat.

The latest on nutrition

Betty Wagner

Molly was a baby who loved food, first her bottle then the real stuff. Molly's love of eating startled and frightened her parents.

They didn't want her to become obese. They withheld food from Molly, and then she wanted to eat even more.

Baby J was an infant who, when left to follow his own internal signals, chose when to eat and how often. He thrived.

Ellyn Satter a registered dietitian and author of "Feeding Children With Love and Good Sense," told Molly and Baby J's stories at the 16th annual Nutrition Conference.

The conference's theme was, "Nutrition for the Family." The annual conference is held the end of March, during the time Michigan State University, East Lansing, students are out for break.

Joanne Ikeda, a registered dietitian and author of "For Teenagers Only" and "Winning Weight Loss for Teens," spoke about the startling increase in teenage obesity and superobesity in the last 15 years.

She encouraged an empathetic approach to overweight teens — an emphasis on esteem building, enjoyable exercise and sound nutrition rather than on weight reduction.

"You can be large and physically fit," Ikeda said. The magazine "Radiance" promotes this notion, as do video exercise tapes for large people. The videos are the best TV for large children to watch.

Catherine L. Justice, associate professor of foods and nutrition at Purdue University, W. Lafayette, Ind., said that the U.S. is in its third phase of modifying food habits.

The American Heart Association started the trend of modifying our diets for prevention and control of chronic diseases. Many of these diseases shorten life and cause disability.

"Eighty-five percent of people over 65 have at least one chronic disease," said Justice. She offered a new way of scoring our dietary intake that could add life to our years:

2 servings milk (1 cup per serving) or yogurt or cheese;

2 servings lean meat, poultry, fish or alternatives such as dry beans, eggs or nuts;

3 different vegetables — one being dark green such as broccoli;

2 different fruits or fruit juices;

6 servings grains, some preferably whole grains (a serving equals 1 slice bread or 1/2 cup cooked pasta or 1/2 cup cereal);

The conference concluded with Ann M. Nieuwenhuis, extension home economist in Kalamazoo County, "taking good ideas into the real world."

Nieuwenhuis suggested that families exercise and prepare meals and snacks together. As a soccer coach, she has the children practice against their parents. Together parents and children choose nutritious snacks for breaks.

Since 60 to 75 percent of U.S. homes have at least one microwave, here are two easy recipes that your family can enjoy preparing together. Both are from The American Cancer Society.

TRI-COLORED BEANSOUP (Adapted for microwave oven by Betty Wagner)

1 large onion, sliced
2 medium cloves garlic, minced
1/2 cup water
1 potato, cubed

1 carrot, cut into 1/4-inch slices, then in half

1 15.8 ounce can blackeyed peas, drained*

1 15 ounce can red kidney beans, drained*

1 15 ounce can northern beans, drained*

1 teaspoon oregano

2 teaspoons basil

Ground pepper to taste

Place onion, garlic, potato, carrot and water together in a 3-quart Pyrex bowl. Cover; microwave at HIGH for 6 to 8 minutes.

Add drained beans, spices and two cups chicken broth. Insert temperature probe into center of bowl; cover loosely with plastic wrap and heat soup to 150 degrees or at HIGH for 10 minutes. Stir well before serving.

*You may substitute other canned beans or peas for any of these. Just don't use baked beans.

Serves 6.

SCALLOPED CABBAGE AU GRATIN (Adapted for microwave oven by Betty Wagner)

4 cups coarsely shredded cabbage

1 14.5 ounce can stewed tomatoes

2 teaspoons sugar

1/4 teaspoon paprika

1 teaspoon oregano

Freshly ground pepper

1/2 cup grated cheddar cheese

1/2 cup fine dry bread crumbs

Shred cabbage. Place in 2-quart Pyrex baking dish. Cover; microwave at HIGH for 3 to 4 minutes or until limp.

Combine tomatoes plus juice, sugar, paprika, oregano.

Preheat electric or gas broiler.

Sprinkle pepper over cabbage. Top evenly with tomato mixture. Cover dish. Microwave at HIGH for 6 minutes.

Remove cover. Add cheese and bread crumbs. Place casserole in preheated broiler for 2 minutes or until cheese is melted.

The nutrition conference is part of Agricultural Natural Resources Week at Michigan State University. Anyone can attend. The cost is $10. If you are interested in the latest nutritional information watch for next year's date or call M.S.U. for information.

Home economist Betty Wagner resides in Independence Township. Her "Microwave Plus" cable-TV program airs on Independence-Clarkston Channel 65.

Free food for needy

Surplus food will be distributed to needy residents during the month of April at various Oakland County locations.

Twenty-eight pounds of canned pork, canned beans, peanut butter, honey, egg mix, raisins, flour and butter will be distributed to each person that is registered. Residents may register with the Oakland Livingston Human Service Agency (OLSHA) on the day of distribution if they have not already done so.

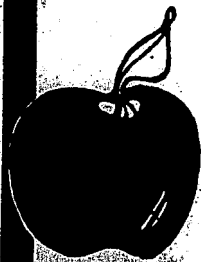

Those registering must bring proof of total household income for the last 90 days, social security card, and some type of identification with them in order to receive the commodities.

Because of the large amount of food distributed, OLSHA suggest bringing a box or bag for carrying the commodities.

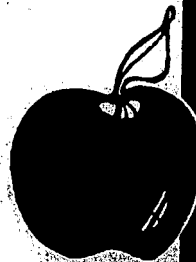

For dates and times of the distributions, call the West Oakland Field Services office at 666-3974.

Teen earns Eagle Scout badge with library project

SHEAN STRONG looks forward to the day he will officially become an eagle scout.

She's woman of the year

The Inde-Spring Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association recently announced the selection of Loraine Hoxie of West Bloomfield as their 1989 Woman of the Year.

Hoxie is office manager of Basic Services Corporation in Plymouth, Michigan. She began the corporation with her late husband, Ralph in 1946. Since his death in 1985, she has managed the business with her son, Ralph II.

A member of the Inde-Spring Charter Chapter, Hoxie joined the American Business Women's Association in 1985. She serves as secretary and chaired a number of committees.

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Shean Strong is counting down the days to Saturday, April 8. After five years of work, that's the day he'll officially become an Eagle Scout in front of family, friends and fellow scout members from Troop 189.

The Clarkston High School sophomore completed his eagle service project in February when he directed a group of scouts making banners for the Independence Township Library. It marked the end of a five-year mission for Shean.

"It was a tough goal (to reach)," he said. "It was hard and took a long time."

He joined the Boy Scouts when he was 11 years old. At the time, he wasn't sure how long he would stick with it. After he enjoyed the first year, he knew he'd be in for the long haul.

His favorite activity in the scouts is camping and high adventure trips to places like Washington, D.C.,

New booklet tells all about town

Information ranging from how to get a dog license to the area's history soon will be available all in one place — a booklet published by The League of Women Voters.

The booklet includes sections on the history of the area, structure of government, tax information, local organizations, map, services available, schools, churches and recreation facilities.

They cost $2 and soon will be available in stores and restaurants such as Carol's Village Grill, Rudy's and the Clarkston Cafe. The money will help the league fund special activities such as the recent solid waste talk by Ardath Regan.

The League of Women Voters, a national non-partisan organization whose purpose is to promote responsibility through informed and active participation of citizens in government, presented a copy of its booklet to the village council at its meeting Monday night.

"It came out real nice," said President Sharron Catallo. "I like the format."

Trustee James Schultz also liked the pamphlet and complimented the league.

"Keep up the good work," he said. "You have a nice track record already."

Canada and the Upper Peninsula.

During his time in the Boy Scouts, Shean has earned 21 merit badges. None came without plenty of hard work, he said. For instance, his lifesaving badge required just as many training hours as a licensed lifeguard.

As the years progressed and he accumulated badges, the advanced ones became harder and harder to earn, the Foster Road, Independence Township, resident said.

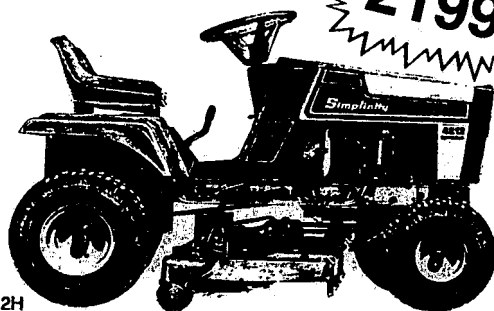

Now that he's reached the rank of Eagle Scout, Shean plans on enjoying it for as long as he can.

"This is about as far as I can go (in the rankings)," he said. "I plan on taking it easy and enjoying it."
