Public hearing on cityhood

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

In order to keep its residents informed on the status of cityhood, the Clarkston Village Council scheduled a voluntary public hearing for Monday, May 8.

President Sharron Catalo encourages all village residents to attend the 7:30 p.m. meeting at Village Hall, 375 Depot Road, to openly discuss the advantages and disadvantages cityhood offers. Nothing will be decided at the meeting.

"(The village council) decided it was time to get people knowledgeable about cityhood," said village Manager Artemus Pappas. "It's just informational."

For a State Boundary Commission public hearing on the issue in late November, the village council compiled 250 pages of information pertaining to cityhood. Village residents recently received an 11-page synopsis of the council's findings, explaining why the village council believes cityhood is good for Clarkston.

One major reason the village council applied for cityhood, the letter said, was to protect the village and its residents from an expanding township and the resulting higher tax rates.

A decision on approval or denial of cityhood from the boundary commission remains several months away. If approved, village residents would then vote on the issue if five percent of the registered voters (about 20 people) petition for an election.

Residents then would draft and vote on a charter before Clarkston could become a city.

For those residents who are interested in the cityhood proceedings but can't attend the meeting, it will be broadcast on the Independence-Clarkston station of United Cable-TV Channel 65 at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday and Saturday, May 10 and 13.

Cemetery vandalized

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

The peace of Lakeview Cemetery on White Lake Road, Independence Township, was shattered late April 28 when vandals destroyed 51 headstones and grave markers.

The headstones, including several large ones, were knocked from their pedestals and in some instances lay broken on the ground.

The destruction was found Saturday morning by cemetery groundskeepers.

"I got there about 9 (a.m.)," said cemetery Superintendent Linda Richardson. "One of the workers took a drive through there, and (the cemetery) was just devastated. I don't know what kind of person could have done that."

Police speculate that several people are responsible for the damage.

"This is a group of kids bored silly on a Friday night," said Detective Sgt. Thomas Quisenberry of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department.

"This is not just one kid; this is a lot of kids," he added.

Grave markers were destroyed randomly throughout the cemetery, with areas closest to the road damaged most heavily.

"Some of these gravestones trace the history of the founding of Clarkston," Quisenberry said. "They're so old you can't even read the names."

"Some were put there 125 years ago. I think that's what bothers me the most," Quisenberry said.

Township enacts parking statute

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Independence Township is going into the parking ticket business.

Last October, board members voted to create a parking violations bureau to oversee infractions and collect revenue from parking tickets issued within township boundaries.

The tickets are now handled through the court system.

The board authorized a second reading for the proposal on April 4, putting the new program into effect. The bureau is to begin operations in about a month, after the township tickets are printed.

Township Treasurer John Lutz is to head the parking violations bureau, according to the ordinance.

"The township will be better served collecting the revenue instead of it going to the court system," Lutz said, adding that the ordinance is modeled after a program in Rochester Hills.

The procedure requires police to issue a $15 citation to any vehicle in violation. The officer may issue a parking violation notice instead of a ticket in the first instance, but both must be paid at the treasurer's office within 10 business days.

$5,000, although she admits the real damage is not a monetary one.

One woman visiting the grave of her son who had died two years ago saw the destruction of his grave marker and sat down and wept, Richardson said.

"We've gotten calls all day long," she said.

The incident drew concern from those with loved ones buried in the cemetery and attracted the attention of the media, including Detroit's three major television stations. The vandalism also generated a lot of positive response from the community.

The Oakland Press newspaper is offering a $1,000 silent observer award to anyone with information about the damage, and two monument companies have offered to help with uprighting the stones and sealing the ones that are broken.

Fenton Memorial company offered similar services two years ago when a larger headstone was rocked from its base.

Richardson said the cemetery has suffered random damage in the past. Last year, for instance, someone broke into a mausoleum and disturbed some of the crypts inside. One Halloween, a larger tombstone was knocked over.

In Pontiac, about 100 grave markers were damaged in an incident two weeks ago, but police feel the incidents are unrelated.

The latest damage to the Lakeview Cemetery will likely prompt officials to install a gate and regulate cemetery hours, Richardson said.

The desecration of a cemetery affects the whole community," Quisenberry said. "If I could get my hands on the people who did this..."

Those who are caught and convicted on charges of malicious destruction of memorials of the dead face a mandatory five-year felony sentence.

"This is not just a simple misdemeanor," Quisenberry said.

Anyone with any information about the incident is asked to call the sheriff's department at 858-4960.

A talk with area apple growers

They've found alternatives to Alar and other possibly dangerous chemicals

BY MARALEE COOK
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Although they don't use Alar, two local apple growers are familiar with it and have tried it in the past. Dennis Ashton, with orchards on Sashabaw Road, Independence Township, and on Seymour Lake Road, Brandon Township, and Edwin Masters with orchards on Bridge Lake Road, Springfield Township, tried Alar just once years ago and found it to be too expensive without producing the desired effects.

"It (Alar) makes the apples not drop off the tree so quick," said Ashton, who added that this does not affect the small grower like himself as much as the large apple orchard with hundreds of acres of apples to be picked.

Until consumers are willing to accept less perfect-looking fruit (which does not indicate a lower quality), growers would be forced to use pesticides.

Ashton said he spoke with owners of large orchards who saw sales drop by as much as 50 percent following the recent CBS-TV broadcast of "Sixty Minutes" which featured a segment about Alar, a chemical that reddens apples but could cause cancer if the apples are processed.

Dennis and Sharon Ashton own 32 acres of property between their two locations, and while apples make up half of their business, they also grow peaches, plums, pears, sweet corn, apricots, pumpkins and squash.

The large variety of apples they grow means that the first early apples will be ready to pick in July, and they will continue to pick the varieties that mature later in the season into mid-October.

Although sometimes necessary, pesticides and other chemicals such as Alar concern the Ashtons.

"We eat what we grow," said Dennis Ashton.

"We're as concerned about somebody else's child

DEER HAVE been a big pest problem for Sharon and Dennis Ashton because the deer eat new growth on the trees. Deer can also carry a bacterial infection on their teeth, transmitting it from one tree and orchard to another.

Alar soon to be banned

A recent segment of the "Sixty Minutes" CBS-TV show publicized a report by the Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC) on the use of pesticides on fruits and vegetables, and it singled out Alar, a trade name for daminozide, as particularly harmful.

The NRDC has alleged that when daminozide breaks down into UDMH (unsymmetrical dinethylhydrazine) as apples are processed, it becomes a carcinogen and is particularly dangerous to children.

Alar actually is not a pesticide but is used instead to redden apples, increase their firmness and help keep them on the tree longer, so apple growers can harvest their crop all at the same time.

A few weeks ago, the Michigan Department of Agriculture (MDA) was expected to ban the use of Alar on food products.

According to David Wade, a toxicologist with the Pesticides and Plant management Division of the MDA, the Environmental Protection Agency will be taking care of the problem.

"The EPA will begin the process of the cancellation of its (Alar) registration, which in effect is a ban," Wade said, adding that it should happen fairly quickly.

Wade also said the EPA is changing its testing patterns and is taking into account the eating habits of children.

WHEN BARK splits open on a tree, it becomes easy for moths to lay eggs in the crevices, according to Edwin Masters.

BLACK KNOT, an infectious disease affecting some of Edwin Masters' grand prize plum trees, is transmitted by the wind blowing spores.

EDWIN MASTERS prunes his trees, so more sunlight will reach the fruit. Apples need sunlight to turn them red, and pruning is an alternative to spraying chemicals.

Apple growers share tricks

as our own," added Sharon Ashton.

When they do use pesticides, they follow the recommendations of the Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service. They also use cultural practices—such as placing metal grates around the base of the trees to keep mice from eating the bark—or testing agents to lessen the amount or frequency of spraying.

Each year, the MSU Cooperative Extension Service publishes a spray calendar that which lists recommended pesticides, dosage, frequency of application and date of application for each pest affecting each fruit or vegetable.

For the last five or six years, the Ashtons have hired a "scout" through the Genesee Area Pest Management Association who comes weekly to check their orchard for pests.

For 14 to 15 weeks from April to September the scout runs a series of tests based on the time of year, randomly selecting trees and limbs.

He gives the Ashtons a written report each week, and the report must show a serious infestation before the Ashtons will spray.

While the MSU spray calendar recommends using pesticides every seven days until bloom time, and every two weeks from summer on, the Ashtons have been able to stretch their schedule to up to four or five weeks between sprayings with the help of the scout. They also realized a 25 percent savings in pesticide costs.

How to store apples

According fruit growers Sharon Ashton and Edwin Masters, apples will keep well for several weeks if refrigerated.

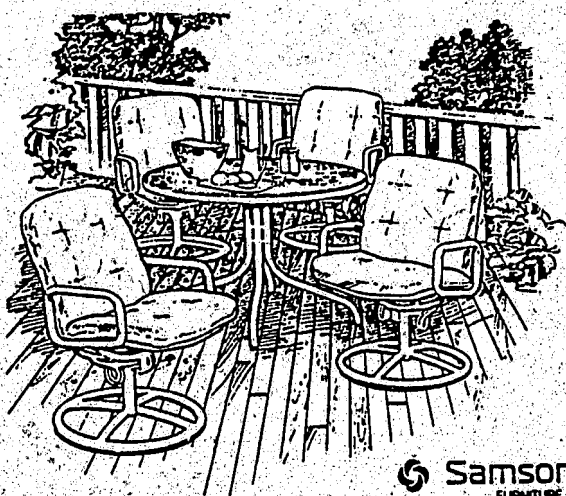

But Ashton said the apples should be placed in a plastic bag to keep them from drying out.

Cider can be frozen, too, she added. But some cider should be poured out of the top of the container to allow for expansion when it freezes.

When cider is taken out of the freezer, it should be allowed to thaw completely before drinking because the cider may need to be mixed up after freezing.

Alar not necessary for apple growers in Michigan

The Ashtons have been sold out of their fruit since March, but in season, they sell fruit and cider at the Oakland County Farmers Market in Pontiac and through their Seymour Lake Road store.

Like the Ashtons, Masters also sells his fruit at the farmers market. Until he harvests this year's crop, he plans to sell the fruit remaining in his cold storage.

Over 20 years ago, Edwin Masters and his wife, Zelma, began planting fruit trees on their 50 acres in Springfield Township, and they now have 25 to 30 varieties of apples.

"We're as concerned about somebody else's child as our own."

Sharon Ashton

According to Masters, Michigan's climate will do as much as Alar to keep apples firm. And correct pruning, allowing more sunlight to reach the fruit, will help turn the apples red, another of Alar's purposes. He added that too much fertilizer can cause apples to stay green.

Masters also grows peaches, plums, pears, apricots, asparagus, cherries, strawberries, blueberries and raspberries.

White seedless grapes were planted last summer, Masters said, joking, "We're going to try and give California some competition."

Like the Ashtons, Masters, too, is concerned about using chemicals, and he follows the guidelines set by the MSU Cooperative Extension.

"We're trusting that they're not going to recommend something that will hurt us," Masters said, adding that some chemicals now being used have taken 15 years to receive government approval.

Whenever possible, he uses cultural practices, such as pruning old or diseased branches.

THE ASHTONS place metal grates around the base of their fruit trees to keep mice from eating the bark.

Masters also said he tries to cut off tree limbs that have sharp crotch angles. As the wind blows, the bark in the crotch area of the tree splits open, making cracks in which moths can lay eggs.

Plus, Masters paints his tree trunks white, which helps to keep the hot sun from drying out and splitting the bark.

Another cultural practice Masters recommends is keeping the ground around the trees clean to minimize rodents, insects, viruses and mold spores.

But with current customer demands, growers can't eliminate pesticides, he said.

Masters, as well as the Ashtons, said they've watched customers refuse to pick up apples with small blemishes that were caused from one apple bumping up against another.

Until consumers are willing to accept less perfect-looking fruit (which does not indicate a lower quality), growers will be forced to use pesticides.

Open house planned for administrator

Friends and supporters of Clarkston administrator Jan Gabier are invited to attend an open house in her honor 4-8 p.m. Friday, May 12, at the Spring Lake Country Club, Maybee Road, Independence Township.

Sponsored by the Committee to Recognize Jan Gabier, the open house is to honor her for her 28 years of service to the school district.

Gabier was the center of controversy recently when she was transferred from her position as Clarkston High School assistant principal to an administrative position at the Clarkston Community Education Center.

The open house features a cash bar and free munchies.

One piece

Julie Campe

When I was around age 10 or 11, my number one goal was to peel an orange all in one piece. Oh, how I admired the talented peelers in my classes.

They would sit there so calm, showing no emotion during lunch, while the rest of us would gather around, watching their every move.

I can't remember for sure, but I think it was Theresa Whitehead and Betsy Spiker who were the best peelers.

They'd usually use their fingers or maybe a knife to get it started. They'd dig in at one end and very carefully pull the peel around and around and around, with juice squirting out unpredictably every once in a while.

We would lean over their desks, watching from orange to orange to see who could peel all in one piece in this lunch hour.

We held our breaths and didn't giggle unless we were sprayed by the juice. But the peelers wouldn't even show reactions to the sparkly spray. They were all concentration and didn't even flinch, not even if it sprayed them in the face.

My parents must have thought I was going through some strange phase at that time because I started complaining about the oranges they bought.

"The skin is too thin," I told them.

They explained that the oranges had come straight from Florida and that it was a good sign that the skin was thin.

"But they're still green on the ends. They're not orange enough," I told them.

They started giving me their exasperated looks, and they patiently explained that the oranges came straight from the trees, without the dye that other oranges are subjected to.

"They're good for you," they said.

But I'd had enough. I announced that I did not even like oranges and that in the future I planned to stick to apples.

But one day at lunch, Scott peeled his orange all in one piece on his very first try.

He was a hero for the day.

I decided to study his technique. The next day, I watched very closely. He used some plastic tool. It was skinny with a notch at one end and wedge-shaped at the other. He used the notched end to draw a line all around the peel, and he used the wedged end to pull the peel from the orange.

It was a special orange-peeling tool that his mother gave to him, he said.

Later, I told my mother that we needed an orange peeler, and couldn't she please get one the next time she went to the store. I tried to explain what the tool looked like, but she said she'd never seen one before, and a knife would work as well.

"Besides," she said, "you don't even like oranges."

So for the longest time, I ate apples and bananas at lunch and took small pleasure whenever the banana still had the Dole or Chiquita sticker on it. It could be plastered on my Flipper lunch box or on the back of Betsy.

Soon, our attention fell upon other skills. Years passed, and I forgot about the coveted skill — until last weekend.

"Want some orange?" Chris asked. And I watched, mesmerized, as he carefully, showing no emotion, pulled the peel from the orange all in one piece.

The orange was delicious.

Irresponsible act

I am writing to express my dismay that The Clarkston News would print such an outrageous letter to the editor as "The story is clear" which appeared in the April 26 edition of your newspaper.

I support the principle of everyone's right to express an opinion about community concerns, but I do not support the right of anyone to defame the professional and personal reputations of others.

I have worked with Sandra Srabian in the Waterford schools and know her to be a professional, conscientious educator.

The intent of the "anonymous" author of the letter was obviously malicious, and to print something with such mean-spirited and hurtful implications for the people mentioned — and their families — is, in my opinion, an example of irresponsible journalism.

Time to attend school meeting

There has come a time for the people of Clarkston to band together and fight for what they believe in.

In the past weeks the community has seen the exile of Jan Gabier (assistant Clarkston High School principal), an infamous blue letter by the Superintendent, Gary Haner, trying to explain why the last millage was of no real value; and of course, we are going to be approached for a new bond issue.

Bob Burek (CHS principal) is now a part-time (central office) administrator. He is there to help the superintendent, the assistant superintendent and the directors of personnel, administrative and business services (careful, we may have to enlarge the board office to accommodate all these desks).

Even as a part-time administrator, Bob Burek had to get rid of Jan Gabier. She is now teaching community education in the morning, driver's education in the afternoon (a program which is usually offered in summer only), a generous dinner break, then night class until 10 p.m. Who would let this kind of thing happen? Why was this nonsense not stopped?

Bob Burek ranted for almost a year about the millage, threatening shorter days, dismissal of teachers, larger class sizes and a drop in the quality of education.

Gary Haner says on April 6 (infamous blue letter), "local taxpayers will pay more and the State of Michigan will pay less." Not to mention Headlee rollback, which left the reader confused until Robert F. Heazlit pointed out the flaws in Gary Haner's letter.

I feel as if I have been fooled. Teachers at the schools say nothing has changed since the millage; the situation is the same as before. Where is the money going? This community has the right to know.

The education we pay for is suffering. Bob Burek has created a war zone at the high school between teachers and the administrators. The board cannot be forgotten; they must have voted on each of these issues or come to some kind of a conclusion.

This string of events has led me to question the bond issue this June. Will these people be able to handle the new bond? They already have proven to have a problem managing people and money. I do not think I would like to have this type of mismanagement happen again. I like to live by this rule: Never let a friend fool you twice.

I am asking the community to come forth on May 8 to show the board of education that we will fight. We will not sit around and be passive as money and human resources are wasted. May 8 at 7:30 p.m. in the board office is the time to show the board we mean business.

Please join me as I wish justice to be heard and felt.

Jim's Jottings

President George Bush has completed 100 days in office, a time period that historically calls for evaluation. The president said he had done just fine.

This is the same man who, ten days after the Exxon Valdez spilled its oil, said the cleanup was going just fine and there was no need for the federal government to get involved.

Let us not forget the Exxon Valdez and the reaction time of President Bush.

Let us also not forget when candidate George Bush invaded Michael Dukakis's back yard and stood on shore of polluted Boston Harbor and proclaimed, "I am an environmentalist!"

Obviously, the pronouncement was just another political phrase, spoken without meaning, said only to dirty up the campaign even more.

While the ooze befouled the shores of Alaska, covering the otters, gulls, ducks, etc with greasy paste, Bush, a week after the crash, sent three men to Alaska to study the situation. They reported it was no big deal.

Mr Bush is a former Texas oilman, and his administration is populated by men who made their careers in the petroleum business. It is no wonder the president was luke warm about the oil spill and reacted Exxon's way.

The time to react to the spill was then, immediately. Bush had the authority under the Clean Water Act to federalize the clean up. Instead he appeared to agree with Exxon's officers who said there was nothing to worry about, they had it under control.

Well, an ex-editor of ours owns a newspaper that circulates in Valdez, Alaska. Her paper covered the incident like the oil covers Prince William Sound.

Linda Weld reported hundreds of people went to the small town to help with the clean-up. She wrote, "The level of frustration and helplessness rose as Alaskans from all over the state arrived to help, and to find work—only to discover that nobody was in charge . . . and that there was absolutely nothing they could do."

Some fishermen offered their boats for clean-up and were told they weren't needed. Some fishermen who were out for a catch at the time of the accident and returned through the spill were told they couldn't bring their oily boats into the harbor.

These incidents of help offering came in the first week. It took the president a week to send his crew, three days for them to report back, and many more days before the Coast Guard was put in charge.

What the president failed to do was provide leadership in this emergency situation. His failing to respond to the spill immediately, then just sending a committee, gives us a good insight on the man who is to lead us for 4 years. His handling of his first emergency in his first 100 days gives me no confidence at all.

seniors to go. It's a shame that they can't go to their prom, a very exciting and memorable time in their lives.

Some of the girls (seniors) who were asked by a senior were in tears because of the shortage of tickets. But someone managed to save about 50 tickets for administrators and faculty. This is ridiculous.

The prom is being held at Petrocelli's in Rochester, and if this place cannot accommodate all of them (and they know this from previous years), then they should have made arrangements for a larger place.

My heart goes out to those kids and their parents who have looked forward to this. I think something should be done immediately so that all can go.

Let the administrators and faculty stay home and have dinner and make other arrangements with Petrocelli's to chaperon without denying the kids their big night.

Planning decision on PUD a good one

It was good to see that the Independence Township Planning Commission turned down the PUD rezoning request for the Clintonville Road "manufactured housing community."

It was particularly good to see that the planning commission was able to reject the lure of control that too often leads to a "break" in the existing zoning.

The planned unit development (PUD) zoning classification was intended to be, or should be, limited to unique projects that don't otherwise fit within existing zoning classifications.

Too often, the broad language of the PUD ordinance has been used simply as a device to increase the density of development.

This is an excellent time for the planning commission to seriously review the PUD ordinance to limit its reach and the potential adverse consequences for this community.

Joyful concert

It was an absolute joy to see and hear the youngsters of Clarkston perform at the districtwide concert in the Clarkston High School gym last Thursday night.

Just walking into the gym gave us a warm and friendly feeling. All their bands and choirs were set up on the gym floor with their audience packed into the bleachers.

The audience was entertained by a variety of musical groups. We heard everything from the combined Andersonville/Clarkston 5th-grade chorus to the outstanding high school Madrigal Singers and Jazz Band.

Each group was different and very original. The vocal and instrumental music staffs should be commended on their performance.

It was a pleasant change from all the bitterness we have been hearing lately about our schools. We should find more ways to enjoy what we have and work harder to make it better.

In restaurants, I often have trouble getting a glass of milk with my meal. The U.S. Navy needs a few good dolphins. Let's play some peace games.

Stick with me, this will become clearer. Environmental and animal rights groups have sued to prevent the Navy from training dolphins to guard the Trident Nuclear Submarine Base at Bangor, Wash. The critics question the ethics of removing a benign creature from its natural habitat and forcing it to perform military duties. After all, no one asks the dolphins if they want to be sailors. Maybe their religion forbids participation in wars or war games.

This kiss-Bambi attitude bugs Thomas LaPuzza, spokesman for the Naval Ocean Systems Center in San Diego, a boot camp for most of the 100 dolphins, 25 California sea-lions and three beluga whales in the Navy's marine mammal program. LaPuzza told the New York Times that most complaints stem from the idealized view of dolphins promoted by popular culture.

"If that TV show ('Flipper') had never been on the air, people wouldn't feel the way they do," LaPuzza said. "Dolphins are cute. They're lovable. People have an emotional attachment to them. I wish we were able to use cows. It would probably be a lot easier for us."

Do blues come Elsie-size?

Cows? Guernseys? Give me a break. The Navy thinks dolphins make good guards because they have great sonar. Big deal. Cows produce milk. Would you gladly give up milk on your morning cereal so cows could be trained to moo saboteurs to death?

This disrespect for milk is nothing new. For many years I've protested restaurants that offer more coffee every minute but give adults nothing except a strange look if they request milk. Some of the nicest restaurants in Detroit often tell me they're out of milk. Or, if they have milk, the waiter has to be reminded several times to bring it. Usually it arrives after I'm done eating and have nothing to wash down except frustration.

It's not surprising that people like LaPuzza think no one would object if cows were forced into military service. Our dairy industry does a lousy job of selling its products, especially when compared to the Brazil bean hucksters. I've been served milk in an unopened carton that would drive a safecracker crazy. No one ever broke a fingernail trying to get a sip of restaurant coffee.

So phooey on the Navy for ranking cows so far below dolphins. Also, phooey on the idea of dragging innocent animals into the violence created by human beings. It's not your puppy's fault that we are so dumb we can't figure out how to stop making more devastating weapons for destroying ourselves.

Sure, I won't argue when you say it would have been better if 47 dolphins, rather than 47 sailors, had died on the USS Iowa. But you're no dolphin, and neither am I.

Recommended peace games

Of course, the only rational - albeit utopian - way to end accidental deaths on battleships is to stop all battling, thereby eliminating the need to practice battling. Meanwhile, as war games continue, I will continue to recommend peace games. Here are two:

Thursday, May 4: Mildred (Millie) Jeffrey, for many years one of Detroit's best-known, most effective social activists, will be honored at a Mother's Peace Day Award Brunch at 9:30 a.m. in the Birmingham Community House, sponsored by Women's Action for Nuclear Disarmament. As a founder and director of Women For a Meaningful Summit, Jeffrey helped present a peace petition signed by 100,000 people to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and President Ronald Reagan at their first summit in Geneva. For reservations, call Lorraine Lerner at 352-0568 anytime.

Saturday, May 6: The sixth annual "Legs Against Arms Walkathon" on Belle Isle, sponsored by Detroit Area SANE/FREEZE. Participants walk 6.2 miles to raise funds to finance work toward peace and nuclear global disarmament. For information, phone 548-3920 anytime.

Onward and Upward. And dolphins can't do it.

The Roads We Travel

More development,
traffic on the way Brent Bair

I've been asked to comment on what I think is in store for Independence Township, both from a planning and development standpoint and from a roads standpoint.

My forecast: The township will continue to develop at a rapid rate, and the traffic problems will get much worse before they get better.

There are also going to be increasing pressures from developers to approve more dense development than the current zoning and the Master Land Use Plan provide for. It doesn't sound too encouraging does it?

These projections are not based totally upon my own speculation.

A University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, study, authored by two professors of economics and presented a week ago, projected that Oakland County will realize a job growth of almost 16,000 jobs per year for at least the next three years. With those jobs comes the need for employment sites and workers looking for housing or sites to build new homes.

A couple of weeks ago, an article in USA Today listed Oakland County as number 20 on a list of the top 50 counties regarded as hot spots for future employment. No other Michigan county made that list.

A recent article in the Wall Street Journal stated that Troy would be one of the top five job generators in the nation between now and 1993, and one of top 10 in the next five years after that.

Note how convenient it would be to live in Independence and commute to Troy, especially now that I-75 has been improved.

Consider a couple of other coming events.

By now you have all heard of the Oakland Technology Park, being developed down on I-75 in Auburn Hills. That is where the new Chrysler research and development center is going. Chrysler is moving its headquarters from Highland Park in Wayne County to Auburn Hills in Oakland County.

When that is completed, where do you suppose all those engineers and technicians who must now commute to Auburn Hills would like to relocate? That's right, to some place just off of I-75 that would be an easy commute.

Here again, the recent widening of I-75 from the Tech Center to the Clarkston area will make that commute much faster and easier.

Here is another consideration: there is a major shopping center planned for the area south of I-75, between Baldwin and Joslyn. This would be a 2 million-square-foot shopping center (about 50% larger than Lakeside) that would employ over 4,000 people.

Given a shopping area of that magnitude, how much more attractive would Independence Township look to a lot of potential residents and developers?

Even if the township only develops as is provided in the Master Land Use Plan, that would be a lot more traffic. Add to that the traffic generated by development in Springfield and Brandon townships.

Since the situation is already worse in areas to the south and east of us, those areas would probably get whatever road improvement funding becomes available before we would, due to the magnitude of their problems.

Our situation can only get worse for a while.

Misunderstanding brings area father, son closer

BY TOM LOWRIE

The saying, "You don't know what you've got 'til it's gone" really hit home for me last Sunday.

I kept my three-year-old son, Jeff, home from church since he had a cold, and we went over to my office next door, so I could catch up on some work.

My dad, Dick Lowrie, was already at the office, doing some typing and watching for customers who may have wanted some topsoil or mulch.

We had been at the office for over an hour when I was on the phone, and my dad asked, "Where's Jeff?"

"Probably outside," I said and continued my telephone conversation.

My dad came back in without Jeff. I asked the man on the phone to call me back in 10 minutes.

I started calling Jeff and searching the office. No Jeff. We went outside and looked all around the immediate area surrounding the office. Still no Jeff.

Running next door to my house, I noticed a couple wandering through the nursery yard, and I explained to them that I'd misplaced my son and that I'd be with them in a moment.

Quickly, I ran through the house yelling, "Jeff," with no response.

I started getting worried and a little anxious because my wife, Tami, would be home any minute from church.

As I came outside, the couple must have seen the scared look on my face and asked if they could help.

I said, "Yes, please, check out the back of the nursery."

Heading back to the office, I crossed paths with my dad, who said what I couldn't begin to imagine: "Someone must have picked him up."

Hearing it seemed to make it more real, and that's when I started to panic.

"Call the sheriff," I said, as I started off to comb the area a little further from the office where Jeff may have wandered.

I started imagining Jeff's face in black and white printed on the back of milk cartons, and I swore to myself

I'd take a closer look at those pictures next time.

Trying to remain calm, I went across the street to the Whoopee Bowl and asked if they'd seen a three-year-old boy with a Batman cape on. The girl behind the counter shrugged her shoulders and said no. I ran out and across the street again.

Matt Madsen, a designer, had called the sheriff's department, and my dad took off in his car to see if Jeff had wandered off along Dixie Highway.

"Jeff! Jeffrey!" I was screaming now, looking in all directions and finding nothing.

Time dragged as the minutes passed until a patrol car arrived. My dad was back, and I let him give the officer a description of Jeff, as I again went off in search of Jeff.

I couldn't just sit idly by. This time, I went even further from the house and office, then back again, and through the house again.

Guest Column

"Jeff!"

Silence. I knew I should have gone to church. Please, God, send me a sign. Let me find Jeff.

I ran back to the office. The sheriff's deputy was calmly asking questions: "How old is the boy? What time does he usually take a nap? Does he have a dog?"

"Dogs! We need tracking dogs!" I said.

He said it wouldn't do any good since I'd already been all through the woods, and this would confuse the dogs.

"Let's make up a search party," said the deputy, and he radioed the fire department for volunteers.

I called several of my friends. With my voice cracking, I had a hard time explaining to them that Jeff was missing, and I needed their help.

I stayed close to the office as volunteers started to arrive, and I showed them a recent picture of Jeff and told them his name.

They systematically started heading out in different directions. Friends came with tears in their eyes and shocked looks on their faces.

I was waiting also for Tami to come home from church. How was I going to tell her that Jeff was gone? I'm a poor father. I actually let someone kidnap our boy. Oh, God, please let him show up!

Just then, Tami drove up. She was looking around at the crowd and the police car. She watched me as I hurried to her. She rolled down the window, and her face was already starting to crinkle up.

She's going to be hysterical, I thought, as I said, "Tami, Jeff's missing."

She looked at me and touched my hand just as Jeff looked at me from behind Tami.

I started bawling, and I grabbed him and held him close. Turning around, I called to the volunteers, "We've got him!"

I carried Jeff into the house and held him for a long time trying to get control of myself and feeling just relieved and happy to have him home.

Tami followed us into the house and explained that she had gotten home early from church. Jeff had walked in the back door while she and our daughter, Olivia, were getting ready to take Olivia to a friend's house to play for the afternoon.

Tami thought I had sent Jeff home when I saw the van in the driveway, so she just took Jeff with her for the ride.

I wish to thank the following for helping to make this a happy ending: Oakland County Sheriff's Department; Springfield Township Fire Department; Matt Madsen, landscape designer who called the sheriff's department; my dad, Dick Lowrie who would still be out there looking but fortunately we had a search party to notify him; and Bob Volback, Bruce and Adreana Harley, Rick and Chris Handley, Leslie Hallman, Mike Figurelle, Orville Marlowe and the one retail couple that helped but disappeared before I could thank them.

It's Sunday night now. The kids are screaming and fighting and won't take a bath, and I just have to say, thank you, God, for keeping Jeff safe and for giving me the friends I have who dropped everything to help out.

Tom Lowrie owns Lowrie's Landscape in Springfield Township.

Editorial

Reporter says farewell to Clarkston community

As my last week at The Clarkston News came to a close, I thought about writing one of those mushy farewell columns telling everyone how much I enjoyed working with them.

There are some particularly special people I have worked with, like Springfield Township Supervisor Collin Walls, who was very patient with my learning process about township government, and numerous people in the Clarkston Schools administration and on the school board, who were equally patient with my learning process about in-formula school districts.

There were other special people I had the pleasure of working with while writing stories, like Merelyn Mallett of Clarkston Area Youth Assistance and Katie MacKay, who coordinates the high school SEARCH program, and secretaries and principals... the list goes on and on.

But instead, I decided to tell you a story.

Years ago, there was a skinny, grade school girl with red hair and freckles who would climb trees to be alone, then pull out her writing pad and go at it. She liked to write so much that she would turn in stories at school for extra credit (to make up for her lousy math grades).

Later, in high school, the same girl took a journalism class. She was full of youthful and somewhat rosy ideas of how she would write about all the wonderful happenings in the world.

While working as one of three high school "reporters" at the Dayton Beach News Journal, this aspiring "Brenda Star" found out a little more about the real world of journalism and about covering the not-so-wonderful things that happen in the world. It would be years later, after the memory of her shattered idealism had faded, before she took up journalism again.

When she did, it was at a small daily newspaper in La Junta, Colo., where she had to cover "hard news" but also had plenty of opportunities to write about the wonderful things happening in that little community.

After several years at the La Junta Tribune Democrat, her husband accepted a job back east, and she found herself in South Bend, Ind. Trying not to get her hopes up (because she did not have a journalism degree, only an associate's degree in liberal arts), she timidly applied at the large daily South Bend Tribune.

Much to her amazement, she was hired by the editor of the Living Today (lifestyles) section of the paper. It was perfect. She had found her niche in the world. She got to write features, human interest stories, wonderful stories about people who did wonderful things.

But her husband accepted a job further east, so two years later she stood in downtown Clarkston, eyeballing the quaint, Victorian exterior of The Clarkston News and thinking, well, maybe it would be fun to go back to a small paper again...

Several years later, I think she has finally learned a good lesson in journalism.

Sure, there are stories which are hard and painful to cover. People think reporters are so eager for grim news. Not all of them are. And many readers go first to the "juicy" stories.

But the job of a good newspaper is to cover all the news, be it happy or sad, painful or uplifting, and to do so in as unbiased a manner as possible. It is also, I think, the job of a good newspaper to try to have a good mix of both. There is always a "bright" story somewhere to put a little sunshine in a page full of accidents and budget cuts.

I think what I liked best about writing for The Clarkston News is that there was never a shortage of "brights" to offset the hard news. It reminded me of La Junta, with a gold mine of interesting people. And it is people, after all, who put the character in a community.

There were people like Gini Schultz, the bean soup lady, and Judy Hite, the herbalist who went searching for her Irish roots, and children like Jimmy Territo, who wanted to be the first American Pope. I could name dozens of friendly and interesting folks I have met here.

And the best thing is there are many more stories and people out there just waiting for another writer to discover them.

While covering my last Springfield Township Board meeting and Clarkston Board of Education meeting, I received unexpected but very special "farewells" from the members of each board.

What this tells me is that the people of Independence and Springfield townships have been able to make a reporter out of one very idealistic writer who used to climb trees to gather her thoughts.

I don't do this anymore. I find my stories at "real life level."

Clarkston senior dinner will be 'memory night'

BY PAT YOUNG
Clarkston News Staff Writer

The second annual Clarkston High School senior class dinner will focus on looking back, according to Julie Hall, one of the parents helping with the event.

"It will be a memory night," she said.

The senior dinner is planned to begin at 6 p.m. on Sunday, June 4, in the Spring Lake Country Club, Maybee Road, Independence Township. Seniors will enjoy about half an hour of socializing before a sit-down, lasagna dinner is served.

The dinner was their choice, Hall said, as are all the major decisions surrounding the event.

"The unique thing is the kids are planning it," she said. "The parents are just acting as a steering committee. We want to stay in the background. We feel it will be more meaningful that way."

Chairing the parent steering committee are Ken and Phyllis Choops. Hall is publicity chairperson. Many other parents are helping, but only a few will be on hand at the event, and those will "stay in the background," Hall said.

Theme for the senior dinner is "Forever Young," with music to match.

Seniors working on the event have other special music planned, poster boards of memory pictures, and a video of high school events and experiences. There will be memory books again this year, with names and addresses of all classmates and their plans for the future.

Student coordinators include Brian Rigonan, Larry Hess, Heather Jackson, Tammy Smith and Kelly Kurz. Dave Woodruff is creating the video. Hess, Margot Coxen and Scott Zumwalt are emceeing the program for the evening.

Seniors are also working on skits for the event, using the theme of "Faculty Skip Day." Two parents are working on the skits with the seniors.

The decorations will be dramatic, Hall said. Hundreds of blue and gold balloons will be used to create pillars and table decorations. Mirrors and ribbons will also accent the tables.

Tickets at $8 per senior will be on sale between May 17-23 during the lunch hours at the high school.

"We are encouraging kids to buy tickets early (because there is only room for 300)," Hall said. "Last year the dinner was very enthusiastically received."

A few administrators are invited to the dinner, including CHS Principal Dr. Robert Burek, who first suggested the idea of a senior dinner last year.

The evening, he said, is a way to try to put a capstone on the experiences the seniors have shared throughout their high school years.

CHS SENIORS are preparing for their second annual senior dinner, which will take place on June 4 at the Spring Lake Country Club. David Woodruff (right) is producing a video of high school experiences to show during the event, and Brian Rigonan and Kelly Kurz, both on the planning committee, are participating in a skit for the occasion, "Faculty Skip Day at Tiger Stadium." (Photo by Sandra Conlen)

Over half of tax assessment appeals win reductions

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Few people squeal with delight when they find a tax assessment notice in their mailbox, but in 1989, the notices produced an unusually loud grumbling among Independence Township residents.

Almost 5 percent of all property owners felt strongly enough to argue their case before the township Board of Review, a three-member panel serving as an appeals board.

The board heard 489 cases during its eight-day public hearing session. State law requires at least three days.

"There was a bigger turnout than in the past," said township Assessor David Kramer. "There were definitely more people than last year."

More than half of those appealing their cases were successful, according to a Board of Review report. Of the 489 total cases heard, 278 assessments were reduced, while 211 were held.

The cases were split into three categories: whether the assessment fit the right classification, whether the property owner had the ability to pay (hardship), or whether the value was assessed properly. The board does not hear general complaints about assessments being too high, for example.

The board of review panel, which in Independence Township is made up of two real estate professionals and a mortgage banker, sits and listens to the case, dismisses the property owner and then makes a decision after the owner has left. The hearing usually lasts about 10 minutes.

This year, the classification question generated 52 cases, with 43 reduced; the hardship question generated 50 cases with 23 reduced; and the value question generated 346 cases with 171 reduced. Forty-one cases were changed by the assessor because of new information gathered after the assessment roll was turned in.

Kramer said he was surprised by the number of assessments reduced this year.

"They reduced more than in the past," he said.

In contrast, the barometer used in determining assessments has gone up, Kramer said.

Each year the assessing department studies land values as they compare to sale prices. The township is split into 82 neighborhoods, based on how the homes economically compliment each other. The market value is determined for each neighborhood, and the assessment is calculated from that amount.

In a neighborhood where houses sell for higher and higher amounts, the value increases, and property owners are assessed for a higher amount.

State law mandates that all property be assessed at 50 percent of its market value, an amount known as the state equalized value (SEV).

In 1988, the SEV for all township properties was calculated at $379 million. One year later, the SEV had risen by more than 14 percent to $435 million.

For the sake of comparison, the average township residential SEV was $45,500 (for a house worth $90,000 on the market); the average village residential SEV is $48,800 (for a house worth $97,600 on the market).

A common question raised during assessment time is how one home can be assessed differently from a neighbor's when they appear to be identical.

"There is no such thing as two equal assessments, even when homes are basically alike," Kramer said in answer to the question. He explained that there are many physical features and changes that can affect the differences.

"For example, two homes are built next to each other at the same time. Both suffer physical deterioration, one more rapidly than the other," Kramer said. "One owner updates his bathroom with new linoleum. That marks an increase in value."

The board of review has the final say in tax assessment appeals, short of a clerical error, Kramer said.

After the hearings, the board noted that certain neighborhoods did need appraisal attention, Kramer said.

Appraisals for 1990 began on April 27, giving property owners some consolation in that there is always next year.

P.T.O. is great

The staff of Andersonville Elementary School would like to thank the members of the Andersonville P.T.O. for Andersonville's Festival of the Arts.

The P.T.O. did a spectacular job in securing the talents of local artists and parents to organize a day of perfection.

The students benefited by experiencing a wide variety of art forms. They were enthused and enthralled as they listened, learned and participated.

The project was made possible by the persistent efforts of the Andersonville P.T.O. and their endless support of the teachers and entire staff of Andersonville.

We thank you.

Thanks to helpers

I would like to thank the members of the Independence Township Safety Path Advisory Committee for their time and efforts.

It makes me proud to be associated with a great group of people like these. The township and the citizens within are the real winners.

Thank you, Don Balzarini, Dan Manthei, Roger Olney, Larry Rosso and Dave Yarber.

They understood

The Clarkston school bus drivers would like to express their gratitude to the administration of the school district and to the parents for their understanding and cooperation at the time of the death of our co-worker, Marge Western.

Your concern and help made this time of tragedy a little easier for all of us to bear.

Parents beware

Is your son or daughter carrying around an emblem that was on a Cadillac or Oldsmobile originally? Is your family car a Ford or Chevrolet?

Maybe a check of their dresser drawers could reveal a lot of items that you are unfamiliar with.

A check of their hiding places could save the parents a whole lot of embarrassment plus a lot of money in making restitution to the owners of vehicles in our area that have had their car emblems ripped off.

Plus, when juveniles have to go to Probate Court — and they will when they are apprehended by the police officers in this area — it is always a hardship on the parents to miss a day of work in order to be present when their delinquents have their day in court.

I wonder are these the same youths who still use skateboards and ride their bikes in our downtown business area.

Clarkston has ordinances covering both of these items. With some cooperation from the parents, maybe the pedestrians could regain use of our sidewalks downtown.

Is that really asking too much?

Setting it straight

Many rumors have been circulating concerning the Clarkston Athletic Boosters' role in the Clarkston schools' possible "pay to play" proposal.

To set the record straight, the Athletic Boosters did not acknowledge at any time the organization would provide money for students who cannot afford to pay.

As a group, our role has not been decided on this issue. When the need arises, the general membership of the club will decide not the school administrators!

Consortium helps in school, parent, teen problems

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

You've begun to worry about your son, Joey. His grades have slipped; he has cut a few classes; you don't know who his friends are any more. You've begun to suspect substance abuse. So what do you do?

Several schools in Oakland County now have a way to help. In many cases they may even take the first step.

Last year, six area school systems began participating in the Diagnostic Referral Program offered by the Consortium for Human Development (CHD).

The consortium, with a local office on Sashabaw Road, Independence Township, provides counseling and education services as an out-patient mental health clinic.

The CHD program allows schools to identify a student in trouble and refer him to the program for diagnosis and treatment, in some cases to reduce suspension.

At Clarkston High School, for example, students caught with alcohol or drugs can choose between a 10-day suspension or a five-day suspension with professional assistance counseling.

"When there is a problem we contact the parent, discuss the situation, and make them aware of all the options," said Dr. Robert Burek, principal at Clarkston High School. The student may be referred to Maple-grove Treatment Center in West Bloomfield, a private physician or the consortium.

"They're (the consortium) local and have quality people," Burek said. "They've always been very professional in their association with us."

Once a problem is recognized, the school may contact the consortium for an initial evaluation. The student spends about 50 minutes with a therapist; the therapist then makes his assessment and recommendation and writes a report for the school.

About 80 percent of the students are recommended for more therapy in various programs, according to Peter Zimmer, coordinator for community services.

"It's an on-going process," Zimmer said. "It may be a situation with a divorce or a split home. We might offer not only substance abuse counseling but will address an emotional disorder."

Programs for adolescents offered by the consortium address anti-social behavior such as vandalism, truancy or theft, substance abuse problems, school-related performance, peer relations, family disorders and others.

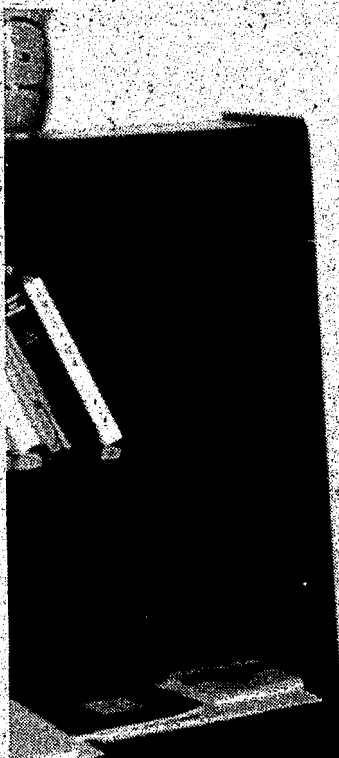

Zimmer said that the initial 50 minute evaluation offers only "a glimpse" into what problems may exist but said the session can be revealing.

"A good therapist can glean a lot of information," Zimmer said. "In an initial interview, we may find that the substance abuse is far more extensive than that suspected by the parents."

In many cases, the subject may be changing from recreational use of drugs or alcohol to chronic abuse of substances.

In almost all cases, the therapist will strive to get the parents involved, Zimmer said. If the parents refuse an appointment or if the student wants to start the process without his or her parents involved, state law allows treatment of minors without parental consent, according to consortium literature.

The student is protected by confidentiality and is asked to sign a consent form before his evaluation is sent to the school.

PETER ZIMMER, coordinator of community services for the Consortium of Human Development, is working with schools to develop a

"There's so much denial (by parents)," Zimmer said. "It's so important for parents to understand that any sign of abuse needs to be addressed immediately. Don't wait for it to get bad."

The average treatment lasts six months. The initial CHD evaluation is free; any further therapy is usually covered by insurance or is paid for by the individual on a sliding fee scale. No one is turned away for financial reasons, Zimmer said.

unique counseling referral program. In many cases, students attend counseling at the consortium to reduce suspension.

If the student still shows signs of chronic use throughout treatment, he is referred to an in-patient treatment program — usually 52 days for adolescents, according to Zimmer.

The consortium sponsors a regular parent and family education series on alcohol and drug abuse and offers a multitude of other counseling programs for adolescents and adults.

For more information on programs at the consortium, call 625-9600.

Village gets new sidewalks

BY SANDRA G. CONLEN
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Clarkston village residents have not found the village streets and sidewalks as "quiet" as the serene description written in the April 27 Detroit News Metro section.

Repair of concrete sidewalks in the village are being done by Italia Construction Co.

Artemus Pappas, Clarkston Village Council manager, said there have not been any complaints from residents about being unable to use sidewalks and drive-ways.

Some residents have "expressed concern" about lawns not being replaced, said Pappas, adding that Italia is responsible for replacing lawns damaged during construction.

The project has been spearheaded by Gary Symons, Clarkston Village Council trustee, and Sharron Catallo, Clarkston Village Council president. Money for funding the $20,000 project will come from the village's general fund and the community development fund.

The sidewalks in the village have had major repair work in 1962 and 1983. "The trees play havoc," said Pappas.

Italia has been working as quickly as possible to make living in the village "quiet" again. Pappas added, "I'm pleased with the results."

MANEUVERING A BACKHOE between fence and trees on Robertson Court, Clarkston, proves to be no problem for Javier Ozuna. No damage was done to tree or fence.

School mourns driver's death

BY JULIE CAMPE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

The atmosphere was sad and quiet in the Clarkston bus garage last Friday and Monday as employees tried to absorb the death of their co-worker, Margaret Western.

Kindergarten and SPICE classes were canceled throughout the school district May 1 to allow bus drivers to attend the funeral services of Western, 54, a bus driver who died suddenly April 28.

"It was such a shock to everybody here," said Kevin Bickerstaff, transportation supervisor for Clarkston schools.

"We're very saddened. It's pretty quiet, teary-eyed today," he said.

School social worker Jim Butzine talked to the drivers Friday, and the drivers continued working their regular hours, except for the noon runs on Monday — the time of the funeral, said Bickerstaff.

"Most people understood," he said, after the funeral. "The drivers are all back to work. They're a tough bunch of working people."

The death of Western "was a shock," he said. "Marge was working one day and (gone) the next. ... It was a great impact on a number of people."

After working a full day Thursday, April 27, she apparently died of a heart attack in the middle of the night, said Bickerstaff.

Western had worked as a bus driver for 23 years in Clarkston Community Schools and had served as president of the Bus Drivers Association.

"She was a very dedicated employee for the school district," Bickerstaff said. "She's driven special ed. for us now, maybe, 10 years. ... It takes a special person to handle that."

Her co-workers "liked her and had great respect for her," Bickerstaff said.

Mel Vaara, assistant superintendent in charge of auxiliary services, said he, too, was shocked to hear of Western's death.

He had "just talked to her at 5 p.m." before she died, he said, adding that she was a "cheerful, good person."

Western is survived by her husband, Walter of Davisburg and formerly of Clarkston; children, Linda and her husband, George Halicek III of Goodrich, Judy Garnham of Goodrich, and Peggy and her husband, William Arnold IV of Germany.

She is also survived by her grandchildren, Teddy, Robert, Jennifer and Christopher; sisters, Marie Jennings of Troy and Lillian Western of Lake Orion; and brother, Bill Brewer of Oxford.

Poetry Corner

Paths from history
Paved now,
Wind through woods,
Over hills, past ponds
In a place
Once inhabited
Only by wildlife,
And a few homesteaders.
Alive with people now,
Progress pushing
At its borders,
This place called Davisburg
Stirs, waking slowly.
Just as butterflies
Leaving cocoons
Seek quiet countryside
Over bustling cities,
So do the people of Davisburg
Preserve the past.

Independence Parks and Recreation is offering four leagues: Monday women's power (four-person teams), Tuesday co-rec mixer (six-person teams), Wednesday co-rec recreational (six-person teams), and Thursday men's power (four-person teams).

All games begin at 6:30 p.m. on the sand courts in the Clarkston Road park. The deadline to register is May 26. Players must be at least 16 years old.

He opened season with hole-in-one

Jonathon McIntosh of Grand Blanc opened his summer of 1989 golf season with a hole-in-one.

On his first round of golf this year, while golfing at Pine Knob Golf Course in Independence Township, McIntosh shot a hole-in-one on the seventh hole. He was using a five wood on the 172-yard hole.

Kate Stevens, who works the pro shop at Pine Knob Golf Course, said that McIntosh had been golfing 33 years, and this was his first hole-in-one. He had three witnesses to the event.

Time to sign up for volleyball tourney

An early season outdoor volleyball tournament will be played at Independence Oaks County Park on the new sand courts. The tournament is open to co-rec (four-person) teams.

Participants will be treated to hot dogs, beverages, tee-shirts, and plenty of volleyball. Following the tournament teams are invited to stay for "The Flashback to Summer Celebration."

The festivities will be concluded with a water ski show and a fireworks display.

The tournament date is Saturday, May 20, and the deadline for registration is Thursday, May 18. For more information, call 625-8223.

College Update

Dave Jokisch finished off his career with the Lake Superior State University men's basketball team in style.

The Clarkston High School graduate scored 506 points in the 1988-89 season, leaving him with a career total of 1,076.

He also finished third on the Lakers career assist list with 356. He dished off 131 in his senior year, only 22 short of his career-high 153 as a junior.

Jokisch also finished fifth on the all-time free throw list with 284 free throws made. The recreation management major led the Lakers in free throws made as a senior with 154-of-187 (82 percent) finding the mark.

The 6-foot, 6-inch forward recorded his strongest week of the season from Jan. 14 through 21. During that span, he led the team in scoring three times.

Jokisch scored 25 points and grabbed nine rebounds in a 103-92 loss to Hillsdale Jan. 14, then scored a career-high 34 points in a 87-70 win over Northern Michigan Jan. 19. He followed that performance with a 42-point effort, another career high, in a 90-81 Lake win over Michigan Tech Jan. 21.

For his outstanding efforts, he was named Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (GLIAC) "Player of the Week."

Envision a good-sized antique show. With aisle-after-aisle of antique and collectible merchandise in every category. All attractively arranged by 50 professional dealers who share space in a large showroom.

That's what you will find every day at THE GREAT MIDWESTERN ANTIQUE EMPORIUM, 5233 Dixie Highway, Drayton Plains.

Several of the dealers are always present to assist and answer questions or point visitors toward an ever-present complimentary coffee pot.

Owner Nan Dangel, a Clarkston resident who founded the business almost 4 years ago, hand-picks dealers to share her building with an eye toward their specialty and for compatibility of merchandise with the offerings of other dealers in the store.

Don't expect a "flea market" operation. The emphasis at the Emporium is on quality.

"We offer a full range of antique furniture -- period, American oak, country and primitive -- fine cut glass and crystal, china, advertising items, clocks, toys, lighting, vintage clothing, jewelry and general line antiques and collectibles across the whole spectrum of the trade," says Dangel.

Antique lighting and clock repair services are also available on the premises.

The Great Midwestern Antique Emporium is open Tuesday through Sunday, 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Boys track team wins another GOAL meet

Clarkston continued its defense of the Greater Oakland Activities League title in boys track last week with a 86-51 win over rival Waterford Kettering.

J.J. Price in the discus, Ron Gibson in the pole vault, Jeff Shupe in the 100-meter and 200 dash, Chris Blimka in the 400 dash and Jason Wenger in the 3200 run all finished first in their events for the Wolves.

The 3200 relay team of Wenger, Paul Brisson, Blimka and Chris Vandermark; the 1600 relay team of John King, Dane Davis, Aaron Knapp and Blimka; the 800 relay team of Brett Kinzler, Erich Becker, Marc Pierson and Shupe; the 400 relay team of Jason Kinzler, Becker, Pierson and Shupe also were winners.

With the win, the Wolves bump their overall record to 3-1 and their GOAL mark to 2-0.

As in Clarkston's previous wins, taking a good portion of seconds and thirds helped the team stop Kettering cold.

Paul Krause and Larry Hess were second and third in the shot put, respectively. Ross Rosenthal was third in the discus, Jeff Locher second in the pole vault, Joe Webb third in the 110 high hurdles, Locher third in the 100 dash, Wenger second and Kelly O'Neil third in the 1600 run. Joel Davis second in the 400 dash, Vandermark second and Knapp third in the 800 run, Lance Lewis second and Locher third in the 300 low hurdles, Brett Kinzler second in the 200 dash, Brisson second and Rob Himburg third in the 3200 run.

The Wolves won't face another GOAL rival until Tuesday, May 9, when they travel to face Waterford Mott.

Clarkston runners doing well at midpoint

Both the girls and boys 7/8th grade track teams from Clarkston Junior High are off and running away from the pack at the midway point of the season.

The girls team has beaten rival Sashabaw 103-15; Brandon 99-24 and Mason 91-32 to run its record to 3-0.

Outstanding performers for the Wolverines include eight-graders Allison McChesney in the 1600-meter run and the long jump, Shannon Jenks in the shot put, Leslie Allen in the hurdles and Angela Prince in the high jump.

Seventh-grade standouts include Angie Brown in the sprints, Derenda Howard in the hurdles, Kelly Holtz in the 3200 run and Sara Klopfer in the 800 run.

The boys team also has enjoyed much success of late, topping Sashabaw 79-44, Brandon 64-59 and Mason 106-17.

The top guns for the Wolverines include eighth-graders Scott Rooney in the long jump, Steve Hunkele in the 400 run and the shot put, Jason Roughton and Ryan Noll in the hurdles and Eric Ryan in the sprints. Seventh-grader Keith Conklin has excelled in the 3200 run.

Meeting covers growth issues

A general meeting of the North Area Citizens Conference (NACC) is set for 1 p.m. Saturday, May 6, at the Oxford Library on W. Burdick Street, Oxford.

Foremost on the agenda is the coordination of the active chapters in the various townships. At present, the organization has active chapters in Orion, Oxford and Independence townships.

Other chapters under consideration are in Addison, Dryden, Metamora and Brandon townships.

NACC is seeking to have all townships conduct citizens surveys. Some townships have already done so.

Many other concerns, such as wetlands, tree ordinances, garbage ordinances and recycling, will also be addressed. The meeting is open to the public.

New township parking rules

If the ticket or violation notice is not paid within the 10-day period, the citation goes to the township supervisor or to the police officer and may be filed with the 52nd District Court, Second Division, Independence Township. The vehicle owner must be notified if the citation is to be filed in court.

Most Independence Township violations occur when someone is parked illegally in a handicapped spot or when a vehicle for sale is parked in an unauthorized location, Lutz said.

Don't be so shy!
We like to hear from you! We need your ideas for feature stories, too. Drop us a line or give us a call, 625-3370. Clarkston News

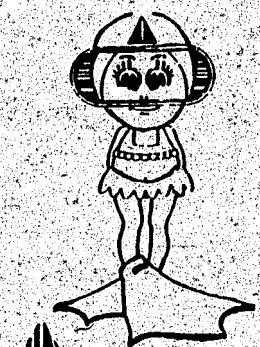

He said it was too early to tell how much revenue the township would collect as a parking violations bureau. "I don't think we'll get awfully rich on it," he said.

A bill now under consideration in the Michigan Legislature may soon allow townships to receive all revenue generated at the district court level, Lutz said.

In addition, citations issued for all violations in Independence Township may be administered through the Parking Violation Bureau in the future, Lutz said. Fines for the violations are now added to residents' tax bills.

Reporter's Notebook

On a certain reporter's last day at The Clarkston News last Friday, her "good friends and co-workers" created a false parking ticket for "improper parking and overtime parking" which was "officially" located on her windshield.

After the reporter had fumed for a while about getting a ticket on her last day at work, the rest of the office finally "fessed up" to the joke.

Those in attendance at the funeral of long-time Davisburg attorney Lenny Howarth were not surprised that the service was different — fitting for the man. But they might have been surprised to see the family dog in attendance.

"Bones," the Howarth's Irish wolfhound, wasn't at the service in Lewis E. Wint and Son Funeral Home in Clarkston, but he was at the Davisburg Cemetery, quietly watching the graveside service and paying his own last respects.

Reporter's Notebook is compiled by The Clarkston News staff.

Springfield seeks park plan

BY PAT YOUNG
Clarkston News Staff Writer

The master plan for a 400-acre park in Springfield Township acquired in 1987 should get underway soon.

The township board received 10 bids for the master plan, ranging from $387,500 to $9,500. Supervisor Collin Walls and two trustees, Dennis Vallad and Margaret Bloom, are to meet with several members of the Springfield Parks and Recreation Commission to review the bids, conduct interviews, and make a recommendation to the board.

"Realistically, the bids (we will consider) range from $40,000-$45,000," said Walls.

The parkland, dubbed Shiawassee Basin, is located just west of downtown Davisburg, north of Davisburg Road. It includes 300 acres of environmentally sensitive land, including wetlands, wildlife and the major portion of Long Lake.

"The master plan will look at all of the property, to develop an analysis of what's there," Walls said. "It will provide some long-range direction, goals and concepts for how it may be used or not used."

The plan is to document those sensitive areas which should be left natural and to show the interrelations between the various uses and areas of the property.

Also, the plan is to specifically look at 90 acres that front Davisburg Road (farmland) for active development relatively soon, Walls said. In that portion, the plan would give actual, detailed construction plans.

Another important part of the master plan is to be a creative approach to funding.

"We asked the companies to supply a funding component. In other words, don't just figure out what we're going to do, but how to fund it," Walls said.

The board also voted unanimously in April to immediately have aerial photography done for a topographical map of the land, because it has to be done before the trees foliate. The board approved a bid of $600 for the aerial work.

Monday school agenda

Clarkston school board will meet 7:30 p.m. Monday, May 8, at the school board office on Clarkston Road, Independence Township.

Dr. Robert Burek, Clarkston High School principal, is to introduce the top 10 students from the graduating class of 1989. Tenure recommendations is another topic to be discussed at the meeting.

A business resolution is to be proposed concerning the upcoming bond election.

Work continues on 1988 school projects

Repairs to Clarkston school buildings are to continue through the summer of 1990 with money from the $5.2 million bond issue approved by voters in 1988.

School architect Tom Chen of Greiner, Inc., updated the school board on the bond projects April 24.

During the summer of 1989, all re-roofing yet to be done will be completed. Also, asbestos abatement will be done, as well as some remodeling where there are fire code violations.

Between summer and the end of 1989, more safety code violations will be taken care of, as well as paving, emergency lighting, exit lights, and other projects.

Chen said they would work on those projects which were least disruptive to the students during school time. Christmas of 1989 projects to be done over the holiday recess include fire alarms, gym light fixtures and replacing a public announcement console at one elementary school.

Summer of 1990 construction includes remodeling repair projects and new boilers at several buildings as well as ventilators.

Chen also advised the board that the remaining work to be done on the $5.2 bond issue could be handled through general contractors rather than a construction manager.

He added that, if voters approve the $68.8 bond issue for new construction in the June 12 election, there would be a construction manager on board who could oversee the remaining projects instead.

Opinion of Bill Myers

Once upon a time

William A. Myers is a retired Lapeer County editor and investments manager from Boca Raton, Fla.

Once upon a time, an elderly father of three set up a family trust with about $200,000 in bonds to provide funds for his widow and grown children and eventually grandchildren.

(This is not to be confused with a "living trust," which is revocable and is basically to avoid probate.)

He provided that two of his good friends, a banker and a lawyer, and also the bank itself, be the trustees.

It all seemed like a good idea, but there wasn't all that much to administer, so the bank just stayed out of it and the two individuals signed some papers once a year, and the girl at the bank sent out checks twice a year to the three children.

It was simple and efficient, at first, but here's what happened as some 16 years went by:

One of the trustees (the banker) moved away. The lawyer became ill and semi-retired. The bank trust department in the early years was quite inactive, so the trustees named an investment adviser to replace maturing bonds in the trust or make swaps as the market indicated.

To make a simple investment when five bonds matured, for example, the investment adviser had to write to the two trustees - one ill and one moved away - and suggest what to buy, then in turn would pass on to the third trustee, the bank, the idea. The bank would then call the broker, and chances were by that time the particular bonds were gone.

The bank, in recent years, merged and computerized the trust department and charges $500 a year for sending out a total of six checks. About anyone could make out the simple income tax return, for the bonds are tax-exempted and there is no tax to pay. But, no, a CPA has to be hired, and there's another $300. The two trustees put in very moderate bills of $200 apiece.

Total is $1,200 to administer the trust. The total isn't too great - about three-quarters of 1 percent, but it's largely unnecessary.

"So what better way is there?" asked my associate, Jennifer Birdsong.

"A way that's simple, easy and cheap," I told Jennifer. "If there are ample funds for the widow outside the trust, then just give it outright to the children, preferably before Departure Day, to cut down on estate taxes."

"You mean no trust at all? What about the grandchildren?"

"Let their parents look after them. Same as our parents looked after us. The Long Arm from the Grave is fancied by some, but I don't like it. I don't like the idea of leapfrogging a generation to bestow one's bounty on the third generation."

"Hmmm," said Jennifer, not entirely convinced, since she has three very cute grandsons. "But suppose I did want to leave a trust, in spite of what you say. What's wrong with having a couple of trustees plus a bank?"

"It's unwieldy, it's costly and it's unnecessary," I said. "Name a stable, savvy friend or a relative or in-law who can supervise the investments, which you have already made. Lay down the ground rules, and put him next to a mature broker whom you have faith in. Put the stuff in some good quality bonds, and go to your Maker serenely.

"If you want your children to get the income first, and the grandchildren to get the principal, that's simple enough. If it goes just to the children and you don't want them to get it outright, provide for income only for 10 years, say. Then they get the principal. If the blow it, they blow it. But the trust doesn't go on forever."

"But who's going to be the custodian for the bonds?"

"The broker. He's insured for a bigger sum than the bank is. And the safekeeping is free. Broker statements are simpler than those computerized things from the bank trust departments. Again, no charge."

Here's another anecdote, along the same line. One of America's leading bankers set up this Family Trust, with the best intentions in the world. On his death, an Ohio bank became a co-trustee of this part of his estate, with the widow the other co-trustee.

There are few things in the world more useless than a co-trustee, if a bank trust department is the other "co". The bank isn't going to do anything to depart from its ancient traditions. All it means is getting another signature from time to time and a round of explanations why the trust can't be run any other way than it is.

Business Briefs

New president of jeweler's association

Dorothy Dorney, jeweler/designer at Tierra, Inc., in Clarkston, was recently named president of the Michigan Women's Jeweler's Association. She was elected to the position on April 12, filling a vacancy in an unexpired term.

The Women's Jeweler's Association is part of a nation-wide organization. The mid-west area of the group is two years old and has 58 members.

"The purpose is to provide a forum for those in jewelry-related careers," she said.

A Waterford resident, Dorney has been with Tierra for almost two years.

Dorothy Dorney

She has been in the jewelry business professionally since 1982, but started designing jewelry at Grand Rapids High School. She studied at the Grand Rapids Art Museum and from there pursued a bachelors of fine arts degree at Western Michigan University, Kalamazoo. Her designs have been exhibited in numerous competitions. The latest competition she participated in was the Michigan Retailers Association, which held its first jewelry design exhibition in Dearborn this year in conjunction with the jewelry trade show.

Dorney said she likes to work in gold and diamonds and also works with colored stones.

"I like the freedom of designing a piece for a customer," she said. "That's my forte."

She does all her work by hand, from the drafting table to the finished piece.

New chief appointed

Leslie Cruikshank has been appointed chief of physical therapy section, Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation Services, Providence Hospital, Southfield.

A Clarkston resident, Cruikshank was previously employed at Hurley Hospital in Flint and Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital. She is a graduate of Russell Sage College and Albany Medical College, New York.

Avoid trusts and trustees, just give the money away

In this case, the widow showed the list of investments to a private investment adviser. Trust assets were in two groups: money market funds and growth stocks.

Money market fund interest rates were dropping every week at that time. Growth stocks seemed silly for a woman with an expectancy of 10 or 15 years, and she thought so, too.

"I want the income now," she told the bank.

When the investment adviser showed her that government bonds would provide twice as much income as these so-called "growth stocks," she was even more insistent.

"But we have to protect the remaindermen," said the trust officer.

By that he meant the children and grandchildren who might some day come into the trust funds.

The widow snapped, "Do you mean that government bonds wouldn't protect the children as well as these stocks you've got?"

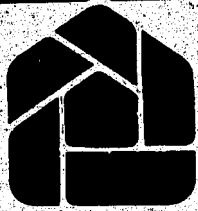

"Well, we'd have to get waivers from all of the children that they wouldn't hold us responsible."

So in due course, waivers were prepared by a lawyer and eventually got sent out and returned. Still later, investments were switched, so that the trust produced not $6,000 a year in income, but $11,000.

The last we heard, the widow as co-trustee was seeking to get the whole trust dissolved and the money distributed to the children.

"I'll ask the court to split the bonds between the children, and they'll get the income," she said. "And we'll save $1,200 a year the bank was charging me to send four checks a year, plus a lot of computer sheets I never read."

Teacher lends listening ear to 'hurting students'

BY PAT YOUNG
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Working out of a small office in Clarkston High School, Katie MacKay deals with some pretty weighty problems.

No, she doesn't work with multi-million dollar school budgets, though her work has hung on to a tenacious, four-year existence through budget cuts and millage failures.

But she does work with priceless lives, those of hundreds of high school students trying to cope with the pain and uncertainty of growing up.

Some of these students deal with adolescence by turning to drugs. Some manage to turn their lives around, due, in no small part, to the "listening ear" always available in that tiny office.

The tall, dark-haired, 34-year-old teacher is not a parent herself, yet she is a person hundreds of high school students can turn to.

They drop in to talk, say hi, borrow money for the pop machine, but most of all, to seek help. And sometimes they may drop in to say thanks because she has already helped.

She's seen and heard it all. She's laughed and cried with students, felt their pain, offered her support, and shared hugs.

"I'm not a mom, not a buddy," says Katie. "But I'm a trusting, secure adult they can turn to."

Katie is coordinator of SEARCH (Support, Education, Awareness, Resources, for Chemically-free Health), a program she and special education teacher Linc Smith wrote after David Toma paid an emotional visit to the community four or five years ago.

A police officer who developed a chemical dependency and overcame it, Toma talks to students about the problems of drug abuse.

"He gets kids to take a look at their life and make a commitment," Katie says.

"We originally wrote the program for special ed. kids who were really hurting," says Katie, who, until becoming coordinator of the SEARCH program, was also a special education teacher.

"I'm not a mom, not a buddy. But I'm a trusting, secure adult they can turn to."

Instead, what SEARCH became was a program for all "hurting kids" in the school. Originally, Linc and Katie co-coordinated the program.

"The community supported it; the timing was right," Katie says.

Many students are living testimonials that it has been successful. But the program is in danger for next year due to budget cuts.

That concerns Katie. There are so many kids who come in just to get support. She worries about the number of attempted suicides and wonders where kids will be able to turn.

Katie remembers what being a rebellious teenager is like. She was 17 and having the usual mother-daughter conflicts when her mother died suddenly.

"Maybe that made me more compassionate," she offers. "I had all the guilt feelings surrounding my mother's death, like, if only I would have known she was sick."

"I was coming into my own identity," she continues. "Funny how much I see her in me now."

KATIE MACKAY, SEARCH coordinator at Clarkston High School, works in a small office

Her mother was a psychiatric nurse in the Northville State Hospital.

Katie's family lived in Farmington Hills. She grew up there, graduated from high school there, and went on to Central Michigan University, Mount Pleasant, where she earned a degree in special education for the emotionally impaired with a minor in psychology.

Her first job, in 1976, was in the Clarkston School District. She worked for seven years at Sashabaw Junior High School as a special education teacher for the emotionally impaired before coming to Clarkston High School in 1983.

"After dealing with so many people and problems, you take an honest look at yourself," she says. "I try to be up front with how I am. Sometimes I appear in control, other times, vulnerable. It lets kids know that I'm a human being."

Katie says SEARCH is almost like a student service center. Kids come in for all kinds of reasons.

As if to reinforce her words, a student pokes his head into the office, obviously wanting to talk to Katie.

"Now's not a good time," she says gently. "How about if I send you a pass to come see me in a little while?"

He nods and disappears. Minutes later, the scenario is repeated with yet another student.

"It's a safe place," she says, settling back in one of two comfortable chairs in front of her desk. "And I can kind of channel them out to the appropriate place (the nurse, counselor, parents, etc.)."

Katie's desk is piled with paperwork. She not only talks with students on an individual basis, but she leads Insight, a student discussion group, and works with parent groups and after care support groups.

where students can come to talk, and frequently do.

She also organizes educational workshops on chemical abuse and is active with "Just Say No" clubs and AWARE, a community-wide group fighting drug abuse.

She is currently in the process of typing letters about the Michigan Teenage Institute, where a team of five students and one adult attend and bring back ideas and training to make a positive impact on their peers at the high school.

But whether it's in a group session or on an individual basis, her biggest job seems to be listening. She listens to personal problems, home problems, all kinds of problems. In Katie's office, students have the freedom to talk about their feelings.

"I think so many people just exist instead of living life. It bothers me that there is a stigma to people seeking help."

"Sometimes they just need a place to be to get things together," she says. "I think kids want an opportunity to talk about their feelings with somebody they can trust because they don't know that what they're feeling is part of growing up."

The most vital thing SEARCH does, according to Katie, is raise the consciousness level that there is a

'Worlds Fair' at Springfield

Visitors, parents and students at Springfield Christian Academy were treated to a "Worlds Fair" presentation by Virginia Winter's sixth grade class last week.

Winters said the class spent three months preparing for the presentation, which they performed eight times last week at the school in Springfield Township.

Each student picked a country and wrote a report concerning its industry, people, religion, flag and government. They even chose foreign names from their countries, wore costumes, and had items on display for closer scrutiny after the presentation.

chemical abuse problem in Clarkston and that the SEARCH program doesn't fight it alone.

"It needs the support of parents, schools, community, courts ... pulling all the systems together," she says.

"I thoroughly love my job, but at times I get extremely frustrated," she adds. "I hate seeing people make poor choices that cause them pain or causes those who care about them pain."

Katie says the greatest satisfaction from her job is getting to know a lot of people on a real, feeling basis rather than at surface level, and watching people change and grow.

She enjoys discovering more of herself along the way, too, and has a broad range of interests outside the office, including jogging, racquetball, cross-country skiing, biking, movies, Tiger baseball and the three cats who share her Ortonville home.

"I think so many people just exist instead of living life," she adds. "It bothers me that there is a stigma to people seeking help."

Kids don't really want to do themselves in, she says. They just want the pain to go away.

"I think I really enjoy life, but it wasn't always that way," she continues. "It took a lot of hard work to get there, and that's what I hope to do for others."

"There are other things I could have," Katie says. "But I really think relationships are what make people happy."

"I had all the guilt feelings surrounding my mother's death, like, if only I would have known she was sick. ... I was coming into my own identity. Funny how much I see her in me now."

A message from Holland

Air mail took on a whole new meaning in Independence Township recently.

The Bailey family had been working behind their Deerwood home when they found a message originating almost 200 miles away in Holland, Mich.

"The color caught my eye," said Carolyn Bailey, who was busy planting pine trees with her daughter Leslie, 5, and son Julian, 3.

"We saw it bobbing around for a few days, but it was raining. We really weren't going to pick it up," she said.

"It" was a balloon. Red in color, with pink and turquoise streamers dangling from its base, the balloon looked like a remnant from a party of some sort.

The balloon broke as the Baileys disentangled it from the reeds in which it landed, but a note attached remained intact.

It read: "Schuyler Van Tatenhove, Holland, Michigan. Age 4."

"It's kind of hard to believe that the balloon traveled all that way, and when it got into the hands of another youngster, it broke within 30 seconds," Carolyn said.

A check to the Holland area phone directory showed a half page of families with the Van Tatenhove name, making it nearly impossible to find out how the balloon came into being.

"I was disappointed that there was no address or phone," Carolyn said. "But I did get the idea to do the same thing for Julian's birthday. I'm going to put our address and phone on the balloons for his party."

33 new members in CHS National Honor Society

The Clarkston High School National Honor Society (NHS) inducted 33 new members April 25.

"They are the top of the top," said Judith Medlin, who sponsors the NHS with fellow CHS teacher, Kathleen Pierson.

"They are well-rounded individuals. You have to be strong in all areas. It's not just the GPA (grade point average)," Medlin said, adding that the students were evaluated on scholarship, leadership, service and character.

Cumulative grade point average was required to be at least 3.4 or above, she said.

The induction ceremony was a group effort, and the present NHS members organized the entire ceremony, with entertainment from the Madrigal Singers and the Jazz Band.

In addition, cakes for the reception were baked and decorated by student, Jennifer Fauss, and student government members helped serve the about 350 parents, students and guests in attendance.

"These are super kids. (It's) very gratifying to work with them," said Medlin.

New members are: Terry Barnes, Debbie Bellows, Lisa Brinn, Andrew Byrne, Kimberly Creech, Dane Davis, Erika Flannigan, Ron Gibson, Erica Gooding, Jennifer Grohs, Derek Hackbardt, Kent Hansen, James Haviland, Meredith Higdon, Nicole Hocking, Nicole Kidder and Robin Link.

Other new members are: Robin Meissner, Julie Meredith, Erin Mulloy, Elizabeth Novak, Janice Pelath, Rebecca Poche, Matthew Pyenta, Britt Ried, Matthew Sailor, Stacey Secatch, Christine Serb, Leanne Stevens, Wendy Warchock, Jason Werner, Stephen White and Daniel Williams.

Students who already belonged to NHS were: Peggy Agar, Kelly Avenall, John Bauer, Kristen Billig, Kyle Bray, Nicole Chinavare, Michelle Cochran, Shonn Colbrun, Steve Cook, Michelle Darby, Lisa Defay, Steve Doolittle, Kellee Duty, Jennifer Fauss, Kristine Fromm, Mark Hetherington, Jim Huttenlocker, Gary Jackman, Rebecca Kar and Christine Lisle.

Other previously inducted members are: Wendy Manning, Ann McClellan, Susan McKoin, Bree Michelson, Kelley Miller, Robert Newton, Alicia Nyberg, Jennifer O'Heren, Kevin Ortwine, Jill Pilarcik, Marie Powell, Kerri Ranta, Brian Rigonan, Ross Rosenthal, Beth Samuel, Jeff Shupe, Kelly Stickney, Elizabeth Webb and David Woodruff.

Works by 2 Independence artists tour Michigan

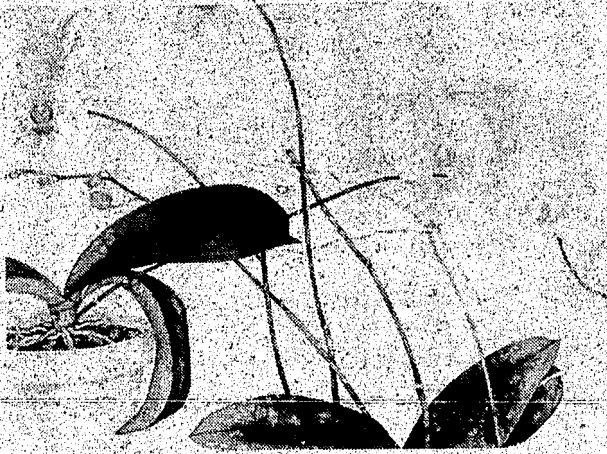

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Pam Kessler is in her studio beginning another painting.

The first wash of blue and a shade of rose color the canvas at her elbow. Directly in front of her sits the fresh orchid that she will capture in stunning detail.

New Age music plays from somewhere beyond the large studio as Pam's two matching terriers take their perch beside her to watch her slow, deliberate movements.

A framed, finished painting from her orchid series is on the floor at the studio entrance, just returned from the Detroit Institute of Arts.

ORCHID SERIES #3, a watercolor by Independence Township artist Pam Kessler, completed a three-month tour of Michigan.

The delicate watercolor was a finalist in the Museum's recent "Art and Flowers: a Festival of Spring" contest, an honor shared with Clarkston resident Donella Reese Vogel for her work entitled "Azalea." The two works traveled around the state with 22 others throughout the months of February, March and April.

"I've worked very hard to get here," Pam said.

Although the atmosphere in her studio is one of peace, Pam is quick to point out that the life of an artist is not the easy existence that many imagine.

"A lot of people think it comes easily, but there are some disadvantages to having a studio in your home," Pam said. "You're alone a lot, and it can be hard to have discipline."

Pam finds enough discipline to spend at least eight hours a day in her studio, either painting or working to promote her work.

The studio occupies the large front room of Kessler's Perry Lake Road, Independence Township, home, in what used to be the family living room. During one of her husband's many business trips, Pam sold the living room furniture and moved her studio from the basement.

"I got tired of working down there," she said.

The detail in her paintings require slow careful attention, and it can be several weeks before she completes one picture.

"I turn it to the wall for awhile," she explains. "I'm not sure if it's finished. You can take it too far and ruin a piece of work," she added.

Pam primarily paints vegetables, plants and fresh flowers. Although watercolor is a rather loose medium, Pam has developed a tight control of the paint in her technique, producing highly detailed, realistic pictures.

A brochure describing her work reads: "Her fruits and flowers ... are what they are — living things whose meaning and elegance are self-contained, accessible and eminently worthy of discovery."

Promoting the "discovery" of an artist typically requires almost as much work as painting, Pam said.

"I need a wife," she said, laughing.

Pam's work will be featured in a show at the Grand Hotel Gallery during the month of July and in an art show in Birmingham in September.

"AZALEA," painted by Donella Reese Vogel of Independence Township, was chosen as a finalist in a Detroit Institute of Arts poster contest.

OM places fifth in state

Five Clarkston area students recently finished fifth in the state Odyssey of the Mind (OM) competition.

OM is a world-wide program designed for students kindergarten age through college to determine how successfully and creatively a team can solve a specific problem or complete a given task.

The Clarkston team of Aaron Bigger, Brad Hranach, Christina Sailor, Erica Nienstedt and Robb Colbrunn chose the problem "Cause and Effect." They had to use the energy from a cue ball to cause 12 different events to happen.

Some of the events were turning on music, making the letters "OM" appear, flipping a sign over, raise the cue ball to a higher track with a lever mechanism, pouring 4 to 6 ounces of water from a container holding 24 ounces, breaking a balloon, activating a flash bulb and releasing a sling shot.

In nine minutes they had to set up their track, run the ball down the track to activate the events and finish with a skit.

A circus theme was used for their track events and skit. Colbrunn learned how to juggle to enhance their act for extra points.

Besides doing the problem, each team must participate in a brainstorming exercise which is also counted toward their total score. The team was coached by Donn Colbrunn.

New odometer law aims at consumer protection

A new consumer protection law designed to further reduce odometer fraud became effective April 1. Secretary of State Richard H. Austin is urging the buyers and sellers of used vehicles to become familiar with the law's provisions.

Under Public Act 470 of 1988, odometer tampering is upgraded from a misdemeanor to a felony. This change increases the likelihood that prosecutors will be willing to bring charges against individuals accused of odometer tampering.

"Over the past several years, we have enjoyed tremendous success in detecting and acting against odometer tampering and misrepresentation," says Austin.

"This new law provides another enforcement tool which will allow the Department of State's Bureau of Automotive Regulation, the Attorney General, county prosecutors and other authorities do a better job of eliminating odometer fraud," he continues.

In addition to making odometer fraud a felony, the new law requires persons selling a used vehicle to a dealer or another individual to write in the vehicle's mileage, as shown on the odometer, when completing the mileage statement on the back of the vehicle's title.

Failure by the seller to fill in the mileage statement on the title could make them subject to a misdemeanor charge.

Finally, as of April 1, automobile dealers must show the purchaser a used vehicle's title and any title reassignment documents belonging to the vehicle. This will be the first time that buyers will have easy access to a vehicle's title history before they purchase it.

Currently, dealers are only required to give mileage disclosure statements on separate forms.

Department of State officials are emphasizing that Secretary of State branch office personnel will not accept applications for new titles if the existing title does not include the seller's mileage reading.

Also, beginning April 1, the Secretary of State will print the mileage reading on the front of all new titles issued for cars 10 years old or newer.

Individuals are encouraged to use the new disclosure requirements when selecting a used vehicle. Consumers should note the prior owner's mileage disclosure on the title, and ask questions regarding prior ownership.

Asking questions is particularly important if the vehicle was formerly owned by a rental or lease company. Also, the Secretary of State says, note whether there is evidence of erasures or alterations of information on the title.

Finally, if the title is issued in the name of the selling dealer, consumers should ask why it was necessary to convert the previous title into the dealership's name.

Dealers and vehicle owners with questions regarding the new law are encouraged to contact the Department of State's Bureau of Automotive Regulation. The number for those residing in Wayne, Oakland or Macomb counties is (313) 357-5108.

Guinea pigs galore

There are plenty of them available, all under a year old, just waiting for good homes. Guinea pigs come in a variety of colors, lengths of fur and personalities.

They make great pets for small homes, because they don't take up a lot of space. And they are easy to care for. Guinea pigs are available for adoption at the Michigan Humane Society, 3600 Auburn Rd., Auburn Heights, 852-7420. Hours at the non-profit shelter are 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

The adoption fee is $5. And prospective owners can usually purchase guinea pig supplies from the shelter for a nominal fee.

Sour lemon

Kristen Bilicki

I love my father very much. I appreciate everything he does for me. I appreciate the generosity he has always shown me, but this time he goofed up.

Eventually, the time came when my parents became tired of driving me around, car-pooling with friends, chauffeuring me to and from school, not to mention accompanying me to every social event I wanted to attend. So we made a deal. If I got a job, then I could get a car.

Needless to say, I jumped at this offer. I began to apply at various establishments. Not only would this job give money for a car, it would also let me have a source to buy clothes and to splurge and buy every toy I needed at the time.

I worked hard and made friends in the process. My job wasn't glamorous, and it was tiring. Yet with the accumulation of paychecks, the labor seemed to pale in comparison.

As I deposited the money in a bank and slowly began to build up my account, I reminded my father of our deal.

The answer was that the timing was not appropriate because he first needed to buy his own new car. In the meantime, I was often allowed to use his 1983 Firebird, Trans-Am.

Being a 17-year-old girl, cruising around in a car like that was a thrill. I had fun sprinting around curves, testing not only the car but also my own ability behind the wheel.

There was still no word on my car, although this substitute use was even more of a thrill than owning my personal "wheels."

Then when my father finally bought his new car, I was still allowed free reign of the Trans-Am. I drove it even to school, as fall rolled around.

This lasted until the first snowflake. That was when my father decided he didn't want to drive his new car on snow and ice. I understood that this was entirely reasonable, yet it left me to walk or ride the bus or, once again, depending on others for rides.

At last, my father began to look around for my car. We went up to the lots and supermarket parking lots looking for the "right" car.

He found it from a friend of his at work. I was excited; he was excited, and from what I know now, the friend must have been ecstatic.

We got the car. I learned how to drive a stick-shift. Even from the first day, one thing after another seemed to break.

What we thought to be a bargain was turning into a very expensive lemon. With each garage bill, the taste became more tart.

I loved this car; I couldn't admit that it was a hassle. Well, finally, I have. After pulling the dragging muffler off, after holding the door closed as I drove, after suffering a leaking roof drip on my head each time it rained, after seeing rust and sitting on wet cushions, after all the times it dies on me — after all this I can admit the car could make anyone's lips pucker.

Still, I sit here with grease on my hands, and I watch my father and brother desperately work on my car. I can't help but see the car as cute.

My father's good intentions are well noted. Who else but a father and an older brother would skip a warm, home-cooked meal to work on a car?

Who else would start this labor as soon as they came home from a long day's work? Who else would take the time? Maybe that's why the sour taste of lemons dulls, and I seem not to notice the lack of a muffler and the drips of water on my head.

Maybe I should count my blessings — even the little things. At least now my door works.

How to deal with a basement flood

Detroit Edison offers seven safety tips to help protect your family, your home and your electrical appliances, before, during and after a flood.

BEFORE flood conditions threaten your area:

1. Have your electrical outlets in the basement or other areas rewired so that all outlets are placed above what you think the flood level might be. Make sure your wiring complies with local codes and with the National Electric Code.

2. Disconnect power to all basement outlets, appliances, extension cords and equipment including the furnace.

3. If possible, raise the appliances above the anticipated water level.

DURING the time your basement is flooded:

4. Never step into a flooded basement or other area if water is in contact with outlets or any electrically operated appliance that is energized, such as a washer, dryer, freezer, furnace blower motor, dehumidifier, lamps and cords. You may receive a severe shock. Not even rubber boots can guarantee your protection in this situation.

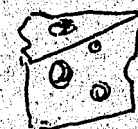

5. Do not attempt to remove a fuse or turn off a circuit breaker while standing in water or on a damp floor. This should have been done before the basement was flooded. If you must have the electricity to your basement disconnected, call an electrician or Detroit Edison. Call the phone number on your monthly statement.

AFTER the flood:

6. When the water in your basement has receded, do not attempt to operate or determine the condition of appliances or other equipment that have been submerged unless you are qualified to do so. You could be in danger of electrical shock.

7. Your best safeguard is to call a qualified electrician to determine the condition of your basement's electrical wiring, an appliance repair agency to service your appliances and a furnace serviceman to check and restart your furnace. These agencies are listed in the yellow pages of your telephone directory.

Preventing open house food from spoiling

"Open House" for those upcoming June graduations, weddings and other special celebrations has become a time honored way to entertain large groups of friends economically.

Artistically arranged deli-trays with cold cuts, relishes and creamy salads have also become traditional.

Welcome is the convenience of preparation of these tasty treats; however, uninvited guests of food poisoning and food spoilage are never welcome guests.

"Foods that remain out at room temperature for more than two hours especially on warm summer days of 80 degrees are prone to spoilage and may ruin your party," says Sylvia Treitman, Oakland County Extension Home Economist.

Some ideas to help you prevent the disaster of food spoilage and poisoning at your next open house are:

1. Order or make several small trays instead of one large and keep remainder in refrigerator until ready to refill. Leave out only enough to be consumed within the two-hour time and provide a bed of ice when temperatures soar!
2. Save money by making your own trays of meats and relishes, and serve creamy salads separate in thermal type bowls with ice on bottom. Or set filled serving bowls in a bed of ice to keep cool and safe, or serve vinegar-based salads, a safer alternative.
3. Make attractive "ice serving bowls" by freezing water-filled bowls inserted with a smaller size bowl. Unmold by dipping briefly in hot water.
4. Keep food out of direct sun and keep dishes covered with netting type umbrellas outside.
5. Hot foods should also be kept hot to prevent bacterial growth, no less than 140 degrees.
6. Use up leftovers immediately — food that has already been out at room temperature will not keep as long as fresh.

What's Cooking

Meal in a loaf

Pat Young

I have frequently been kidded for my "sweet tooth" and matching recipes. But the truth is, I like to eat just about anything, and have tried to sprinkle my "What's Cooking" column with a few light recipes as well.

As my tenure at The Clarkston News is coming to an end, I will compromise with a recipe that's neither too sweet nor too light. I call it "meal in a loaf," and the recipe comes from a worker at the General Motors Proving Grounds.

BROCCOLI BREAD

1 package chopped broccoli, thawed and drained

- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 6 ounces cottage cheese
- 3/4 stick margarine, melted
- 4 eggs, beaten
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 can Mexican corn, drained
- 1 cup self-rising corn meal

Combine first seven ingredients, then add the corn meal, mixing well. Bake in a greased, 9-by-13-inch pan for 25-30 minutes in a 450-degree oven. Serve warm.

Bells will ring in spring concert

"Spring Ring" is the name of the Clarkston United Methodist Church concert Sunday night, May 7, featuring four handbell choirs.

The four choirs, involving over 30 people, include two adult choirs, a junior-high choir and a children's choir, according to Judy Mellen, handbell choir director.

There will be both sacred and popular music performed in the concert, she said; highlighted with solos and duets.

The concert will take place at 7 p.m. in the church sanctuary, 6600 Waldon Rd., Clarkston.

Tickets at $3 each are available at the door or in the church office.

On the run

Hundreds of thousands of people walked miles for the March of Dimes April 30, and this year, Clarkston was not to be left out.

About 560 area residents gathered at Clarkston Elementary early Sunday morning to begin the 25-kilometer (15.5 miles) WalkAmerica fundraiser throughout the streets of Independence Township.

The many participants who solicited pledges before the walk were expected to collect close to $60,000 for a fight against birth defects.

Walkers throughout southeast Michigan will likely collect more than $1 million, said March of Dimes officials.

All money goes toward the fight to eliminate birth defects and to eliminate low birthweight.

In Clarkston, walkers began at the elementary school and trudged along Almond, Clarkston, and Holcomb roads to checkpoint one. Then it was around Allen, Rattalee, Reese and Washington to checkpoint two in downtown Clarkston. Those with stamina continued along Main Street, Dixie and White Lake Roads, back to downtown Main Street and on to a triumphant finish up Church Street to Clarkston Elementary.

THE 25-KILOMETER walk didn't seem to phase some, who reached the downtown Clarkston checkpoint at a jog. The first "runners" completed the course in under two hours. They were greeted by bands of clowns and cheering onlookers and were refreshed at a beverage and food stand staffed by volunteers.

CLARKSTON Women's Club Member Gale Ferguson (left) gets some help from her mother, Vida, in staffing the colorectal cancer kit booth during the Clarkston area Health-O-

Rama last week. The testing kits were available to participants for $3, one of about a dozen health screening items offered in the program.

About 250 use Health-o-rama

"It's the best $10 they'll ever spend," said Mary Jane Chaustowich, watching people file past her into the Health-o-rama.

The Project Health-o-rama offers residents free health screening for things like glaucoma, blood pressure and vision. A few tests, such as extensive blood screening, colorectal kits and breast mammograms, are offered for a small fee.

"They receive a readout for 21 different blood tests. That's usually about $200 worth of blood work," explained Chaustowich, site coordinator for the Clarkston area Health-o-rama.

The health project is offered at 97 sites in Michigan throughout the month of April. Made possible by WXYZ-TV, Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan and the United Health Organization, the event is coordinated locally by the Clarkston Community Women's Club.

"It gets better every year," Chaustowich said. "Each year it gets bigger."

Last year, more than 200 people took advantage of the low-cost health screening; this year about 250 were expected.

Those participating are required to have their blood pressure checked; they then can choose from a breast exam, vision, glaucoma, hearing or blood test. Rectal cancer kits are offered, as well as health appraisals from a registered nurse.

The Health-o-rama is staffed by Clarkston Community Women's Club members and with medical-tech student volunteers from the Oakland Technical Center-Northwest campus.
