Don't forget, vote Monday

School election on June 12

BY SANDRA G. CONLEN
Clarkston News Staff Writer

At the polls Monday, June 12, voters will be asked to approve a bond issue and an override of the Headlee Amendment; and they'll be asked to choose from six candidates vying for two spots on the Clarkston school board.

If the $68.8 million bond issue is approved, the money would pay for the construction and furnishings of a new high school and elementary school, plus renovations to other buildings.

Clarkston High and Sashabaw Junior High will be remodeled and re-equipped to be used as middle schools. Existing elementary schools will be added to or partially remodeled and re-equipped.

If voters OK the Headlee override, the school district will levy the 38.83 mills voters approved last year. One mill is $1 for every $1,000 assessed property valuation.

Christian school sues state board

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Springfield Christian Academy filed a lawsuit against the Michigan Department of Education (MDOE) June 5 in an effort to stay open.

MDOE has threatened to close the Academy, which is run out of the Dixie Baptist Church on Dixie Highway, Springfield Township, and 30 other Michigan private schools for not submitting certain information as required by state law.

In response, a lawsuit was filed in Ingham County Circuit Court Monday by four churches, a teacher and two Clarkston parents against the MDOE, claiming church-run schools should be exempt from state jurisdiction. Included in the suit is an injunction to stop the state from closing the schools until the suit is heard.

"The suit seeks freedom from Michigan Department of Education's control over churches," said the Rev. Paul Vanaman, principal at Springfield Christian Academy. "We believe the church exists by the will of God, not by permission of the state."

The schools, most of them operated by Christian churches, have been charged with not filing reports on areas such as teachers, curriculum and days of operation. MDOE hearing units were asked to evaluate the charges and make recommendations to the state's school superintendent.

Vanaman said he received a letter May 27 from the MDOE that said the state was filing a formal complaint against Springfield Christian Academy.

He said the Academy chose not to reply to the request for two reasons.

Thendara Park paving project hits roadblock

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

The seven-year-long Thendara Park paving project has hit a roadblock in the form of the Oakland County Road Commission (OCRC).

In March, residents were told that paving of their northeast Independence Township roads could begin in July, after easements were obtained from about 20 property owners and after the OCRC agreed to the conversion of the roads from private to public status.

As easement grants the right to use land belonging to another for such things as roads or utilities. Public status means the roads fall under jurisdiction of the OCRC, instead of being maintained privately by residents for such things as snow removal, grading and dust control.

On May 25, the OCRC tabled its approval of the paving project until three concerns were addressed by the township.

Township officials called a special board meeting May 31, where they determined that the first two issues could be worked out with the OCRC but that the third would need the attention of attorneys from both sides.

According to minutes of the meeting, township engineer Tom Biehl told the board that he had attended the OCRC meeting, and the concerns were as follows:

* Some of the roads in the project are steeper than standard county grade, so the OCRC wants the township to assume full responsibility and maintenance that may be required in the steep grade areas.

* Because there may be unforeseen draining problems, the OCRC wants the township to assume full responsibility and financial obligation for correction and repair of any construction defects in the project for up to two years after it's completed.

The third issue was not addressed in the meeting, but was included in a letter to the township attorney. It states:

* The township should assume full responsibility and hold the OCRC harmless should any residents claim that their property or the environment is damaged after the drainage patterns are changed during construction.

According to the minutes, Biehl said no costs were mentioned during the OCRC meeting, but the township was expected to agree to pay all annual costs greater than normal plowing costs.

The board's discussion included the gas and weight tax that the residents of Thendara park have paid over the years with no benefit returned, the matched chloride monies that the township has provided over the years, and whether to enter into an agreement or not.

One option discussed was to contract and assess the winter maintenance privately.

Township officials hope to get quick approval for the paving project so it can meet a deadline set with the construction company doing the work.

If the deadline passes, the project's costs can change, and the township might have to reassess affected property owners and conduct the lengthy public hearing process all over again.

Township officials expressed hope that the item would be on the agenda at the next OCRC meeting. The township attorney is to work with the OCRC attorney to resolved the third issue.

Vote on Monday

The Headlee Amendment automatically rolls back the millage rate whenever property values increase at a rate higher than the rate of inflation. Without the override of the amendment, the school district would levy 34.946 mills.

The six candidates for two four-year terms on the Clarkston Board of Education are: incumbent Stephen Werner, Karen Foyteck, Paul VanKlaveren, Sheila Goin-Hughes, Doreen Wright and Robert Wyatt.

The polls will be open Monday, June 12, from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Clarkston school district residents who reside in Independence Township will vote at their usual precincts. School district residents who reside in Springfield and White Lake townships will vote at Andersonville Elementary School. Those in Waterford Township will vote at Clarkston High School, Precinct 4.

According to Rosemary Howey, in charge of elections in Independence Township, absentee ballots are above average for a school election, so more than the usual number of voters may turn out on June 12, she said.

Absentee voter ballots must be picked up in person at Independence Township Hall, 90 N. Main St., Clarkston.

Residents push for safety after M-15 accident

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

On an overcast afternoon in May, 17-year-old Jennifer Schneider pulled up to M-15, ready to turn left from Amy Drive, Independence Township.

Witnesses said she waited a few moments and pulled out when she thought the way was clear.

She was broadsided by a vehicle traveling north in an accident that left her face scarred, her pelvis shattered and her lung bruised.

Jennifer is now at home recovering from her injuries, but her accident has fueled neighbors' simmering concerns for safety on the well- traveled route.

"We kept complaining and talking together about the light, but our neighbor is in critical condition," said Susan Leigh. "It's time to do something."

"We don't put signals in based on the number of signatures on a petition. We do try to look at whether a traffic signal is warranted."

Paul Riley

A PETITION DRIVE for a stoplight on M-15 and a lower speed limit is conducted by Pat Breen at the home of Dr. Nathan Chase. Organizers hope to get signatures from every driver in the three-subdivision area along M-15 north of I-75 in Independence Township. Those involved are also conducting a letter-writing campaign.

Susan has joined with leaders from three area subdivisions to petition for a stoplight and a reduced speed limit on M-15 north of I-75 in Independence Township.

About six residents gathered at one neighbor's house recently to discuss their strategy and their concerns.

"I was first on the scene," Leigh said. "I had to tell the paramedics who (Jennifer) was. The thing that struck me is that it could be my daughter."

Joseph Figa, a resident of Old Sturbridge, told the group that he had just gotten rid of his older car for fear that it would stall while his teenage son was trying to pull out into the busy four-lane highway.

The group discussed two plans of action: gathering signatures from every driver in the three-subdivision area and focusing a letter campaign at local and state officials.

One of the group's targets is the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT), which is in charge of evaluating stoplight locations.

MDOT officials said that before a stoplight can go in, a study of the area is needed to see whether the light would be beneficial. In many cases, a stoplight can actually do more harm than good.

"When we say put a stop-and-go-signal in a major street, every time it turns red maybe a more cautious driver stops, but a more aggressive driver doesn't stop," said Paul Riley, district traffic safety engineer at MDOT.

"I know people are concerned about getting out onto the trunk line safely, but a traffic signal only designates who has the right of way," he added.

A stop light study combines a variety of factors, but basically engineers study traffic volume on the main street and on the intersecting side street. This data is tempered with the type of accidents that are occurring at the location, Riley said.

"As a general rule, we are looking for volumes of, say, 200 vehicles per hour for eight hours on the side street."

The calculations are measured by a machine that runs 24 hours at the location and by an individual who monitors traffic for an eight-hour period. The manual counter examines backups and delays, as well as notes the number of cars waiting on the cross street, Riley said.

The information doesn't placate some residents, who said that a previous study surveyed Cranberry Lake Road, when most residents exit Amy Drive.

A growing problem:

Its just after six in the evening, and four cars are stacked along Amy Drive waiting for a chance to negotiate their way onto M-15.

M-15 is four lanes wide here; to the left is the I-75 exit with its steady stream of cars coming from the off-ramp; to the right, the four lane highway eventually narrows to two lanes, prompting drivers to speed up as they jockey for position.

The speed limit is 55 mph.

Adding to the difficulty of pulling out onto M-15 is the existence of a turn lane onto Amy Drive. When a car is in the turn lane, it can be difficult to see if another car is coming in adjacent lanes.

Neighbors speculate that this blind spot gave Jennifer Schneider the false assurance that she could pull out safely onto M-15 that day.

The 5 p.m. hour is the worst time to attempt to leave the subdivisions, residents said; some cars wait up to 10 minutes until the way is clear.

"I tutor, so I leave at about 5:30 or 6 p.m.," says Nancy Breen, of Shelly Drive. "I wait for a stretch of five minutes or more. I just want to know that I'm going to come home to my family."

A study of the area was done about a year and a half ago, Riley said. When conducting a study, engineers usually look only at existing data and don't consider traffic projections unless something like a major shopping center is planned there, he added.

"I can't disagree that the area just north of I-75 has grown quite rapidly," he said. "I don't really know if that one location meets the warrants for signalization."

Riley said MDOT does have annual volume counts taken on major trunk lines, especially if they are growing.

"Most requests usually come to us from local units of government or police," he said.

"Let's forget the statistics and look at the accidents. The intersection just isn't safe."

Nancy Breen

"We don't put signals in based on the number of signatures on a petition. We do try to look at whether a traffic signal is warranted.

"If individuals give some validity (to their concerns), we'll make another study," he added.

In the meantime, residents plan to continue their push to get something done.

"Most people are saying 'come on in, give me the pen,'" said Colette Pietrzak, a petition drive organizer.

"Most people are not even reading the caption; they immediately pick up the pen and sign," she added.

The petition demands that a light be installed either at Amy Drive or Cranberry Lake Road to create a safe out onto M-15. It also demands that speed limits in the area be reduced to 40 mph.

"Let's forget the statistics and look at the accidents," Breen said. "The intersection just isn't safe."

Springfield man OK after lightning hits him

Boua Chahn is still hospitalized after being struck by lightning May 31, but he will be released soon, according to Dr. Robert Aronosian, director of Pontiac Osteopathic Hopsital's Trauma Center.

Chahn, 27, suffered cuts and bruises after a bolt of lightning hit his Springfield Township mobile home and passed through him as he stood by his car nearby.

Chahn, a foundry worker who moved from Laos seven years ago, told reporters he doesn't remember actually being hit by the bolt that rainy evening but woke up minutes later with rescue workers standing over him.

Hospital employees said Chahn is "doing better and coming along fine."

Chahn's wife was standing at the door to the mobile home when the bolt struck, but she was not injured.

Maximum millage rate levied for schools

Only two residents showed up for the Truth in Taxation hearing June 1 at the Clarkston Board of Education meeting.

After the hearing, which is required by law, the board voted unanimously to levy 34.95 mills seven days after the hearing. The amount is the maximum amount allowable under the Headlee Amendment. One mill is $1 for every $1,000 assessed property valuation.

The present millage levied, with the Headlee Amendment in effect, allows the school district to collect only 33.57 mills of the 38.83 mills voters approved for school operations June, 1988.

The Headlee Amendment automatically rolls back the millage rate whenever property values increase at a rate higher than the rate of inflation.

Doug Carlson

Because of the importance of the upcoming election, COG is presenting the following information as a public service. Because of our desire to remain free of political issues, the presentation of this information should not be construed as an endorsement or rejection of the subject proposals.

Proposal No. 1 will ask voters to levy the total millage previously approved by voters. The millage rate of 38.8 mills has already been rolled back to 36.6 mills because of the Headlee Amendment. By next year the millage rate is estimated to be rolled back to 34.9 mills. The loss to the district in state aid dollars would be $1,860,000.

One mill is $1 for every $1,000 assessed property valuation.

The Headlee Amendment section of the state constitution calls for a millage rollback whenever assessments rise faster at a faster rate than the rate of inflation.

In the case of in-formula school districts, however, increases in assessments do not mean more operating money. Larger assessments simply mean that local taxpayers pick up a larger part of the school bill, while the State of Michigan contributes less.

Only if the millage rate is increased do the schools get more money because the state aid formula is partially tied to the number of mills raised locally.

The same variable of the school aid formula causes in-formula districts to lose money with Headlee rollbacks. When the local millage rate is lowered, the local school district loses some of its state aid.

Proposal No. 2 will ask voters to approve a bond issue to raise $68.8 million in an effort to resolve current and anticipated space problems. Specifically, the money would be used to:

* Construct and equip a new 1,800-student high school.
* Convert the current high school to a middle school (grades 6 to 8).
* Partially renovate and re-equip Sashabaw Junior High School to be used as a middle school (grades 6 to 8).
* Construct and equip a new elementary school.
* Add to and partially renovate and re-equip all district elementary schools.

Approaching the building and renovation programs all at once will allow the school district to take advantage of Michigan's School Bond Loan Program. The maximum increase in millage would be 5.6 mills being reduced over the life of the payment schedule. The dollar cost to homeowners will vary because of the Homestead Act. The following chart may be helpful to you in this regard:

Michigan Homestead Tax Credit Examples

General Taxpayers:

Household Income	State Equalized Valuation $30,000	$50,000	$70,000	$90,000
	Tax Increase
$40,000	$73.58	$122.64	$429.24	$551.88
50,000	154.78	122.64	429.24	551.88
60,000	183.96	122.64	229.78	551.88
70,000	183.96	122.64	171.70	551.88

Senior Citizens Age 65 and Older:

Household Income	State Equalized Valuation $30,000	$50,000	$70,000
	Tax Increase
$20,000	$0	$306.60	$429.24
30,000	0	306.60	429.24
40,000	0	306.60	429.24
50,000	135.33	47.72	429.24

It should be noted that the above calculations are examples based on very generalized data. The impact on a specific individual or family will vary according to their circumstances under the Homestead Act.

All of the above information was provided by the Clarkston Board of Education. If you have any questions regarding the proposals or the resulting tax implications, you should contact the board office at 625-4402.

The election is scheduled for June 12. Be sure to vote.

Support for Proposal No. 1

Julie Campe

Voters face two issues on the ballot Monday, June 12, and I encourage all to vote yes on Proposal No. 1, which would override the Headlee Amendment.

Proposal No. 2, a $68.8 million bond issue to build a new high school and elementary school plus renovate other buildings, is an ambitious plan, and Clarkston students deserve such a nice working environment.

Unfortunately, it costs a lot of money, and right now, I'd advise making do with the deteriorating facilities a little longer and perhaps getting mentally and financially prepared to approve toned down plans in the future.

In the meantime, vote yes on Proposal No. 1.

Yes, it means you'll pay more in taxes next year, which in any other circumstance I'd advise you not to support.

But in this case, consider voting yes and at the same time protesting to everyone who will listen about the catch-22 that the state's school funding formula causes for school districts such as Clarkston.

The purpose of the Headlee Amendment is good -- it automatically rolls back millage rates whenever property values increase at a rate higher than the rate of inflation. So even though your property values may skyrocket in a given year, your taxes can only increase as much as prices in general increase.

Taxes can only increase above the inflation rate with voter approval. That's where we come in. Stay with this, and you'll see why a yes vote on Proposal No. 1 is necessary.

Part of the state's school funding formula is linked to millage rates -- in the 1988-89 school year, the formula said local school districts should get $77.71 for each mill levied against local taxpayers ($77.71 X Clarkston's Millage Rate of 36.5622). The formula then adds $350 to that amount ($3,191.25).

Then, it multiplies that figure times the number of students in the district (5,913). It all boils down to a state's guarantee of $18.87 million -- the state adds money (last year - $2.79 million) to local districts to make sure it hits that mark.

One mill is $1 for every $1,000 assessed property valuation.

However, in order to keep taxes at the inflation rate -- well below the rate that property values have increased by in this area -- the Headlee Amendment rolls the school's millage rate way back. Accordingly, the state guarantees less money because $77.71 X Smaller Millage Rate (36.5622) equals a smaller number.

So in order to keep the status quo, the schools that are "in formula," such as Clarkston, need the override to put the millage rate up just enough so the combined state and local dollars equal last year's.

Yep. It's crazy, and it's not fair, and it's misleading. We keep pouring more and more money out of our pockets just to keep the status quo for schools, and the state pays less and less. Yet our state taxes remain the same.

Contrary to the opinions of a lot of frustrated taxpayers, the problem is not the school board; nor is it the administration. The problem is the problems with the state's method of school funding.

Vote yes on Proposal No. 1 to keep such worthy programs as SEARCH; extracurricular school activities including athletics; elementary foreign language, physical education and music; and staff including 30 teachers, two administrators and 13 non-instructional staff.

Vote yes and howl like a Wolverine, a Cougar and a Wolf to our state Legislators to call for immediate changes.

Letters to the Editor

June 12 key day

The background research has been completed; all citizens have had an opportunity to express opinions; the campaign is about to end -- June 12th is almost here!

Once again, a school district must solicit support from a community; this time it's ours. The task of soliciting support is not a pleasant one. If anything, it is a task that none of us would want.

What if businesses for which you work had to do this? Would General Motors be able to raise prices in order to operate? Would Chrysler Corporation be able to build a new technical center? Would the businesses in our community be able to increase the price of a gallon of gasoline or a loaf of bread?

No other segment of our society must endure what the public sector does to maintain a level of quality.

What the real issue is can be made very simple. Are we or are we not going to support quality education?

This district has lost 3.14 mills for operation. The last new building to open was Sashabaw Junior High School in 1969. The entire English department of Clarkston High School has a supply budget of $2,000. Could any business survive under such conditions?

Above and beyond quality education is property value. Name a time when any realtor sold property without giving an appraisal of the school district.

If you doubt, please look around you.

This school district is deteriorating fast: leaking ceilings, floor tiles that don't even match, science labs that lack equipment, and mediocre supply budgets.

Whether we like it or not, this is what we have for community property in our schools.

Can Clarkston Community Schools accommodate an additional 500-600 students under present conditions?

The district has no choice. Yet it would be foolish to think that this additional burden will not take a greater toll on quality.

It must also be clear that facilities will erode even faster. The situation will not improve.

June 12th is a key day for everyone -- parent and non-parent alike. It's our community and our school district. It will only be as good as we are willing to make it. A YES vote is critical.

Al Bartlett

Don't override

The Headlee Amendment is doing what it is supposed to do.

It limits the tax increases to the amount of inflation. An override would be forever.

I believe the state Legislature (or petition) will provide more funds to the school systems. Then a local millage could be considered, if required.

The cost of another election is small compared to the total amount of money involved.

Do not override the benefits provided by the Headlee Amendment.

Tie an orange ribbon around your mailbox to show your feeling of value of the Headlee Amendment. I did.

Robert Heazlit

Against override

I believe we should vote against the Headlee override and vote for saving the taxpayers' money.

By privatizing services and cutting waste, we still can give our children a quality education.

Jim Sherman

I've been a constant reader of John Haire's Cass City Chronicle for over quarter century. We met at a convention that long ago and started swapping newspapers.

He titles his publisher's column, "The Haire Net". I've quoted him before in Jottings, but I really liked his whole column recently on trends and theories. Here's what he said:

Health trends are like the stock market. Everyone has a theory and they change almost as often as Michigan's weather.

That's contrary to the popular conception of the medical community, which likes to be pictured as the ultimate in wary scientific skepticism before advancing programs designed to make us all healthier and longer lived.

A couple of long held theories handed down as fact recently went down the drain. The first was cholesterol. A reading over 300 was an invitation to a heart attack, prepare your last will and testament. Now a story appears that a high cholesterol is not the real culprit. In fact an elevated cholesterol can be helpful if it's the right type. It's probably that most doctors don't subscribe to this theory, at least not yet, and given a choice I will take my chances with a reading under 200.

It's common knowledge that there are 2 types of personalities, A and B. A's are hyper, gung-ho persons with the drive associated with captains of industry and other movers and shakers. B's are passive, take-it-easy persons who go with the flow and never seem unduly upset about anything.

The A's were said to be heart attacks waiting to happen and the B's ready to celebrate a long, long life. It's been that way for 25 years. But just the other day I read a review that said, no, this theory is all wrong. There's no real advantage in the personality after all.

The article went on to talk about stress and how it is a factor, but I've forgotten just what this latest theory proclaims.

As I said in the beginning, this reminds me of the experts' view of the stock market. They take the known facts and form a theory to support them. When the stock market reacts differently they come up with another set of reasons to explain the phenomenon.

No matter what the theory, it can only deal in tendencies. Regardless of what the averages are, there will be plenty of exceptions to the rule. Take smoking. Smoking is not healthy and there has been enough research to indicate that there won't be a reversal such as the one concerning personalities and health is going through. You smoke and you're a cancer or heart attack candidate.

Yet, all of us know of the rare individual that smoked all of life and died of old age when in the 90's or beyond.

There's never been a study that I know of that takes a significant group and looks for the persons who never left the home area and never wanted to. The people who were supremely content with what they were doing and their life styles.

It's my opinion that these people live longer than any others. That's an ultra scientific survey based on 6 persons that I know.

When you get right down to it, one constant in all these health tendencies is that your chances for a long life are a whale of a lot better if mom and dad lived long, robust, healthy lives.

And even better if your grandparents did, too.

State needs new school priorities

Michigan needs new priorities, not new taxes, to provide more money for K-12 education.

This message is the theme of a pro-education campaign launched on May 22 by the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce, Associated Builders and Contractors of Michigan, National Federation of Independent Business, Michigan Merchants Council and Michigan Association of Home Builders.

The purpose of this public information campaign is to alert taxpayers that the Governor and Legislature have almost $300 million to spend due to projected budget surpluses.

Make no mistake, the money will be spent.

We think they should spend most of it on public schools ... and not raise our taxes!

The good news is that on May 23 a bipartisan majority of the Michigan Senate got the message. The Senate took no action to reverse a 20-year decline in education's share of the budget by voting 28 to 5 to increase the School Aid Fund by almost $300 million from existing revenues, without a sales tax increase.

In fiscal year 1970-71 the State School Aid Fund appropriation was $502.1 million.

In 1988-89, 18 years later, the appropriation was $503.8 million.

In 1970-71 School Aid was 29.8 percent of General Fund spending. By 1989-89, School Aid fell to just 7.4 percent of General Fund spending.

No wonder there have been such substantial increases in our property taxes over the years to fund education.

During this same time period, General Fund spending was up for community colleges (345 percent), higher education (305 percent), social services (413 percent), mental health (307 percent) and corrections (1,916 percent).

If we invest more in educating our children, perhaps we could spend less on welfare, corrections and other public services.

Let's make education state government's number one budget priority -- without further tax increases.

James Barrett, President
Michigan State Chamber of Commerce

Vote no on both

The tax and spend LIBERALS are not only in Massachusetts, but they are right here in Clarkston!

WE need MORE tax money!

Isn't this what we voted AGAINST last fall and when we voted FOR the Headlee Amendment?

But we need a new high school or you children will not learn anything!

This is the same issue we voted down four years ago, eight years ago and several times before that.

With a DECLINING enrollment and a low birth rate only someone who uses NEW MATH could come to the conclusion that we need new schools.

TAX AND SPEND, TAX AND SPEND .... without accountability is the same verse we have continued to hear from the education lobby. Meanwhile, our ACT and other test scored have continued to decline.

Yes, our teachers' salaries are below average for Oakland County, but they are in the top 10 percent for Michigan, the top five percent for the United States and the top one percent in the world. The benefits they receive are extravagant. With all this money we spend, why do our students do so poorly?

Please vote NO on both proposals and encourage others to do the same.

After you have defeated this latest tax and spend issue, please vote to remove any current board member. We deserve some fresh methods of controlling spending and DEMANDING more education for our children, not just the same old verse, TAX AND SPEND, TAX AND SPEND .....

Richard Schmaltz

P.S. If you need to ask what this guy has done to help education in Clarkston, you haven't lived here very long.

'If it Fitz . . .'

McPolled

Jim Fitzgerald

The young woman with the clipboard stopped in front of me. "Why are you here?"

"I'm sorry," I said, and pointed to the small pair of legs on my table. "I'm here because of her."

I'm not sure why I said I was sorry; probably because of the ketchup. I'd just failed someone I loved, and I was feeling sorry.

Ordinarily, I would have been thrilled by the young woman's questions. She also wanted to know where I was from, what newspapers I read, what TV and radio stations I listen to and where I get most of my news. I was being polled!

Every day there's a new poll in the newspaper or on TV. Polls are always telling me such fascinating things as what percentage of the nation believes Ollie North earned the $15,000 cash in his tin box from selling puppies. (Two percent believe it, and they all have restraint straps attached to their beds.)

I never understood how there could be so many polls with not one of them seeking my opinion. I never even knew anyone who had been polled. I was smelling a sham, but here was this young woman to bolster my confidence in the process through which the media create headlines on slow days.

Posturing next to 3-year-old

Did she work for Gallup? "I work for McDonald's," she said. I shouldn't have been surprised; I was having lunch in the McDonald's in Lapeer. I was disappointed to realize the poll was merely a marketing tool to evaluate advertising. My learned opinions would not be reflected in a front-page report that would influence thousands of people to follow me into the sea.

Instead, I might merely influence some McDonald's executive to increase newspaper advertising because an old guy in the Lapeer franchise said he would be lost without his morning Free Press, especially while trying to use the ketchup in a McDonald's.

But, what the heck, it was a chance to impress a poll taker. So I told her I not only get all my news from the Free Press, but also my income - I work there! She looked so impressed I expected her to ask, "How many customers on your route?"

But her eyes did brighten when I said I was from Detroit. There are dozens of McDonald's in the Detroit area, but I'd traveled 65 miles to Lapeer outlet. Why? Better food, faster service? That's when I pointed to the two little legs on my table. They belonged to Tricia, my 3-year-old granddaughter. She lives in Lapeer and I am the type of dedicated baby-sitter who refused to be discouraged by any amount of distance between my home and the baby's. Also, I charge mileage.

Only Tricia's legs were readily visible because she was lying her her back on the booth seat. This is the ideal position when you want to shove a Happy Meal up your nose. At the moment, she was angry because there was no ketchup to dip her French fries into before dropping them on her clothing.

Crazy about ketchup packets

Which brings us to my failure. There was plenty of ketchup on our table, but it was in those little plastic packets. I can't open those miserable packets the way McDonald's intends. I can't read the dinky words that say which corner to tear, and I ultimately try to tear all four corners, first with my fingers, then with my teeth.

But the packets are too slippery, or too tough, or too something. I realize most other people can open these packets. I don't know why I can't. All I know is THEY MAKE ME CRAZY. And they embarrass me in front of Tricia. She wants ketchup, and her dumb grandpa can't give it to her.

Unless I also give it to everyone within sight. Ultimately my crazed condition prompts me to rip a packet violently through the center, and the ketchup becomes airborne. That's when I'm always grateful to have the morning Free Press in my lap.

McDonald's poll taker showed me on her survey form that there is a square to be checked for adults who are there because of children. But there is no place to record the number of adults who scream and hit the table with their heads because of the ketchup packets. There should be. I want to know what percentage of old poops fail their grandchildren under a golden arch.

The Roads We Travel

Technology and traffic

Brent Bair

I've commented on how technology may change our vehicles and the road surfaces they ride on, but how about the traffic control devices such as signs and signals?

Surely in this age of high technology we should be able to make signals work better to provide for a smoother flow of traffic.

Actually there are changes in the works. The obvious direction will be more computerization. Computers have been used with signals for some time.

For example, at the 12 Mile and Southfield intersection, wire loops in the pavement detect when a vehicle passes over them and sends the information to a computerized traffic controller.

Based on this input regarding the number of vehicles in the various lanes, the computer can adjust signal timing to meet traffic needs.

In some cities there have been demonstration projects to link up and computerize all the signals in the system, thus allowing for adjustments to make the entire system work better.

The most advanced systems of this type are in Sydney, Australia, and Glasgow, Scotland. With the advent of faster, more powerful, and less expensive computers, we may see this type computer-controlled signals in our area in the future.

The loop detectors in the pavement are inexpensive and reliable but only provide information about one spot. Computerized image processing will probably become heavily used in traffic monitoring in the future.

Television cameras will scan segments of highway and computers will interpret the images to determine the number and type of vehicles using the system and their current speed. These cameras also will be used for automatic incident detection, watching for such things as stalled cars or accidents.

As methods of monitoring traffic flow improves, so will methods of conveying information to the drivers.

We'll see more of the variable message signs such as the SCANDI system signs you may have observed on the freeways near downtown Detroit. Motorists will be advised of accidents ahead and of alternative routes before they get stuck in the stop-and-go-traffic. Roadside radio transmitters also may be used, and routing information may even be conveyed to on-board computers with mapping capabilities.

We may see more freeway ramp control, commonly referred to as metering. Through the use of signals, new traffic is kept from entering a freeway until the surveillance devices indicate that the volumes already on the freeway have dropped to a point where additional traffic can be handled.

This not only encourages drivers to seek other routes but also changes their commuting habits by leaving a little earlier. I doubt that we'll see these in the Clarkston area, but they may be installed around downtown Detroit, especially if the downtown area continues to redevelop.

He gets results

As long time friends of Bob Wyatt, we have come to know him as an extremely hard working and intelligent individual.

Since Bob has two children in the school system, he has a vested interest in the quality and future of education in Clarkston.

He recently put his expertise in engineering and facilities management to use when he co-chaired the Facilities Review Advisory Committee for Clarkston Community Schools.

He knows, first hand, the sorry state that our schools are in.

We endorse Mr. Wyatt for school board, not because he is a friend, but because he has shown, through past work experience, the ability to deal with bureaucracy and to cut through red tape.

He is a person who gets results.

Several years ago, Bob helped lead the fight against a hazardous waste incinerator near Lake Angelus.

Please support him in his fight against another form of "hazardous waste." Our tax dollars are being wasted.

As a result, our facilities and quality of education are declining rapidly.

The effects of this waste could be very hazardous to our children's futures.

Please vote for Bob Wyatt.

Mr. and Mrs. David R. Kovacs

Caring candidate

We are urging you to vote on June 12, and we are endorsing Bob Wyatt as a candidate for the school board.

We have known Bob for nine years. He is the person we need to help with the passage of a state government bill that will distribute our tax dollars fairly to our schools.

He has the education and experience we need to assess the school buildings for structural problems and cost effective solutions.

Most of all, he cares about a quality education for his children, my children and your children.

Show that you care too, by voting!

Urging yes vote

Last June the voters of the Clarkston School District approved a millage increase which allowed the district to collect a total of 38.9 mills.

If the Headlee amendment is not overridden, the total millage the district can collect will be reduced to 34.9 mills.

A "Yes" vote on June 12 will allow the school district to collect the 38.8 mills that "we" the voters have already approved.

Without the override approval, the Clarkston School District will realize a total decrease of $1.8 million in operational funds for the 1989-90 school year. I strongly urge a "Yes" vote on June 12.

David L. Partlo,
Class of 1973

Vote yes twice

June 12, 1989, will be a day of decision for the Clarkston community. The community schools need support for two ballot issues:

1. Override the Headlee Amendment. The results would allow the community schools to levy millage already approved by the Clarkston community.

Vote YES on Proposition No. 1.

2. The bond issue to raise $68.8 million, solving current and future space problems. The bond issue is to be used to construct a new high school, new elementary school, and to eliminate portable classrooms -- thus providing equal facilities for all students.

Vote YES on Proposition No. 2.

As a community based service group concerned for the future of Clarkston and its schools, I strongly urge your support for Propositions 1 and 2 on June 12.

Mary Forst, President
Clarkston Jaycees

Endorsement for school candidate

I am writing this letter to encourage members of the Clarkston school district to vote next Tuesday, June 12, and to vote for Bob Wyatt for a seat on the Clarkston school board.

Bob and his wife, Christine, have lived in the Clarkston area for 12 years and have two children in the school system. Bob wants quality education for our children with reasonable taxes.

He has 15 years of management, budgeting and employee relations experience at GM Truck and Bus. He is a licensed professional engineer capable of handling our pertinent and critical facility problems.

He is aware that Lansing has been short-changing the local school districts and is eager to work with other school boards to let our legislators know that we want and deserve our fair share of tax monies put back into education.

Bob is active in church, school and community issues and is endorsed by the Clarkston Education Association. He is committed to getting our fair share for local schools from Lansing.

Won't you consider casting your vote next Tuesday for Bob Wyatt?

Call for swift action

With the recent accident along M-15 north of I-75 involving a teenager seriously injured, the question is again raised on how long and how many injuries or even deaths will it take to gain traffic improvements along the M-15 corridor.

The growth north of I-75 in Independence Township has been very rapid. As residents of Deerwood, we have seen a second phase of more than 100 homes almost completed, a third phase of more than 150 homes is just starting construction; a new adjunct subdivision of more than 40 homes is also now under construction.

Although the township master plan calls for low density residential beyond these areas, it is also patiently obvious at rush hour that Independence Township is not the only source of traffic on this road.

To be sure, development in Brandon Township and beyond is raising traffic levels, particularly at critical morning and evening rush hours to unsafe levels at potential conflict points such as Amy Drive, Cranberry Lake Road and Deer Ridge Drive.

Further, development commercially of Auburn Hills is but a precursor to the use of M-15 as a major trunk line to the residential "rural north."

Yes, before we realize it, M-15 traffic volume will grow even faster, to more unmanageable, congested and potentially dangerous levels.

The Board of Directors of Deerwood Association, on behalf of its residents, strongly urges that MDOT provide necessary and timely improvements to M-15, whether by signalization and/or widening to make the highway safe now and in the future.

We can no longer afford the risk of people's lives on this very necessary access to our homes. We request that you make the studies, perform the analyses, recommend the changes and do the construction and/or modifications as soon as possible. The lives of thousands of Michigan people depend on your swift action each and every day.

Richard C. Oppmann, President
Deerwood Association

Student supports Headlee override

I am a junior at Clarkston Senior High School, and I have been formulating many questions and concerns about the district.

At first I was going to write all my questions and concerns into this letter; then I asked myself, "What good would it do?"

So instead, I'll just share some of my views on three vital issues.

When I first heard about the Headlee Rollback, I wasn't quite sure what it was, as most people probably felt, so I did some research on it.

After doing some research I now understand the Headlee Rollback, and I can see that we need to vote against it if the district is to survive.

If the rollback does take effect, the district will be in a situation like it was a year ago, maybe even worse.

I also understand that the recent increase in property valuation means more taxes to pay, but until the district goes out-of-formula the increase is nothing for the district.

So the question I'm asking you is:

Should you take your frustration over the high taxes out on us students instead of the lawmakers in Lansing?

The second concern I have is on the bond issue for building a new high school. I feel strongly that the district needs a new high school since the current building is out of date and too small to handle the capacity of students in the 10th to 12th grades.

Although I haven't seen the plans for the new building, I am hoping that it will have adequate facilities and supplies to support a high standard of education for many years into the future. So should the students of the district suffer in the inadequate building now, or should we start now to build a better place of education?

My final concern is that of the upcoming school board election. As I have gone through my research on the Headlee Amendment, I have seen many problems in the district that have not been addressed by the current administration.

What this district needs is board members who can see farther than one year down the road and find solutions to problems before they can drastically affect the schools. So I'll just say that when you elect the new members to the board, try to remember what they will do and not what they say they will do.

An Awful Sad Spider

by Regina White

A tear went down the spider's cheek,
The life she led was dull and bleak,
All she wanted was a pat on the back,
That's all a spider could lack,
One day she asked a man for a pat,
But he patted too hard and she went
SPLAT!

An Awful Sad Spider

by Regina White

A tear went down the spider's cheek,
The life she led was dull and bleak,
All she wanted was a pat on the back,
That's all a spider could lack,
One day she asked a man for a pat,
But he patted too hard and she went
SPLAT!

Historical society supports schools

During a recent program at which older Clarkston citizens related their experiences and remembrances of the '20s and '30s, the panel was asked about significant political issues that were important during their early adult life.

You guessed it! The school system and the new school building (the present junior high) had the community in an uproar about the cost of supporting education.

Although none of us are comfortable supporting the taxation of our hard-earned income, we must take care that we analyze the individual millage proposals and support those that are important to our community.

Do you know of any institution that is more important to the American way of life than that of public education? Our concept of creating a society that is nurtured and supported by the citizenry depends heavily on that body of citizens being aware of what is taking place around them and being able to interpret those events that are taking place.

Because of increasing property values in the Clarkston community, from which we will eventually benefit, the Headlee Amendment places more of the burden of immediate school expenses on residents of the community. It's like having your money in a bank that is closed for a holiday weekend while you need grocery money for unexpected guests. Sorry! No automatic tellers.

This month we are asked to reaffirm a previous commitment of support for operating expenses for our local schools. This is not an increase in funds, but the replacement of funds taken out of our budget by state law.

If you don't care for the law, I feel that you should still contact (state legislators) Claude Trim, Mat Dunaskiss and Richard Fessler and express your opinion.

Another issue on the ballot is the approval of bonds to build additional buildings for a projected increase in the student population of the community.

Look south on I-75. The families who provide employees for those new offices and industries going up along the freeway aren't going to buy homes in Pontiac and place their children in those schools. They are going to choose Clarkston, Ortonville, Davisburg and similar communities on the periphery of the Metro area.

Withholding funds from the required school expansion isn't going to stop the flow of students. The funds will be diluted further and further until our children's education is diluted further and further and the community feels the impact of students who, lacking challenges in the classroom, seeks challenges in the streets.

Growing up in the south and working among automobile industry people from this state, I was always impressed with the exceptional quality of Michigan's schools.

Hearing some of the horror stories that are coming from surveys of our nation's education systems, we must now look further west for those communities that support awe inspiring schools.

Maybe we've been too lax in giving our legislators directions for the appropriation of state funds.

According to Randy Zilz for the Oakland Press, in 1968 the state budget was $2.2 billion with $500 million going directly to education. In 1988, the budget was $15.8 billion with a whole $503 million to education. In Oakland County, Clarkston ranks 25 of 28 school districts in per pupil property tax and state aid.

Our first task is to make funds available to support our local schools. The second task is to bring our state laws into line with the priority of funding school systems that educate our children ... not just for the "changing marketplace and global economy" or to provide the "curriculum the business world is demanding," but for the practical purpose of living in a much more sophisticated society and feeling comfortable in dealing with life within that society.

Vote to support our schools!

Larry Gilleland

Great Fun Daze crew, organizer

I'm a new Clarkston resident. I have aspirations of becoming a good long distance runner, I was a member of the 1989 Fun Daze Race Committee.

My advertising business in Detroit is "street oriented." I want to confess that I responded in a rather cynical tone to a runner who saw my "official" shirt in the crowd at Fun Daze and asked me if I knew if anyone had turned in a crumpled up $20 and $10 bill.

He lost his money and was persistent. I must admit I was not much help.

However, the Race Committee Chairman announced the problem over the loudspeaker -- the money was found and returned immediately.

Downtown Detroit has its good and exciting points, but if a runner dropped $30 by Hart Plaza, I don't think it would turn up quite as easily.

The 1989 Fun Daze experience also gave me an opportunity to experience another facet of our community I had yet to see.

Clarkston High School's Vice Principal Brent Cooley, the Race Committee Chairperson, is a good organizer.

Students at the High School are rarely in view to middle aged people of Clarkston. The kids were a terrific help -- and its no fun to get up at 6 a.m. on a rainy Saturday morning.

My hat's off to Brent Cooley, the student volunteers, the Rotary Club, to Clarkston! Glad to be here!

Clarkston AUTO WASH Co. RECONDITIONING

Have you experienced our new concept in car washing? The Clarkston Auto Wash Co. proudly uses the latest technology in automatic car washing and waxing systems. Our equipment is all soft cloth to gently wash away your car's dirt and grime. Only fresh water is used throughout the cleaning and rinsing process. To complete the cycle our attendants, along with our high speed blower, will detail and remove any excess water. Your vehicle then leaves our facility both clean & dry!

We welcome trucks, full-size vans and vehicles with running boards. The Clarkston Auto Wash Co. offers a punch card program where a customer receives a free wash after every 10 washes with us. We also provide coupon books for our patrons' convenience at discounted prices.

And now The Clarkston Auto Wash Co. has added a new service! We now have available a complete Auto Reconditioning Center located at the auto wash. We offer custom detailing including hand buffing & waxing, interior cleaning, Teflon paint sealant glaze, Scotchguard carpet & upholstery protector, tar removal, handwashing and engine cleaning just to name a few options. Packages are offered for the best combination and pricing or you may purchase individual services.

These services will not only beautify and protect your investment but also enhance its resale value. Please call for an appointment for further details.

We're eager to please and the friendly, courteous, top quality service you receive from us will prove it. The Clarkston Auto Wash Co. & Reconditioning Center is conveniently located (away from the construction) on Dixie Hwy., across from the A & P, between M-15 and Parview Dr. Stop by and see us soon!

Get bureaucrats not school kids

The Blue Ribbon Kids Committee has spent considerable time and effort in the distribution of information to residents in the Clarkston community school district.

We have gone to great lengths to ensure that any and all information we distribute is factual and that the facts we share do not attempt to mislead anyone. So, for clarification purposes, I would like to restate several points which I believe are critical for our children, schools and community.

1. The state bureaucrats have been correct in their estimates that they can shift the burden of school funding to the local level and that local citizens will assume the responsibility. These are the same bureaucrats who tricked us into believing that the lottery would generate more funds for schools, too.

The question is what we should do about it. It has been suggested by some that we need to send a message to Lansing by saying no to the millage in Clarkston. The idea is that if we quit funding schools the state will be forced to do it.

Well, look around. Detroit schools are a mess; Pontiac is broke as are many other districts across the state, and the prediction is that hundreds more will share a similar fate if substantive school aid reform does not occur soon.

With such an acute problem already, what has the state been able to do? NOTHING. If the city of Detroit with one-sixth of the state's public school children can't get the attention of the bureaucrats, what will the suffering of 6,000 more children in Clarkston accomplish? LESS THAN NOTHING. WE WILL ALL SUFFER FOR IT.

2. How well does the school district do with their money? As per the June 4 issue of the Oakland Press, Clarkston is the lowest in per pupil funding in Oakland County.

We hear how bad things are in Pontiac, and yet they have $841 more per pupil than Clarkston. That would amount to more than $5 million for us.

The Clarkston school district board of education and staff have done a tremendous job of holding this district together so far, but our facilities are falling apart and bulging at the seams.

We can't put off doing something about this situation any longer, nor should we continue to expect miracles with no money. If you want a good school system, then you should be prepared to pay for it.

3. Why must we override the Headlee Amendment? The Headlee was intended to ensure that the increased costs of government spending do not exceed the rate of inflation.

While I agree with this completely, it doesn't work at all for "in-formula" school districts like Clarkston. If we had received the 4 to 4.1 percent inflationary increase last year instead of 1.2 percent and could look forward to a 4 percent increase this year, the district's position would be much better.

The problem is with the state's funding formula. There is a fixed rate per mill and per student. When our property values (SEV) increase above the rate of inflation the mills are reduced as per the Headlee Amendment.

The reduced mills are fed into the state aid formula and our state aid is reduced. To get the maximum benefit from the state, we need to keep our mills high. In this way, some of the increased costs of operating our schools come from the state. Without it, less comes from you and even less from the state. The schools lose at both ends.

4. What will the millage cost us? For most, the cost will be much less due to the Homestead Property Tax Credit. For most senior citizens there will be no additional cost. For a general taxpayer making from $40,000 to $80,000 per year in salary, who lives in a home worth about $200,000 ($100,000 SEV), the tax increase would be about $613.

5. Is the millage worth the cost? Well, if you have children in a public school, the answer should be obvious. For the rest of you, it's an investment in the future.

Your home is probably your biggest investment, and each year you spend hundreds, even thousands, of dollars in maintenance and improvements to protect and enhance its value. A good school system is an even better use of funds.

The value of your home is market driven. High demand ensures a fast sale and a higher price. For buyers with children, a good school system is often the deciding factor.

Just recall the market for homes before the millage passed in June, 1988. Homes weren't moving as fast, and it was reflected in the selling price.

When "push comes to shove" and you're ready to sell, would you spend $600 to ensure the sale? Of course!

Protect investment

There isn't any other expenditure of this size that you could make on your home each year that will have as much impact as being able to say that your home is located in a district with good schools. Just ask a realtor. If you don't care enough about our kids, then at least protect your investment.

And by the way, when you tell your friends how much your home went up in value, and your accountant tells you about your tax refund, remember that the school taxes were a part of the reason for it. You have to give to receive.

We must take care of our children first. They are our future. Let's work to initiate substantive tax reform, but don't punish the kids now for what the state has done to you. Pick on someone your size -- the bureaucrats -- they have it coming. In the interim, help the kids now and vote YES, YES on June 12.

William Bliesath

Preserve schools

If you took the annual tour of the homes in Clarkston this past weekend, no doubt you were impressed by the restoration and renewal of these beautiful buildings.

At great expense, their dignity has been preserved. We, in this community, take pride in the continued care given to bringing the past into the present. We treasure the memory of those who have lived and loved in these homes.

Perhaps our Clarkston schools should be included in this annual inspection. Think of the benefits we could enjoy from this kind of keen interest and concern by our community adults.

Do we treasure the memory of all the teachers and administrators who have labored with dedication to provide us with excellence in education? Our schools have been preserved and maintained over the past years to meet the needs of thousands of students. But we cannot relax our efforts.

The challenge to continue providing the best education possible for today's students and of facing the great demands of the 21st century, is ours now. It is time for the renewal of old school buildings and the construction of new ones.

We hope future generations will continue to value and preserve the traditions of quality. And we plead with every responsible, intelligent adult to make the needs of our educational institutions top priority.

We need your YES vote on the bond issue for new schools and on the Headlee rollback so we can collect the full millage amount approved by the voters last year.

Please don't hesitate to get all the facts concerning these vital issues. Call 625-5111 or 625-3111.

Mary White

Continue school's "good" status

I've worked in Clarkston Schools for 16 years now and have always marveled at the community support of our schools.

Time and again the voters have been asked for support and have responded overwhelmingly, as evidenced only last year. Once more this spring we come to you for support. This time however, the reason is somewhat different.

This time it's not a millage increase being sought; you've already said yes to that last year.

This time we simply need to have last year's approved increase levied. The way to accomplish this is by a "call-back" in Lansing, not a "no vote" in Clarkston.

Your positive support in the past has been rewarded. Clarkston has always been touted as a "good" school system. Now even the state and federal governments recognize this.

The State of Michigan has recognized Sashabaw Junior High and Clarkston Junior High as state exemplary schools.

Most recently, Sashabaw Junior High has received national exemplary recognition from the United States Department of Education in Washington D.C.

Community support on June 12th will allow quality education to continue in Clarkston.

Cynthia Hartwell

Not all agree with CEA endorsement

On the outside chance that some voters may find it helpful to use political endorsements of school board candidates as a way of helping them make their choices before going to the polls on June 12, I would like to explain that a handful of members of the Clarkston Education Association were the individuals who decided for a body of 300 who would be endorsed by this organization.

This in no way means that the membership might necessarily be behind the choices that were made by the Screening and Endorsing Committee.

As a matter of fact, many members do not find the endorsed candidates to be those that they believe to be the most qualified for the job.

When going to the polls on June 12, I urge each and

Christian school sues state board

"To send in a demanded piece of paper ... we would acknowledge that the state has authority to demand that paper," Vanaman said. "(In addition), the information is attached to a requirement system; it can be used against you ... to close the school."

"The Michigan Constitution doesn't mention private schools," said Vanaman.

"It says the board of education shall supervise public schools. Our contention, based on that statement, is that the 1921 law is unconstitutional," Vanaman added. In 1921, a law was passed granting the MDOE superintendent supervision over public, private and parochial schools.

Among those filing the suit against the MDOE are the Dixie Baptist Church; Berean Baptist Church in Adrian, Bible Baptist Church in New Buffalo, Lewis Avenue Baptist Church in Temperance; Danara Boehm, a teacher at Berean Baptist; and Joseph and Donna Amadee of the Clarkston area, who have children attending Springfield Christian Academy.

In addition, the group has written letters to other Christian schools to ask that they support the group's position.

State school officials have said they're not sure how long it would take for hearings to be held and for steps to be taken to close the schools.

"I doubt that anyone in Clarkston when thinking about Paul Vanaman or the Dixie Baptist Church would think of us as law breakers," he added.

Girls soccer clinic

Girl soccer players may be interested in a clinic offered by the Independence Township Parks and Recreation Department this month.

Players must sign up at the parks and rec. office, 90. N. Main St., Clarkston, by Monday, June 12.

The clinic runs on Monday, Wednesday, Friday, June 19, 21 and 23, and on Monday and Wednesday, June 26 and 28.

For kids ages 5, 6, 7 and 8, the cost is $15 and the time is 4-5 p.m. each day. For girls ages 9, 10, 11, 12 and 13, the cost is $25, and the time is 4-6 p.m. each day.

Sessions will be taught by teen soccer players, who will help players improve ball and goalie skills. Scrimmages will also help players learn the tactics of the game.

The clinic is a great way to prepare for the fall soccer season which starts Sept. 6. Registration for fall soccer is July 31 to Aug. 12.

Gritty Wolves lose district final

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

As players quietly filed out of the dugout Monday afternoon, Clarkston High baseball coach Roy Warner spoke of his team's many accomplishments this season.

The last of which was reaching the district championship game at Pontiac Jaycee Park Monday against Greater Oakland Activities League champion Waterford Kettering.

"We played pretty good ... to get here," the coach said. "It took a lot of chipping away to get here."

Not blessed with power hitters in 1989, the Wolves got by with pitching, defense and a score-any-way-possible offense.

Mistakes cost Clarkston in the championship game against Kettering (the Wolves also finished second to the Captains in the GOAL) as it fell behind early and was forced to abandon its offensive philosophy.

Heading into the bottom of the seventh inning, Kettering led 6-0. But the game was far from over.

Corey Olsen and Erik Mackson walked to start the inning before Larry Liford grounded into a force play at second for the first out.

Liford stole second a few pitches later to put runners on second and third. Doug Lederman plated both runners with a line-shot double. Darin Brandt followed with an RBI single for the Wolves' third and final run.

"In a championship game you can't make any mistakes," the coach said. "When you get behind it takes a lot of offense away."

The loss drops the Wolves' record to 17-10.

On Saturday, Clarkston earned the right to play in the championship game with a narrow 3-1 win over GOAL foe Lake Orion at Pontiac's Jaycee Park.

Ben Underwood went all the way for the victors and fanned 10 batters while allowing only five hits. Olsen was the hitting hero for the day with two hits and two runs batted in.

Lake Orion scored first in the game with its run in the bottom of the second inning.

The Dragons converted a single, stolen base plus a throwing error and a groundout into a run. That was all they could muster off Underwood and the Wolves.

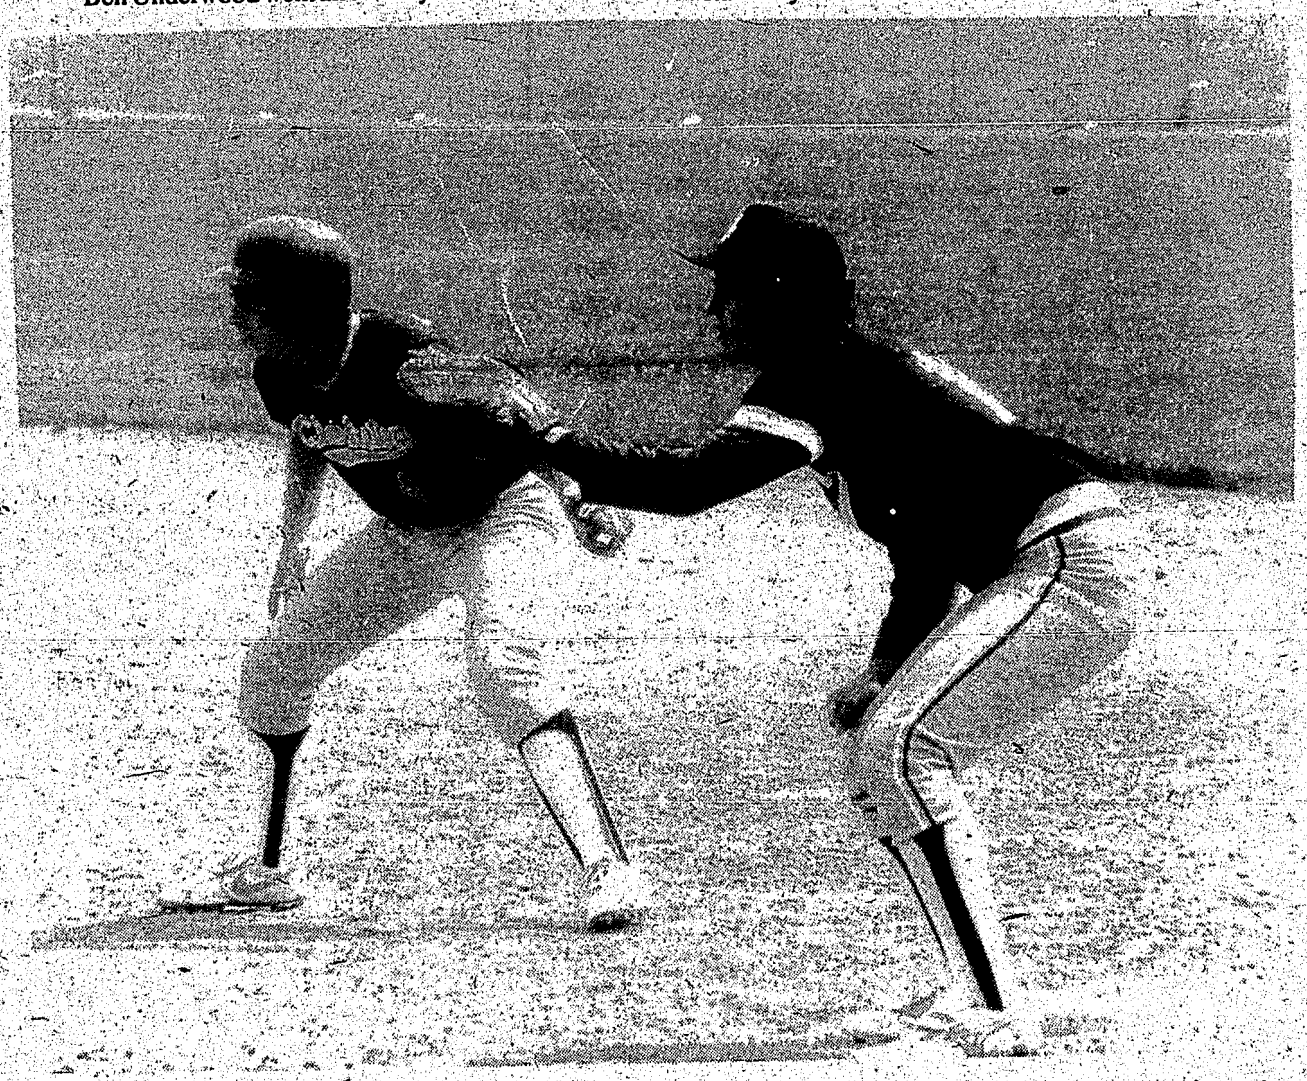
Clarkston went out in front for good in the top of the fourth on four consecutive singles. Underwood led off with a hit, he was followed by Carson and then Liford who loaded the bases with his single.

Olsen then poked one up the middle to produce a 2-1 lead for the Wolves.

Mackson walked with one out in the sixth inning to begin another Clarkston scoring threat. Lederman followed with a single. Brandt then plated Mackson with a single.

Underwood finished the game strong, striking out the final two batters.

"It was a good ballgame," the coach said. "No mistakes by either team."



DARIN BRANDT, leading off first base against Lake Orion on Saturday, finishes the season with two runs batted in during the Wolves' final two games of the season.

Time Out

Peter Auchter

Reading the morning Detroit Free Press Tuesday shocked me. No, not the impending civil war stories in China, but the sight of my all-time favorite sportswriter Mike Downey.

To say he's changed would be putting it mildly. Did LA (that's Los Angeles in non-hip lingo) ever do a number on this poor guy.

In case you're unfamiliar with the Great One (no, not Gretzsky but Downey), he used to write sports for the Freep (that's more lingo, meaning the Free Press) before the Pretty Good One (that's Mitch Albom) arrived on the scene.

Since he moved to LA to write for The Times, I've kept up on his work by reading his weekly column in The Sporting News. Unfortunately, columnists are not pictured in that publication. Maybe most of the writers look like Downey used to, I don't know.

Ever since the Detroit Tigers won the World Series in '84, I've had a commemorative poster of a Free Press cover (the one with Kirk Gibson raising his arms in victory during the final game) with a column written by Downey on it. His picture accompanying the story is classic sportswriter stuff. We're talking Oscar Madison all the way. No offense meant toward Jack Klugman, though.

Just the kind of guy we non-Robert Redford looking people can look up too. I was proud of him. All through school, I thought, "I could be this guy."

Now, I'm not so sure. He's gone Hollywood. I don't think I'd fit into that mold. I also don't think I'd like wearing a rug (that's lingo for, well you figure it out).

It's eerie. It's spooky and unfortunately it's real.

When will it all end?

First we have the Pete Rose scandal ripping through baseball. Then Sparky Anderson leaves because the Tigers' losing makes him sick. Then Mike Schmidt cries like a new-born baby during his retirement announcement.

Where have all the good guys gone? Will nobody step to the forfront?

Oh well, at least the Pistons are still playing. Maybe some good guys (make that bad good guys) will come through in the clutch.

For my sake, I hope somebody does.

Runners save their best for last

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

With competitors from across Michigan looking on, the girls track team put on its best showing of the season Saturday at the Class A state meet.

"They picked a good time to run well," said Coach Gordie Richardson of his state champs. "They did very, very well."

Senior Nichole Chinavare certainly would be hard pressed to turn in a better effort, she ran a leg on the winning 3200-meter relay team and then had enough left to win the 1600 run as well.

In the 1600, Chinavare outdistanced second-place finisher Julie Banks of Utica by a 10th of a second. Her winning time was 5:12.2.

The 3200 relay team of Carrie Roeser, Jenny Mahler, Chinavare and Sonya Schaffer won with a time of 9:22.6 outracing second place Troy by almost two seconds. The 1600 relay team placed seventh.

As a result, the Wolves accumilated 25 points and finished sixth best in the state.

While the meet closed out a successful track season for the rest of the team, one senior on the squad continues to compete with a meet this weekend in Indianapolis, Ind.

Chinavare was selected to represent the state in the 1600 run during the Midwest Meet of Champions. State champions from the Midwest who are in their senior years earn invitations to the event, the coach said.

"It's really a great honor," Richardson said. "It's really a nice thing."

every voter to cast their ballot for those individuals who are INDEPENDENT thinkers -- those who are not influenced by others as to how they should think.

We need more people on the board who are going to make the best possible decisions for the school district because they believe in their own convictions -- not the convictions of someone who might be leading them in the wrong direction.

And we definitely need individuals who are not afraid to say NO when they are being asked to make decisions they do not believe in.

Whatever your decisions may be regarding this election, please take a few moments of your time to go to the polls and vote.

Override necessary

During the 30 years I have taught in Clarkston, I have observed many changes. Our curriculum has been evolving to meet the needs of today's world. Our schools have become the base to meet the needs of the community and family.

The children have become more sophisticated and knowledgeable, and yet over the 30 years two things have not changed.

The public schools have been battered with blame for young people who are not prepared to meet the needs of the workplace. The second thing that has not changed is the financial network.

The Clarkston system has always been near the bottom of Oakland County in the amount of money spent on the education of its children and the amount paid to teachers.

Clarkston Schools have always been frugal with money management. No one knows that better than the classroom teacher. And yet the teacher consistently continues to show integrity in the classroom. Education is happening. Test scores are high, and drop out rates are very low.

Michigan law continues to take money away each year under the Headlee Amendment. The schools just cannot keep up with it and maintain present programs.

Until the legislators in Lansing find an equitable way to finance education, schools will continue to be forced to go to the voters.

The override of the Headlee Amendment will give the Clarkston Schools all of the millage money that voters have already approved.

Whatever the vote result, we will have the kind of schools that the voters are willing to pay for.

School needs help

Those of us who are concerned about quality education for our children can easily become discouraged by facing the potential of yet another cutback in staff and curriculum offering for the coming year.

Until the Michigan Legislature develops a better method for funding schools, Clarkston kids will continue to lose, and the state funds will continue to gain. Ten years ago, 26 percent of the state budget was designated for education. Today, schools receive only seven percent of the state budget.

On June 12, you will be asked to approve the levy on the entire millage rate previously authorized by voters (38.8 mills). The Headlee rollback, which has reduced our millage rate, significantly reduces the amount of state aid we can receive due to being an in-formula school. Again, the state gains, and Clarkston kids lose!

The second school issue is a $68.8 bond issue to build a new high school and elementary school and to renovate and add to other existing buildings. The present overcrowded situation and projected growth demands that we make more room now.

The other advantage to building big now is to take advantage of the State of Michigan School Bond Loan Fund. This fund allows us to borrow a large portion of the funds at a greatly reduced millage rate. At last, the state pays and Clarkston kids could gain!

In addition, the state will have to provide rebates to many of the voters on the additional mills. Senior citizens, whose taxes exceed 3.5 percent of their household income, are entitled to 100 percent rebates up to $1,200. Rebates are also available to families whose tax exceeds 3.5 percent of their income.

Clarkston students risk losing 16.5 classroom teachers in already overcrowded classes. In addition, they would lose a teacher in our CAT program; special teachers for elementary music, physical education, foreign language, key boarding; media specialists; counselors and social workers.

Use this opportunity to force the state of Michigan to pay more and to put our students on the winning side again. Vote YES twice on June 12.

What's in a name

Cranberries are as American as apple pie, but when the pilgrims arrived in the new world they had no name for the tart fruit.

The colonists believed the plant's flowers vaguely resembled the heads of cranes.

They soon dubbed the plant the "crane-berry". In time the name was shortened to cranberry.

In-formula schools need rollbacks

-- The state of Michigan raises its support for prisons and entitlement programs and lowers its proportionate support for public education, taking advantage of inflation.

-- The state lowers its support of our schools when our local support rises through higher assessed valuations. (Bursley Formula). There is little gain even though we pay more in property taxes.

-- The state applies this formula only to the majority of school districts that have fewer resources, that is, those who really need it. Wealthier districts need and get no state help --when their valuations (SEVs) go up, their schools get more.

Not so with the "in-formula" districts like Waterford, Oxford, Lake Orion, Clarkston and Brandon: we pay more taxes and get less state aid, so our schools get the same. That's the main reason Birmingham can spend twice as much to educate their kids as we do.

-- The state (Headlee Amendment) lowers the millage rate when property values go up more than the cost of living. This keeps governmental units from spending more without passing higher taxes.

That's good. But it hurts "in-formula" schools twice who don't share proportionately the increases of higher property values and also have their millages arbitrarily lowered.

Complicated? You bet!

Fair? No way!

BUT! BUT! BUT!

But shall we penalize our kids because of this?

I PRAY GOD NOT!

I plan to vote for the Headlee rollback (on a tax rate we've already approved) and the bond issue in Clarkston because I want our kids to have a good education. I urge you to do the same in your community.

Robert Walters

P.S. When will our state law makers put kids (and thus our future as a state and a nation) above their political hides and special interest groups?

Too much traffic

The residents of Olde Sturbridge subdivision are becoming very concerned for the safety of ourselves and families as the result of yet another accident in a series of serious and fatal accidents which have occurred in the vicinity of Amy Drive and M-15 (in Independence Township).

Many of our residents already try to avoid using the Amy Drive exit at certain times of the day because of the uncertainty of exiting safely. The most recent accident, which occurred on May 20, 1989, continues to reinforce this concern.

Although many requests have been made to correct this situation, we understand that nothing to date has occurred because traffic counts and occurrences are not high enough.

It is difficult to believe that in a day and age of sophisticated technology, traffic engineering appears to rely on an archaic system based on numbers of accidents and worse yet, deaths.

One only needs to get behind the wheel of a car and try to negotiate a left turn from Amy Drive onto M-15 at peak traffic periods, dodging four lanes of north and southbound traffic, to realize that simple logic tells you "something must be done."

We hope that this most recent accident, as well as the concerns expressed by the residents in the area, send a loud message to the state to take immediate corrective action before more of us become another traffic statistic.

Board OKs $904,906 in repairs

Roofing bids from three companies were accepted unanimously Thursday, June 1, by the Clarkston Board of Education.

Also approved was $36,000 for repairs in replacing the fascia -- panels made of steel with porcelain finish that hang from the roof on Bailey Lake Elementary School.

Of the 12 contractors who bid for roofing repairs, Michigan Roofing Co. of Detroit was chosen to repair Clarkston High School, Andersonville Elementary and Clarkston Elementary, with a bid of $661,308.

Roofing Systems, Inc., of St. Clair is to perform the repairs at Clarkston Junior High School and the Special Services Building, with a bid of $121,649.

Royal Roofing Co. of Detroit, which bid $85,949, is to repair the Clarkston Learning Center and the Board of Education building.

The bond issue approved by voters last year is funding the repairs.

Replacement of the fascia panels on Bailey Lake Elementary was not in the original contract when the roof was repaired, but it was discovered the panels needed replacing after roofing repairs began.

Some of the panels were loosened during repair, and some of the clips holding the panels in place have begun to rust, said Conrad Bruce, director of personnel services.

"The panels are in an unsafe condition," said Bruce. "A panel has fallen on a custodian's truck and caused about $600 worth of damage."

The panels will be replaced with the same material used in other buildings within the district. The material is a weather-proof, plaster-like stucco, said Bruce.

THE CLARKSTON QUIZ

1: Will privatizing services in a school system save money?

Right Yes, by letting private companies bid for service contracts the school board can choose the most competent company for the best price -a good way to save money!
Example: Mt. Clemens school district will be saving $160,000 in 1989-90 by having accepted the lowest bid for student transportation.

2: Did the school board rush through the bond proposal evaluation?

Right Yes, some members of the Facilities Review Committee acknowledged that the evaluation was rushed through in order to put the bond issue on the June 12th ballot! Although we may need the bond issue, this is a poor way to plan on spending our 68.8 million dollars.

3: Who is the candidate for lower property taxes?

Right DOREEN M. WRIGHT

Millage proposal

What it says:

"Shall the maximum authorized millage rate of Clarkston Community Schools, Oakland County, Michigan, be approved for levy in 1989 without the reduction required by section 31 of article 9 of the state constitution of 1963?'

What it means:

Voters are asked to override the Headlee Amendment, a state law that automatically reduces the millage rate whenever property values increase at a higher rate than the rate of inflation.

Voters approved 38.83 mills for school operations in 1988, but in 1989, the the Headlee Amendment automatically reduces the rate to 34.95 operating mills. One mill is $1 for every $1,000 assessed property valuation.

Because the state school funding formula links state dollars to the number of mills levied by local school districts, Clarkston schools would receive less money from the state with the automatic Headlee rollback.

If voters override the Headlee Amendment, the school district would collect up to 38.83 operating mills or $20.83 million. That means the state would contribute more money also, which would amount to $1.85 million more than would be collected from local and state funds without the override.

For a homeowner with a $100,000 home assessed at half the market value ($50,000), the override would mean about 3.9 mills or $194 more in taxes next year.

Bond proposal

What it says:

"Shall Clarkston Community Schools, Oakland County, Michigan, borrow the sum of not to exceed Sixty Eight Million Eight Hundred Thousand Dollars ($68,800,000) and issue its general obligation unlimited tax bonds therefor, for the purpose of:

a. erecting, furnishing and equipping a new high school and acquiring the site therefor;

b. partially remodeling and re-quipping the Clarkston High School and the Sashabaw Junior High School for middle school purposes;

c. erecting, furnishing and equipping a new elementary school;

d. erecting, furnishing and equipping an addition or additions to; and partially remodeling and re-quipping the existing elementary schools;

e. constructing and equipping outdoor physical education, athletic and playground facilities; and developing and improving sites?

What it means:

Voters are asked to approve a $68.8 million bond issue for Clarkston schools that would pay for a hew high school and elementary school and renovations of other buildings.

If approved, Clarkston High and Sashabaw Junior High would become middle schools, and they would be remodeled and re-equipped.

Existing elementaries would receive some furnishings, additions or partial remodeling as needed and would also be re-equipped.

The new school buildings would also get need athletic facilities. Site construction is included in the bond proposal.

To pay off the bond debt, the school district would levy about 5.6 mills over 29 years, or about $5.60 for every $1,000 assessed property valuation.

For example, a homeowner with a $100,000 home assessed at half the market value ($50,000), would pay about $280 a year in taxes for the first few years. The annual amount would be reduced each year, and incoming residents would also help repay the debt.

Karen E. Foyteck

Karen E. Foyteck 47, of 6960 Langle Dr. has resided in the Clarkston area 19 years. She is the manager/owner of North Oakland Office Services.

Foyteck has a bachelor's degree from Wayne State University, Detroit, and has done graduate work at Oakland University, Rochester.

She and her husband, Doug, have three children: Mark, 22, is a Central Michigan University, Mt. Pleasant, graduate; Mike, 20, attends Oakland Community College; Matt, 17, is a junior at Clarkston High School.

Under background she lists: "Clarkston Community Women's Club, Committee on Excellence, Facilities Review Committee, Parent Volunteer Committee-Clarkston High School, Clarkston Athletic Boosters, Clarkston Elementary PTO, Sashabaw Junior High School Parent Group."

Q. How do you feel about current methods of school funding, and what recommendations, if any, would you make to improve them?

"Michigan's method of school funding promotes inequities in education and places an undue burden on homeowners.

"Our Legislature and governor need to make education a priority by increasing the funding of the state aid formula and initiating tax reform. Tax reform must provide that a portion of the state budget be earmarked for education.

"A decrease in property taxes should be included, and a cap must be established to prohibit a return to current property tax levels. Our taxes provide adequate monies to fund excellent schools, but our state budget must make education a top priority when allocating funds."

Q. What's your opinion of the $68.8 million bond issue to appear on the ballot for school construction and improvements?

"I find it difficult to agree with each and every item as proposed in the bond issue for school construction and renovation, even though I served on the Facilities Review Committee, and I am well aware of the facility needs of this district.

"Should Clarkston residents approve the bond as proposed, they must realize that additional operation millage will be necessary to open and staff the new and expanded buildings. Further study is needed to determine the use and/or disposition of excess space that would be created by the construction of the proposed buildings."

Q. What do you feel is the most urgent issue to be addressed by the new school board?

"In my view, the most urgent issue is to make sure that the needs of every student in Clarkston are being met.

"Last fall the Committee on Excellence identified curriculum, counseling services and increased emphasis on math-reading-writing-science as some of the important areas of need in Clarkston schools.

"We need to refocus our attention to address these areas of concern. Ultimately, it is the curriculum and what takes place in the classroom that is important. We owe our students the opportunity to obtain the knowledge and skills they will need when they leave Clarkston schools."

Sheila Goins Hughes

Sheila Goins Hughes, 44, of 5342 Parview Dr., has resided in the Clarkston area for 36 years. She is a part-time bookkeeper for the Golden Eagle Restaurant in Rochester.

Hughes is a 1963 graduate of Clarkston High School.

She and her husband, James, have two children. Scott, 11, attends Sashabaw Junior High. Jason, 8, attends Pine Knob Elementary.

Under background she lists: "Involved with schools since 1982' have served as president and treasurer of Pine Knob Elementary, have been attending school board meetings since 1986, served on Facility Committee, Committee on Excellence, Sashabaw Jr. High Parent Advisory Group."

Q. How do you feel about current methods of school funding, and what recommendations, if any, would you make to improve them.?

"The citizens can't bear the burden of higher property taxes any longer; our state must act now!

We do not need a tax shift or a new tax. The state has increased spending by $2 billion since 1982, but there has not been an increase in funds for education. We need to make funding more equal across the whole state.

We need to lobby our representatives in Lansing to make them understand that we will not tolerate taking a back seat for education any longer.

They must hear from all of us, school people, citizens of the community and local leaders, to let them know education should be their number one priority."

Q. What's your opinion of the $68.8 million bond issue to appear on the ballot for school construction and improvements?

"I support the bond issue. Clarkston has put off new building and bringing our existing ones up to par too long.

"We are a Class A district and we need to provide Class A facilities for our students and our community. After all, the schools belong to the people of the community.

"Without new and expanded buildings our classes will be overcrowded; programs will not be put in place, and our libraries at the high school and Clarkston Junior High will not be expanded due to lack of space.

"We must provide a better building for those at CJHS; this is long overdue."

Q. What do you feel is the most urgent issue to be addressed by the new school board?

"If the community doesn't support the bond issue and Headlee override, the board will need to set the pace to go back to the community again.

"If we cut $1.85 million from our budget, we'll be taking a step backward instead of forward. This would be a sad day for our community and children. We must look to the future, not to the past/

"If the Headlee override and bond issue are passed, we'll need to continue to lobby for financial reform, upgrade curriculum, keep our children in school and keep our lines of communication open to our community, administrators, teaching staff and all other employees."

Paul VanKlaveren

Paul VanKlaveren, 39, of 6443 Woodglen Dr. has resided in the Clarkston area for 10 years. He is employed by C-P-C Group of General Motors as a senior staff assistant.

VanKlaveren has a bachelor's degree in engineering and a master's in engineering management.

He and his wife, Maryagnes, have two children: Amanda, 13, attends Clarkston Junior High, and Renee, 10, attends Clarkston Elementary.

Under background he lists: "Clarkston Junior High Parent Advisory Committee, Community Education Advisory Council, Clarkston Facilities Review Committee, Chairman - Independence Township Safety Path Committee, Clarkston Optimist Club."

Q. How do you feel about current methods of school funding, and what recommendations, if any, would you make to improve them?

"Ten years ago K-12 education was funded with 28 percent of the state budget. Today the state funds K-12 education with only 7 percent of the state budget. This means that we pay the majority of the expenses with local property tax dollars.

"This puts in-formula school districts like Clarkston at a disadvantage and restricts our ability to provide quality education.

"The state must step up to their responsibility to properly fund equal education for all children in Michigan. The state education formula must be changed to provide more money for K-12 education and reduce the local burden being placed on property taxes."

Q. What's your opinion of the $68.8 million bond issue to appear on the ballot for school construction and improvements?

"Clarkston has an immediate and long-term need for improved and additional facilities. The facilities committee, of which I was a member, spent months reviewing current facilities and evaluating the need for additional facilities.

"Our recommendations were then reviewed by the district's engineering firm and presented to the board in the form of several options.

"The option chosen by the board is more aggressive than I would have recommended. I would have supported current board member John Needham in his recommendation only to build a new high school, renovate the middle schools and improve and construct additions to the elementary schools."

Q. What do you feel is the most urgent issue to be addressed by the new school board?

"Many areas need attention. We have an urgent need to update and implement our curriculum plan, including applied technology, new books, and competency tests for the students.

"Student counseling and in-service training for teachers are also badly needed along with the need to complete our transition to the middle school concept.

"Unfortunately, none of these can be done without funding. The school board must address the issue of funding immediately and directly with the state. They must become active participants in the reform of the school aid formula. The future of Clarkston schools and our children depend on school aid reform."

Stephen E. Werner

Stephen E. Werner, M.D., 46, of 7901 Holcomb Rd. has resided in the Clarkston area for 17 years. He is an orthopaedic hand surgeon.

Werner has a bachelor's degree from the University of Notre Dame, Ind., and degree from Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, Pa.

He and his wife, Karen, have four children. Matthew, 20, and Derek, 19, attend the University of Notre Dame. Jason, 18, and Edward, 16, attend Clarkston High School.

Under background he writes: "School board member for 8 years."

Q. How do you feel about current methods of school funding, and what recommendations, if any, would you make to improve them?

"Current school funding creates a difficult situation for in-formula districts because the district never knows until the last minute what their revenue will be, due to the uncertainty about student numbers and the State Aid Formula.

"When local assessments increase, the increase in local taxes replaces some of the state aid, with no net increase to the school.

"When the millage rate is decreased by the Headlee amendment, the school district actually gets less revenue, even though local taxes go up.

"I strongly support a shift from property tax to sales tax in conjunction with increased monies for education from the State General Fund."

Q. What's your opinion of the $68.8 million bond issue to appear on the ballot for school construction and improvements?

"The bond issue is a positive step forward for our community.

"I am absolutely convinced that the current high school is no longer adequate, and it would be cost effective to build a new high school rather than reconstruct the existing one.

"Likewise, I am certain that Clarkston Junior High is no longer suitable, and the cost of modernizing it would be prohibitive. Part of the building could still be used, however, for other programs such as community education.

"The student enrollment projections show that more elementary classrooms will soon be needed, unless we want to convert multipurpose music and computer rooms to regular classrooms."

Q. What do you feel is the most urgent issue to be addressed by the new school board?

"The most urgent issue for the new school board is to obtain the community's support for operational revenue as well for the bond issue for facility improvement.

"Fundamental in this endeavor is to continue to improve communication within the district.

"The present administration has made considerable effort towards improving communication, but I still find, in conversation with local citizens, that there all too frequently is either an unawareness or sometimes a misunderstanding of important issues.

"Also, more people in the community should take the time to read more of the information that is being disseminated concerning the issues affecting the school district."

Doreen M. Wright

Doreen M. Wright, 34, of 4475 Pelton has resided in the Clarkston community for six years. She is a secondary school teacher in the Waterford School District.

Wright has a bachelor's degree from Wayne State University, Detroit, and is married to Tony Wright.

Under background she lists the following community activities: "Volunteer Coach Science Olympiad, American Chemical Society, National Science Teachers Association, Detroit-Metropolitan Physics Teachers Association."

Q. How do you feel about current methods of school funding, and what recommendations, if any, would you make to improve them?

"The current school aid formula penalizes in-formula districts, like Clarkston, that are required by the Headlee Amendment to reduce the millage levied according to the rate of inflation. There are two solutions: one is to support state legislation HB4510, which would change the word "levied" to 'authorized' in the formula and resolve the millage reduction/inflation inequality.

"The second solution is to investigate alternative cost-saving measures, such as open bidding for school service contracts as opposed to budget cuts that are detrimental to education. The solution is not to annually override the Headlee Amendment."

What's your opinion of the $68.8 million bond issue to appear on the ballot for school construction and improvements?

"Two members of the Facilities Review Committee acknowledged that the proposal was rushed through in order to meet deadline for the June 12 election.

"Whether or not new or revised facilities are necessary, voters expect to be presented with, and permitted to discuss, well thought out alternatives before voting on and approving $68.8 million.

"An informed electorate will make the right decision for its community. However, if the bond issue is approved, and I am elected, I will fully support the voters decision. If it is turned down, I will work with fellow board members to find an acceptable alternative."

What do you feel is the most urgent issue to be addressed by the new school board?

"The most urgent issue facing the new school board is the growth of the Clarkston-Independence Township area.

"Although we are proud that so many people find our community amenable, we must also face the hard issues of how to efficiently spend our tax dollars in order to accommodate our new students and to keep our educational environment current.

"To the community's credit, Clarkston kids consistently score well on standardized tests. For future, we need to encourage a revised school aid formula and to look at cost-saving alternatives, such as privatization of school services, volunteerism and corporate sponsorship."

Robert Wyatt

Robert Wyatt, 38, of 8181 Deerwood Rd. has resided in the Clarkston area for 12 years. He is employed by GM Truck and Bus, Pontiac Central Manufacturing and Assembly Plant, as a plant engineer.

Wyatt has a bachelor's degree from the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, and is a licensed professional engineer.

He and his wife, Christine, have two children: Jillian, 12, attends Clarkston Junior High; and John, 10, attends Clarkston Elementary.

Under background he lists: "Co-Chairman, Clarkston School Citizens Facility Review Committee, 15 years management experience, quality improvement and multimillion budget management experience, labor relations experience."

Q. How do you feel about current methods of school funding, and what recommendations, if any, would you make to improve them?

"The current method of school funding caused the state's contribution to local schools operating budgets to drop from 43 percent to 20 percent over the last 10 years.

"Legislators failed to increase state aid proportionally with inflation. As a result, millage rates and assessments have increased, leaving taxpayers feeling angry and our local schools $500 per student under the national average.

"Any tax relief program must 1) provide additional guaranteed revenue for local schools, 2) provide property tax relief without decreasing state or federal income tax deduction 3) increase annually to keep pace with inflation and 4) have minimal additional tax impact on senior citizens."

Q. What's your opinion of the $68.8 million bond issue to appear on the ballot for school construction and improvements?

"As a taxpayer, I am not excited at the prospect of paying 6 mills for a bond issue on top of last year's millage increase and this year's proposed Headlee rollback.

"As a parent and co-chair of the Facilities Review Advisory Committee, I am even less pleased at the thought of our children attending secondary school buildings like Clarkston Jr. High (76,000 sq. ft.) and Clarkston High School (168,000 sq. ft.) that are roughly one-half the size of a properly sized 6-8 middle school and grade 9-12 high school that meet accreditation standards.

"I support the bond issue."

Q. What do you feel is the most urgent issue to be addressed by the new school board?

"Funding and facilities will be the biggest issues facing our new school board. Unless reforms in state funding occurs, we'll remain below the national average of $3,700 per student for sometime to come.

"Without relief, we'll continue to have textbooks that average over 10 years old, including some science books that predate man walking on the moon and some social studies books that predate the end of the Vietnam War.

"We'll either be facing a major building program or struggling in buildings that are undersized, are on average 31 years old and will have increasing accreditation problems as enrollments rise."

State needs school funding reform

Over the last 10 years the State of Michigan has reduced its contribution to public education (kindergarten through college) from nearly 30 percent of the annual state budget to just over 7 percent.

This has resulted in the state's contribution to Clarkston Community Schools dropping from 43 percent of our annual budget to 20 percent.

This has been done by increasing the state formula from one year to the next by an amount less than inflation.

The state formula provides our schools 1.27 percent more per student for the 1989-90 school year than was for school year 1988-89. At the same time, the state and federal governments have added new expenses totaling slightly less than 1 percent of the 1988-89 budget.

This leaves just $69,000 for all other increases to budget for 1989-90, including 33 percent in health care costs increases and all contractual salary increases.

As the only source of additional income is the taxpayer, the school district ends up asking for some type of additional millage.

Presently, our school millage rate is over the national average, while our spending per student is $500 below the national average.

We must get our state Legislature to understand that we must stop shifting the burden of supporting public education to local property taxes.

We need to restore the silent reductions in public school funding that have occurred over the last 10 years.

We need to have our property tax burden reduced to a level more consistent with that found in other states.

We need to accomplish this change without a hidden increase in our federal or state income taxes. (Each $1,000 of property tax provides the typical homeowner $150 to $280 of federal income tax refund and up to $45 of Michigan Homestead Property Tax Credit. Sales taxes do not provide any income tax refunds.)

We need a guarantee that any money designated for public education will increase annually by at least the rate of inflation.

This should be accomplished by restoring the state expenditures for public education to the levels of 10 years ago and guaranteeing that this level will be maintained.

Property tax relief should be given in the form of raising the maximum Homestead Property Tax Credit for senior citizens, the disabled and the average taxpayer.

If additional taxes are required to balance the state budget, those activities funded with increases diverted from public education should have to justify the new taxes required to continue these expenditures.

As the state Legislature has spent over 14 years working on school funding reform, we must demand a timely resolution of this issue by the Legislature.

Unfortunately we have little alternative but to face either property tax increases or a reduced educational program until our state Legislature resolves the school funding problem.

I ask my fellow voters to separate the frustrations of the current property tax system and the state Legislature's failure to correct this problem from the critical questions of whether we believe as voters that 1) we need a new high school and elementary school after going 20 years without building any new or replacement classrooms and 2) whether we need the Headlee over ride to support a year to year budget increase or to limit this increase to $69,000, less than 1/3 of the 1 percent of the 1988-89 school year budget.

Please make what you believe to be the choice that best meets the needs of the children attending our schools.

Robert Wyatt, Candidate
For School Board

M-15 is dangerous

I have been a resident of Cranberry Lake Estates for five years. I also have four neighbors who have been in serious accidents trying to exit our subdivision onto M-15.

Statistics alone show that this is a dangerous stretch of roadway. There have been too many serious injuries and fatalities within the last several years to have Independence Township and the Michigan Department of Transportation do nothing to remedy the situation.

On behalf of the majority, if not all residents, we ask for a safe way out of our subdivision. From a stop we are expected to weave our way into four lanes of 55 mph traffic. Frequently, drivers exceed the limit trying to pass vehicles ahead of them before M-15 narrows again both north and southbound.

Independence Township needs to put pressure on the state and demand that they respond with a plan to

Open house set

High school students from Clarkston, Brandon, Holly and Waterford will host an open house soon in a [illegible] they constructed as a school project.

The public is welcome to tour the home, located in the North Pointe subdivision off Clintonville Road, on Sunday, June 11, from 1-4 p.m. The address is 2472 Woodbourne.

Building trades students have been working with teacher Dick Moscovic since September on the project. Subcontractors did some of the work, but students learned a variety of trades as they took over dry-walling, insulating, carpentry and other parts of the project.

The project was sponsored by the North Oakland County Builders Association through the Oakland Technical Center-Northwest Campus. Mike Hofer of Welcome Homes, Inc., was the sponsoring builder.

ensure the safety of its residents. We feel the speed should be lowered to 40 mph due to the residential area and a traffic light be installed at a location to service the adjoining subdivisions.

The traffic study completed recently was at the Cranberry Lake Road and M-15 intersection. There are three exits from our subdivisions that need to be considered in the study, not the one that is traveled least. I am in support of the study, but damage and loss of property, serious injury and loss of life should strongly be considered in this study also.

We need to be able to exit our subdivision with our families safely.

8 honored at Clarkston schools retirement dinner

BY JULIE CAMPE
Clarkston News Editor

Laughter and tears flowed freely when eight people were honored during the Sixth Annual Retirement Dinner for Clarkston Community Schools May 31 at the Deer Lake Racquet Club.

With good food, good conversation and good entertainment provided by the Clarkston High School Jazz Band and the Clarkston High School Madrigal Singers, the evening was filled with funny stories and memories covering many years.

Daniel Manthei, principal of the Oakland Technical Center-Northwest Campus, spoke about Artemus Pappas, who could not attend the dinner.

Pappas taught 7 1/2 years at CHS and 17 1/2 years at the tech. center, teaching business classes. Manthei said he was a "highly ethical, highly professional individual."

He was highly regarded by staff, students and parents, said Manthei.

"He has a tremendous, witty, dry-type sense of humor," he added. "He can play it straight, but there is that other side to him. ... He had the biggest collection of crazy birthday cards."

Although Pappas is finished with the school system, he's still working -- as the Village of Clarkston's village manager and treasurer.

Sue Cattin, who has worked for Clarkston schools since 1958, was already vacationing in Europe as part of her retirement activities, but Andersonville Elementary Principal Sharon Devereaux said a few words about her anyway.

Cattin spent 17 years teaching kindergarten at Andersonville, where she was known for her tremendous memory.

"She could remember the most minute detail about everyone," said Devereaux.

The staff also kiddingly referred to her as "Dr. Cattin," said Devereaux.

"She was always prescribing things," she said, adding that Cattin had a remedy for every illness or ailment.

REBERTA ALLEN STEELE (left) chats with Mary Schwabe after the retirement dinner May 31. After retirement, Reberta plans to travel with her new husband.

AFTER THE FESTIVITIES, Gordon Grice talks with a few friends. Retirement will be just like a "long summer," says Grice, who taught at Sashabaw Junior High.

CHRISTINE KEVERN is retiring from the food program at the Oakland Technical Center-Northwest Campus.

Clarkston schools sends off 8 longtime employees

She is an "unsung hero," said Hayden, explaining that Crass had been a building aid for 14 years, which means she patrolled the playground and performed other tasks.

"She had firmness tempered with gentleness," Hayden said. "She had an extreme affinity for those children who created problems. ... Fay would nurture those children from kindergarten right through the sixth grade."

Teacher Elizabeth Bisbikis spoke about her retiring co-worker, Cleo Lois Grice.

A teacher at Andersonville Elementary School, Grice has worked under many principals and has made lots of friends, said Bisbikis, adding that she was well respected and liked by her peers.

"We are all privileged to work with you," she said.

Grice plans to keep busy after retirement, said Bisbikis. She'll be studying homeopathic philosophy and is taking classes at the Institute of Natural Health Sciences.

Reberta Allen-Steele was doubly honored at the dinner when her children and grandchildren showed up as a surprise, after flying in from all over the country.

Allen-Steele was loved by all of her students but particularly those with special needs, said Christine Kevern, head of the food services at the tech. center where Allen-Steele worked.

She had a knack for dealing with troubled children, said Kevern.

A paraprofessional in the food program, she has had 1,267 students under her in her time.

"She has listened to all kinds of problems," said Kevern. "She has been Mother confidante. ... Reberta spoke softly; she spoke encouragingly, and she spoke honestly to the students."

Recently remarried after the death of her husband, Allen-Steele plans to volunteer at Sashabaw Junior High School, to give private golf instruction, to write a book about Clarkston schools, to learn to hunt and shoot, to visit her children and grandchildren and to travel with her new husband.

Also retiring is Gordon Grice, who joined Clarkston schools 27 years ago and who has worked at Clarkston and Sashabaw junior high schools.

Fellow teacher and friend James Sanford, told a few tales about Grice.

"He's a fair and a very just individual," said Sanford. "I used to refer to him jokingly as 'Mr. Nice' because he was."

Rice was known for his particular type of organization; his gardening and beekeeping and his construction work. He was also known for his attitudes toward people, said Sanford.

"He cared about mankind, and he cared about what became of people."

Christine Kevern was the last retiree to be honored that night. Assistant Principal Douglas Pierson of the tech center spoke about Kevern, who has worked with Clarkston schools since 1973.

"It's not often one gets the opportunity to speak on such a class person," said Pieson, describing her as "pleasant, sensitive and caring."

"Worse yet, we'd take it," said Devereaux, adding, "It would often work."

Kindergarten teacher Pat Johnson was also absent, but her principal, William Potvin, shared lots of memories about her.

She has a wonderful disposition and was great to work with, he said. She was always cheery and funny -- especially her Finnish jokes.

"She has a great sense of humor," he said.

Born and raised in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, Pat was "smart enough to leave," said Potvin, also a former U.P. resident.

"Most of all, I'll miss Pat," he said. "She's a good gal, a good friend."

North Sashabaw Elementary Principal John Hayden told of the good points about Fay Crass, who was also absent that evening.

"She is an exemplary educator and a devoted wife and mother," he said, adding that her husband, Donald, is retiring from his job as a principal in the Bloomfield Hills School District.

They'll be spending a lot of time at home after they're both retired, and as she rose to accept her plaque, Kevern quipped, "I have to learn to cook all over again."

Engagement

Gary and Patricia Lessel of Perry Lake Road, Independence Township, announce the engagement of their daughter, Deborah S. Lessel, to Joseph P. Okros, the son of Joe and Cookie Okros of Deerhill Drive, Independence Township. Lessel, a 1982 graduate of Clarkston High School, is a resident of Drayton Plains and is employed at the Clarkston Cafe. Her fiance is also a 1982 graduate of Clarkston High School and a 1989 graduate of Oakland University, Rochester. A November 17 wedding is planned.

New arrivals

It's a girl for Beth and Ben Lawrence of Clarkston Road, Independence Township.

Allison Dawn Lawrence was born May 24 at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, Pontiac. She weighed 8 pounds, 1 ounce and measured 20 inches long.

Grandparents are Floyd and Dawn Tower of Clarkston and Jack and Ruby Lawrence of Independence Township.

Gerry and Cindy Adams of Phoenix, Ariz., and formerly of Clarkston announce the birth of their first child.

Ryan Orrie was born May 30 and weighed 8 pounds, 6 ounces. He measured 21 inches long.

Great-grandmother is Blanche Indo of South Hampton, Ontario, Canada.

Grad

Kenneth Creech, son of Charles and Barbara Creech of Allen Road, Independence Township, was graduated from Wayne State University, Detroit, cum laude in May.

He received a bachelor's degree with a major in informations systems and is now employed by the Unisys Finance Corporation.

Creech is a 1985 graduate of Clarkston High School.

In service

Army Private Robert R. Mendieta Jr., son of Robert R. Mendieta Sr. of Colton, Calif., and Patricia Mitchell of Tartan, Clarkston, has completed the field artillery fire support course at Fort Sill, Okla.

He is a 1987 graduate of Brandon High School.

Spec. Joshua D. Bliss has been decorated with the Army Achievement Medal at Fort Wainright, Alaska.

The achievement medal is awarded to soldiers for meritorious service, acts of courage, or other accomplishments.

Bliss, a 1986 graduate of Clarkston High School, is the son of Warren and Lynn Bliss of Westridge Place, Waterford. He is a military police specialist with the 16th Military Police Company.

Airman Charles D. Stein has graduated from the U.S. Air Force security police specialist course at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas.

Stein, a 1985 graduate of Clarkston High School, is the son of Nancy A. Stein of Pontiac and Charles F. Stein of Sashabaw Road, Independence Township.

Maj. Donald S. Smith Jr. has completed the U.S. Air Force military indoctrination for medical service officers at Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas.

Smith, a 1953 graduate of Pontiac High School, received a doctorate from the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, in 1961. He is the son of Donald and Florence Smith of Davisburg, Springfield Township.

Marine Lance Cpl. Robert A. Gaddis, son of Robert L. and Jean A. Gaddis of Oak Park, Independence Township, recently received a letter of commendation.

He received the citation for his dedication, loyalty and professional skill while stationed with 2nd Marine Aircraft Wing, Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point, North Carolina.

A 1986 graduate of Clarkston High School, he joined the Marine Corps in October 1986.

Engagement

Johnny and Judy Garner of Sashabaw Road, Brandon Township, announce the engagement of their daughter, Tammie Sue Garner, to Jeffrey Scott Vrooman of Drayton Plains. Vrooman, son of Hiram and Phyllis Vrooman of Bridge Lake Road, Springfield Township, is a 1979 graduate of Clarkston High School and is the owner of Clarkston Maintenance. The bride-to-be is a 1980 graduate of Brandon High School and is now employed at the Clarkston Cafe. The wedding is planned for October 21.

"PASSED" reads the sign stretched across Bonnie Valuet's front porch on Holcomb Road, Clarkston, May 29. Valuet, who sells real estate in the Clarkston area and teaches kindergarten at Pine Knob Elementary School, just received word that she passed the Michigan Bar Association Exam. So many friends had been inquiring that she thought the sign would best relate the news. She received the notice May 27 and put the sign up on Memorial Day. "I've had flowers from lots of people. People have stopped in. It's just been a delightful experience," said Valuet, who graduated from the University of Detroit Law School in August, 1988. (Photo by Julie Campe)

Friend to Friend

Sorting through pressure

AWARE — Action and Education — War on Drugs

Dear Friend to Friend:

As the school year is over and several of us are graduating, we wanted to reflect back on some school memories:

 After my ninth-grade dance we went out to a restaurant and a teacher sent over some non-alcoholic daiquiris. When we got up to leave, we saw who sent them, and it made us feel really special.

 My best times were at band camp.

 I was new to this school my junior year, and during my senior year I got involved with Junior Miss. It was the first time I felt I really belonged. Everyone was equal, and we really got to know each other.

 Driver's training ... scared of my driving partner.

 Being new here in fifth grade, I have to laugh because my best friend was chosen because she was closest to my weight on the teeter-totter.

 My senior year I was having a really bad day (personal problems), and I hadn't studied for a test. My anatomy teacher gave me a pass to the library -- no questions asked. I thought that was so great!

 I had some awesome teachers!

 Hitting a mailbox with my car -- ugh!

 Going with someone very special to the prom, and we are still enjoying each other.

 Signing yearbooks; both happy and sad feelings.

 The fun we had with the friends we made, becoming so close as a group -- going to movies, bowling and parties.

 Sports: getting together as a team and developing close friendships.

 I am going to miss a lot of my teachers, especially a science teacher who talked to us as if we were people not just "students." She made the class interesting, and it felt like she really cared.

 We learned so much in human relations; things we will need to know for the rest of our lives.

 Last year in gym class it was so hot we ran through the sprinklers and then went to pre-calculus soaking wet!

 Being in the "My Fair Lady" orchestra.

 Being in my government class. It was the first time I had my best friend in a class.

 When my history teacher brought in an egg and threw it against the wall as he described drinking and driving. It was great that every Friday he gave us some message because he cared.

 Doing a pantomime in English.

 A student doing a back flip over the chairs in advanced speech.

 Pip-Fest -- what an experience!

 My second hour class was such a boring experience I always had a hard time staying awake.

 School was a place where I found out I had my own opinions and that I had the right to express them.

We learned so much and the classes weren't so bad either! Clarkston High School meant a lot to each of us, and so many good times, and a few bad times; good friends, teachers, principals and the memories -- yea!

Several Seniors

Dear Seniors:

You'll have many of these memories forever. Hold on to them and enjoy them. The nice thing about life is that there are many more to come year after year. Enjoy the summer!

Dear Friend to Friend:

I have been dating a girl for about six months, and we became romantic. My problem is that I want to break up now, but I am afraid of what she will do.

I think she might hurt herself, but I also think I will be miserable if we stay together. How can I get out of this without her freaking out?

Tied Down

Dear Tied Down:

This is a common situation, however, not one that is impossible to handle. This is not just a matter of what's best for you.

Relationships carry with them obligations and responsibilities. One responsibility you have in a relationship is to not intentionally hurt the other person.

That may mean to understand that as you get "romantically" involved with another person that if a break-up occurs feelings will be hurt. That is not to say that relationships can't lose their spark or that we always have to stay in every relationship.

It may be time for you to leave this one. If it is, then look for ways to leave it with the least amount of hurt for the girl you've been dating.

Often, there is no easy way to do this. A serious, honest discussion is called for. You have to explain how your feelings have changed, and you must take responsibility for those changes.

It will be no good if the relationship is held together by guilt or fear. Being as honest and candid as you can may help her to realize the relationship is ending, and perhaps she will be able to cope with that.

If she doesn't seem to be handling it well, you may have to help her get professional help. That may mean involving her family, a teacher or counselor.

Sometimes it's not so easy to just walk away from a love affair. The relationship -- perhaps not in a romantic way -- may continue as the pain lingers.

Friend to Friend is provided by a panel of Clarkston High School students working under AWARE, a community organization dedicated to action and education against substance abuse. NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

TAKE NOTICE, That the Michigan Department of Natural Resources proposes to hold a formal public hearing at the Springfield Township Hall, 650 Broadway, Davisburg, Michigan, at 2:30 p.m., Wednesday, the 21st day of June 1989.

The purpose of this hearing is to secure the views of interested persons concerning the following application for permit:

Application for Permit 89-14-174 under the Inland Lakes and Streams Act, Act 346, Public Act of 1972, as amended, by AHR Packaging Consultant Corporation, 225 Garfield, Detroit, Michigan 48201, to seek authorization to dredge an area 30 feet wide by 2,600 feet long to remove approximately 23,000 cubic yards of materials to be used as berms around the lake and in low wetland areas on Schmitt Lake, T4N, R8E, Section 33, Springfield Township, Oakland County, Michigan.

The application may be reviewed in the Pontiac District Office, Land and Water Management Division, 2455 North Williams Lake Road, Pontiac, Michigan, during normal office hours.

The hearing will be held pursuant to Section (6) of the cited statute. The hearing will not be a court-type proceeding; witnesses will not be sworn, and there will be no cross-examination. Public Hearings are primarily informational and are held to encourage the expression of views and presentation of facts.

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources will, upon written request, provide a copy of the Deparment's decision of this application.

Microwave Plus

Microwave takes guesswork out of fish

Good neighbors, Carl and Sandy Krampert, went fishing on a recent Sunday and brought over some of their catch -- fresh lake trout and salmon steaks.

No matter who supplies the fish -- you, your neighbor or the local supermarket, it is a popular entree choice. More Americans are ordering fish when they eat out, yet many are still reluctant to prepare fish at home.

Here are some guidelines for preparing fish in the microwave.

* Don't rinse fish before cooking. Some chefs say rinsing removes oils and moisture.

* Cook fish only until flesh turns white or opaque.

* High heat toughens protein so do not overcook.

* Have side dishes and salad ready before you cook the fish.

* Microwave fish for approximately four minutes per pound or three minutes per inch.

* To keep fish moist cover the container with a glass lid, plastic wrap or waxed paper, or coat the fish with crumbs.

* Let fish stand three to five minutes after cooking before serving. This allows the fish to finish cooking without additional heat.

If you have either a microwave browning dish or grill, now is a good time to use it.

Spray a no stick vegetable oil on the dish's surface before preheating. PAM has just introduced an olive oil cooking spray which is perfect for fish.

Purchase pre-packaged fresh herbs from the produce department of your local supermarket or grow your own.

GRILLED SALMON OR LAKE TROUT STEAKS

Two salmon or lake trout steaks, about two inches thick
No-stick olive oil spray
Fresh dill
Liquid smoke, optional

Spray browning dish or grill with no stick vegetable spray.

Preheat dish at HIGH for five minutes in a 650 watt oven or longer in a lower wattage oven.

Brush liquid smoke on surface of steaks for a charcoal broiled flavor. Microwave steaks at HIGH for three minutes; turn over.

Microwave at HIGH for another three minutes, or until flesh turns opaque. Cover and let stand for three minutes before serving. Serve garnished with fresh dill.

If you object to the odor after cooking fish in the microwave, here's help. Place a one cup measure of lemon water in the oven. Microwave at HIGH for five minutes.

Salmon and lake trout are also delicious cooked on the barbecue grill. Brush with olive oil, place in a barbecue fish basket for easy turning, and place over hot coals. Cook for about 10 minutes per inch.

Turn over basket after half the cooking time. But watch so you don't overcook and toughen the fish. Serve with fresh dill.

For the best of both methods, first sear the fish on the grill, then finish it in the microwave oven.

Microwave at HIGH until fish is opaque.

Tested in a 650 watt microwave oven and on a gas grill.

Hotline for garden questions, tips

Oakland County residents with questions about gardening, plant diseases, insects, pesticides, plant identification or troublesome weeds can contact the Cooperative Extension Service Garden Hotline at 858-0902 for fast and accurate answers.

The hotline, under the supervision of Horticulture Agent Greg Patchan, is an information service available to all county residents.

During the peak summer months, two full-time staff members handle nearly 600 calls per week, answering almost all of them over the phone immediately.

"We answer more than just garden questions," said Mary Bauer, a master gardener currently working the hotline.

"Many of our calls deal with trees, lawns and indoor house plants," she said.

To contact the Garden Hotline, call 858-0902 9 a.m. to noon and 1-4 p.m. on Monday through Friday. Or stop in with a sample of your problem during the same hours.

The hotline is located at the Cooperative Extension Service office in the North Office Building, 1200 North Telegraph Road in Pontiac.

Pet of the Week

There's no place like home

Toto just needs to get home, even if Aunty Em isn't there. She resembles Dorothy's dog of the same name from "The Wizard of Oz."

Toto is a 2-year-old female cairn terrier mix. She's small and weighs about 10 pounds.

Toto needs a home that would offer her a regular routine. She's friendly and likes children and other pets.

Toto can be adopted at the Michigan Humane Society, 3600 Auburn Rd., Auburn Heights, 852-7420. Hours at the non-profit shelter are 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

The adoption fee for Toto is $65. The price includes spaying before leaving the shelter.

I'm 18

Kristen Bilicki

Today is my birthday. I'm almost two decades old. "You can vote, buy cigarettes, go to X-rated movies..." All the things in the world I've always wanted to do. Exciting, eh?

Actually I've been looking forward to this day so much, but what are the advantages of my new maturity?

"I'm 18; I don't know what I want," screamed Alice Cooper. My birthday has left me somewhat confused. I want to jump out into the real world, make my stand, meet challenges head on and succeed. On the other hand, I want to curl up behind my mommy when the challenges become too much for me to handle.

I want to tease my friends, play hide and seek, keep away; and I want to pick flowers to make bouquets. People look at me funny when I leap on every dandelion or wildflower I can find. That is when they see me too old for my behavior and they scoff.

When it comes to changing world events, I'm still seen as a child in their eyes. I'll admit that cooing with delight whenever I see cows, pigs or horses isn't exactly mature behavior. I try to hold on to the youthful fascination for farm animals.

Now that I think of it, I enjoy being a child. I like not always having to solve the tragedies I face. I even almost like being slightly dependent. That is a justification of my deep feelings for immaturity.

However, in reality I long for my freedom. I want to have the means to work out my own life, not depending on anyone else. It is also reality that at 18 I may be an adult in theory, but actually I am only practicing to be an adult.

I know one day I will have my chance to make my imprint on the world. For now, I'm still learning. I can legally participate in voting, cigarettes and pornography, all the things that society says I have the right to indulge in, but why should I?

Instead I'll wave my rights as a responsible citizen for now and learn to be more of a responsible child. Maybe cooing and picking wildflowers will prepare me better for earth shattering events than the freedom that voting or any other freedom I'm entitled to could. I'm 18, and I like it!

Straight Answers to Tough Questions

Editor's note: Straight Answers to Tough Questions is the work of the Blue Ribbon Kids Committee, a pro-schools group of citizens working to promote the upcoming school election.

1. Is it true that most of our school budget goes for salaries and benefits? Why did teachers get an increase if we are so financially strapped?

Yes, 84.3 percent of our school budget goes to salaries and benefits. Why? Because schools are driven by people -- teachers, cooks, custodians, administrators, bus drivers, secretaries -- all kinds of people. This is a labor-intensive business, just like any other school district.

Our teacher contract was extended one year recently to provide an increase, which is the average increase across the state. In fact, it is slightly less than the average in other school districts of our size.

Is it reasonable to expect our people, who are already at the low end of the county pay scale, to accept less than this?

2. Troy and Birmingham voters recently "sent a message" that they were fed up with rising taxes. Why shouldn't we?

This is an interesting comparison. Both of those school districts are among the wealthiest in the state, fed by huge commercial developments and large numbers of luxury houses. They are both out-of-formula, and Troy receives so much money that they could finance an entire new high school out of operational money without assessing additional bond money.

We in Clarkston are largely residential and rural with a fairly strong opposition to commercial and industrial development. That's OK! Most of us like it that way. But, unfortunately, that leaves residents with the responsibility of financing their own school system with whatever help the state will provide. And we all know by now that state help has eroded to almost nothing.

If you want to "send a message" then send it to the right place. Work for school finance reform through state government. Don't dump our kids and their education just because you don't like the way education is financed.

3. Homeowners do not want to sell their homes because they are being taxed out of the community. Aren't there other alternatives?

Yes! For persons who truly have financial difficulties in affording their own home, the Michigan Homestead Property Tax Act (Circuit-Breaker) provides tax reimbursements of up to 100 percent of tax increases.

Also, as our property values increase, some persons are finding that they can use the increased home equity for reinvestment in order to guarantee more personal income.

Regardless of our personal circumstances, we all benefit when our homes are worth more money!

4. Why do schools need to be updated? They were good enough for me.

Times have changed. The jobs of the 1990's and 2000's are not going to be the same as those we adults chose years ago.

Children today must have much more exposure to new technology -- to computers, robotics, cable and information systems, satellite hookups, and global interaction.

Today's markets stretch around the world and require a study of languages, foreign cultures and new business tactics.

Yesterday's heavy shop equipment is being phased out in some area, and old traditional skills are combined with new technology from factory to farm, in both white and blue collar job markets. Our future workers will have new demands placed upon them.

And guess what, educators know what will be needed!

We can plan intelligently for the next century because high-technology needs are already unfolding.

Schools must be responsive to those demands. But they can only be responsive with the support of the local community.

5. Is it true that the new bond issue will have to be paid back for 29 years?

Yes. It's long-term finance, just like a household mortgage.

Unlike a mortgage, however, your annual share of this payment will decrease as years go by. Unlike in-formula operating millage, bond issue millage is reduced when property values increase and more property is developed.

As more people move into our district, the burden

Costs of this bond issue are most likely to decrease every year of the payment schedule.

6. Will we need another new millage to operate a new high school?

Not necessarily!

Looking three years ahead, there will be definite changes in school finance for Clarkston.

School finance reform appears to be a real possibility within the next few years, which would reduce or eliminate the need for additional millage to run our buildings.

Without state aid reform we will go out-of-formula and will no longer be dependent on state aid.

When we go out-of-formula, projected increases in construction will provide a growing tax base.

Commercial and residential construction now being planned would then generate more revenues to finance schools for our kids.

More details on these issues are available by calling 625-4402 during business hours.

Technology program

A pilot program focusing on future technologies will be offered for credit to high school students at the Oakland Technical Center on Big Lake Road.

Students are to explore research and development trends for electronics over the next 10 years.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY Spirit. Holy spirit. You make me see everything and show me the way to reach my ideals. You give me the divine gift to forgive and forget the wrongs that are done to me and you are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue, want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desisre may be. I want to be with you, and my loved ones, in your perpetual glory. Amen. Persons must pray this prayer 3 consecutive days without asking for your wish. After the 3rd day your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this dialogue as soon as your favor has been granted. Thanks St. Jude for favors received. !!!LX23-2*

WHO IS ON THE LORD'S side? Let him hear what the spirit saith unto the churches. Be ti known unto you that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom you crusify, whom God raised from the dead, is the stone which is set at nought of you builders, which is the head of the corner. For there is none other name (no other way or gospel) under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved. But this cometh to pass, that the word might be fullfilled that is written; "They hated me without a cause." "I am the true vine and my father is the husbandman. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away. And every branch that beareth fruit, he purges it, that it may bring forth more fruit. If any man serve me, let him follow me. And where I am , there shall also my servant be. If any serve me, him will my father honor. For the word of God is sharper than any two edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder the soul and spirit, and is a descerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. Do not think that I have come to send peace on earth but to send a sword-not peace. And a man's foes shall be they of his own household (church). He that taketh not his cross and follows me is not worthy of me. He that findeth (keeps) his life shall lose it. And he that loses his life for my sake shall find it. And if any person hear my words, and believe not, I judge him not. For I came not to judge the world, but to save it. He that rejects me, and receives not my words, has one that judges him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day. For I have not spoken of myself, but the father, which sent me, he gave me a commandment, "What I should say, and what I should speak." Hearing you shall hear, and shall not understand. And seeing you shall see, and not perceive: for the heart of this people is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed; giving heed to Jewish fables and commandments of men, that turn from the truth, professing to know God; but in works (faith in Christ) they deny him, being abominable (idol worshippers of gold and silver) and disobedient (not doing the word from the heart) and unto every good work (rightly dividing the truth) reprobate. A brutish man knows not; neither does a fool understand this. When the wicked spring as the grass, and when all the workers of iniquity do flourish; it is that they shall be destroyed forever. "My Mother and my brothers are these which hear the word of God, and do it. All things are delivered to me of my Father; and no man knows who the Son is but the Father; and who the Father is but the Son and he to whom the Son will reveal Him. IIILX23-2*

Biker says cycling is a healthy sport

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

A bit of research on biking uncovered the name of Jeff Noftz, who happens to make his home in Clarkston at the moment.

"He's sort of a guru," says Rich Snodsmitch, from behind the counter of Kinetic Systems, the bike shop that Noftz co-owns on Main Street, Clarkston.

"Americans get bored and look for something to put their minds into. Bike racing is a dangerous sport, which attracts them."

Jeff Noftz

After a few moments, Noftz emerges from the back, looking the part. His long, gray hair, pulled into a ponytail, is the only thing that reveals his "40-plus" years; his frame is wiry and trim. His face is tanned and unlined.

His guru reputation is confirmed in conversation about things like the popular dirt bike: "environmentally awful; they tear up the track," and about his lifestyle: "I don't drink pop or anything like that. No meats, fish or fowl."

But his intensity is most apparent when he discusses biking, specifically the biking done by the Flying Rhinos, which he coaches.

The Flying Rhinos is a club of about 120 people, who, like Noftz, take their biking seriously.

Primarily racers, the club has attracted about 50 "hard-core folks" and about 10 "real-hard-core folks," those who chalk up about 10,000 miles a year -- or about 4-5 hours a day.

"It's like a chess game. The strongest doesn't always win by any means. It's tactics."

Jeff Noftz

Many of the serious Flying Rhinos have arranged their lives around biking, by taking jobs in education to have the summers free or, like Noftz, by working in the biking industry.

"People in Clarkston really don't know how big it is," Noftz speculates.

"We're no California or Colorado, but these are U.S. Cycling Federation bike racers," he says, referring to the Olympic Committee classification.

Noftz, who admits he is somewhat of an elitist, says biking is catching on quickly, although many Americans are aware of only the "big three stupid sports -- baseball, basketball and football.

"Americans get bored and look for something to put their minds into. Bike racing is a dangerous sport, which attracts them."

When someone uses the phrase, "It's as easy as riding a bike," they're certainly not talking about racing.

Noftz describes the typical racing scene as a half-mile or 3/4-mile oval track with about 100 people traveling about 25-35 mph for 50 miles. The bikers might ride side-by-side for miles with handlebars touching and feet pedals bumping, or within inches of the rider in front.

RICH SNODSMITCH displays the purple and gold stripes of the Flying Rhino biking club. The club meets three to four times a week to train for races but also leaves each Saturday morning from Depot Park in a slow ride designed for newcomers.

For safe ride, use helmet, cleats, eye protection

Noftz predicts that the average physically fit individual might need five years of serious training to become competitive at the state level. At least one full year would be needed just to learn how to ride the bike properly, he says.

Although the Flying Rhinos focus on racing, some do ride just for fun. Tuesday and Thursday nights are set aside for race training, but on Saturday mornings the group leaves from Clarkston's Depot Park for a slow ride, which is designed to accommodate newcomers.

Despite its growing popularity, Noftz says bikers still don't get their "just desserts." Motorists still don't like to share the road and may honk or throw things at the bikers.

Nonetheless, Noftz promotes biking as a "neurological, damage-free" sport, that can be enjoyed by anyone, whether or not they choose to race.

"There is no impact. Cardiovascularly -- we have men with heart rates in the 40's," he says.

For any biker, the most important consideration in starting out is the fit of the bike.

At Kinetic Systems, Noftz spends up to a half hour with each customer measuring dimensions of feet and knees to ensure the fit.

A good bike will typically range from $500 to $1,000, which Noftz admits is expensive but says it is worth it.

"If you're going to use and abuse this piece of equipment, pay the extra money if you can afford it," he says.

A pricier, better-made bike is apparent in the frame, the tire tubing and the spokes and will take you faster, further and easier, Noftz says.

A touring biker should have a helmet, biking shoes with cleats, proper eye protection from bugs, gravel or pollen, and possibly some gloves.

Bright clothing is important, Noftz says, and if the biker is planning to do any distance riding, a pair of padded biking shorts should be worn for comfort.

ON A GOOD bike, the frame, tire tubing and spokes will take you faster, further and easier. For safety, bikers should wear a helmet and eye protection.

Things like water bottles and bags are extras.

Another important consideration when biking is learning to ride safely, which entails using the bike as an automobile.

If a biker moves off to the right, chances are a car will pull up alongside on the left, which may be dangerous.

Don't travel against the traffic, Noftz advises, and whenever possible ride two abreast.

Noftz, originally from Idaho, says he would like to see more people use the "non-polluting form of transportation to get from point A to point B.

"It's a good way to get out and be environmentally aware," he says.

Children need information about your illness, too

Cancer Answers

Cleveland Clinic Foundation Cancer Center

Q. I am a parent who will soon begin chemotherapy. How can I explain my illness and treatment to my child?

A. Children have different ways of understanding information according to their age and developmental level. Generally speaking, children need to be told information about illness or treatment in simple but truthful terms.

Listening to your children's questions will help you know their unique concerns. For example:

O Young children may fear separation from a parent and need to be reassured about your presence.

O Older children may feel angry about a parent's illness or believe they are somehow responsible.

O Teens trying to be independent may be upset about a sick parent's dependence on them.

Children need to be included in a family discussion about your illness or treatment. Sharing this information openly will help relieve the anxiety of too much uncertainty.

Children usually sense when something is wrong or different. It is better for your child to get truthful information from you than to imagine the worst about the situation.

Q. I was surprised to read recently that black Americans get cancer at higher rates than white Americans. Is this true?

A. Yes. Rates vary by type of cancer, but cancer generally occurs at a higher rate in male black Americans than in male white Americans. The rates for females are slightly higher in whites. Over the last 30 years the cancer rate has increased 65 percent in blacks vs. 20 percent whites.

Rates for lung cancer -- the most common type of cancer among men -- are higher in black males. Black men have especially high rates of prostate cancer (the second most common type of male cancer) and stomach cancer.

Although less common, cancer of the esophagus occurs three times more often in black men than in white men. White men have higher rates of bladder and skin cancer as well as lymphomas and leukemias.

Cervical cancer is twice as common in black women as in white women. However, breast cancer -- the most common type of cancer among women -- is more common in white females. Lung cancer remains a leading cause of cancer-related deaths in all women.

Studies are under way to discover the reason for different rates of cancer in the U.S. population. But for all Americans, Avoiding known cancer risks such as smoking; checking out early signs of cancer so that the disease can be detected earlier; and getting early treatment are the keys to preventing cancer and improving survival.

Q. I read recently about a new way to detect lung cancer before it is discovered through X-rays or other tests. Can you explain this?

A. Researchers are studying monoclonal antibodies for early lung cancer detection. Monoclonal antibodies are specific reacting agents in the blood that can recognize and attach to a particular type of cell, such as a lung cancer cell.

Monoclonal antibodies are mixed with a sputum sample, obtained from a deep cough, that contains cells from the lung's lining. These antibodies will "stick" to any cells that have undergone cancerous changes.

Scientists believe that this method allows both non-small-cell and small-cell lung cancers to be diagnosed two years earlier than do current methods. Earlier detection would offer early treatment and increases survival.

Studies will continue to determine the accuracy of using monoclonal antibodies for early lung cancer detection, and to identify other changes associated with lung cancer development.

Q. Following my mastectomy, I developed something called lymphedema. What can you tell me about this condition?

A. Lymphedema is swelling in an extremity resulting from fluid accumulation due to damage, blockage or loss of lymph nodes.

Not all women develop lymphedema following mastectomy. But lymphedema can develop in an arm (on the same side as the mastectomy) after breast surgery because the underarm lymph nodes and their connecting vessels are removed. This slows circulation of lymph fluid from the affected arm, causing excess fluid buildup.

Radiation treatment to these lymph nodes can also produce lymphedema.

Your physician may recommend special exercises and wearing an elastic sleeve to increase circulation in the arm and decrease swelling. In addition, women who develop lymphedema need to take special care of the affected arm to guard against infection. Some suggestions are:

O Have blood pressure checks, blood tests and injections done on the unaffected arm when possible.

O Avoid wearing watches or jewelry on the affected arm, or wear them loosely.

O Use hand cream or lotion to soften cuticles -- don't cut them.

O Use an electric razor when shaving the affected underarm to avoid scratches or nicks.

O Avoid sunburn.

Independence teen learns to cope with diabetes

BY CHARLOTTE WALL

It's not easy to be a child and have to cope with a disease. The best thing that can be said about most childhood diseases is that they tend to leave the body in a couple of weeks.

But that wasn't the case for Shelly Lang. Shelly didn't "catch" her disease from something "in the air," and it didn't "go away" in a few days.

Shelly has Juvenile Diabetes, a disease that will last her lifetime. The diagnosis came when she was 6 1/2 years old. Since, she has taken an insulin shot daily.

Diabetes, Shelly explains, means that the body has a problem metabolizing or efficiently using sugars and carbohydrate intake.

She has been active in the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation for nine years, attending special camps, participating in walk-a-thons and attending leadership conferences.

In April, Shelly went to the Juvenile Diabetes Youth Leadership Conference in Washington, D.C. There she talked with United States legislators about programs that benefit those with diabetes.

The daughter of Terry and Sharon Lang of Independence Township, Shelly will graduate from Lake Orion High School in June.

Although today Shelly's friends are quick to understand her diabetes and to help her if needed, that was not always the case.

"Kids had a hard time accepting it at that age. They tend to think you have cooties or something."

SHELLY LANG, 17, is devoted to helping others learn about Juvenile Diabetes.

When her tiny playmates first learned that she had diabetes, they didn't know how to cope; they were fearful when Shelly was around. And there were times when they were mean.

"Kids had a hard time accepting it at that age," says Shelly philosophically. "They tend to think you have cooties or something."

But due to the help of her parents, Shelly found it easy to accept. They encouraged her to learn to care for herself, including giving herself the daily shot.

"I learned that this is the way it is, so I had to do it," she adds. By age 7, she was caring for herself completely.

She says her doctor has always been understanding with her. Whenever she would read of a new treatment she wanted to try, he would be supportive and explain why the treatment may or may not work.

"I can tell when I'm getting low. I get real crabby, worn down. My hands begin to shake."

"He understood why I wanted to try it," says Shelly.

Today, other than the daily dose of insulin, Shelly's life is quite normal. She does not have to follow a strict diet. "I just watch my sweet intake and follow the doctor's advice; this keeps it under control," she says.

Sometimes Juvenile Diabetes can be attributed to heredity. Shelly says that's not the case for her. She has two brothers and a sister, none of whom have diabetes. "There's no diabetes in the last three generations of our family," she says.

Over the years, Shelly has learned a great deal about diabetes: how it affects the body and how to deal with the disease. She has shared her knowledge with children attending Camp MiDicha in Columbiaville. The camp is sponsored by the Juvenile Diabetes Association for children with diabetes.

Like those attending the camp today, Shelly went there each summer as a child. Later, as a teen, she was a counselor. "I've been to Camp MiDicha every year since I was 9," says Shelly. This year, she will not return. Because she's saving money for college, she will be in the workforce. "But my heart will be at camp," she adds. "I already miss it."

Although most of Shelly's memories of camp are good ones, there have been some frightening times. Once she helped a child come out of a diabetic coma. "I know what to do, how to administer the needed medications," she says, with a sense of pride and awe that come from saving a life.

She has helped her friends learn to administer insulin so they will know what to do if she should need assistance.

"I can tell when I'm getting low," she says. "I get real crabby, worn down. My hands begin to shake."

For those times, Shelly carries snacks, juices or glucose tablets.

"I've written school reports on diabetes so others will understand," says Shelly.

She has also given speeches at schools and for various organizations.

"Each time I've presented a talk, I've found others will open up and talk about their experiences," Shelly says. "Some find having diabetes very hard to accept; they deny it. They don't want anyone to think they are 'different.' Sometimes it's the parents of a diabetic child who will deny the disease.

"That's really hard because the children need to talk to someone; they need to share their fears and concerns," adds Shelly.

Next fall, Shelly plans to attend Oakland Community College. Once she earns her associate's degree, she hopes to attend either Wayne State University, Detroit, or Western Michigan University, Kalamazoo. "I hope to become an occupational therapist," she says.

Shelly doesn't expect diabetes to keep her from attaining her goal.

"I manage my diabetes; it doesn't run me," says a confident Shelly.

Nutrition pointers for the athlete

If you're an athlete looking to be in top shape for competition, here are five nutritional pointers to keep in mind.

- Drink plenty of water before, during and after a workout. Water is without doubt the most important nutrient for an athlete.
- The meal eaten before a competitive event should be moderately high in carbohydrates and minimal in fat.
- An adequate diet provides all the necessary nutrients -- carbohydrate, protein, fat, vitamins, minerals, water, plus enough calories to maintain your ideal competitive weight.
- There is no magical precompetition meal. Most experts agree that a meal should be eaten three to four hours prior to the event.
- You can meet the high calorie requirements of an active competition best by consuming several meals and snacks throughout the day.

Here's the latest word on calcium

The Dairy Council of Michigan wants you to know that when it comes to getting calcium in your diet all dairy products are equally good.

Dairy foods are the main source of calcium in the American diet, supplying some 76 percent of the recommended daily allowance. Until now, however, the efficiency of the body to absorb calcium from various dairy foods had not been investigated.

For example, it was once thought that people absorbed less calcium from chocolate milk than from white milk because of an ingredient in the chocolate. It was also widely thought that yogurt was a better source than unfermented products.

A recent study at Creighton University School of Medicine, Omaha, Neb., indicates there is no difference in the amount of calcium absorbed by the body from whole milk, chocolate milk, yogurt and cheese. The study involved healthy, post-menopausal women.

Calcium carbonate dietary supplements were found to be just as good in most of the women tested, but a few did absorb less calcium from the supplements, compared to the absorption level of consuming dairy foods.

The study leads Dr. Robert Recker, principal investigator of the study, to suggest that some people may absorb calcium adequately from food, but not in a supplement form.

Evidence continues to mount that calcium is an important nutrient. Research has suggested it may play a beneficial role in the prevention of osteoporosis, high blood pressure and colon cancer.

The Dairy Council advises that a balanced diet containing foods from the four food groups - milk, meat, fruits/vegetables and grain - is the best way to meet individual calcium needs.

Hearing aids provide help to hearing impaired

I recently had the pleasure of meeting Timothy Lundy, an energetic 7-year-old from Beaverton, Ore. Timmy and I share a common challenge: we both are hearing impaired. And we are not alone.

Figures from the National Center for Health Statistics indicate that hearing loss affects 21 million Americans in one of both ears. Roughly 16 of every 1,000 school-aged youngsters use hearing aids; nearly 300 of every 1,000 people 65 and older have a hearing loss that requires them to use an hearing aid in one or both ears.

A child's hearing loss often is noticed first by parents or teachers, allowing the family to seek assistance from the family doctor or hearing specialists.

Quite often, however, older citizens either fail to recognize that they have a problem, or they may be too embarrassed to seek help. Family members may notice the loss first -- the television is turned up too loud; the person shouts to be understood; words and sentences need to be repeated.

It is crucial that people with hearing or speech problems seek help, so they can overcome feelings of isolation and frustration and participate fully in social and professional activities.

What should you do if you or someone you love suspects a hearing problem? First, see your family doctor, who will determine if an infection or a blockage is the problem.

Your doctor may then recommend a visit to an ear specialist, called an otolaryngologist or otologist, for further medical evaluation, or to an audiologist for an evaluation of your hearing and, if warranted, an assessment of things that might be done to help you hear better.

Treatment might include medicine, surgery or one or more hearing aids. If the right treatment for you turns out to be a hearing aid or aids, an audiologist will evaluate your hearing and recommend the aid that best meets your needs.

Audiologists can dispense hearing aids as well as refer you to hearing aid specialists from whom you can purchase aids.

More than 90 percent of all hearing-aid users have some form of nerve deafness, a common type of hearing loss. Another kind of hearing loss, called conductive hearing loss, is often helped by surgery.

FROM THE SURGEON GENERAL OF THE U.S. PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

C. Everett Koop, M.D.
Department of Health and Human Services

My own progressive hearing loss has been helped dramatically by the use of two hearing aids. They have helped me maintain a full schedule of public meetings, speaking engagements and social functions.

I don't mean to imply that hearing aids are the answer for everyone, but they certainly can make a difference for lots of people. If an elderly person can hear at all, a hearing aid usually can improve his or her hearing.

Some simple assistive listening devices, such as telephone amplifiers, telecoil switches on hearing aids and loop induction systems in theaters, places of worship and other public meeting facilities, also can help.

Sadly, of the nearly 12 million Americans with hearing loss who could benefit from wearing hearing aids, only about three million do use them. Two common reasons for this are vanity and expense.

Although the expense of a hearing aid can pose a genuine problem for many people, I have no sympathy for the person whose hearing would be helped by a hearing aid but who refuses to wear one because of the way it would look to others. When former President Ronald Reagan was told that he had a hearing loss, he asked one question: would hearing aids help? If so, he wanted them.

Hearing aids can help a lot of people. This is the message that young Timmy Lundy and I want to get out to the millions of people who have communicative disorders. Not only can most hearing and speech problems be treated, many can be prevented by early intervention and treatment.

For more information about hearing and speech, contact the Council for Better Hearing and Speech Month, a non-profit group of 22 organizations concerned with hearing and speech problems. The Council's address is One Lomb Memorial Drive, P.O. Box 9887, Rochester, New York 14623-0887.

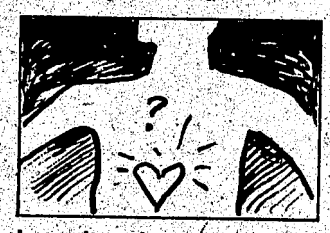
In Newfoundland, it was once believed clover in the bath would cure skin diseases.

In ancient Greece, women counted their age from the date on which they were married, not the day they were born.



In ancient times, people believed that love resided in the liver, and not in the heart, as some say now.

Life Savers

Who are they?

The people pictured above represent a small percentage of the medical team at Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital's (POH) 24-Hour Emergency Trauma Center. Every day these and other highly trained professionals are dedicated and ready to provide treatment within a second's notice... for all kinds of illnesses and injuries imaginable... major or minor. The POH staff is prepared for whatever comes through the doors of the Emergency Center.

Recognized as one of the top emergency centers in the State of Michigan, POH is renowned for saving lives. Many of the patients treated at POH are severe cases — the result of motor vehicle accidents, or severe bodily malfunctioning such as heart attack and strokes. Lesser injuries such as broken bones, cuts and bruises are handled quickly and efficiently. POH's 24-Hour Emergency Trauma Center provides:

- Full-time Emergency Medicine Physician Specialists
- All nurses certified in Advanced Cardiac Life Support
- 24-hour in-house coverage and staffing of surgical and medical residents
- 24-hour staffing of operating room personnel
- A high-tech Medical/Surgical Intensive Care Unit staffed by specially trained ICU nurses

You can be a life saver too.

POH is now offering a free booklet, The Life Savers' Home First Aide Guide. The booklet is full of useful medical information for you, often the first "aide" at the scene of an injury, illness or accident. It covers everything from the symptoms and treatment of the common fever, to how to identify a heart attack or stroke and what action should be taken. Also covered are the proper first aid treatments for insect bites, sunburn, cuts, bruises and much more.

Keep the Life Savers' Home First Aide Guide handy in your home. In an emergency, it can make a "life saver" out of the first "aide." For your free booklet call POH at: (313) 338-5385. Or, fill out the order form below and mail.

Researchers study cravings for chocolate and more

Cravings for chocolate milkshakes or ice cream may be triggered by the same physiological mechanism that is responsible for drug addiction, according to a University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, study.

Taste preferences for sweet, rich desserts, say the Michigan researchers, are influenced by natural opiod peptides -- pleasure-enhancing, opiate-like molecules manufactured by the human brain. When the natural opioids are blocked, sugar and fate become less appealing and people actually eat less.

The results of the U-M study were presented at the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association in San Francisco, Calif., May 11.

The U-M researchers compared the effects of a non-addictive synthetic opiod called butorphanol with the effects of naloxone, a substance that blocks the body's natural opioids.

The two drugs were administered intravenously to nine normal-weight women. They were also infused with a third substance -- an inactive saline-solution placebo -- that provided a baseline for comparing the effect of the other two drugs.

The intravenous infusions were given one day apart and in random order. Neither the patient nor the nurse knew which substance was being infused that day.

Prior to each infusion, the subjects tasted 20 chilled mixtures of milk, cream and sugar of varying sweetness and fat content and rated the perceived sweetness and pleasantness of each sample. Then the taste-preference test was repeated following one hour of drug infusion.

"We found that preference ratings rose on butorphanol days but were much reduced by the naloxone," said Adam Drewnowski, associate professor of human nutrition in the U-M School of Public Health, who led the taste study.

The subjects' perceptions of sweetness intensity, however, were not affected by either drug, nor did naloxone have any apparent side effects. The subjects said they did not feel nauseated or ill; they simply found sweet milkshakes less appealing.

"Naloxone appears to block the brain's pleasure response to the sweets and fats," said Blake A. Gosnesll, assistant research scientist in psychiatry at the U-M Medical School and co-author of the study.

U-M research team manipulates taste preferences with drugs to reduce intake of sugars and fats.

"It is a bit like chewing gum stick in a keyhole. It keeps the molecules of the brain's natural opioids from attaching to or fitting into the receptors, so the craving never gets started," he said.

Following each infusion, the subjects also were offered a tray of some of their favorite snack foods, presented in 100-calorie mini-portions. The foods were either sweet or non-sweet and included both high-fat and low-fat choices.

The four categories of food included: low-sugar, low-fat (breads, popcorn); high-sugar, low-fat (jelly beans and marshmallows); low-sugar, high fat (potato chips, Lorna Doone cookies); and the most popular option, high-sugar, high-fat (candy bars, Oreo cookies and M&Ms).

Naloxone, the opioid blocker, reduced food intake in all categories, but it had the greatest impact on sweet, high-fat foods. The total intake of chocolate and cookies was reduced by the naloxone, and the drop in fat calories consumed was 59 percent.

"Some researchers think that the desire for sweet desserts involves carbohydrate craving and the central neurotransmitter, serotonin," Drewnowski said.

"The fact is that such desserts usually are rich in both fat and sugar," he said. "Our research suggests that opioid peptides also are involved in these cravings. Serotonin is no longer the only game in town."

The Michigan researchers now are testing the effect of opiate-like drugs on the sugar and fat preferences of patients with eating disorders.

"Uncontrollable eating binges are characteristic of bulimia nervosa," said study co-author Dean D. Krahn, assistant professor of psychiatry and director of the Eating Disorders Clinic at the U-M Medical Center.

"It may be that people with eating disorders react differently or are more sensitive to their natural opioids," he said. "Our current research project may have implications for the pharmacological treatment of bulimia."

The Michigan researchers cautioned that their work still is preliminary and many questions remain to be answered. For example, despite an elevation in taste responsiveness, the butorphanol had no impact on the amount of food consumed.

Also, since naloxone can be administered only by injection and because the drug's long-term effects till are not fully known, it's unclear whether the study's findings will have a practical use.

Naltrexone, a derivative of naloxone that can be taken orally, has been found to cause nausea and is generally regarded as ineffective long-term appetite suppressant.

The U-M study was supported by a grant from the National Institute of Drug Abuse. Karen K. Canum, clinical care coordinator in the department of psychiatry at the U-M Medical School, also participated in the research.

This information was provided by the News and Information Services at U-M.

Coping With Heartburn

If you are one of the millions of people who suffer from heartburn, the most common symptom of reflux, there are things you can do to improve your lifestyle and your health . . .

1. Avoid spicy, acidic, tomato-based or fatty foods like chocolate, tomatoes, citrus fruits and fruit juices.

2. Limit your intake of coffee, tea, alcohol and colas.

3. Watch your weight (Being overweight increases intra-abdominal pressure which can aggravate reflux.)

4. Don't gorge yourself at mealtime. Eat moderate amounts of foods.

5. Don't exercise too soon after eating.

6. Have meals at least 3-4 hours before lying down.

7. Stop (or at least reduce smoking).

8. Elevate the head of your bed.

9. See your physician if you are taking antacids three or more times a week.

The Woman's Letter

Dr. Stephen Friedman

● Using either marijuana and cocaine during pregnancy can result in impaired fetal growth, Barry Zuckerman, MD, and colleagues report in the New England Journal of Medicine (Mar. 23). In their study, women who used marijuana or cocaine gave birth to infants who were shorter and lighter than normal babies. The women were recruited from a clinic at Boston City Hospital, and came from a poor, innercity population. Researchers used both interviews and urine tests to gauge drug use.

● Exsmokers gain weight because smoking raises the metabolic rate. A study by Kenneth Perkins, MD, and colleagues finds that smokers, on average, burn about 100 calories more per day than nonsmokers. The researchers suggest that a person who is trying to quit smoking walk an extra mile a day. (See the New England Journal of Medicine, April 6.)

● Risk of breast cancer rises with breast density, according to findings presented at an American Cancer Society meeting by Audrey F. Saftlas, PhD, of the Centers for Disease Control. Women with denser, firmer breasts are more likely to contract breast cancer than women whose breasts are composed primarily of fatty tissue. Breast density decreases with increased body weight, age, and the number of births.

What's In That Food?

These days, many Americans are trying to reduce the amount of fat within foods that leads to heart disease and arteriosclerosis. And besides trying to limit cholesterol intake, the health-conscious American consumer is also trying to limit his or her intake of calories, sodium, and sugar.

The following quiz, prepared with the help of materials supplied by the Nutrition Action Healthletter, will give you an idea of what you've learned over the past few nutrition-conscious years.

1. How many teaspoons of sugar are in each 12-ounce can of cola?
   a. 2 teaspoons b. 4 teaspoons c. 6 teaspoons d. 10 teaspoons
2. Which of these fast food items contains the most sodium?
   a. Cheeseburger b. Apple pie c. Milkshake d. French fries
3. Which of the following two foods contains more fat and calories?
   a. Slice of cheesecake b. A triple cheeseburger
4. Carob candy bars sold in health food stores are much more nutritious than regular milk chocolate bars.
   a. True b. False
5. Researchers have found that the rind and fleshy parts of a particular fruit may be a cholesterol fighter. What is that fruit?
   a. Apple b. Banana c. Grapefruit
6. Certain forms of cancer have been linked to a high-fat diet.
   a. True b. False

Answers: 1. (d). Ten teaspoons. Soda, in fact, is the largest single source of sugar in the American diet. 2. If you guessed fries, you're wrong! They just taste saltier because the sodium is on the surface. The correct answer is (a). 3. It's the triple cheeseburger, with a whopping 1,040 calories, and the same fat percentage as the cheesecake. 4. False. Both are loaded with fat and sugar. 5. (c). 6. True. (Cancer of the colon, breast, prostate gland, and endometrium-lining of the uterus).

What Causes Osteoporosis?

Dr. Mathias Weltz

The development of osteoporosis is a complex process with nutritional, physical, hormonal, genetic and racial factors involved. Three of the major contributors to osteoporosis include:

CALCIUM DEFICIENCY-Calcium insufficiency may be caused by two major factors: inadequate intake of calcium-rich foods or decreased availability of calcium. Studies indicate that low calcium intake accelerates bone loss, while an increased intake retards that process. Decresed availability may be due to an age-related decrease in absorptive capacity, inadequate intake of vitamin D (or little exposure to sunlight), or interference from certain drugs such as tetracycline, corticosteroids, or aluminum-containing antacids.

LACK OF REGULAR EXERCISE-Immobilized individuals lose bone at a high rate. Conversely, individuals who exercise regularly seem to be better protected against bone loss. Mechanical forces applied to bone through muscular contraction and gravitational pull stimulate bone formation. Exercises which pull and stress the long bones, such as walking and jogging, seem to be the most beneficial.

SEX DIFFERENCES-Sex hormones play a role in maintaining strong bones. As the female hormone, estrogen, decreases after menopause, the bones contribute a larger share of calcium to meet the body's need. This is the main reason that women are eight times more likely to develop osteoporosis than men. Men are less likely to develop osteoporosis because of their greater bone and muscle mass and because they tend to exercise more than women. Men also typically consume more calcium-rich foods than women.

Friendship important in maintaining good health

We network. We "do" lunch. At the office, we exchange pleasantries with co-workers at nearby computer terminals. In the evening, we rub elbows with people working out next to us at the health club.

Our schedules are full, and most of us see a lot of people in the course of a day. But how many of them can we call friends. Would we feel free to share a personal problem with them? Would we be willing to listen and be supportive during a difficult time in their lives?

According to Mary Whitehead, nursing supervisor at the Harold E. Fox Center, Pontiac, there is a definite link between friendships and mental health.

"To be emotionally healthy, human beings need to love and be loved and to feel worthwhile to themselves and others," she said.

"We all need someone to share our problems and our joys. Having a good friend helps keep life in perspective. That person can be a husband or wife, sister or brother, someone you've known for years or someone you've just met."

What qualities make friendships last?

"Commitment, caring and trust are essential," said Marilyn Thompson of the Fox Center. "Openmindedness and non-judgmental attitudes also keep friendships strong."

About 20 years ago, the neighborhood was a prime source for making friends, said Candy Endress, director of psychiatric nursing at the Fox Center.

"Husbands went off to work, and women generally stayed home to care for the household and kids," she said. "Friendships blossomed over coffee as women visited with each other and shared news about themselves and their families.

"These friendship bonds often extended to the husbands as well. Today, the number of women employed outside the home has risen sharply, and the two-career family is common. As one woman put it, 'I don't know what I'd do if I didn't go out to work. There's nobody in the neighborhood during the day.'"

Other social changes, including high divorce rates that isolate people, a mobile society where lots of families move every few years, and the fast-paced live so many of us are caught up in today can put a strain on friendships.

"In many ways, having close friendships came naturally and more easily for us 20 years ago because many of us had less demanding schedules," said Thompson. "Now we just have to work harder at maintaining our friendships."

According to Thompson, good communication is a skill that can be learned and developed. Although she teaches classes in improving couple relationships and does marital and family counseling, much of her advice applies to anyone wanting to strengthen a relationship.

Following are some important guidelines for maintaining healthy friendships:

- Show that you value the other person. Make a commitment to spend time with each other.
- Share and be assertive regarding your thoughts, needs and feelings and encourage your friend(s) to do the same.
- Be a good listener. The foundation of good communication is good listening.
- Each person is unique. Respect individual differences without being judgmental.

"When looking for friends, be guided by your interests and values," said Thompson. "Adult education and college classes, health clubs, athletic pursuits and alumni groups can be good places to meet people."

If you've been so busy you've been neglecting your friends, consider meeting more often for lunch or dinner. The busiest of us have to take time to eat. If you exercise, invite a friend to come along occasionally. You can catch up on the latest news while biking or walking together.

As we begin a new year, give your emotional health a boost. Make sure that time spent with your friends is given high priority on this year's schedule.

Here's news to smile about: Scientists say that everybody can take steps to prevent tooth decay.

Cavities are caused during a process called demineralization. That's what happens when calcium and phosphate, in the presence of bacterial acid, leave the tooth surface.

Over a period of time, this can result in cavity formation. The reverse of this process is called remineralization. That's when calcium and phosphate from the saliva, in the presence of flouride, are encouraged to enter the tooth and make it healthy and strong.

Here's a fact that may make older folks smile: The older you become, the more resistant your teeth are to decay. This is because over a period of time, the tooth's surface picks up various minerals and substances which cause it to become more resistant to decay.

You can protect your teeth by eating sensibly and not too often. Research suggests that what you eat is not as important as the number of times you eat.

For about 20 minutes after you eat, when plaque is present, acid is formed on the tooth's surface. After this period of time, the acid begins to disappear, and in the presence of flouride, tooth remineralization is enhanced.

Teeth need time to remineralize. So for healthy teeth, eat in moderation, brush with a flouride toothpaste, floss to remove plaque and visit the dentist regularly.

RESULTS

Why cover up the problem, when eliminating the cause will result in true relief? In chiropractic health care we believe that the secret to good health lies within your body, not your medicine cabinet. Drugs only temporarily cover-up the symptoms of disease. Chiropractors concentrate on your spine, which protects the nerves which link the control centers in the brain and all other parts of the body. If you are suffering from a spine-related problem, there's not a drug in the world that will make you better. Isn't it time you gave chiropractic a try?
