Driver goes wrong way on I-75 kills self and bride, groom

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Several days after the fiery June 24 crash that took three young lives on I-75, Springfield Township, witnesses continued to call police to tell them what they saw.

But even as more information is collected, it becomes harder to imagine how the tragic accident could have taken place.

Investigators do know that Teresa L. Patterson, 28, of Clarkston, was traveling the wrong way early Saturday morning on I-75 when she hit the car carrying Donald K. Fournier, 25, and his fiancé, Diane M. Dennis, 20, both of Royal Oak. All were killed.

Police said they may never know how Patterson got onto the highway going the wrong way or why she traveled for more than five miles without turning around.

"A few more witnesses have called and placed her on I-75 north of Grange Hall Road," said Deputy John Kress, an accident investigator with the Oakland County Sheriff's Department.

"That's about five miles north of the accident site," he said, adding that Patterson could have entered the freeway at Grand Blanc, the next exit north.

One witness told police that Patterson pulled onto the shoulder near Grange Hall Road and waited until about 20 cars passed by her before she took off again, according to Kress. Another witness said he flashed his headlights at her and got her to pull over again. Again, she continued in the wrong direction.

According to Kress, Patterson may not have reached

A severe thunderstorm raging through the area June 26 left in its wake smoldering homes, downed power lines and streets littered with debris.

North Oakland County, including Independence Township, was one of the hardest areas hit, according to public service officials.

Independence Township firefighters raced to 14 calls for help in the span of just a few hours.

"We had everybody out, everywhere," said Sgt. Mike Bussell of the township fire department.

One home and a car were destroyed by fire and two other homes received minor damage, Bussell said. There were no injuries.

The most widely felt damage was the loss of electricity to thousands of Independence Township residents. On Tuesday, more than one third of the township was still without power, according to fire department estimates.

Detroit Edison recorded a loss of electricity to 52,000 customers in the southeast Michigan service area; about 4,500 were still in the dark on Tuesday afternoon.

The power company had not yet compiled breakdowns of specific areas when contacted.

"The north was pretty hard hit," said spokesperson Marty Bufalini. "Our main concern now is restoration."

Independence Township fire stations began to get hectic at about 7 p.m. Throughout the evening, reinforcements were called in from Brandon, Springfield, Groveland, Orion and Waterford townships, as firefighters responded to trouble spots in the area.

As of Tuesday, June 27, 24 entries were signed up for the parade, sponsored by the Independence Township Firefighters Association.

Sponsored by the Clarkston Masonic Temple Board Association, the breakfast runs from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. and includes pancakes, sausage, coffee, milk and juice.

Cost is $3 for adults, $2 for children ages 5-12, and children under age 5 are free.

The parade starts at 10 a.m. at the Clarkston Junior High School parking lot on Waldon Road. It will run west on Church Street to Main Street where it will turn north through the Village of Clarkston, to west on Miller Road where it will disperse.

Line up of parade entries begins at 9 a.m. For more information about the parade, call 625-1924. For more information about the breakfast, call 673-3033.

I-75 accident kills bride, groom, truck driver the speed limit when her Isuzu pickup truck hit the Fournier compact car. Fournier is thought to have been traveling about 60 mph at the time of impact.

"It's unlikely that we'll find out where or why (Patterson got on the wrong way)," said OCSD Sgt. James Heiligenthal. "We're assuming now that there may have been alcohol involved."

Several beer containers were found in Patterson's truck after the accident. Routine autopsy tests, which will reveal blood alcohol levels of the three, will not be available for about a week, Heiligenthal said.

Patterson's truck hit Fournier's Chevrolet Chevette head-on about 12:10 a.m. on I-75 near the southeast Holly exit, according to OCSD records.

Springfield Township firefighters responding to the crash used the Jaws of Life, an accident recovery device, to free the bodies from the wreckage.

Fournier and Dennis were not wearing seat belts at the time of the accident; however, Patterson had her seat belt on, according to the report. All three were killed on impact and were taken to the Oakland County Medical Examiners Office.

Patricia J. Mitchell, 31, of Mount Clemens, was driving a vehicle behind Fournier and struck both the pickup truck and the Chevette. She was treated and later released from Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital with broken ankles.

Mitchell was to have been a bridesmaid in the wedding, which was set to take place in Traverse City later that day.

The groom was the youngest of 12 children. He was a student at ITT Technical Institute in Troy and was studying for an associate's degree in electronics engineering.

He is survived by his parents, David and Adele of Traverse City; brothers, David of Traverse City, Daniel of Shelby and Richard of Maine; sisters, Diane Feeney of Ariz., Michelle Silvers of Royal Oak, Martha Martin of Gaylord, Janette Chalk of Fla., Elaine Ksiazek of Pleasant Ridge, Evelyn Borunda of San Jose, Calif., Mary Longan of Royal Oak and Una Marie Sheldon of Fla.; and several nieces and nephews.

Diane Dennis, a nail technician at a salon in Birmingham, is survived by her mother, Dixie Lee Dennis of Mesick, a brother, David of Mesick; two sisters, Denise Marciniok of Roseville and Danielle of Mesick; two nephews and a niece.

Funeral services for the two were held at the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church June 26. The two were buried side by side at the Grand Traverse Memorial Gardens in Traverse City.

Patterson, a resident of Madison Court in the Village of Clarkston and an employee of a lawn service, is survived by her parents, Dayton F. and Norma Patterson of Rochester; two brothers, Mark D. and Dayton F. III; a sister, Tamara K.; and grandparents, Marie Pomeroy and Genevieve Patterson.

Private services June 24 for Patterson were arranged by the Donelson-Johns Funeral Home in Waterford Township.

CUT offers property tax, school funding reform

BY JULIE CAMPE
Clarkston News Editor

The Patterson-Headlee group came up with a plan June 24 intended to give property tax relief to Michigan residents and to fix the school financing crisis.

The next step is to gather enough signatures -- about 300,000 -- to put the issue on the ballot in 1990.

Members of CUT (Citizens Unfairly Taxed), headed by L. Brooks Patterson (former Oakland County Prosecutor) and Richard Headlee, voted by a 2-1 margin to approve the plan, said Nancy Strole, a trustee on the Springfield Township Board and third chairperson of the Patterson group, behind Headlee and Pat Anderson.

CUT started with about 17 proposals and ended up with one that would cut property taxes and would require

"This will especially benefit high-millage districts like Clarkston, Brandon, Holly. The very wealthy school districts will not necessarily be helped by this, but they won't be hurt either."

Nancy Strole

state Legislators to cut money from other areas and redirect it to local school districts, said Strole.

"If school districts take a look at this, I think they'll think it's a rational approach," said Strole.

William Jackson, finance director for Clarkston schools, said he had only heard of the plan and didn't want to comment until he sees it on paper.

Strole said the wording is not finalized yet, but the plan would:

- eliminate the Headlee override option and instead require school districts to ask voters to approve millage increases when schools need more money (the Headlee Amendment automatically rolls back millage rates whenever property values increase at a rate higher than the rate of inflation; at present, voters may override the rollback);

- mandate a 20 percent rollback in operating millages for all school districts;

- cap local school operating millage rates at 30 mills (this does not include debt levies);

- set 17 mills as the cut-off point for state aid and guarantee $3,100 per pupil from state and local taxes combined.

For instance, any district that levies at least 17 mills

Need 250,000-plus

If all goes well, members of the Patterson-Headlee group will be asking people to sign a petition as they exit the polls this fall.

The timing of the tax relief-school funding solution proposal is important, according to Nancy Strole, who holds the third chair of CUT (Citizens Unfairly Taxed).

CUT is headed by L. Brooks Patterson and Richard Headlee. Pat Anderson holds the second chair.

Strole, also a Springfield Township trustee, said voters face two tax increases on the ballot this fall, so they should be more than ready to sign a petition to place a proposal on the ballot in 1990 that would cut property taxes and help local schools.

"Michigan is a disgrace in that regard," said Strole. "It has one of the highest property tax rates in the nation and one of the lowest state aids contributions (to schools)."

"When people show up to vote no to an increase, they'll know they have an alternative," she said.

To place the Patterson-Headlee proposal on the ballot, signatures of about 250,000 registered voters are necessary, but about 300,000 would provide a cushion in case any signatures aren't certified, said Strole.

would be guaranteed $3,100 per pupil in local taxes and state aid combined. The dollar amount would be adjusted each year for increases in inflation.

One mill is $1 for every $1,000 assessed property valuation.

The plan is especially good because the state's contribution to local school districts would not be affected by the Headlee Amendment, said Strole.

"It prevents the state from weaseling out as they have in the past," she said. "Now, if the Headlee rollback takes effect, the state withdraws money, and the money is thrown to other areas."

For Clarkston schools, the present about 35-mill levy generates about $3,200 per pupil, said Strole. Under the proposed funding plan, a 17-mill levy would generate $3,100 per pupil -- a big help to local property owners.

The mandated 20 percent rollback would result in about 28 mills being levied against property owners in the Clarkston school district, and the district would have the option of decreasing that amount to anywhere below the 30-mill cap, Strole said.

"This will especially benefit high-millage districts like Clarkston, Brandon, Holly," she said. "The very wealthy school districts will not necessarily be helped by this, but they won't be hurt either."

Another good aspect of the plan is the elimination of the Headlee override, said Strole, referring to the proposed alternative of asking voters to approve a millage increase when school districts need more money.

The Headlee override "is very confusing to people," she said. "All we'll be doing is calling a spade a spade. ... School districts won't need to go back for Headlee overrides all the time. Right now, they're penalized for rolling back."

Strole said she expects opposition to the plan from special interest groups and from people who now benefit from the state's spending in such areas as the Department of Social Services and correctional facilities.

She also expects opposition from many Legislators, although local Legislators such as Rep. Mat Dunaskiss and Sen. Rudy Nichols are a part CUT.

Most Legislators will be opposed because they'll

"There's enough pork floating around Lansing that I think the main industry should be pig farming."

Nancy Strole

have to decide what spending areas to cut, Strole said.

"It's a mentality that says, 'I won't gore your office if you don't gore mine,'" she said. "This lets voters bypass that attitude."

At present, there's a $300-million surplus in the state budget, and spending cuts are possible, said Strole, but Legislators "throw around money like confetti. ... There's enough pork floating around Lansing that I think the main industry should be pig farming."

I heard Bob Seger's "Turn the Page" last night. It made me think of my stepsister, Robin Cole, and of my friend, Kelly Brumback, who both live in Florida now.

It brought back memories of the talks and laughter Kelly and I used to share in her basement bedroom, decorated in Seger paraphernalia, and of open gym nights at Clarkston Junior High, when Bob Seger blared from the scratchy speakers.

It summoned images of my brother, Ron, listening to Bob Seger as he lifted (or attempted to lift) weights in his bedroom as I tried to distract him.

When I first heard Bob Seger, I didn't like him. His music sounded harsh to my ears.

Not being of the MTV-bred generation, I didn't know much about contemporary music as an adolescent. I knew songs such as "Oh, My Darlin' Clementine" and "Found a Peanut" that we sang on family vacations.

And I knew songs such as "76 Trombones" and "The Wells Fargo Wagon" that Mr. Wright taught us in elementary school music classes.

In fifth and sixth grades, I listened to the Carpenters and to Barry Manilow because teachers allowed those songs to be played in the classroom.

I didn't even own a radio, not to mention the "jam boxes" and the Walkmans and the complete stereo-tape-player systems of today's adolescents.

So you can understand my initial reaction to Bob Seger.

My new stepsister, Robin, was playing her new album in her basement the first time I heard him.

Robin was a year older than I, and I thought she was cool. She wore Levi's and cowboy boots and braces.

And she loved Bob Seger. But it sounded so strange to me.

"That's not singing," I said, after listening to the first song. "His voice is terrible. It's all scratchy, and he's just kind of talking."

Robin was insulted.

"He is too singing," she retorted. "And it's a lot better than Barry Manilow."

She had me there. Still, I couldn't bear to listen to him for long.

It was only later, when the songs were played in the background of other activities, that I began to like him and then to love his music.

Although I don't listen to him very often, his music always makes me smile now.

Other forms of music -- not too much of the top 40 -- now blare from my speakers: Rachmaninov and Pachelbel; Van Morrison, Sting and Gordon Lightfoot; Beethoven, Beatles and Bach.

Sometimes I'll hear some harsh, screeching metal-type sound from a teen's rolled down car window, and I'll cringe. I just can't accept some of the music of today.

I almost understand my parents' attachment to songs of their past. My dad extols the virtues of Nat (King) Cole's voice, and my father-in-law says there's nobody like Nelson Eddy.

What they remember are the good times associated with that music.

They do not like Bob Seger, although I swear to you that there's nothing greater than "Old Time Rock and Roll."

I guess Bob was right: Today's music ain't got the same soul.

Letter to Editor

What a great guy

As a long time resident of Clarkston, I have had the opportunity of following Tim McCormick's career as it progressed through the high school, college and professional ranks.

I have always recognized what an outstanding basketball player he is. This week, while our son, Jeff, was participating in the annual Tim McCormick Basketball Camp, I was able to recognize what an outstanding person Tim is, too.

Tim possesses a natural respect from young people because of his basketball success. I watched this week as he used this respect to teach his campers lessons and ideas far beyond basketball.

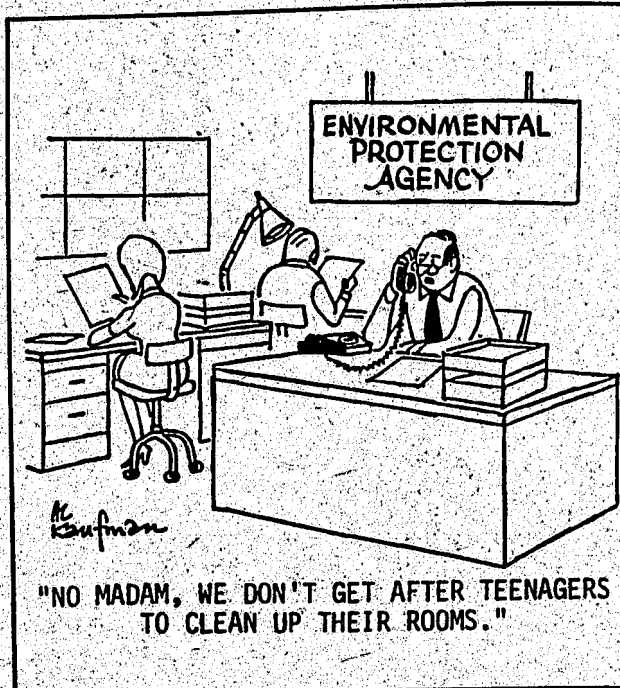

He talked to the kids of the importance of setting goals even now and working hard every day to achieve them. He spoke to them of the necessity of getting the most from their educational opportunities.

He stressed how imperative it is to stay away from drugs and the need to be strong enough to just "say no." He instructed them on the importance of being supportive of those you live, play and work with.

He emphasized that being a good person is much more important than just being a good basketball player. And, everyday, he taught by example.

I thank you, Tim, and your fine staff for an excellent camp this year. The people of Clarkston should be proud of you for your accomplishments on the basketball court, of course. But, even more importantly, we should be, and are, proud of the fine man you have grown to be.

Jim's Jottings

Daughter Luan and son-in-law Bob went to Nebraska for a wedding last weekend. Also at the wedding was a former college roomy of Bob's, now of California.

He brought with him the latest California craze.

It's stair diving.

These divers stand at the top of a set of stairs and dive into the air, landing on the (carpeted) steps, bump their way to the bottom, then roll.

I have no idea why the stairs have to be carpeted. Softness would seem to be between the diver's ears rather than on the steps.

Bob commented that his friend did it quite smoothly, too, but he himself opted for the regular way down to the recreation room.

As the evening wore on two people would stand side by side at the top and pretend the stairs were a swimming pool and dive in/down. Later three tried it at once and that brought an end to the major event of the wedding reception.

Oh, yeah, Bob's friend said the skin burns usually are gone in about three weeks.

I try not to bore you with golf stories, but I don't think you'll find this one boring. Unusual and interesting is what it is.

David Kibby has had David Fett as his playing partner in the annual Indianwood Golf and Country Club Piper Invitational for at least three years. The two were grade school chums. Now Kibby owns Kibby Laboratories in Hazel Park and Fett, of Royal Oak, is a builder.

Fett's parents are long-time members of Birmingham Country Club where he had gotten his handicap down to a three . . . before the building business took priority.

Anyway, at the Indianwood Invite three years ago Fett hit his first hole-in-one at the short par 3 hole. On at least two other par three holes that year new cars were being offered for such a feat. His only financial gain was $50 in skins.

The next year a car was offered for the single shot score on the 194 yard number 5 hole. Fett scored a hole-in-one on that hole that year, but it was in a practice round and he got nothing.

This year, last week, cars or trucks were offered on one hole on each of Indianwood's 18-hole courses.

No prizes were on the 217 yard par 3 thirteenth hole and . . . you guessed it, Fett scored another ace.

Incidentally, someone did win an Al Dittich GMC pick-up truck for a hole-in-one at the tourney. It was Bob Schodowski on his last shot of the round. On the par 3, number 3 on the new course. Bob was the assistant pro at Indianwood in 1983 & 84. He was playing with member Dean Miles.

Please do not ask how son Jim and I finished.

He helped beautify the junior high

The staff of Clarkston Junior High School would like to thank and recognized Mr. Chuck Myers, parent volunteer, for his help in organizing our school beautification project.

Thanks to his efforts and direction, our students assisted in the planting of new trees and shrubs.

Thanks, Mr. Myers! And thanks to our students who raised the money to make this endeavor possible.

Left Out! Our sincere apologies to Charlotte Cooper and Nancy Ortwine, co-chairpersons for the decorations committee for the 1989 CHS Post Graduation All-Night Party, for the omission of their names in last week's thank you letter.

Their hard work and creativity made the seniors feel "Welcomed to the Islands" from the time they walked inside under palm treed and lighted archways and on to rooms in which the theme was carried out in detail.

'If it Fitz ...'

Too important

Jim Fitzgerald

After serving in the Army for almost two years without progressing beyond the lowly rank of private first class, I was promoted suddenly to sergeant. It was a shock to me as well as my barracks buddies who usually called me "the drunken padre."

It happened 44 years ago and I'm mentioning it today only because it's part of my job to answer any questions you have about Mayor Coleman Young.

There was this question from a Mt. Clemens reader: "If that little boy visits Detroit, will he be labeled like everything else the mayor is allegedly responsible for? Will the kid have to wear a sign saying 'Mayor Coleman A. Young - Moving Detroit Forward 99.999 percent.?'"

I don't think so.

A less clinical question concerns the mayor's 23 bodyguards. Why were five of them promoted even though, according to test-score rankings, they didn't deserve it? There were 119 promotions last week from a roster of 334 candidates. Only one of the guards ranked as high as 165; four were below 277.

Several readers demanded I comment on this apparent favoritism for the mayor's platoon. They expressed agreement with the 20-year veteran officer who told the Free Press: "Being a good or a competent police officer doesn't count anymore. It's how long and how well you can plant that kiss on someone's behind. It makes you really want to study and try harder, doesn't it?"

Is there safety in numbers?

On whose behind? Are more blood tests in order? I don't think so. I don't agree the bodyguards were promoted for being toadies. A more relevant question would concern their number, not whom they kiss wherem.

Why does it take 23 bodyguards, plus their commander, to guard one body? Does Mayor Young walk through life like a quarterback in the middle of a huddle? I'm reminded of the famous moving-crowd hug that marked the end of the first Mary Tyler Moore TV series.

Even if they work around the clock, that's eight officers per 8-hour shift, and the eight cops sitting along the hall outside the mayor's bedroom must look like wall-flowers at the senior prom.

The annual cost to the taxpayers must be around a million bucks. That's a lot to pay for the guarantee Young is the only person in Detroit not likely to be hit by a stray drug-related bullet.

As for the five promotions - four to sergeant and one to investigator - they weren't determined by test scores. They were "charter promotions," based on recommendations by supervisors. So never mind how come the bodyguards were promoted ahead of officers who tested higher. What you should ask is why did Mayor Young want higher-ranked cops crowded around him?

A higher calling

That's where the "drunken padre" comes in. It was an exaggerated appellation. During the final few months of my military career, at Camp (now Ft.) Polk, La., I was assistant to the head chaplain, a protestant minister and full colonel. My beer-drinking was no more extensive than that of the average 19-year-old soldier, and no one would have said a word if I'd retained my old job as assistant half-track driver. But a few hard-up-for-laughs buddies decided it was hilariously incongruent for the likes of me to be associated with the chaplain's office, so I was rudely misnamed.

For similar reasons, there was obscene exclaiming when the chaplain announced that from that day forward I would be a sergeant. Even I was surprised enough to ask why. After all, I was usually late for work, my mimeographing was smudgy, and I was due to resume civilian life in a few months.

The chaplain explained that my promotion had nothing to do with me. He was a colonel and didn't want to be assisted by a lowly private. I chauffeured him to meetings with high-ranking officers who had high-ranking aides, and he had to maintain face.

So there's your answer. The lord mayor of Detroit shouldn't be seen in a huddle of low-ranked cops. He's too important for that. How would it look to have eight mere patrolmen sitting outside Young's bedroom the next time someone prestigious comes looking for the 99.999 percent solution?

The Roads We Travel

Less travel in future?

Brent Bair

I've commented on how advances in computer and communication systems may aid us in our travels in the future, even to the extent of taking total control of the vehicle.

Other advances in these areas may actually reduce our need to travel, and thus have an impact on congestion, fuel consumption, air pollution, accidents and all the other negative aspects associated with automobile travel. Consider the following, many of which already exist, but which may be expanded in the future.

TELECONFERENCING: We already have audioconferencing through telephone systems that permit conference calls. With the additions of videos, we will be able to have videoconferencing, thus allowing us to see the others involved in the conversation.

There is a natural preference to deal with people face to face, thereby necessitating trips to meetings. Videoconferencing may provide a more acceptable alternative. Computer conferencing will eventually allow for interactive data and information exchanges.

ELECTRONIC FUNDS TRANSFERS: Many of us already have a bank card that we use at automatic teller machines to deposit or withdraw funds from checking or savings accounts; some are even using home computers to do the same things.

This obviously reduces the number of trips to the bank where we maintain our accounts. As more of these machines are networked and more services are made available through them, it is possible that all of our bill paying may be done through them, thus bringing us closer to a checkless society.

TELEMARKETING and ELECTRONIC SHOPPING: Although marketing by telephone was introduced as far back as the late 40s, it has experienced phenomenal growth in recent years, and that growth is expected to continue.

Telemarketing industry revenues more than doubled between 1983 and 1986, and the use of toll-free "800" numbers increased to 3 billion in 1985, 10 times more than in 1975, with 80 to 85 percent of those calls involving telemarketing. Obviously, this replaces a lot of person-to-person sales visits.

An extension of telemarketing is electronic shopping. Using home computers, shoppers will be able to access a variety of stores, comparison shop, and order and pay (via credit cards) for the merchandise electronically.

The development of low-cost, high-resolution video screens will allow the shoppers to get a good look at what they are buying. With less sales help and sales space needed, the store would be able to pass on this reduced overhead cost to the buyer through lower prices. Individuals would be able to sell things such as their used furniture or cars via computerized "bulletin boards."

TELECOMMUTING: Telecommuting would be an alternative to commuting to the work place as we do today. Using a personal computer or terminal, an employee could work at home or at a nearby location.

With advances in video and voice communications through the computers, the at-home employee would be able to enjoy most of the benefits of being at work, even to the extent of participating in on-line coffee breaks with other at-home employees who are connected into the computer network.

If enough people were to work in this manner, consider the impact on rush-hour traffic. The employer would obviously benefit by reducing the amount of office space and parking needed. I'll comment more about this alternative in my next column.

All of the advances in computers and telecommunications I have mentioned seem to promise dramatic decreases in travel. Consider, however, that in 1876 a device was invented that also promised to have a dramatic impact on the need for travel. That invention was the telephone.

Planners OK Dixie, White Lake shopping center

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Developers of the new grocery store and shopping center planned for the corner of White Lake Road and Dixie Highway got final approval from a reluctant Independence Township Planning Commission June 22.

The vote clears the way for construction of the grocery and other retail stores on the 25.26-acre site where the historic Boothby house once stood.

Commission members voted 4-1 to approve the project with several conditions. Richard Oppmann cast the no vote; voting yes were Chairperson Brent Bair, Joseph Figa, Jo Fussman, and Steven Secatch. Bruce Mercado and Daniel Travis were absent.

Architect Howard Nudell told the commission that the plan was a "basic footprint" of what the commission first considered last fall. One potential change was the store itself, Nudell said. The recent sale of several A & P stores could mean a Farmer Jack would be located on the site, he explained.

The commission's approval of the project was hard won. Conceptual plans were first denied, and a second conceptual plan was tabled. Members gave the plan conceptual approval in late December with 14 conditions.

Although township planner Richard Carlisle told the commission that all of the conditions had been met, several members said they still weren't happy with the density of the project and with the fact that the parcel had been bulldozed.

The developer, Weatherford-Walker of Farmington Hills, cleared the property of several mature trees in early spring to make the land more level for construction.

Bryce Kelley of Weatherford-Walker apologized to members for the action.

"The site clearing took place, and while understandably legal, was highly inappropriate," Kelley said. "I may have left a bad impression, as the township is dealing with a woodlands ordinance."

"Weatherford-Walker apologizes to the residents and property owners of the township. Should (officials) feel it is necessary for us to meet with citizens, we'd be glad too. That's a very sensitive issue."

Kelley told members that the trees had been saved and were stored on the back of the site.

Commission members commented that the trees and other aspect of the project upset them.

"We've seen the project go downhill from the very beginning," said Fussman. "We've worked hard to resurrect it and make it as nice a corner as we can."

"I'm not happy with the project; many residents think its not an appropriate use," she said.

"I voted against the concept in the beginning," said Oppmann. "Its too dense. I'm not in favor of the original concept, and I'm obliged to continue that right now."

Chairperson Brent Bair told fellow members that the plan did have some pluses.

"I'm a little upset about what happened out here, but we have to watch that it doesn't overly bias a rational decision," he said.

The development "is within our guidelines," Bair said. "There is certainly a lot of discomfort, but I think this is all we're going to get."

Among the many conditions attached to final approval is the indefinite replacement of foliage, the maintenance of landscaping and a lighting plan.

The center will be accessible from Dixie Highway and White Lake Road.

"I'm a little upset about what happened out here, but we have to watch that it doesn't overly bias a rational decision."

Chairperson Brent Bair

Wetlands road delays phase two of Osprey Bay

BY SANDRA G. CONLEN
Clarkston News Staff Writer

A request to waive a 20-foot-wide road requirement that would give access to Osprey Bay's second phase was denied by the Springfield Township Board June 7.

Engineer Del Lohff of Kieft Engineering had proposed a 14-foot-wide road instead for the remaining six units of the 27-unit site condominium development, but to no avail.

Voting no on the waiver were Clerk J. Calvin Walters, Treasurer Lois Stiles and trustees Margaret Bloom, Nancy Strole and Charles Oaks.

Supervisor Collin Walls and Trustee Dennis Vallad voted in favor the waiver, stipulating that they approve only if the master deed is modified.

Osprey Bay is located on the north side of Eliza Lake between Rattalee Lake and Davisburg roads. The first phase of 21-units was approved in October.

After the meeting, Lohff said he would alter his plans and return to the board for final site plan approval, contingent upon a permit from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

A site condominium development is like a subdivision, except homeowners buy a "building envelope" in which to build a house of any style, and the land between houses is owned by the condominium association, comprised of homeowners.

The association is responsible for such things as lawn and road maintenance and garbage and snow removal.

At the meeting, the board took no action on the final site plan.

Before construction can begin, the project needs township approval and approval from the DNR because a patch of wetlands adjacent to I-75 needs to be crossed to reach the location of the six remaining units.

Lohff, engineer for the project, said the DNR decision was expected in about a month.

To cross the wetlands, Lohff proposed a 14-foot-wide road across the marshy area, but the township board required 20 feet.

To cross the mucky wetlands, Lohff suggested placing a geotechnical fabric called Geo-Synthetics, which involves laying down a mesh grid of the fabric with layers of sand and gravel or slag with blacktop, then covering the layers of material.

The process has been used by the Michigan Department of Transportation, Lohff said.

Storm hits Independence Township

Likely the most extensive damage was caused to a home on Deer Ridge Drive, which firefighters suspect was hit by lightning just before 8 p.m. The home caught fire and was heavily damaged by flames, water and smoke.

In another incident, firefighters were called to Holcomb Road in the Village of Clarkston on a report that wires were down.

Wires had fallen onto a car and were sparking. Firefighters set up personnel to keep people away from the dangerous area and raced on to check another report of a house fire. After they left, the car caught fire and was totally destroyed, said Engineer Ralph Przybylski.

Clearing fallen wires is next to impossible until the power company shuts off power to the area, Przybylski said. The situation is considered highly dangerous, especially if the live wires are near water or metal.

In addition to the home on Deer Ridge Drive, the storm inflicted minor damage to a home on Transparent, Independence Township. Firefighters were also called to a residence on Clintonville near Pine Knob Trail to investigate fallen wires. The wires were sending surges of power through the house, but no damage was reported.

The fire department was also called to Harvard, Independence Township, where they showed an elderly woman how to operate her oxygen tank without the use of electricity.

The DNR asked Kieft Engineering to research an alternative method for the wetland area, and Lohff came up with a 300-foot-long bridge, but it would cost about $450,000 -- much too expensive, he said.

After the meeting, Walls said the majority of the board had problems with the size of the road.

"They're not opposed to the road but not at 14 feet wide," he said. "They want the road 20 feet wide for the six additional units."

The area's first warning of the storm came in the form of a thunderstorm watch issued by the National Weather Service about 2 p.m. For north Oakland County, the watch turned into a severe thunderstorm warning about 7 p.m.

"In the north area of Waterford, we had a report at 6:56 of 50-mile-an-hour winds and half-inch hail," said Iola Patton of the Detroit Metropolitan Airport weather station.

"Most of it was activity ahead of the front," she added. Forecasters attribute the heavy weather to a cold front moving from the northwest part of the country. The front was expected to sweep through the area on the evening of Tuesday, June 27, without the heavy storms that preceded it.

That came as good news to emergency personnel, who were still recovering from their efforts the night before.

The last firefighter straggled in from storm duty at 6:30 a.m. Tuesday, Przybylski said.

Firefighters were still receiving reports of lines falling on Tuesday and were busy with restoring fire-fighting equipment used throughout the night.

When asked what it was like working during the storm, Przybylski said, "You clear (the scene you're working on) and go onto the next one. You filter things out, bring other people in. You just concentrate on what you're doing."

Thendara residents responsible for road work

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

With the paving of roads in their Independence Township neighborhood, residents of Thendara Park may eventually be asked to pay for any extra winter maintenance on those roads.

A resolution describing the maintenance conditions was approved by the Independence Township Board June 20 and will be sent to the Oakland County Road Commission (OCRC).

The OCRC brought up the maintenance issue as a condition of their approval to transform the roads from private to public. Once the roads become public, the OCRC is responsible for their maintenance.

In explaining the resolution, township attorney Gerald Fisher told the board that because many of the grades in the area are steeper than normal, they may require additional maintenance in the winter.

"The road commission wants it clearly understood that they would not provide the extra maintenance," Fisher said. "People (in Thendara) will not get special treatment."

Fisher added that if the extra maintenance is needed and is not taken care of by individual property owners, the township would be required to establish a special assessment district to pay for an outside firm to perform the work.

they would special assess them," said Frank Millard, in clarifying the language.

"But that's not in here," he said referring to the resolution. "How are we going to reach that decision?"

Fisher told Millard that residents would be notified of the resolution and its contents; he added that the road commission would likely want to avoid the expense of creating a special assessment district and would give residents a good chance to do the work themselves.

In addition to the approval from the OCRC, easements from about 20 property owners in Thendara Park must be obtained before construction can begin.

An easement grants the right to use land belonging to another for such things as roads or utilities.

Township officials estimated that construction would begin in July.

"The road commission wants it clearly understood that they would not provide the extra maintenance."

ment district to pay for an outside firm to perform the work.

About 255 Thendara Park residents are already being assessed for the $2.45 million cost of paving the roads.

Board members questioned how the OCRC would decide whether to create a special assessment district.

"They've contemplated that they would offer an opportunity to residents (to do the extra work), and if not,

Keep pets healthy, comfortable during summer

While the heat and humidity is uncomfortable for us, it can be potentially dangerous for pets. Providing extra care can help to avert an accident or injury.

The Michigan Humane Society has the following suggestions:

* Never leave a pet unattended in a parked car. Even when the windows are left partially open, the temperature can rise to unbearable levels in a very short time, creating the conditions for heat stroke, and even death.

* If your pet is outdoors, make sure he is confined and that shade and fresh, clean water are available at all times. Also, watch for any insect bites. They generally appear on the face and the ears. Consult with your veterinarian if you notice any irregularities.

* Exercising and walks are best done in the early morning or late evening when temperatures are cooler.

* Be very careful about the use and storage of fertilizers, pesticides and cleaning products to avoid accidental poisonings.

* Don't let pets hang at their heads out of the car window while you're driving, and never let them ride in the back of a pick-up truck. Eye and ear infections can result from blowing airborne particles, as well as severe injury or death, from leaping or being thrown out of a moving vehicle.

* Panting is a dog's way of "sweating." Never bind a dog's mouth closed. As crazy as this sounds, some people tie or tape their dogs mouth closed to stop them from barking. This unacceptable training measure has resulted in heatstroke and death.

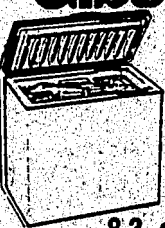

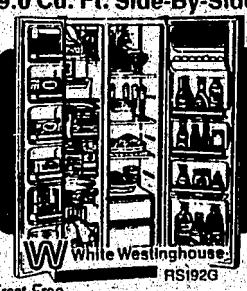

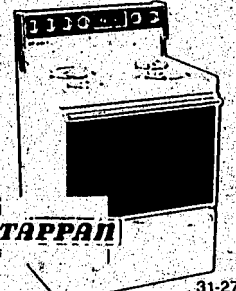

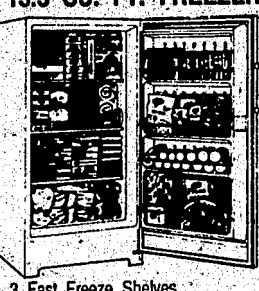

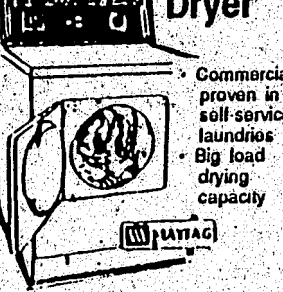

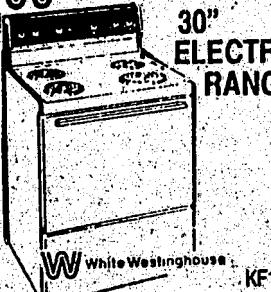

* Be sure you dog has been tested for heartworm and is on preventive medication from April until the first frost. Unprotected dogs can get heartworm from an infective mosquito.

Animals love the outdoors, and you and your pet can have a terrific summer with a few precautions.

Village ordinances still on the books

Order leashes for your chickens, and keep that glue-sniffing habit quiet

BY BONNIE WATTLEWORTH
Clarkston News Special Writer

Ignorance isn't a defense for breaking the law. But there are some Village of Clarkston ordinances that most residents wouldn't realize they were breaking or even expect.

For example, if your chickens need some fresh air, be sure to walk them on leashes. A chicken owner could face a $10 fine or 10 days in jail for permitting his feathered friends or any fowl "to run at large" within Clarkston, according to a 1915 ordinance.

And don't plan on hitching your horse to a shade or ornamental tree either, because village ordinance 7 prohibits it. Since 1915, lawless horse-hitchers have faced $100 fines or 90 days in jail.

Ordinance 23 prohibits firing a slingshot within the Village of Clarkston. Any marksmen wielding a slingshot could be slapped with a $10 fine.

If you spot a Boy Scout rubbing sticks together in the middle of Main Street, report the scoundrel immediately. Village ordinance 31 prohibits kindling a fire on a paved street.

Keep the Crisco off the streets, too. Anyone pouring oil on a Clarkston street could be fined $10 or jailed up to 30 days, according to a 1926 ordinance.

Did you ever wonder why Clarkston doesn't house poolrooms? A room with pool tables cannot be called a "pool room" by a 1946 ordinance. However, merchants can call their establishments "billiard rooms" or "billiard parlors" without facing $100 fines or imprisonment.

If you like to look into the future, don't tell anyone about it. According to the disorderly persons ordinance, anyone either telling fortunes or pretending to tell fortunes could be slapped with a $100 fine, 90 days in jail or both.

Batman had better avoid Clarkston. Anyone wearing a mask in public, except on Halloween, could be arrested for disorderly conduct.

In most places, spitting in public is considered offensive. In Clarkston, it is considered a crime punishable by a $100 fine, 90 days in jail or both.

If you catch someone taking a big whiff of glue and then giggling, you'd better report it. Persons eating, drinking or sniffing glue with the intent of becoming "intoxicated, elated, dazed, paralyzed, or irrational" are subject to a $100 fine, 90 days in jail or both by a 1967 ordinance.

Of course, many of these laws aren't enforced anymore. And most aren't broken by sane individuals.

But for you residents who let your chickens run wild or sniff the glue when no one is looking, be careful. You might be fined and jailed when you least expect it.

THIS HORSE at the Golden Oaks Equestrian Center, Clarkston Road, Independence Township, would not be ticketed under a 1915 ordinance in the Village of Clarkston since it is in a field, not hitched to a shade or ornamental tree. In 1915, lawless horse owners could be fined $100 or placed in jail for 90 days.

Does your child have SCOLIOSIS?

Without formal knowledge about spinal anatomy, parents frequently detect only the most severe scoliosis after it has progressed. Trained experts, D.C.'s receive many hundreds of hours of classroom, laboratory and clinical education on the spine and its properties, while medical doctors and nurses receive far less formal training in spinal anatomy.

The common medical approach is to "watch and wait until it's bad enough to brace," or resort to surgery, which may or may not help. Chiropractic has proven effective in detection, prevention and correction of scoliosis. Medical cooperation in advanced cases may prove helpful, but chiropractic spinal adjustments may well avoid serious surgery.

Hilde Taxidermy finds new home in Springfield

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Stuffed animals line the walls and crowd the floors at Hilde Taxidermy as the employees work hard to settle into their new quarters.

The business, formerly located on M-15 north of I-75, Independence Township, for the past 20 years or so, relocated to the Oakhill Plaza in Springfield Township April 1. Manager Bob Taylor said it was a good time for the company to move.

"One of the big reasons was the traffic (on M-15)," he said. "Especially at 5 o'clock."

Now customers, coming off Dixie Highway, should have no problems picking up or dropping off items.

Taylor enjoyed the move since it brought work a little closer to home. He lives in Springfield Township with his wife, Pam, and their three children Robby, Sarah and Daniel.

The manager began working at Hilde's 18 years ago

What's New in Business

because he "liked the work." A different challenge awaits at work every day, he said.

All five employees have been working hard lately, trying to catch up with the time lost during the relocation period.

"The move put us back about a month," he said. "We lost a lot of time, but I think it'll be worth it."

Currently, most of the work Hilde's does involves fish -- customers are bringing in about one a day to be mounted. Normal turnaround time for such a project is two months. Items that need to be shipped out to a tannery, like deer heads, take about six months to complete.

Thanks to nationwide competition, the finished products at taxidermy shops have been getting better and better.

"The quality has improved," Taylor said. "We have quicker turnaround than we used to, but the time varies."

Al Walz is the owner of Hilde Taxidermy.

Reunion

The 101st Airborne Division Association will have a "Gathering of Eagles" for its 44th annual reunion in Milwaukee, Wis.

The event, at the Marc Plaza Hotel, will be hosted by the Maxwell D. Taylor (Chicago Area Chapter) of the 101st Airborne Division Association.

More than 5,200 members of the association who served in the "Screaming Eagle" division in World War II, in Vietnam and at Fort Campbell, Ky., are trying to renew friendships with fellow troopers with whom they served in combat and in peacetime training.

For more information about the 101st Airborne Division Association and the activities it sponsors, write to P.O. Box 586, Sweetwater, TN 37874 or call (615) 337-4103.

BOB TAYLOR, manager at Hilde Taxidermy, stands among a few of the many display items at their new location on Dixie Highway in Springfield Township.

THE SUMMER reading program attracts students to the Independence Township Library every Tuesday. The children enjoy a featured entertainer and read books to earn tickets for the reading lottery.

RUMEAL ROBINSON asks for several volunteers from the crowd during his turn as guest speaker at Tim McCormick's basketball camp last week at Clarkston High School.

Robinson closed out his session by sinking one of three three-point shots.

Time Out

Almost over

Peter Auchter

Welcome sports fans, to another edition of "Why Do I Keep Doing This To Myself?"

Yes, another sports season is rapidly winding down for me, and the results have remained the same.

You may remember the fiasco basketball turned into last winter when my team resembled the NBA's Miami Heat on a good night. (In other words, we lost a lot.)

But then spring sprang, and softball fever took over despite the chilly conditions. This time, I said, things were going to be different. (And I was right, they were different -- instead of winning once or twice, we didn't win at all.)

Problems abounded for our club: we couldn't hit worth a lick; we couldn't field, especially if they hit it right at us; and after a while, I couldn't even pitch anymore. (Nope, not a sore arm I just lost the touch.)

Last Sunday, the boys and I finally got it right and won a game to break our long dry spell. Only one game remains in the spring season. Our year is almost over. After two seasons, we realize softball is not our game. At least not if we are the team playing, that is.

On Monday, I was out at the ball fields at Clarkston Junior High watching the kids play t-ball.

Actually I was working, not watching. (Tough job, eh?)

Anyway, there I was, and I kind of thought I recognized this game. The pop flies that go through five fielders for a home run, the ground balls through the legs of the second baseman and the 10-run per inning rule. (If only our team had such a rule to save us.)

Yes, I had seen it all before. That was us out on the softball field. Only we weren't allowed to hit the ball off a tee. (Too bad, I think it would improve our team batting average a little.)

Maybe one day we'll all get together again and go on some sort of reunion tour. Who knows, it might be a lot of fun. After all, we can't get much worse.

For now all our hope and joys are concentrated on basketball and improving on what we did last season. Once again, we can't get much worse.

P.S. -- Even though we have struggled in the above mentioned sports during the past two years, we have remained out of last place in our division each time. It's good to know we're not the only loonies out there.

Wolverines wow crowd at hoops camp

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Big-time college athletics isn't always as bad as daily papers portray. At least not if University of Michigan basketball coach Steve Fisher is in charge.

The coach of the NCAA champions spoke to kids enrolled in Tim McCormick's basketball camp last week, telling them they'd do well to follow the former Springfield Township resident's lead.

"Tim McCormick displays all that is good about athletics," the coach said. "He exemplifies what sets (the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor) apart from the rest of the nation."

McCormick, a graduate of Clarkston High School and the University of Michigan, currently plays in the National Basketball Association for the Houston Rockets.

He has a close relationship with Fisher, who started

"Tim McCormick displays all that is good about athletics. He exemplifies what sets (the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor) apart from the rest of the nation."

U-M Coach Steve Fisher

his first year as assistant coach under Bill Frieder the year McCormick became a Wolverine.

Fisher watched McCormick battle his way back from knee problems to help the Wolverines capture a National Invitational Tournament title. McCormick remembers the assistant coach was always there when needed.

Even though they have gone their separate ways, the relationship remains active.

"I'm here because of Tim; I want you to know that," the coach said. "Hopefully in the next hour we'll give you some insight."

Fisher brought along two players from the University of Michigan basketball team -- Loy Vaught and Rumeal Robinson. As expected, both were fan favorites with the kids.

Vaught often attended day camps like McCormick's when he was younger and said the guest speakers were his favorite activity.

"I always wondered what it would be like to be (that particular person)," he said. "I'd sit back and gaze at them."

STEVE FISHER tells the kids at Tim McCormick's basketball camp what a great example the former Springfield Township resident sets for youngsters both on and off the court.

Fortunately, Vaught has grown up to realize some of his goals. Last season, he was second in the nation in

"I don't see myself as a star. To me, I'm not a star. Stars are the ones in the fancy cars -- the drug users and abusers. That's a star, and you can fall."

Rumeal Robinson

field goal percentage. One day, he wants to play professionally in the NBA -- hopefully, with the world champion Detroit Pistons.

Unfortunately, Vaught's teammate didn't feel the same way.

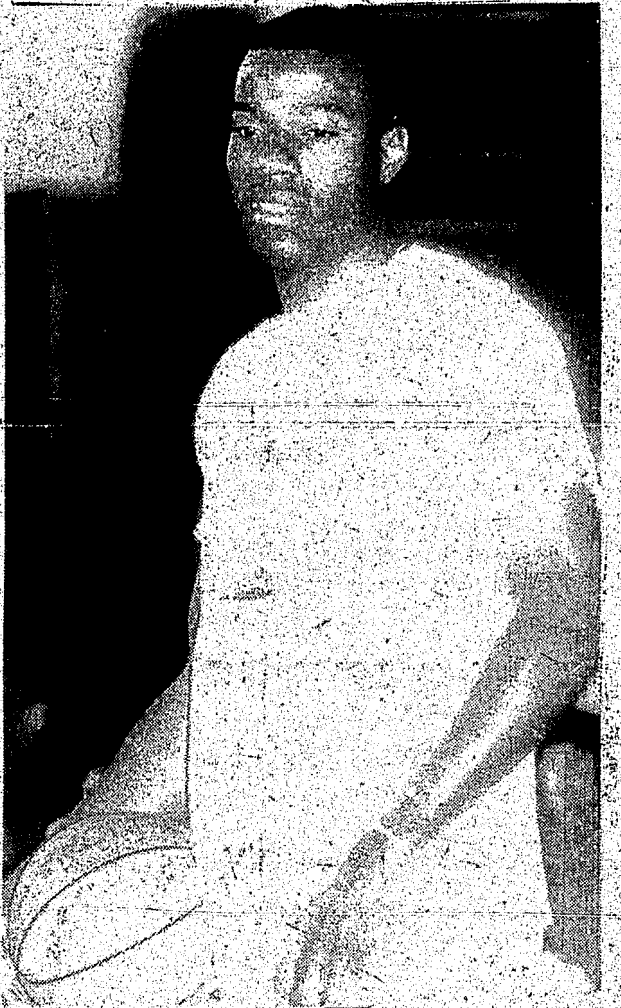

Robinson drew the only boos of the day -- albeit playfully -- when the Boston native announced his preference for the Celtics over the Pistons.

On a more serious note, he reminded the kids to stay drug free if they wanted to accomplish anything in life.

"I don't see myself as a star," he said. "To me, I'm not a star. Stars are the ones in the fancy cars -- the drug users and abusers. That's a star, and you can fall."

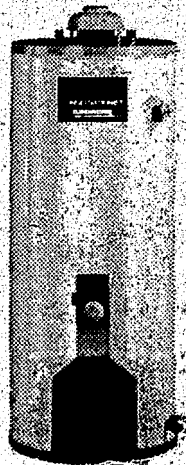

"You can prove yourself as a star or as the moon, the moon never falls."

The Wolverines' stay at the camp ended with Robinson shooting a three-point shot. After an air ball and a shot off the rim, he swished the third.

LOY VAUGHT remembers that his favorite part of basketball camp was guest speakers. Last week, he had the opportunity to see it from the other side.

Independence man charged with assaulting deputy

BY BONNIE WATTLEWORTH
Clarkston News Special Writer

A 22-year-old Independence Township man was charged June 20 with assault with intent to murder after threatening an Oakland County Sheriff's deputy with a shotgun, according to a police report.

Jeffrey Kendall of Waldon Road, Independence Township, could face up to life in prison for assaulting Deputy Edgar Douglas in the kitchen of the Kendall house.

Kendall's preliminary exam is scheduled for June 29, said Detective Steve Parker, who is investigating the case. Kendall is to appear before Judge Gerald McNally at the 52nd District Court, Independence Township.

Last Tuesday, Douglas was dispatched to the scene in response to a threatened suicide by Kendall. The Independence Township Fire Department also was standing by at the house.

Upon arrival, Douglas found Kendall sitting in the living room with his 25-year-old sister, who also lives at the house. According to the report, she told Douglas that her brother had been drinking and threatening suicide "by any means."

Douglas attempted to talk with Kendall, who ran out the back door, according to the report.

The suspect then returned with a shotgun and pointed it at the deputy. Douglas grabbed the barrel of the gun and wrestled it from the suspect with the help of the Kendall's 24-year-old brother-in-law, according to the report.

Douglas wrote in the report that Kendall was "resisting me with 100 percent." He also wrote, "I had NO DOUBT the suspect intended to fire the gun at me."

The man was charged and detained at the Oakland County Jail. While being transported to the jail, Kendall said he hated OCSD officers and should have blasted Douglas, according to the report.

The report also includes the account of an interview with Kendall, who said he did not intend to shoot anyone but himself.

"He (Kendall) states he broke up with his fiancée; his job is no good, and his car broke down," according to the report.

Sashabaw site zoned to office

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

A request to rezone three acres on Sashabaw Road for offices met with opposition from one Independence Township Board member June 20.

Nonetheless, board members approved and adopted a second reading on plans to rezone the three-acre parcel from single family to office. Voting yes in the 5-1 vote were Supervisor Frank Ronk, Treasurer John Lutz, trustees Frank Millard, Mel Vaara and Daniel Travis, William Vandermark voted no.

The board acted on the advice of the planning commission, which voted 6-0 to recommend the rezoning.

The request to rezone was put forward by Dexter and Sharon Mayworm, who want to use the property as headquarters for their company, MainStreet U.S.A. Real Estate Services, Inc., presently located on M-15, Independence Township.

The company was formed March 1 when the Mayworms ended their affiliation with Century 21.

Board members questioned whether the company planned to use the existing residence on the property as their business building.

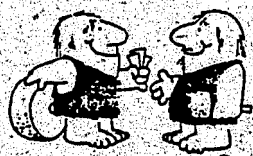

Millard asked whether the Mayworms could be prevented from just moving into the existing building. He said he thought that would be contrary to what office rezoning intended.

Township planning consultant Richard Carlisle told the board that the company would be allowed to use the existing building as long as they submitted site plans to make the building comply with requirements such as parking.

Michael Clark, representing the Mayworms, told the board that the owners planned to submit the proper site plans. In earlier meetings with the planning commission, Clark outlined a three-phase building project on the site which would be added upon as the company grew.

Roadwork will delay Sashabaw Road travelers

Motorists frequently using Sashabaw Road should allow for some extra time in their travels beginning Wednesday, July 5.

Drivers will be forced to take detours to avoid Sashabaw between Clarkston and Oak Hill roads because construction crews will be grading the area, excavating peat, widening the base and installing drainage structures.

Roadwork will also take place on Stickney and North Clement roads this summer.

The $463,000 Sashabaw Road project begins July 5 and is scheduled to be completed 60 days later.

Sashabaw will be shut down to traffic from Clarkston Road to Sally Road and from Sally Road to Oak Hill Road. Motorists will be detoured along Clarkston Road, Ortonville Road (M-15) and Seymour Lake Road. The detour will be clearly posted, according to information from the Oakland County Road Commission (OCRC).

Special arrangements will be made to provide passageway along Sashabaw from Clarkston Road to Independence Oaks County Park.

In other projects, the OCRC will pave the approach to Stickney at Sashabaw Road and will realign the intersection of North Clement at White Lake Road.

The $108,000 project is being paid for through the tri-county program, which was established to split the cost of certain projects between the OCRC, the Board of Oakland County Commissioners and the community in which the project is located, in this case, Independence Township.

$15,000 OK'd for Shiawasee plan

Carlisle and Associates of Ann Arbor were awarded the contract for developing the master plan of Shiawasee Basin Preserve, a 400-acre park north of Davisburg Road and west of downtown Davisburg in Springfield Township.

The board voted unanimously June 7 to accept Carlisle and Associates' bid of $15,000 for the master plan. Two other firms were considered for the job: Giffels-Webster Engineering, Inc., Rochester Hills, and McKenna and Associates of Farmington.

The park master plan will include planning for the entire 400 acres, but it will not include the surveying or engineering of the land.

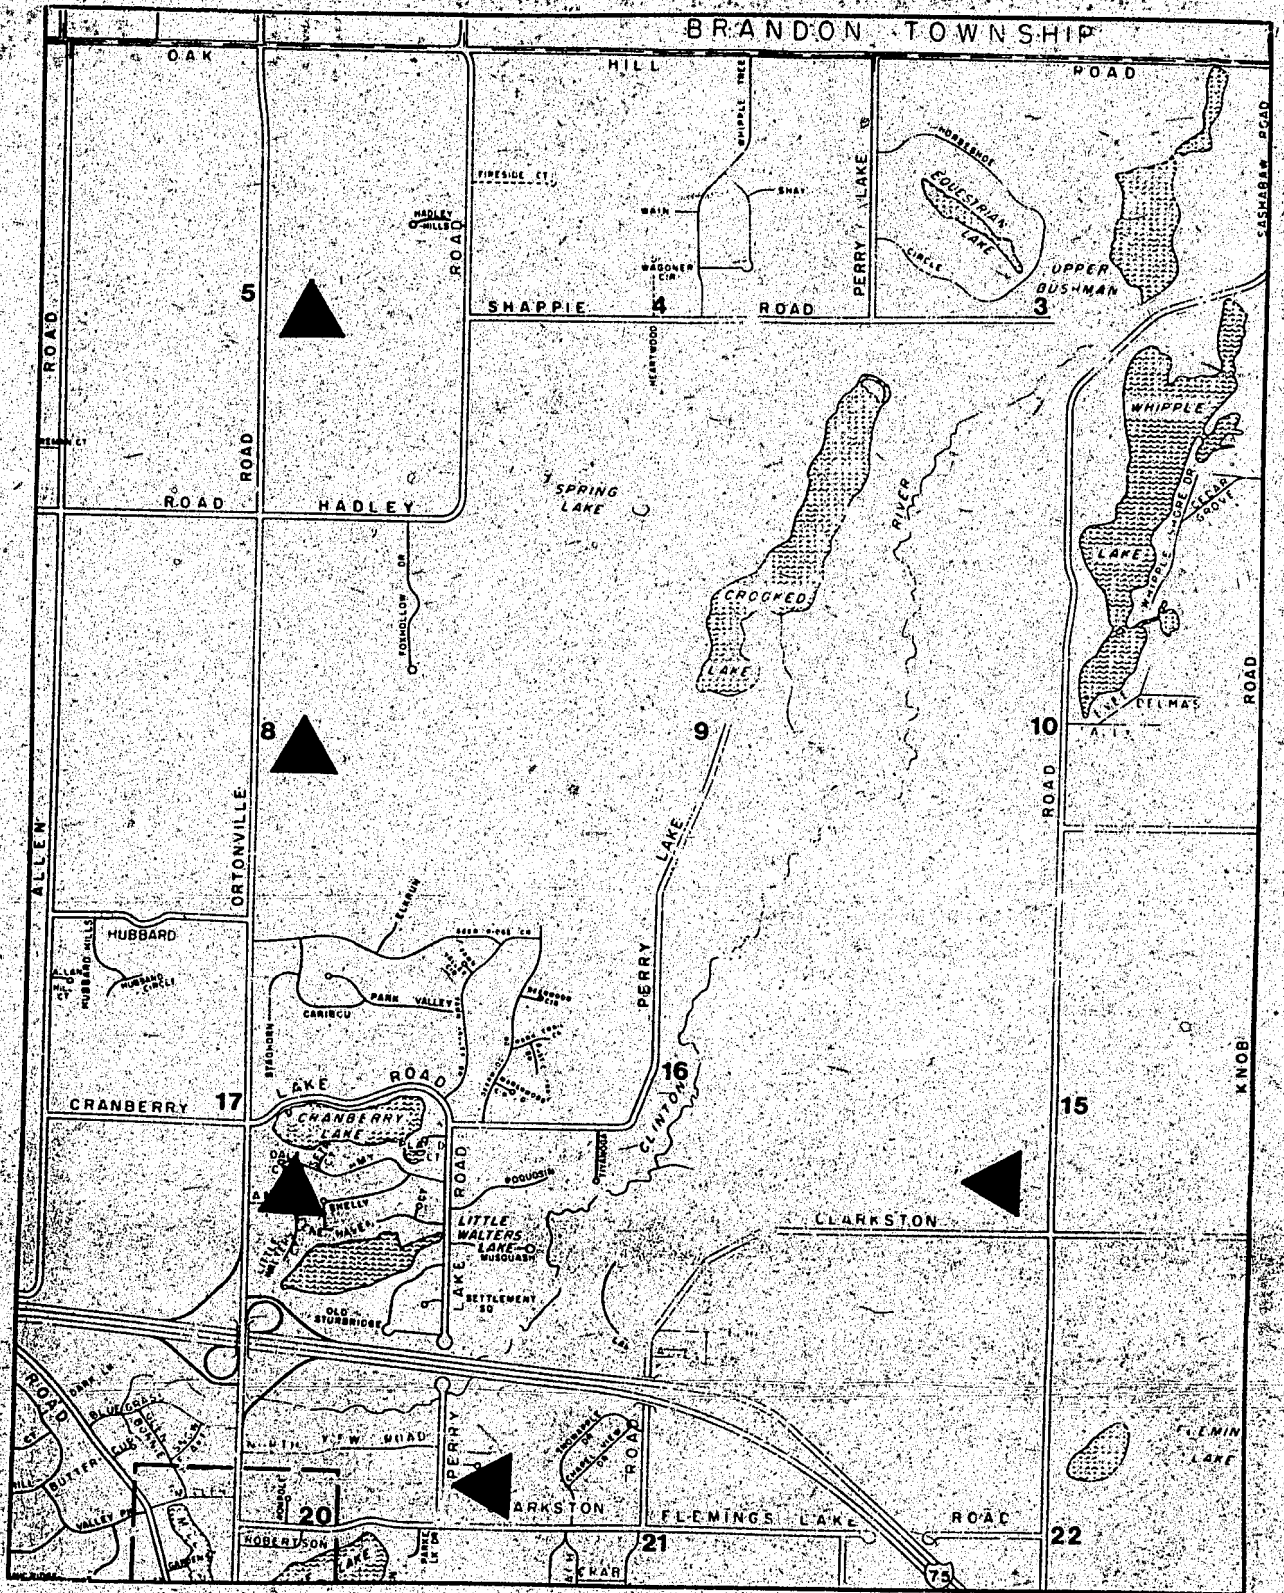

Supervisor Collin Walls said the master plan was a long range plan for the use and development of the park property.

The plan is to be finished in about 6-12 months, depending upon the amount of public input, said Walls. A public meeting is to be held to allow residents to comment.

"I hope this is something of a lot of interest to a lot of people," said Walls, after the meeting.

At the meeting, Trustee Margaret Bloom said Carlisle had previously done work in the township and had experience in the area of recreation.

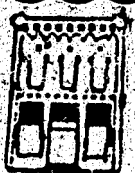

"Carlisle is overwhelmingly better than the others," said Walls.

MOTORISTS WILL BE REROUTED away from Sashabaw Road between Clarkston and Oak Hill roads for about two months, while construction crews complete maintenance work. Posted signs will direct traffic along alternate routes. To avoid the Sashabaw Road area, vehicles will be directed along Clarkston Road, Ortonville Road and Seymour Lake Road. A special entrance will lead into Independence Oaks Park.

Administration job cut

Clarkston Schools will no longer have a communication director for the district.

The full-time director's position served community education and the school district, and both educational programs paid for the director.

The position, held by Susan Maciak, was cut because of a lack of funding. However, even if voters had approved the Headlee override June 12, the position would not have been reinstated.

The Headlee Amendment automatically rolls back millage rates whenever assessments increase at a rate higher than the rate of inflation. Voters in the Clarkston school district defeated a proposal to override the automatic override.

Maciak recently took a job as a public relations associate with the Michigan Association of School Boards (MASB) in Lansing.

Singing, dancing and acting offered to kids

Children in grades three through eight can learn about drama and the stage through a new program sponsored by the Independence Parks and Recreation Department.

Participants in this program, called "The Rising Star Performing Arts Daycamp," will experience five days of singing, dancing and acting with a behind-the-scenes look at the stage.

The final day of camp will be highlighted by a performance by the participants.

Hope Waller, an Alma College, Alma, graduate, who is a dancer, choreographer and dance instructor will, teach the course.

All participants earn a T-shirt.

The first session runs from July 31 to Aug. 4, while the second one runs Aug. 7 to Aug. 11. The fee for the 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. five-day camp is $85. Call the parks and recreation office at 625-8223 for more information.

Opinion of Bill Myers

Don't get hung up in telephone deals

William A. Myers is a retired Lapeer County editor and investments manager from Boca Raton, Fla.

It's a rare day I don't get a phone call from a broker telling me of a hot deal in bonds. (A hot deal is something a full percentage point above the market.)

I don't mind, because I get an idea every now and then. I also find out you can't believe everything they tell you.

For example, this fellow from Merrill Lynch called yesterday. The conversation went like this:

Salesman: How would you like some tax-exempt bonds paying 8.6 percent?

Myers: You mean that's the coupon. What's the maturity, and what's the real yield? What's the dollar price?

Salesman: Uh... well, it's a little over par. 107. Maturity in 2004.

Myers: What month?

Salesman: I'll have to ask the trader.

Myers: Ask him, too, what's the call provision.

Salesman: Oh, I think they're non-callable.

Myers: I doubt it, at that price. Go back and find out.

So 15 minutes later the salesman calls back.

"Well, yes," he says, "they do have a call."

The yield to the call in 1995 turns out to be 7.24 percent. That's a lot different from the 8.6 percent the boy was touting them at originally.

If I'm not boring the devil out of you, I want now to make my point:

In this business of parting with your money, let it be done with someone you've known for some time, someone you've learned to trust. Whether it's a financial adviser or whether it's directly with a broker, don't deal with strangers.

The man I do most of my business with, I've known for 25 years. Before that, I dealt with his former bosses, and there has been a straight line of integrity from one to the next.

Here's another example that happened just today. The caller started off, "How would you like a triple-A-rated unit trust paying 8.75 percent?"

"What's the price and maturity?"

"Price is 110, maturity is around 2020."

After some conversation, it develops that the trust came onto the market at around 100, or par. The 110 is thus a premium price that will shrink too 100 as the bonds mature. At 110, the current yield could well be 8.75 percent as the caller said. But the real yield - that to maturity - would be a lot less. The yield at the time of payoff would more likely be around 7.5 percent.

Putting it another way, part of the big yield now is coming out of the principal - your own money, that is. As the ancients said, "Let the buyer beware."

Visiting in Columbia, we were so fortunate as to meet the manager of Banco Credito, Jose Villamizar, who took a day away from his busy business to escort us about Cartagena to see the sights and meet some of the local bigwigs.

A banker now, Jose's original love was the sea. In the Korean War, he commanded a frigate in the Colombian navy. Columbia was the only South American country to help in this war.

His early training in the navy took him to England. He recounted for us a great episode in Britain's equivalent of our Annapolis, where cadets were made into officers:

It was graduation day, and there were many countries in the Commonwealth that had groups of their men graduating.

There was a traditional parade of the cadets set to pass in review before the British admirals. Among the groups was the contingent from Australia.

The Australians sought to put a little life into this age-old ceremony and give the old boys something to remember about the fellows from Down Under.

There was a circus in town. The Aussies went out and made a deal to rent several elephants. Then they arranged for their cadets to ride the elephants and to intercept the parade at the other end of a bridge, join the procession and pass in review in due course.

Traffic had been sealed off across the bridge, but there was no provision for dealing with a caravan of elephants. When the guard at the bridge entrance was faced with the elephants, he called headquarters for instructions.

"You must be pullin' our leg, sergeant, old boy," came the reply. "Did you 'ave a pint, per'aps, before you came on duty?"

"No sir, these are elephants, all right."

"Maybe you've been standin' in the sun too long. To ease your mind, let the beasts proceed."

So the elephants did proceed across the bridge, and their timing was excellent in joining the parade of the hundreds of other cadets marching on foot. The brigade of elephants with Aussies atop them passed by in lumbering dignity in front of the reviewing stand, and the Down Under boys saluted smartly, kept straight faces and continued down the street.

It was a wonderful day. How can you help but love a country like that?

Retiring principal captures county teaching award

BY BONNIE WATTLEWORTH
Clarkston News Special Writer

An Independence Township resident recently was honored by Oakland Schools as an outstanding teacher in an adult education program.

Don Kevern, 56, of Hummingbird Lane teaches grammar and writing to adults trying to earn their diplomas through the Clarkston Learning Center.

"I was totally surprised," he said. "They told me during a Monday night class, and I didn't even know I had been nominated."

Kevern, who has been principal of East Hills Middle School in Bloomfield Hills for 22 years, said he

"I teach by presenting them with a problem and letting them work on solving it," he said.

He attributes much of his classroom success to his teaching philosophy. He considers teaching a partnership between instructors and students.

"There has to be caring between a teacher and the students assigned in the class," he said. "There also has

"If you love what you do, it's not like work. That's what it's been for me."

to be a sharing of goals, so each knows they're working toward the same outcome."

Communication is another cornerstone in Kevern's teaching philosophy. He said he calls students who have missed his night class.

"I tell them what they missed, encourage them to come next time and tell them that they were missed," he said.

Kevern said he believes when a student fails a class, the teacher has failed too.

"There was somebody out there they just weren't able to reach," he said. "They should use failures to set goals for the next time."

The educator should facilitate a student's success and not discourage students from pursuing certain fields because of a lack of aptitude, he said, adding that educators spend too much time discouraging students.

"The only person who can decide your potential is yourself," he said.

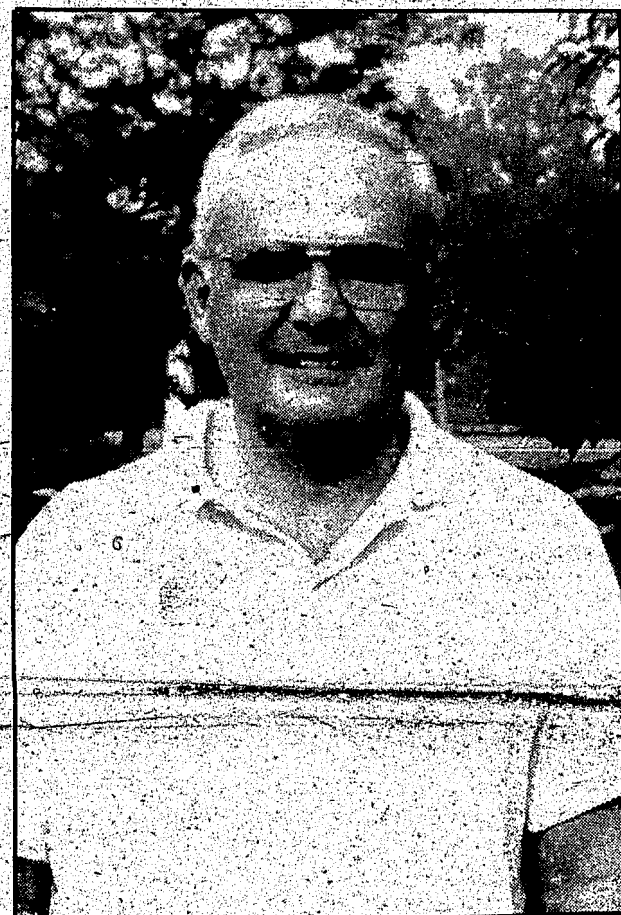

(See AWARD, Page 47)

"I don't know how many principals have the opportunity to be honored for teaching. It really means something to get an award in teaching."

considers the award the highest honor a principal can receive.

"I don't know how many principals have the opportunity to be honored for teaching," he said. "It really means something to get an award in teaching."

Kevern said he stresses creative thinking in his adult education class, which he teaches one night every week.

DON KEVERN, 56, of Hummingbird Lane, Independence Township, won a teaching award from Oakland Schools for excellence in adult education.

A trip to Washington D.C.

BY BONNIE WATTLEWORTH
Clarkston News Special Writer

A 17-year-old Clarkston area resident will travel to Washington, D.C., in July to work with the U.S. government -- a model U.S. government, that is.

Michelle Darby, of Reese Road, Independence Township, was chosen to be one of two Michigan representatives at Girls' Nation, an eight-day conference consisting of 100 girls from all states that simulates the national government.

"I'm really excited to meet people from all over the United States and make friendships," said Darby, who will be a senior at Clarkston High School.

The girls will organize political parties, simulate a national convention and even elect a president and a vice president, she said.

Darby said she might run for president, but she will have to "check out the competition" first.

"I've heard it's a hard job to be president or vice president," she said. "You have to be a good speaker and well educated in present happenings in the U.S."

The girls also will sit in on Senate sessions, tour the State Department and the Pentagon, and get a "behind-the-scenes tour" of the White House, where they will meet President George Bush.

The girls will travel politician-style too. They will be met at the airport in Washington, D.C., by a limousine and driven to Marymount College, Arlington, Va., where they will stay during the conference.

Darby was chosen to represent Michigan after a rigorous process of interviewing and gaining recommendations from counselors at Girls' State, which was a conference simulating a state government. It took place mid-June at Central Michigan University, Mount Pleasant.

At Girls' State, 547 girls from around Michigan formed committees and wrote party platforms and bills.

"It sounds boring, but it wasn't," she said. "It was a lot of writing though."

Darby said she and a girl from Grand Rapids were chosen based on participation at the state conference.

Two other Clarkston High School students also attended Girls' State: Lisa Brinn and Erin Mulloy.

Darby plans to study political science, government and international relations after she graduates next year. Although she still is undecided about colleges, she is considering Georgetown University, Washington, D.C., and the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

MICHELLE DARBY, 17, of Reese Road, will travel to Washington, D.C. next month for a nationwide conference of high school students that will simulate the U.S. government. She and two other Clarkston area girls were sponsored by the Campbell-Richmond American Legion Post, M-15, Independence Township, to attend Girls State.

Wedding gift ideas for the '90's

Stuck for a unique gift for the bride and groom? How about a car phone? Or a fax machine? Or a maid service?

According to a recent informal survey of bridal shops and services, more and more brides-to-be are listing these as "ultimate" wedding presents.

These gift ideas and a number of wedding tips were uncovered recently by Molly Maid, a residential cleaning service.

The most wanted gifts were:

* money ... in the form of cash, savings bonds and stocks, preferably "blue chips."

* crystal ... exquisite new patterns by Waterford, Baccarat and Stueben which are becoming the heirlooms of tomorrow.

* maid service ... for three-, six-, nine-month or one-year contracts. Brides are now listing maid service as the "ultimate" wedding gift idea.

* china ... traditional patterns with golden or silver trims are setting bridal tables across the country.

* furniture ... in the contemporary mood, country French and the hot new "salsa" designs from the south-west are becoming increasingly popular for the '90's.
* diamonds ... as always, are a girl's best friend.
* appliances ... fax machines and car telephones on the most-wanted list, both for bride and groom.

Cable airs talent

A special showing of the Pine Knob Elementary School talent show will be aired on Independence-Clarkston's Cable TV, Channel 65 at 7 p.m. Monday and Thursday, July 10 and 13.

"We Sing America" took place Thursday and Friday, April 13 and 14, with 80 kids performing.

The Friday night performance will be aired through the United Cable station on the above dates. The Thursday performance will be aired on a later date.

SAW FACTS

The most common all-purpose saw for the homeowner is the crosscut saw. It comes in either 8 points, for rough cuts, or 10-11 points for finish cuts. The term "points" refers to the number of teeth per inch. Measure and mark wood to be cut carefully. Start the saw cut on the pull stroke by guiding it with the outside of your thumb. Cut at a 45° angle to the surface of the wood.

A handsaw cuts on the downstroke only: put pressure on the down stroke, cut on the waste side of the mark. Saw gently at the end of the cut and hold the piece being cut off to prevent splitting of wood.

Friend to Friend

Anxiety is normal

Dear Friend to Friend:

I have a major problem. My friend and I always argue, at least on major subjects. That's not even the worst of it.

I know arguing is healthy once in a while, and it show you the other side of a point. But, when there is no solution, there is a problem.

I am willing to accept the fact that people have differences of opinion, but my friend insists that she is right. Every time! This is really annoying.

It would be OK if it wasn't a constant nagging, but that's what it's becoming. How can I maintain our otherwise relatively good relationship without sacrificing the right to my opinions?

Bickerer

Dear Bickerer:

You're right, a certain amount of arguing is healthy in any relationship. But, when it is constant and it interferes with that relationship -- as it has with yours -- then it becomes more destructive than constructive.

In order to have a healthy relationship, perhaps it is important to establish some ground rules for arguing. Your friend may be willing to do this if she agrees that the arguments are causing the two of you to be more distant with each other.

At least, this approach may allow you to start with an agreement (arguing is destroying our relationship) and move from there to deciding on some ground rules.

In your situation, an important ground rule might be that "we agree to not spend more than 10 minutes arguing about any issue" or "any disagreement we have will be resolved in a positive way."

There are many types of ground rules people establish in relationships ("we don't talk about religion or politics"), but most relationships need them.

Dear Friend to Friend:

Isn't it great about this weather! It seems as though we have been waiting so long for sunny, warm weather. Now that we have it, I just want to enjoy it.

It's hard to come back inside school at lunch and think about skipping. After school, I don't want to do homework or my chores around the house. I'd prefer to go bike riding or to play softball. This makes me very carefree and irresponsible. Help! Before I flunk out of school or get kicked out of my house, give me some advice!

Summertime blues

Dear Summertime blues:

By the time you read this, you'll be out of school. We hope that you just gritted your teeth and made it back each day after lunch. How do you handle it at home this summer when you're so anxious to get out and take advantage of the great weather? Try making a schedule.

Plan to get your chores done before you reward yourself with the pleasure of going outside and doing those things you enjoy so much in the summertime.

Perhaps, break up your schedule so that you don't do all of your chores at once but that you do some of them. Then, after completing one part of your chores, you do something fun (like take a bike ride.) Return to do more chores and later have some more fun.

It's going to be hard for all of us, but we're going to try to be productive while also enjoying the sunshine and outdoor fun. Have a great summer!

Dear Friend to Friend:

I'm a senior at Clarkston High School, and I'm experiencing the "Goodbye Blues."

Lately, I have started having a lot of fun with a group of new friends. We've become pretty close and it's hard for me to think about graduating from high school and all the changes that will take place.

Even though I've having a lot of fun, I am always conscious about the little time I have left before going away to college and leaving friends. I am almost afraid to have fun because I know it will be over soon, and I don't want to hurt. How do I make this more bearable for myself?

Sorry Senior

Dear Senior:

Very few seniors feel any differently than you, even though some will be much less aware of underlying feelings. If you think about it, school has been a sort of security blanket for the last 13 years, and during this time you establish many friends and many more memories.

While friends and situations will now change for you -- more so than ever before -- you will continue to add to your memory bank. You can't stop that, and you probably don't want to anyway.

It's your memories of friends and good times which will help to sustain you during difficult times of adjustment in the next few months and years.

Do what you can to continue to enjoy yourself. Don't avoid new friends and new experiences, because these will also be important to hold onto in the future. By all means, talk to your closest friends about the anxiety you have about leaving friendships and save time for the reminiscing about the "good old days."

Keep a diary, make sure everyone has signed your last yearbook, get some photos of your new friends, and pile up the happy memories this summer.

But, always enjoy the present, and look more to the future than the past. Some parts of your life are ending, but whole new parts are opening up and it should be an exciting future for you.

Friend to friend is provided by a panel of Clarkston High School students working under AWARD, a community organization dedicated to action and education against substance abuse. Some of the questions are actual letters, while others are formulated by the panel from real-life problems. Letters may be addressed in care of The Clarkston News, 5 S. Main, Clarkston, MI 48016.

A pink tinge

Kristen Bilicki

This is ridiculous. The weather has been nothing but cool and overcast or shower scattered for almost a week now. Now that I have the time to enjoy the heat of sun-beaten beaches, I have to step over puddles to even walk out of the house.

While I was in school, the weather was hot and sunny. It made us thirst for the summer just out of reach on the other side of the windows. Maybe it's poetic justice.

Last year we were cursed with a drought. Well, it seems all of last year's rain was just a year too late. Instead of crops being scorched they'll probably be flooded and washed away.

It's hard enough for me to get a tan. Even if I spend an entire day in the sun, all I can show for it is a pink tinge. It fades in a day or two anyway. This weather is making it impossible even to remember what the summer sun is supposed to feel like.

The days are so cool, I can't even get a chance to show off my new summer clothes. I waited all year for my birthday, just so I could get some new summer fashions and what happens? I end up wearing long pants and jackets left over from last winter.

Just watch, on the days I have appointments to keep or jobs to do, the weather will be unbeatably wonderful.

I just know tomorrow will be in the mid-70s and partly cloudy...when I wake up. Then as the day progresses and I have to attend to my plans, the temperatures will increase and the sun will jump high into the sky.

Mother Nature must have it in for me. That's all right, I always look as if I vacationed in the Arctic Circle. Cave dwellers probably have more of "summer tan" to show off than I could ever hope to wear.

Maybe someday the pallid look will be chic, along with rain-drenched, stringy hair. Maybe the soggy summer of '89 will be famous for starting new trends.

There could be a revolution in umbrella designs. The verse "April showers bring May flowers," could be amended to: Spring scorches bring summer showers.

I guess when you get down to facts, I'm just really tired of five days of cool rain in a row. But, aren't we all?

Kristen Bilicki is a senior at Clarkston High School.

Clarkston quartet perfects its pitch for July festival

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Dixie Kinser and her sister, Sharon, appear on the steps of Dixie's Clarkston home dressed in coordinated black and white outfits.

They've had practice combining their look-alike appearance with snappy costuming over years of singing gospel together.

They first sang gospel with their parents as they were growing up in Pontiac. Now, as part of a regular quartet, they're getting ready for a show that will be performed before hundreds of people this July.

The quartet's other half consists of Sharon's husband, Tom Malone, and Tom Hampton, their pastor at the Community Bible Church in Waterford. The group

"We'll probably stay small scale. You just never know if something opens up."

Dixie Kinser

has gathered to practice, like they have almost every other Tuesday since being chosen to perform at the Chesaning Showboat Festival.

Aboard a triple-decker showboat, the quartet will sing in a three-hour riverfront variety show, with such attractions as country singer Mickey Gilley.

The quartet, known as People Who Love, were among 36 groups narrowed from a field of 200 hopefuls. "We had sung a little bit before," explains Dixie.

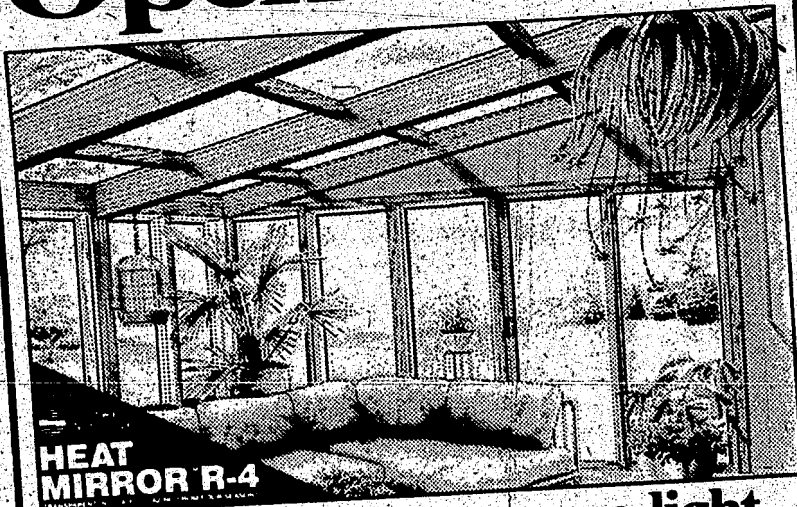

(See CLARKSTON, Page 45)

PEOPLE WHO LOVE got their roots when sisters, Dixie and Sharon, sang gospel together as children. Now a quartet, the group will perform during the Chesaning Showboat

An Apple for the Teacher

Marilyn Allyn, director community education

By Susan Maciak

Variety is the spice of life and the special aspect of community education that makes it appealing to Marilyn Allyn.

Allyn became interim director of Clarkston Adult and Community Education in the fall of 1988.

"Community education is for everyone," said Allyn. "People of all ages, interests and ability take advantage of programs we offer. That's what makes it interesting."

When Allyn came to the Clarkston program from Brandon schools five years ago, she started a high school diploma program for adults who are more motivated than most.

The Adult Performance Level, or APL program, is a competency-based work-at-your-own pace way for adults to finish high school around busy schedules.

"APL requires a lot of reading and writing," Allyn explained. "About 44 percent of those who finish high school through our APL program go on to college."

Another community education program that Allyn supervised is a basic skills course, or ABE.

"Adults who need special help in reading, math or spelling enroll in ABE," she said.

Special 26ers, a class for trainable mentally impaired adults, is yet another program Allyn helped develop.

Offered at St. Daniel Catholic Church, Clarkston, the Special 26ers program provides education and enrichment for people who no longer qualify for special education services after age 26.

Watching Special 26ers compete in sporting activities is a part of her job that she loves.

One of the highlights of Allyn's career came when Louise Russel was named Oakland County's 1987 community educator of the year. At 83, Russel teaches English as a second language to Clarkston residents from nine languages.

As interim director, Allyn leads a staff of 129. They provide services that range from child care for children from two weeks old to the time management training for corporate executives.

An adult high school, an alternative high school, latch key centers for elementary students, career services and job placement programs, and all kinds of classes for youth and adults are all over seen by Allyn.

Allyn was born and raised in Pontiac. Her interest in becoming a teacher was fueled in junior high due to some very positive teacher role models.

She liked the ideas of working with people and helping them. An Eastern Michigan University, East Lansing, graduate, she earned an advanced degree in school administration at Michigan State University, East Lansing.

Her first teaching job was at Kennedy Junior High, Pontiac, where she taught business, social studies and physical education -- an interest she still maintains.

Allyn's career was on hold a while ago when she was extremely ill with encephalitis requiring a slow recuperating time of about a year.

He was born in Flint and later attended General Motors Institute where he received his bachelor's degree in industrial engineering. Rain slows county road maintenance Regrading and repairing gravel roads is the first priority for the Oakland County Road Commission's maintenance workers this summer.

With the seemingly never-ending rains in June, driving has been difficult on the more than 1,000 miles of gravel roads, said John L. Grubba, managing director of the road commission.

The rains have put a serious crimp in scheduled maintenance. Most of the road commission's maintenance service centers were ahead of schedule on gravel road work. After all emergency and unanticipated rain-related repairs are made, those same schedules will have to be accelerated.

The adverse weather also has disrupted the chloriding plans for the gravel roads. In some areas, the aftermath of roadway washouts remains a problem. The problems has particularly serious potential for curves and hills. All known problem areas have been signed and are identified for repair.

Searching for answers at the root zone

The vast expanses of outer space may hold fewer secrets than the 24 inches of soil just below the surface of any backyard summer garden.

If scientists can unlock the secrets in that 24 inches, called the root zone, the result could be crops that thrive even in drought and other inhospitable settings, say officials from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

They say that while the root zone may look like a stable, even boring place, it's actually a world of minerals, gases, water and all sorts of life -- worms, insects and microorganisms, to name a few.

How these underground tenants all get along is one of the questions scientists must answer, says Richard Zobel, a plant geneticist with USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

"We don't even begin to thoroughly understand what happens in the root zone, although we're slowly pulling it together," Zobel says.

"For one thing, only recently have we had the tools to study it, and they're still not up to the job," he said. "We need to learn how microorganisms interact with the plants and with each other."

"Plant roots aren't all the same. They're functionally different and have different growth patterns."

Understanding what goes on underground -- and the plant's role in those activities -- could help researchers figure out ways to get the most from plants and Mother Nature, Zobel said.

Clarkston four to sing at festival

"We go to (Chesaning) every year as a patron; we knew they had local people and learned last year how they got on the program."

The group remembers their audition with a bit of embarrassment and laughs as they recount the experience.

"The sound system wasn't great," Dixie says.

"I'd say worse than great," Sharon adds, explaining that the group was forced to use just two microphones, which wreaked havoc on their solo sections.

"We couldn't hear the music," says Sharon.

To make matters worse, the group chose audition number 56. Although tryouts began at 6:30, People Who Love finally got their chance at almost 11 p.m.

"If you've seen one tap dancer, you've seen them all," Sharon says laughing.

The group will perform a repertoire of about a dozen songs on the Chesaning Showboat, including several solos.

They select their pieces by visiting music stores and listening to tapes recorded by professional quartets. The recordings are studied and the lyrics are learned; the group then obtains a soundtrack for use while they are performing.

Gathered together, the group falls into an easy camaraderie. After Dixie and Sharon formed a trio with Hampton, Sharon last year married Tom Malone, and the group decided to become a foursome.

The quartet earned recognition last year at the National Quartet Convention by ranking among the top 10.

When asked where the group will go from here, Tom Malone jokes that the next step will definitely be Star Search, a television variety-audition show.

Dixie and Sharon, however, predict that the group will continue to sing at various churches just for fun.

"We'll probably stay small scale," Dixie says. "You just never know if something opens up."

Guilt-free lasagna

Tracy King

Lasagna has always had "fattening" written all over it. It's also considered one of those special meals -- whether as a birthday dinner request or as the star in a buffet line.

For those people, like me, who list lasagna among their diet exemptions -- here's a recipe that cuts down on fat and calories without scrimping on taste.

Our household's chief weekday chef -- my husband, Pat -- adapted this recipe from the Dr. Robert Haas Maximum Performance Program, which is described in the book "Eat To Succeed."

LASAGNA

1 pound ground veal
2 large onions, chopped
1 clove garlic, pressed
1 can (16 ounces) whole tomatoes
1 can (15 ounces) tomato sauce
2 tablespoons dried parsley flakes
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon dried basil leaves
1/2 teaspoon salt

2/3 of a 16 ounce package lasagna noodles, cooked according to package directions

1 1/2 pounds low-fat cottage cheese
Parmesan cheese
1 tablespoon dried parsley flakes
1 1/2 teaspoons dried oregano leaves

Place veal, onion and garlic in a nonstick frying pan. Brown veal and drain slightly.

Add tomatoes (with liquid), tomato sauce, 2 tablespoons parsley, the sugar, basil and 1/2 teaspoon salt. Heat to boiling, stirring occasionally; reduce heat. Simmer uncovered until mixture is consistency of thick spaghetti sauce, about 1 hour.

Spray a 13" x 9" pan with non-stick vegetable spray. Reserve 1/2 cup of sauce mixture. Mix cottage cheese, Parmesan cheese, 1 tablespoon parsley and the oregano.

Place noodles crosswise on bottom of pan. Spoon veal mixture over noodles. Place half the cottage cheese on top. Repeat. End with veal mixture on top. Sprinkle with Parmesan.

Bake 45 minutes. Remove and let stand for 10 minutes. (8-10 servings)

Countywide award goes to principal for teaching

Kevern will retire from his position as principal June 30. But he laughed, "My wife gives me until January to be retired."

Despite his retirement, he said he plans to continue teaching night classes in Clarkston "as long as they'll have me."

"It's important to me to stay relevant to education,"

Kevern said.

When he isn't teaching, he plans to work on a book about parenting. While he'd like to write the book for children, he said it probably will end up written for both parents and children.

Kevern said he has loved working with children, and his years in the teaching profession have been "wonderful."

"If you love what you do, it's not like work," he said. "That's what it's been for me."

Community instructor honored

(COMMUNITY, from Page 42)

The Allens have lived in Clarkston for about 10 years; she is the mother of Bryan, 10, and Robbie, 7. Family plans include an extended trip to some region of the U.S. every other year.

In the summer, you will find Allyn coaching T-ball, softball or playing on a coed softball team with her husband, Dave.

Winters finds Allyn playing racquetball or working out on exercise equipment. The family enjoys sailing or skiing in season at her parents' northern cabin. About the only time she slows down is for a session of cross stitching.

Apple for the teacher is provided through a committee of the Clarkston Education Association. This week's author, Susan Maciak, was communications coordinator in Clarkston schools.

"There has to be caring between a teacher and the students assigned in the class. There also has to be a sharing of goals, so each knows they're working toward the same outcome."

PRAYER TO THE HOLY Spirit. Holy spirit, You make me see everything and show me the way to reach my ideals. You give me the divine gift to forgive and forget the wrongs that are done to me and you are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue, want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from you no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with you, and my loved ones, in your perpetual glory. Amen. Persons must pray this prayer 3 consecutive days without asking for your wish. After the 3rd day your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. Then promise to publish this dialogue as soon as your favor has been granted. Thanks St. Jude for favors received. PV. PRAYER TO ST JUDE: O Holy St. Jude, Apostle and martyr, great in virtue and rich in miracles, near kinsman of Jesus Christ, faithful intercessor of all who invoke your special patronage, in time of need, to you I have recourse, from the depth of my heart, and humbly beg to whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance. Help me in present and urgent petition, in return I promise to make your name known, and cause you to be invoked. Say three Our Fathers, three Hail Marys and three Glorias. Publication must be promised. St. Jude pray for us and all who invoke your aid. Amen. This Novena has never been known to fail. ILLX47-2

WHO IS ON THE LORDS SIDE let him hear what the Spirit is saying to the churches. Woe unto you that persecute the flock of God and lead others astray by your vain imaginations, traditions, and Jewish fables rather than holding forth the "Word of Life", the truth of the gospel. For the Lusts of men you build cages filled with deceit to commend yourselves among yourselves rather than seeking commendation of the Lord only. Hirelings you are, by allowing your vain imaginations about the Word of God, doctrines of the Will of men, and Jewish fables to Destroy the Workings of the Commandments of God. Woe unto you people that trust in men rather than hearing the Word of God and Doing it, not suffering persecution for the Words sake, denying my name. For all of you have your reward in this life. When I come, I will come suddenly and will destroy those forever who obey Not the gospel, by the Word of My Mouth. You are being reserved (deceived-hardened against truth) for my Father's wrath to be cast out into outer darkness. Repent! I Come Quickly! IILX25-2
