Maybee Road homes get first OK

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Developers of a single-family residential project on Maybee Road obtained a crucial vote from the Independence Township Board Aug. 1, despite some board members' efforts to table action on the project.

The board voted 4-1 to approve the first reading to rezone an area on Maybee Road to make way for a 213-unit single family residential development. A second reading and adoption is necessary before the rezoning takes effect.

Voting yes were Treasurer John Lutz, Clerk Joan McCrary and trustees Daniel Travis and Mel Vaara. Trustee William Vandermark voted no. Supervisor Frank Ronk and Trustee Frank Millard were absent.

The rezoning request was for a 68-acre parcel on Maybee Road, south of the Spring Lake Country Club. The parcel is now zoned for multiple family dwellings, which would allow for about 450 units.

The Selective Group, a developer out of Farmington Hills, approached the township with a plan to build 213 single family homes on the property, which would cut the allowable density of the area in half.

In order to do so, they had to obtain planned unit development (PUD) zoning on the property. PUD zoning is tied to a specific site plan and, in this case, would allow the developer to build single family units on 9,000-square-foot lots instead of the 15,000-square-foot lots required under township's single-family residential zoning ordinance.

At least one board member said he was against

Concertgoers sue Pine Knob Theatre

BY BONNIE WATTLEWORTH
Clarkston News Special Writer

Three concertgoers filed a class-action lawsuit Aug. 3 against the Pine Knob Music Theatre for giving them a night of "misery, not music."

The suit filed on behalf of Cindy Hicks of St. Clair Shores, Susan Marsh of Hamtramck and Sandy Stefan of Chesterfield Township alleges that Pine Knob oversold two Rod Stewart shows July 5 and 6 and three Beach Boys and Chicago shows July 14-16 causing unbearable overcrowding.

"The resulting crush of humanity overtaxed the highways and roads, the parking and sanitary facilities of the Pine Knob Music Theatre," according to the suit filed at the Oakland County Clerk's Office.

 using the PUD rezoning for the project.
 "The PUD violates our standards for single-family dwellings," said Vandermark.
 "It sets precedent for violating the standards for single-family dwellings," he said, adding that other developers may want to do the same thing.
 In addition to voting against the rezoning, Vandermark put forward two separate motions to postpone the board's action.
 His motions to delete the item from the board's agenda and to table action on the item before the vote both died without support from other members.
 In both instances, Vandermark referred to a letter

"This property reduces density by 50 percent and obviously would reduce traffic by 50 percent. Every aspect of the project complies with what a high-standard, good plan (should be)."

Planner Richard Carlisle

from Millard, which asked the board to delay consideration on the important item until he could be present.
 Travis argued against postponing the vote, telling

Vandermark that "this board just doesn't work that way." Travis told Vandermark that, although he himself was on vacation, he still drove four hours to get to the meeting and perhaps if Frank Millard wanted to be there that badly he would have been.

Members reminded Vandermark that the board authorized only a first reading and that members would have another chance to discuss and vote on the matter when it came up for second reading.

Regarding the development itself, township planner Richard Carlisle described a platted subdivision with curved, linear streets and extensive landscaping both at the Maybee Road entrance and throughout the project.

Six home designs would be used throughout the subdivision, and the homes are to be priced somewhere between $100,000-$200,000.

At the request of the planning commission, the developer reduced the number of smaller lots and increased the number of larger lots, Carlisle said. At least 75 percent of the lots were greater than 80 feet wide and at least 10,000 square feet.

The entrance to the development is subject to Oakland County Road Commission approval but may be relocated to a place across from Tamarack Park Lane instead of Milane Circle, the developer said. Several area

Thendara assessment approved

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

The Thendara Park road paving project rolled past another hurdle Aug. 3.

The Independence Township board approved a resolution confirming the assessment roll for the project. The assessment roll determines how much each of the 255 Thendara property owners will contribute towards the $2.45 million cost of the paving.

Township Assessor David Kramer told the board that the assessment amounts did not vary greatly from the estimated amounts residents received in the mail last March.

The average property owner will pay about $9,655 for the paving -- over 15 years the amount should average about $16,920, or $1,128 a year, according to the assessing office.

Construction is scheduled to begin in September after the township completes its acquisition of easements, and a judge agrees to convert the roads from private to public in a hearing Wednesday, Aug. 9.

An easement grants the right to use land belonging to another for such things as roads, or utilities. Converting the roads from private to public means that the road commission must now accept responsibility for the upkeep of the roads.

Although Thendara residents have worked to move the paving project forward, the board's action was not without protest from at least two residents.

Kang Lee Tu told the board that his family was being assessed for two building sites, even though zoning restrictions prevented them from developing the parcel as two sites.

"No variance has been given, and none has been asked for," Tu said. "The $18,000 (assessment charge) is for future consideration."

He added that he had no intention of creating two sites.

The township assessor explained that the site could legally be split in the future, so in fairness to other residents in the district, the parcel must be assessed that way.

"My responsibility is to determine a fair assessment," Kramer said. "It's my belief that whoever purchases the property will split it and make two building sites."

He noted that the property was currently up for sale.

The average property owner will pay about $9,655 for the paving.

Alan McLeod told the board that he has paid taxes on two sites on Algonquin for 20 years and has only just learned that both are too small to build upon.

Mr. McLeod was told that he was assessed only one-half unit of benefit for his land. A unit of benefit is the scale used in determining an assessment amount.

The average property owner has 200 feet of frontage along the area to be paved, so 200 feet is considered one unit of benefit. The cost per unit of benefit is tabulated at $9,655.19.

Using a declining rate formula, those with 200 feet frontage or less would pay that amount. Those with more frontage are assessed accordingly.

Residents will receive notice of their actual assessment amount in the mail. They have 30 days to file a legal objection with the Michigan Tax Tribunal if they wish to do so.

Anyone with questions should contact the assessor's office at 625-8114.

'Granddog' gets a surprise

Dave and Lorna Bickerstaff of Independence Township were tickled last week when their "grand-dog" got a treat.

Dave took Sadie, a well-mannered English springer spaniel, through the drive-through at First of America Bank, Dixie Highway, Independence Township, where Sadie received her surprise.

Dave reached to get his money, and "in the envelope were two dog biscuits," said Lorna.

Dave was thrilled, and so was Sadie, said Lorna, adding that Sadie has a likable personality.

"This dog sits up in the front seat like a person," she said, explaining that she and Dave are dogsitting Sadie.

Elaine Kuehl, customer representative at First of America, said the tellers give biscuits to all dogs, if they can see them.

"The terrific thing is the dogs expect it now," she said. "People drive up and reach for the tube, and the dog will go to the window, wagging his tail, or they'll jump to the front seat."

"Children don't get suckers, but dogs get bones," she said, laughing.

The tellers have fun with it, said Peggy Bowes, senior teller.

"We've got our dogs plenty spoiled, I'll tell you," she said. "The owners are just thrilled. It's a nice treat."

Peggy, who has an airedale named Sheba at home, is an animal lover, she said.

She and the other tellers -- Vicki Caswell, Kandy Heffernan, Michelle Conkin, Winnie Parker, Meladee Davis and Tracey Pyzocha -- have been giving the treats for a few months.

"We get as much pleasure as the dogs," she said. "We have to look close sometimes to make sure it isn't a child."

Planners table proposal for Maybee Road homes

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Developer Thomas Patti has been trying to build on his unusual 60-acre Independence Township parcel near Orion Township for about 10 years.

Although his conceptual plans have improved, they still didn't pass muster with the Independence Township Planning Commission Aug. 3.

The commission tabled Patti's request for Planned Unit Development (PUD) rezoning and conceptual site plan approval for 24 homes by a vote of 4-3. The property is currently zoned rural residential, which requires a 3-acre minimum lot size.

Voting yes were Chairperson Brent Bair, Jo Fussman, Richard Oppmann and Daniel Travis. Voting no

"Personally, I'm still willing to consider this."

Chairperson Brent Bair

were Joseph Figa, Bruce Mercado and Steve Secatch.

The tabling action likely came as good news to the dozen or so residents who spoke out against the development at the meeting.

Residents' concerns were varied; they included the developer's use of Maybee Road, animals straying onto nearby property, neighbors' liability for horseback riding accidents, the visibility of the project, density of the project and others.

"The developer is trying to build homes that are behind our houses," said Gary Best of Maybee Road. "I'm going to lose my 11 acres of privacy because of this multi-development."

Some Orion Township residents, who are being assessed by Orion Township for the upcoming paving of Maybee Road, objected to the developer's use of that paved area.

"He's changing his drive, so he can use the pavement," said Donna Cook. "I'm paying $3,000 a lot to have houses come out on pavement, and he's going to ride for free."

Other residents complained that several animals now on the property frequently strayed and that the occurrences would increase with the development.

"It was 1971 when I bought (my) property," said Melissa Centers of Maybee Road. "It was zoned as three-acre parcels, and I was ensured by the township board that it would always be zoned that way."

Commission members told the audience that the land would eventually be developed and that some plans they had seen were not as protective of the land as this one.

The 60-acre parcel is difficult to develop for several reasons. A majority of the land consists of wetlands and flood plains; a Detroit Edison right-of-way dissects the parcel diagonally; and a sewer easement exists on the property.

Consequently, Patti has proposed building 24 single family homes entirely in the southwest corner of the parcel. He outlined plans for a lake on the site and horse trails through the wetlands.

Because the parcel is so unique, the developer requested PUD zoning, which requires approvals from the planning commission as well as the township board.

PUD zoning is tied to a specific site plan and, in many cases, allows the township and the developer to establish different criteria for the development than what the usual zoning ordinance dictates.

Some commission members questioned whether the project met PUD criteria.

"I have a concern about PUD," said Steve Secatch. "When the developer bought the land, he knew there were wetlands and the right-of-way. Whatever the zoning, he knew he could only build on some of the property."

Secatch added that the township has many smaller parcels with wetlands, and many developers could come in and use PUD to develop them if a precedent is set.

"Personally, I'm still willing to consider this," said Chairperson Brent Bair. "It has a potential to be chopped up (which would make the parcel) tougher to preserve."

Commission members also questioned whether five separate entrances onto Maybee Road could be

"I'm going to lose my 11 acres of privacy because of this multi-development."

Gary Best

consolidated, whether two architectural styles were compatible, and whether mature trees could be saved.

Richard Oppmann expressed concern about wetlands on the property.

"Twenty-four people will potentially be using horses in the area," Oppmann said. "In general, this township tries to preserve and conserve (wetlands). I'm real concerned about the construction of a pond on the property."

"It's probably a good use if it protects the wetlands," Oppmann said. "I have several concerns about details shown here. Details, details, details. You don't have enough information to make it worthy in my mind."

Commission members formed a three-member commission and are to work with the developer in designing a conceptual plan that is complete enough for review.

According to my aunt Pat, saying "Amen, Brother" to a preacher is like saying, "Sick 'em" to a dog.

She ought to know. She's been married to one (a preacher) for more years than I've been alive.

I received a letter -- from a source who should know positively -- saying that Methodists do sweat.

Afterward, I saw proof of that when I observed several teens who happened to be Methodists working in the hot summer sun to help a senior citizen with home improvements. Great group of people -- sweat and all!

Ingeborg Girschner, a long-time Independence Township, resident, has grown Michigan red and white potatoes from seed each year in her garden on Pine Knob Road.

Her children, Inga and Sven, are college students and enjoy the home-grown potatoes so much, they don't even like the potatoes from the store, says Ingeborg.

Ingeborg, who is an avid and thorough newspaper reader, noticed in my column last week that my favorite food is potatoes so she brought in a few from her garden for me to try. I can't wait!

Plus, she wrote a little note about cooking the red potatoes Betty Wagner style -- about 10 minutes in the microwave. That will make it easy.

Ingeborg Girschner also noticed the irony of the typographical error in my column last week -- the one where, just as I wrote that my job was to make sure everything is punctuated and spelled correctly, I spelled "punctuate" incorrectly.

As I said, she's a thorough reader.

I wonder how Elizabeth and her sister, Cassie, are doing? I don't think I've ever met the two Clarkston children, but I miss hearing about them from former editor Kathy Greenfield, who used to write about them in her column.

We are getting spoiled by the help of our intern, Bonnie Wattleworth. Since she started helping us out this summer, we have not once worked until midnight on a Tuesday laying out the paper. Last week, we were finished in record time.

My husband, Chris, was a little disappointed with the basketball I got him for our anniversary. I thought it would be the perfect gift -- something fun and surprising.

To select just the right ball, I tried the grip on every brand on the sporting good store shelf.

But when Chris unwrapped it, he saw immediately something I had missed. The ball with the perfect "feel" was the official "Ladies" size. No wonder I liked it so much.

I believe that in everyone's lifetime they meet one person, that one person who is so wonderful that they are privileged to have known them.

For me that person is my grandfather. His knowledge of the world and wisdom of life has made a definite impact on me.

Whenever he speaks I listen with bright eyes and open ears like a child listening to her favorite nursery rhyme. He is always full of ideas, and his advice is priceless.

The stories he tells of his experiences are always told with such enthusiasm, I could almost be taken back in time to see the events happening.

The old expression, "He has a heart of gold," was created for him. Such a kind and gentle man he is, always with a kind word of praise at just the right times.

And such a happy man he is, always cutting up and joking around.

He would laugh till he cried, and have everyone else doing the same.

The love and concern for his family has always been his first priority and one of the many things I have always admired him for.

I feel blessed to have known such a wonderful person and even more thankful that he is my grandpa.

It is truly a privilege loving him ...

I will miss you grandpa, you'll be forever in my dreams ...

Jim's Jottings

When we write something into our computers we date it. Today is 8989, August 9, 1989, unless you read this on Thursday, then it's 9989. Please say you heard it here first

I sat around the clubhouse after a recent round of golf and listened. Golfers are reluctant to tell they've had a good round. "What did you shoot today?" I had back-to-back 9's.

"How was your round?" I three putted number 18. "Congratulations on winning your flight!" I took a 10 on number 14. "How was your score?" I had 40 putts on the first round.

These answers were given by: Dave Perrone, Dick Light, Wally Edgar and Joe Phipps.

None mentioned that they had some ridiculously lucky birdies and pars.

Car drivers are a lot like golf ball drivers. They curse the lousy drivers that nearly hit them, the person who cut them off, the dummy who rides their bumper and the numbskull who's driving 45 in the left lane of the expressway.

But they fail to praise the vast majority of good drivers who avert the accidents, who are courteous, patient and forgiving.

I guess we like to see and point out the bad ... something like columnists.

I got a call this week from a former Oxford Leader editor who started a newspaper in Gakona, Alaska called Copper River Country Journal.

We only talked a little about newspapering. About the Exxon Valdez oil scattering, Linda Weld said, "It has made Alaskans at least a little aware of their environment. They are notorious for ignoring the environment."

About her 10-year-old twins learning to shoot a .22 rifle: Boy Scout leaders were amazed they didn't know how to shoot. "Many boys have shot an animal by the age of six. Not rabbits or birds ... caribou. Many fathers talk of their 4-year-olds shooting caribou."

From this we go to a recipe from The Old Tinner column in the "Tip of the Mitt" paper sent us by sister-in-law Ethel Smith.

Cooking a Rabbit

First, skin the bugger.

Then cut it up in five chunks ... back legs, front legs and back.

Throw those parts in a big pan and boil the heck out of them for three or four hours. Add a bunch of salt and pepper to kill the flavor.

When the rabbit parts look about right, or the water's all boiled away and your wife smells the pan burning, take the parts out of the pan and roll them in flour, cornmeal and a bunch more salt and pepper.

Next, drop the parts in an iron skillet that's got about an inch of butter melted in it. Add a couple cups of onions and mushrooms and stuff like that and then fry that son-of-a-gun 'til it's nice and brown and crispy and hopefully tender.

If it turns out the rabbit's not fit to eat, just eat the onions and mushrooms ... they're helpful in preventing colds.

JAS note: But the cholesterol and salt will get you.

Travels with Tom

Bali's magic will work a spell on you

Note: Tom and Carrie Wilford are son and daughter-in-law to Jerome and Lucia Wilford of North Main Street in Clarkston. Tom is also a Clarkston High School graduate. Before leaving on their year-long journey around the world in December, 1988, they couple visited The Clarkston News and promised to send regular updates on their travel adventures. This letter is the fifth of their travelogue.

June 27, 1989 marked six months that Tom and I had been traveling throughout Asia. During that time, many people asked us "What has been your favorite place so far?"

Since we had thoroughly enjoyed every place we had visited, it was a truly difficult question to answer -- that is until we visited Bali!

By the time we leave Denpasar, Bali, to go to Hong Kong on July 15th, it will be the end of two months of travel in Indonesia. Six weeks of that time will have been spent on Bali alone.

This small Indonesian island captured our hearts in so many ways; I'd like to try and explain how and why we became enchanted here in Bali for such a long period of time.

Bali is an extremely picturesque tropical island and part of the Indonesian archipelago. You will find rice paddies everywhere, along with tall palm trees which seem to be forever gently swaying in the wind.

Volcanoes and mountains also are to be found, along with black sandy beaches. If this incredible scenery isn't enough to overwhelm you with its beauty, than the unusual Balinese perhaps will.

Believe it or not, most of their island people do not like the sea and purposely build their temples towards that holy mountains and away from the water. They feel the sea is the home of bad spirits and demons, and this is just one example of how religion is a major part of their lives.

Indonesia was at one time a Hindu nation. Six centuries ago the Islam religion invaded the island of Java and forced its great Hindu Kingdom, including its entire entourage of artists and scholars, to escape to Bali.

Bali somehow succeeded to remain fairly isolated from the rest of Indonesia and her political and religious problems. A combination of the island's capability to survive along with the extremely fertile land and the development of arts, is probably the main reason why today, all visitors of Bali are fascinated by the vitality of the Balinese culture.

When we arrived by bus from the island of Java in Denpasar, we unfortunately went to what I call the "tourist ghetto" of Bali -- Kuta Beach and Legian Beach.

These two beach areas are very commercialized with hotels, restaurants, motorcycles and people everywhere!

These beaches are located on the southern tip of the island. Yet, once away from these crowded and, in my opinion, fairly unpleasant beach resorts, the magic of Bali will more than likely begin to work a spell on you as it obviously did with us.

Presently, we have made our base in Ubud, the arts center of Indonesia. Ubud is located in the mountains (See BALI, next page)

'If it Fitz...'

A justice and a judge

The state Supreme Court has superintending control over all other courts in the state. Control - or lack of it - is important. Just ask Detroit Lions head coach Wayne Fontes.

A Channel 4 sportscaster did ask him, about football players who hadn't signed contracts yet. Fontes looked into the camera and proclaimed:

"I have no control over things I can't control."

I asked my wife: "Did you hear that?"

"Write that down," she said, and I did. It is a quote to save and savor. The man has no control over things he can't control. I am looking forward to the end of the football season, when the Lions once again finish out of the money, and coach Fontes explains:

"I can't win games I lose."

But that's enough jock talk. Let's return to the state Supreme Court, which controls courts but not police departments:

I felt like a character in TV's "L.A. Law." I was sitting in one of several comfortable chairs lined up on both sides of an impressively long table. I was in the downtown Detroit office of Dorothy Comstock Riley, chief justice of the state Supreme Court. She had invited me there, along with Judge Longworth Quinn, in response to something I'd written about Detroit's 36th District Court - traffic court. Quinn is the 36th chief judge.

It should be noted that, as a columnist, I'm not used to such gracious treatment from public officials whose toes I may have bruised. Most of them ignore me in hopes I'll go away. Riley and Quinn were eager to improve some court services I'd criticized, and they were understanding of mistakes made by some complaining citizens for whom I'd provided a forum. It was a lot different than dealing with, say, the Municipal Parking Department.

Unfortunately, there's not much the courts can do about the complaint I hear most often. It comes from citizens who are sure they've been ticketed unfairly by police or parking department officers. They're so sure they've been wronged that they'll forgo the easy way out - paying the lousy $20 fine by mail - and insist on a court hearing. It's a matter of principle. They'll miss a day's work, pay a ghastly parking lot fee, and sit in a crowded courtroom for several hours, waiting for their case to be called.

Then their case will be dismissed, or they'll be ordered to come back another day, because the ticketing officer failed to appear. It happens all the time. Cops laugh about it. The police department doesn't penalize officers for not showing up as scheduled. After all, they have more important things to do. But so do the ticketed citizens, damn it.

Courts - even the chief justice of the state Supreme Court - have no control over the situation.

The 36th District Court is in the Madison Center building, a converted warehouse. It has only one entrance and is unusually congested. Many court employees complain there's a ventilation problem that makes them sick. There are never enough workers to give the public the quick service it demands. Running that court is a massive job - not to mention headache - that surely must keep Judge Quinn constantly hopping. So I was impressed at how quickly he found time to correct a glitch mentioned here earlier this month.

It was a classic catch-22 situation. The court's automated phone answering system offered a coded menu of recorded information that could be reached only on a push-button phone. If you pushed enough buttons, you learned what to do if you didn't have a push-button phone.

But that's been changed now, and when you phone the court - 965-2200 - the first information you hear on the recorded message is what to do if you're using a rotary dial. You're told to "please stay on the line... an operator is being called to assist you."

But, oh, my. After my meeting with Riley and Quinn, I phoned 965-2200 and, following instructions, waited for assistance. I waited 50 rings and gave up. The same thing happened on a second attempt. No one ever answered.

As coach Fontes might put it, sometimes you can't control the things you can control.

From This Perspective

Who wins?

Tracy King

I watched the movie Platoon for the second time this week.

Being the age that I am, the movie provides an unusual fascination for me, horrible as it is. Before Platoon, I possessed only a few, select impressions of the Viet Nam war. I had reported on victims of Post Traumatic Stress Disorder and their attempts to live normal lives in the 1980's; and I vaguely remembered the war ending, wondering, from a child's perspective, about the names on the POW bracelets we collected because they were stylish.

I wasn't as shocked when I watched the movie this time, but I sat just as still -- imagining again the nightmare for U.S. servicemen. And again, my head dropped to my hands, as I wondered how mankind could have been created to do such awful things to one another.

Coincidentally, this week marked the 45th anniversary for the U.S. bombing of Hiroshima.

Like Viet Nam, I have little knowledge of the daily drama of World War II. I don't know about the mood of the country at the time, or the arguments that President Truman used to rationalize the dropping of the atomic bomb.

I was, however, shown pictures of the devastation to land and humans in the path of the great explosion. I know about the deadliness of radiation and its slow destruction.

And again, I wonder how human beings can do such awful things to one another.

It doesn't help my understanding to witness a horror unfolding. I read carefully the details of the student uprising in China. I listened to their arguments for change and I tried to understand why the government fought to silence them.

I saw their desperation and willingness to lose their lives for their cause, but I didn't understand the violence that became necessary to accomplish it.

The terrorists have a similar determination for change. Their agents frequently embark on suicide missions, driving a bomb-loaded car into a crowd, for instance. They too are willing to die for their beliefs and have no hesitation in inflicting suffering to help them accomplish their goals.

How can human beings do such awful things to one another?

People fight so viciously for land, or for power, or for a new way of life.

Perhaps because I have so many freedoms, I can't fully understand the desperation of their quest.

But, I still wonder, after these violent acts have achieved what they wish, how do they live with the battle in themselves?

Bali is an island of smiling faces, kind people and is a very charming village, although traffic seems to get busier daily; and there seem to be new buildings sprouting up continuously.

Yet we have not tired of Ubud nor of the beautiful terraced rice paddies that we see everyday, particularly when we get away from Ubud and take long walks into the countryside.

As we take these incredible walks, we always come across smiling people, which is common, as the Balinese are friendly, outgoing and happy.

The children all run up to us and practice their few words of English, "Hello" and "How are you?"

We answer back to each one and sometimes practice our few words of Bahasa Indonesian, the official language of the country although the Balinese also have their own separate language. "Selamat Siang" - good day and "Apa Khabar?" - How are you?

Everyone, including the adults, giggles, laughs and answers, "Bagus," which means good and is as commonly used as our "OK."

This little ritual takes place every time we come across a small village or just a group of people on the road or in the rice fields. It is quite heartwarming and enjoyable.

As I said, the Balinese are very happy people who like to have fun times. There always seems to be some kind of activity happening, such as temple dances, temple processions, various types of ceremonies or festivals which involve everyone, including tourists.

You will find temples everywhere -- each village has at least three temples. Since temple festivals come at least once during the Balinese year (210) days, you can count on at least five or six annual festivals per village.

Yet that is only the beginning. Special festival days are also quite common celebrating a special temple for a certain god(s) or just because "it's time to have another festival."

During our stay, there was a festival thanking the gods for a good rice harvest.

The women carried offerings on their heads to the temples that consisted of fruits and flowers, and sometimes these offerings were as high as two feet!

How they are able to balance such items on their heads and at such height (perhaps held together by toothpicks?) is quite a puzzle to us! Nonetheless, it was exciting and mystifying to watch and experience.

In order to enter a Balinese temple, both men and women must wear a sarong, which is a large piece of rectangular material, generally batik; and it is wrapped around the body in a certain way. The end result looks like a long skirt.

IN BALI, it's a must to wear a sarong and temple sash in order to visit a temple. In June, Tom and Carrie Wilford wore the sarongs and sashes over their shorts at Mother Temple.

Also a temple sash must be worn, which is like a belt. Of course, this is the traditional dress of the Balinese.

The women also wear a long-sleeved blouse called kebaya, and the men wear western-world shirts with a beautiful batik headdress as well.

However, to see western men wearing these "skirts" -- since all foreigners must show respect as well and wear sarongs and sashes -- is quite amusing; at least to me.

Tom put on his sarong and sash and looked rather colorful and festive, although not at all Balinese!

We also had the opportunity to witness a village wedding ceremony. This was quite the experience and completely different from the western world of weddings. Being foreigners, we had the best seats -- right in front by the altar.

Quite the honor! This was quite exciting to us, but no one warned us that there would be a sacrifice of a chicken right in front of us.

Again, quite the honor, but seeing that we are city folk and have never witnessed such a slaughter before, it was somewhat of a shock. The rest of the ceremony was most interesting and enjoyable.

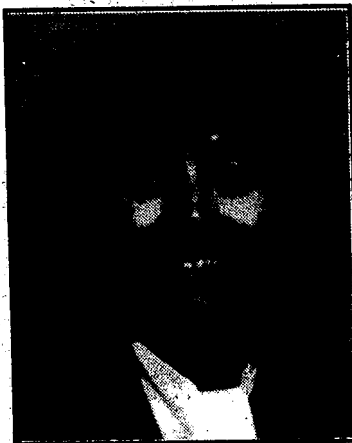

After a lot of prayers, chanting and sprinkling of holy water on the wedding couple, the fun began. Play acting is very common in ceremonies, and symbolism is used also.

For example, the groom was given a bamboo stick with coconuts and leaves attached to both ends. This signified that he would be successful and prosperous while working in the fields.

The bride put a large basket on her head which is quite a common sight in the Bali villages, and this symbolized her success at selling goods at the village market.

The bridal couple walked around the altar three

Rattalee Lake home owner ordered to fix exterior

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

The owner of an unfinished house on Rattalee Lake Road, Independence Township, faces court action if he does not complete exterior improvements on the structure by mid-September.

The township board agreed to take action on the home Aug. 1.

Under the township's recently amended Property

"I've had 30 or more years in the rat race, and I'm in pursuit of happiness. My happiness is building this house. I work four or five hours a day, and that's it."

Martin LaPrat

Maintenance Ordinance, the owner will be notified of the specific exterior improvements in writing and will be given 45 days to complete them.

If he does not, the township can take legal steps to condemn the property.

Building Department Director Beverly McElmeel told the board that the house had been under construction for four years and that the exterior of the property was unsightly.

"My chief concern is the exterior condition, the wild overgrowth, debris, construction material and stumps on the property," McElmeel said.

She explained that the property owner was retired and worked only part time on the house. Although he was apparently aware of the exterior condition, he chooses to work primarily on the interior of the house, McElmeel said.

She suggested that the property owner be given 45 days to grade the property, seed the area and install a driveway.

Martin LaPrat, a Walled Lake resident who owns the Rattalee Lake Road home, told the board that he intended to complete the home on his own schedule.

"I've had 30 or more years in the rat race, and I'm in pursuit of happiness," LaPrat said. "My happiness is building this house. I work four or five hours a day, and that's it."

When asked whether he could spend his time on the exterior instead of the interior, LaPrat replied, "I have more important things to do."

"It's impossible if I do it alone, and I'm not going to hire someone. I can't do it -- no way," he added.

Board members explained that improving the exterior was something LaPrat owed to his neighbors.

"Part of being a good neighbor is to make (your home) presentable in a neighborhood where people are doing the same thing," said Treasurer John Lutz.

The board unanimously approved an addition to the property maintenance ordinance on July 11. The ordinance was amended to include exterior maintenance improvements to prevent blight, a reduction in surrounding property values or harm to surrounding properties.

Humor can help

Humor is a powerful antidote for stress. Being able to laugh at some of the weird, crazy things that happen to us helps us to keep things in perspective, according to Elaine Glasser, extension home economist for Oakland County Cooperative Extension Service.

Sometimes we take ourselves too seriously, but humor can lighten the load and give us and others around us a chance to relax.

Strong families find the humor in their lives and use it to their advantage. But not all humor is a positive force in relationships.

Research shows that put-down humor -- funny remarks or jokes that hurt or "put down" another person -- is not a characteristic of a strong family.

Take a look at how your family uses humor. Is it to reduce tension? To express warmth or caring? To put others at ease? To help cope with difficult situations?

Or do you use humor to put down other family members? To embarrass or humiliate someone who has made you angry? To cover up your own anxiety by making someone else feel ill at ease?

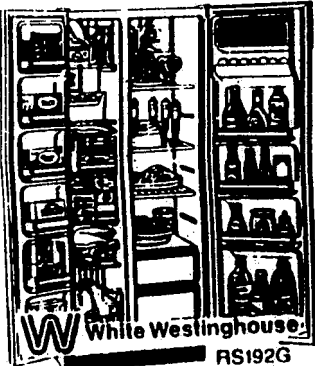

Humor can help families to develop strong relationships if it is used correctly. Work on making humor a positive force in your family!

Water, sewer bills changed

If you've noticed some irregularities in your water and sewer bill in Independence Township you're not alone.

The Department of Public Works is installing a new billing program onto their computer system, resulting in a change in billing schedules.

Instead of receiving bills quarterly, some residents have received bills for two months in a row, or bills every other month. The amount of the bills have varied from 1/3 of the regular amount paid or even 2/3 of the regular amount paid.

The bills are not mistakes, said Linda Richardson, at the DPW. The irregularities are a necessary part of the transition.

"Eventually they will all be in the proper cycle and all will be billed on a quarterly basis," she explained.

Richardson said some residents were sent estimated bills in June, and then all residents were sent bills in July. The bills should be in their proper order by September.

The DPW obtained the new system because the old method failed to log credits properly. The system was formerly transitioned in July and is similar to those used in other townships for billing, Richardson said.

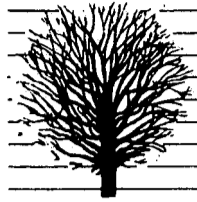

The bills have a notation to alert residents to the new system, but there has still been some confusion about the transition.

"After we mailed out the first batch, the next two days were an absolute zoo," Richardson said. The next batch was mailed the following Friday and "phones were constantly busy," she added.

Richardson admits that the new system is confusing, but asks that residents be patient.

If there are unusual changes in the amount charged for consumption of water or sewer, call the DPW office at 625-8222.

Citizens for Orderly Growth

Stay the course

Doug Carlson

Several months ago, I attended a public meeting of the planning commission in which the Independence Township master zoning plan was discussed.

They also discussed a Woodlands Ordinance, which I hope to write about at a later date.

The commission's discussion of the master plan was to consider the appropriateness of the zonings that currently exist throughout the township.

Early in the meeting, it became apparent that their goals was to reduce the density in most areas if it made sense and appeared to be feasible. If I recall the meeting correctly, only one parcel was recommended for a higher density zoning designation. Many, many others were recommended for a less dense designation.

Needless to say, I left the meeting with a feeling of encouragement regarding the future of our township and a sense of increased respect for members of the planning commission.

Taking such a stand will not be easy, but it is both positive and visionary as far as Independence Township is concerned.

All of this brings me to two articles in last week's Clarkston News, which dealt with this subject. The first article mentioned the July 27 planning commission meeting in which it was recommended that the township board rezone 10 parcels of land on the east side of M-15 between Cranberry Lake Road and the I-75 interchange.

The rezoning, if approved by the board, would result in a change from a highly permissive form of commercial zoning to office zoning.

Township Planner Richard Carlisle explained that the rezoning was necessary to improve traffic conditions in this heavily traveled area, to create a buffer for the residential properties along M-15, and to conform with changes in the master plan.

As expected, those individuals who claim they would suffer financial losses from this zoning change were at the meeting to protest the proposed move. Their reaction is entirely understandable. No one was there, apparently, to support the change.

This brings me to the second article in last week's paper. In the Reporter's Notebook, it said that Planner Richard Carlisle had a bone to pick with Independence Township residents.

Why, he wondered, do residents flock to meetings to protest developments in record numbers, but when the commission moves to make something less dense, they get no support?

All I can say to this is that there are a lot of people in the township who are aware of what the commission is attempting to do and appreciate their efforts to make life a little better for all of us.

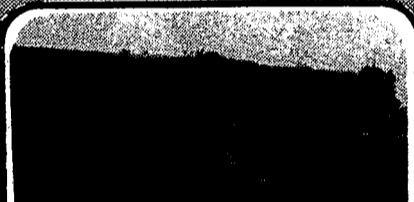

Stay the course, as they say, and do what needs to be done, even if your only reward seems to be the knowledge that you're doing the right thing.

Someday, you'll all be able to look at Independence Township and say, "I played a significant role in the way this area was developed." Hopefully, you'll be proud of what you see.

Doug Carlson is chairperson of Citizens for Orderly Growth.

(TRAVELS, from Page 8)

times with these props. While the groom walked behind his wife, he lightly and affectionately hit her with a tree branch showing that he will now be her master.

From there they went to a makeshift oven, and the bride "cooked" food for her husband showing him that she will always take care of his needs.

Then the priest produced a mat made from fresh bamboo, which the bride held up to her new husband. He then took his dagger and cut through the mat three or four times as the crowd cheered approvingly. This represented the end of the bride's virginity.

This wedding took place at the family's compound in a village outside of Ubud. The entire extended family of at least 35 people lived in this fairly large compound. This is quite common in Bali for a family to live together, no matter how many people.

The biggest and most joyous celebration of all is that of the cremation. We have been invited to attend a cremation here in Ubud next week, and, surprisingly, we are looking forward to this exciting, colorful, fun and noisy event!

Cremation is an integral part of the Balinese life, and it is said that the soul will not rest until the body has been properly cremated.

Since these ceremonies are so important, an auspicious date must be determined by the village priest. Therefore, the body must be temporarily buried until a date has been chosen and also until money has been raised for such an expensive event.

If the family has the necessary funds, which is not too common, then the body will be burnt three days after death.

Once buried, the body is put into a tall, decorative tower which is carried through the streets to the cremation grounds by the village men. This tower is crazily turned and shaken many times in order to confuse the deceased's spirit so it doesn't find its way back home. After all, "loose spirits" around the house can be a real nuisance!

Finally, the body is put into a funeral sacrophagus, usually in the shape of a bull, and this will then all go up in flames. The final question asked is, "where does the soul go after cremation?" and the answer is, "to heaven, which is just like Bali!"

There are so many other aspects of the Balinese life too numerous to mention now.

If you are interested in reading more about this interesting culture and learning more about the Balinese customs and traditions, religion including the practice of witchcraft, family, social and village life and description of their various dances and shadow puppet plays, etc., try reading these two excellent books: "Island of Bali" by Miguel Covarrubias, Oxford University Press, 1937; and "A Tale from Bali" by Vicki Baum, Oxford University Press, 1937.

Both books are highly recommended and will give a much better insight into the rich and diverse life of the island people.

It will be very difficult next week to leave this wonderful island that has been our home for the last six weeks. Besides all that I have written, once in Bali, living expenses will be very reasonable.

We have been renting a comfortable bungalow at a losmen (small hotel) in Ubud which is new, clean and spacious. Besides having a large veranda which overlooks tropical, lush gardens and a large king-size bed which is uncommon in Asia, we have a huge bathroom with two showers amidst an internal tropical flower garden.

Breakfast is also included, and all of this goes for $5.50 U.S. a night!

Next time when someone asks "What's your favorite place you visited during your travels?" I'll say the usual, "It's not fair to say because every place is special," but then I'll close my eyes and think of Bali.

Next -- Hong Kong.
All the best Clarkston --

Preparation prevents pool drownings, says deputy

BY BONNIE WATTLEWORTH
Clarkston News Special Writer

Swimming pools are probably one of the most popular forms of summer recreation for children, but they can also be one of the most dangerous if not monitored carefully.

"The most common victims (of pool drownings) are toddlers or young children," said Deputy David Wurtz of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department Marine Division.

Over 300 children under age 5 could drown this year in pool accidents, according to a press release by the U.S. Product Safety Commission.

Most of the 630 drownings that occurred last year in the United States were children under 5 years of age, according to the release. Another 4,200 children are treated per year in near-drowning accidents in backyard pools.

While only one child has drowned in a pool in Oakland County this summer, Wurtz stressed that parents need to be especially careful where children and pools are concerned.

"I don't think people put as much safety emphasis on pools as at the beach," he said. "Open water represents more of a threat in their minds, but the same things can happen in a pool."

Wurtz said it only takes a moment for a child to get into trouble at a pool.

"In a typical drowning, the parents say something like 'I just turned my back for a minute,' or, 'I just ran inside to answer the phone,'" he said. "Children are very mobile, agile and curious."

Wurtz said parents can take several precautions to keep pools a safe form of family recreation.

Pool owners should establish rules for family members and any neighbors who frequent the pool.

Parents should make the pool inaccessible when they are not supervising it.

"For above-ground pools, I recommend decking with a ladder that can be removed and locked," he said.

"For in-ground pools, we encourage people to put in fences that are not just decorative."

When the pool is not being used, toys such as rafts and balls should be kept out of the water.

"Children are attracted (to a floating toy) and walk up to the edge of the pool," Wurtz said. "They try to reach out for it and end up falling in."

Life-saving equipment such as poles and ring buoys

"I don't think people put as much safety emphasis on pools as at the beach. Open water represents more of a threat in their minds, but the same things can happen in a pool."

Deputy David Wurtz

should be kept near the pool so even a non-swimmer could help a drowning victim.

Some pool owners might want to invest in a floating pool alarm system that sounds when someone is in the water.

But Wurtz also cautioned that pool alarms have several drawbacks.

"These are prone to false alarms and can be activated by the wind," he said. "It can be the cry-wolf syndrome."

Pool owners also should learn cardiopulmonary resuscitation. Being prepared is one of the best safeguards, Wurtz said.

"In the event of an accident, you can never act too quickly, but you can act too slowly," he said.

While children are the most frequent victims of pool drownings, adults should also take extra precautions while in the water.

People should avoid mixing water activities and alcoholic beverages, he said.

"You should modify your behavior when you've been drinking," Wurtz said.

He called alcohol "liquid courage" because it makes people attempt water stunts they normally would not try. Swimmers who have been drinking frequently attempt dives.

"Every year we take multiple reports of people diving in water that's too shallow, and they end up paralyzed permanently," he said. Most of these incidents involve young adults.

While the marine division does not offer classes on water safety, it does offer classes on boating safety to groups or individuals at no charge. The classes also include segments on general water safety.

"If a group in Clarkston wants to learn about boating safety, there would be no charge for the instructor or the materials," Wurtz said.

For more information, interested individuals or groups should call OCSD's marine division at 858-4991.

Township audit report is 'clean'

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

After months of study, auditors have finished their assessment of Independence Township finances.

Representatives of Plante & Moran, auditors from Farmington Hills, told township board members they had a "clean opinion" of the township's financial position.

In a special slide presentation to the board, members were shown graphs of township revenue and expense categories and how they've changed over the years.

The graphs showed that the largest portion of revenue for the township continues to be taxes. One of the largest increases in operating expenses for the township was fringe benefits for employees, which the auditors admitted was surprising.

Jeff Mengel, a representative of Plante & Moran, told the board that although the township's existing fund balance of $384,000 appeared low in the graphs, the situation was actually quite healthy.

He explained that the township had borrowed money from the sewer fund to pay for certain projects, which made the balance appear low but was actually better than borrowing the money from a bank.

Trustee Daniel Travis questioned whether the township should increase the balance of money in the township's general fund to better prepare for the future. Mengel answered that the township should generally have at least one month of operating expenses in the account, which it does.

Trustee William Vandermark asked auditors to determine how much each department has grown over a given period of time.

Mengel described the township as a "growth" community, which could result in stress on the area's infrastructure.

Tips to keep vacationers happy

Checking out ancient ruins, art museums and native markets may be part of your foreign vacation. Checking into a hospital is not.

Yet 25 percent of international tourists suffer travel-related illness, many of which might be prevented with simple common sense precautions.

Preparation is the key to ensuring a healthy, enjoyable vacation, according to AAA Michigan.

While applying for a passport and booking hotels, travelers also should:

- * Update immunizations. Many adults were not inoculated properly as children and lack immunity to certain diseases still prevalent abroad. Some vaccines require a series of shots spaced weeks apart. Also, schedule your last shot at least a few days before departure so your body can adjust to the vaccine.

- * Have medical, dental and optical examinations well before the trip and carry copies of your records in case you must consult a foreign physician, dentist or optician.

- * Get all prescriptions filled and put extra doses in a carry-on bag in case of misplaced luggage. Also take commonly used over-the-counter medications such as aspirins and laxatives, which may be difficult to find outside large cities.

- * Pack an extra pair of eyeglasses or contact lenses.

- * Be wary of what you eat or drink. Diarrhea is a frequent and sometimes severe problem for travelers in certain countries. If in doubt about unfamiliar food, don't eat it. Avoid brushing your teeth with tap water. Drink beverages without ice.

- * Pack insect repellent and sunscreen lotion with a 15 sun protection factor.

- * Determine if foreign medical expenses are covered by your health insurance.

Reporter's Notebook

When Shader's Raiders little league baseball team found out they were going to the semi-finals in the state play-offs, The Clarkston News office received calls from two parents about the exciting trip to Battle Creek.

One parent, however, said her son would only let her call if she remained anonymous. The ages of the boys explains his request -- the team is comprised of 13- and 14-year-old boys.

Items for Reporter's Notebook are compiled by The Clarkston News staff.

Remaining active is the key to happy retirement

If taking it easy is the only plan for your retirement years, retiring could be the hardest thing you ever do.

Since the average American can expect to spend 17 years as a retiree, it's absurd to think you won't need goals to pursue or a variety of activities to fill your days, according to John Keeler, of Henry Ford Continuing Care Corp.

Failure to plan enough retirement activities is one of the most common reasons why life after work often doesn't live up to many people's happy fantasies, said Keeler.

"We used to think that as we got older we needed to take it easy," said Keeler.

"Now we know that inactivity isn't good for your health, either physically or mentally.

"Work fulfills many of your most basic needs. Even if you dislike your job, it gives you a sense of accomplishment; it forces you to set goals, and it brings you in contact with other people.

"When you retire, you're taking away a lifestyle; and you have to think about replacing it. The needs that were being met through work don't just vanish on the day you leave your job," he said.

If you want your dreams of a satisfying and productive retirement to come true, you have to be willing to work for it.

"Look at your personality and lifestyle, and decide what type of experiences and relationships are most important to you," he advised. "Then figure out a way to continue to enjoy those things throughout your lifetime."

As you plan your retirement, concentrate on these three areas:

* Stay physically and mentally active. Set up a regular routine of exercises you enjoy to maintain flexibility, strength and overall good health.

To stay sharp and alert and maintain your mental well-being, find ways to stretch yourself intellectually; and stay tuned to what's going on in the world around you. Without enough stimulation, your memory and problem-solving abilities will decline.

* Set goals. Having something to look forward to will help keep you active and interested in life. Interestingly, researchers have found that people almost always live three to five years longer than they predict they will.

* Cultivate loving relationships. Loving others is an affirmation of your own self-worth. To maintain your emotional well-being, you must have a reciprocal relationship with someone who will listen to and accept your feelings and help you grow emotionally. Although this person could be your spouse, it could just as easily be a friend or relative.

Although planning a retirement lifestyle is a very individual thing, a few options to consider include taking courses, developing a hobby, embarking on a second career, getting involved in community work, taking a part-time job and engaging in social activities or events that bring you into contact with new people.

Keeler will be a speaker for the Retirement Life-Style Expo, coming Sept. 15-17 to Cobo Conference/Exhibition Center in Detroit. He will discuss "Three Keys to Successful Retirement."

For more information about the Retirement Life-Style Expo, call 882-3860.

Soccer players needed at CHS

Prospective Clarkston High School soccer players should meet at the practice field at 8 a.m. Monday, Aug. 14, for tryouts.

Students from ninth through 12th grade enrolled in Clarkston schools are invited to the session, said Coach Neil Granlund. They should bring all the necessary paperwork available from the athletic director at this time.

The varsity squad probably will field a full team this fall, but the junior varsity squad may be in danger under the new pay-for-play system, he said.

"It is dependent (on the number of people who show up), whether we'll have JV or not," the coach said.

Wrestler ready for college

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

To say Dean Moscovic excelled in prep wrestling would be an understatement.

The Brother Rice graduate wrestled his way to 103 straight victories (unbeaten during junior and senior years) and two state championships in the 150-pound weight class.

Now that it's time to begin college, Dean is ready to leave his high school memories behind -- along with family and friends -- when he attends the University of North Carolina this fall.

"I may be top of the hill around here, but I'll be starting over again in college," he said.

After his phenomenal finish in prep wrestling, major college wrestling programs took notice of the Waldon Road, Independence Township, resident. While the University of Michigan made a strong bid for his talents, Carolina remained one step ahead of the pack, thanks to a lucky twist of fate.

Dean attended a summer wrestling camp between his junior and senior years on the Tar Heels' campus and became familiar with the program and athletes. That visit helped tip the scales in North Carolina's favor.

"I had some choices," Dean said. "But Carolina was a place I had been around before. I liked the atmosphere."

He just wished Carolina would be little closer to

"I may be top of the hill around here, but I'll be starting over again in college."

Dean Moscovic

DEAN MOSCOVIC will leave his Waldon Road, Independence Township, home Aug. 21 for the University of North Carolina, where he plans to wrestle.

"There is very little time when I'm inactive."

The coaching staff at Carolina has promised to keep Dean busy throughout the school year. He'll concentrate on wrestling year round. The college season lasts about six months, running from October to March.

Dean also will have his work cut out for him since the Tar Heels graduated only one wrestler from a team that ranked in the top 15 in the nation last season.

From the sounds of it, he's ready for the challenge. "It's pretty competitive," he said. "But you don't want to set your goals too low. I want to make the team and maybe be an All-American."

"I think it'll work out for me. I'm pretty excited about it."

Time Out

Ready to roar

Peter Auchter

My spirits were definitely lifted during the free Detroit Lions practice Sunday afternoon.

Not only were all the activities free, but I got the feeling that maybe this time, the team's optimism is for real. Or at least close enough for those of us not old enough to remember the last championship.

I know I enjoy putting down professional sports teams for their uncaring attitudes and many problems (it's so easy), but something is different about the Lions this year.

Sure, they might not scare anybody worried about making it to the Super Bowl in January but I bet they can make a few waves in the NFC Central. That would be enough to satisfy me. (And all the other fans dying for something to cheer about on the gridiron.)

Lions fans are a rare breed indeed. I guess after you've been starving long enough, even a plain cracker whets the appetite. A good guy

One of the reasons for my optimism is the Lions' new head coach Wayne Fontes. For once, the head honcho isn't boring us to death. Former head coaches Monte Clark and Darryl Rogers probably could give Gerald Ford a run for his money as the world's most boring leader. Blah, blah, blah.

Fontes showed off his good nature and humor when inviting fans down to the field for autographs. His optimistic attitude rubbed off on me. (He'll need that humor once the roads become rocky.)

A new look

Another reason to cheer is the new "Silver Stretch" offense. Although it may prove to be a bust in the NFL, at least it has people talking about the Lions again. If nothing else, the Lions will make the weekly highlight reels for their own actions -- not because they were somebody's punching bag.

Should the Lions put together a strong pre-season record (win more than they lose), watch for the big crowds to return to the Silverdome. I'll know the Lions are back in good graces with the fans when NFC Central rival Chicago comes to town. Maybe this year we can outdraw the Chicago fans at the dome. Last year, it was sad to see thousands of drunk Chicago fans cheering on the Bears in our place. (Maybe we can return the favor sometime.)

But before they run, they must learn how to walk. (In English, that means beat Cleveland's butt in the pre-season opener.)

Sports of all sorts

Raiders reach state finals

Going up against the best in the state, a midget league baseball team from Independence Township competed in the Michigan Summer Recreation Program Festival Saturday afternoon.

Unfortunately, the Shader's Raiders fine play couldn't carry them to the championship as it lost twice to bow out of the tournament. The Raiders lost 5-1 to a team from Sterling Heights and 12-1 to a team from Dearborn.

A team from the East Lansing area eventually won the tournament.

During the regular season, the Shader's Raiders competed in the National League of the Independence Parks and Recreation sponsored baseball program for Midget (13 to 14 year olds) teams. The Raiders won the title with a 8-1 record.

Soccerfest comes to town

An afternoon of soccer is set for Clintonwood Park this Saturday.

Two soccer exhibitions, one by an adult mens team and another by an under-12 girls' squad, will highlight the "Soccerfest" from 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

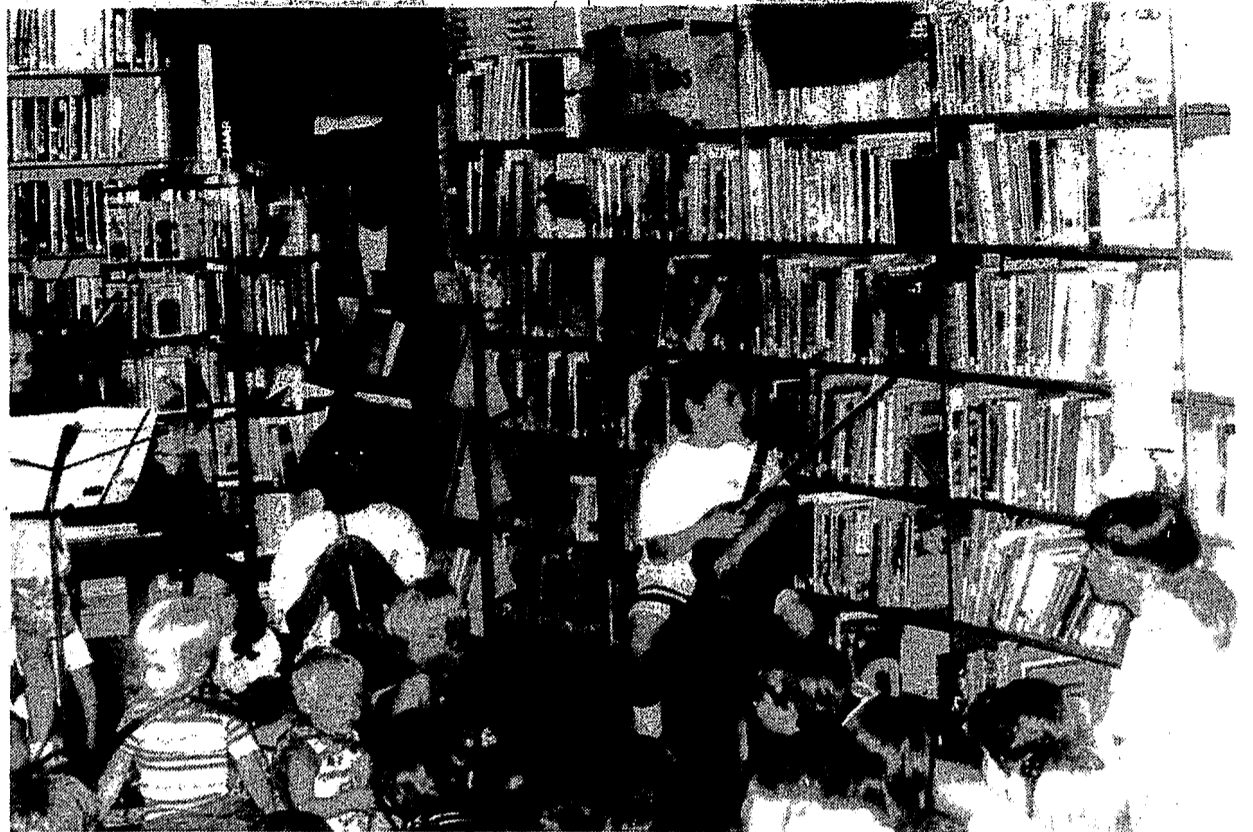

Clinics for coaches, goalies and players are available at no cost. Soccer vendors will be on hand to sell shoes and other equipment.

The first 250 to arrive at the park will earn a gift. There is no cost for the event, other than purchasing soccer equipment.

Township library. About 10 area kids between the ages of 2 and 12 performed selections on tiny string instruments as part of the library's preschool storytime.

Economists say county growth will remain stable

Oakland County's economic growth is outpacing the rest of the Detroit metropolitan area and the state as a whole, according to a study by University of Michigan economists.

Growth in non-manufacturing jobs has been especially strong in the county, due in part to the availability of a relatively well-educated work force, the report says.

Oakland's economy has been the stimulus to growth in the seven-county Detroit area, said two U of M economists: George Fulton, an associate research scientist at the U of M Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations (ILIR) and at the Department of Economics, and Donald Grimes, an ILIR social science research associate.

Their forecast was prepared for the Oakland County Economic Development Division and presented at a luncheon April 19 at the Pontiac Silverdome.

Although the country's economy is projected to slow from its "torrid pace" of the middle 1980s, "Oakland County has been the strongest urban economy in the state," according to the report.

"We view the Oakland economy as having achieved cruising altitude at a rate of growth which is solid, not spectacular, but nonetheless sustainable over the forecast horizon," Fulton and Grimes reported. "Growth in the county is expected to run well ahead of the state in 1989 and 1990."

Private sector employment in the county is forecast to grow 3 percent per year over the next two years, compared with 1.6 percent growth in 1989 and 0.3 percent growth in 1990 in the state as a whole. Fulton and Grimes are estimating that 46,900 private sector jobs will be gained in the county from 1987 to 1990.

They predict an increase of 48,800 in non-manufacturing jobs in the same period, offset to a small degree by the loss of 1,900 manufacturing jobs.

Oakland County has been gaining jobs relative to the rest of the region throughout the 1980s. In 1987, 30 percent of all private sector jobs in the Detroit metropolitan area were in Oakland County, compared with 24.4 percent in 1979.

"Not only is Oakland County's share of metropolitan area employment increasing overall, but its share also is increasing in every major industry," according to the U of M report. "The most dramatic increase in Oakland's share is in business services, and the county now has more than half of the jobs in the metropolitan area in this industry."

But growth in business services has slowed substantially in the last year. Fulton and Grimes "do not expect this industry to contribute to local area growth over the next few years to the extent it has in the recent past."

Over the past decade, manufacturing employment in Oakland County has dropped from 30 percent of the private to 20 percent, while employment in services has increased from 23.2 percent to 33.7 percent.

"These shifts are symptomatic of a fundamental change in the structure of the local economy," according to the study. "They cannot be attributed simply to the business cycle."

Oakland County had outperformed most other areas of the state because it has more healthy industries and firms.

These firms are located in Oakland County in the first place because of Oakland's high education rate.

"One of the reasons that the higher-wage service-producing industries have been growing very well in Oakland County is because the more educated work force they require is available in Oakland County."

Fulton and Grimes note that 24.1 percent of Oakland County's adult population had at least four years of college, compared with 10.9 percent in Genesee County.

"Michigan counties with high levels of educational attainment, such as Oakland, Washtenaw and Kalamazoo, have significantly lower unemployment rates than counties with relatively lower levels of education," the U of M economists wrote.

"The marriage of good employment opportunities and people who are qualified to take advantage of them is what makes Oakland County one of the strongest local economies, not only in Michigan but in the entire United States," Fulton and Grimes reported.

The above information was provided by The University of Michigan News and Information Services.

Project Warmth is taking applications

Low-income, handicapped and senior citizens may qualify to have their homes weatherized.

The Oakland Livingston Human Service Agency (OLHSA) is now accepting applications from citizens to have their homes insulated or their windows and doors repaired or replaced through Project Warmth.

The program is designed to lower heating costs and will also help keep houses cooler in the summer and warmer in the winter.

Qualified low-income people need not own their own homes, and renters may also apply.

For more information, call 373-7767.

Kindergarten screening

Kindergarten screening for Clarkston schools is set for 9 a.m. to noon Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 21 and 22, at Sashabaw Junior High School, Pine Knob Road.

Any child who will be 5 years old on or before Dec. 1, 1989, and who will attend kindergarten in August, must be screened -- if he or she hasn't already been screened in April.

The screening takes about an hour, and parents should bring an official county or state birth certificate and immunization records. To reserve a time for screening, call Sharon Malone at 625-4402.

Site condos cleared for Pine Knob, Clarkston roads

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Staff Writer

The southeast corner of Pine Knob and Clarkston roads is to be the future home of six site condominiums.

The Independence Township Planning Commission voted 6-1 to grant the project final site plan approval in a special meeting Aug. 3.

Voting yes were Chairperson Brent Bair, Joseph Figa, Jo Fussman, Bruce Mercado, Steve Secatch and Daniel Travis. Richard Oppmann voted no.

Site condominiums are like homes in a subdivision, except the homeowner owns only his house and the small "building envelope" onto which the house is built.

The condominium association, comprised of homeowners, owns all the property between and around houses and is responsible for such things as lawn and road maintenance.

James Mleczo's project, called Pine Valley Estates, consists of six detached condominium units on lots ranging from a half acre to one-and-a-half acres.

The commission approved Mleczo's plan after reviewing the additional landscaping they requested and after a discussion regarding entrances to the site.

Last June, when the project was given conceptual approval, some members questioned whether the site could be accessed by just one drive, instead of separate drives onto Clarkston and Pine Knob Roads.

Mleczo answered that the lots could not accommodate a shared drive because of wetlands in back and a setback limit in front. In addition, sharing driveways is often difficult for neighbors to work out in a small, rural development such as this one.

At the meeting Aug. 3, Mleczo assured members that the drives would be at least 50 feet from one another and would be located to ensure adequate vision onto Clarkston and Pine Knob roads.

Commission members accepted the decision on the drives and voiced approval of the project.

"For a rural-area subdivision, people just won't pay $180,000-plus for shared driveways," said Figa.

"The developer has done everything we've asked for," said Travis. "The engineer and planner (have) indicated their approval; I wish you good luck."

Hearing covers county road plans

Residents interested in the plans for area county roads may want to attend a public hearing 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 24, at the Oakland County Auditorium, 1200 North Telegraph, Pontiac.

The hearing covers the proposed 1990 Budget and Improvement Program, which addresses expected revenues and expenditures for 1990.

Copies of the proposed budget will be available at the hearing or before the meeting at the road commission administrative offices, 31001 Lahser at 13 Mile Road in Birmingham.

For more information, call 645-2000.

Be prepared in case of power outage

"Stormy Weather" may be the title of a classic love ballad, but this time of year in Southeastern Michigan, the song takes on an entirely different meaning.

Stormy weather occurs frequently May through September, causing damage to electric utility lines, resulting in temporary power outages. Detroit Edison has several suggestions to assure your safety and to minimize property damage and inconvenience while it is restoring electrical service.

* First, always be prepared for an emergency. Keep handy a battery-operated radio, fresh replacement batteries, flashlight or candles and a first aid kit.

* If your electricity goes out, check the circuit breakers and fuses to see if they need to be replaced or reset. Familiarize yourself with the procedures for replacing or resetting the devices. If there are no tripped circuits or blown fuses, see if your neighbors are without power and have reported the outage to Detroit Edison. If they haven't, call the number on your bill to report the problem. Be patient and try again if the lines are busy.

* Stay away from fallen poles and wires, hanging wires or anything the wires may be touching; report the problem to Detroit Edison.

* To avoid electrical overload when the power returns, disconnect appliances and turn off lights. Leave one light on so you will know what the power returns.

* Keep refrigerator and freezer doors closed to avoid food spoilage. A well-filled freezer, if kept closed, will preserve food for two to three days.

* Dry ice will help keep food cold. Place the dry ice on cardboard on top of food packages in the freezer. Food also can be stored, with ice, in a bath tub, metal bushel basket, pail or insulated picnic hamper. Cover with newspapers, rugs or blankets. (Partially thawed food or food that still has ice crystals can usually be refrozen.)

* Stay out of flooded or damp basements. The water or moisture surrounding your furnace and/or electrical appliances may serve as conductor of electricity.

* If you must leave your home for an extended period during a power outage, empty the contents of the refrigerator and leave the doors open. Turn off the main electrical and gas supply valves on your meter.

* When power returns, wait a few minutes before turning on the lights and appliances and then turn them on one at a time.

AAA warns Michigan drivers about hydroplaning

Water-skiing is great on a lake, but water-skiing with wheels along a road can be hazardous, AAA Michigan reports.

"Water-skiing" on four wheels is a phenomenon that can occur whenever there is standing water on pavement.

"A mixture of water, excessive speed and tire-tread depth may cause a vehicle to lose contact with the roadway and thus lose traction," said Robert V. Cullen, AAA Michigan Safety and Traffic manager.

As velocity increases, he said, tires begin to slide over a film of water. This is called hydroplaning.

Good treads allow water to escape from under the tires and, at moderate speeds, will prevent hydroplaning. But if water covers the treads, hydroplaning can take place even with good tires.

At 30 MPH or less, properly inflated tires with good treads wipe the road's surface much like a windshield wiper, making complete contact with the pavement.

While hydroplaning may happen at lower speeds, at 50 MPH or more, it can occur without warning. If that happens, changes in the road level or sharp curves may cause an unpredictable, uncontrollable skid.

To prevent hydroplaning, AAA Michigan urges you to follow these procedures:

* Reduce speed whenever water is standing on the roadway. Regular freeway speeds increase the danger of hydroplaning.

Township gives $400 to Common Ground

An area crisis center has received help from Independence Township in the form of a $400 contribution.

The board voted 5-0 Aug. 1 to approve the contribution to Common Ground, based in Royal Oak.

Common Ground provides crisis intervention, information and referral to those needing assistance. Their services include prevention programs, medical assistance, legal advice, crisis counseling and victim assistance programs, among others.

The organization depends on operating grants from private foundations, municipalities, community organizations, individuals and religious organizations to fund its $50,000 monthly operating expenses.

"They came before us last year with a very good presentation," said Treasurer John Lutz. "I'm very familiar with their operation."

Clerk Joan McCrary informed board members that Springfield Township officials had recently voted to deny funding for Common Ground for philosophical reasons.

She shared the printed comments of Springfield Township Supervisor Collin Walls, who said, "It's an excellent organization. I believe, however, that I should be making contributions as an individual and not using tax dollars for it."

McCrary stated that Walls opinion was one opinion of an individual.

Suit says theatre oversold concerts

show and "was forced to sit in the far reaches of the lawn area, with an obstructed view of the stage," according to the suit.

Stefan, a "lifelong Rod Stewart fan" who attended the July 6 show, missed one and a half hours of the show due to traffic and "never once laid eyes on Rod Stewart." Marsh had a similar experience at the Beach Boys and Chicago concert.

The plaintiffs are suing for "lost time, lost babysitting fees, parking fees, ticket prices, ticket price surcharges, transportation costs, lost enjoyment of the concerts, as promised them by the Defendant, harassment, mental and physical suffering, and other damages determinable following discovery," according to the suit.

The suit is a class action, which means it is filed on behalf of all the patrons attending the five shows. The three women are acting as representatives of all the concertgoers, said Matt Beer, a law clerk at Charfoos & Christensen, the Detroit firm handling the case.

"It is a two-fold process," he said. "First, you find representatives and petition the court to certify you as a class."

If the court does this, the firm will take names of people to comprise the class, Beer said.

The firm has not decided what amount it will seek in damages yet, but Beer said it will be over $10,000.

A Pine Knob spokeswoman denied that the music theatre sold too many tickets to the five shows after Pine Knob owner Joseph Nederlander was quoted recently in a Detroit newspaper as saying the theater oversold each concert.

"It was an unfortunate misunderstanding," said Simone Prince, Pine Knob's director of promotions and public relations. "We have never oversold a show and never will."

Pine Knob's capacity is at 16,646, and the Ticket Master computer is programmed not to exceed that amount, Prince said.

She could not comment on the suit itself, since Pine Knob has not received notice of the suit or a subpoena.

Pine Knob has never received complaints of overcrowding in the past. Prince said she thinks complaints were filed this time because the three performers attract an older audience.

"They want more elbow room and expect more room on the lawn," she said. "It's ironic, since we've sold as many if not more tickets for other concerts."

Prince said Pine Knob plans to cut back its ticket sales to avoid similar incidents.

The POH staff is prepared for whatever comes through the doors of the Emergency Center.

Recognized as one of the top emergency centers in the State of Michigan, POH is renowned for saving lives. Many of the patients treated at POH are severe cases — the result of motor vehicle accidents, or severe bodily malfunctioning such as heart attack and strokes. Lesser injuries such as broken bones, cuts and bruises are handled quickly and efficiently. POH's 24-Hour Emergency Trauma Center provides:

- Full-time Emergency Medicine Physician Specialists
- All nurses certified in Advanced Cardiac Life Support
- 24-hour in-house coverage and staffing of surgical and medical residents
- 24-hour staffing of operating room personnel
- A high-tech Medical/Surgical Intensive Care Unit staffed by specially trained ICU nurses

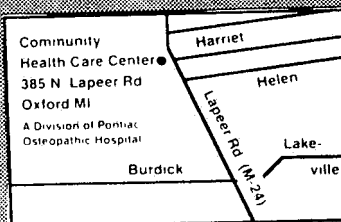

You can be a life saver too.

POH is now offering a free booklet, The Life Savers' Home First Aide Guide. The booklet is full of useful medical information for you, often the first "aide" at the scene of an injury, illness or accident. It covers everything from the symptoms and treatment of the common fever, to how to identify a heart attack or stroke and what action should be taken. Also covered are the proper first aid treatments for insect bites, sunburn, cuts, bruises and much more.

Keep the Life Savers' Home First Aide Guide handy in your home. In an emergency, it can make a "life saver" out of the first "aide." For your free booklet call POH at: (313) 338-5385. Or, fill out the order form below and mail.

Opinion of Bill Myers

These 'loopholes' can be expensive

William A. Myers is a retired Lapeer County editor and investments manager from Boca Raton, Fla.

One of these "tax hotline" services lists a number of "loopholes" which, of course, attract almost everybody. One is buying a vacation home instead of renting one every summer. Then you can deduct mortgage interest and real estate taxes.

Okay. Let's try one on for size:
Cost of renting a $200,000 summer place for 10 weeks: $10,000.

Cost of owning: Assume you can't find a renter for the winter season or some of the relatives pre-empt the place just before and just after the season. At 10 percent on your full-worth mortgage (to make figuring easier): $20,000 interest cost. This is deductible, so you save 28 percent tax, and net cost is $14,400.

Property tax per year: $5,000.

Insurance: $500.

Off-season care: $500.

Painting, roof, furnace, appliances: $1,000.

Total of these items: $7,000.

So you have laid out $14,400 in net interest cost, plus $7,000 in taxes, insurance and upkeep. Total: $21,400.

Cost of renting for the summer: $10,000.

So it costs you $11,400 extra to be one of the landed gentry. Some honor! Some loophole!

Another of this hotline's "loopholes":

Buy rental property - a two-family or four-family house - and actively manage it. (You have to be active as a manager to keep it out of "passive" income.)

The hotline says you can deduct up to $25,000 in losses against your salary and other income.

Big deal. So you lose $25,000 a year, but it can offset your regular income. The 28 percent tax on $25,000 is $7,000, so your net loss is $18,000, which has to come out of your hide.

Once again, wearily we say unto you: you can't buy groceries with business losses.

You had a $25,000 offset against income, but you saved only $7,000 from it. You were out $18,000, and you also had a daily headache from the tenants.

You have to be a landlord to find this out. Meanwhile, ask any landlord you know if he is enjoying life.

SteinRoe mutual funds sent me a do-it-yourself psychoanalysis kit. It was designed to "find your investment personality."

Examples of the multiple-choice questions:

1. Age.
2. How much emergency savings have you set aside?
3. If you own your home, how much is it worth?
4. How much money invested for non-retirement purposes?
5. What percentage of your income do you save?
6. How important is: a. current monthly income; b. capital appreciation?
7. How much time a week do you spend on investments?

In all the questions, numerical ratings ran from zero to eight. Higher numbers were for higher figures, such as age, income, investments, time spent on them, etc. In most of them, my numbers were at the top end.

After scoring the thing, I found myself classified as "Aggressive - one who holds, or should hold, growth funds."

I was far away from their bracket labeled "Conservative."

Whatever Harvard business school PhD wrote the test, they couldn't have missed the mark further than they did with this kid.

I don't own "growth" funds and don't plan to. My investment philosophy would delight a Vermont bank trust officer. I buy only bonds, hoping to find some under-priced ones, and buy mostly long ones.

Yet SteinRoe says the test shows I should own:

Money market funds	20%
Bond funds	40%
Growth & income funds	30%
Growth funds	10%

Why should I have 20 percent in money market funds? If I need cash, I call up ol' John Grant at Thomson McKinnon and ask him to loan me some at margin.

Bond funds? Why should I pay a load charge of, say, 5 percent, plus management costs of 1 percent a year? I just buy some bonds and keep my eye on them. And not 40 percent of my assets (excluding the house) but 100 percent.

Growth and income funds? Again, why pay a load charge and a management fee? And who knows when, if ever, this growth syndrome sets in? The only sure key to growth I know is steroids.

It's a Cold

Time of occurrence
Autumn and winter

Duration
Usually one week; ranging from two days to two weeks.

Frequency
Six per year on average.

Cause
A virus, not a bacteria, causes an infection in the upper air passages within the head. That's why many refer to it as a "head" cold.

While bacteria can be treated and cured with antibiotics, viruses can't. That's why there's no cure for a cold - only relief for the symptoms such as a stuffy and runny nose.

Symptoms

- Stuffy head, nose or sinuses
- Fatigue
- Thick, cloudy or yellow nasal discharge
- Occasional sneezing
- Possible fever
- Possible coughing

Advice
Call Community Health Care Center

It's an Allergy

Time of occurrence
Spring, summer, autumn

Duration
Season long with chronic, recurrent bouts.

Frequency
Allergic reactions occur whenever a child makes contact with an allergen (pollen, dust, mold, etc.) to which he or she is sensitive.

Cause
When the allergens meet antibodies the "good guys" in the blood that fight foreign bodies), the result triggers an allergic response of symptoms.

Symptoms

- Thin, watery, clear nasal discharge
- Sneezing bouts
- Swollen, red, watery or itchy eyes
- Itchy nose or tickling feeling in the throat

Popular school fashions run the gamut this year

JENNIFER ANDRYCO, a sophomore at Clarkston High School, said a lot of girls like to shop at the Limited Express.

BY BONNIE WATTLEWORTH
Clarkston News Special Writer

While it's often difficult to describe the fashion trend among teens today, one Clarkston High School secretary summed it up in two words.

"Anything goes," said Linda Walker, CHS athletic secretary. She said she sees everything from punk to conservative in the halls of CHS.

CHS Counselor Vic Hart said each student seems

"Some kids don't like to dress up because then they feel like they can't get dirty. ... I'm pretty clumsy, so I don't like to dress up. I don't like to wear white stuff because I always get something on it."

Rick Detkowski

to wear a variety of different styles.

"They'll dress very casual one day and dressed up the next," he said.

While students seem to be wearing a wide variety of clothing, a CHS sophomore said many girls she knows like to shop at the Limited Express.

"I see a lot of stuff from the Express and their type of clothing," said Jennifer Andryco of Holcomb Road, Clarkston.

And where hair is concerned, a lot of girls are opting for styles without bangs, she said.

"I've noticed they'll let their bangs grow out and then pull them back," Andryco said.

CHS secretary Brenda Alexander said she notices a lot of girls wear short skirts, cropped pants or short running pants.

"They wear those real tight pants that go to the knees and loose T-shirts."

"They wear those real tight pants that go to the knees and loose T-shirts," she said.

When it comes to fashions for guys, most young men like to keep it casual when dressing for school, said

H&R BLOCK TO OFFER TAX SCHOOL IN THE LAKE ORION AREA

Thousands of people are learning the skill of income tax preparation from H&R Block and are earning money as income tax preparers.

H&R Block, the world's largest income tax preparation service, is offering a basic income tax course starting September 6th and 7th with morning, afternoon, evening and Saturday classes available. Classes held in the Lake Orion area.

During the 13 week course, students will study all phases of income tax preparation and receive actual experience in preparing individual returns. Experienced Block instructors will teach current laws, theory and application, as practiced in Block offices nationwide. There is a classroom discussion on each tax subject and practice problems at every level. Courses are programmed to teach students increasingly complex tax problems as study progresses. Students will find the course both interesting and challenging.

Courses are ideally suited for people who want to increase their tax knowledge and learn how to save money on taxes or who are looking for a rewarding career. No prerequisites are required to enroll.

Qualified course graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. Many accept employment with Block because of the flexible hours available. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

One low course fee includes all textbooks, supplies and tax forms necessary for the completion of the course. Certificates and 7.5 continuing education units will be awarded upon successful completion of the course. Master, Visa and Discover cards are accepted, or a time payment plan is available.

Registration forms and a brochure for the income tax course may be obtained by contacting the H&R Block office at Detkowski, who will be a sophomore at CHS, said most young men he knows dress casually in Levi's jeans.

Andryco said she sees a lot of guys who pull the long, permed section into a pony tail. But Detkowski, who sports this style, said he never wears his hair in a pony tail and never would.

he dresses, there are a couple items of his that she dislikes.

"She hates rock group T-shirts," he said. "And anything black she can't stand."

ACCESSORIES such as this unusual watch can set off an outfit.

While Detkowski's hair is permed in back and his jeans are Levi's, he isn't a slave to fashion.

"They say bell bottoms are coming back in, but I'm not wearing them if they do," he said, shaking his head. "No thanks."

Most adults working at CHS had nothing but compliments for student styles.

"I think the kids are dressing up more," Walker said. "It's not so much jeans and T-shirts like it used to be."

Alexander agreed.

"I think they're dressing better than they were 10 years ago," she said.

CHS Assistant Principal Brent Cooley said he thinks most students dress in clean, neat clothing.

But there are a few items students are not allowed to wear to school such as tank tops, short shorts and T-shirts promoting substance abuse. They can't wear anything "disruptive to the educational process," Cooley said.

But he added that administrators have very few problems enforcing the dress code.

"(Violating the dress code) is not tolerated by the student population itself," he said.

Cooley said for the most part, he approves of what the students wear.

"Students dress very well at Clarkston High School," he said. "And it's getting better every year."

Teachers earn fashion marks

BY BONNIE WATTLEWORTH
Clarkston News Special Writer

While area children soon will worry about what to wear on the first day of school, one Clarkston teacher already is making plans.

"You want to wear something special for the first day of school," said Natalie Hewko, a fourth-grade teacher at Clarkston Elementary School.

While Hewko said the material and values that are taught have the greatest impact on the children, other factors such as what a teacher wears also can play an important role.

"When you're teaching, it's amazing how much of an influence you have," she said. "You become a role model and they will imitate you."

Hewko, who lives on Whipple Tree, Independence Township, said the children in her class often notice what she wears.

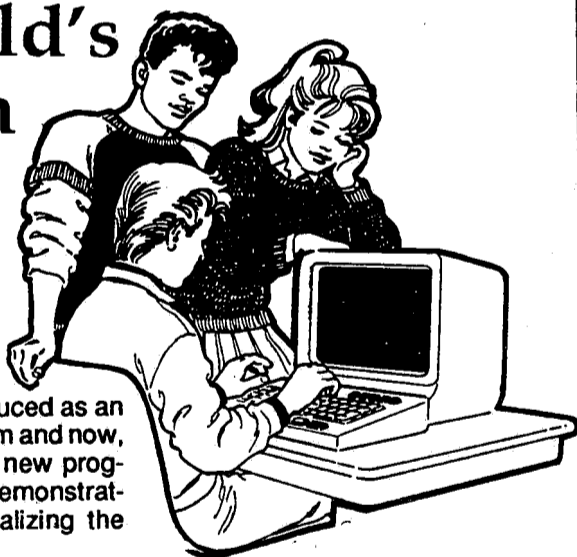

"The year before last, two little girls who were very conscious of what they looked like came up to me and said that they had been talking among themselves," she said. "They said to me 'If we get old like you, we want to look like you and wear clothes like you.' That shows you how much of an influence you have."

Hewko said when dressing for work, she likes to NATALIE HEWKO, a fourth grade teacher at Clarkston Elementary School, loves to wear comfortable jumpsuits when she teaches. But for the first day of school, she plans to wear a colorful, tailored dress to look both pleasant and business-like.

Student orientation for all sixth graders and any new seventh, eighth and ninth graders is planned for 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 24, at Sashabaw and Clarkston junior high school gymnasiums.
 At CJHS, Principal Duane Lewis and Assistant Principal Jan Gabier will address the students.
 At SJHS, Principal David Reschke and assistant principal Vincent Licata will address the students.
 After the talks, students will receive their schedules, student handbooks and locker combinations. Plus, students may tour the building and locate their lockers and classrooms.
 Parents of sixth graders should try to attend, but older brothers and sisters should not attend the orientation.

colorful clothes, Hewko said she thinks it's also important to look like an authority figure.
 "They love it when you're updated or 'with it,' but you definitely have to be separate," she said. "I don't believe in dressing like one of the kids."
 Comfort is another consideration when having a job that entails spending the day with nine and 10 year olds.
 Jumpsuits are a favorite item, Hewko said. But for the first day of school, she would choose something a bit more business-like.
 "I'll probably wear kind of a business dress that would be pleasant, or that would have a happy, joyful look," she said.

While Hewko believes in balancing business and casual clothing, other teachers have their own fashion philosophies.
 "Everyone dresses according to their own person, but they're all professional," she said. "Teaching gives you that flexibility to be yourself."

Facial expressions can affect emotional state

When you call an angry, sneering person a "hot-head," the label may be more accurate than you know.

A series of experiments at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, gives new support for the controversial theory that altering your facial expression can affect your emotional state.

In 1985, U-M psychologist Robert Zajonc resurrected and modified a vascular theory of emotions first proposed in 1907 by French physician Israel Waynbaum.

Waynbaum said that facial muscles ease up on or press against the branches of the facial arteries, allowing more of less blood to reach the brain which, in turn, affects our emotional states.

Zajonc, applying contemporary understanding to the theory, says Waynbaum was partially right.

"We now know that muscle pressure has little effect on arterial flow to the brain because arterial blood flow is regulated by vasoconstrictors and vasodilators.

"However, we also know now that muscle pressure can affect blood flow in veins," he explains. "And it now appears that changes in the cavernous sinus -- a venous structure which receives blood from veins around the nasal airway and which is wrapped around the internal artery -- can cool arterial blood before it enters the brain.

These temperature changes set off or inhibit the release of neurotransmitters that influence emotions and brain functions."

"I do not claim that temperature change is the only way of inducing emotional state," Zajonc says. "But the theory helps explain a number of curious phenomenon. For example, it might explain why placebo pills are so frequently effective.

"People given sugar pills which they believe to be a proven cure for their ailments, might momentarily change their breathing patterns and change their expressions," he says.

"The change in the configuration of the facial muscles may alter the temperature of some regions of the brain that release endorphins -- analgesic neuro-chemicals produced in the brain -- and can thus reduce pain. Or they can reduce an infection by raising the temperature -- creating a fever -- which would trigger the release of antigens to fight in the infected tissues."

Zajonc also says the theory might explain why people feel more aggressive in the heat and why significantly more rapes, murders and assaults take place when the temperature soars.

Zajonc notes that, although the exact biochemical processes are unknown as yet, there is research that shows that minimal changes in body temperature have dramatic effects on neurochemical activity.

To test his theory, Zajonc ran several experiments to see if facial movement alone, elicited by conditions unrelated to emotions, can produce emotional responses.

In the first study, 26 native speakers of German read aloud sets of stories written in German. The stories within each set matched each other in semantic and emotional content, but one included many "u" sounds while the other had none.

"Pronouncing the 'u' sound in German or French activates muscles which press against the facial veins that empty into the cavernous sinus.

It also affects breathing patterns by constricting the nostrils. As blood flow is reduced, the temperature in the cavernous sinus rises.

Some negative emotions have the same effect -- they alter breathing patterns and facial actions to impede hypothalamic cooling, Zajonc says.

As the stories were read aloud, Zajonc used an infrared thermographic camera to measure temperature changes midway between the eyebrows and the hairline and indirectly above the pupil of the eye.

"These points are on or near the frontopolar branch of the anterior cerebral artery which issues from the carotid artery as it enters the brain, so they give reliable estimates of changes in brain temperature," Zajonc says.

Zajonc found that temperatures rose markedly when subjects read the "u" stories, while there was virtually no change in the stories without the "u" sound.

Afterwards, the subjects were tested on their affective reactions to the stories and their recall of information. Seventy-eight percent of the subjects liked the no-"u" stories significantly more, and 81 percent found them more pleasant.

To be sure that the subjects were not reacting somehow to the meaning in the stories, another experiment compared the temperature changes and subjective reactions of 20 Americans who spoke no German to those of 20 native German speakers as they repeated aloud the "u" sound and an "o" sound. The subjects then rated the two sounds according to how pleasant, familiar and difficult they were to produce and how much they liked the sound.

In a last experiment, the subjects were asked to inhale warm, cool and oregano scented air directly from a tube into their nostrils.

The subjects were told all the air flows were scented, and they were supposed to decide which scents they preferred. The warm air was 32.3 C (about 5 C less than body temperature); the cool air was 18.9 C, and the oregano-scented air was room temperature -- 20 C-21.1 C.

"None of the subjects noticed a difference in temperature," Zajonc says, "but the warm air raised forehead temperatures a mean of 0.2 C; the scented air raised it 0.1 C, and the cooled lowered it nearly 0.1 C."

The subjects liked the warm air significantly less than the other two air flows and rated the warm air as much less pleasant.

Seventeen of the 20 subjects said the warm air "scent" induced a bad mood, while only seven said the cool and scented air induced a bad mood. The scented and cooled air produced generally more positive reactions.

The above information was provided by The University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, News and Information Services.

Exchange students learn about life in Clarkston

France, Alain Casse from France and Joan Anton Torredelot from Spain.

The Nacel Cultural Exchange Program put Clarkston, Michigan on the map for four foreign students from France and Spain. The four are spending one month in Clarkston to learn the joys, duties and responsibilities of what it is like to be as part of an American family.

The two from Spain and two from France said the United States was different from their countries in small ways, including the way Americans work and the fact that "they eat all the time."

Hosts for the four include the Steve Secatch family, the Ken Garza family, the Ed Sautler family and the Larry Gruber family.

The Nacel Cultural Exchange program is the largest homestay program in the world, organizing exchanges for 5,500 French, 300 German and 1,000 Spanish students each year.

Pet of the Week

Small size, big heart

Uggie's not the most handsome dog, but she's friendly.

She's a two-year-old brown and white Boston Terrier.

Uggie's small in size, weighing about 10 pounds.

Humane society workers suggested Uggie live in a home with no other pets. They also suggest her temperament would best suit a family with older children.

The adoption fee for Uggie is $65. She will be spayed before leaving the shelter.

Uggie can be adopted at the Michigan Humane Society, 3600 Auburn Rd., Auburn Heights, 852-7420. Hours at the non-profit shelter are 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

UGGIE CAN'T be happy until she finds the perfect place to call home. (Photo by Peter Auchter)

Call Miss Dig before construction begins

Planning to plant trees, set posts, install sprinkler systems or fences soon?

If so, Consumers Powers Co. officials say you should call Miss Dig at 1-800-482-7171.

Miss Dig is a 24-hour notification system designed to advise utilities of proposed excavation in a specific area.

Last year, Consumers Power Metro Region reported 2,447 incidents causing damage to its facilities.

Homeowners, developers and contractors should call Miss Dig before beginning any work, so utilities companies can stake out the area of underground lines.

Lean potato salad

by Tracy King

A crazy thing has happened in the world of dieting lately. Gone are the traditional, limited menus of lettuce leaves, carrot sticks and tuna fish. People who know about such things are now advocating the use of complex carbohydrates -- things like pastas, rice and potatoes.

The rules say the carbohydrates supply more energy and spare the body's storage of protein as an energy source.

Along with the medical applications, carbohydrates are a whole lot more satisfying to dieters, too.

One high carbohydrate, low-fat program is outlined in a book called "Eat to Win" by Dr. Robert Haas. Here's one recipe for potato salad it actually suggests for those watching their wasteline.

RED POTATO SALAD

4 medium red potatoes, quartered
1/2 cup low-fat cottage cheese

3/4 cup plain low-fat yogurt
1/4 cup red wine vinegar
3 teaspoons prepared mustard
3 teaspoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1/2 cup chopped celery
1/4 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup chopped green onion

Cover potatoes with water in a saucepan. Bring to a boil and cook 25-35 minutes or until tender.

Place cottage cheese, yogurt, vinegar, mustard, lemon juice, soy sauce and pepper in a blender or food processor and mix until smooth.

Mix celery, onion, and green onion with potatoes. Pour dressing over and toss to coat. Chill.

Three walkers win

Three area residents won prizes July 28 in Springfield Township Parks and Recreation's annual drawing for the Walk Michigan program.

Walk Michigan is a statewide program promoting health and physical benefits of walking on local park land.

The program was sponsored by the Michigan Recreation and Parks Association, Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Michigan and Springfield Township Parks and Recreation.

Flea market begins

Homemade baked goods and ice cream are some of the treats to be served during the annual Flea Market Friday and Saturday, Aug. 11 and 12.

Sponsored by the Independence Township Senior Citizens, the flea market is set for 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the center in Clintonwood Park, 5980 Clarkston Rd.

An Apple for the Teacher

Marilyn Bidinger
finishes 25th year

By Ruth Powers

For Marilyn Bidinger, 1989 has proven to be a silver anniversary year. As a dedicated teacher at Pine Knob Elementary School, Marilyn has spent her 25th year teaching 25 first graders.

Marilyn believes in helping each child strive to be the best they can be, reaching their individual potential. She also believes in using the assertive discipline plan.

The Golden Rule is important in her classroom as well as respect for each person and their special qualities and talents.

Marilyn serves on many committees within the school district, including Wellness and Health, Foreign Language and Science Workshop Training.

She has also taken workshops and classes on the use of the video camera and computer. Marilyn feels it is important to keep up with new innovations in the field of education.

Her family includes husband, Bernie, a teacher at Sashabaw Junior High School; daughter, Tandy, 27, soon to be a lawyer, who is married and lives in Lansing; son, Michael, 26, who is a carpenter; and Kyle, 3 1/2-year-old grandson.

Marilyn belongs to the Lutheran church, ADK professional teachers sorority and the Michigan Reading Association.

Her hobbies include cooking from her large assortment of cookbooks, collecting rocks and shells from her travels, gardening, crafts, skating, swimming and aerobic dancing. She and her family have traveled extensively in Canada and the U.S., including Alaska and Hawaii.

Marilyn and her husband reside in Ortonville. This left-hander was born in Detroit of 100 percent Finnish descent. She spent her childhood in Detroit and Royal Oak.

Her degrees were obtained from Wayne State University, Detroit. She has a bachelor of arts in elementary education and a master of arts in special education for emotionally and socially impaired.

If you're looking for a patient, flexible teacher, you'll find it in Marilyn Bidinger, who enjoys kids and loves learning.

She has taught various grade levels including, first, second, third and sixth and emotionally impaired.

Marilyn keeps teaching because, "There's never a dull moment, always something new and interesting going on."

She enjoys all the new experiences along the way and looks forward to a productive future in the field of education.

An Apple for the Teacher is provided by the Clarkston Education Association. This week's author is Ruth Powers, a first grade teacher at Pine Knob Elementary School.

030-GENERAL

WHO IS ON THE LORD'S side let him hear what the Spirit of TRUTH saith unto the churches. I say unto you that in the church is one greater than the temple for the Son of Man is Lord even of the sabbath day. I marvel that you are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another so called, gospel. There be some that trouble you, and would prevent the gospel of Christ. For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men (circumcision of the flesh)? For if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ (circumcision of the heart) Certain men which went out from us (turned to lying vanities and Jewish fables) have continually troubled you, saying you must be circumcised (be a follower of men) and keep the law (to be lorded over by tradition through priests and pastors) to whom was given, absolutely, no such commandment by God. For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ and him crucified, that your faith should stand in the wisdom of God and not in the wisdom of men. The Jews require a sign (law, tradition) and gentiles seek after wisdom (esteeming of themselves) to be justified in their conscience rather than believing in the finished work of the cross of Christ. Seventy weeks were determined and accomplished upon the Jews (Mat 24.1-26) and their holy city, saith the Lord. To finish the transgression (Mat 23.25), and to make an end of sins (Jn 12.31) (Jn 8.24) (Jn 15.23,24) (Col 1.13), and to make reconciliation for iniquity (Col 1.14)(Jn 12.32), and to bring in everlasting righteousness (the cross) (Rom 3.25,25)(Jn 12.44) (Rom 4.3,4), and to seal up the vision and prophecy (Rom 15.8)(Mat 5.17) (Mat 22.40) (Luk 22.44) and to anoint the most holy (Mat 3.16) (II Cor 6.16). Blessed be the lord God of Israel for he hath visited and redeemed his people. (in Jesus Christ). (Luk 1.68,69). Not as though the WORD OF GOD has taken none effect, for they are not all christians which are of the churches. Neither because they gather together in the name of Jesus Christ are they all children of God. But in Jesus Christ shall the seed be called, that is, they which are of faith (acknowledging God by doing God's word) (Luk 7.29,30) having a love for the truth are counted for the seed-only those! All others will have strong delusion believing a lie just like they want to. IIIIX32-2

TIM AND TRAVIS Robertson pose with Ashley, the Lapeer County 4-H Rodeo Club

mascot, outside their home on Rattalee Lake Road in Springfield Township. The brothers are continuing a family tradition in the rodeo circuit.

Springfield Township rodeo boys lasso some fun

BY PETER AUCHTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Rodeos are as much a part of America as hot dogs, apple pie and Chevrolet to the Robertson-Rogers family.

"It's the oldest American tradition," said Carroll Rogers, a retired cowboy. "That's what America was built on."

Before the invention of automobiles, rodeos readied horses for use as transportation. Later, it evolved into a Sunday afternoon competition between ranchers.

Today, it's a major sport in the South with professional riders earning up to $50,000 for winning certain events. On a smaller scale, the rodeo scene exists in Michigan.

"They can not kill it," Nancy Robertson said of the sport's critics. "It is alive and well in Michigan, but people don't know about it."

The Robertson-Rogers family of Rattalee Lake Road, Springfield Township, helped found the Lapeer County 4-H Rodeo Club, and have been members for more than five years.

"It's addictive, and it's fun."

Travis Robertson

Nancy's sons, Tim and Travis Robertson, are carrying the family rodeo tradition into the 1990s.

Tim, 16, rides horses bareback while Travis, 15, likes to bull ride. Both compete in events across the state in various organizations ranging from 4-H to the Mid States Rodeo Association (MSRA).

The brothers, who attend Clarkston High School, have played conventional sports like football and wres-ting -- but rodeo remains their favorite athletic event.

"It's addictive, and it's fun," said Travis.

Especially when you're a winner. The boys own countless ribbons from 4-H rodeos and have pocketed a little cash from professional events as well.

Their mother is especially proud to note they have qualified for the state rodeo finals at Michigan State University, East Lansing, annually. The top 10 riders in every rodeo event gather each fall to see who's the best of the best.

Typically, the Robertson-Rogers family travels together when the brothers criss-cross the state in search of rodeos. Their caravan, families involved in semi-pro or professional rodeos who travel to distant events in groups of four or five to cut costs, arrives two hours before the rodeo begins.

Once at the site, the cowboys register and draw lots for their particular ride that night. Then it's time to prepare for work. Riders must be dressed and ready to go an hour before the event, according to rodeo rules.

During the lull time between preparation and the event itself, the boys have time to talk with other cowboys to learn the characteristics of the animal they will soon ride should it be unfamiliar to them. Most of the animals in the rodeos are known by at least one cowboy, Nancy said.

After the talking is done, it's showtime. While the events are over relatively fast, it's long enough for the riders.

"It's the longest eight seconds of your life," Tim and Travis said in unison. "You hang on for dear life."

When the work is done, the brothers enjoy the other attractions at the carnival just as any other teen-ager would, before it's time to move on again.

The brothers usually participate in three rodeos a week, Thursday through Saturday, during the summer. The family travels across the state to find rodeo action.

One recent jaunt had them traveling to Mason, Lincoln and Boyne Falls. Other locations include Ithica, Belleville and Ann Arbor.

The boys' step-father, Carroll, sees the extended weekend travels as an advantage for them as they prepare for life away from home in the years ahead.

"I highly recommend it for every child, at least to try it," he said. "It gives a child a start in society; he's been places and done things."

In 4-H rodeos, extra safety precautions are taken to ensure young cowboys a relatively safe ride. The Robertsons remember the bumps and bruises received while they learned.

Fortunately, the boys have never had a serious injury while competing. But they realize anything can happen once they're in the ring, so why worry about it?

"It's not if, it's when you're going to get hurt and how bad," Tim said.

"It's the oldest American tradition. That's what America was built on."

Carroll Rogers

And in the battle between a 2,600-pound bull and 160-pound man, it's the cowboy who takes the brunt of the punishment during a rodeo -- not the animals.

It's rare to see animals injured in rodeos nowadays, especially since new rulings disqualify cowboys who draw blood during a ride, Nancy said.

Stock contractors care for their animals well, using them only once a week. The rest of the time, the animals spend grazing in knee-high grass.

"The horses have it made," said Tim. "They have it better than people's pets."

Sportsmanship in rodeos also extends to the other competitors.

"All the cowboys shake hands (afterward)," said Carroll. "It's not a dog-eat-dog world. There never are enemies -- just friendships."
