Hughes, Downs win board seats

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Associate Editor

Durham Downs and Sheila Hughes, running on a joint ticket, were elected to the Clarkston school board, with about 6 percent voter turnout June 11.

Roughly 1,200 of 18,200 eligible registered voters turned out.

Downs captured 616 votes to win the one-year seat on the school board. He ran against Dennis Walters, who earned 366 votes, and Kurt Karlstrom, who garnered 301 votes.

In the race for the four-year term, Sheila Hughes earned 603 to win the bid; Robert Wyatt captured 428 votes; Charles Weber earned 149 votes and Donald Brockman had 111.

The election results are not final until they are reviewed and certified by the Oakland County Board of Canvassers.

The election results were determined by the school board during the regular June 11 meeting.

The Independence Township clerk delivered the 12 precinct envelopes, along with absentee results, about 9:30 p.m.

With many of the school board candidates in the crowd, the school board secretary read off the precinct results one by one.

As the winners became clear, Durham Downs and Sheila Hughes showed little emotion, whispering to one another only briefly.

After the winners were declared, however, both described their elation.

"I'm excited, happy and pleased," Hughes said, easily. "I hope I can work hard for the children of Clarkston and hope that I can become a good board member and meet the expectations of those who elected me."

Hughes said the low voter turnout surprised her.

"I thought there would be more people at the polls," she said.

Hughes attributed four years of hard work for her victory in the election. She has attended board meetings, maintained an awareness of the facts and issues and been in touch with parents, she said.

Durham Downs said he was "pleased with the results."

"I'm pleased with the effort and support extended on our behalf," Downs said.

He attributes his victory to his ability to communicate his record to voters. He also credits the contribution of volunteers and a diligent effort by campaign workers.

He added that the real effort lies ahead.

"We've got a lot of work to do," Downs said.

Lawsuit settled

Manufactured home sub OK'd

BY CURT MCALLISTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

A three-year battle between the Independence Township Board and developer Gregory Christopher may be coming to a conclusion.

On Tuesday, June 5, the board unanimously approved a motion to enter into a settlement for the resolution of an Oakland County Circuit Court lawsuit filed by Christopher against the township last year.

Since September 1988, Christopher has been haggling with the board to develop a 305-unit manufactured home subdivision on Mann Road near Clintonville Road and I-75.

He had requested a rezoning to planned unit development (PUD), which would have given the township control over the developing stages. A PUD is a rezoning tied to a specific site plan and requires planning commission and township board approval.

The planning commission and the board denied his request.

Christopher filed a lawsuit in Oakland County Circuit Court, charging the township with discrimination by not offering affordable housing for residents. This action resulted in numerous negotiations between attorneys with proposals including a decrease in units per acre, landscaping, and payment tossed on the table.

The recent settlement between the township and Christopher includes the following stipulations: 100 percent doublewide, manufactured homes on 50- to 55-foot-wide lots with a slight increase in park-like open space, berming and landscaping along I-75 and throughout the park, paving the entrance of the park and sewer extension to the Grovecrest Care Center of Clarkston.

Prior to the vote, several of the board members expressed their pleasure with Christopher's delayed endeavor.

"I'd like it to be known that despite our problems, concerning this park, I'm very pleased with the direction in which it's taking," said Trustee Daniel Travis. "This project will undoubtedly serve as a model park for southeastern Michigan and perhaps set a precedent for the entire state."

Donations needed for July concerts

The schedule is ready for the 1990 Concerts in the Park in July — the 11th season of music in downtown Clarkston.

Sponsored by the Clarkston Area Chamber of Commerce, the concerts are paid for by donations.

Anyone who is interested in donating should send money to the Clarkston Area Chamber of Commerce, Concert Fund, 6650 Dixie Highway, Clarkston, MI 48016.

Anyone who donates the following amounts of money will be recognized in the concert program: $100, sponsors; $50, patrons; $25, band box.

Following are the concerts: July 6, European Festival Band; July 13, Executives Big Band; July 20, Auto City Banjo; July 27, Tail Gate Ramblers.

For more information, call 623-7900 or 625-8055.

He likes life

Jeffrey Ginn wrote this response to a question: What is your most favorite belonging? He's a second-grader in Sherril Bailey's class at Clarkston Elementary.

I found my most special belonging the year of 1981, date August 29, the day I was born.

It's called life.

In life, you have childhood. Then you're a teenager who talks on the phone, and your mom gets mad at you for talking on the phone.

Your dad yells at you for raising the phone bill. It's horrible, but you live with it because you know you'll be an adult one day.

The third stage of life is an adult who gets married, pays taxes and gets a job, then retires and goes into the fourth and final stage of life, which is an old geezer who sits around all day.

Now you know about my favorite thing in the whole world.

Correction

On the honor roll in last week's Clarkston News, Clarkston High School junior Stacy Secatch should have been listed as having a 4.0 grade point average.

Parade theme set

With summer here, it's time to start planning for your entry in Clarkston's Fourth of July parade.

The theme this year is "Spirit of Freedom," and awards will be given for floats showing the best originality and best display of this year's theme. It's a good opportunity for clowns, bands, subdivision floats, horses and bikers.

Sponsored by the Independence Township Fire Department, the parade is planned for 10 a.m. Wednesday, July 4, in downtown Clarkston.

For more information, call the fire department between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. at 625-1924.

AIR CONDITIONING TIP

When it's 90° in June and the cotton wood fuzz is falling like snow in January, it is affecting the operation, efficiency and life of your air conditioner.

Because of the design and operation of air conditioners, a lot of air is drawn or forced through a coil called the condenser. When the condenser is clean, normal heat transfer takes place. When the condenser gets dirty with dust, leaves, grass clippings or cotton wood fuzz, the flow of air through the coil can get restricted.

When air flow is restricted, your air conditioner has to work harder, operation costs go up and major failures often occur.

Refer to your operational manual for suggested maintenance on the air conditioner or call a local qualified air conditioning contractor to perform this and other important maintenance and service operations.

Director can still make 'em clap after 22 years

BY BRYAN ERICKSON

Barbara Gibson directed her first musical for Clarkston High School in 1968. Now 22 years and 29 musicals later, the audiences are still applauding.

Gibson, who teaches theater and speech, said she first became interested in theater when she was a little girl.

"I always played make believe," Gibson said. "You didn't have television in those days. You had your imagination."

Gibson's mother was the founder of the Lansing Civic Players Guild and used to give acting lessons in their home.

Gibson said she used to watch the students rehearse and memorized the lines along with the actors. Whenever her mother was directing a play, Gibson watched the actors put on their make-up before the performance.

She recalled that her mother once used one of her ragdolls as a prop in a play — which made Gibson excited from seeing something of hers on the stage.

"She really instilled the love of theater in me," Gibson said.

During high school Gibson was involved in theater and continued her involvement in college.

In 1948, she earned her teaching certificate from Central Michigan University, Mount Pleasant.

During her sophomore year at CMU, Gibson asked her professor if he ever allowed student directors for the musicals.

"He handed me the script," Gibson said, "and said 'Here you go.'"

Gibson had never directed anything in her life but said she gave it her best.

In 1950 Gibson started teaching elementary school. She taught for a while but eventually took time off to have her son, Kirk, now a professional baseball player on rehabilitation with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

While she was at it, she had two other children. Her daughter Jackie Price now has two children and is president of the Parent Teacher Association at Four Towns Elementary School in Waterford.

Her daughter Christine Nielubowicz now has three children and is director of a preschool in Grosse Pointe, as well as active in competitive swimming clubs.

In 1964, Gibson returned to school full time at Michigan State University, East Lansing. In a year, she earned her bachelor's degree in drama and speech.

Gibson came to Clarkston in 1966 and taught history and social studies for two years before she was offered a position in the theater department.

When Gibson took over the theater department, it was $500 in debt. Gibson said the school district paid off the debt, and she was able to direct her first show for Clarkston, "The Boyfriend."

In the years that followed, Gibson directed such favorites as "Oklahoma" and "My Fair Lady" and smaller shows such as "The Fantastiks."

Over the years, said Gibson, she always enjoyed seeing students who were eager to participate in the musical productions.

TEACHER Barbara Gibson finds enjoyment in teaching oral communications Monday, June 11 — just two days before school is out for the summer. The recent reunion of her drama students was "rewarding," she said.

Productions take a great amount of dedication not only from the lead performers but from everyone involved with the shows, said Gibson.

"It takes that person who will sweep up the sawdust after the sets are built," Gibson said.

Theater gives students a great feeling of accomplishment, Gibson said.

"How many times in your life do you see immediate gratification like you do when an audience claps?" Gibson said.

Theater also opens the door to new friendships, she said.

"The wonderful thing about it is that you get so close to the kids," she said, smiling.

Gibson said each show she did was different, and sometimes the shows were hard to give up when closing night came.

"When I get done with a musical, the kids always say, 'Aren't you sad?'"

But she can always look forward to the next year, said Gibson.

The best part of her job is seeing students gain something positive from their experiences in theater, she said.

"That's all I've ever really wanted," Gibson said. "To help people and make people happy."

Allan Watson, a 1988 CHS graduate and former student of Gibson's, said she really cares about her students.

"She's more than a director or teacher or advisor," Watson said. "She's a friend."

The strong CHS theater program is strong because of Gibson's — and her students' — dedication, Watson said. "It was everything I hoped it would be," said Gibson. "It was fun to see them as adults, getting to see their husbands, wives and children. I was happy to be with them again, but sad to lose them again."

May 27, in tribute to all the hard work Gibson and her students have put in over the past 22 years, the Clarkston High School Performing Arts Department presented "Memories: A Stage of Remembrance."

This play, written by a former student, featured Gibson as herself remembering the past 29 musicals she directed through a series of flashbacks, which featured leading performers from all the musicals.

Though she still enjoys teaching, Gibson said she plans to retire within the next few years.

After retirement, she plans to spend more time with Kirk in California and see her grandchildren. She also plans to use some of that time to work with charity groups, such as the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

When she does leave, she said she'll miss directing CHS musicals.

"I will be said when the curtain closes for the last time," Gibson said. "But life goes on."

Bryan Erickson of Foster Road, Springfield Township, is a 1988 graduate of Clarkston High School. A former student of Barbara Gibson's, he is now a sophomore at Michigan State University, East Lansing.

JUST before school is out for the summer, Barbara Gibson talks to her oral communications class.

Renion a big hit

More than 75 actors, singers and dancers gathered at Clarkston High School the weekend of May 26-27 to celebrate a musical reunion.

"Memories: A Stage of Remembrance" combined the 22 years of musicals directed by Barbara Gibson into one production.

The production has been in the works for more than two years, and without the talent and commitment of Shawn Smith and Dean Vanderkolk, the two who wrote the show, it never would have come to be.

The songs were brought to life by Steve Murphy, the show's accompanist. The production was performed twice on May 27 and were only the finale to a weekend that began on Saturday with rehearsals starting at 8:30 a.m. and a reunion banquet Saturday night.

BARBARA Gibson is animated in the "classroom," in this case, the Kirchgessner Theatre.

Elementary school teacher retires after 35 years

BY LISA NIXON
Clarkston News Special Writer

Retirement will be difficult for one Pine Knob Elementary School teacher.

For the past 24 years, Mrs. Joy McCurdy has been teaching for Pine Knob Elementary School, and at the end of this year she will finally retire.

A teacher for 35 years, McCurdy said she will miss her friends, other staff and parents when she leaves; but "You always remember your first class. My first year I had 52 fifth graders."

she will miss the children the most.

"It's fun getting to know the children and establishing relationships with them," she said.

"No day is ever the same. It can't be the same everyday when you have 33 children," she added.

"I will miss being with them every day," McCurdy said. "I like watching the development and seeing them grow."

McCurdy had always wanted to be a teacher. She never considered being administrative staff because she wanted to work with the children everyday, she said.

It all began when she worked as a helping teacher in Oxford. A helping teacher relieved the actual class teacher for 45 minutes each day.

"There were 52-55 students in each class. We were there to relieve the teacher," she said.

McCurdy gained this experience after only a year and a half of college.

"We received a certificate from the state, a special teaching certificate," she said.

McCurdy also finished her degree while teaching full time and going to school. She graduated from Wayne State University, Detroit, in 1957.

"I had a very supportive husband. He helped a lot," she said.

She met her husband, also a teacher but now retired, while teaching at Oxford.

After retirement, McCurdy plans to travel and spend a lot more time with her him.

"I hope to stay active and involved with the education field, though," McCurdy said, adding that she has yet another reason to retire.

"I want to spend time with my grandson. He's 16 months old. He's really special," she said.

McCurdy will carry with her the many good memories from her career.

"This year I have the second child of a previous student of mine," McCurdy said.

JOY McCurdy, a teacher for 35 years, enjoys working with children and will miss them the

"I also taught Paula Blanchard when she was in the sixth grade," McCurdy added.

Plus, McCurdy taught Pine Knob Principal George White, now her boss.

"I still look at him and think of him as one of my kids," McCurdy said. "I still am his teacher."

McCurdy recalled a time she ate lunch with a baby bull. A student brought a bull to the school as a mascot to a softball game between the faculty and the sixth-grade class. One student tried to warn her about it.

"I didn't believe them," she said.

McCurdy also remembers her first class.

"You always remember your first class," she said.

"My first year I had 52 fifth graders."

"The most frustrating things about teaching are keeping up with the paper work and large classes," McCurdy said.

"I like small classes because then you have the time for each child," she said.

McCurdy tries to leave the children with a few messages.

"I tell them the most important gift they have is the most after she retires this year. McCurdy taught 24 years at Pine Knob Elementary.

gift of learning. I tell them it doesn't go out of style; it is something no one can take from you. You will always have that," McCurdy said.

"I also tell them to do their best everyday. It is their most precious gift," she said.

"It is important for teachers to realize that they are sharing a year of the child's life with them. That is a privilege," McCurdy said.

McCurdy believes it takes dedication and pride in the profession to be a good teacher.

"Bring a lot of dignity, a lot of patience and love of children to be a teacher," she said.

"Also bring fairness, and don't be afraid to expect high standards from the children because if you don't expect them, you won't get them," she said.

McCurdy's most rewarding experience as a teacher came as a surprise at the time.

"A young man called after 30 years to thank me for being his teacher," she said. "You don't expect to hear from them after 30 years."

"That's why I became a teacher," she said with a grin.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

INFLATION IS INFLATION

QUESTION: Is it true that it does not make sense to buy real estate when the inflation rate is low?

ANSWER: Let's not kid ourselves. Whether it's 4% or 20%, inflation is inflation and unless you do something to protect your hard-earned money from losing its value, you lose.

If you hide $1,000 in your mattress, and sleep on it for 10 years at a 5% inflation rate, the $1,000 will be worth only half of its buying power when you remove it from the mattress. On the other hand, if you purchase a home for $100,000, its value would have appreciated 50% to $150,000 during the same 10 years that you incubated your cash wad in the mattress.

DURING INFLATION, you'll make more money in real estate than in hiding money in a mattress.

Reporter's Notebook

John Voorheis, Leonard school principal-musician-golfer, is now a politician.

He's running as a republican for a county commissioner seat in the Independence and Waterford area.

From his musical background he's picked a campaign song ... "Voorheis a Jolly Good Fellow."

Speaking of politics, Len Ganeway, Lapeer County Press columnist (former publisher), wonders "why we are all being urged to make sure we're counted in the census. We're warned that Michigan will lose a couple of congressmen if our population falls. What's wrong with that?"

A CHILD'S GRIEF

Just like adults, children need to go through the grieving process when they lose someone they love. Also like adults, children express their grief in different ways. Some will cry; some will withdraw for a while; some will have discipline and/or academic problems in school; some may not eat or sleep well or not even want to play with other children and pursue their otherwise normal activities.

Given an atmosphere of patience, understanding and unconditional love, the storm will gradually clear. Avoid the tendency to say "big boys don't cry." Rather, let them express their feelings and work through their loss. Don't be tempted to believe that children soon forget these things. Children usually have vivid and lasting memories of the deceased and have to work out their grief. Let them talk about the dead person and how they feel and felt. Suppress the desire to change to a more pleasant topic. They must be made to feel that their thoughts and emotions are acceptable.

When the living is easy

Julie
Campe

If I think hard enough, I could probably remember the last day of school in each grade.

In early elementary school, we had some sort of field day, with games the entire day, including a day-long game of "operator."

That's the game that starts with one message that must be passed on from person to person, and the last person to get the message says it aloud. The team that ends up with a phrase closest to the original message wins the game.

On our field day, we mixed the game up with other events. For instance, after receiving a message, one student might have to slide twice before passing it on to the next person, who might have to run around the school building before passing it on to the next person, who might have to play hopscotch before passing it on to the next person. Sort of an operator relay.

In later years, we might have had a party at one of our schoolmate's houses if he or she lived within walking distance.

In fourth grade (or was it sixth?) we did just that, walking to Matt Hool's house, which was barely within walking distance.

I can still see us, a line of 10- and 11-year-olds, walking and skipping behind Mrs. Haven, our teacher, on the way to Matt's house.

We liked his mother. We knew her from other events during the year for which she had helped.

Once we arrived, we played in the tall grasses behind his house. An entire field was filled with grass so tall that it reached far above our heads. You could get lost in it, except there were plenty of paths crisscrossing through it.

For a few moments, I was separated from the others and stood silently, listening to the grass swish in the wind. Straight up, the sky was blue and bright. And peaceful. It seemed quiet, even though child voices shouted from all directions, accompanied by shrieks from birds.

Soon, Matt's mother called, telling us the hot dogs were ready. We ran fast, as if the dogs would disappear if we didn't appear within seconds.

Other last days in elementary school (in the days before gym classes were part of elementary education) were spent in a fulfilling game of kickball against another class. In those final games, we could see how much we had progressed throughout the year.

Some, who could barely meet the ball with their feet at the beginning of the year, were, at the end of the year, kicking balls to the outfield.

We may have played kickball or softball the last day in junior high school — but only during gym.

In other hours, the last days were usually spent signing yearbooks and wrapping up end-of-the-term things. Or sometimes doing work just for fun, like a maze or word seek.

Of course, much of the time was spent cleaning out lockers, if we hadn't done so already. And we had to make time for things that had to be said before summer began, like, "You're a brat, Matthew." (Translation: "I like you.")

In high school, the days were much the same, only a little more relaxed. Sure, we still had energy but nothing like the near-hyper energy displayed in junior high school. Besides, in high school we were already trying to hold back anything resembling enthusiasm, at least in front of adults.

So we retrieved our signed yearbooks and our locker stuff, and we walked, drove or rode home and were faced with a full, hot summer.

Sounds good.

Fatherhood comes naturally for him

BY MICHELLE SHERWOOD

For Father's Day, I am faced with the decision: What do I get for this special man I call my daddy? He would stop anything he was doing to come to my aid.

Many of the cards available begin with: "What is a father?"

This question is answered by the actions displayed by a father. I don't think my father needs to be reminded on what he is supposed to do and how he is supposed to be — mainly because he already is everything and more of what a father is supposed to be. It seems to come so naturally for him.

I hope to believe that I have been raised on the good side of town and raised in a society that truly respects and loves its parents. In return they would respect, love and care for the children.

My father stands by, guiding me and my siblings, always ready to come to our aid when we are confronted with an obstacle in our lives.

I will never take advantage of his willingness to care for me. Being the baby of the family, people call me a "daddy's girl." That makes me happy and proud to be such a fortunate girl and have that title bestowed on me.

My father, Howard, has just about every necessity that money could buy. He is not a materialistic man, who just has to have the latest or most talked about tool to be considered an impressive person. He is not wealthy (growing old and lavishing in luxuries) and does not want or expect expensive gifts from me or my siblings.

With God's help, I will proudly hold onto the title the rest of my life. It is going to take a lot of caring and loving from both of us to give that title meaning it was intended to bear, not unlike the title of "father" or "daddy."

There is no real need to give him an inanimate gift. He deserves the best that I can give, inwardly, directly from my heart. The goodness that he has filled my heart with will pour out back to him, and people who come in contact with me. The way he cares for me will reflect on how I treat others.

Daddy, you will always be the number-one man in my life.

If this was the fall hunting season I'd tell you the story of the time my hunting buddy, Pansy Baldwin, got lost in the woods, and I didn't join the search party.

That was the same year someone brought their hound dog to camp and it investigated a porcupine... with disastrous results. Veterinarian Jersey Loewith was in camp and he removed several porky needles from the tongue and muzzle of the dog.

It was a tough fight between man and animal, and when Jersey released the dog he said, "And, the dumb dog might go right back out and do it again."

We were at Tom Persing's Camp Sixteen between Ma Deeters and Lewiston. I remember Ma Deeters because Pansy and I took refuge there seeking additional directions to the Camp. Other campers came to find us... we were shooting pool... sort of mentally avoiding the possibility that we might never find the road into Camp.

Camp 16, it sleeps 16, is in a clearing in the middle of hundreds of acres of trees. It's a great hunting spot, with excellent facilities, including those that are out of doors. Partridge and woodcock season was open.

We were hunting sometime past mid-afternoon one day when Pansy and I got separated. He has a tendency to wander amongst the flora and fauna, sometimes being more interested in a species of tree than a dog on point.

But, he's an experienced woodsman. No reason for me to be concerned with his decision-making. He's also very strong and I need not fear for his safety. I didn't give much thought to him at all. I got back to the cabin, mixed a toddy and started cooking dinner.

Later someone mentioned it was dark, and, "Where's Pansy?" I wondered too; he was supposed to be preparing the salad. I heard the door close, and turned down the heat on the potatoes frying in the pan.

A couple hours after dark, Pansy came into the kitchen. He'd been picked up by a couple of women in a Cadillac about seven miles from Camp 16.

He stared at me a minute, then began recalling my ancestry. He threw words at me that are generally reserved for late-night cable TV programs. He wondered why I wasn't out looking for him. Why wasn't I worried? What a buddy you are!

Never did he notice that the Gatorade I'd mixed for him was now too diluted from melted ice cubes. Unnoticed too was how warm I was from preparing his dinner, and that the potatoes were now so shriveled I'd have to peel more, thus further delaying the meal. And, who did he think was going to fix the salad?

Turned out, I didn't need to worry, which I didn't. Pansy had collected enough firewood to last the night. He had enough clothes on to ward off the nighttime chill. And, he had enough anger that he wouldn't have gotten cold anyway.

This all happened in the mid '60s and Pansy hasn't forgotten it or apologized. But, he will when he realizes what I was going through while he was hunkering down for a good night's sleep.

If it was fall I'd tell you the story of the time my hunting buddy, Pansy...

Generous people

I am writing to express my appreciation for all the support that the Clarkston community has given me toward my upcoming tour with Up With People.

As some of you know, Up With People is an international organization that for 25 years has provided young adults year-long opportunities for cross-cultural education, diverse community service, on-stage musical performance, and extensive world travel. I will be leaving July 30 to begin my participation in this group.

In order to take part in Up With People, I am required to raise a $10,000 tuition fee through community support, and I have been overwhelmed with the generosity this community has shown.

Had it not been for your individual pledges and the contributions of local organizations, I never would have been able to participate this year in Up With People.

Because of your help, I have been able to raise two-thirds of the total $10,000. In return for your support I only hope that I can share with you in some ways my learning experiences. I am very proud to be a part of this community and to have the opportunity to represent Clarkston during the upcoming year.

"Would you talk to your mother that way?" my wife hollered down the hallway.

"I didn't have to talk to my mother that way because she had Tommy Hess," I hollered back.

It was necessary to holler because I was standing in front of the elevator door, about 40 yards from where my wife stood in front of our apartment door. I was trying to escape from her, but it's a well-known fact of life that the quicker you need an elevator, the slower it arrives.

My wife would have followed me to the elevator, but she was sick, which is why I was going grocery shopping for her. If she'd been healthy enough to walk to the elevator, she'd have been healthy enough to go to the supermarket herself, and if there'd been any likelihood of her suffering a relapse while waiting for the damn elevator, I would have pushed her toward the stairs.

I hate supermarkets. I recently read that, since last summer, Comerica has opened full-service bank branches in six area Kroger supermarkets. There is no truth to the report that several perfectly good meat-and-produce counters were torn down to make room for the branches which were built on long stilts stretching through the supermarket roofs to give bank employees a good view of the nearest puddle of water.

There is much truth to the report that I don't want to make a bank deposit in a supermarket. I want to see Tommy Hess again. I want to hug and kiss him.

When I was a small boy, Tommy Hess operated Hess & Son Grocery Store near my parents' home in Port Huron. My mother sent me there with a grocery list that I would hand to Tommy Hess. He would pack the groceries into bags and put them into my arms. If there were too many bags for me to carry, Tommy's son would drive me home in the delivery truck.

Compare that to what happened when my wife was ill. She gave me a grocery list ordering such items as "2 greenish yellow firm bananas" and "seedless grapes (red or green) if they look firm. Those are exact quotes; I saved the list for evidence in case she takes legal action to punish me for talking to her like I never talked to my mother.

One thing I know about shopping is it isn't sanitary to finger fruit you don't buy. How do I find out if it's firm? "You can tell by looking at it," she said.

The hell I can.

When questioned whether bananas come in bunches of two, she said rip them off the stalk. She also said I'd have to bag my own produce in those flimsy plastic bags that come in rolls and must be torn along the perforated line I can never see because I left my stupid glasses home.

I don't want to do that stuff. I also don't want to wait in line for 40 minutes while a surly cashier counts countless coupons and waits for women to write checks in checkbooks they don't start searching their luggage for until their purchases are totaled and bagged, which surely explains the surliness.

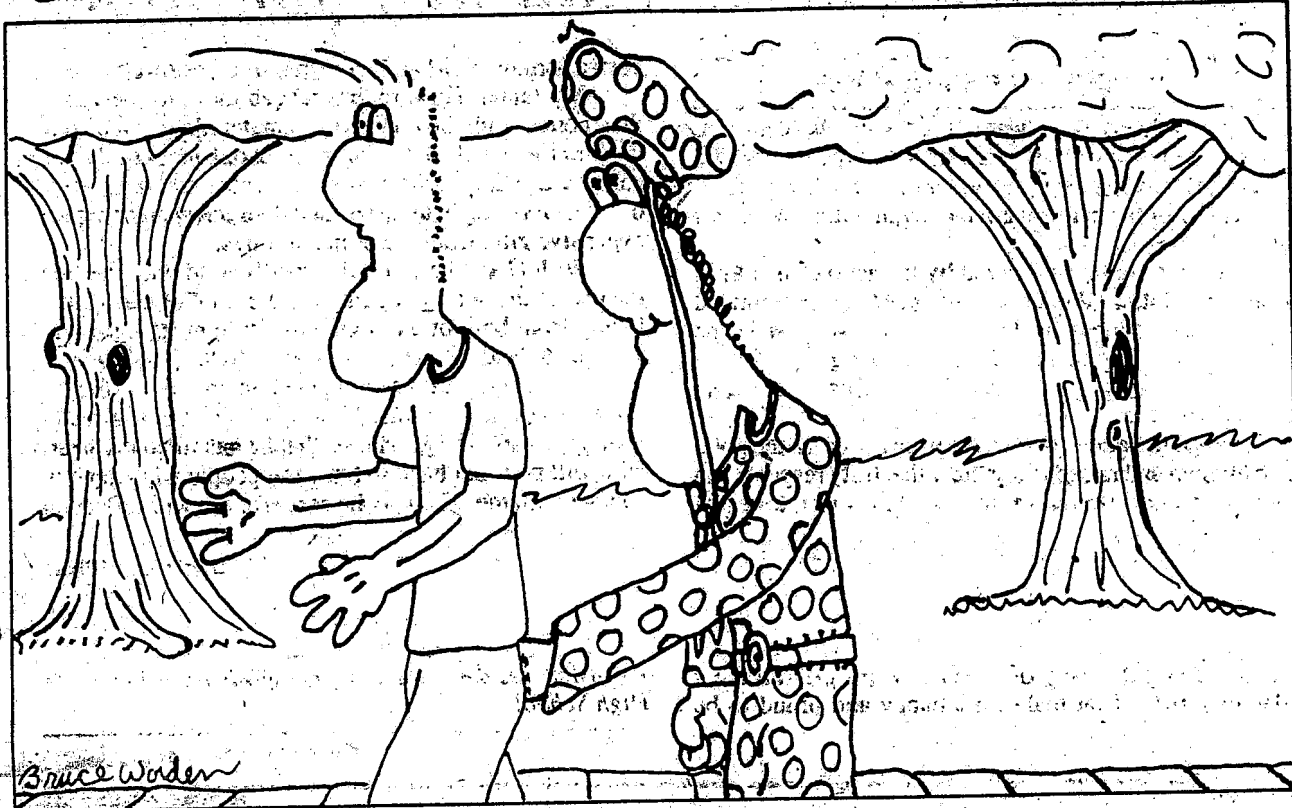

I want to hand my grocery list to Tommy Hess and ride home in his delivery truck. But the Hess & Son building now contains a video rental store. You can also find videocassettes in many supermarkets, perhaps next to the bank branch.

There is something VERY DUMB about a so-called civilized society in which it's easier for a food shopper to rent movies and deposit savings than it is to find a clerk to aid any eyeball search for visible signs of firmness in grapes (red or green), FOR LORD'S SAKE!

That's pretty much what I told my wife, but never had to tell my mother because she had Tommy Hess.

SAD NEWS: Monday's column sought funds for a bone marrow transplant for a 33-year-old Livonia mother, Diane Zeigin, with leukemia. Mrs. Zeigin died Monday night. The fund-raising effort will continue as planned. The proceeds will pay Mrs. Zeigin's uninsured medical bills and, at her request, the balance will be contributed to another patient needing a bone marrow transplant. The funeral is at 10 a.m. Saturday at St. Alexander Roman Catholic Church in Farmington Hills, with arrangements by the Heeney-Sundquist Funeral home in Farmington.

Realtors tell us it's a buyers' market, which is encouraging.

We're house shopping, which has proven to be a traumatic experience.

Not for me, mind you. I've been all for it from the beginning.

I don't worry about things like resale value and school districts. I've got my mind on wallpaper patterns and vegetable seeds.

My criteria for our new home is very simple. It must have large, bright rooms and a formal dining room; the lot must have trees; and the house must face a southern or western exposure. Creativity and a decorator's eye can take care of the rest.

"It's perfect," I have said about every single house but two we've seen so far. "Let's write them a check."

This poses a problem for Pat, who, shall we say, is the more discriminating among us.

"I'm not going to pay that for just a building," he has been heard sputtering. "Do you realize that we'll be in debt for that?"

"It's the American way," I offer, hopefully. Sticker shock has never struck so deeply.

The possibility of living on lakefront property has been the only thing that's kept the ball rolling.

As a boy, Pat spent sunwashed summers on Sands Point, in the thumb. He now gets a dreamy look on his face any time we pass anything resembling a lake.

"We'll get a boat!" he announces, excitedly, hope restored.

Lakefront houses, though a bit, well, casual, will do the trick, I decide. I just have to be even more creative.

Cocking your head to one side, for instance, makes the floors look a bit less crooked.

Sometimes I suggest "building out," pleased to reveal my mastery of construction terms.

In an attempt to be conscientious, I crisply ask the agent "septic or sewer?" I then make a mental note to learn which one is best.

"Taxes?" I ask, from habit, now. "Any future assessments likely?"

The agents answer all these questions patiently and knowledgeably, which is a good sign, I decide.

"Well, it looks fine," I sigh to Pat.

I turn, and once again he's nowhere to be seen. Knowingly, I gesture to the salesperson to follow me.

Sure enough — there's Pat, pacing the lawn, wiping streams of sweat from his face with his handkerchief, muttering to himself and the DEBT! ... and then there's the mortgage insurance ...

School enriched

The children and staff at North Sashabaw Elementary are truly fortunate. They have a Parent Teacher Organization, which, day after day, year after year, works to enrich the learning and social environment of the school.

This year all of the children were able to attend the Moscow Circus and numerous other field trips due to the PTO endeavors. They brought in the Michigan Opera Theater to perform, sponsored a schoolwide reading program and provided further enrichment through their Picture Lady Program.

They organized the room mothers and attendance phoning. They held a non-profit Santa's Workshop, where the children were able to purchase presents for their families at a minimal cost.

They have earned money through a school fair and fund raiser. They have used this money to purchase such varied items as play furniture for the kindergarten rooms, computer supplies, a camcorder, materials for an enrichment program, microphones for the stage, science equipment and improvements to the baseball diamonds and landscaping.

They have also given financial support to Clarkston Area Youth Assistance, which runs a summer camp that several of our children attend. They have given each teacher a sum of money to be spent on classroom supplies.

They have taken their personal time, effort and funds to provide a Christmas breakfast and recognition luncheon for teachers.

Our school is a better place in which to learn and work because of this great group called the PTO

We thank you.

Give village business a break

Clarkston pays lip service to being on the side of historical preservation.

What's better than preserving a historical village business, owned and operated through out its life by village long-time owners?

How can a business survive with Clarkston's restrictions? The Michigan state highway department had already taken away from the grieving people attending their loved ones' last service — lining up for those funeral processions on M-15.

Through out the years I have parked on Miller Road, too, for funerals at what was Ogdens', then Sharps' and last Goyettes'.

That funeral home, for 70 years, is and was a business, yes, but where would our families all be, or have been, without it?

Or is it Clarkston's goal to get rid of Goyettes? Would Clarkston's becoming a city improve the situation?

Funeral homes are a business to make profits just as any other business in town is.

Hamstringing the Goyettes could be causing another town business to hit the dust.

With Goyette's gone, what does Clarkston have in mind to occupy that area on North Main Street? Or is it expected for the Goyettes to stagnate in business out of the goodness of their long-time association with appreciative Clarkstonites?

Consider all those adults who love Clarkston but go to another place to earn their living. Do those businesses exist to make a profit?

Think of all those bedroom Clarkstonites who drive miles from their own homes to work to earn their paychecks.

How come the preserving efforts of the historical-minded doesn't include the oldest historical business in historical Clarkston? Small towns were and are still made up of businesses and homes and people who care enough to stay in town year after year after year.

He hopes flag will make a difference

BY JULIE CAMPE
Clarkston News Editor

Like clockwork, Jesse Quigley of Sunny Beach, Independence Township, raises his American flag each morning and lowers it each evening.

"I get up at 7, my wife and I have coffee, then I put the mail out ... and put the flag up," said Quigley, who built his house on Sunny Beach in 1955.

"I made sure when I built the house that I put the flag pole there," he said.

Quigley replaces the flag when it begins to fade and keeps each retired flag neatly folded — unless he gives one away.

It's important to fly the flag, he said.

"I just enjoy seeing it up there, and I think others do, too," he said, adding that one man drives by each morning and salutes it.

Quigley's father served in the military under Dwight D. Eisenhower, and Quigley was a Lt. Colonel in ROTC but could not serve in World War II because of a broken eardrum.

His brother did serve, however, and was wounded

"To me, this country is worth something. So many people don't think so."

Jesse Quigley

three times, ending up with a fractured spine.

"I remember the second World War real great," said Quigley. "That flag goes up every morning and goes down every night. ... It's just something I want to do. I'm very strong on this country."

"To me, this country is worth something. So many people don't think so," he said.

Quigley retired as a finance manager from Ford Motor Co. 10 years ago and since has worked as a probation officer for the 50th District Court, Pontiac, and has volunteered at Camp Oakland, the American Red Cross, the Clarkston Area Youth Assistance and Insight at Colmbiere, Springfield Township.

He and his wife, Mary, frequent flea markets on weekends and during the week sometimes babysit for Angela, 2, one of their 10 grandchildren. They also have four great-grandchildren.

Angela, wearing a Tiger baseball hat, played in the yard as Quigley talked about patriotism.

"If more people would start loving that thing instead of burning it and doing other things," he said, shaking his head.

He hopes his flag has a positive impact on people, he said.

"It's good for the grandkids," Quigley said. "They see Grandpa has that flag. Maybe it will make a difference, I don't know."

NOT EVEN a broken flag pole stops Jesse Quigley from expressing his patriotism. On June 1, the flag pole he has used for 15 years fell to the ground due to rust. Unfortunately, Quigley fell with it, though he was not injured. Afterward, Quigley temporarily hung his flag on a telephone pole near his house. In the meantime, in honor of Flag Day June 14, he agreed to pose with the flag in front of his Sunny Beach, Independence Township home with his wife, Mary, and grandson, Billy Quigley, 12.

Oakhill to get gravel, ditch

A proposal to partially pay for road improvements in the Oakhill Road area was unanimously approved by the Independence Township Board June 5.

The improvements will be a cooperative enterprise between the Road Commission for Oakland County, Brandon and Independence townships.

Township Supervisor Frank Ronk explained that the road commission and Brandon Township had offered to work in conjunction with Independence Township to provide at least one-half mile of ditching on Oakhill between Perry Lake Road and Sashabaw Road.

The two entities would also help re-gravel the entire stretch of road from M-15 to Sashabaw Road at a cost of $12,000 to Independence Township.

According to Ronk, "growth is beating these roads to death," and they are in desperate need of improvement.

Trustee Mel Vaara agreed.

"I support this proposal 100 percent," said Vaara. "The current conditions are horrendous, and our school buses are having troubles getting through these roadways."

According to Ronk, the starting date of the work is up to the Road Commission but he estimates that it shouldn't begin any later than July.

Lots of help

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the PTO at Clarkston Elementary for the support and money needed for the successful Fun Day held Monday, June 4.

I would also like to thank the many parent volunteers who helped organize the many activities planned, especially the morning shift because of the cold, rainy conditions.

A very special thank you goes to a committee of dedicated volunteers who worked together many, many hours to make it all come together successfully. They are: Chris Forton, Holly Watson, Jo Ann Nowak and Pat Villiere.

A big thank you to these people and everyone else who helped plan the day.

Jane Olinger

Successful walk

On behalf of the Board of Directors, I would like to extend a big thank you to all those involved in making the Clarkston Home Tour a tremendous success.

Once again the community of Clarkston opened their hearts to SCAMP and made this yearly event a reality. Over 700 guests—far beyond our expectations—enjoyed a wonderful weekend.

A special thank you to our homeowners, Sharron and Clarence Catallo, who once again opened their home for the tour and the Saturday evening reception, to Jaro Kolisnyk and his company for the wonderful buffet on Saturday and to the Clarkston restaurant who again hosted the special Sunday reception.

Thank you to Ron Wagner for designing our tour book and advertising, the staff at The Clarkston News who wrote the articles on the homes, to the florists for their special touches, the car dealerships for the use of vans, area businesses for advertising and all those who supported the event by touring the homes.

The Home Tour only becomes a reality with great leaders. A special thank you is extended to Mary and Steve Himburg and Ellie Miller, co-chairpersons, their committee and all of the volunteers who shared the weekend with us. You did a great job!

This combined effort once again resulted in a wonderful fund-raiser for SCAMP with a profit of $13,000. You can be certain that many special youth in our communities will enjoy a wonderful summer because of your efforts.

Sweet Surprise

A "sweet" thank-you to Mike Bogel, Betty Hunter and Big Boy himself who came to my classroom at Clarkston Elementary last week, bringing lunch for me and ice cream and treats for my kids.

This was their way of thanking me for many years of coming to their restaurant on Dixie Highway to treat my students to ice cream sundaes for memorization of math facts.

What a wonderful surprise!

Thanks for honoring me in such a memorable way.

Star treatment

We would like to thank the following parents who prepared and presented on June 7 the famous Americans and coordinating activities that made our "reach for the Stars" day a memorable learning experience.

We appreciate the time and hard work of: organizers Corena Bell and Marty Bolten; presenters and helpers: Cindy Wethy, Chris Moore, Linda Dalrymple, Kathy Colosimo, Linda Rieman, Connie Morgan, Jodie Myers, Patty Bean, Pat Baetens, Sherri Regiani, Mary Gohl, Shirley Graham, Pat Schroeder, Kathy Frericks, Marie Darrow, Mary Ann Kern, Cheri Detkowski, Karen Kringbaum; the eight square-dancers and caller who got 90 people dancing; and our guest-speaker from Cranbrook.

The students appreciated the delicious lemondade, candy and cookies provided by so many of our great parents.

Our kids truly felt like stars that day and once again were encouraged to follow their dreams!

Good poppy days

Our gratitude is extended to the bank and merchants in the area who allowed the volunteers to sell poppies.

The biggest bouquet goes to the people in our community, without whose generous support Poppy Days would not have been a success.

On behalf of the America's Veterans, thank you.

Award-winners are top of the class at CJHS

BY SANDRA G. CONLEN
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Choosing two students for the principal's award at Clarkston Junior High wasn't an easy job for Principal Duane Lewis this year.

He had 15 female finalists and 13 male finalists. But the choice was made, and Steven Hunkele and Melissa O'Dea are well deserving of the award.

Another student, Jeremy Doty, received the distinguished McGrath Award for exhibiting school spirit.

The McGrath Award was established after the 1981 death of Bud McGrath, who was a teacher, counselor and coach in the Clarkston school district.

Lewis said the annual recipient of the McGrath Award must display the characteristics that Bud liked to see in a student.

Jeremy fit the description of having school spirit and was surprised that he won the award.

"I wasn't planning on them saying my name," Jeremy said.

Melissa and Steven also said they weren't expecting to receive the principal's awards.

"I was surprised and delighted," Melissa said, and Steven, too, expressed surprise.

The principal's award is given to the students with leadership qualities who also excel in the following area: Academics, effort in the classroom, and participation in extracurricular activities.

"What I look for is someone who is respected by their peers and the faculty," said Lewis.

"The students are very high in academics and (are) good citizens," he said.

Melissa has served on the year book, played in the band and is a member of the high school junior varsity tennis team. She has also served as a member of the leadership council while maintaining a 4.0 grade point average.

Steven has excelled in athletics in football, wrestling and track. His grade point average is 3.8.

Other award-winners at Clarkston Junior High are as

Many students excel at Sashabaw Junior High

BY SANDRA G. CONLEN
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Being well liked by your peers at Sashabaw Junior High School can get a student noticed by Principal David Reschke when it comes time to give out the annual principal's award.

Reschke's choices, Kim Michalak and Nathan Forbes, received a warm welcome during the ninth-grade awards ceremony June 5.

"You could tell they were well liked by the congratulations from others and the rounds of applause from the kids," Reschke said.

Reschke gives the award each year to the male and female student who display leadership in citizenship and academics. Good attendance and extracurricular activities also count as part of the criteria for receiving the award, but Reschke likes the students who are respected by their peers.

"I look for students who are popular with a wide group of kids," Reschke said.

Nathan has even given the nickname "friendly" by other students, he said, explaining that Reschke referred to him as a friendly person in the award speech, and the other students have continued to use it.

Assistant Principal Vince Licata also knew who to tap for the annual Cougar spirit award.

Dawn Gawron and Steve Bennett were the recipients.

"Dawn is a great person with a positive winning attitude about life," Licata said. "She excels in the classroom, too."

"Steve is an outstanding person and student," he added. "These are nice all-around kids."

Dawn and Steve did not expect the honor.

"I didn't even know we had a spirit award until I received it," Steve said. "I'm kind of proud of myself for getting it."

Two bound over on rock-throwing charges

BY CURT MCALLISTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Two Independence Township teens were bound over to Oakland County Circuit Court June 8 on multiple charges of throwing rocks at cars on I-75 May 18.

At the preliminary exam June 8 in 52nd District Court, Independence Township, Richard S. Treckman, 18, and Keith P. Turner, 18, were bound over to circuit court on four counts each of conspiracy to commit malicious destruction of property and four counts each of malicious destruction of property over $100. Each charge carries a maximum four-year sentence if convicted.

SCAMP golf outing set for Friday, July 20

Plans are underway for the Third Annual SCAMP Golf Outing to be held at Spring Lake Country Club, Independence Township, Friday, July 20.

The $65 tickets include 18 holes of golf, continental breakfast, lunch, steak dinner and awards and prizes.

All proceeds from the event benefit Clarkston SCAMP, a five-week summer program for children and young adults with special needs.

For more information, call Terry Thomas at 625-1539 or Bunny Newmarch at 625-1187.

The two — 1990 graduates of Clarkston High School — are scheduled to appear before Oakland County Circuit Court Judge Richard Kuhn on Tuesday, June 26.

On May 18, the two allegedly threw rocks toward northbound I-75, south of M-15, Independence Township, and allegedly damaged four cars, including an automobile driven by Oakland County Prosecutor Richard Thompson.

At the June 8 preliminary exam, drivers of the four damaged vehicles reported on the damage to their vehicles and the circumstances surrounding the incidents.

Two witnesses said they thought they were victims of gunfire at the time of the accidents.

According to Deputy Joseph Lanborn of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department (OCSD), he was called to the scene about 11:30 p.m., after Thompson used a mobile phone to call the Clarkston substation.

Lanborn said he found several rocks strewn across the highway. He investigated the area and discovered a party at a residence on Olde Sturbridge Road, Independence Township.

Adjacent to the party, Lanborn located a pile of 40-50 "softball-sized" rocks about 25 yards from I-75 at the dead end of Perry Lake Road, overlooking I-75 near the

M-15 exit.

According to OCSD Detective Steve Parker, Treckman and Turner came to him May 23 on the advice of football coach Kurt Richardson of Clarkston High School.

In individual private interviews, the seniors told Parker of their evening at the party and the incidents leading up to the rock-throwing incident. In Parker's report, the teens' stories were similar in that Treckman was distraught over break-up with his girlfriend, and he had been drinking at the party.

According to both men in the report, Turner took Treckman out of the home to talk to him about his troubles. They proceeded down Perry Lake Road during their conversation and ended up at the dead end. There, according to the report, Treckman and Turner started throwing rocks at vehicles on I-75. Parker described Treckman as "angry at the world" during the time of the incident.

Treckman admitted to Parker that he hit one vehicle for sure because he heard the "bang," but he couldn't identify the color or make of the automobile. Turner admitted to throwing three or four rocks in the report, but he didn't know if any of them struck the northbound vehicles.

First field day fantastic fare

Two hundred sixth-grade students participated in the first sixth-grade field day June 5 at the Clarkston High School football field.

The event was coordinated by sixth-grade teacher Marie Luzi. Other teachers participating were Wiladean Moore, Gerry Ostrum, Bryce Landon, Linda Palace and Barbara Glover.

Sixteen events were held, including 100-, 200- and 400-meter dashes, obstacle course, Frisbee toss, bean bag toss, football throw, soccer ball kick, tug-of-war, long jump, rope skip and jump, hurdles, three-legged race and the grand finale of the day — water balloon toss.

The sixth-grade fine arts class made name tags for all students, and stars were given at each event for first, second and third places plus participation.

A group of 34 parent volunteers manned the events.

Smoke detectors give early warning

Consumers can increase their chances of surviving a fire in their home by simply purchasing and installing smoke detectors, according to a representative of the insurance industry.

Last year in Michigan, there were 242 fire-related deaths. Most fire victims die from inhalation of smoke and toxic gases, rather than flames.

"Smoke detectors provide an early warning when a fire begins, which can allow residents to escape before the house is fully engulfed in flames," Terry Buckles, president of the Michigan Association of Insurance Companies (MAIC) said.

"Statistics show that occupants of a home with a smoke alarm are twice as likely to survive a fire."

Aside from saving lives, smoke detectors also reduce fire injuries and help hold down property loss.

However, to be effective, the units must be properly installed and maintained.

According to Buckles smoke alarms should be tested at least once a month to ensure that they are working properly. Batteries should be changed annually.

Smoke detectors should be installed on each level of the dwelling. The best locations are near the stairs, in hallways, near bedrooms and in the living room.

The units should be installed at least six inches from the point where the ceiling meets the wall.

The state Fire Marshal's Office recommends use of smoke detectors rather than heat detectors.

The latter respond to a certain temperature; however, smoke alarms detect the visible and invisible products of combustion.

"There is normally detectable smoke before there is detectable heat," Buckles said. "Therefore, smoke units almost always give a faster warning."

Buckles also suggests developing an escape route in case of fire. Family members should practice the escape route and determine a safe place to meet once they are outside the burning structure.

Board members debate SEMCOG membership

BY CURT MCALLISTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

A Southeast Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG) representative assured Independence Township Board members June 5 that her organization wants their continued support.

New librarian to begin at library

A Dearborn resident is the new adult services librarian at the Independence Township Library.

On June 5, the township board unanimously approved hiring Karyn Cain on the recommendation of a selection committee, which chose Cain from a field of seven applicants.

Cain is a 1989 graduate of the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, where she received a master's degree in information and library studies. As an undergraduate, Cain worked in the campus library where she carried out various responsibilities. During her last semester in college, she collected field work experience at the Oakwood Hospital in Dearborn.

Cain is presently employed as an adult services librarian at the Bloomfield Township Library and is seeking living accommodations in northern Oakland County.

According to library Director James Hibler, Cain is a bright, eager and motivated person who will serve as a good representative for the library and the township.

She is to begin in early July.

The position was advertised as paying about $26,000 per year, but the township board is to discuss Cain's salary requirements at the next board meeting.

SEMCOG, which encompasses a seven-county region surrounding Detroit, is involved with area-wide planning and inter-governmental coordination. The organization deals with such matters as water systems, rivers, road systems and air quality.

Independence Township has been a member of SEMCOG for six years, but the board has tabled the topic of paying the $2,250 membership fee twice within the past two months. There has been some concern of Independence Township's role in the vast organization.

Pauline Mengebier, manager of Intergovernmental Relations for SEMCOG, traveled to Clarkston to inform the board of the advantages of remaining a member of SEMCOG and quell some board member's fears that their membership is being taken for granted.

"We're very pleased to have you (Independence Township) as one of our SEMCOG members, and we hope to keep your township active in our organization," Mengebier told the board. "The strength of our Oakland County members is overwhelming, and we'd like to keep it intact."

Trustee Frank Millard told Mengebier that the township board was concerned about being neglected by SEMCOG. He also asked Mengebier what she could suggest to alleviate these ill feelings.

"It's always a problem with this vast amount of information at headquarters and getting it out to all the members," Mengebier explained. "I can do my best to get information to you, but your township needs to determine what type of information it needs accessed from our library."

Trustee Mel Vaara asked Mengebier what SEMCOG could do for the township's deteriorating road conditions, and she replied, "I don't know, and (Treasurer) John (Lutz) and I have talked about it in great detail."

Trustee Daniel Travis asked Mengebier if the township could regain its membership in the future if it decided to turn it down this year. Mengebier told the board that they could do so if they wished but she urged their continual support of SEMCOG.

"I'm not coming to you for your money, but for your presence," Mengebier stated firmly.

Lutz, the township's SEMCOG representative, told the board that it should re-evaluate their stance before aborting the township's membership.

"I don't feel that all our members have the full grasp of SEMCOG because we aren't fully utilizing our membership privileges. I do urge other board members to visit SEMCOG's new offices to get a better understanding," Lutz said.

The decision of Independence Township remaining an active member of SEMCOG will be determined at a future township board meeting.

Media plays 25-on-1 with Pistons, Blazers

BY JAMES GIBOWSKI
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Many people who have never been to one think a press conference during a championship athletic event consists of athletes answering questions while anxious media-types stick microphones into faces.

They're right.

On June 6, the day before the second game of the NBA championship series between the Detroit Pistons and the Portland Trailblazers, I attended one of those media blitzes at The Palace in Auburn Hills.

After the Pistons finished their closed practice and headed to the locker room to watch films, about 25 reporters took some front row seats near the court, waiting for the return of the world champions.

While I was waiting, I just happened to sit next to a Philadelphia reporter who talked about how he had just finished filming a couple of scenes in the new Rocky V movie. Apparently, they needed some nosy and aggressive sports reporter and an actor didn't work out, so they hired a real one.

This only reinforced my (and many others) feeling that sometimes the members of the media have as many stories to tell as the players themselves.

I couldn't help it. I was sucked into the Philly reporter's story about his movie-making.

And I couldn't help making small talk with Joe Falls (a Clarkston resident whom I will interview in a few weeks), Pat O'Brien (a CBS reporter covering the game nationally), Steve Kelley (a Seattle Times columnist that I read religiously while living near Seattle), and a TV sports reporter from a station in Portland, Ore. once known as "Big Daddy" (who I watched on TV and met once on the sidelines of a football game in Portland).

Anyway, back to why I was there. Chuck Daly was the first person to walk out on the court. And as he did, about 25 reporters rushed to him.

I waited for someone until the odds got better than 25-1.

The first player I stuck a microphone to and pointed a camera at was Dennis Rodman. I asked the Worm how important winning the NBA championship two years in a row was to the team and how it would maybe make people throughout the country forget about the Los Angeles Lakers.

"I don't think anybody is going to forget about the Lakers," said Rodman. "It would be good for us because we've been there three years in a row in the finals. And, hopefully, we can win it two years in row. But we can't forget we have to play Portland and they're not going to be a pushover."

Why has the Worm improved recently in his free throw shooting?

"The last two years I've been hearing from people that say they have the solution to shooting free throws. I said, bleep this, I'm going to do it my way and relax," said Rodman.

Next I went over to the crowd surrounding Mark Aquirre and asked him if a team with one dominating point producer (a la Michael Jordan) could ever win an NBA championship.

"They'll never win a championship. I don't think it would ever happen. Not unless he's 8-foot-5, 700 pounds," said Aquirre, a one-time high scorer himself who has become a team player with the Pistons.

I asked Coach Daly about whether winning two titles in a row will make people forget about the Lakers.

"I don't know how many people really zero in on that or not. It's a stat, a form of media hype," said Daly.

On a lighter note, has Daly already filmed another one of those anti-drunk driving commercials that feature him and Sparky Anderson displaying their championship rings (but this time Daly wearing two rings)?

"No, not yet, but I hope it happens," said Daly.

Maybe because the mob already went away or maybe because Vinnie Johnson didn't play too big of a role in the first game, but other than CBS reporter James Brown by his side, the Microwave was alone when I first started to pop some questions.

I asked him if the NBA Finals were more work or more fun.

"It's hard work but it's fun," said the guard. "This is what you work all season for. When you get to this point you have to be focused. But you like all the hype, the media attention, and the attention from people in general. Everybody's watching, so it's fun."

What does Johnson think about the chance of a Jordan-like team winning a championship?

"I think he's doing a great job, he just needs a little more support. If you don't get that assistance, it's hard winning," said Johnson.

And what does Isiah Thomas, a day after he dominated the late action in Game 1, think about a Jordan-type team's chances?

"It hasn't been done yet but I'm sure it's possible with Jordan," said Thomas.

My backup question to him was "Does a player like Jordan have to compromise and become more like an Aquirre?"

"You'll have to talk to Michael Jordan about that," said Thomas before letting out one of his famous laughs.

I asked Blazer Clyde Drexler, who thinks the Bulls could have a better chance to go all the way next year because of their improving young players, what it is like playing for a smaller NBA city as Portland.

"When you're the only ticket in town, you get much more attention," said Drexler. "That's great because we don't get much national attention. Portland is a great place for an NBA franchise. I think they have the best fans in the league."

If Drexler were a kid today, would he pay $100-plus for basketball shoes like kids are paying today?

"When I was small, I think the highest-priced shoes were the Converse Dr. J's. I used to cut four or five yards on the weekend just so I could get a pair, every month," said Drexler, who wears Oregon-made Avias.

"I think it's all individual. If you want high performance, you better get a high performance shoe," said the Glide. "Don't go out and get no PFlayers. Do they still make those?"

The Blazers, like the Pistons, had a closed practice. But before I left The Palace court, I got the chance to interview ex-UCLA Bruin and ex-world champion Portland Trailblazer Bill Walton.

I asked the 7-foot redhead my questions outside of the gym area, just before someone was going to pick him up in one of The Palace's parking lots. The often-injured Walton was again on crutches.

Walton said the change to three referees in the NBA has helped, but said the refereeing in the NBA hasn't been keeping up with the quicker players.

"I think they should recruit more players who don't make it in the NBA to try and become officials, but I also think they would have to raise the salaries," said Walton.

What does Walton feel about Portland and Detroit fans being unable to see games in person because of packed stadiums?

"It's better on TV anyway," said Walton.

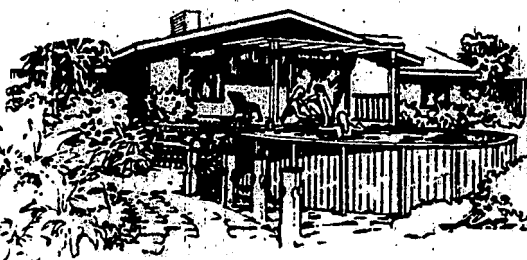

I walked with Walton towards the car which pulled up to drive him away. As he crammed his huge, injured body into the car, I couldn't help staring and thinking.

Thinking about how quickly the years have gone by.

Thinking about how Walton could have been one of the most dominating NBA players in history (maybe even more than Kareem) if he had been able to escape injuries.

And thinking about how Walton may be right in some ways about watching the finals on television, but realizing no sports-writers or fans, only he and a select few, know what it's really like to play in an NBA championship.

Is Clarkston senior Susan McKoin's scoring more newsworthy than Isiah Thomas'?

Can Wolf senior Bill Knight's rebounding be more important than Dennis Rodman's?

McKoin and Knight would probably be the first ones to say the Pistons' feats are far more significant. But in some ways, they're wrong.

Clyde Drexler

If you're writing for The Clarkston News, what happens on the Wolves' court is more important than what happens at The Palace.

But every once in a while, especially after the high school sports season is over, there's nothing wrong with writing about pro sports. At least that is what I tell my editor.

With this in mind, I contacted the Detroit Pistons public relations office to see if I could be at the interviewing session after the Pistons' practice Wednesday in the Palace, the day before game 2 of the NBA championship. (I'll admit, I also asked for a reservation in the press box but knew a weekly sports reporter had a better chance of beating Joe Dumars one-on-one than squeezing in with reporters from all over the country for one of sports' biggest events.)

Getting into the practice session was difficult, too. At first I was told over the phone I couldn't (in fact, my ears heard the jolt of the receiver being slammed down). But after three or four phone calls (even Chuck Daly would have appreciated my aggressiveness and persistence), I received permission.

In some ways I could see the Pistons' public relations staff's reason for me not being allowed into the session. I certainly haven't covered the Pistons on a daily, weekly or even monthly basis (I, too, despise front-runners who only show up during championships).

But what's the big deal about a practice session? The public relations office told me there are 500 media people to worry about. So I thought, why not 501? When the session did start, there weren't more than 100 reporters who showed up.

And besides, Clarkston is only about a 15-minute drive from The Palace, and many Clarkston residents love the Pistons as much as anyone.

What's even more dumb, Auburn Argus Editor Desiree Marcks told me she has a very difficult time trying to get into The Palace. The Argus, a weekly published by Sherman Publications (which also publishes The Clarkston News), covers the Auburn Hills area. I know Sports Illustrated has every reason to be at The Palace for the NBA championship. But a weekly newspaper that covers Auburn Hills also has some very legitimate reasons to be there.

I do appreciate that I was finally allowed to get in, but my advice to the Pistons' public relations office is to lighten up a little. The Pistons aren't always going to be the best basketball team in the world, so their management should think about future relations during the inevitable lean years.

Dennis Rodman

So I did get the chance to join the media circus on the court, sticking tape recorders near the faces of Pistons and Portland Trailblazers.

And when I asked my questions, a Piston or a Blazer didn't know if I was a reporter for The Clarkston News or Miami Herald.

Whether you write for a 300,000-circulation newspaper or a 4,600 circulation newspaper, a good question is a good question, and a good story is a good story.

Clarkston gymnast will compete in nationals

BY JAMES GIBOWSKI
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Clarkston's Theresa Campanaro will join three teammates in national gymnastics competition Friday in North Carolina. Campanaro's 4-person team recently qualified for the tournament by tying for second in the United States Association of Independent Gymnastics Clubs regionals held in St. Louis, Mo.

The 11-year-old Campanaro and her three Oakland County teammates (Colleen Sheehan, Lisa Kurc and Shay Murphy) are the only Michigan athletes that will make the trip to North Carolina. About 20 teams from around the country will take part.

Every team member will compete in the vault, balance beam, uneven bars and floor exercise.

Campanaro considers the vault her weakest event and says the 4-inch wide balance beam is her strongest.

She took first place in the floor exercise at the Aerobics Invitational in Michigan. Another highlight was when she received a 9.0 from the judges on the balance beam.

The Clarkston Junior High ninth-grader, who carries a "B" average in school has been seriously involved with gymnastics for five years. She practices five days a week nearly every week of the year under the guidance of her coach, Mel Foster, at the Steve Whitlock Gymnastics School in Bloomfield Hills. Campanaro said the worst part about practice is the heat in the summer.

The sport has helped her see much of the United States. In addition to St. Louis and Friday's trip to North Carolina, she has competed in Reno, Nev., Alabama, Ohio and Illinois.

Campanaro has never had a major injury in gymnastics. Along with the daily rigors of gymnastics, she also swims to stay in shape.

Campanaro has steadily improved her skills to be placed in Level 10, which is pre-elite status.

Not only does she face competition nationally, but two younger girls from Clarkston wait in the wings. Sashabaw Junior High students Beth Rayner and Kelli Simko both are currently in Level 8 with their gymnastics skills.

Theresa Campanaro

Campanaro sometimes helps out her physical education teacher, John Craven, whenever his class centers on gymnastics.

"It's fun," said Campanaro, who is thinking about eventually attending Michigan State University and hopes to get a scholarship.

Campanaro said even though the Clarkston school system does not have gymnastics as a varsity sport, her friends still know that she is a gymnast.

"Most of the people I go to school with know," said Campanaro.

Campanaro doesn't have to do backflips in the cafeteria to get her friends' attentions.

But Friday in North Carolina is another story.

Campers have chance at scholarship

BY JAMES GIBOWSKI
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Basketball players will learn how to dribble better with their right and left hands at the upcoming fifth annual Tim McCormick Basketball Camp.

And by writing with their right or left hands, they can possibly earn a scholarship to help pay for the cost of the camp.

Campers interested in entering the scholarship contest should write a letter in 50 words or less describing why they enjoy going to and participating in the camp.

"The scholarship is a little bonus for the kids who are enthusiastic about the camp," said Tim McCormick. "We are stressing that basketball should be fun."

McCormick, a current Houston Rocket who previously starred for the University of Michigan and Clarkston High School, said last year about six free weeks were rewarded to campers who wrote the short essays.

Those writing the essays should send them to Clarkston High School, Athletic Department, 6595 Middle Lake Road, Clarkston, MI 48016. Entries should be received about a week before the camp, which takes place at the high school June 25 thru June 29.

The registration deadline for the camp itself is June 16. The total cost for the week-long session is $60.

Basketball players entering grades 4-6 will meet from 7:30 a.m. to 9:45 a.m. and players entering grades 7-9 will meet from 10:15 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Enrollment is limited to 75 campers in each session.

The camp involves stations, skills competition, full-court scrimmage and individual instruction.

Players will also receive an official camp T-shirt and special prizes, including NBA paraphernalia.

In addition to instruction by McCormick and some college players, there will be a special guest speaker. Speakers in the past have included Charles Barkley, Chris Engler, Steve Fisher, Rumeal Robinson and Loy Vaught.

For more information, contact the Clarkston High School Athletic Department at 625-0906.

Cougars earn their way as varsity Wolves

BY JAMES GIBOWSKI
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Traditionally, freshmen are often pushed around and taken for granted by upperclassmen.

At Clarkston High School, the freshmen aren't even in the building. Instead they attend either Clarkston or Sashabaw Junior Highs.

But this spring, several freshman girls not only competed on the Wolves' varsity track team, they defeated many sophomores, juniors and seniors.

And for the second straight year, all of the freshman girls on the team were from Sashabaw Junior High.

"We don't why," said varsity assistant track Coach Chris Krueger about the number of Cougars. The past two years no ninth-grade girls from Clarkston Junior High have gone out for track. But former Wolverines are in abundance when they become 10th, 11th and 12th graders.

"It isn't cool," guesses shot putter Michelle Wade about why ninth-grade Wolverines haven't run track.

Wade is part of the "Cougar Connection," along with Rachel Seifferlein, Cara Rayner, Mary Evans, Eve Martin, Kim Michalak and Theresa Perkins.

Krueger and varsity head girls coach Gordie Richardson were both proud of the freshman accomplishments. In the Greater Oakland Activities League meet, the freshmen earned 22 1/4 points for the Wolves, who won the meet.

Michalak said the upperclassmen on the track team treated them great, "especially once we got to know them."

The girls had different reasons for going out for track this spring: Wade,

Rayner and Perkins were always going to try out for the team; Martin was interested in track so it would help her skills in ice skating; Evans and Michalak (who would later join three other Wolves to win the 3200-relay at the GOAL meet) went out because of peer pressure from their track friends; Seifferlein, ironically, participated because of the schools' pay-for-play policy.

At first, Seifferlein wasn't going to go out for a spring sport, but she figured she had already paid for two sports and a third one was free. She not only went out, she set a Sashabaw school record in the shot put and also won the league meet in the event.

Along with their 22 1/4 points in the GOAL meet, the Cougar Connection also placed and sometimes won in dual meets.

But maybe most importantly, the girls improved their times and distances as the season progressed.

Coach Krueger pointed out that, "Most of them were running in events they had never run before."

Rayner improved her time in the 100 high hurdles from 23 seconds to 17.8. Evans dropped her time in the 1600 meter run from 7 minutes to 6:53 and went from 3:06 to 2:58 in the 800 run.

Wade increased her distance in the shot put from 21 feet, 1 inch to 28 feet while Seifferlein went from 26 feet to 31 feet, 1 inch, a Sashabaw record.

Martin's 300 low hurdles time dropped from 58.2 to 52 seconds. Michalak reduced her 3200 time from 14:30 to 13:31, her 1600 time from 7 minutes to 6:18 and her 800 time from 3 minutes to 2:47.

Perkins, who helped spark interest in some of her classmates to join the team, ended up being a team manager this season.

One of the highlights for the girls this season was when the six of them won the ninth-grade Pontiac Northern Invitational. Rayner was so excited from the results at the meet, she ran off with the trophy.

The girls said they like the way their coaches stress both the hard work and fun of the sport.

Even Rayner's father, Ron Rayner, got into the spirit of the season. His peanut butter chocolate chip cookies were a favorite for the girls before meets.

Who knows? Maybe the success of this year's Sashabaw Connection, the elimination of pay-for-play and those peanut butter chocolate chip cookies will get some ninth-grade Wolverines to run track next spring.

CLINTONWOOD PARK OPEN HOUSE AND ALUMNI SOFTBALL CELEBRATION

In celebration of 15 years of softball at Clintonwood Park, there will be an open house and Alumni Softball Celebration at the park on Saturday, July 21.

There will be activities going on all day for families, all-star softball games featuring current players and special exhibition games featuring past players. A disc jockey will be present to entertain during the evening. There is no cost to attend any of these events.

The Independence Township Parks and Recreation Department is looking for players who have played at the park so it can send them an invitation to the Alumni Softball Celebration.

CLINTONWOOD SUN VOLLEYBALL

There is some room available in the Tuesday night co-rec volleyball mixer. This is a non-competitive volleyball program where players play on different teams each week to help them meet other people, get some exercise and give everyone more of an opportunity to win games. The focus of this program is fun and exercise. The cost is $12 for eight weeks and the matches are played on the sand courts at Clintonwood Park.

FLASHBACK TO SUMMER VOLLEYBALL TOURNAMENT

There will be an outdoor volleyball tournament June 17 in conjunction with the Flashback to Summer Picnic. The tournament is open to co-rec quad teams and will be played on the sand courts at Independence Oaks on Sashabaw Road. Participants will be treated to sandwiches, beverages T-shirts and plenty of volleyball.

The cost is $10 per player and there will be cash prizes for first and second place teams. The top two teams also earn a berth at The Michigan Sports Festival in Battle Creek, August 3-5.

The deadline to register is June 15, with a maximum of 20 teams to be accepted on a first come, first serve basis.

FLASHBACK TO SUMMER

There's something for everybody at the Flashback to Summer Picnic at Independence Oaks County Park on Sunday, June 17.

Some of the events planned are a fishing derby for all ages, co-rec volleyball tournament, trading card show (1968 World Champion Detroit Tigers Jim Northrup and Denny McLain will be present to sign autographs), live entertainment all day (The Boys Band, Mr. Simon leading "Simon Says," a barbershop quartet, Checkers the Clown, and many others), games, swimming, boating, and remote-controlled sailboat races. Plus, a lounging contest and chore relay for fathers.

The cost is $4 per resident vehicle and $6 per non-resident vehicle.

SAFETY TOWN

Parents can register their children for Safety Town, a program designed to teach safety to 4, 5, and 6 year olds. For two weeks, two hours a day, children will learn with actual practice aspects of safety ...strangers, poisons, bicycles, railroad crossings, bus, playground, toys, water, traffic, child safety seats, animals and more. These important messages will be taught by teachers, police officers and fire fighters.

MINI-SPORTS FESTIVAL

Volleyball, basketball, softball, tennis and soccer tournaments will be featured at the Mini-Sports Festival June 22-24 at Clintonwood Park. Winners of many of these tournaments will win berths to the Michigan Sports Festival Aug. 3-5 in Battle Creek.

After tournament action on Saturday, June 23, players and fans are invited to stay around and enjoy entertainment provided by a disc jockey.

YOUTH SOCCER REGISTRATION BEGINS

Registration for boys and girls (6-19 years old) who would like to play soccer this fall or next spring begins June 2 at the Soccerfest at Clintonwood Park. Those registering June 2 through July 13 may take advantage of a special rate. Those registering July 16 through July 31 will be charged a regular rate.

The season is tentatively scheduled to begin in late August for the under-8, under-10 and under-12 leagues. The travel league teams may begin as early as mid-August. To receive a flyer on youth soccer, call the rec department.

WALK MICHIGAN

Independence Township Parks and Recreation will again be offering participants a chance to take part in the Walk Michigan program.

Prizes are to be awarded by drawing at the conclusion of each walk. Names will also be entered in the season-fine drawing each time a person walks. The winner of the season finale drawing receives a free weekend at Mackinac Island on Labor Day weekend. The purpose of this program is to promote good health.

The date for the next walk is:

June 17 - 4 p.m. - Independence Oaks
Walkers should plan to show up ready to walk at the announced date, time and location. Pre-registration is not required.

Clarkston math teacher resigns over leave policy

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Associate Editor

As expected, the Clarkston school district has received the resignation of Clarkston High School math teacher Karen Uchno.

Uchno had threatened to resign if the school board upheld a decision to deny her future unpaid leave requests.

When the board unanimously voted May 14 to support the administrative decision to deny Uchno's request, she submitted a letter of resignation the following day.

She said her reaction to the board vote is one of sadness, anger, sympathy for other teachers, and relief at leaving a place that fails to work with teachers as cooperative adults.

"I love teaching," Uchno said. "Clarkston is losing a qualified, enthusiastic, dedicated teacher."

Uchno has twice requested, and eventually received, unpaid leaves from her position in order to attend a trip with her husband, Phil. The trip was awarded to the couple for Phil's special performance at Silicon Graphics, where he works as regional sales manager.

After she was told any future requests to attend the trip would be denied, she appeared before the school board to ask that they reconsider the school's policy.

Reading from a lengthy written statement, Uchno described her background at Kodak, Hewlett-Packard and International Business Machines, where she worked as a trainer and computer engineer.

She later decided to pursue a more fulfilling profession and chose teaching, she read.

She also described her husband's success in his company and told the board that in spite of all the extra work involved in preparing for her absence at school, she "would not miss this trip."

"I love my husband very much," she told the board. "Being married means supporting each other in good times and bad. This is the only opportunity I have to share in my husband's well-deserved reward."

She admitted that taking time off during teacher conferences was unfortunate but that she accommodated her work before and after the trip. She added that several other teachers and administrators enjoyed pre-planned school absences, and therefore her request did not set a precedent.

Some school board members felt the opposite was true.

"I work in personnel," stated Vice President John Needham. "And leaves depend on a particular circumstance rather than a locked-in pattern.

"Granting (the leave) three times locks in a pattern," he added.

Teacher's union President Bill Curtis addressed the board in Uchno's behalf.

"(Superintendent Gary) Haner has operated within the language of the contract," Curtis said. "(But) I want you to look at the kind of teacher you want to attract."

"Karen left a higher paid job because she wants to be a teacher," he added. "That's the kind of teacher we want in Clarkston."

Trustee Mary Jane Chaustowich questioned Curtis how the union addressed the leave issue in recent contract talks.

"What efforts have you made to change (the policy)?" Chaustowich asked.

Answered Curtis, "We're not asking you to change the language. We're asking and encouraging you to feel freer to do something not traditionally done."

"We're asking you to be a forward-thinking board who is willing to try something," Curtis added.

Though his comments were met with loud applause from several teachers in the audience, the board still voted to uphold the leave decision.

As for Uchno, she says she will teach elsewhere where she is appreciated.

Bouquet

Post-grad party a success

I would like to congratulate the 455 seniors of the class of 1990 not only for their graduation but for their overwhelming support and attendance at the post-graduation party at the Deer Lake Racquet Club.

By virtue of their attendance, they proved to themselves, their parents, and the community that good times can be shared with friends during graduation activities without the presence of alcohol or drugs.

A warm thank-you to the Clarkston community, business professionals, merchants, private donors and parents who supported this post-graduation party with thousands of dollars in funds and merchandise.

We were also pleased to have Mr. Karl P. Numinen, special assistant to Gov. James J. Blanchard, attend the party and bring the governor's congratulations and offer a special proclamation regarding this substance free graduation activity.

Adult ed grads complete journey

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Associate Editor

Forty-eight students, resplendent in cap and gown, marched across the CHS Kirchgeessner Theatre stage May 31.

Though the students varied in ages from their teens into their 40s, they all had one thing in common: the struggle and reward of obtaining their high school diploma.

"I'm real proud of this," said Melba Humphrey, who at 48 was the oldest graduate at the May 30 ceremony. "Three of my children have gotten their diplomas, and now it's my turn."

Melba is the mother of four children and four grandchildren. She credits her daughter, Karen, for inspiring her to go back to school to receive her diploma.

Rebecca Parkinson, a STRIVE graduate, told the audience at Kirchgeessner Theatre that she was afraid of how she would be received in the STRIVE program because of how other students had treated her after she gave birth to her daughter, Ashley.

"Here I learned all I can do if I put my mind to it," Steele said. "(And) thanks to the staff at Funshine, I was able to meet my goals."

Rebecca now plans to go to college. Lori Steele gave a tearful account of her attempt to attend classes at Macomb Community College. She was told she couldn't even apply without her diploma.

"I used to say I'm tired of being stupid," Lori said. "Now I say I'm tired of not knowing."

She told the audience she had just been accepted in the Veterinary Technical program at Macomb Community College.

Students in the Clarkston STRIVE and Adult Education graduating class of 1990 obtain their high school diplomas in one of two ways.

STRIVE students (Students Trying and Reaching Individual Victories in Education) attend alternative high school classes full time, five days a week, at the Clarkston Community Education Center.

Adult Education students attend classes part-time, one day a week for four hours, at the community education center.

School Superintendent Gary Haner congratulated graduates on their efforts.

"Regardless of age, each graduate made a sacrifice to be here," Haner said. "We're thankful that they saw that need and accepted the challenge."

Grass contributes much to our garbage

Source: U.S. Environmental Protection Agency

All across American, cities, towns, and villages are limiting or even discontinuing pick-up of yard wastes, including grass clippings, leaves and brush.

Close to 18 percent of all garbage produced in the United States is yard wastes. With nearly one-half of the nation's 6,000 landfills expected to be filled by the mid-1990s, space is quickly running out.

During the summer, grass clippings can account for 50 percent of residential trash. Because grass makes incinerators less efficient due to its high moisture content, many areas no longer accept clippings for incineration.

Here are some reasons for returning clippings to the lawn while you mow:

■ The bigger the lawn, the more clippings, the greater expense for you and the city sanitation department.

ment.

■ Grass clippings decompose rapidly on the lawn. ■ Every trash bag of grass clippings contains up to a quarter pound of usable organic nitrogen, and by recycling them back into the lawn you reduce your fertilization costs.

■ Grass clippings reduce water evaporation from the lawn, provide a cushioning layer to reduce lawn wear and promote better growth by providing nutrients and keeping the soil temperature cooler.

To successfully recycle the grass clippings back to the lawn:

■ Remove excessive thatch — grass clippings that haven't decomposed — before leaving clippings on the lawn.

■ Avoid over-fertilization because a too-dense lawn will not allow clippings to reach the soil.

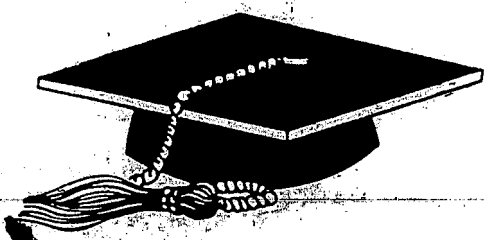

■ Use a sharp mower blade.

■ Mow frequently, each time removing about one-half inch, and never cutting the lawn shorter than two the two-and-a-half inches.

■ Limit the use of lawn chemicals, and apply corrective measures only when needed.

The Other Side of Things

The excitement of loitering

Ashley Ball

I've enjoyed everything about my semester at The Clarkston News — the friendliness and helpfulness of the staff, the glamorous atmosphere of the newspaper office and even the stress of meeting deadlines.

But with the end of the school year comes the end of my column. Even though I plan to stay in touch with my friends at the office over the summer, some things just won't be the same.

Like my afternoon read-arounds while waiting for my mom to pick me up after work. I usually work on Thursdays from after school until about 4:30 in the afternoon. But my mom also takes my sister to horseback riding lessons on Thursdays, so when I leave the office, I'm free to roam Clarkston until about 5:30 or 6, when Mom picks me up. So what do I do with the little money I carry around? I read!

First, I head for the Village Bookstore. I feel comfortable there, even when I don't buy anything. The lady who owns the store is always friendly and inviting. I spend most of my time in the fiction section — reading paperback books with big puffy lettering by authors like Rosamunde Pilcher, Tom Clancy and Isaac Asimov.

I can still remember how, in the first grade, I couldn't understand why anybody would read a book WITHOUT PICTURES. What was the point? Then in second and third grade, when I was reading authors like Margret Henry, Walter Farley, and Beverly Cleary, I couldn't wait to read the big paperback books with puffy silver or gold letters.

Now, I'd like to advance to Stephen King novels, but my parents don't want me to read Stephen King — they say he's too morbid, shocking and gory. I tell them I'm prepared — I've been eating in the school cafeteria for eight years now.

Anyway, I read until 5 when the Bookstore closes. Then I move on to Hallman's Apothecary where I browse through the paperback rack. Sometimes I'm lucky and find the same book I've been reading at the Bookstore. Otherwise, I start a new one.

The down side to this kind of reading is that sometimes the Bookstore closes at a particularly exciting part. Or the book I'm reading sells before I finish it. And, too, the Apothecary doesn't carry a wide selection of books, but it does offer a wide variety of candy to munch on while I read.

For the most part, things have gone well as I read from store to store. The clerks have gotten to know me and don't hassle me to buy or move on. And I'm careful not to bend pages or leave candy wrappers for bookmarks.

However, one day something unfortunate did happen at the Bookstore. On that particular day, Mom picked me up at promptly 5 just as the Bookstore closed.

When I got in the car, I was so upset about what happened that I couldn't answer when my mom asked how my day went.

"Ashley?" she asked, puzzled. "Is something wrong?"

I stared ahead.

"What's the matter?" she asked, this time really worried. "Did something happen in the Bookstore?"

"Yes," I said, turning to look at Mom, but not wanting to talk about or even believe what had happened. Tears welled in my eyes and my chest ached.

"She died ...," I sobbed. "It was awful! Antonia tried to help her, but she couldn't do anything."

"What!?" my mother shrieked. "Somebody died?"

She looked at me and then through the car window toward the Bookstore.

"In the Bookstore?" Her voice was shrill but she tried to stay calm. "Who? Who was it?"

"Penelope. Penelope Keeling. Just now."

My mother gasped.

"Oh no!" she said, now in total panic. "She was a friend of yours? Oh, you poor thing. When did this happen? Did anyone call 911? Should I offer to help?"

With that, she threw open the car door and rushed toward the porch of the Bookstore.

"Mom!" I called from the car, "Nobody died in the Bookstore. It was Penelope in The Shell Seekers ... the book I'm reading."

Both embarrassed and irritated, my mother stared at me for an instant, collecting her thoughts, then returned to the car.

On the way home, nothing else was said about Penelope or her death. But later that evening, my mother suggested that, next year, if Laura's riding lesson was on Thursday afternoon again, perhaps I could just loiter at the Grill or at Rudy's like all the other kids.

I guess bookstore loitering is just too exciting for her. No wonder she doesn't want me to read Stephen King.

Overweight teens can cut risk with exercise

Obese teens can cut their risk of developing heart disease as adults by exercising 50 minutes three times a week and moderating their diets slightly, according to a University of Michigan study.

"Heart disease actually begins in childhood and develops very slowly," said Prof. Victor L. Katch of the U-M Division of Physical Education. "So it is important to take preventive steps as early as possible."

According to Katch, people can be classified as obese if they have 5 percent or more body fat than is normal for their age group. For instance, normal men ages 17-27 have an average of 15 percent body fat, so 20 percent body fat would be considered obese.

Women in the same age group average 25 percent body fat, so 30 percent is obese. Obesity in children can be determined in the same way.

The U-M researcher and his colleagues studied the effects of 20 weeks of diet, counseling and exercise on 36 adolescents whose body fat averaged in excess of 36 percent. The adolescents were divided into three groups.

The first group dieted and received weekly psychological and nutritional counseling. The second group dieted, got weekly counseling and also exercised 50 minutes three times a week. The third group served as controls.

The diets, developed by a nutritionist, were designed for a weight loss of about one to two pounds per week. The exercises, which kept heart rates at 60 percent to 80 percent of the age-predicted maximum (about 200 beats per minute), included walking, jogging, swimming, aerobic dance, soccer and other activities that involved continuous movement.

At the end of the 20 weeks, significant differences between the groups had developed.

"When we measured the impact of exercise on the total number of coronary risk factors in the diet/ exercise group as a whole, we found that the diet/ exercise group had improved more than twice as much as the diet-only and the control groups," Katch said.

Coronary risk factors include triglyceride levels, high-density lipoproteins levels (the so-called "good cholesterol"), cholesterol levels, systolic blood pressure, diastolic blood pressure, percentage of body fat and maximum oxygen uptake.

"In the diet/ exercise group, there was a change for the better in an average of two of these risk factors per teenager. Among the dieters and the controls, there was only a very slight improvement in an average of less than one risk at most," Katch said.

"The total risk reduction for the diet/ exercise group was 41.4 percent compared with 14.8 percent reduction in the diet-only group."

Triglyceride levels dropped an average of 32.5 percent in the exercise/ diet group compared with 14.8 percent in the diet-only group, Katch added, while the level actually increased an average of 3.8 percent in the control group.

"Cholesterol levels dropped in all groups," Katch said, "but they dropped twice as much (12.5 percent) in the group that exercised as they did in the diet-only group (5.1 percent)."

Maximum oxygen uptake increased 2.2 percent in the diet/ exercise group compared with 0.5 percent in the diet-only group. It decreased nearly 3 percent for the controls.

Katch's colleagues in the study included co-principal investigator Albert P. Rocchini, professor of pediatrics and communicable diseases at the U-M Medical School; M. Daniel Becque, a postdoctoral fellow now at the University of Massachusetts; Charles R. Marks, assistant professor of exercise science at Oakland University in Michigan; and Catherine P. Moorehead, health science research associate at the U-M Medical School.

SPECIAL Consensus, a bluegrass band from the Chicago area, bridges the gap between traditional and progressive music and appears June 20 at Independence Oaks.

Bluegrass coming

A bluegrass band from the Chicago area is the featured entertainment Wednesday, June 20, at Possum Corner Summerfolk '90.

Special Consensus plays at 7:30 p.m. at the Independence Oaks County Park Irwin and Sadie Cohn Amphitheater, off Sashabaw Road, north of Clarkston Road, Independence Township.

Founded in 1975 by banjo player Greg Cahill, Special Consensus has appeared on National Public Radio and on Nashville Network Cable Television.

The group presents a repertoire of traditional bluegrass standards, original compositions and songs by contemporary artists from other musical genres such as the Allman Brothers, Merle Haggard and Sam Cooke.

They've also presented their traditional American music program, which intersperses musical performance with an explanation of the instrumentation and vocalization of bluegrass music, to secondary schools nationwide.

The fourth Special Consensus album, "A Hole in My Heart," was Grammy nominated in the Bluegrass category in 1990.

Tickets are $7 for adults, $5 for seniors and children and $5 for children age 5 and under. Tickets are available at Ticketmaster locations, Independence Oaks or by phone at 645-6666.

Since the site is covered, the concerts will take place rain or shine. For more information, call 625-0877 or 625-1227.

One of every five fires is of suspicious origin

Every fifth fire reported in Michigan is an arson or "suspicious" blaze.

In 1989, there were 4,858 incendiary and another 7,865 suspicious fires reported in Michigan, according to figures recently released by the State Fire Marshal.

Michigan taxpayers paid more than $74 million last year in direct arson and suspicious fire losses. These loss figures do not include indirect costs such as medical care, funeral expense, temporary shelter, business interruption, demolition, fire investigation, prosecution, jailing and increased insurance premiums.

To focus attention on the problem of arson, Governor James Blanchard has issued an official declaration designating May 6 through May 12 as "Arson Awareness Week" in Michigan.

The Michigan Arson Prevention Committee (MAPC), which represents police and fire services, the insurance industry, business and government, is promoting the anti-arson observance.

The MAPC, formed in 1973, coordinates arson prevention efforts through education and training of arson investigators, public awareness and the administration of a reward program for arson information.

Arson Control issues rewards of up to $2,000 for

The Garden Patch

Transplant plants before buds form

Gardening questions tend to sprout up as soon as spring fever hits. Michigan State University Extension specialists answer these commonly asked inquiries.

When I get my flowering annuals, is it better to get plants that already have flowers on them or plants that aren't blooming yet?

An advantage of buying plants that are still growing vegetatively — those that haven't started to form flower buds — is they tend to transplant better because they have more active root systems for quicker establishment.

Plastic labels in plant containers can tell you what the flowers will look like.

If you do buy plants already in bloom, pinch off the blossoms when you plant them. This will encourage them to concentrate on producing a strong root system to support later flowering.

Is it better to buy large tomato plants for transplanting or smaller ones?

Smaller plants tend to suffer less transplant shock and start establishing a root system to support future growth and fruit production sooner than large plants.

In fact, plants that have flowers and/or fruits on them at transplanting time may never develop large, healthy root systems. They are likely to suffer more from drought stress and yield less in the end.

Why do plants grown in partial shade seem to develop more leaf diseases than the same plants grown in full sun?

Many foliage diseases are caused by fungi that require the presence of moisture on the leaves to get established.

Plants in shade tend to remain wet longer after rain, dew or overhead irrigation, so disease organisms have a better chance to get a foothold.

You can't do much about rain or dew, but you can make an effort to water all plants — those in sun as well as shade — early in the day so they dry off as quickly as possible.

What are some garden flowers that are easy to grow in the garden from seed?

You can sow calendar and sweet pea directly into the garden as soon as you can work the soil.

After the danger of frost is past, sow cosmos, dianthus (sweet William), gazania, hollyhocks (a perennial that can be started from seed), four o'clocks, marigolds, nasturtiums (they withstand drought and poor soil very well), nicotiana, portulaca (excellent in hot, dry sites), sunflowers and zinnias.

Some of these may also be started indoors six to eight weeks before the outdoor planting date.

Follow packet directions for timing and site conditions — dry or moist, sunny or partially shaded, etc. — planting depth and thinning to proper spacing.

Summer comes back

It's that time of year again — bare feet on hot cement, children running through sprinklers, picnics and beaches. And it all begins June 21 at 11:30 a.m.

The season, of course, is summer. It begins with the summer solstice, which occurs when the sun is farthest north of the celestial equator.

Along with warmer temperatures comes more daylight hours to enjoy them. Maximum daylight reaches 12 hours and 8 minutes at the Equator and 24 hours at the Arctic Circle.

However, as we in the Northern Hemisphere enjoy the warmth of the sun and the activities that accompany it, those in the southern Hemisphere are experiencing winter.

So enjoy it while it lasts, because summer comes to an end Sept. 23 at 2:55 a.m.

Family leave is becoming popular

The concept of family leave for new parents or in cases of injury or illness of an immediate family member is an idea whose time seems to have come!

For the working mother, this is indeed a social need, a recognition that came decades ago in many western European countries.

Although almost half the states have already passed "family leave" legislation, the application is uneven. Some states allow leave for state employees only and some for maternity-related disabilities only.

Workers receive no salary during the family leave period, but they frequently retain their health insurance and other benefits and will be reinstated in their former job or in a similar position.

The growing body of legislation recognizes that a mother no longer should have to choose between her family and her job.

As more and more mothers find their way into the workplace, the importance of this social issue grows.

Not only does the working mother need her income to help support her family, industries need her skills and abilities to meet the demands for more workers.

The male labor pool is shrinking as a result of a decade of low birthrates. What's more, mothers and all women have the right to personal fulfillment in a rewarding career.

Take steps to make your home poison proof

Many accidents happen when adults are using a product but are distracted for a few moments by a telephone call or a doorbell. One moment is all it takes — take a moment to poison proof.

Accidental poisonings can occur in the home in a number of ways, including the accidental ingestion of prescription and nonprescription medications.

In 1972, 96 children died from drug ingestion. In 1974, drugs were first required to be packaged in child-resistant containers. In the same year, there was a substantial decrease in the number of fatalities — 57.

In 1984, there were only 31 deaths. A recent study conducted for the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission by the American Association of Poison Control Center found that 23 percent of all prescription drugs that were ingested by children under the age of 5 belonged to someone who did not live with the child.

Overall, 17 percent of the drugs ingested belonged to grandparents. All adults need to use child-resistant closures to keep medicines out of the reach of children.

Poisoning may also occur in the home by accidental ingestion of poisonous plants or household chemicals or products.

It is extremely dangerous to keep paint thinner, turpentine or gasoline in cups or soft drink bottles. These are likely causes of accidental poisonings.

Several good housekeeping rules can be used to prevent accidental poisonings in the home:

- Keep all household chemical products and medicines out of reach and out of sight of your youngsters.

- When household products are in use, never let them out of sight — even for a moment.

- Keep all items in their original containers.

- Leave the original labels on all products and read the label before using.

- Always turn on the light when giving or taking medications.

- Avoid taking medications in front of children, since youngsters tend to imitate grown-ups.

- Clean out the medicine cabinet periodically and safely dispose of unneeded medicines when the illness for which they have been prescribed is over.

- Use safety packaging properly — close container securely after use.

- Contact your local florist or greenhouse to find out if the plants in your home are poisonous.

About 116 Poison Control Centers in the United States maintain information for the pharmacist, physician and public on the necessary treatment for the ingestion of household products and medicines.

The phone number of your local poison control center can be found on the inside cover of the yellow or white pages of the telephone directory. Keep the number near your phone.

If an accidental ingestion of a product occurs in your home, the first thing to do is to read the label on the product to determine what immediate first aid is necessary.

Then call the Poison Control Center or physician immediately. If you can't contact them, call your 911 or the operator. When you contact the Poison Control Center, be prepared to give the facts to the expert on the other end of the line. Be sure to know the following:

- The victim's age.
- The victim's weight.
- The poison involved — was it swallowed, inhaled, absorbed through the skin or splashed into the eyes.
- Any first aid that may have been given.
- If the victim has vomited.
- Your location and how long it will take you to get to the hospital.

Have the label ready. The label provides information about the individual ingredients of the product that are poisonous. If medicine has been swallowed, do not give anything to the victim by mouth until advised by the Poison Control Center.

If chemicals or household products have been swallowed, offer a glass of water or milk, but don't force feed the victim liquids. Call for professional help to find out whether or not the victim should be forced to vomit.

Always keep on hand at home a one-ounce bottle of syrup of ipecac for each child or grandchild at home. Use this product only on the advice of the Poison Control Center, emergency department, pharmacist or physician.

Woman raises therapy dogs for handicapped people

BY SANDRA G. CONLEN
Clarkston News Staff Writer

A dog's life at Alyce Griggs-Bramble's home on Bird Road in Groveland Township means training and work to help others.

Alyce raises Bouvier dogs from her kennel, Alys-tarr, for use as service dogs, or therapy dogs, for physically handicapped people.

The Bouvier dogs Alyce raises receive the same training and certification as dogs trained to be placed in a home with a hearing impaired person.

But this breed of dog has strength and is large — some weigh more than 80 pounds. They're strong enough to carry items in a back pack and to help their masters.

Reflections

Section C

Wednesday, June 13, 1990

Alyce's own Bouvier, Champion Banjo who died in April at age 13, helped her realize how easily Bouviers can be trained, she said.

On the nursing staff at the Clarkston Village Clinic, Alyce trained her first therapy dog, Aaron, in 1984, and he was placed in a home in 1985. Alyce has since supplied three dogs for households with handicapped people and soon will have a fourth dog, Cali, ready for placement.

"I do this for myself; I don't do it for profit," said Alyce, who has three children and is married to Jack.

The dogs Alyce trains stay with her for about 18 months before they are sent to their prospective owners.

She raises all of the dogs she places as therapy dogs from her own kennel. From a litter of pups, the puppy must pass three steps to be considered as a therapy dog.

"You choose the most outgoing dog, the one that can be trained to police-dog level, and once it is set in a (particular) situation, you see if they will perform," Alyce said. "You want a dog aggressive enough to tame."

"These are my fuzzy children, and they are all stars."

Alyce Griggs-Bramble

She said the dogs are as qualified and as legal as the seeing-eye dog. Each dog's yellow identification tag signifies they are trained service dogs.

Therapy dogs are also placed internationally, but Alyce places her dogs in the United States.

The Bouvier breed is well suited for the type of work required to help to the handicapped.

"Bouviers are quiet until ready to use; then they become quite animated," Alyce said.

They are even well suited to be used in tracking

ALYCE has "Bouviers raised with T.L.C." written on her business cards, and Eli May, the pup, is passing on some T.L.C. she has received to her friend Doss.

down narcotics, she added.

"Bouviers are strong and perceptive," Alyce said.

Alyce's hard-working dogs are trained to pull carts in parades, and each Friday one of the Bouviers, Tundra, pulls a sled with garbage cans down to the end of the driveway for weekly pick-up.

"She knows its Friday and goes to get the bag of garbage (on that day)," Alyce said.

The dogs start training about eight weeks of age and are taken out in public two nights a week for training sessions. On Thursday nights they spend more than two hours in a structured class training with dogs used for the hearing impaired.

For training, Alyce likes Clarkston's Depot Park and the Village of Lake Orion's park because they have playground equipment.

The dogs use the slides, ladders and jungle-gyms to become accustomed to all situations before becoming a therapy dog, Alyce said.

One of Alyce's Bouviers, Ace, has been a therapy dog for about five years to Joan Rahn who is a math professor at Western Michigan University, Kalamazoo.

Joan has chronic arthritis and tendonitis, which makes it difficult to carry books and papers, and medication often makes her disoriented.

Ace is trained to carry her books, and if she falls while at home, Ace will find Joan's husband for help. He's also trained to punch a button, which will reach 911, if need be, Alyce said.

Joan said Ace helps her with retrieving things such as forks, spoons, erasers and chalk, and she delights in having him as a companion.

He has allowed her to take some measure of control in her life because he has helped reduce fear in her life, she said.

"I do this for myself. I don't do it for profit."

Alyce Griggs-Bramble

Alyce said Joan had a German Shepherd prior to Ace, and Ace has been well received because of his calm temperament.

"With Ace many doors have been opened to Joan that were closed before," Alyce said.

As for Alyce, she considers raising these dogs a labor of love.

"These are my fuzzy children, and they are all stars," she said.

Because she considers them stars, each Bouvier she trains carries the name Alys-tarr before the name they are called, be it Ace, Aaron, Cali, Tundra, Doss or Eli May.

Painting by young artist wins top national honors

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Associate Editor

Lora Hendrix, a student at Springfield Christian Academy, never thought of herself as a painter.

When her first painting was chosen from 3,000 others in a national contest, she reconsidered.

"I will do more painting," she says.

Lora's landscape first captured top honors at the state level in the Michigan Association of Christian Schools fine arts contest.

The winning entries from each state contest were then entered in the national contest, held at Bob Jones University in Greenville, S.C.

By chance, Lora passed through Greenville on her watching her father for some of her expertise.

Lora has never taken an art class and has previously worked only with drawings and chalk.

Her painting, a vivid portrayal of mountains and trees in Yellowstone National Park, is extremely detailed and real-looking.

"I like doing trees," Lora says, looking at her work.

Of the total number of points, Lora missed only one, which was reportedly marked by a judge who was disappointed Lora hadn't actually set up her easel in Yellowstone to paint the work.

When asked whether painting would now become her primary occupation, Lora says only, "I wish I had more time."

Lora's favorite subject in school is speech; she also enjoys playing the piano and singing.

"I love to speak in front of people," she says.

Judging by her recent success, painting may soon compete for Lora's time along with the other things she loves to do.

"I like doing trees."

way home from a college trip with several of her friends.

She hoped to simply pick up her painting and be on her way. Instead, she arrived to discover that the contest was underway.

"We arrived about a half-hour right before the winners were announced," Lora recalls.

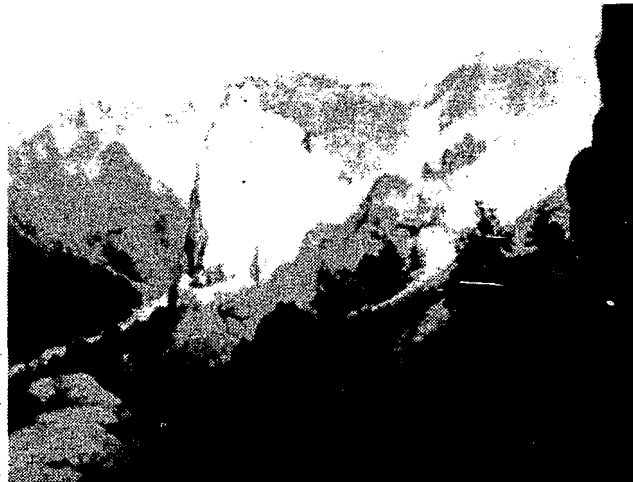

She and her friends settled into the balcony of the packed auditorium and patiently waited as the winners of third and second place were announced.

Finally, the announcers read Springfield Christian Academy, Lora Hendrix, and she knew she had won first place.

"I didn't have any idea," she says quietly.

Lora, 16, is the daughter of Brenda and Michael Hendrix. Her father works as a commercial artist.

Though Lora had never painted before, she credits

THE LANDSCAPE Lora painted depicts the trees and mountains of Yellowstone National Park.

LORA HENDRIX painted her first picture, a landscape, which captured top honors in a national fine arts contest. She had dropped by the contest to pick up her work when she happened to hear the winners announced. Lora is a student at Springfield Christian Academy.

God, family, job important to woman of the year

BY LISA NIXON
Clarkston News Special Writer

The Tipacon Chapter of the American Business Women's Association (ABWA) has named its "Woman of the Year".

Marilyn Lash of Independence Township, president of Tipacon for the fourth time, has won this award once before, in 1977.

"It is really special to receive the award again," Lash said.

Three people were nominated for the award, and the final decision was made by secret ballot of all the ABWA members, Lash said.

The decision was based on education, work experience and ABWA involvement and commitment, Lash added.

Lash, wife and mother of three, also holds a job along with her many volunteer positions.

"I'm going constantly," Lash said.

Lash, an administrative secretary at Clarkston Area Youth Assistance, works about 35 hours a week even though she is not a full-time worker, she said.

"My job is important to me," Lash said, "It's nice because I'm not tied to the office."

Lash attends meetings if her employer, Garry Pullins, can not attend them.

"She is deserving of the award," Pullins said.

"She is a busy lady," he added. "She has to have a lot of unique attributes to be able to do so much and keep everything going well."

"I've never worked with so many nice people," Lash said.

Lash dedicates a large portion of her time to the Tipacon chapter.

"It's a great organization," she said, adding that she doesn't plan to be an officer next year because it is so time consuming.

"There was a period when I was really very active," she said, mentioning that she now likes to spend more time with her family and job.

ABWA'S Woman of the Year is Marilyn Lash.

"It didn't take my enthusiasm; it just took my amount of involvement," she said.

Lash is also involved with the Clarkston school system because of her three sons: Derek, 15; Deron, 13; and Devon, 11.

Besides involvement with Band Boosters, Lash is a parent volunteer coordinator for Sashabaw Junior High and is active on the Parent Teacher Organization at North Sashabaw Elementary.

This year she is also chairwoman for the fifth-grade graduation, she said.

Lash also bowls on a mixed league and is a member of Clarkston Community Women's Club and Saint Trinity Lutheran Church, Clarkston, she added.

"God is number one, then family, then my job, then ABWA," she said of the order of her life.

Lash has been a member of Tipacon for 19 years and was president in 1970, 1972 and 1973, she said.

ABWA is a national organization that tries to bring together businesswomen of diverse backgrounds and to provide opportunities for them.

They provide scholarships for women, including four $1,000-awards and two $500-awards this year, Lash said.

Lash said much of her time with ABWA is spent preparing to host the next ABWA national conference.

Reunion

Clarkston High School's Class of 1981 will be holding their 10-year reunion in 1991.

Finding ways to help the children

BY DON RUSH
Assistant to the Publisher

"Our children . . . our life."

A simple statement at the bottom of a painting. A simple statement that seems so true no one would argue the point. Though a truthful statement, some studies indicate one in four girls and one in six boys are, in some way, sexually abused before they reach their eighteenth birthday.

The painting hangs on the wall of CARE House — a child-friendly setting for interviewing children who may have been sexually abused. CARE House is a new program in Oakland County and is only one of 52 such programs in the United States.

"The problem is a very widespread one," says Pete Amar, CARE House coordinator.

Amar has been involved with the program since October. CARE House had its first interview November 9, 1989. And while CARE House may be new, the problem is not.

"It's a problem our society is at least willing to talk about more openly in the last 5 to 10 years. But, clearly all the studies indicate it is not a new problem; its been going on for generations."

According to Amar, about 50,000 cases of child abuse and/or neglect were reported to state officials in 1988. Roughly 25,000 cases were substantiated. When child sexual abuse is the allegation, in most cases the child is telling the truth.

Cathy Witt, supervisor at Oakland Family Services, Pontiac, estimated there were 5,000 cases of abuse or neglect in the Oakland County in 1988. Over one-third of the allegations were proven true. Though the numbers seem staggering, she believes sexual abuse of children is not rising.

"The schools are doing a lot more now. They are discussing good touches and bad touches," she says.

When a child discloses they have experienced some sort of sexual abuse, most of the time the incident is not fabricated. "Certainly it can happen, but it is very, very unlikely that they are making up stories," Amar says.

More than physical or emotional abuse or neglect cases, child sexual abuse frequently goes unnoticed or untold. Guilt is a major factor — feelings of guilt not of the perpetrator, but of the victim.

"The child very often believes that somehow they caused this to happen. That some way it is their fault," Amar says. "It is very important for the child to hear from their other relatives and trusted adults, 'You did not do anything wrong.' That this is a problem that Uncle George has that needs to be addressed. That he did something inappropriate and there are going to be consequences for his actions."

"If the case goes forth to criminal prosecution, the child can feel guilt associated with, 'I'm sending Uncle George to jail.' All of those types of issues need to be worked out. The child needs to be supported for coming forth and telling the truth."

Both Amar and Witt say more often than not, the perpetrator is not the traditional scary man who hangs out by the school playground and exposes himself. Rather it's a trusted adult who has been known to the family: mother, father, an uncle or a close family friend.

Witt says because the abuser is usually someone the child loves or likes, they feel guilty and don't disclose the abuse. "Usually it is someone the child has very positive feelings for, otherwise they wouldn't get away with it. If it was a stranger the kid would go home right away and tell mom."

Witt says in the homes where children are sexually abused, it is usually found that there were "loose boundaries": bathroom doors not closed, bedroom doors left open when changing clothes and not enough proper supervision.

Once the allegations are in the open, there is also guilt on the part of other family members — could they have protected their child by being home more, noticing something strange about the child . . . something, anything.

A guilty secret

"One of the things in particular about the sexual abuse of children is that it is one of the most secret of crimes, typically known just between the victim and the perpetrator," Amar says. "Often when it is a trusted adult who is the perpetrator, there is the tremendous dynamics of 'This is our secret. You cannot tell anybody.'"

"There are different levels of threats the perpetrator can place upon the child in order to maintain that secret. Threats to the child, or to the child's pet. 'I'll hurt

"Usually it is someone the child has very positive feelings for, otherwise they wouldn't get away with it. If it was a stranger the kid would go home . . . and tell mom."

mommy if you tell.' Again, the guilt trip of 'I'll go to jail if you tell anybody and you don't want that to happen to me.'

It's the type of situation that is extremely traumatic for all members of the family. Oakland Family Service tries to counsel the entire family — the victims, parents who are not abusers, non-abused siblings; they even have group therapy for adult survivors of abuse.

"There are a lot of adults who were abused and did not tell. It doesn't get treated. As a result people do a lot of things in their life that maybe they wouldn't have."

"Our prisons are filled with men who have been sexually abused. It causes a lot of women to make inappropriate decisions about their life and their life partners. One of the things that child sexual abuse does is destroy the child's self-esteem, because usually the abuser is someone known and trusted. When your self-esteem is destroyed by this person, unless you've gotten some treatment and some help in building it back up, you end up thinking you're no good. You're worthless. You pick men who beat you, abuse you."

Because of the effects of sexual abuse, Witt says it is important to treat the children while they are still children, while the abuse is still fresh in their memory. They have had children in group therapy as early as four years old.

"A lot of parents say, 'She's so young, maybe she'll forget about it if we don't talk about it. That's not true. They never forget about it. You can treat the problem, but you can't take away the fact it happened. Hopefully they go on with their lives. Hopefully we can keep them from making judgements or acting on the shame and guilt."

"That's why the big emphasis is on 'it wasn't your fault, you're not the one with the problem.' We take away the guilt and build up their self-esteem."

The Child Abuse and Neglect Council, County of Oakland, Inc. (Can Council) has a pamphlet with a picture of a child's face. The heading reads, "It shouldn't hurt to be a child."

The hurt of abuse goes beyond the actual sexual abuse incident. There is the pain of reliving the incident.

And, as often is the case, once an investigation has been started the child has to retell the incidents to any number of people — to the police, protective service workers, prosecuting attorneys — up to 10 different strangers.

Enter the CARE House program.

CARE House

CARE House is not a shelter, long-term or emergency, for sexually abused children. It is not an investigative body and it does not change state-mandated procedures of handling sexual abuse cases.

It is a place that helps coordinate the process, bringing together all the agencies involved. It's a neutral environment that is child-friendly, child-focused where the setting becomes familiar to the child. A place where professionals go to the child, instead of the child going to the professionals.

"It was recognized, historically, when an allegation was brought forward, a number of agencies became involved. The way the system can respond to those investigations is in a fairly fragmented fashion. Every agency responding individually to the case. The child can wind up going to three, four, five different locations and be interviewed by eight to ten people. As they each do their piece of the puzzle."

CARE House tries to have the investigation done in a team process. For example, whenever possible, interviews are set up with more than one professional involved. It enhances the communication between the different agencies through the joint interview process and through team meetings where the representatives from the different agencies discuss a case.

In the state, Amar said there are only 2 other programs similar to CARE House, one in Kalamazoo, the other in Grand Rapids. These programs are different from each other, and from CARE House.

"In Kalamazoo they are having the therapy component built into it. They have counselors on staff. It's a bigger operation than ours. CARE House has a staff of two, myself and the receptionist."

"In Grand Rapids it is called Project Harmony. It's more of a hospital setting, with more medical information," he says.

As of March, he said, there are 52 similar programs in operation or planned throughout the United States. The programs, including CARE House, are based on one created in Madison County, Alabama. It's operated in the city of Huntsville.

Amar says there has been a tremendous amount of commitment by the agencies involved. The Oakland County Prosecutor's Office now has a special child sexual abuse unit. The unit went into operation January 1. It has four assistant prosecutors that follow the such cases throughout the judiciary process. Prior to this, as the case moved through the system, new prosecutors were introduced to the victim. The special unit cuts how many times the child has to retell the allegation.

Out of the 43 police departments in the county, 37 have designated a liaison officer to CARE House. The Michigan Department of Social Services has four district offices in the county and has recently designated a primary case worker for sexual abuse cases in each office. Each of those offices also has an alternate worker.

"There are nights I go home frustrated. What kind of society is it that does this?" Amar says. "But, I also draw strength from the team meetings. That we are doing something about it. I draw strength from that."

Parents, be ever so observant

Children who may be too frightened to talk about sexual molestation may exhibit a variety of physical and behavioral signals. Any or a combination of several of these signs may be significant. Parents should assume responsibility for noticing such symptoms, including:

- * Extreme changes in behavior, such as loss of appetite.
- * Recurrent nightmares or disturbed sleep patterns and fear of the dark.
- * Regression to more infantile behavior such as bedwetting, thumb-sucking, or excessive crying.
- * Torn or stained underclothing.
- * Vaginal or rectal bleeding, pain, itching, swollen genitals, and vaginal discharge.
- * Vaginal infections or venereal disease.
- * Unusual interest or knowledge of sexual matters, expressing affection in ways inappropriate for a child of that age.
- * Fear of a person or an intense dislike at being left somewhere or with someone.
- * Other behavioral signals such as aggressive or disruptive behavior, withdrawal, running away or delinquent behavior, failing in school.

ANDY SHORT, 9, a third-grader at Clarkston Elementary, reaches for a crayon that he will use to color a braille picture. The coloring exercise was part of the Helen Keller station, which gave students an opportunity to carry out tasks as if they were blind.

A BLINDFOLDED Jessica Dalrymple, 9, tries to identify a teddy bear during the Helen Keller workshop at Clarkston Elementary's "Reaching for the Stars" program. Some of the other celebrity workshops included: Albert Einstein, Sally Ride, Helen Keller, Mark Twain, Elizabeth Rockwell, Babe Ruth, Buffalo Bill Cody and Beethoven.

WHAT'S WITH the glasses? Colin Wethy, 9, tries to focus in on the identity of the object in his hand during one of the Helen Keller activities June 7.

PLAYING doctor is Leon de la Pena, 9, who gave the stethoscope a try at Clarkston Elementary's "Reaching for the Stars" program. Leon was learning more about Elizabeth Blackwell, America's first female doctor, at one of 11 "celebrity stations."

NICOLE COLOSIMO, 9, uses her sense of touch to color a braille picture of a clown. The exercise was created so the children could experience the sightless world of Helen Keller.
