Thumbs up for library

2,010 say yes to millage

BY CURT MCALLISTER Clarkston News Staff Writer

A giant hurdle was cleared Tuesday, Aug. 7, when more than 2,000 Independence Township voters approved a three-quarter-mill levy for four years to operate the upcoming library expansion.

According to township officials, 2.010 voted yes, while 1,612 voted no. The figures are unofficial number field by the Oakland County Board of Canvassers.

With the proposal's passage, the township can press on with construction of the 20,000-square-foot library. The expansion of the current 4,000-square-foot building will be paid for with a $2 million bond issue approved by voters Nov. 8, 1988. The Clarkston Community Historical Society is also contributing $50,000 to furnish the local history room.

The three-fourths mill is 75 cents for every $1,000 assessed property valuation. For example, the owner of a $100,000 home assessed at half its market value ($50,000) will pay $37.50 per year for library operating expenses.

Library Director James Hibler was pleased with the outcome of the election, despite the the large number of no votes.

"In a way, I thought the total vote would be a little more in our favor, but I'm pleased with the overall outcome," Hibler said.

"I'd like to thank all of the volunteers who put in so much extra time for the library," he added. "Their efforts proved that this township is ready for a new library, and hopefully we can get it done soon."

Hibler said the next step is for the township to seek construction bids. If a bid is secured soon, construction could start by the end of this year, with a targeted completition date of fall 1991.

Races close locally

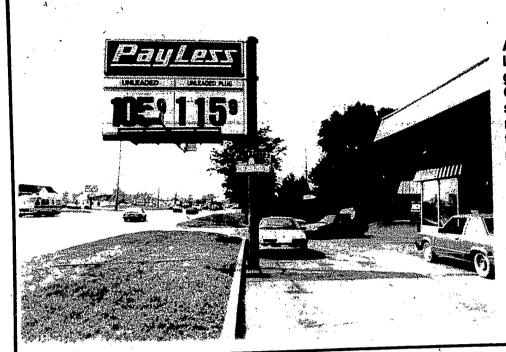

Races in Independence and Springfield townships were close in the Aug. 7 primary election.

About 23 percent - 4,3,05 people - cast votes in Independence, said Deputy Clerk Cathy Derousha late Tuesday night. About 17 percent, showed up in Springfield, said Clerk Calvin Walters.

While countywide totals weren't available at press time, it appears that Republican Frank Millard won a November ballot position for the 3rd district Oakland County Commissioner's seat, while Republican Tom Middleton won the candidacy for the 61st district state house seat.

However, locally, Springfield voters selected Carol Eberhardt over Millard by two votes, and Tome Greene over Middleton by one vote. In Independence, Greene collected nine more votes than Middleton.

AFTER Iraq invaded Kuwait, gas prices at Clarkston area service stations rose. Last Friday, the price of regular unleaded at the Payless gas station on Dixle Highway in independence Township changed from 97 cents per gallon to $1.05. By Tuesday, it had again risen to $1.16. Building a shed? Don't forget permit Residents should call the Independence Township Building Department before constructing sheds, pools and decks, according to Don Phillips.

Phillips, the township zoning enforcement officer, said most structures need township permits.

"We've always had a problem with this," said

All sheds require permits, while pools above ground by 24 inches or more need them, as do decks 30 inches or more above ground.

If the resident doesn't pull a permit and the structure violates a township ordinance, the procedure to fix the problem could be costly and time consuming, said Phillins

In the July 25 issue of The Clarkston News, a story about Clarkston Real Estate Inc. should have said that the company has employed 14 "independent" contractors.

In the July 25 issue of The Clarkston News, a caption beneath a photo of golfers in the rain should have said the benefit outing was sponsored by the North Oakland County SCAMP Funding Corp. Individual golf holes were sponsored by businesses.

In last week's Clarkston News, Reporter's Notebook should have said that Carroll and Phyllis Fortress of Jackson formerly lived in the Sutherland House apartments while working for the Clarkston school district.

Political sign deadline Tuesday, Aug. 21

Political signs must be removed by Tuesday, Aug. 21, in Independence Township -- that's 14 days after the election.

Don Phillips, Independence's zoning enforcement officer, said all the candidates should take note of the requirement so they don't violate the township's ordinance.

Phillips said it hasn't been much of a problem in the past.

Though the fire is simulated, participants will witness the effects of heavy smoke and will learn proper escape procedures with the use of a "safety house."

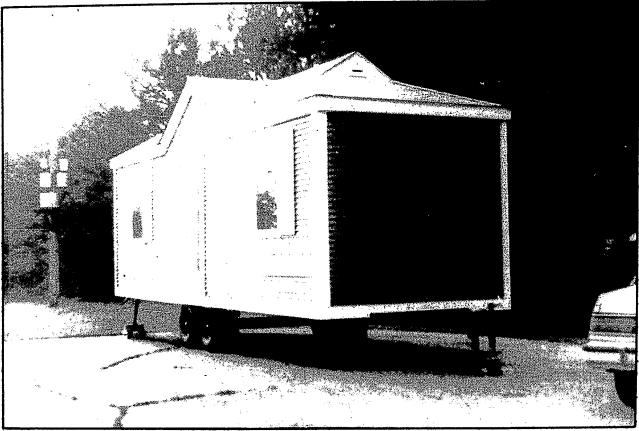

The safety house is a cumulative effort of the North Oakland County Builder's Association (NOCBA), the Independence Township Fire Department and dozens of businesses and individuals, all who donated time, materials and resources for the project.

Measuring eight feet wide and 26 feet long, the house simulates two bedrooms separated by a foyer.

As a smoke-generating machine fills the house with smoke, the children practice rolling out of bed, locating an adequate exit and climbing down specially-adapted ladders from the windows.

Along with the simulated smoke, the house has been adapted with heat elements to make the experience seem as realistic as possible.

After reading Reporter's Notebook Aug. 1, Norma O'Roark of Lakewood, Independence Township, said she just had to find out the address of Carroll and Phyllis Fortress of Jackson, who visited Clarkston a few weeks

It seems that Norma (Davison) and her husband, William, were students in Carroll Fortress' civics and economics classes at Clarkston High School.

The couple were dating and always sat together up close by Fortress' desk. One day, Mr. Fortress told the two that he hoped they would get married soon.

After that school year, though, Fortress and his wife moved to Jackson, where Mr. Fortress later became principal of a high school.

Norma said she wanted to tell Mr. Fortress that she and William did indeed get married and have now been married 46 years.

She remembered that during school William worked midnights at Pontiac Motors to earn money for her engagement ring. As a result, she was always nudging him from sleep during Mr. Fortress' classes.

She also helped William study (he got a "B" in the class; she received an "A").

Condos get final approval

A new 56-unit site condominium project is in the works for the northwest corner of Ortonville and Cranberry Lake roads.

The Independence Township Planning Commission voted 6-1 July 12 to approve the final site plan for Brookstone: Steve Secatch cast the lone no vote. Voting yes were Chairperson Brent Bair, Joe Figa, Jo Fussman, Bruce Mercado, Richard Oppmann and Daniel Travis.

The Southfield-based petitioner, First Commercial Realty and Development Co., plans to erect the 56-unit condominium project on 38 acres, with 15,000-square-foot lots. Paved parking is to be provided with each unit as its developed.

Site condominiums are single family homes owned by each individual home owner, with the property around the homes owned by the condominium association, which is comprised of all the home owners.

Final site approval was granted subject to the following conditions:

Inclusion of language in the township master deed regarding the special assessment issue of public road improvement only requiring 51 percent of residents' signatures. Also language regarding the protection of natural resources on the site.

No permits to be issued until water and sewer construction has begun.

To meet the requirements of the township engineers regarding storm drainage. Also consider the resolution of Cranberry Lake and take any possible means of minimizing the retention and/ or detention area located nearby.

Head Start is valuable program

Enrolling my child in Head Start changed my life as much as it changed his.

This will be Edward's second year in Oakland Livingston Human Service Agency's (OLSHA) Head Start Program. He has learned to sit calmly and concentrate without being entertained by the TV!

Edward has also learned to count and learned his colors

Head Start provides the opportunity for Edward to be around other four-year-old kids and interact with them.

Books have now become important to Edward, and that is a very important development.

I'm thrilled with the changes in Edward. But I'm also thrilled with the changed in me! Being involved in the Head Start Program has made me take a good look at myself, and make some decisions.

My goal now is to go back to school in the field of child development. I wouldn't have had the confidence or insight to ever consider that before being involved in the Head Start Program.

I'm now more open and trusting and willing to help others, I'm also more willing to ask for help.

I function well in a group setting too, because I'm involved with Head Start as a Policy Council Representative. We go to meetings and bring back information to the parent group.

We try to solve as many problems and make as many decisions as possible at that level. It feels good to have a voice in Head Start managerial decisions.

I'm so grateful that the Oakalnd Livingston Human Service Agency has a Head Start Program! The Head Start Program addresses basic needs, yet it is innovative in its approach to teaching.

They also address health issues by providing children with comprehensive medical check-ups.

Nutrition is addressed by serving one meal and a snack per day. Parent involvement is stressed, as well as mental health and social services.

OLHSHA has a wonderful, comprehensive program in Head Start — a program that has changed my life!

Tired of stigma

Regarding your recent story on your trip to Mackinac Island, I also noticed that, to quote you, "The smell of horse manure seemed stronger this year than ever, and that's a lot."

I'm not talking about horses, however. Rather I'm talking about your conclusion that "if you can't stand whiskers, don't buy a bike."

There are a lot of different people in this world. To classify them by what type of transportation they choose is pathetically prejudiced. I for one am a clean shaven, hardworking motorcyclist who is extremely tired of such an archaic stigma. In the future, please keep the horse manure to yourself.

Changes in U.S.S.R. exciting

Following is the second of four articles about the Soviet Union. The author, Don Morrow, gathered his material over eight months while visiting his wife, Robing Bisha. Bisha is a 1979 Clarkston High School graduate who spent an academic year in the Soviet Union doing research for her doctoral degree. She is studying Russian history at Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind., and is the daughter of John Bisha of Clarkston.

BY DON MORROW

February:

As Eastern Europe changes all around us and the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union votes to reconsider the leading role of the community party and allow multi-party elections, one may be wondering what it is like actually to be living in the midst of all these changes.

The answer is: it is both exciting and surprisingly quiet. Here in Leningrad, life continues as always. While 200,000 people demonstrate in Moscow, here people continue to go about their daily business. We find it quite strange that there appears to be almost no large-scale public reaction here. By the time this article appears, something may have changed, but for now you could not tell by being out on the street here that all these exciting changes are going on all around us.

The Leningrad city government is quite conservative and resistant to change, but Leningraders do not always agree. We attended a showing of a film about Boris Yeltsin, the popular Moscow reformer, at which there was supposed to be a discussion afterwards. But when the discussion was held, the moderator announced that the film could only be discussed as a work of art, and not political discussion would be allowed.

This infuriated the crowd, many of whom stormed out, and one man ran onto the stage clutching a poster advertising what the discussion was supposed to be and accusing the people in charge of the discussion of cheating the public of their right to discuss the film properly.

On the other side of the coin, the Russian nationalist group Pamiat is very active in Leningrad and is inspiring fear among the Jewish population. We hear many rumors about their activities, including one of proposed grograms against Jews in early May.

A recent article carried a printed in "Lenigradskaya Pravda" carried a reprint of a warning by Pamiat to Jews to stay at home. We also hear stories that anti-Pamiat-sponsored demonstrations are allowed to continue without incident. Some even say the Leningrad Communist Party elite are openly supportive of the Anti-semitic actions proposed by radical Russian nationalist groups such as Pamiat and the Leningrad Popular, Front.

As a result of events in Eastern Europe and Moscow and all the rumors, we often feel like we are sitting on a pressurized container that is on the verge of blowing up. Buy why is Leningrad quiet? This question puzzles me daily. Maybe Leningrad will wake up soon, but for now the daily crowds are in the Metro.

Jim's Jottings

I started playing golf in about 1939. I caddied at Owosso Country Club that summer. There were no golf courses handy, and no money to play them through high school, the military and college.

I took golf up again in 1951. So, for 40 years I've swung sticks with big heads at little white balls with dimples.

For 20 of those years I played with Top Kick clubs from Gormans in Southfield. Two years ago I decided I should have a new set of those metal woods for my declining years of divoting.

I bought Mizuno metal woods. The 5-wood felt so good on the driving range I bought the 1 and 3 to go with it. For two years I've tried my damdest to hit that #1 straight, consistently.

With 40 years of playing, reading and watching golf I think I know at least the basics of stick swinging. But, try as I may, I can't get that driver to do it right. It finally got so bad I took the second golf lesson of my life. The clubs are too expensive and I'm to cheap to just throw them away.

The instructor, after watching a couple of my telephone-booth backswings (I've always had a short takeaway), told me to take the club back further and follow through more. I'did. The first shot went 250 yards, straight. For the next half hour I tried to duplicate it, and failed.

The next day a pain developed in my neck, It forced me to sleep sitting up. My right arm ached. My hand went numb. But, by mid afternoon, on the days that followed, I felt pretty good and stayed away from the doctor...until.

He gave me Tylenol and a relaxant. "If that doesn't help we'll try therapy," he said. A week went by with only minor relief. Of course, it didn't help when I lifted my side of a 300-pound skid of paper.

Just before I left on a week-long golfing adventure, I went to another doctor.

He prescribed steroids. I bought 'em, but never took 'em. Bad publicity stopped me, I guess:

Naturally, a week of golf didn't cure my neck pain. Neither did aspirin, Excedrin or a variety of beverages. Try therapy.

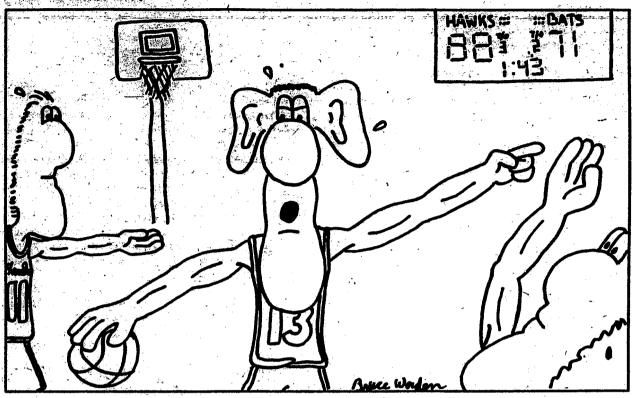

Selena of Crittenton went to work. She talked, she manipulated and she put a mechanical stretcher on my neck.

The first session was on a Friday. Saturday was mighty painful, but I did the little exercises Selena gave me. Sunday was much better. And, after Monday with Selena only a minor numbness remained.

I'm really sold on physical therapy, and now I'm going to see if Selena can help me hit that metal driver straight, consistently. After all, she straightened out my neck.

Me and my 10-year class reunion are boycotting one another.

For one thing, I didn't get an invitation like the rest of my class.

My mother, hot on the trail of this wondrous event, contacted my former classmates who claim I am on the "missing persons" list.

Calling to inform me of this, she tried to convince me this is something I shouldn't miss.

"Oh it's fun," she assures me. "They give out prizes for the most babies, and for who traveled the longest distance..."

I don't have any babies, and I would only be traveling from Michigan, so I don't aspire to win any of these prizes.

I certainly wouldn't win any prize for my high school experiences, either.

High school in the suburbs of Chicago, as portraved in movies such as "Risky Business" and "Ordinary People", was far from ordinary.

Most kids had everything — cars, money, clothes all but the assurance that comes from trying and achieving life on your own.

Lack of assurance mixed into a bunch of "cool" kids makes for some pretty desperate and cruel human beings.

I had the unique occasion to attend a different school for one year smack in the middle of high school. This earned me the reputation as an "outsider" and taught me a few lessons about friendship.

The years passed; Somehow I survived them and eventually became the wiser for it.

When spring of this year came and went, and aninvitation to the big August event still hadn't materialized, I only half-wondered.

In the back of my mind, I maintained a crazy.

notion that I might just want to go.

I dug out my old yearbooks, unopened since graduation, and became curiously anxious to reminisce from the safe distance of adulthood. I turned to the page of my senior picture.

It was gone. No photo, no caption, no mention of me at all.

Squinting into the reaches of my memory, I tried to recall whether that photo had ever been taken, or whether some final act of cruelty had rendered me into nothingness.

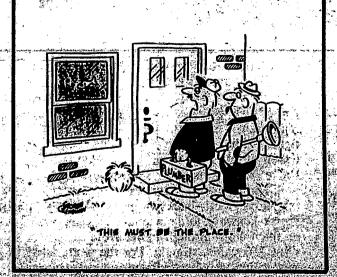

I couldn't remember.

Just as well, I sighed.

I made a mental note to tell my mom what to say should anyone, by chance, call to inquire of me

"Tell them you can't find me," I would tell her. I'd choose the missing person list over the yearbook any old day, I decided.

Right air of abandon

Fitzgerald

In her book "Til Politics Do Us Part," Paula Blanchard reveals she was parted forever from her peignoir on the first night of her honeymoon with the future > governor of Michigan. She wrote that, after "tentative and tender" lovemaking (not tough, tested, trusted?), the peignoir was left "somewhere in the bed sheets in the Holiday

It would be more classy if Blanchard claimed she deliberately threw the peignoir away after using it only

According to my favorite newspaper, Blanchard offered publishing rights to excerpts from her book to whichever Detroit daily newspaper hired her as a columnist. This prompted several people to ask what sort of bribe I paid to become a Free Press columnist.

Those nosy questions were suffering under the misguided impression that column writing is an easy, highly-paid position well worth coveting. Actually it's a 24-hour-a-day job - I wake up after midnight and scribble column ideas on a sheet if I can't find my peignoir. My hourly pay was higher in 1947 when I fetched auto parts in a Chrysler plant. Paula Blanchard is fortunate neither daily made her a columnist. She can earn more money for less labor continuing to write a kiss-a-future-governorand-lose-your-pajamas books.

(In fairness, it should be mentioned that Blanchard subsequently denied she told a Free Press reporter she wanted to trade book excerpts for a column. However, I'm forced to believe my favorite newspaper. It's part of the terms of my employment under the Joint Operating Agreement which also require all employees to understand the JOA was necessary because the Free Press and News couldn't make a profit operating independently, and just because they're still losing money doesn't mean I should make smarty suggestions about forming a DJJMOA - Double Jointed Junk Mail Operating Agreement - with Farmer Jack.)

The truth is the Free Press hired me because I promised to be a classy columnist. On my employment application, I indicated my class by saying I wanted to emulate Bugsy Siegel, a successful Las Vegas gangster so classy he wore a pair of socks only once and then discarded them.

It was my ambition to throw my once-worn socks out the bedroom window so an awed world could watch the classy pile of socks grow, day by day, until it reached my 26th-floor apartment. The only reason I've never done it is my wife threatened that if she didn't have half a pair of my socks to lose in the washing machine every Monday, she'd lose my shirts instead, and wearing mismatched socks wasn't as embarrassing as wearing shirtless neckties.

Bugsy Siegel was shot dead many years ago, and I'd forgotten the true meaning of class until recently when I read about movie producer Don Simpson ("Days of Thunder"), in Gentlemen's Quarterly magazine. Simpson said he wore black Levis once and then tossed them because "They shrink about a half-inch when you wash them . . . Also, the color drops off just that much. I like black to be what I call technical black. I can afford it. One time only, and they're out."

Is that impressive class or what?

My dictionary says a peignoir is a "garment worn while combing the hair; a woman's loose negligee." If Paula Blanchard's book said she used a peignoir once and threw it out the window, even though she combed her hair several times a day, she might be writing this column

And I might be getting wealthy by working four hours a day writing a she-was-looser-than-her-negligee book about my honeymoon.

My new spouse wasn't a future governor of Michigan but, despite that serious handicap, I think I'd still be able to write an incredibly boring book. Wouldn't you be fascinated to learn my wife and I also stop at Holiday Inns? She insists we park in front of our door, not so she won! have to carry the luggage so far, but so she can keep an eye on our car.

Because I'm so classy, she's afraid I'll drive it once and park it in the motel Dumpster.

Merely seeking own independence

I wish to commend you on last week's editorial in The Clarkston News. It clearly and concisely gives the background and reasoning behind the village's cityhood effort.

In short, the size of the Village of Clarkston and its 100-year-old government have remained relatively small. At the same time, Independence Township and its government have experienced inevitable growth. This growth has now resulted in some differing and conflicting needs between the citizens of our two governmental units.

While this divergence of interests is unfortunate, it is hardly unique to our communities. Rather, it is an occurrence which has repeated itself elsewhere dozens of times in recent decades.

As you note, in such a situation, the only way to assure that the interests of the citizens of both the village and township are well represented is through separate and equal governments. This would eliminate the double layer of government, which is the source of the current conflicts, and would allow both governments to "focus" their "energy" on governing.

Throughout the cityhood process, the village has consistently stated that it seeks cityhood only to maintain its separate government and identity. It seeks no additional township territory, and it has repeatedly stated that, after cityhood, it would like to continue equal and friendly relations with the township, paying a full and fair price for any contractual services provided by the township.

Unfortunately, a lawsuit has been filed by the township to stop the cityhood process. Apparently, this "landmark" lawsuit is based on the novel legal theory that the Boundary Commission had no authority to approve the "incorporation" of the village as a city because the township is protected from "annexation" attempts by the Charter Township Act.

It is interesting to ask why, if this legal argument is so sound, it is only now being raised. It is also interesting to ask why, even though the cityhood and annexation statutes are over a decade old, such a challenge has not been brought elsewhere before.

Finally, it is interesting to note that up until now, the township itself has fully utilized the cityhood process, which it now attacks as illegal.

It appeared before the Boundary Commission and fully argued and briefed its case there, apparently presuming it would prevail. Then, after the Boundary Commission found that Clarkston met all the statutory prerequisites for cityhood, the township supervisor chose to participate in the cityhood election process, endorsing anticityhood campaign literature.

This was, of course, his right as a village resident. However, having "lost" that election, the township and its supervisor now attack the very process they chose to avail themselves of.

It is painfully obvious that this is merely a last desperate attempt to bludgeon the village and its residents into submission with an expensive and wholly unjustified lawsuit. It is also an attempt to nullify the will of the people to continue the cityhood process, as expressed by an overwhelming majority of village voters in a full and fair election.

It is ironic to note that one of the major arguments made by the township to the boundary commission was that since the township supervisor was also a village resident, he could adequately represent the best interests of both village and township residents without any conflict. However, his active support for filing this lawsuit, thereby trying to overturn the results of an election by the very village consituents he claims to represent, amply illustrates that he cannot.

I commend those township board members who voted against the lawsuit, and I urge the other members to reexamine their position. The village currently represents only a tiny fraction of the township's land and tax base.

Through cityhood we are not seeking to expand our borders or "steal" township assets. Rather, we merely seek our independence from Independence Township, as is our right under state law.

William K. Basinger Village Trustee

Good experience

Thank you Independence Township and the Safety Town staff.

To say that I'm impressed with the Safety Town program for four, five and six-year-olds would be an understatement.

That program is probably the best thing that could ever be experienced by a young child. A parent can stress safety rules at home, but in this program, the children really experience the concepts first-hand.

In groups of four-children-per-teacher, they "live" in the Clarkston Safety Town Village as professionals from the police, fire, Coast Guard, poison center, animal safety, railroad, gun safety and school bus areas teach them at their intellectual level.

The children enthusiastically love the program, and we parents feel a lot better seeing all of the safety heabits our children are learning put into practice.

Thank you for an incredible experience!

UP residents ask for help to keep control of land

The landowners and sportsmen of the Upper Peninsula are fighting for their very existence.

Because our numbers are few and our land is vast and fairly wild, we are being threatened as no citizen of the United States should be threatened. We need the help of every citizen in the state of Michigan, and we pray that when you read the following account you will decide to help us.

Recently, Representative Dale Kildee of Flint introduced House Bill 4019 designating 635 miles of 14 Michigan rivers either as scenic, recreational or wild. Twelve of the 14 rivers are in the Upper Peninsula, and all are protected by the Michigan Natural Rivers Act.

You may be wondering why the federal government feels it is necessary to legislate protection for rivers already protected by the state.

When this question was asked of Larry Rosenthal, the Kildee aide responsible for the writing of HB 4019, he explained it was done to insure that no hydro-electric dams could be built on these rivers.

That is also covered under the Michigan Natural Rivers Act. We should explain that the bill introduced by Kildee would place all these rivers and the surrounding lands under the jurisdiction of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act of 1968, which is a federal act.

The condemnation allowed under this act is what scares us the most. Although we have been assured by everyone concerned, from Rep. Dale Kildee himself to our own local forest service personnel, that there will be no condemnation on the river frontage of these 14 rivers, we are still very leary. And with good reason.

We just spent two days in Minnesota visiting the Upper and Lower St. Croix Rivers on a tour arranged for us by several of the people who lost their land on these rivers to the federal government under condemnation proceedings.

When asked how this could happen, they explained that they had the same assurances we have been given and they were not worth the breath it took to state them. They even gave us copies of letters from their own legislators promising that they would not lose their land and homes to condemnation.

They told us such unbelievable horror stories that we had them put on video tape so everyone could see and hear for themselves just what happened to these people.

The land that was taken from them supposedly for the purpose of building new public access sites was never used for that purpose. The homes condemned so they could be used as park service offices and headquarters were left to just fall apart or be destroyed by vandals.

One of these homes was on the National Historic Register as one of the historic sites to see in northern Minnesota. It is no more because after removing the slate roof, the park service just left it.

After vandals broke most of the windows and destroyed the inside, it burned to the ground. Cause of the fire was and still is unknown. To our way of thinking, that is a criminal waste on the part of the Federal Park Service.

There were three things that all the people we talked to agreed on:

- 1. The river and the land along the river are in much worse shape since being taken over by the federal government
- 2. The public access sites these people lost their homes for never came to pass. The only thing added to the river are floating restrooms for the use of the canoe people.
- 3. The federal government lied to these people from the very start. This caused extreme mental anguish as well as the loss of their homes.

After much pressure from the people of the U.P., the chairman of the subcommittee, Bruce Vento, agreed to hold a hearing on the bill in Marquette on July 14, 1990. We were notified of the date two weeks in advance, just in time for the Fourth of July week.

It gave people very little time to get their testimony ready to be able to present credible testimony against this bill. But we are sure the short notice over the largest holiday week of the year was just an oversight on their part.

There were may people who would have liked to have had their testimony heard, but they limited the number to six from each side.

It seems to us that everyone should have been able to speak as this bill is going to have an effect on their lives forever. But they did tell us that we all had 10 days in which to send in our written testimony, which didn't make a lot of sense as the bill was scheduled for mark-up before the full house on July 19.

That didn't even give them time to study the testimony from the hearing, much less read and evaluate any written testimony that was submitted. The mark-up date could not possibly be changed because of Mr. Vento's very busy schedule.

Which leads us to the conclusion that the hearing in Marquette was just done to appease us in hopes that we would stop bothering them. But all it did was make many of us very angry that these legislators felt we could be put off so easily.

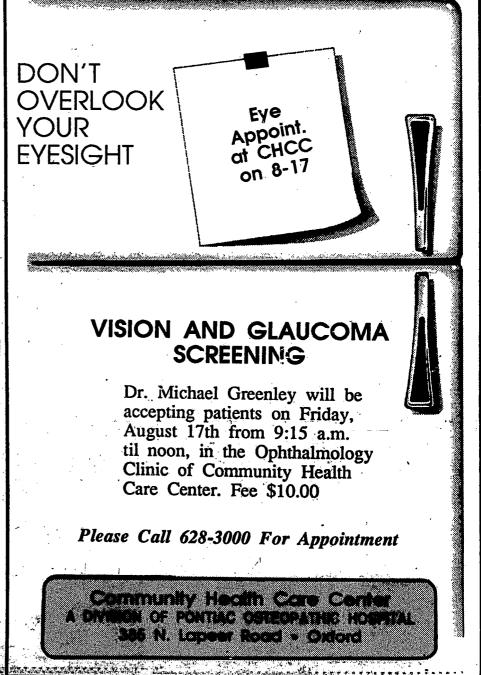

We know there are a great many of you from the Lower Peninsula who come to the U.P. to spend your vacation time, and a lot of you own land with camps up here, so we are asking you to help us to preserve life as we now know it in the U.P.

If we are to keep control of our lands and lives, we must all work together toward that goal.

The key person right now is Sen. Carl Levin. We have to make him realize just how widespread opposition is to this bill. There have been many calls and letters to him from the U.P., but to little avail.

The loss of our votes seems to have little effect on him. We need people from all over the state (upper and lower) to write to him asking for his opposition to this bill.

It is a sure thing that this bill will be going to the Senate in short order, so we are going to have to stop it

Congressman Bob Davis is violently opposed to this bill, but he is going to need a lot of support if he is to be able to defeat it.

So please, write to your congressman and ask him to support Mr. Davis in his efforts to defeat this bill. If we let this bill become law, we will never really have any control over what happens to our land and our homes. Once the federal government gets a hold of anything, they never give it back.

People with children in school and property owners should remember that they are going to be hit doubly hard by this bill. Any land that ends up belonging to the federal government is off the tax rolls almost immediately.

In order to maintain schools, hospitals and local governments, the property taxes of the remaining private land owners will have to go up to make up the difference.

The tax equalization laws in Michigan means that each and every one of us will have to carry a share of the extra load for the land taken off the tax rolls because it belongs to the federal government. This strikes us as very strange because we thought we were supposed to be the

Between the state and federal governments, they already own over half of the U.P. We feel they have no right to ask for more.

They aren't the best caretakers of what they have. We, the state of Michigan, have taken excellent care of our rivers to date and see no reason to believe this will meet these standards one would tend to believe that we must be doing something right. There is no reason to think that will change. If something isn't broken, don't fix it.

Our rivers are an everyday part of our lives, and it is our belief that we do not need federal help to care for what God has given into our keeping.

These rivers had to meet certain standards in order to even be considered, and as they were more than able to .

So please, help us save Michigan's rivers from federal control. All it will take is a few minutes of your time to write or call your legislators in Washington and tell them how you feel about this bill. Michigan's Department of Natural Resources, working with sports groups throughout the state, have done an excellent job of protecting the rivers and should be allowed to continue without federal interference.

As I approached the Independence Township home of Joe Falls, the Detroit News sports columnist was taking out the Northrup, Morris, Perles and others Falls has taken swipes at over the years have probably thought the columnist has always been into garbage anyway.

Falls has been one of the most recognizable faces on Detroit sports pages for decades. At 62 years old, he still will criticize someone or something when he feels it's worth criticizing, but he does admit that he has mellowed in recent years.

"I have come to understand that there are two sides to a story," said Falls, who said the past 13 years have been the best years of his life.

Falls said he is more "contemplative" in recent years and loves the peace and quiet he finds with his family, his two dogs and six cats and the tall trees in his backyard.

He has mellowed. But like a batter getting more patient at the plate, waiting

"... I've been around so long, I feel I have a responsibility to say some things that other people aren't going to say."

Joe Falls

for the right pitch, Falls will still let his readers know what is especially troubling

"I don't consider myself the con-paper, but because I've been around so long, I feel I have a responsibility to say some things that other people aren't going to say," said Falls, who was born and raised in New York.

Falls said he has learned how not to staylangry for too long of a period. And he also has learned from other writers.

"The writers that I respect have a sense of quiet about them," said Falls. "If you keep jumping up and down about everything, people are going to get tired of that after awhile. When you say something that's important, you better save it and say it at the right time. Otherwise, it's the guy that cried 'Wolf."

Some of the recent ire that has found its way into his columns have concerned the length of the sports seasons, the misconception that major league baseball talent is improving and the way Michigan State University has handled the battle between its president and the athletic director.

But Falls not only finds fault on the field or court, he also said his profession deserves some criticism.

He calls the JOA between the Detroit News and the Detroit Free Press "a corruption of everything I've believed in newspapering. They sold out newspapering in Detroit."

He also dislikes the shrinkage of the sports pages over the years.

"Now we have to put three times as much sports into 40 percent less space," said Falls.

And because of that shrinkage, Falls said the first thing to be reduced in a big city newspaper like the News is high school sports coverage.

Falls said that's unfortunate because high school sports are often a way to get readers back into the innocence of sports.

Falls had a unique chance to escape to that innocence last spring for three weeks when he traveled around the state covering high school basketball during March Madness.

"I wrote as good as I've ever written in my life. The reason being is that it was high school, the kids were beautiful, the games were beautiful, the coaches were beautiful, the ADs were beautiful. We're talking about the purity of sports. It was the finest three weeks of the year. I can cover the World Series, the Superbowl, the Kentucky Derby and the Indy 500, and JOE FALLS traveled to Minneapolis last weekend not to cover the Tigers vs. the Twins, the Red Wings vs. the North Stars, the Lions vs. the Vikings, or the Pistons vs. the Timberwolves, but rather to help out at the international Special Olympics festivities. Falls also volunteers his time at the Oakland County chapter.

I would not enjoy anything as much as I enjoyed the three weeks with the high school kids," said Falls.

Falls enjoyed the chance to cover the high schools but he didn't enjoy how most of his stories were put in the back pages of the sports section, being edged out by pro sports stories.

"They didn't think it was important. They don't understand that when you write about one high school, you write about all high schools. And when you write about all high schools, you write about all the young people in the state and young people everywhere. And they're our future readers. We can't figure that out," said Falls.

Despite the negatives, Falls' love affair with sports and his job still continues.

"In 45 years, I have never been bored for one day," said Falls. "I love the freedom of expression and the chance to be creative."

Falls has covered nearly every sport and for a person "petrified of planes," he has traveled all over to do so, including four trips to Europe.

Falls calls his writing and reporting skills "OK", but said his biggest strength is his ability to never run out of ideas. He has never had writer's block, not even while spending extra hours writing, as he has lately on a book about Pistons' coach Chuck Daly.

The columnist said the younger writers of today are often better wordsmiths but fail to obtain an experienced point-of-view because of not continuing to write sports as many years as their predecessors.

If he had not been a columnist, Falls said he would have liked being a teacher. In fact, Oakland and Wayne State Universities once asked him to teach. Falls said he was excited, at first, about the prospect of teaching and thought of a day's lesson plan. But as he continued to think about it, he asked himself, "What would I do the second day?"

So Falls has stayed out of the classroom, but he never has any problems finding room for a new idea in his columns.

Get the cobwebs off those pencils, find a sharpener and make sure your eraser hasn't been bitten off.

School has been out for about two months, but it's time for a hot August summer edition of Sports 101.

As always, you will be asked to answer multiple-choice questions. But the best part is you are correct in whatever answer you choose.

After the test, your homework is to enjoy the remaining days of summer. Take a swim, catch a fish, go canoeing or play some tennis because before you know it, you will find yourself in some department store buying a new folder, sheets of typing paper or a 4-color ink pen.

VINTAGE and Classic race cars were burning rubber at the Waterford Hills Race Track in Independence Township this weekend during the Sixth Annual Meadow Brook Historic Races. The 1969 Lola T160 (above right), with the distinctive air wing, won the last race on Sunday. Along with the races, downtown Clarkston was the site of the "Concours in Depot Park" Friday night, which allowed people to get a close-up view of the historic cars. Opinion of Bill Myers

Some books should be filed under fiction

William A. Myers is a retired Lapeer County editor and investments manager from Boca Raton, Fla.

Barron's magazine has viewed with alarm some market figures:

Dividend yield on the stock averages is now not much over 3%.

 Prices, on average, are 19 times earnings, for an earnings yield of 5.26 percent. If you got all the earnings, you'd only have a return of 5.26 percent.

 The market prices of the stocks average three times the book value.

All these indexes are at high water marks. Is it downhill from now on?

Investing is a problem of choices. If you think the stock market is too high, what's another choice?

If it's current return on your money, 3 percent ain't much. Say you're in a 28 percent bracket for the Feds and maybe another 5 percent for your state and local income taxes (unless you live in this great state of Florida, where we don't have state and local income taxes).

So say taxes take a third of that dividend income. You have 2 percent left. Big deal.

Here's a choice for you to consider: some tax-free municipal bonds. A nice young man from Dean Witter just called with some A+ Utah Housing bonds, yielding 7.25

The stock salesman will counter this and tout "growth" stocks. That's a beautiful term - growth - but things often don't turn out that way. The premier blue chip of them all in the growth field is IBM - or was. In 1986, it "grew" from 162 to 120.

But let's say you're lucky and your "growth" stock does go up in value 5 percent a year. That will be capital gains, and now they'll be taxed at 28 percent, so your net after tax will be 3.6 percent. Your dividend won't be as high as the 3 percent of the averages because this is a growth stock. Say 2 percent. On that 2 percent, you'll be taxed at regular income rates.

Altogether, if things turn out right, maybe 5 percent in total return after taxes on capital gains and dividends.

Looking at the Barron's figure of stocks selling at three times the book value, we get into a whole new topic. Don't go away.

To pass along what I recall of one quarter of Accounting 101 at that Palo Alto school of learning: "book value" is the total of what you or a company own after subtracting your debts. The debt part is simple enough; the bank will help you with that. The other part is in the lap of your CPA.

You buy a computer at $15,000. You depreciate it over say, 71/2 years, or $2,000 a year. After three years, the contraption is carried at a "book value" of $9,000, i.e., $15,000 minus $6,000 (three times $2,000).

What's it really worth? Is it really half-obsolete now, and unsaleable? What's it worth on a trade-in? Maybe $4,500. For an outright sale - nothing.

If this is the only asset, then your book value of $9,000 is just double what it should be.

I own a Datsun 280ZX. Cost $15,000. It's my business car, and IRS let me depreciate it over three years. Since it's three years old, the depreciation is used up and my book value is zero. Actually the car is worth about ,500. My book value of zero is understated by $7,500.

These are not far-fetched examples. Granted, in a sizeable operation the distortions might offset each other to quite an extent. But you're still using accounting figures which ignore real-world values and the earning power of such assets.

THE RESERVE OF THE PARTY OF THE

I recall our bank back in Lapeer; Mich. The building was 40 years old at the end of the war and written down to $90,000, even with additions. But it was serving its purpose. The funds not tied up in the building were out earning money as loans.

In the usual pattern, the old building was rebuilt to make it stylish, but at great expense. There was $1 million poured into the made-over structure - money that had been earning 7 percent. The $70,000 income that was eliminated didn't come back in as earnings just because there was a new building. Book-value of assets hadn't changed, but earnings fell.

Book value doesn't mean a devil of a lot. It's what the company is earning that counts. Some banks sell at 50 percent over "book". Others sell at a discount to this accounting figure.

Barron's was alarmed at the current figure of stock prices being 300 percent over book. Since 300 percent is high historically, it's something to worry about.

Calculating net worth:

You may be better off financially than you think

Bob and Jennifer Smith own a three-bedroom condo in the city, a vacation home in the mountains and a Mercedes Benz.

To top that, they've just returned home from a threeweek vacation in the South Pacific.

If this description makes you green with envy, look again. Bob and Jennifer are swimming in mortgages and personal loans, and the credit card bills from their vacation have sunk them further into debt.

According to the Michigan Association of CPPAs, lifestyle can be an inaccurate reflection of wealth. If you own only a small portion of the mortgage on your house, your car loan is paid off, and you have a solid nest egg of IRAs. savings accounts, and some stocks and bonds, your net worth is probably much more than the free-spending Smith's.

In other words, you may not be as rich as Rockefeller, but you may be worth more than you think.

What is net worth?

Simply put, net worth is the difference between what you won and what you owe. What this means is that sometimes the true measure of wealth is not who owns more, but who owes less.

Let's look at an example.

Bob and Jennifer recently purchased their $200,000 condo with a $30,000 down payment and $170,000 mortgage. Thus condo accounts for only $30,000 of their net worth

On the other hand, Joe and Sara own a $100,000 house and owe just $5,000 on the mortgage. As a result, their home represents a healthy $95,000 in net worth. Calculating and evaluating your net worth

Of course, net worth cannot be judged solely by one's real estate holdings and mortgage balances.

To calculate your net worth, add up the market value of all your assets. In most cases, these will include your home, car, the cash surrender value of life insurance policies, personal property such as jewelry or furs, bank accounts and other types of investments

If you have IRAs or other retirement plans, add in Sometimes the true measure of wealth is not who owns more, but who owes less.

the cash value of each account.

Pension funds should also be included in your list of assets, but only if they have a present value.

If you are not yet vested and the funds have no current measurable worth, you should not view them as assets.

The same is true of any other resource that you will have access to only if you eventually satisfy a certain requirement, such as working a minimum number of years at one firm or reaching a specified age.

Once you determine the total value of your assets, subtract your liabilities, including such items as the amount due on mortgages, car loans, consumer loans, taxes owed and credit card balances, the figure you obtain is your net worth.

By itself, a net-worth statement is simply a snapshot of your financial standing at one particular time. But don't underestimate its importance.

Your first net-worth calculation serves as a benchmark against which all future calculations will be measured.

By comparing snapshots of your finances taken at different times, you can gauge your financial progress—or downfall.

In other words, if you are striving to reduce consumer debt and accumulate assets, a semi-annual or annual net-worth calculation will provide you with a vivid and indisputable account of how close you are to obtaining your goal.

Improving your finances

Let's assume that you have calculated your net worth and, to your horror, discover that you actually have a negative net worth.

Should you worry? The answer depends on your age and circumstances.

If you have just obtained your first job and your first home, there is nothing unusual or alarming about carrying a student loan or purchasing new furniture with credit cards.

Remember, most of us build net worth slowly over the years.

As a result, younger individuals tend to have a much lower net worth than older people who have had time to establish themselves.

If you are young and concerned about your net worth, CPAs recommend that you save at lest five percent of your after-tax income. In addition, you should start building an emergency cash fund equivalent to three months of living expenses.

If you are nearing retirement, you should take a long, hard look at your net worth statement.

Make sure that you consider not only the bottom line — how much are you worth — but also the types of assets you hold.

In most cases you should probably begin transferring assets to investments that will generate dividend or interest payments that can supplement your retirement benefits.

For example, if you and your spouse are the only ones living in a four-bedroom house, you may want to sell it and trade down to a smaller, more manageable home.

Such a move will enable you to convert the equity in your home into cash for investments.

And if you are age 55 or older, you may be able to turn your home into an income-producing asset without having to pay taxes on the capital gain.

As long as you meet the age, use and ownership requirements, you can generally exclude from your taxable income up to $125,000 of the profit you realize from selling your home.

Your CPA can provide you will all the details about this valuable once-in-a-lifetime tax break.

Regardless of your age or personal circumstances, the Michigan Association of CPAs recommends that you begin to monitor your financial health.

By calculating your net worth, you may discover that you're better off than you thought.

Senior scholarships

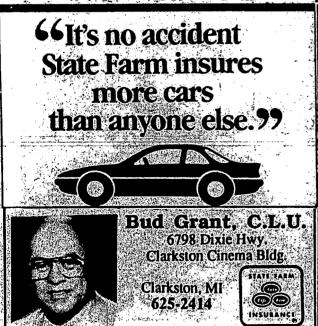

The Area Agency on Aging announced the establishment of the MSG Everett J. Soop Scholarship for Adult Students.

Sponsored by the Michigan Society of Gerontology, the purpose of the scholarships is to encourage and support deserving older students in their pursuit of education in Michigan colleges and universities.

Awards of approximately $400 each will be awarded annually to two persons over 50-years-old who have been accepted by an accredited Michigan college or university, who will carry at least twelve credit hours of approved study in pursuit of an academic degree, and who are in need of financial assistance.

The deadline for submitting applications for the 1990-91 academic year is Aug. 10, 1990. Applications are available by calling the Michigan Society of Gerontology at (517) 372-7391 or by writing MSG, 209 Seymour Ave., Suite 2, Lansing Mich., 489330-1113.

A restaurant for lovers of chicken and good health

BY TRACY KING Clarkston News Associate Editor

An architect by trade, Lou Iordanou has set his sights on chicken.

Lou experimented with chicken marinades and preparation techniques for nine months. He nowapplies the mastery to a new restaurant, J.L. Wishbone, at 5592 Dixie Highway.

The aroma filtering from behind the counter is one of good, hearty, home-grilling.

This grub is more than good-tasting, however — it's good for you, says Lou.

Everybody is health conscious," he retorts. "This restaurant caters to that."

The chicken is flame-broiled without oil, which lowers it's cholesterol, fat and calorie content, according to Lou.

Though he wouldn't reveal his secret recipe, the chicken marinates in a blend of water and spices for a full _ 24-hours before cooking making it moist, tender and

Though Lou admits he's not a chicken "fan", he claims to have created a recipe for some of the best chicken he has ever tasted.

Besides pieces of chicken, J.L. Wishbone serves up ribs, kabobs, chicken stir-fry, salads of the Greek, Chef, potato and pasta variety, complete side dishes including mashed potatoes and gravy, cole slaw and the ever-present pita bread.

Visitors to J.L. Wishbone either order and carry-out their meals or sit amongst the spotless blue booths in the restaurant.

"I didn't want to use that olive green that every fast-food restaurant uses," he explains. "The next color most pleasing to the eye is blue. "It looks clean," he adds.

The restaurant business isn't completely foreign to Lou, he admits. His family has owned restaurants for years. His mother, sister and several close friends now work with him in managing and staffing J.L. Wishbone.

A resident of Flint, Lou chose the Dixie location for several reasons.

"I really like the area," he says. "The area is booming, especially Clarkston.

"I thought it would be a high traffic area," he continues, "but with all the construction...." he shrugs. "I've never had a chance to see what normal business would be like.'

Lou says he has a small but loyal clientele that visit his restaurant five to six times a week.

"My goal is to get people in here to try (the chicken)," Lou says. "I know once they try it, they'll like it."

J.L. Wishbone is open Mon. through Sat. from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m., and Sunday from 12 noon to 8 p.m.

Use fertilizer safely for growth, safe environment

Careful use of fertilizers around the home saves money, promotes plant growth, and keeps fertilizer nutrients out of surface and groundwater.

Careless use of fertilizers can lead to a host of problems ranging from scorched turf to contaminated drinking water.

"The best guide to fertilizers use around the home is a soil test," says Darryl Warncke, extension soils specialist at Michigan State University.

"Soil test results include fertilizer recommendations for lawns, landscape ornamentals, vegetables, garden flowers or whatever crop you stipulated.

"Following these recommendations should promote optimum plant growth and reduce the chance that fertilizer nutrients will end up in surface or groundwater," he adds.

Careless use of fertilizers can lead to a host of problems ranging from scorched turf to contaminated drinking water.

How you apply the recommended nutrients is also important, Warncke notes.

For instance, when fertilizing lawns, be sure your spreader is calibrated properly before you begin.

Apply fertilizer only to the turf, not to driveways, sidewalks and streets, where rain would wash it into storm sewers or, in rural areas, roadside ditches. From there, nutrients would probably go directly into streams and rivers.

Another way to reduce the likelihood of fertilizer movement away from the target area is to divide the recommended amount into two or more applications.

This is especially recommended on sandy soils. Rain or irrigation water moves through these soils rapidly, Warncke explains, and can take soluble nitrogen with it, removing it from the root zone of plants before they have a chance to take it up.

In the vegetable or flower garden, try banding fertilizer two to three inches away from and a little below rows of seeds rather than broadcasting it before tilling, Warncke suggests.

Banding or side-dressing nitrogen after plants are growing puts less total fertilizer in the garden because it puts it where crop plants will soon take it up.

Broadcasting is less efficient and uses more fertilizer because all the soil receives equal treatment, even though much of the area will be vacant space between

Another strategy is to apply fertilizer only when plants are actively growing so they have the best chance of taking up the nutrients before they can be leached or eroded away.

"In July when the temperature is 98 degrees and it hasn't rained in three weeks and the lawn is the color of wheat straw, there's not much point in putting fertilizer on it," Warncke points out. "The grass is dormant — it isn't growing — and unless you're ready to water it faithfully, fertilizing is pointless. And it may result in the nutrients being washed away by the first summer thunderstorm to come along."

The best intentions in the world will go awry if the soil pH is out of kilter and the nutrients applied aren't available to plants, Warncke notes.

Soil test results include the pH, a measure of the acidity of the soil. If it's much outside a range of 5.8 to 6.8 — slightly acidic — certain nutrients will be unavailable to plants, regardless of the quantities present.

When the soil is too acidic for the intended crop or crops, soil test recommendations will include a prescription for lime. For certain specialty crops, such as blueberries and azaleas, soil that isn't acid enough is a common problem.

In this case, soil additives to acidify the soil may be called for.

"In either case, changing the pH is necessary to enable plants to make use of the nutrients you provide," Warncke explains.

Improving soil structure by incorporating organic matter can also play a role in fertilizer management, Warncke says. Adding organic matter to sandy soil will help it retain moisture from rain or irrigation and, with it, fertilizer nutrients that might otherwise leach away.

Adding organic matter to poorly drained clay soils will allow water to soak in rather than run off and will improve soil aeration.

Both these changes will help plants to grow better and so make better use of the nutrients you apply.

"Much of the concern about fertilizer nutrients in surface and groundwater is related to commercial agriculture," Warncke notes. "The impact of any one household's use of fertilizer probably won't be great. But when you multiply that impact by the number of urban and suburban lawns and gardens, it's easy to see that better backyard fertilizer management can be a significant factor in protecting our water resources."

Widows may gain by working after benefits begin

Many widows receive widow benefits as early as possible, even though this means benefits will be reduced.

But working even after benefits begin can still be in a widow's long-term best interest.

Sometimes an early retirement decision is voluntary in name only. Even though a widow might feel it would be in her long range best interest to wait to begin receiving benefits in monthly checks, she may have no alternative.

If she is not working she may need her widow benefits to live on as soon as she is eligible.

The earliest a non-disabled widow can receive benefits age 60, but benefits are reduced for each month she is less than age 65.

But the decision to receive early benefits does not mean a widow should not consider entering the work force after benefits begin, especially if she is in need of the additional income.

A widow under age 65 can earn up to $6,840 in 1990 without those earnings affect her Social Security benefits in any way.

However, each $2 in earning over that amount will result in an offset of $1 of benefits.

But what most widows do not realize is that at age 62 and again at age 65, widow benefits are recomputerd.

If some monthly benefits have been withheld due to earnings over the earnings limit, future benefits will be increased.

In effect, a widow who works between ages 60 and 65 may suffer little lifetime loss. (The same is true for workers who retire before age 65 and then lose benefits by returning to work.)

If a husband retires before age 65, however, benefits to his widow are "capped" by his retirement age even if she works to age 70.

Therefore, a widow whose husband retired early should check with her local Social Security office about her specific case.

After age 65, the earnings limitation is $9,340 and the offset is $1 for each $3 of excess earnings.

To compensate for benefits lost due to excess earning between ages 65 to 70, delayed retirement credits are added annually to a worker's own Social Security benefits.

These credits, however, seldom help widows because the credits are not added to widow benefits.

Mr. Roosevelt, the oldest son of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, worked as Secretary to the President in the White House when Social Security was implemented, and was a member of Congress when Medicare was enacted into law.

Grub for grilling

Tracy King

In the midst of summer heat, grilling is often the recipe for keeping cool in the kitchen.

The following recipe were created by John Zehnder, food and beverage director at Zehnder's of Frankenmuth.

Polynesian Kabobs

Serves eight adults

32 oz. unsweetened orange juice

4 oz. lime juice

1 tsp. ground ginger

2 tsp. ground cinnamon

2 cups brown sugar

1/2 cup corn starch

1/2 cup cold water

16 ripe sweet strawberries 16 pineapple chunks

16 three-quarter-inch chunks bananas

16 three-quarter-inch chunks kiwi fruit

4 six ounce chicken breasts

3 oz. butter

Place first five ingredients in a medium sized saucepan and heat to boiling. stir occasionally to allows the spices to mix thoroughly with the liquid. Turn heat to low and simmer for 10-15 minutes.

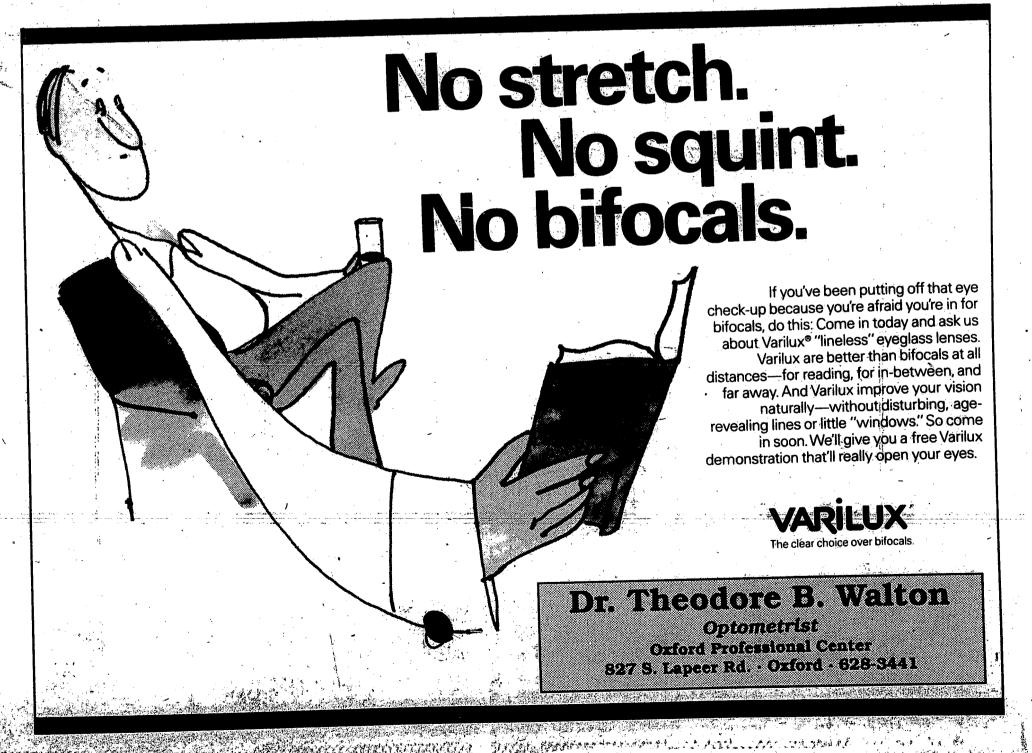

Mix the corn starch and water together and stir until smooth. Return orange juice mixture to a boil and slowly add the corn starch water to the boiling mixture, stirring constantly. Allow to reboil and turn heat to low.

Wash and drain fruit. Dip the bananas in the pineapple juice to stop them from turning brown. Set fruit aside.

Lightly saute the chicken breast in butter until just done and tender. Cut into one-inch chunks.

Using a five-inch wooden skewer, place the items on the stick as follows from the bottom up: kiwi, chicken, banana, chicken, pineapple, chicken, strawberry.

Marinate the kabobs in the warm juice for 10 minutes and chill before serving.

Thumpers leap to state victory

Members of the Busy Bee Thumpers 4-H Club in Springfield Township performed well at a July 13 statewide 4-H competition.

The Thumpers — so named because they show rabbits - competed as a team and as individuals, bringing home lots of ribbons.

It was a super day," said Mary Keen, the adult supervisor of the group.

Each member placed in the individual competition: Kelly Thomas of Lake Orion, senior division; Karen and Katy Golden of Rose Township, intermediate division; and Robert Keen of Springfield Township, also intermediate division.

As a team, the Thumpers were required to compete at the senior level and placed first in quiz bowl, first in carcass judging, third in live rabbit and fifth in skill-a-

Bicycle use restricted in some recreation areas

The use of bicycles, including mountain bikes, has been restricted in state parks and recreation areas where environmental problems and user conflicts have occurred, announced Director David Hale of the Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

The new orders, which take immediate effect, restrict bicycle use to roads and parking lots in most state parks and recreation areas.

Bikes will be allowed on trails in 27 state parks and recreation areas where their use has been determined to be environmentally appropriate and not in conflict with other trail use.

Bicycling is a legitimate outdoor recreation activity," Hales said, "and the state should provide appropriate places for that use."

Hales added that the increase use of mountain bikes during the last two years created problems when they were used on environmentally sensitive state park trails or in areas where they conflict with other existing recreation

"Thanks to the efforts of our newly formed citizens advisory committee on trails, we have worked out a way to prevent problems and accommodate this growing sport, Hales said.

'After initial concerns about the proposed regulations," said Dwain Abramowski, chair of the Bicycling Advisory Committee, "I found the DNR and responsible bikers have the same common interests, and we were able to identify those areas that needed protection and begin the process to establish bike trails in the right places. This will well serve the growing sport of mountain biking."

The new orders, which will be posted in state parks and recreation areas, also direct the establishment of designated biking trails in the 27 state parks and recreation areas.

Trails in these parks will remain open until the posting of trails is completed in late spring.

My Grandson's Wedding

by Georgene VanAntwerp August is a special month this year, For my grandson gets married, And I sure want to be there.

Oh, it will be a big one; flowers, smiles, tears. People linging up and going up the church stairs. Candles lit and music playing, Inside a magical moment we'll share When my grandson is standing so proud In front of the church there.

Here comes his bride, a vision of light. The scene is all set and the sermon is read. The two turn and face us all sitting in the church pews, What a sight it is,

For here comes my grandson and his new bride For all the world to see.

Yes! I''l be there, you can bet! For this Grandma G. is all ready and all set For her grandson's wedding.

Georgene VanAntwerp lives on Beaver Island, St. James, Mich., formerly of Clarkston. She dedicates her poem to her grandson Daniel J. Lewis and his bride-to-be Penny M. Barnard, who will marry Aug. 11.

Performances keep 3 CHS graduates on their toes

BY SANDRA G. CONLEN Clarkston News Staff Writer

Three 1990 Clarkston High School graduates are singing their way through summer vacation — and earning money at the same time.

Matt Oliver, Rebecca Abdoo and Mark Young perform in a song and dance group while earning money for college in the fall. By the end of their touring season, the group will have given 45 performances.

Oakland County Parks and Recreation sponsors the six-member group, which sings a collection of George M. Cohen tunes.

The group finished performing Aug. 7 and were to travel to Traverse City to perform for the Freedom Festival on Aug. 11.

"It's a lot of fun," Mark said.

The troupe uses nine Cohen songs in a patriotic medley — dancing to the tunes as they perform the different songs.

Rebecca said the group does a lot of performances for nursing homes and retirement homes.

"A 95-year-old man stood up and saluted," Rebecca said.

It's music from the era in which a lot of the retirees were raised, said Matt.

The group is learning firsthand how to take a show on the road and deal with the problems.

"Each performance, it's something different."

Mark Young

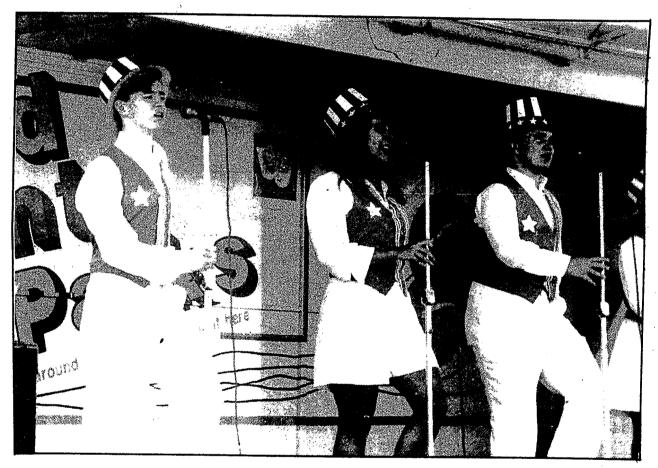

Every performance will have some little glitch, but the group adheres to the old saying: "The show must go on."

Rebecca's parasol broke during one performance, sending her to search for another, and she turned up an umbrella, which she used even though it was missing the ruffles.

"Each performance, it's something different," Mark

When their performing season is finished, the three plan to put their summer earnings toward college expenses.

This fall Mark plans heads to Western Michigan University, Kalamazoo; Rebecca will go to Grand Valley State University, Allendale; and Matt is off to Oakland Community College.

West Point challenging, rewarding for CHS grad

BY TRACY KING Clarkston News Associate Editor

When K.C. Baron prepared to graduate from Clarkston High School in 1988, he set his sights on the United States Military Academy, West Point, N.Y.

He knew the odds were against him. Of the 14,000-15,000 applicants, only 10 percent — or 1,400 — are accepted.

Still, K.C. completed the necessary requirements, soliciting recommendation letters and interviewing with legislators to obtain a congressional nomination.

He listed his accomplishments in high school, which included work on student council, the football field and on the track team. He submitted his grade-point-average, his SAT scores and his admittance into the National Honor Society.

And it worked. K.C. Baron, son of Larry and Margaret Baron of Hummingbird, Independence Township, was admitted to the military academy in the fall of 1988.

"It went well for me," K.C. says of the application process. "It was kind of difficult to do all the foot work on my own," he admits, "Not a lot of people at the high school knew enough about the process to push me through."

Two years later, as he enters his junior year, K.C. Baron continues to push himself to new heights.

He will work this summer as assistant drill sergeant at Fort Sill, Okla., training a platoon of new privates entering the Army. Earlier, he attended Airborne School at Fort Benning, Ga. for three weeks.

The assignments are determined by officials at West Point, based on an individual's interests and performance, Overall, the experience at West Point has been challenging, according to K.C.

"It's definitely tough," he admits. "It's a school environment with a bit of military thrown in."

Students are required to participate in intramural athletics, whether it be football, cross country or team handball

Though K.C. admits that life at West Point is a constant challenge, the experience fits into his personal agenda.

"I've always believed in serving the nation and in maintaining a duty concept for myself," he adds. "I have a lot of self-minded goals."

"(At West Point) I'm getting a four-year education worth about $200,000.

"They're paying me and then I pay them with five years of Army obligation," K.C. explains.

When his education and Army service is complete, K.C. expects to make the military his career.

"Hopefully," he says. "I'll see how the Army goes. I'd like to stay 20 years."

For payer K.C. is intent on his study of political

For now, K.C. is intent on his study of political science and may go for his law degree.

Given his record, he'll likely come out with flying colors.

In Your Leopard Skin Cocoon, You Leave the Room By Tom Erickson

In the night we dropped our skins, In the light of darkness, We washed our sins.

As paratroopers, we dropped our identities. As parasites, we loved one another. Twisting through the night, Dancing to some inward tune. I killed your identity, I think it was You laughed ... In your leopard skin cocoon, Sucking my breath, you left the room. Mate, checkmate ... From corner to corner, We entangled our brains; In the pinkest of blue light. Our loyalty lasted only through the night. Photofloods flash, Bodies leave the room ... For this is America, too soon. Fast cars, whiskey bars, full moon. In darkness we love, In light our skin returns. Your identity, yours. My identity, mine. Now solo, separate and two In the night, I love you.

FIREPLACE FLUNKS AS HEATER

Phyllis Braun Associate Broker

QUESTION: Is a fireplace an effective method of heating a house?

ANSWER: When the weather is frightful, the fire is delightful. But as a house-heater, it flunks. It actually does a better job of heating the outside than the area in front of the fireplace. Ninety percent of the heat goes straight up and out. Add to this the extremely high cost of firewood and you have a lot of money going up in smoke. When the fire is not going, be sure the flue is closed or you'll lose 20% of the warm room air out the chimney each hour.

There are ways you can increase the heating efficiency of your fireplace, such as the addition of glass doors, duct vents or hollow tube grates.

YOUR FIREPLACE actually does a better job heating the outside than the area in front of the fireplace.

Muffin-yogurt store offers trendy, tasty treats

BY SANDRA G. CONLEN Clarkston News Staff Writer

Muffins and yogurt are all the rage, so Tim and Joan Kelly jumped on the bandwagon in April when they opened LB's Muffins and Yogurt.

The inside of the shop is decorated with crisp-looking black and white tile, which gives it a trendy, upbeat look. The aroma of fresh-brewed coffee lures the customer to buy a cup and sit a spell.

But as trendy-looking as the shop is, the trendy menu of muffins and yogurt doesn't lure Tim into believing that

In addition, lunch orders can be faxed to the store at 620-2951, and a meal will be waiting for the customer.

Afternoon yogurt eaters can find bargains on their toppings. The Kellys offer a "happy hour" 3-6 p.m. Monday through Friday, when toppings are half price, Tim says.

LB's offers baseball team discounts to Little League players, and they are considering adding senior citizen discounts

When the cooler fall weather sets in, LB's will offer soups to their lunchtime customers, Tim says.

Some of Tim's summer help will leave when it's time to serve the soup, including two of his three children, who will work at LB's until they return to college in the fall. Kevin, 22, attends Central Michigan University in Mount Pleasant, and Colleen, 20, will return to University of Notre Dame in Indiana.

Daughter Maureen, 24, is a graduate of Michigan

Technological University, Houghton, but she finds time to help out at LB's after her work is done at General Motors

Joan and Tim hold full-time jobs and leave the dayto-day operation of LB's in the hands of their manager and long-time acquaintance, Elaine Kalinan.

"She's our right hand and our left hand," Tim says of Elaine.

Joan says she has no intention of leaving her career in hospital administration. Tim is a sales representative for a construction fastener company.

What's New in Business

the business won't slack off. Trends come and go, and the Kellys understand that the items they offer may be a passing fad, Tim says.

That's one reason they decided not to buy into a franchise, Tim says.

"In a franchise you can be stuck," says Tim.

By owning his own business, Tim is allowed to market whatever he wants. If trends change, the Kellys can change their menu.

Tim and Joan even came up with their own name for the store. After choosing about four names, they did an informal telephone survey, Tim says.

The name that won out was "Lite Bite," but a local franchised yogurt business uses the same name on some of its products.

The design was already drawn for the Kellys' new name, but after some discussion the "ite" was removed, leaving LB; hence, the name for their new business, Tim

In the store at Independence Pointe on M-15, Independence Township, muffins, yogurt, sandwiches, bread and gourmet coffees are sold.

In marketing the foods, the Kellys are keeping up with current trends.

For the early folks LB's is open at 5 a.m. during the week days, and a "road muffin" is offered for commuters. The special includes coffee, muffin and a paper.

MUFFINS fresh out of the oven are offered at LB's in Independence Pointe. Pictured from

Computers can help run business more efficiently

There's no time like the present to consider automating your business or upgrading your computer system.

According to the Michigan Association of CPAs, the right computer is an investment in your company's growth and overall success. Not only can computers help you run your business more efficiently, but they can also expand your financial management capabilities.

But installing the right computer isn't just a matter of going out and purchasing the latest model. The process of converting your existing records and processes to a computer system can be lengthy and difficult.

Review your needs

Before you visit your local computer store, ask yourself the following questions. Do I really need a computer? What do I hope it will accomplish? Will it be cost-effective to install a new system?

What hardware and software will I need? Does the software I need already exist or will it have to be developed? How much will it cost to do the entire conversion and how long will that process take? How will I train my employees to operate the new system?

Evaluate your current system

Whether you are converting from a manual system or upgrading your existing system, you should begin by evaluating your current operations and identifying problems.

For example, late and inaccurate monthly financial statements or slow turnover of accounts receivable may indicate that it is time for a new or better system.

Next, evaluate your current business procedures to determine which type of system will best satisfy your

For example, you may require a system to help reduce labor costs associated with high clerical involvement. Or, you may need a system to help eliminate repetitious or numerous time-consuming tasks.

Another reason to buy or upgrade a system is if your business requires mathematically complex calculations, highly accurate record keeping and timely preparation of reports.

A properly designed system can help you perform many of the critical business functions of you company, such as speeding the preparation of financial statements and reducing the potential for clerical and computational errors in accounting and other administrative functions.

Selecting Software

Computer software is the term given to the application programs that enable you to run specific tasks, such as word processing or spreadsheets, on the computer.

Software comes in several varieties: general purpose, custom written or industry specific. The number of programs available today makes selection difficult.

But asking certain key questions can help you make the right choice. For instance, how easy is the software to use? Are qualified installers nearby? What is the quality of the documentation? What is the reputation of the vendor for providing good support?

Selecting Hardware

Hardware includes the computer itself, storage devices, terminals and printers. The hardware you select must be fully capable of accepting data, processing it and generating output with a reasonable time.

Whey you are ready to select computer hardware, consider the following factors: present and projected volume of data to be processed; the amount of technical and service support you will receive from the manufacturer; the ease with which you can operate the equipment; the ability to expand or upgrade the equipment; and the reliability of the hardware, the vendor and the manufacturer

You should also take into account environmental considerations such as heat, noise and electrical requirements

After you review your current procedures and determine your software and hardware needs, develop a plan for implementing the system.

Pay special attention to selecting computer operators and to setting up a training program.

Other factors to keep in mind include preparing your current operation for conversion to the system and monitoring the system once it is up and running.

If you don't have the time or expertise to automate your company, you may want to ask your CPA for assistance.

CPAs can help you determine your automation objectives and make recommendations on how to select and install computer systems.

For further advice on selecting a computer, you can request a complimentary copy of the brochure "Connecting Your Business with the Right Computer System."

Send your request with a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Michigan Association of CPAs, P.O. Box 9054, Farmington Hills, Mich., 48333.

How to walk your way into better fitness and health

For centuries, people have taken strolls for pleasure and to get a little exercise into their lives.

Today, we know that walking used as an aerobic exercise can do far more: it also provides remarkable physical and psychological benefits, including:

* strengthens heart and lungs

* increases high density lipoproteins (the good cholesterol)

* decreases blood pressure

* relieves stress

Walking becomes an aerobic exercise, according to Dr. Fred Severyn, associate medical director for Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan (BCBSM), if it raises our heartbeat for at least 20 consecutive minutes and if we walk at least three times a week.

Tom Hoyes resides in Independence Township. His "Home Movies and Entertainment" cable-TV program airs on Independence-Clarkston Channel 65.

They key to any successful exercise program is consistency, says Severyn. Similar to budgeting your money, you must budget your time so that walking — or any other exercise — is given a top priority in your schedule.

Another important element is to accept that fitness is a never-ending goal that sometimes takes years, depending on how out of shape you are when you begin.

"Too often people believe that with a concentrated effort they can become fit in a few short weeks, or even months," says Severyn. "But if we exercise harder than our bodies can accept, we're more likely to sustain injuries.

"And if we expect dramatic changes in stamina, or too great losses of weight or inches, we're more apt to lose interest because it doesn't happen quickly," says Severyn.

"It's the gradual building of strength and fitness and the gradual weight losses and smaller measurements that are the most enduring, and they take patience and persistence in pursuing."

How to know whether you're walking too fast or too far or not enough?

Learn how to take your pulse, either at the neck or inside your wrist, Severyn says. use the formula below to determine what is the maximum heart beat you should reach during exercise and the minimum.

Here's the formula. Subtract your age from 220. The maximum rate at which you should exercise is 85 percent of that figure. The minimum is 65 percent of that figure.

If you're 50 years of age, for example, subtract 50 from 220 (170). Your maximum heart rate during exercise should be 85 percent times 170, or 144 beats per minute.

The minimum is 65 percent times 170 (110 beats per minute).

Take your pulse midway through exercising and again when you're finished exercising. Count the pulse for six seconds and multiply by 60, or count for 10 seconds and multiply by six.

In addition to learning whether you're exceeding your maximum or not getting up to the minimum, measuring the heartbeat also tells you whether you're increasing your fitness level.

Here's a less scientific way to determine if you're exercising at the proper rate. If you can't hold a conversation comfortably with someone, you're working too hard

Or if after exercise you are exhausted and the feeling of tiredness persists for hours, then you're also exercising too hard.

On the other hand, if you're not breathing any harder than you normally do, you're not giving your heart a sufficient workout.

You should feel pleasantly tired, but good after an effective exercise bout, says Dr. Severyn.

Pet of the Week

She's a lady

Lady's uniqueness stretches from her head to her toes.

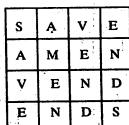

She's friendly, which shows in the way she greets visitors; and the German shepherd mix is missing the toes on one hind leg — possibly from a car accident.

At six months, Lady has a good temperament, though she still has some growing to do. She should turn into a large dog.

Lady's adoption fee is $70, which includes spaying, plus $12 for heart worm medicine.

She can be seen at the Michigan Humane Society, 3600 Auburn Rd., Auburn Hills, 852-7420. Hours at the non-profit shelter are 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday

4-H competitors

Boose try calming their rabbits on July 31 at the 4-H Fair.

ONCE A RABBIT has been thoroughly checked by the competitor, they are required to stand back from their rabbit and look at the judge.

JUDGES ASK questions of competitors during the 4-H Fair. The questions help a judge decide who will take home the ribbons. (Photos by Sandra G. Conlen)
