Bed and breakfast facilities still are not allowed in the Village of Clarkston.

The Clarkston Village Council took no action on a proposed bed and breakfast ordinance Jan. 28, two weeks after a public hearing on the issue.

No date was set for the topic to be considered again.

President Sharron Catallo said a study on bed and breakfast facilities and their effects on areas similar to Clarkston would be finished in mid-February, and the

Hibler hired at Wixom library

BY CURT MCALLISTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Nearly six weeks after resigning from his duties at the Independence Township Library, James Hibler has been named director of the Wixom Public Library.

Hibler had been Independence's director for the past 11 years, before his resignation on Dec. 11, 1990. He cited the township board's inadequate support of the library and disrespectful treatment toward himself as the reasons for his leaving.

In his tenure, voters approved a bond issue to quintuple the size of the current 4,000-square-foot library on Clarkston Road. Voters also approved an operating millage for the expanded library. Construction on the addition is set for spring.

In Wixom, Hibler is dealing with a library similar to the current one in Independence Township. He said the building is between 3,000 and 4,000 square feet, and it has a staff of nine.

As director, he serves as the facility's administrator and oversees all aspects of its operations. His salary has been set at about $35,000 per year.

Hibler is the father of two, including a 4-week-old infant. He and his wife reside in Independence Township and would like to continue to live in the area.

"We'll probably re-evaluate our residency at a later date," Hibler said. "We're comfortable in the area, but we'll probably consider some sort of move when it gets warmer."

Debate continues over bed and breakfasts in village

 council would take up the issue again then.

If the ordinance were approved, bed and breakfast facilities would be allowed in residential areas as a "special use," which would require special permission from the village council. The council also would control licensing of the facilities.

The ordinance was proposed after a request to run a bed and breakfast facility on Main Street -- in the historical Boothby House, moved and restored about two years ago by Jon Abbott of Independence Township. The house is on the east side of Main Street at the northern edge of the village boundary with Independence Township.

Former council president Carol Eberhardt expressed approval of the ordinance during the meeting. Eberhardt, who has gathered information about bed and breakfasts for the council, suggested the proposed ordinance in November 1990.

However, council members are reluctant to amend the village's current zoning ordinance to allow bed and breakfasts in residentially zoned areas.

Council members have previously said that they would allow bed and breakfasts in multiple and commercially zoned areas, but they have been firm in previous requests to put commercial businesses in residential areas.

Eberhardt appeared frustrated that the facilities may not be allowed in residential areas.

"Why bother -- this is ludicrous," she said.

Catallo responded.

"I have no problems with bed and breakfasts, but this leaves our zoning ordinance wide open," Catallo said. "I don't want to lose all our homes on Main Street." Trustee Douglas Roeser agreed.

"We've had to address this every time it has come up," he said.

"Our zoning ordinance would be worth nothing," Catallo said.

"I believe this is different," Eberhardt said. "Licensing of bed and breakfasts gives stricter control."

Council miffed

Plans for a new Independence Township fire station near the village boundary has some Clarkston Village Council members miffed.

They had not heard anything of the plans until Jan. 28, when former council president Carol Eberhardt suggested that the village give up jurisdiction of one parcel near the proposed fire station site.

That way, the fire department could use part of the property for a driveway, she said.

The parcel in the village is the site of the historic Boothby house on the east side of Main Street. It sits at the northern village boundary with Independence Township.

The house, moved and restored about two years ago by Jon Abbott, is now at the center of a controversy over whether to allow bed and breakfast facilities in residentially zoned areas in the village.

Eberhardt's comment took council members by surprise.

"I haven't heard about that!" Catallo said.

"It's true," said Lynn Kacy, an Independence Township resident.

After the meeting, trustees Eric Haven, James Schultz and Douglas Roeser said they were not aware of a proposed move by the fire department to a Northview Drive and M-15 location.

School tours next week

If you'd like a firsthand look at the condition of Clarkston schools, you can tour any building in the district at 10 a.m. next week.

Guided tours are offered at each building on Monday, Feb. 4, through Friday, Feb. 8. Reservations are not necessary. For more information, call the school board office at 625-4402.

Correction

In a recap of a Clarkston JV basketball game in the Jan. 23 issue of The Clarkston News, one of the players in the article was incorrectly listed as Todd Smith. The player's name is Matt Smith.

CHS alumnus' s quick delivery aids Desert Storm

Charleston Air Force Base. He is a 1977 graduate of Clarkston High School.

Desert Storm Connection

BY MARSHALL B. WILKINS

The ear shattering whine of C-141B Starlifter engines knifes through the still, cool air, as mechanics and aircrew members scramble to the mammoth machine to make preflight checks.

Aerial port workers quickly weigh a shipment of parts and supplies, then place them on pallets.

Thousands of miles away, at the aircraft's final destination in the Middle East, American tanks roll through sun-baked sand, piled high by seasonal windstorms.

Army helicopters spiral high into a blue sky guarded by Air Force jets as Navy vessels ride the choppy, white-capped waves below. American troops continue to prepare for their role in Operation Desert Storm.

U.S. Air Force Reserve Staff Sgt. Kevin P. Peters, 31, son-in-law of Kenneth and Phyllis Toner of Nadette Drive, Springfield Township, works for the 315th Airplane Generation Squadron at Charleston Air Force Base, S.C.

The unit ensures troops, vehicles and aircraft are combat ready by delivering parts and equipment to Saudi Arabia.

The shipment, dubbed "Desert Express" by the Air Force's Military Airlift Command, contains critical parts or equipment needed by troops in Saudi Arabia to make a vehicle, aircraft or weapon system operational.

The unit's efficiency is evident in the fact that it only takes 16 hours to transport a shipment from Charleston to the Middle East.

If troops in Saudi Arabia didn't have Desert Express to rely on, it would take them 30 hours to receive equipment on normal airlift capability. Forty-four missions transported 7,426 pieces of equipment weighing 785,679 pounds to the Middle East during the first three months of operation.

Peters, a 1977 graduate of Clarkston High School, is an aircraft electrician.

"My job ... has been working with electrical and environmental systems on aircraft," he said.

"Since I'm an Air Reserve technician, I also have the additional responsibility of training reservists who have been called to active duty during this crisis," he said.

The aerial port workers have reduced the normal cargo processing and ground time from six hours to two hours. They're aware of the important contribution they make each day to maintain aircraft that ferry essential parts to President George Bush's "line in the sand."

"Even though I'm contributing to Desert (Storm), my contribution is small compared to the guys in Saudi Arabia," said Peters. "Here I can go to parties, and I have a bed and a home to go to every night."

As they go through the daily routine of supporting their fellow soldiers, sailors, airmen, and Marines on Arabian peninsula; the Charleston airmen can only wait and wonder what the final outcome will be.

"I would like to see the crisis resolved by the quickest and best means possible," said Peters.

Tree removal causes stir at Reese, Holcomb roads

BY JULIE CAMPE
Clarkston News Editor

A missing oak tree at the intersection of Reese and Holcomb roads has saddened a few area residents.

And their reaction has puzzled one official from the Road Commission for Oakland County.

The tree, formerly located in the island of a gravel-road intersection in Independence Township, was removed Thursday, Jan. 24, by workers from the Road Commission for Oakland County.

"It's really sad," said Jody Senkyr of Reese Road. "It was a big, beautiful, huge tree. It really wasn't sick-looking. ... I loved that tree."

Carol Brent of Bitterbush Road also expressed dismay at the tree removal.

"It looks so barren and awful," she said. "It just changed the look of the whole area. That tree was a landmark for years and years."

She and her neighbors often would use the tree to give people directions, she said, explaining that the Reese Road sign sometimes is missing.

"We're just all in a quandary about how they could just arbitrarily cut it down," she said, estimating the age of the tree at about 100 years.

Brent Bair of the Road Commission said the tree was removed because it caused site distance problems.

But he was surprised it caused a stir, he said.

Last year, an accident involving a Road Commission vehicle occurred at that location, and he heard complaints about the site at that time — complaints that included: "The Road Commission won't do anything until someone is killed or seriously injured," he said.

In response, traffic officials studied the intersection and indeed found site distance problems due to the tree and an embankment.

The tree was removed, and the embankment may be changed in the spring. But officials also are considering changing the intersection from a "Y" to "something better," Bair said.

"It's not a really unsafe location by any means," he said, adding that only six accidents in three years were reported at the site. However, the site distance was not adequate.

Bair, who serves as chairman of the Independence Township Planning Commission, said he thought the Road Commission would be helping the area by improving the intersection so promptly.

"We're not ones to sit around," he said.

Sign ordinance hearing

An amendment to the sign ordinance is the topic of a public hearing before the Clarkston Village Planning Commission Feb. 4.

The hearing is set for 7:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 4, at the village hall, 375 Depot Road.

A public hearing to change the ordinance was first held about seven months ago. The ordinance has been back and forth between the commission and the Clarkston Village Council about four times.

The Feb. 4 hearing is the last step before the village council can take action on the amendment.

Patriotic apparel takes Clarkston area by storm

Desert Storm Connection

BY JULIE CAMPE
Clarkston News Editor

The sale of patriotic T-shirts, sweatshirts and hats has taken the Clarkston area by storm.

The area got into the act when Marion Smith of Independence Township met T-shirt designer Scott Davison by chance.

Smith was seeing off her friend, nurse Deanna Brewer Candelario, formerly of Independence Township, who was heading to Saudi Arabia. In the crowd, she spotted wheelchair-bound Davison, who had been featured on Detroit TV stations for his T-shirts he printed and sold to raise money for U.S. troops.

One thing led to another, and soon Smith began selling Davison's shirts through her place of work, the State College of Beauty, 2317 S. Telegraph Road.

She and her company do not charge for the space or the time she devotes to the T-shirt, sweatshirt and hat sale. And even more volunteers have gotten into the act by packaging, selling and delivering the goods.

They can hardly keep up with the demand, says Smith, who gets help from her sister, Anita Phillips.

"You wouldn't believe it," Smith says. "We cannot keep up with them. It's just unbelievable."

She rattles off figures: $11,000 worth sold in an hour last weekend; $22,000 worth sold in two hours last Sunday; $24,000 worth sold in two hours during a sleeting, snowing, blowing day in Lapeer; in all, $250,000 worth sold as of Jan. 25.

Outlets of Advance Printing of Grossbeck, such as the State College of Beauty, are the official vendors for the shirts and hats, she stresses.

All of the apparel show a picture of the U.S. flag with the words, "These colors don't run."

All of the profits go to U.S. troops for things like lip balm and razors or to area support groups, which help families of U.S. troops.

Sweatshirts cost $18, of which $8 goes to the troops; T-shirts cost $10, and $4 goes to troops; hats cost $6, and $1.50 goes to the troops; and jackets cost $45, with $15 going to the troops.

Smith makes a point of this. Other vendors hike the prices to take their own stash, she said. Or they merely

Then, even though K-mart had its own version of patriotic shirts, management allowed the employees to wear Puckett's version on "Red, White and Blue Day," which was Jan. 25 and 26, says Puckett. They'll wear

"It makes me feel good to see the response."

Leona Puckett

them again on Flag Day, Feb. 2.

"My boss kind of threw me on that one," says Puckett. "I told everyone we couldn't wear them at work."

For Puckett, her volunteer efforts are a part of her everyday life.

"I got involved because I have a son who's going to be shipped to Saudi," she says.

Army Sgt. John Puckett, 27, a Clarkston High School graduate, has been in the military for seven years, she says. He is currently on "stand-by" at Fort Hood, Texas.

She is also busy with the Auxiliary, which continues to take orders for the shirts.

They also send at least two packages a week to service people in the Persian Gulf, and have a goal of reaching each person on their list of area service people.

Further, they write letters to the troops. And they raise more money by selling yellow bows and ribbons.

"As in all the wars, Legion members are trying to do all they can," she says.

Rally shows support

A rally is planned for 11 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 2, at the Pontiac-Oakland Airport in Waterford Township.

Dubbed "Michigan Supports Our Troops," the rally will feature speeches by veterans, former POWs and community leaders.

"It's just to show we care," said Marion Smith of Independence Township, one of the organizers.

Community groups are invited to set up tables at the perimeter of the heated hangar in which the rally will be held.

The rally would be ideal for such veterans groups and others who would like to sell items as fund-raisers in support of U.S. troops in Operation Desert Storm, said Smith.

The American Legion Chief Pontiac Post #377 of Independence Township and the Chief Pontiac Auxiliary will be on hand, and the Chief Pontiac color guard will be presenting posting the colors that day, according to Leona Puckett of Independence Township.

keep more of the profits for themselves.

"I know some of these people have to be in business, but ... there's a lot of people out there that are weaseling and bilking the people," she says.

"If you want the money to go to troops, go to outlets of Advance," she says.

Or go to Leona Puckett, Smith's neighbor, who is a member of the American Legion Auxiliary, Chief Pontiac Post #377 of Independence Township.

Puckett first sold the items through the Auxiliary and then through her place of work, K-mart on Dixie Highway, Waterford Township.

Before she knew it, she had to drop her Auxiliary sales for a while just to keep up with her sales at work.

At work, she sold 395 sweatshirts, 141 T-shirts and 94 hats. Hats are on backorder.

"They were ordering for their families and everyone else," Puckett says. "I was going crazy. I was trying to work and take orders at the same time."

Help just a call away

An 800-number is available for relatives of U.S. troops who need help.

Offered by the national headquarters of the American Legion, the number is 1-800-786-0901 and serves families of military personnel.

Established in October, it's targeted to people who need any type of support, said Leona Puckett of the Independence Township American Legion Chief Pontiac Post #377.

That national headquarters will contact the nearest American Legion post, which will then help the family, said Puckett.

Teen OK after train strikes car

A 16-year-old Waterford Township girl got the scare of her life after her car was struck by a train near White Lake and Andersonville roads, Independence Township, Jan. 22.

According to township Fire Chief Gar Wilson, the accident occurred about 10:30 a.m.

He said the teen had driven onto the White Lake Road tracks when she spotted the train. She attempted to back up off the tracks, but didn't quite make it.

The train clipped the front end of her car, shoving it off the tracks. However, the girl was uninjured and left the scene with friends, Wilson said. Her car was rendered undriveable and had to be towed away.

Oakland County Sheriff's deputies later cited the girl for failing to yield the right of way.

Perturbing petroleum

Julie Campe

It's ironic that people in the Clarkston area are becoming so well versed in the danger of dumping oil into the ground.

At the same time, across the globe, thousands of gallons are pouring into the Persian Gulf -- at the apparent design of one person, Saddam Hussein.

The same week the oil spill was discovered in the Gulf, the Independence Township Groundwater Leadership Team announced a program called, "Keep the Oil Out."

Through that program, volunteers will actually drive out to your house and pick up your used motor oil to be recycled.

They are so concerned about the possibility of groundwater contamination that they've already set aside two days in February for the program, for which they'll receive no gas money and no money for their time.

The days are Saturdays, Feb. 16 and 23. To schedule a pick-up, call 625-1800 -- and make sure your used oil is in a sealed, clean container, such as a plastic milk jug or detergent bottle. (See Page 21A for more information.)

They are in their second year of a groundwater educational program for the area.

Meanwhile, from the television are projected images of the beautiful, sleek, athletic cormorants -- not adeptly diving for fish as normally shown, but hobbling on the shore, coated with oil so thick that their wings are immovable. These aquatic birds are one of the more visible casualties of the Persian Gulf oil spill.

Also shown is an oil slick the size of Chicago, part of it ablaze. Experts tell us that the smoke from the fire will be less harmful to the air than the oil would be to the water -- though it's too late to salvage much of the water.

According to environmental experts, the potential damage to the Persian Gulf's fragile ecosystem is "incalculable."

However, environmental leaders in Independence Township tell us that just one quart of oil can contaminate 250,000 gallons of water.

They estimate that more oil is dumped each year in the state of Michigan than the Exxon tanker, Valdez, spilled in the waters of Alaska. The estimated total is 11 million gallons.

No one knows how much oil has gushed into the Persian Gulf since Hussein sabotaged an oil terminal in Kuwait that normally pumped oil into tankers waiting in the Gulf.

But the oil is estimated to have begun pouring into the Gulf on Jan. 19, though military officials didn't discover it until Jan. 25.

In a faxed news release dated Jan. 21, the Friends of the Earth Oceanic Society warned about the environmental impacts of war on the Middle East.

They cited the 1983 Iraqi attack on the Nowruz oil facility of Iran. From that, fires burned for nearly a year, and about 5,000 barrels of oil a day poured into the Persian Gulf for more than six months, causing massive destruction of marine life, decimating the sea turtle population and exterminating the sea cow population.

The oil slick extended the entire 1,000-kilometer length of the Gulf, forcing a closure of the shrimp industry, which was producing thousands of tons annually.

Such a spill in today could result in a "dead sea," they warned.

Not to fear -- the United States has bombed the "manifold" that directs the oil to the water -- instead the oil thought to be streaming into the desert, where it will do less harm, we are told.

People -- from the Midwest, even -- actually cried over the Alaskan oil spill. What must they think now?

I, for one, take heart in the timely efforts of the Independence Groundwater Leadership Team. Though small on a global scale, their ideals alone are enough to give hope that one day, environmental terrorism will be merely a sentence in a history book.

Don't forget to vote on Feb. 11

Regardless of how you stand on the bond issues on the ballot in the Feb. 11 special school election, don't forget to record your opinion by voting.

The voting booths will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Monday, Feb. 11. If you can't make it to your precinct that day, fill out an absentee voter ballot in advance.

All you have to do is stop by the Independence Township Hall at 90 N. Main St., Clarkston, or request an absentee ballot by mail by calling 625-5111.

On the ballot are three requests: 1) a bond issue to build a new high school, 2) a bond issue to build a new elementary school and improve other buildings, and 3) a bond issue to build a swimming pool, to be placed at the new high school.

School officials have divided the building needs into separate bond issues at the request of residents, who said an election should allow voters to choose the most necessary expenditures for their school system.

Those residents also said that their pocketbooks would affect how they would vote and that smaller components would allow them to vote accordingly.

Even if the election results don't go your way, the number of votes in each direction lets school officials judge the opinions of the community. JLC

Yellow ribbons have long history

What is the significance of the yellow ribbons? Capper's Weekly may have given us its origin:

The bright yellow ribbons, tied affectionately across our nation on behalf of loved ones trapped in the Middle East, have emerged from history and song.

Dating back to 200 A.D., Brahmanism recognized yellow as a sacred color.

"Tie a Yellow Ribbon 'Round the Old Oak Tree" is based on a Civil War story about the homecoming of a Union soldier from a Confederate prison.

In 1973, Tony Orlando sang this song at a Bob Hope show in Dallas. About 400 to 500 former prisoners of war got off their seats, walked toward the stage and joined in the song. "It was a spine-chilling moment," said Orlando.

"Round Her Neck She Wore a Yellow Ribbon" was published in 1917 during World War I. This song carried the same effect on our soldiers and their loved ones.

Why yellow? For one, it's the color of gold, being precious, having worth, and being everlasting. According to the books, "Color Your Life," and "Color Psychology and Therapy" yellow depicts warmth and caring. It's bright and cheerful, generating hope.

Yellow is also a mental stimulant and has been said to have a favorable effect upon metabolism.

Whatever the reason, it seems our yellow ribbons are here to stay as a symbol to those loved ones so far, far away.

If you've got a loved one taking part in Desert Storm, we'd be happy to print a little information about him or her to share with the community. Call us at 625-3370 to let us know.

Was Hobson kisser first?

The April 4, 1898 Oxford Intruder (predecessor of The Leader) shouted a headline: WAR! First Gun Fired This Morning at 7:05! 100,000 MEN CALLED! Michigan to Furnish 3,495 men. Havana Blockaded. Great Excitement Prevails.

Actually, that was six headlines. Editors loved headlines in those days.

I saw that headline as I was researching something that supposedly happened in 1898. That's how I came across an item that proved again that nothing is new . . . as in the Times Square kissing following the end of WWII or Morganna the kissing bandit.

We expect there to be a whole lot of kissing when our service people come home from the Persian Gulf, and hopefully that's very soon.

The Nov. 6, 1898 paper tells of the "deep seated devotion of the fair sex toward Uncle Sam's brave soldiers and sailors."

The article said this devotion has been "proven again and again ever since the St. Louis young lady won fame and notoriety for herself by enthusiastically throwing her whole soul into one sweet, lingering, blissful kiss upon the blushing lips of Hobson, of Merrimac fame."

Ah, so who was Hobson? Judy Doublstein, Oxford librarian to the rescue: Richard Pearson Hobson, Naval Academy graduate, best known for his exploits in sinking the Collier Merrimac in Santiago Harbor in an effort to bottle up the Spanish fleet in 1898.

Back to the article. The editor said the St. Louis woman is the envy of countless thousands who long to go and do likewise.

"A bevy of Oxford's young ladies came near duplicating the St. Louis belle's performance when the 8:36 p.m. train pulled in here Tuesday and a party of U.S. 7th Infantry stepped off the cars to stretch their limbs during the few minutes wait.

"There was a shriek of glad surprise on the part of the girls followed by an instantaneous rush to secure possession of the boys in blue. To be sure, they were not Hobsons, only private soldiers, but the girls were not particular as to that.

"We will venture to say right now that those soldiers will never forget their impromptu reception here, if they live 100 years.

"The girls were as enthusiastic in their wooing as a sailor on shore with only a 12-hour leave. Brass buttons were hastily captured from the bewildered soldiers and tokens given in exchange, and when the train pulled out every girl waved her handkerchief at her own particular soldier laddie until the train disappeared in the darkness.

"Each girl now watches the mails with eager expectancy, and in the meantime is the recipient of a jealous glance from all the other girls who were not at the depot when the soldiers passed through."

What we don't know is . . . was the St. Louis belle the first celebrity kiss grabber? Probably not. Maybe it was Eve.

Manly chores seem childish now

Jim Fitzgerald

As it turned out, the day the war started was also my once-a-month day with Tricia, 5. We lunched at Burger King and then sat for two hours on her bedroom floor, dressing and coiffing Barbie dolls.

It was a first for me. I've long been aware of Barbie dolls, but I'd never pulled tight jeans up over Barbie's legs, or brushed her hair. When my daughters and older granddaughters were Tricia's age, they surely suggested I play dolls with them, and I surely answered I was too busy with manly important chores, ask your mother or grandmother.

But in the several years since my 60th birthday, I've discovered that life has become too precious to continually squander on manly important chores. Who knows how many more chances the old poop will have to make a granddaughter happy by behaving foolishly?

My longevity has also changed my attitude toward the most manly important chore of all - war. I'm more depressed by each succeeding war. At 18, I was often excited by World War II, even giddy about the great adventure I was sharing with John Wayne. The Vietnam war upset me to the point of joining protest marches, but that was sort of exciting, too, and peace rallies were often no more than enjoyable partying with people I admired.

But now we're trading deaths with Iraq, and I want to SCREAM! I'm in a perpetual funk. It is difficult to think (or write) about anything except the thousands of people, mostly young men, who could be killed or maimed.

Why has my attitude toward wars become increasingly morose? For the same reason I dressed Barbie. As the clock ticks, life gets more precious. I become increasingly aware of all the good times I've enjoyed, all the fulfilling love I've shared, and I want to grab more of the same, while I still have time.

And I become increasingly aware of how much a 20-year-old soldier will miss if he doesn't live to be 21. Also increasingly persuaded that the ever-promised war to end all wars will never be fought.

Tricia couldn't believe a grown-up person could be so inept at child's play. I put mismatching outfits on Barbie; once I put her dress on backwards. I left snaps unbuttoned and hair tangled. How could I live so long and be so dumb?

Yeah. Making a weak joke as the killing commenced Wednesday, a CNN-TV correspondent in Baghdad said, "If this is surgical bombing, I don't like being so near the operating table." I've lived long enough to remember when it was called clinical bombing.

The term created a clog in my ear. Just what in hell was a clinical bomb? It seemed like a contradiction in terms. Bombs destroy; clinics repair. Had we reached the Strangelove point where a clinical bomb was aimed at a medical clinic, to make sure no sneaky soldier with just a wound could escape a death?

A dictionary straightened me out. After wading through all the medical definitions, I discovered that to be clinical is to be "highly objective." And, a few pages over, it said to be objective is to be "uninfluenced by emotion or personal prejudice."

To bomb clinically is to bomb coolly. Not angry; not happy. Nothing personal. Think of strategic targets, not soft people. Sort of like kissing your ugly cousin: peck and run and forget it.

Down on the ground with the cousins; however, it's more difficult not to become emotionally involved. A clinical bomb could destroy your home, blow off your leg or kill your child. Nothing personal, but it's hard not to cry.

But that was another war. Today, in the Persian Gulf, the bombing is surgical. I think that means to bomb like a knife, to carve out carefully selected targets. Blow out your kidney without bruising your liver? I don't want to think about it.

I want to sit on the floor with Tricia and dress Barbie. I want to do something to help me stop thinking about the young men and women who, because of a manly important chore - killing - will never live to enjoy the love of a grandchild.

Swinging from the heels

War part of inconsistent policy

James Gibowski

The first air kill of Operation Desert Storm was credited to Capt. Steve Tate, a 1980 graduate of Watersmeet High School in Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

Tate shot down an Iraqi pilot during a dogfight Jan. 17.

Television was quick to interview his family in the little Michigan town. Tate's mother said she didn't think of her son as a hero, but rather as someone just doing his job.

When Tate himself appeared on national television and was asked about the dogfight, the pilot said he thought about his wife and children and how the downed Iraqi pilot probably also had a wife and kids.

The Tates' replies were unique in the reportage of this war, in what many have called so far as "antiseptic." With censoring by the Iraqis, Saudis, Israelis and Americans, so far we have mostly only seen a small selection of picture-perfect, video-game style hits on a few non-civilian targets.

We've even heard a U.S. general crack a joke to a laughing press corps while describing the video of the demolition of a building in Iraq ("Watch the four corners ...").

All of this without thinking much of what is on the other end, or as Tate said, the dying enemy or the wives and children of those enemy soldiers.

Don't get me wrong, I, too, pray for the safety of our men and women in the Mideast and hope the war gets over as soon as possible.

Like most people, I know some people over there. I am concerned about my ex-wife, Patty, who works near Riyadh. One of my former exchange students, Galit Noga, lives in Israel. And some of my other former students serve in the armed forces.

I am not a pacifist. But I also am not an "America, right or wrong," or "America, love it or leave it" type person.

I do have many objections to the war, with many of those objections stemming from what happened before and what might happen after the war.

The inconsistency of our government's morality before the war bothers me the most. Some people might just call that politics, but I was taught that America stood for a higher morality which went beyond politics.

Saddam Hussein is an evil force in the Mideast, no doubt about it. But he is the same Hussein we supported after he killed over 20 of his government leaders, the same Hussein we still supported militarily after he used chemical weapons during the Iraq-Iran war (Of course, President Reagan and Oliver North straddled the line by also supporting Iran, who held Americans hostage only a few years before).

And just months ago we went to bed with Syria, which just months before that we condemned for its harboring of terrorists.

I know Saddam's the bad guy and we're the good guy, but our goodness could be more distinct with a more consistent policy of having our morality come in front of politics.

I am also concerned about what will happen after the war. Many U.S. troops will still remain there. And with or without Saddam, the Mideast will continue to be a hot spot in the world, especially if the U.S. does nothing about the Palestinian issue.

The drain of money (don't kid yourself, the American taxpayer will be paying for this war years to come) will hurt an already shaky economy.

So much for the peace dividend we almost had. Once again, education, health care and the environment will take a back seat to the military (and Americans will still question why the Japanese and German economies and schools do better than America's ...).

Because of this, I still wave our flag, but don't wave it as high as I'd like to.

James Gibowski's column usually appears in the sports section, but this week guest columnist Paul Tungate is addressing a sports issue in that section. Tracy King's column will return next week.

Vote yes, yes, yes

The Board of Directors of the Clarkston Foundation for the Enhancement of Public Education at the January board meeting passed a resolution endorsing the three bond issues.

A review of the present condition of current facilities, the projected enrollments and current overcrowding convinced our board members that the new facilities were needed.

The board members would like to encourage area citizens of the Clarkston Community School District to vote on Feb. 11, 1991, and to say yes, yes, yes.

The Board of Directors, Clarkston Foundation for the Enhancement of Public Education

We're overtaxed

On Feb. 11, the Clarkston Board of Education is once again asking the taxpayers to vote on a bond issue. This time, they're asking for 4.25 mills or about $85 million. The proposals ask for money to build a new elementary school and high school and to repair and add on to existing schools.

This time last year they asked for about the same thing, but were turned down. But that didn't stop the administration from receiving a 6 percent raise last June. I'm sure if this issue is passed, they'll receive another one.

The school board owns quite a few pieces of prime property, not only in Independence Township but in Springfield Township, too.

They have sold some, mainly one parcel on Maybee Road that should have produced quite a profit. Where is the money for this profit going? Is it going back into the operating fund or where?

I can't seem to get anyone to tell me for sure. Mr. Lenar of the board office said he thinks they bought more land. Is our board in the real estate business?

The township has been reassessing our properties -- we just received ours, and our assessment went up 20 percent.

Our neighbors' went up anywhere from 4 percent to 12 percent. With all the fast building growth and new assessments, I would think they would generate enough taxes to help repair our schools.

The new golf course and condo development proposal at Clintonville and Waldon roads will generate a half million dollars a year in school taxes and with no projection of increasing the number of students. With other big developments here, I'm sure we're due more.

With no specific plans drawn for the new high school, how can they know how much it will cost? Mr. Lenar says there's been no blueprints -- they just know they want to build.

Ten years ago, they projected a decrease in students and wanted to close schools. Now they're projecting a large increase, which is true; but what bothers me is that Mr. Ronk, the township supervisor, says he can't project growth to build and repair roads.

Our roads in and around the schools are in terrible disrepair; traffic is congested, and this is a danger to our students. But nothing is done about it.

If the new high school were to be built at Flemings Lake and Clarkston roads, we would need new roads and a couple paved, thus more taxes. The ideal spot for the new high school would have been on the property on Maybee Road that they sold. Maybee Road is to be widened into four lanes in the near future. Access would have been easier, and traffic signals could have been installed to help the flow of traffic.

Another problem facing the taxpayers is the multi-million dollar lawsuit brought against the board of education by their ex-architect. If the board loses this lawsuit, they will again ask the taxpayers to bail them out. They sunk thousands of dollars into the architect and engineering fee to check out property at White Lake Road and Dixie Highway for the new high school but decided to let the hospital be built there? Is the hospital going to reimburse us for those fees?

I know this is a long letter, but there are so many questions that I think the taxpayers should have answered before they're asked for more taxes. We're overtaxed as it is.

Mary Klender

Yes to all three

Periodically, a community must review the provisions it makes to handle one of its most important functions, the education of our youth.

The facilities must be adequate to the task and reflect the expectation we have of the students and the curriculum we demand from the staff.

Such an extensive review has taken place here in Clarkston. It has been demonstrated very clearly that we need, and will continue to need, updated and new facilities to fulfill the task of teaching our youth. The representatives of this community, both elected and appointed, have come to the same conclusion.

The Clarkston Band Boosters proudly endorses the projects recommended realizing the extent of the need in all phases of Clarkston's educational facilities. We urge you to vote YES in all three issues.

Taxpayers beware

Clarkston school administrators and board of education would have you believe that there is a real crisis and have launched a well-designed campaign to sneak through a bond issue of over $84 million.

This is to be paid for by you through a large increase in your property taxes now and to continue for many years in the future. This enormous increase will be in addition to the increase you will be paying as a result of increased assessments you will see on your next property tax bill.

The Clarkston school board wants you to believe that in the next two to three years the current facilities will not be able to house all the students who will enroll in the district.

Let's look at the facts. As you are aware, the past two years have seen a great deal of residential housing development in this area. Even with this recent housing boom, the Clarkston district population for this current school year was below the district's projection.

Now that we are in a major recession, unemployment at a 10-year high and a major slump in the housing industry, how can the district justify this excessive student population projection?

Recently The Clarkston News published an article revealing the plans for the building of a large K-8 private school in the Clarkston area. This new private school will definitely result in a reduction of the number of students enrolling in the Clarkston school district and the transferring of students already currently enrolled in the Clarkston schools. The Clarkston school board is aware of this fact but makes no mention of it.

Part of the proposed $84 million bond issue is for a new $5 million swimming pool. I would like to hear the Clarkston Board of Education explain this crisis to the unemployed members of this community, to those on fixed incomes, or to those community members who don't enjoy a $60,000-$100,000 household income like the Clarkston administrators enjoy.

You will also notice that the board of education's campaign plan is designed to make no mention of the enormous cost it will take to staff and operate the new proposed facilities. Think about these enormous expenses for a moment — additional staffing, maintenance, heating and electricity expenses, etc. — and not just for the year but for decades to follow.

These operating expenses will come close to an additional 2 mills. If you think this is not a reality, talk to property owners in Brandon Township. You will remember that it was only a few years ago that there was a multi-million dollar high school built in the Brandon school district that sat empty for several years because there was not enough money to operate it.

In order to open this facility, the taxpayers in Brandon were faced with new and additional tax increases. The same thing will happen to the taxpayers in Clarkston. You can count on it.

If you think the increase in your property taxes necessary to build the new facilities and a new $5 million swimming pool is going to be a hardship, just think about the increased tax dollars it will take to open, operate and maintain these facilities.

You are encouraged to become informed, make every attempt to inform other community members and by all means go to the polls on Feb. 11 and vote no-no-no on all three proposals.

William M. Rausch

Don't be greedy

The Clarkston school district is voting on a bond proposal to increase the millage for the schools by 4.25 on Feb. 11. (Sometime in June, the schools will be asking to renew the five mills we voted on last year.)

The second week of February (after the election), the assessing office will be sending out new assessments, and according to an area newspaper, we can expect an average increase of 8 percent.

If a home was assessed at $40,000 (half the market value) in 1990, the homeowner paid 40.65 mills for schools — or $1,626 for the year. (One mill is $1 for every $1,000 in assessed property valuation.)

In 1991, with the average 8 percent assessment increase figured in, that same home would be assessed at $43,200 — so the 40.65 mills in for schools would come to $1,756 a year.

If all three bond issues are approved in February, the $43,200 will be taxed at a rate of 44.90 — or $1,940 for the year.

So if you're the owner of an average home and you vote no in February, your taxes will go up by about $130 for schools. If you vote yes, your taxes will increase by about $314.

How much more does the school board expect of us? Let's not be greedy!

A renewal is one thing, increased taxes are up to you!

Parents should take responsibility

Per your article about "Life skills for growing" becoming a pilot program created by the Lions Club, elementary school principals, Parent Teacher Association and guest:

It has been my belief that society not doing its job always costs us money. If parents would do their job, we taxpayers wouldn't have to fund this type of additional program.

Same as if parents would control their children, drugs wouldn't be so widespread — costing our economy millions.

She's not pathetic

I cannot believe that Garry Pullins actually thinks of Megan McKinney as pathetic. As a social worker, he should be able to handle all cases, even people who are physically and mentally impaired.

Mr. Pullins, I think, gave up before he even tried to find a suitable match for Megan. I happen to know that Megan is not pathetic and am delighted every time I see her smile.

Yes, it is possible for her to share something with a volunteer if you would just get to know her. For example, she loves music. Would it be so difficult to find someone who shares the same feeling?

Please remember, Mr. Pullins, what you put into these children is what you are going to get out of them. Please give children like Megan a chance. They deserve the same privileges as the other children have.

Julie Ruttan

Time for a change

After reading the letters from Ms. Lash (Jan. 16) and Ms. Schoeneweg (Jan. 23), I've done a lot of pondering, trying to understand their reasons for becoming so defensive on behalf of the PLUS program.

Ms. Lash's reasons are obvious: she is a paid employee of Mr. Pullins, and her job depends on the success of the Clarkston Area Youth Assistance.

As for Ms. Schoeneweg, I can only assume that she's not aware of all the positive progress for the disabled and their families through "new concepts" that are working and are very successful in other communities.

I feel an obligation to submit this letter as a way of hopefully resolving this matter and to set the record straight and to clarify my concerns to all who oppose me.

These two women have proven that there is a problem in the community (as well as in others). Adults and the so-called professionals still have a lot to learn. Watch the children. The coming years will be very exciting, and you will be able to learn from the children as they learn through new concepts in education.

I want everyone at PLUS to understand that I am not trying to get pity for Megan; she doesn't need that. I most certainly am not taking revenge or trying to jeopardize the PLUS program.

I am trying to start some positive changes in the community that are long overdue, changes that can include and benefit ALL the children who need help and understanding, not just the non-labeled kids.

I'll admit, all this fuss and muss hurts. I'm angry, and I'm frustrated, ... but my dream is still strong and alive, and I refuse to give up. I can't help but wonder, "What's the big deal?"

Can't you see anything but the word, "handicap?" Throw away the word, what do you see? A child. Megan is a child first; handicapped is no more than a label declaring that she is "different."

Unfortunately, PLUS gave me the opportunity, by denying my child her rights, to react in any way that I felt the need to. I didn't ask for this. Is it wrong to expect that a child's name be left on a list for a volunteer? I honestly can't see why this would be a problem.

I reacted by writing a letter of protest to The Clarkston News. The Clarkston News felt that this was "news" and should be shared by doing a feature article (oh, yes, the editorial opinion was done on this story, too).

I commend the editor for an article well written. I would also like to thank her on behalf of myself and Megan for being able to see Megan as she should be seen — as a child, not as a handicap.

My feelings have been expressed quite well, and the silence of this form of discrimination (my words, not hers) going on in the 1990s has been broken.

It is obvious that the story on Dec. 19, 1990, has started some stirrings in this community. That's OK. Stirring things up is how change begins, and change takes time.

I'd like to share with you my definition of what children are: 1) Every child is a planned child of God. 2) Every child is a child of a family. 3) Every child is a child of a community. 4) Every child is a teacher, an individual unique in his or her own personal way.

We can learn so much from each other's differences. The same is true for a disabled child. Up until most recently, disabled children have not been allowed by society to have relationships with anyone unprofessional or non-family.

I say, "No more!" The more opportunities made available for them in life, the more they can learn and also teach others. They and their families have hopes and dreams, just like you. All children need to feel love, acceptance and value. Every child is human, can cry tears and feel pain, in spite of any label that society has stuck on them because of their differences.

Doubting Thomases should try to visit one of the training centers in Waterford or Pontiac and ask any employee or perhaps a volunteer grandparent if they have learned and benefited in any way from knowing children with so-called severe impairments. I have no doubt of the answer. From most, it would be a resounding yes.

Being realistic also means being ready to change with the times, to meet the future needs of the community. I, for one, am willing, ready and able to make a move in that direction. Does anyone care to join me?

I hereby offer my services as a volunteer to the Clarkston Area Youth Assistance and to PLUS — not as a big sisters companion for a disabled child, since I am already a companion for such on a daily basis, but rather as a trainer for future volunteers who have a desire for the privilege of working and playing with these very fun, educational and rewarding kids.

I may not have a college education, but I do have a Ph.D. of sorts, in life experiences and lessons from the heart in this particular field.

I hope and pray that these non-professional but sincere, hard-earned qualifications are good enough for the PLUS committee.

Call me — you have my phone number,

Lumberjack theme at county park Saturday

An 1800s lumberjack camp, complete with activities and folk in costume, will be recreated at the Woodchucker's Holiday.

Set for noon to 4 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 2, the event takes place at Independence Oaks County Park on Sashabaw Road, Independence Township.

Competitions for the whole family include log-sawing, nail-pounding and log-rolling. Men are invited to enter the longest, fullest mustache competition. Plus, an old-fashioned pinto bean-spitting contest is planned.

Also featured are demonstrations by blacksmiths, whittlers, quilters, ax-throwers and cedar-fan makers. And refreshments will be served.

At the park nature center, Paul Bunyan will tell tall tales, and music also will entertain.

The event is scheduled, snow or no snow. Cost is $2 per person, and there's a $4 park entry fee per vehicle.

Pre-registration is required. To reserve a spot, call the park at 625-6473.

Build self esteem

A special presentation on building self esteem has been scheduled for Feb. 14 at 7 p.m. in the Clarkston Junior High School gym.

The program is sponsored by the Parent Teacher Association and will feature Ray Maloney, director and founder of the Birmingham Self Esteem Center.

The program is free, and the title of Maloney's talk is Pieces for Puzzled parents - Common Sense Clues for Everyday Parents.

Vote-no effort begins in earnest

We have several concerns about the community and have been upset.

Clarkston schools have placed bond issues on the ballot in February, but we don't like the idea of paying even higher taxes for a new high school, elementary school and pool.

We also don't like the proposed site of the high school, and we don't think new buildings are necessary.

Taxpayers in the area should vote no in February to more taxes. (Oakland County is now proposing an increase in assessments even though there has been a decline in prices in the area.)

We can't believe the school board would select the site at Clarkston and Flemings Lake roads. We know the site well.

It's beautiful, rolling and treed: always viewed as some day a beautiful subdivision of houses and winding roads. It's a quiet, peaceful area of Clarkston.

We can't believe anyone would want to destroy the area's trees and landscape by erecting a school — and don't forget: a college may go there, too. It's just disgusting.

The traffic from high school drivers, sporting events and outsiders day and night commuting to Oakland Community College would be unacceptable.

The last place I'd like to be would be on Almond Lane. The traffic would devastate the area.

And what about the need for a new high school, OCC campus or elementary school? We drove to all schools and looked for ourselves. Overcrowding is the problem, they say.

The solution should be more cost-effective. Instead of building new schools, we should be adding a second (or third, if necessary) level to schools that need more space.

Clarkston High has a flat roof all the way down the middle, and you'll note elementary schools all have flat roofs.

This vote should be to add on, not to build new. Other schools have done this.

We don't need a new high school or elementary. And most of all, we certainly don't need the consequences of adding a college to the area.

If the county wants to build a new college, let them. Why use our tax dollars for county expenditures? Why increase our burden of traffic?

Why connect high school students with older crowds? Sharing facilities with OCC is ridiculous. Our children do not have to mingle with older kids while attending high school.

It would be a bad influence on the Clarkston kids. You would have strangers from all areas attending college — some undesirable ones. Do we want to expose our children to such a risk? Let OCC do their own work.

The issue has become a political issue, with the Blue Ribbon Kids Committee and all. They can't seriously expect residents to approve such a financial burden.

Do they think money grows on trees? Or that we all live in Deerwood III?

The majority of Clarkston just does not have that kind of money. A lot of people don't vote because they feel "they" will pass it anyway. People have become apathetic and don't realize that their vote is so important.

We're surprised sometimes that taxpayers sit around like sitting ducks. No one voices opposition. Some tell me they'd like to but fear reprisal from the school system as they have kids in schools here. And others say they're so disgusted with government spending that they're sick about it — they just don't want to hear anymore.

So we decided that we'd speak up for us and those like us who are strongly opposed to the new bond issues and increased taxes.

We encourage local businesses, organizations and taxpayers to join and support — let's call it — the Red Ribbon Committee.

Anyone interested should call us at 620-8992. We'll accept donations, too, to pay for circulars against the bond proposals. We'll also accept help in getting the "vote-no" effort started.

Please don't print my full name. We, too, don't want to be subjected to adverse response to our opinions from the school.

Clarkston rolls out welcome mats to over 320 youths

BY JAMES GIBOWSKI
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Over 320 young wrestlers, including 48 from the Clarkston area, tested their skills on the mats at Clarkston High School Sunday.

The Mid-Michigan Wrestling Association tournament was sponsored by the Clarkston Wrestling Club.

Of the 48 Clarkston area competitors, 27 placed. Six took firsts, 11 finished second and 10 placed third.

Christopher Haag (50 pounds) and Jason Yovich (60-novice) each took first in the Bantam Division. Chris Webb (55-n) and Alan Eubanks (60-n) both placed second.

In the Midget Division, Ryan Alsup (70-n), Kevin Turnbull (70) and Joe Green (112) all finished second. Taking third were Charlie Myer (55), Nick Petrinic (55-n), Derek Hensley (70-n), John Roe (70), Greg Crosby (100) and Elijah Stark (hwt).

Taking firsts in the Junior Division were A.J. Grant (60) and Patrick Grattan (75-n). Franco Vega (90) and Tom Belgan (95) both earned second places. Placing third were Joshua Lafferty (100-n), Franz Geliske (108) and Ryan Kell (119).

In the Schoolboy Division, Chad Auten (95) and Corey Grant (100) each wrestled their way to first places. Eric Endreszl (133), Joe DeGain (148) and Jeremy Brown (185) placed second. Rob Jeffrey (90) was third.

T. J. Vandermeer (145) finished second in the Cadet Division.

Next action for the Clarkston Wrestling Club is Sunday. Some of the wrestlers will be competing at an AAU meet in Hazel Park while others travel to Fenton for a MMWA event.

ALAN Eubanks, of the Clarkston Wrestling Club, is in control against Jason Thornsberry of the New Boston Huron team. Eubanks finished second in his division Sunday.

THEY say girls don't wrestle, but don't tell that to Jillian Elletson of the VanDyke team and Katrina Betts of Miland.

As smooth as ... ... Wasilk

BY JAMES GIBOWSKI
Clarkston News Staff Writer

It was all net, and the net was made of silk.

Chris Wasilk took a pass from a double-teamed Dugan Fife with three seconds left and nailed an 8-footer from the right baseline for a dramatic 64-62 Clarkston victory over Pontiac Northern Friday night.

Clarkston fans, who filled half of the packed Northern gym, erupted after the shot fell through.

"It was a great feeling," said Wasilk, a senior guard. "It was one of the shots I shoot in pre-game practices. I always dreamed of being in a game like this, but I never dreamed I'd be making the shot."

Wasilk was the hero of the night, but every Wolf did his part in the ultra-physical game. Fife, Luke Fedio, Mark Galbraith, Sean Halleran, Derek Wiley and Jon Wynnemko all stood their ground in an NBA-styled refereed game which seemed to have as many bumps and bruises as baskets.

"It was like a football game for four quarters," said Fife, who also plays quarterback for the Wolves in the fall. "It was the most physical game I've played in."

Despite being double-teamed all night and having the flu the night before, Fife, the county's leading scorer, still managed to score a game-high 23 points.

Fife said he started to get a little more open late in the game.

"I think they got tired," said Fife of his defenders. "We were in a little better condition than they were."

Northern's coach, Sy Green, hadn't seen Fife play this season until Friday night.

"He has improved," said Green. "He's a great player."

Halleran, who had two key baskets down the fourth-quarter stretch, also credited the victory to his coach, Dan Fife.

"It's the coach. He brings out the best of everybody. He's the best motivator I've known," said Halleran.

Halleran also said the Clarkston coach warned his Wolves before the season that the game was going to be called differently at Pontiac Northern.

Halleran had good reason to believe his coach was a prophet after Friday night's action.

"They'll bang you, so you've got to bang them back," said Halleran.

The game was close all the way, with the teams continually changing the lead.

After Galbraith scored two layups from assists by Dugan Fife, the Wolves went ahead 13-7 with 2:11 left in the first quarter. But a layup by Husky Devon Coleman culminated an 8-0 Northern run as the Huskies went ahead 15-13 after eight minutes.

The Wolves went ahead 29-28 on a Fedio free throw after an intentional foul was called on the Huskies. But Northern again struck back with six straight points and took a 32-29 lead at halftime.

Fedio put in a rebound while being fouled to put the Wolves ahead 49-46, but Northern again fought back on a dunk by Freeman Jones and a Coleman layup for a 50-49 advantage after three quarters.

Wasilk opened the last quarter with a 12-footer from the right side for a 51-50 lead, but Jones countered with another dunk.

Fife regained the lead with a 10-footer from the left side, but a 3-pointer by Husky Craig Covington gave the hosts a 55-53 advantage.

From that point, Clarkston amassed an 8-0 run on a free throw by Galbraith, two Halleran layups and 3-point bomb by Fife, putting the Wolves up 61-55 with 3:28 left.

But the Huskies scored seven of the next eight points to tie the game at 62-62 with 45 seconds left.

The Wolves missed a shot and fouled Husky John Hignite with 31 seconds left. Hignite missed the front end of a one-and-one.

The Wolves brought the ball downcourt, getting it into the hands of Fife who dished off to Wasilk for the game-winner.

Clarkston 90; Lakeland 40
(Jan. 22 at Clarkston)

Five Wolves scored in double figures in a 90-40 blitz over Lakeland.

Clarkston led 17-0 after the first quarter, stretched the advantage with a huge 34-9 second quarter. It was 51-19 and the game was only half done.

The Wolves continued the onslaught with a 24-11 third quarter and a 15-10 final period.

Dugan Fife, who also had nine assists, scored 22 of his 29 points in the first half. He also pumped in four 3-pointers. Teammate Jeremy Burke netted 13, Fedio had 12 and Wiley and Wasilk each scored 10. Galbraith and Halleran both added six and Wynnemko had four.

Lakeland, which dropped to 1-8, was led by Ron Shindorf's 18 points.

CHRIS Wasilk goes up for a jumper over Pontiac Northern's Devon Coleman. Wasilk later won the game in the closing seconds with another jump shot.

Athletic program would improve if bond issue is approved

By Paul Tungate

What would the Feb. 11 bond issue mean to Clarkston athletics?

This question is difficult to answer in a short article because there is such a direct impact on improving our athletic program.

As you know, we have outstanding athletes, parents, coaches and community support. No community in Oakland County supports their athletes more than Clarkston. Therefore, new facilities would give this community a physical center which would symbolize the athletic support of the area.

The present high school opened in 1960 with less than 10 team sports in grades 9-12. Today, we offer 40 team sports for the same grades. It doesn't take a rocket scientist to draw a conclusion that space is a premium.

Specifically, a new high school would provide gym space for teams to practice after school instead of running as late as 10 p.m. Locker rooms would provide a locker for every athlete.

Softball and tennis would have fields and courts instead of playing off campus. Soccer would have regulation fields for game and practice. Wrestling would have their own room instead of using the cafeteria. Coaches would have storage space for team equipment instead of using their homes for equipment storage. I could go on and on with the benefits of a new school, but let me address another issue.

Community needs would be addressed with new facilities. An indoor track could be used for jogging and walking. A pool could be open for all ages of the community for recreation or therapy. Gym space could be available for community groups. Little League baseball and softball could use the new fields.

There is also an opportunity for increased revenue because the gym seating will be much larger and would allow us to host major tournaments in basketball, wrestling and volleyball.

A new high school ... the idea is exciting, and I can guarantee a new dedication from the athletic department in making it a center for outstanding athletic development for years to come.

JV cagers win, lose big

BY JAMES GIBOWSKI
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Clarkston's JV basketball team knows what it feels like to win and lose by wide margins.

The Wolves lambasted Lakeland, 79-27, on Jan. 22, and three days later were on the other end of a one-sided game in an 82-47 loss to Pontiac Northern. Clarkston's record became 8-2 after the games.

Pontiac Northern 82, Clarkston 47 (Jan. 25 at Pontiac Northern)

Charles Talley scored 20 points to help Pontiac Northern crush Clarkston, 82-47.

The Wolves actually weren't too far behind until the final quarter when the Huskies turned it on in the final eight minutes with a 34-7 spread.

Host Northern led 18-10 after the first quarter, 42-31 at the half, and 58-40 after three quarters.

"I was disappointed, I thought we'd play tougher," said Clarkston coach Tim Kaul, who has rarely been disappointed with his squad all season. It was only the second loss of the year for the Wolves.

Kaul said one bright spot of the game was the play of Dan Scheib, who came off the bench to score seven points.

"He was the silver lining of the black cloud," said Kaul.

No Wolf made it into double figures. Nick Shires scored nine, Chris Combs had eight, Matt Smith six, Scott Matusz and Steve Black each had four, Scott Rooney three, and Matt Underwood, Eric Ryan and Jeremy Deloney each had two.

Clarkston 79, Lakeland 27 (Jan. 29 at Clarkston)

Clarkston led 42-12 at the half and continued its onslaught in the second half for a 79-27 demolition of Lakeland.

"My kids shot real well," said coach

Kaul. "They (Lakeland) had a lot of trouble with our full-court pressure."

Lakeland was 6-2 before meeting the Wolves.

Clarkston led only 12-9 at one point, but scored the next 20 straight points.

"I'm surprised they didn't call a time out," said Kaul when his Wolves started to pull away.

Three Wolves were in double figures. Shires scored 14 points, Ryan poured in 13 and Deloney netted 11.

Scheib added nine, Smith had eight, Underwood seven, Matusz and Craig Ginter each had four, Chris Colburn three, and Scott Rooney, Chris Combs and Ben Jackson each with two.

Softball, baseball registration begins

Netters 3-0 in GOAL

Clarkston's varsity volleyball team continued to pound league opponents, while finishing 0-2-2 at the Kiwanis Classic.

The Wolves became 11-4-5 after the action.

Clarkston defeats Waterford Mott, 15-9, 13-15, 15-6
(Jan. 21 at Mott)

Candy Polenz' all-around play sparked the Wolves to a 15-9, 13-15, 15-6 win over Greater Oakland Activities League foe Mott.

Polenz was 36 of 40 in attacks with 14 kills. The senior also was 18 of 18 serving with two aces and 14 of 14 in serve receptions.

In addition, Polenz and teammates Jenny Graham and Stacey Tinkis each had 14 digs.

Clarkston defeats Pontiac Northern, 15-3, 15-7
(Jan. 23 at Clarkston)

Laura Garlitz and Heather Steinhelper each had three kills and Becky Kosek had 10 assists for an easy 15-3, 15-7, win over Pontiac Northern.

The victory gave the Wolves a 3-0 record in the Greater Oakland Activities League.

Three Wolves were also perfect while serving. Caroline Allison was 7-of-7, Kosek 6-of-6 and Garlitz 5-of-5. Garlitz also had two aces.

Clarkston 0-2-2 at the Kiwanis Classic
(Jan. 26)

The Wolves could only muster a couple of ties in the 15-team Kiwanis Classic Jan. 26.

Clarkston opened the event by losing 2-15, 5-15 to Port Huron Northern.

That was followed by a n 8-15, 15-1 tie with Birmingham Groves, a 15-5, 11-15 tie with Milford and a 12-15, 9-15 loss to Anchor Bay.

"I think we were a little flat and a little slow," said Clarkston coach Gordie Richardson.

Richardson quoted some of his players who told him, "Maybe we were so busy concentrating on the finals, we forgot to get there."

Ski teams undefeated

BY JAMES GIBOWSKI
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Both the boys' and girls' ski teams remained perfect after wins against Lake Orion Monday.

The two teams raised their Pine Knob Division records to 6-0 with the victories at the Pine Knob Ski Resort.

"I can't complain," said Clarkston coach Judy Roeser. Roeser and assistant coach Steve Townes have been pleased with the way both teams have fared this season.

Once again, Brian Zoss was king of the hill, leading the Clarkston boys' team to an 18-27 win over the Dragons. Zoss finished both runs of the slalom course in 42.26 seconds.

Clarkston's Bryson Menke was a close second at 43.99, Dave Studt was fourth at 46.99 and Justin Whittaker took fifth at 47.28. Sophomore Mike Miller was sixth at 47.79.

Lake Orion's Randall Baker was the only Dragon to crack the top six, placing third at 46.72.

Carrie Roeser continued her strong skiing by taking first to lead the Clarkston girls to an 11-25 victory over the Dragons. Roeser raced down the slalom course twice for a combined time of 50.09 seconds.

Swedish exchange student Sandra Linberg wasn't far behind teammate Roeser, taking second at 51.87. Wolf Missy Crites placed third at 58.47 and Andrea Raymond was fourth at 61.41. Courtney Whittaker finished ninth at 66.37.

Dana Gaskins was the fastest Dragon, finishing fourth at 59.39.

The two squads next face Waterford Mott, 4 p.m., Jan. 31, at Pine Knob.

3 Wolves ski to top 10

Three Clarkston skiers finished in the top 10 of the Don Thomas Cup at Mt. Holly Ski Resort last Friday.

Clarkston fielded two JV boys' teams and one girls' team at the event.

Clarkston's Mike Miller finished first out of the entire boys' field, Ryan Noll was fourth and Brad Stricklin ninth.

In boys' team competition, Miller,

Noll, Bryce Kidder and Jeremy Hargis took second. Stricklin, Bill Brueck, Rob McKee, Adam Kirk and Chris Cascone placed fourth.

In girls' team competition, the Wolf team of Carrie Miller, Lisonn Hutchinson, Amy Bishop, Ann Brueck and Amy Wilmot finished sixth.

Wrestlers 19-0 and ready for GOAL meet

Clarkston's wrestling team ended its regular-season of dual meet action Monday night the way it ended all 19 dual meets, with victories.

Clarkston stomped both Waterford Mott, 70-6, and Goodrich, 47-9. The victory over Mott also gives the Wolves a 5-0 final regular season mark in the Greater Oakland Activities League. Clarkston will host the GOAL meet Friday, with opening matches beginning at 3 p.m.

The only win for Mott, 6-13 overall and 1-4 in the GOAL, was Dave Huff on a void in the 103-pound division.

Four Wolves won on voids, Steve Cohoon (152), Brian Davis (160), Nathaniel Smith (171) and Joel Davis (189).

Six Clarkston wins were on pins: Pat Forbes (112) against Shawn Alexander at 2:09, Terry Melvin (119) against Ruben Garcia at 3:02, Jason Roughton (130) against Brian Huff at 1:37, Mike Stanton (135) against Scott Aulds at 4:19, Frank Lafferty (140) against Todd Svenkesen at 2:55, Tony Miller (hwt.) against Max Baker at 3:12.

Clarkston's Jerry Anderson (125), who has lost only one match this season, topped Jason Hale on a technical fall, 16-0. Matt Seitz (145) had the exact same score against Doug Herbert.

Clarkston 47, Goodrich 9 (Jan. 28 at Clarkston)

The Wolves crushed visiting Goodrich by winning 10 matches.

Goodrich, 15-6 going into the match, could only manage victories in the 112-pound division (Ken Sirigano pinned Forbes at 1:00) and at 140 (Allan Comfort stopped Alex Martin, 7-1). There was a void by both teams in the 103 division.

Three Wolves pinned their opponents: Melvin (119) against Rob Goldstein at 1:01, Roughton (130) against Jeremy Barger and Joe Webb (hwt.) against Eric Taylor in 59 seconds. Clarkston's Rick Mini (145) and Jason Slater (160) won on voids.

Wolves winning on decisions were: Anderson (125) over Greg Lamb, 10-4; Stanton (135) over Omar Nassar, 7-2; Cohoon (152) over Rick Quillen, 6-1; Damon Michelsen (171) over Matt McKeller, 5-3; Davis (189) on a technical fall over Mike Maule, 18-2.

Clarkston first out of 13 teams (Jan. 26 at the Clarkston Invitational)

Clarkston's wrestlers easily won the Clarkston Invitational Saturday, the team's fifth invitational championship out of six tries this season.

An example of Clarkston's team depth is that not only did its varsity win the invitational, a second "B" team defeated five other varsity squads.

Clarkston's varsity finished with 191 points, followed by Burton Bendle with 134, Lansing Everett 121, Grand Blanc 111 1/2, Walled Lake Western 108, Farmington 103, Milford 94 1/2, Clarkston "B" 81, Redford Union 67, Walled Lake Central 58 1/2, Oxford 54, Berkley 41, Troy Athens 6.

One of the more interesting matches of the day was in the heavyweight division when two Wolves squared off in the finals. Webb, wrestling for Clarkston's "B" team edged Miller, 1-0.

Other Wolves who won their divisions were Anderson (125) in a 7-2 decision over Grand Blanc's Garrett Jacobs and Michelsen (171), who pinned Redford Union's George Debates at 3:55.

Three other Wolves made it to the finals. Walled Lake Western's Andy Fritz (103) edged Jeff Deroseau, 4-3. It was the first loss of the season for the Wolf sophomore. Walled Lake Western's Travis Ilacqua (145) defeated Seitz in overtime, referee's criteria. Lansing Everett's Tyler Webb edged Davis, 4-3.

Clarkston 44, Holly 16 (Jan. 24 at Brandon)

The Wolves won nine of 13 matches to easily get past Holly in non-league action.

Five of the Clarkston wins were on pins. Deroseau (103) pinned Mike McDevitt at 3:33; Seitz (145) pinned Chris Compton at 2:23; Slater (160) pinned John Krause at 1:42; Michelsen (189) pinned Chad Nuttall at 1:15; Miller (hwt.) pinned Dan Ellenwodd at 5:44.

Other Wolves who won were: Anderson (125) defeated Andy Winhoradsky, 6-1; Roughton (130) won by void; Cohoon (152) stopped Rich Roberts, 6-0; Davis (189) edged Ron Roberts, 4-1.

Winning for the Bronchos were: Dan Winhoradsky (112) defeated Forbes, 9-1; Chad Fuller (119) pinned Melvin at 4:28; Chris McDevitt (135) edged Stanton, 5-1; Fernando Moreno (140) nipped Martin, 11-10.

Clarkston 47, Brandon 18 (Jan. 24 at Brandon)

Clarkston's record in the Greater Oakland Activities League improved to 4-0 with a 47-18 win over Brandon.

Eight Wolves won their matches: Deroseau (103) pinned Doug Burnside in 53 seconds; Anderson (125) pinned Todd Gibson at 2:11; Roughton (130) pinned Jason Shippey at 2:54; Stanton (135) won by void; Seitz (145) pinned Shawn McClouth at 1:32; Cohoon (152) edged Scott Orcutt, 9-8; Michelsen (171) pinned Eric Johnson in 40 seconds; Joe Webb (hwt.) won by void.

Wolf Forbes (112) and Justin Buccilli finished with an 8-8 tie.

Blackhawks who won were: Aaron Dean (119) pinned Melvin at 3:05; Scott Giza (140) nipped Frank Lafferty, 6-4; Arlo Sims (160) topped Brian Davis, 8-0; Jeremy Preston (189) stopped Nathan Smith, 10-3.

"A PROFESSIONAL CAN MAKE THE DIFFERENCE"

'Keep the Oil Out' program offers free service

A new program run by volunteers could help protect the ground water in Independence Township.

"Keep the Oil Out" is a program to provide free oil pick-up service to township residents.

Offered by members of the Independence Township Groundwater Leadership Team, the program is offered 1-3 p.m. Saturdays, Feb. 16 and 23.

Township residents should call 625-1800 to schedule a pick-up. Each scheduled pick-up will be confirmed by a Groundwater Team member shortly before the pick-up date.

To be acceptable, the used oil must be in clean containers that are sealed. Plastic milk jugs and laundry detergent bottles are recommended. The used oil may come from cars, trucks, tractors, lawn mowers, boats or other equipment, but the containers must not include any other material — just oil.

The citizens action program to protect the quality of drinking water in Independence Township was announced by Doug Carlson, a resident of Clarkston and a member of the Independence Groundwater Leadership Team.

According to Carlson, the Groundwater Team will pick up used motor oil at any location in the township and take the oil to collection centers. From there, the oil will be shipped to a recycling center.

The Groundwater Team members will donate their time and vehicles. There will be no charge for the service.

"Used oil is a major threat to our drinking water," Carlson said, in announcing the program. "Used oil seeps into the ground water if it is dumped on the ground, into drains, into landfills, or on roads. Ground water is the source for drinking water of every home in Independence Township."

Local businesses are also donating services in the program to protect the environment. Morgan Service Station on Main Street and Roy Brothers Amoco on Sashabaw Road will make their waste oil holding tanks available at no charge. The stations will also accept used oil from individuals.

From the participating service stations, all used motor oil is shipped to recycling centers. The Groundwater Team recommends these stations for individuals who choose to have the oil in their cars changed professionally and also want to participate in having their used oil recycled.

According to scientists, used oil is a hazard — not only because of the oil but because of the additives. Refined motor oil contains heavy metals such as lead and chromium, which can be cancer-causing agents. It has been determined that one quart of oil can contaminate 250,000 gallons of water.

In the process of investigating facts about used oil, Groundwater Team members discovered that more oil is dumped each year in the state of Michigan than the Exxon tanker, Valdez, spilled in the waters of Alaska. The estimated total is 11 million gallons.

Some years ago, a campaign to "get the lead out" of gasoline was successful. That program started with grass roots action by citizen volunteers.

The Groundwater Team hopes to be equally successful with its program to "Keep the Oil Out" of the ground water in the Independence Township area and potentially to simulate similar action in other areas.

Beware of caller

Police are urging residents to be on the lookout for fraudulent phone calls that may be used to visit homes targeted for robbery.

An unidentified woman caller telephoned one Independence Township residence Jan. 28 and said the homeowner had won a contest.

The woman identified the homeowner by name and said he had won a large Domino's pizza and a $50 gift certificate to Service Merchandise.

The caller asked whether the couple were both employed full-time, whether they were over the age of 35 and whether a gentleman might drop off the gifts.

When the homeowner asked to pick up the gifts instead, the caller hung up.

The call came during the dinner hour and did not identify herself or any organization she might represent, according to the homeowner.

"I'm just concerned about efforts to get into people's houses," the resident said.

REFINANCE.

If you originally financed your house at a high rate of interest, come into Old Kent and let us take a look at your mortgage. You may be able to refinance your home at today's lower interest rates — and save thousands.

If you have an adjustable rate mortgage, you may want to switch to a fixed rate, so that your interest remains low and doesn't change even if the rates do. Or, if you have a land contract, this may be the time to convert it to a mortgage.

There's absolutely no obligation, so don't put it off. Call any of our offices today — and find out about refinancing your house before the rates go back up!

Reporter's Notebook

Officials have said that Bruce Mercado would be missed on the Independence Township Planning Commission, but so soon?

On Jan. 24, Mercado's absence almost caused a cancellation of the planning commission meeting, but Joe Figa saved the day.

Two weeks ago, Mercado was named to the township board. He is filling the void created by the resignation of Frank Millard.

Early last week, Mercado was uncertain how much longer his tenure on the commission would last. Three days before the meeting, Supervisor Frank Ronk had said that Mercado was to remain a member until a replacement had been named.

However, no one was aware of this fact when the planning commission meeting rolled around. Even Mercado's name plate was removed from commissioners' row.

So when 7:30 p.m. rolled around and the meeting was set to start, there were only three of seven commissioners present. Four are needed for a quorum.

For the next 20 minutes, the commissioners and petitioners stewed while they waited for the arrival of either Daniel Travis or Joe Figa. Finally, Chairman Brent Bair announced that the meeting would be postponed if a commissioner didn't show up within five minutes.

Two minutes later, Joe Figa hustled through the door to the smatter of applause from petitioners and commissioners alike.

Proud father Tom Lowrie of Springfield Township marked a first at The Clarkston News on Jan. 27, when he brought in his newborn son in person for the birth announcement for the paper (See Millstream this week).

Little Robert Charles was a week old on that first trip out, and he slept during his dad's his mother, Tami's, 40-minute delivery, which Tom videotaped.

Robert Charles surprised his parents, though, who were expecting a girl and did not have any boys' names chosen.

"We thought of calling him Desi, or Storm, maybe," cracked Tom. "Or maybe — Scud."

In the end, the babe was named after Tom's brother.

Lois and Leigh W. Bonner of Independence Township were delighted on Monday, Jan. 27, when about 50 robins alighted in their yard.

Though the couple feed birds, they don't have a lot of feeders, said Lois, who said that she and her husband were surprised by the visit.

"I wonder if they're going south or coming north," Lois mused.

Some businesses in the area have begun promoting goodwill rather than good prices.

Bordine's Better Blooms, for example, used its sign space on Dixie Highway, Springfield Township, to say: "Pray for peace in the Middle East."

"It's just a little thing," said store manager Kim Bordine. "No one wants war, but once it happens, we have to support our troops."

Earlier the sign advertised yellow ribbon, but Bordine's sold out the first weekend after the sign appeared, said Bordine.

"We sold 14 bolts of wide ribbon in one weekend," she said, adding that they've ordered more, but the wholesale company with whom they've placed the order also had to order more.

Flags also have sold out at the store, but more are on the way, she said.

She commended the community for displaying patriotic symbols.

"It's great that the community is giving such support," she said.

***

Merchants in Waterfall Plaza, Dixie Highway, Waterford Township, have opted to show support for U.S. troops in the Persian Gulf, rather than promote their wares.

Ann Morgan, owner of The Clothes Tree, said the "reader board" lists patriotic sayings rather than promotional information about the stores. Plus, all of the businesses are displaying yellow banners or ribbons.

Morgan began the display with a yellow ribbon on her door, and "it just caught on," she said, adding that the landlord even offered to buy ribbons for those stores who hadn't yet displayed one.

January and February are typically slower months for retail sales, so promotions are usually the order of business. But this year was different, said Morgan.

"My thinking is if one mother, wife, father or whatever passes and sees that (patriotic saying), it would be more meaningful than: 'I have dresses on sale,'" she said.

She's noticed another positive aspect of the display, as well.

"Often you have ribbons, and kids are destructive, and they tear them down. But these ribbons have been up for over a week, and none of them have been touched. That was moving. I don't think kids get enough credit. Children right now are frightened. They've never lived through something like this," she said.

First-class postage goes up to 29 cents on Feb. 3

If writing more letters was one of your New Year's resolutions, you'll soon have to dig deeper into your pockets to mail them.

Beginning Feb. 3, first-class letters will cost 29 cents — instead of 25 cents — to send through the U.S. Postal Service.

To ease the transition, the postal service is issuing a new non-denominated "Flower" stamp worth 29 cents. And a second non-denominated "Make-up" stamp is worth 4 cents and can be used in combination with any 25-cent stamp to make up the difference between the old and new postal rates.

The stamps don't have prices listed on them because they were printed before the new prices were known.

Under protest, the first-class stamp increase as well as other postal rate increases were approved by the governors of the U.S. Postal Service on Jan. 22.

The protest centered on whether the increase would be enough to cover costs.

Due to increased efficiencies from automation and resultant work force reductions through attrition, the Postal Service slashed its fiscal year 1990 net loss from an anticipated $1.6 billion to $874 million, according to Norma Pace, chairwoman of the Postal Rate Commission Board of Governors.

Nevertheless, coupled with the rising costs of the two preceding years in operations, transportation, supplies, labor, health and retirement benefits, the Postal Service increase is necessary, according to Pace.

The Postal Service is required to establish rates that allow it to break even financially over time, and each class of mail, by law, must cover its costs. Further, the Postal Service receives no tax subsidies for its operations.

For the average consumer, the new first-class letter rates of 29 cents for the first ounce and 23 cents for each additional ounce will mean $8 to $10 more per year in postage costs.

International rates were also increased as follows: 40 cents for one ounce to Canada, 35 cents for a half-ounce to Mexico, and a half-ounce air rate of 50 cents to all other countries.

Straight Answers to Tough Questions

Why not add on to high school?

Q. Will we have to increase our millage in the future to cover the cost of operating these new and expanded buildings?

A. We expect not. New developments should generate enough revenue to cover the increase in expenses.

Q. Will equipment be included in the new and renovated schools?

A. Yes, all equipment is included.

Q. Why do we need a new high school, and why not just add on to the existing structure?

A. The present 31-year-old structure was designed to house 700 to 800 students in grades 9-12. Because of this growth, the site and core facilities — such as the cafeteria, library, restrooms — are inadequate for the present population. Adding on would not solve this problem.

Q. Why do we need a new elementary school? We can't we just add on to the existing schools?

A. We are simply out of space at the present elementary schools. Adding on would not solve the problems of overcrowding gymnasiums, restrooms and libraries. These facilities are not designed to handle the volume of students in today's present population.

Q. Why is this a good time to vote for a bond issue?

A. There are opportunities that the district can take advantage of now:

■ Due to current State of Michigan financing programs, the bonds can be financed at a lower millage rate.

■ Waiting costs money. Since the '89 bond issue defeat, increased costs due to inflation could have paid for a new elementary school.

■ We have the chance to attract Oakland Community College in building a joint campus. This would save millions of dollars for taxpayers.

Order stamps by phone

Stamps in all denominations — in sheets, booklets and rolls — are now available by phone.

Operators are on duty 24 hours a day, seven days a week to take orders by phone. The toll-free number is 1-800-STAMP24, and customers may pay by VISA or MasterCard, for which there is a $3 credit card handling fee.

Stamps will be delivered within three to five business days. Other items available by phone are such first-class products as envelopes and postal cards.

The U.S. Postal Service began the service to cut its own costs and to increase the convenience to customers. By ordering by phone, there's no standing in line.

Mother, son face this challenge boldly

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Associate Editor

Flipping through the family photo album, Nancy Passmore proudly shows off her son, Tyler.

The blond baby laughs and smiles throughout the entire series of pictures. The only clue that Tyler is different from other babies is seen in a picture of bath time.

In the bath picture, Tyler is seen with a long scar running from his neck to his navel, which resulted from the open heart surgery he underwent at age 2.

Tyler, now 7, has Down's Syndrome, a condition typically resulting in defective organs and slower development.

Tyler's mom, Nancy, reacts to her son's condition with a frank acceptance and describes him with sheer joy. "He's just so cute," she exclaims, in wonder. "I mean he's just as cute as a bug in a rug."

"He doesn't look bad, and I've always expected him to behave appropriately," she adds.

Nancy's natural approach to Tyler is notable considering the challenges the two have faced.

Nancy bore Tyler as a single mom in military with the young daughter of one woman and was filled with dismay.

"I went out to the car and cried and cried," she says. "I remember thinking, 'I want to talk to my child, and I want him to talk to me!'" she recalls.

Another difficult moment occurred when Tyler traveled to school as part of his early intervention program, Nancy says.

"He's 3," she describes, "and they've got him in a car seat on the bus. I remember thinking, 'he's so small.' "That happens to most people when their kids are 5," she adds.

Nancy credits early intervention, a program of therapy and teacher visits, as crucial to Tyler's progress.

As for her own progress, Nancy points to the assistance of a parent support group and her church.

"When you give birth to a less than perfect child, your dreams sort of go away," Nancy says.

She credits her support network for teaching her that a mother still needs dreams—they're just altered slightly.

Nancy's dream for Tyler is that he will live independently, will work in a rewarding job and may eventually enjoy a relationship.

"Where Tyler is concerned, I'm optimistic," Nancy explains. "Some people say I'm not realistic."

"But if I'm pessimistic, I'm not challenging him,"

"They gave him to me and asked me what I knew about mental retardation."

Nancy Passmore

she adds.

And challenge, from knowing Tyler, appears to be paying off handsomely.

"He is my greatest joy in life. There are days when I could just wring his neck, but overall he is just more loving."

Nancy Passmore

service. When Tyler was five days old, a hospital worker recognized symptoms of Down's Syndrome in Tyler: upturned eyes, a lesser bridge of the nose, a flattened back of the head and excess skin at the back of the neck.

Nancy recalls being flooded with questions.

"They gave him to me and asked me what I knew about mental retardation," she says. "At that point I didn't have medical questions; I had other questions."

"Would he ever ride a bike? Read a book?" she remembers wondering.

Now a student at Bailey Lake Elementary, Tyler has provided the answers to Nancy's questions.

He has also become one of her greatest pleasures.

"He is my greatest joy in life," she says. "There are days when I could just wring his neck," she laughs, "but overall he is just more loving."

Tyler did develop more slowly than other children, Nancy explains. While most babies sit at around six months, Tyler sat at nine months. Tyler first walked at age 2, while most babies walk sometime after their first birthday.

Throughout the early years of Tyler's life, Nancy worked to stimulate him by constantly reading aloud, rubbing him with rough towels and exposing him to warm and cold sensations.

While Tyler has progressed well, Nancy admits to "difficult" moments, primarily at milestones in Tyler's life.

When Tyler was 3, Nancy remembers working at church with friends. She engaged in a casual conversation

TYLER Passmore, 7, was diagnosed as having Down Syndrome when he was five days old. Tyler's mom Nancy says although raising a mentally retarded child has been challenging, she expects big things from her son.

Fat isn't only a substance making you heavy

If you thought that fat was only the ripples in your thighs or the rolls on your midriff, think again.

Although excess weight is unhealthy, there is another kind of fat — and it can kill you.

"Many adults think that just because they are thin or don't have a weight problem that they couldn't possibly have an increased level of fat or cholesterol in their bloodstream," says Barry A. Franklin, Ph.D., chairman of the American Heart Association of Michigan's Exercise and Cardiac Rehabilitation Committee.

"But it is in everyone's best interest to have their cholesterol levels checked, regardless of their weight," he adds.

Cholesterol is a soft, fat-like substance found among the fats in the bloodstream.

Your body gets cholesterol in two ways — from your liver and from the foods you eat.

The cholesterol we get directly from foods, dietary cholesterol, is the type we can control.

An excessive level of cholesterol in the bloodstream that can result in narrowing of the arteries.

This narrowing, called atherosclerosis, is a major risk factor for heart and blood vessels disease, the nation's leading killer.

"You can control the amount of cholesterol you consume by knowing more about which foods are high in fat and cholesterol and by modifying your eating habits accordingly," Franklin.

Dietary cholesterol is found in foods from animals, such as red meat and whole milk dairy products.

Two types of dietary fats also play an important role in determining your cholesterol level: saturated fat, which can raise the level of cholesterol in the blood; and unsaturated fat, which can reduce blood cholesterol.

Saturated fats are found in animal products such as beef, veal, lamb, pork and ham; in butter, cream and whole milk; and in cheeses made from cream and whole milk.

Saturated fats are also found in many solid vegetable shortenings, in coconut oil, cocoa butter, palm oil and palm kernel oil.

There are two types of unsaturated fats — polyunsaturated and monosaturated.

Oils from vegetable products such as safflower and

Your body gets cholesterol in two ways — from your liver and from the foods you eat.

sunflower seed, corn and soybeans are polyunsaturated.

Monounsaturated fats are found in olive, canola and peanut oils and certain plants such as avocados.

The American Heart Association recommends that healthy Americans avoid eating too many foods containing saturated fat and cholesterol.

Saturated fat intake should be limited to less than 10 percent of total daily calories and cholesterol intake to less than 300 milligrams per day.

In addition, the AHA recommends substituting polyunsaturated and monounsaturated fat for saturated fat when possible, but remember not to eat too much of any kind of fat.

Polyunsaturated fat should be limited to no more than 10 percent of total calories.

"Just remember that cholesterol and saturated fat are hardest on your heart and that monosaturated and polyunsaturated are the easiest," says Franklin.

For more information, contact your local American Heart Association of Michigan at (313)557-9500.

Diet and acne: Fresh fruit helps the skin

It might have been your mother. Or your best friend. But someone over the years has probably warned you that foods like chocolate, french fries or potato chips can "clog your pores" and cause your skin to break out in pimples.

Junk food addicts: You have some cause for celebrating. Doctors today agree that diet does not appear to affect either the oiliness of the skin or the development of acne, which is not to say that a steady regimen of candy, fried foods and salty snacks works wonders for your complexion.

A sound, well-balanced eating plan, designed to maintain overall good health, is the optimum diet for your skin. The key is to provide your body with the nutrients it needs, eliminating those foods that are nutritionally inadequate.

People should eat fewer sugary foods like candies, cookies and cake. Instead, eat sweet and nutritious fruit. The body and the skin thrive on the vitamins, minerals and fiber that fruit provides.

Most people have too much fat in their diets. It's best to cut down on fried foods, buttery pastries and creamy cheeses. Add fiber to your diet with fresh fruits and vegetables, whole-grain breads and cereals. At the same time, reduce your intake of salt.

If your doctor has prescribed an antibiotic for your acne, don't augment your diet with multivitamin supplements containing iron. Iron can interfere with the absorption of the antibiotic.

No specific eating plan will "cure" your acne, but a well-balanced, sensible diet will help to keep your body — and skin — in the best possible condition.

The above information was provided by the University of Tennessee Center for the Health Sciences, Memphis, Tenn.

If you're planning a community event, don't forget to inform the Clarkston Area Chamber of Commerce. Write P.O. Box 938, Clarkston, MI 48347 or call 625-8055.

Rules for snacking smart

10 While snacking too much and too often can "smart," there are ways to avoid the sting of unwanted weight gain and poor nutrition.

By following a few tried-and-true rules of smart snacking, snackers can wise up and begin to snack sensibly.

1. Plan your snacks. Foods chosen in a hurry are often low in nutritional value and high in fat and calories. If you're on the run, either pack fruit for later, or be prepared to make a careful decision at the vending machine.

2. Read the label. The more you know about content, the better your snacking decisions will be. Don't focus only on calories; check for fat and cholesterol content. And pay attention to serving sizes.

3. Graze. If you feel like snacking between meals, go ahead. If you're not ravenous for dinner, it's less likely that you'll indulge.

4. Prepare yourself. Keep fruit in the bowl, rice cakes on the shelf and fresh, ready-to-eat vegetables or low-fat cheese in the refrigerator. Make it easy to grab healthy foods.

5. Snack early. Mid-morning snack cravings are common — and OK. Eating snacks early can also thwart later hunger pangs. Did you know that chronically overweight people often eat more than half of their calories during the second half of the day?

6. Slow down. It takes about 20 minutes for the body's chemical "fullness" message to reach the brain. Give yourself a rest before reaching for that second handful of munchies ... you may not want them later.

7. Lighten up! Instead of ice cream, try low-fat frozen yogurt, or munch on rice cakes or popped corn cakes instead of cookies, chips or crackers. Look for lighter alternatives to popular snacks.

8. Second-guess cravings. If you've just eaten a large meal but still want dessert, you may be wrestling with a habit, not hunger. Try the distraction approach — do something else.

9. Think nine: learn the "Nine Rule" for figuring fat content. Because each gram of fat contains about nine calories, simply multiply the grams of fat indicated on the label by nine, then divide by the calories per serving to reach the percentage of fat. This will help you monitor the amount of fat in your diet.

10. Give up the guilt. Do you find yourself yearning for a snack when that voice inside says "you'll spoil your dinner?" Go ahead and snack, but choose your snacks wisely. Keep these 10 steps in mind and start now to snack smart.

Health classes packed with wellness information

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Associate Editor

Sandwiched between lessons on reading and writing, students learn what potentially may be the most important lessons of their lives.

They learn how to take care of themselves, whether it's understanding eating disorders, studying the effects of alcohol and drugs or learning how to avoid Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS).

The source of this information within the Clarkston school district — health and physical education class — is, indeed, an important one, says Mary Colwell, subject area coordinator at Clarkston Junior High School.

"The challenge in health is to take what we think students need to know and also plan what they're going to need in the future," Colwell says.

In order to do that, teachers draw from information taught progressively from kindergarten through seventh grade. In high school, students take a special nine-week course.

The program, called "Growing Healthy," covers 10 complete subject areas in grades kindergarten through seventh grade.

For example, in Disease Prevention, a kindergarten student learns "what is a germ," while a third-grader learns the difference between "communicable and chronic diseases," and a seventh-grader learns "measures for the prevention and control of chronic and neurological disorders."

The program, while comprehensive, also poses a challenge to teachers who must cover a tremendous amount of information in a relatively short period of time, Colwell says.

In high school, for instance, (grades 10 through 12) students are required to take just one nine-week "section" for graduation.

The class covers such important areas as stress, coping strategies, suicide, prescription drugs, alcohol as it relates to family and driving, alternative lifestyle to using drugs, smoking, steroids, sexual responsibility, date rape, birth control, venereal disease and AIDS.

The new textbook for the course, which focuses on wellness through prevention as opposed to treatment, could easily be taught over a one-year course, Colwell says.

Each student has different interests and needs, which

"This community has been very supportive. We have had good support on what we're teaching."

Mary Colwell

makes selecting information difficult, she adds.

"One section on drug use may have no relevance to one student, but then there are others that are very interested in the topic," she explains.

The most popular topics among students is information about steroids, tobacco, AIDS and "anything current," she says.

They also pay attention to the problems of others, Colwell adds.

"They're interested in 'how can I help a friend,'" Colwell explains. "Their peer group is very important to their existence."

AIDS information is taught progressively as part of the Growing Healthy program.

Among the first lessons are "AIDS is making lots of grown-ups very sick," and "Health helpers are working hard to stop AIDS," and "AIDS is hard to get."

Continuing the model, third-graders learn "AIDS is a new communicable disease caused by a virus," and "People with AIDS don't always look sick."

By seventh grade, students learn "How HIV affects the immune system," and "high/low-risk behaviors for transmission of HIV."

Though students receive special materials on things like menstruation and feelings throughout elementary and junior high school, sex education is taught primarily in senior high school.

State laws dictate guidelines for sex education in local schools. In Clarkston, a parent-teacher-student advisory committee makes its recommendation, and the materials are then approved by the school board.

Each fall, the health department sponsors a "pre-view night," which allows parents and members of the community to review what materials will be taught. Parents are also notified that lessons on a sexual education segment are about to begin.

Though Colwell admits that sex education can be "sensitive," she stresses the positive input from the community.

"This community has been very supportive," she says. "We have had good support on what we're teaching."

While Colwell and other teachers are thankful for the support, she says the program could stand one change.

Instead of including health within physical education, the information could be supported within a separate subject area, she says.

"I think we're doing a good job, but there are some things we need to look at," she adds.

Famous mold

It was a medical first: in 1928, the English bacteriologist Sir Alexander Fleming discovered the germ-killing power of a mold called Penicillium. In the early 1940s, a group of English scientists isolated penicillin, a product of this mold. It became the world's first antibiotic drug.

Nutritionally Speaking

Do we need new dietary guidelines?

Dorothy Cheal

The Dietary Guidelines from the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture and the Dept. of Health and Human Services were written in 1980, revised in 1985 and now a 1990 revision is newly published.

Many people felt the 1980 and 1985 Guidelines were vague and hard to follow. Nine nutrition authorities were consulted and this revision is the result of this committee's recommendations.

Hopefully, more people will follow these as the guidelines have been stated in a positive, friendlier way. The language is simpler and more easily understood.

There is less guesswork. Here is an example:

No. 1. Eat a variety of foods. The types of foods are listed along with the number of servings per day, and the size of servings: 3-5 vegetables. 1 cup raw leafy greens or 1/2 cup of other kinds.

The biggest change is in guideline No. 2, which was changed from "maintain desirable weight" to "maintain healthy weight." This takes the emphasis from a person's appearance to a more practical health standpoint.

There is a new height/weight chart which allows higher weights for people 35 years and above than for younger adults.

Thanks to recent studies, people can be a little heavier as they grow older without adding to their health risks. This is still uncertain, and the number of extra pounds hasn't been determined yet. More research must be done.

The brochure also states that body shape, age, blood pressure and blood cholesterol level must also be considered when a healthy weight is determined.

This is highly individual, so do consult your physician and don't do it on your own.

One of my friends happily said she heard that "fat is in and thin is out."

Emphasis on being thin by TV, movies and advertising has caused harm, especially to our young people. Fat people have suffered, too. Hopefully, a healthy weight will be the ideal for Americans.

If you follow a good, nutritionally adequate diet, have a good exercise program and have a heredity without major physical problems, you have a better chance to remain healthy. Food alone won't do it.

Here are the 1990 Dietary Guidelines for healthy Americans, not for infants and little children under the age of 2 years:

1-Eat a variety of foods daily: 3-5 vegetable, 2-3 milk, 2-4 fruits, 6-11 grains, 2-3 meat, poultry, fish, eggs, nuts, dried beans and peas.

2-Maintain healthy weight.

3-Choose a diet low in fat, saturated fat and cholesterol. 30 percent or less of your total calories should come from fat.

4-Choose a diet with plenty of vegetables, fruits and grain products. These foods provide fiber and starch.

5-Use sugar only in moderation.

6-Use salt and sodium only in moderation.

7-If you drink alcoholic beverages, do so in moderation.

The colorful Dietary Guidelines for Americans gives details of each recommendation and explains each one, making it much more useful. It tells how to make your diet 30 percent fat, and what is meant by drinking alcoholic beverages in moderation, for examples. These guidelines are free, so please send for your copy: "Nutrition and Your Health: Dietary Guidelines for Americans," 3rd Edition, HG-232, Dept. 514-X, Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Did we need the revision? Yes, we did need a more understandable, easier to follow, guide to more healthful eating. Please make one of your resolutions for 1991 to follow the Dietary Guidelines more faithfully.

You might be surprised — perhaps you look thinner like "Twiggy" or fatter like "Roseanne" and still be at your own healthy weight! See the new height/weight chart to find out.

Facts of menopause

■ Most women experience menopause between the ages of 45 and 55. Each year, three million American women enter menopause. The nearly 40 million women now past menopause make up one-sixth of the population.

■ More than 5.5 million menopausal and post-menopausal American women take estrogen to prevent osteoporosis and to treat menopausal symptoms such as hot flashes, night sweats and vaginal dryness.

■ If you are approaching menopause, experiencing symptoms, or are concerned about osteoporosis, you may want to talk with your doctor about the pros and cons of taking estrogens.

Take time, care to search for right nursing home

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Associate Editor

Maggie Karvala works as night supervisor of a skilled and basic care center in Pontiac.

Not long ago, one of Maggie's relatives involved her with a nursing home experience, and her perspective changed.

"Fortunately for us, his stay was primarily a positive experience," says Maggie, a resident of Woodlane, Independence Township. "The care he received was excellent, and he was treated with respect by staff members at the facility."

Through her experience, Maggie became aware that many people have little knowledge of what really occurs in many facilities, she says.

"So much has been written lately of patient abuse and neglect that I feel compelled to give both sides of the

"Generally speaking, nursing homes in the Oakland County area are giving good care and more than meeting the basic needs of the patients."

Maggie Karvala

issue," Maggie wrote in a recent letter to The Clarkston News.

"Generally speaking, nursing homes in the Oakland County area are giving good care and more than meeting the basic needs of the patients," she added.

When contacted, Maggie agreed to further share her insights.

"There are a multitude of ways to be actively involved in the care of your family member in long-term care and to have positive input," she stresses.

It's important to realize the difference between the types of facilities available, Maggie says.

A nursing home is basically "an apartment facility for senior citizens," while other facilities exist for those who are not able to totally care for themselves, she says.

These facilities offer two basic levels of assistance: skilled care and basic care.

All licensed facilities are operated under federal, state and county guidelines, which assure that staffing, proper medication and other aspects of life at the facility meet government standards. Regular inspections are conducted, sometimes as often as every four months.

"We just finished a state inspection," Maggie adds. "They were there a whole week, tearing apart everything."

Beyond the formal restrictions, the most important element at any facility is attitude, Maggie says.

"It is just like at home," Maggie says of her own experience as a nursing home employee. "We are a visitor in their home."

"They might receive special care or attention," she adds, "but this is their home."

She offers the following tips in choosing a facility:

■ Before contacting a facility, be completely aware of what type of insurance covers the resident. If at all possible, have the forms completed and close at hand.

■ Obtain a thorough diagnosis of the patient's physical condition to determine what type of care is suitable. Many governmental and social service agencies can complete this at minimal charge.

■ Investigate whether a facility has beds available at the necessary skill level before an appointment is made to visit the facility.

■ Visit the center at an unscheduled time. Says

Maggie, "You may visit a patient at anytime during the day or night. Many family members are unaware that visiting hours are 'suggested' only."

■ Listen to how aides and nurses talk to a patient. Firmness should not be discounted because, according to Maggie, it is often necessary for hard-of-hearing patients;

"The patient should be treated with dignity and respect, regardless of the patient's emotional stability."

Maggie Karvala

it's the tone that is important.

■ Pay close attention to how caretakers handle a patient, whether the procedures are rough or kind.

■ Check rooms to see if they are clean or have a stale odor.

■ Check food trays and inquire about whether they are regular trays or are unique, "low salt" or "soft" trays.

"As a family member or concerned loved one of someone in a nursing home, you have the right to expect the patient will be well-kept, well-nourished and hydrated," Maggie says.

"The patient should be treated with dignity and respect, regardless of the patient's emotional stability," she adds.

Money: it's not too dirty

BY BETTY WAGNER
Clarkston News Special Writer

If you're offended when clerks handle money and then touch your food, you can rest — and eat — easily.

According to Robert Long, administrative assistant with Environmental Health Services of Oakland County, "It's not a good business practice, but it's not a high vehicle for transmitting disease."

Long says that employees who handle food must wash their hands as often as necessary to maintain clean hands.

Most people have been instilled with the thought that money is dirty. So they're offended when they see clerks touch money, then food, without washing their hands, Long says.

In 1971 the Federal Drug Association commissioned the U.S. Treasury Department to study a possible link between money handling and disease. In 1973, the Treasury Department tested 217 paper bills and 161 metal coins and found a low count of organisms.

They determined that microorganisms do not reproduce well on dry, inanimate objects.

Also the ink that's used to print money contains ingredients that inhibit the growth of bacteria. And currency paper contains fungicidal agents that last for the life of the currency.

Handling food and money, then, is like finding a hair in your soup, says Long. Neither is aesthetically pleasing, but neither is a significant cause of disease.

THOUGH unsightly, the practice of handling money and then food is nothing to be alarmed about.

Can your child see properly?

Parents and teachers can often be more effective than an eye chart in detecting children's vision problems.

The eye chart test commonly used in schools often checks only how clearly a child can see at a distance. Many other vision problems can affect a child.

Children who consistently sit close to the television screen, avoid sports, do poorly at outdoor activities or squint may be near-sighted, have astigmatism or eye coordination problems, according to the Michigan Optometric Association.

Children who consistently avoid reading or other close work, or who squint when looking at things close up may be far-sighted or have eye coordination or eye focusing problems.

Other symptoms to watch for:

- * Short attention span
- * Excessive blinking or rubbing of eyes
- * Difficulty remembering or following instructions

- * Headaches, nausea and dizziness
- * Difficulty going up or down stairs
- * Closing or covering the eye
- * Using a finger to guide the eyes
- * Frowning or scowling

Most children exhibit some of these symptoms at one time or another but those who do so frequently need a thorough eye exam, according to optometrists.

Ringling ear, head noises common

Ringling noises, or head noises, are very common. In fact, nearly 37 million Americans suffer from the is discomfort. Most tinnitus is caused from damage to the microscopic nerve endings in the inner ear. Tinnitus, the medical term for these noises, may only be a temporary condition lasting a few seconds on an irregular basis, or it may be a constant problem. The sound can be a dull roar; a high-pitched squeal, or any variation in between. More than 7 million people in this country are afflicted with a tinnitus problem so severe that they cannot lead a normal life.

Exposure to loud noise is probably today's leading cause. However, many other causes exist. They may be as simple as ear wax clogging the ear canal, or as serious as infection, or a hole in the ear drum.

There is no specific treatment for all cases of tinnitus. Surgery or medicine may help, while hearing aids may be useful in other cases.

AIDS not likely caught from eating out

BY BETTY WAGNER
Clarkston News Special Writer

AIDS scares people — some to the point that they won't eat out for fear of contracting the disease through food.

However, that's one fear that most don't have to worry about, though other illnesses can be spread in public eateries.

Misinformation about how the disease is spread needlessly adds to peoples' fears.

Here are the facts:

The most common illnesses spread in restaurants are salmonella and staff-related illnesses. They occur from improper hand-washing after using the restroom, unclean equipment and improper holding temperatures for food.

The AIDS virus is spread through direct contact with body fluids, and it does not live off the body for long — a few minutes probably. Bleach and soap and water destroy it.

Therefore, it's highly unlikely that someone would contract the virus merely from eating in a restaurant, according to "Food Facts," a quarterly newsletter from Enviro-Food Consulting by Sally De La Rue Browne.

The newsletter further explains.

"If a chef had AIDS and cut his finger while cutting raw roast beef, the virus, if present in the chef's blood, would be destroyed when the beef is cooked.

"However, if any foodhandler's cut finger drips blood on a food, it is best to discard the food as it would be contaminated. This is not a likely situation as the foodhandler must carry the AIDS virus before it can be passed on.

"If a waiter or waitress coughs on the food, the virus would also not survive."

So enjoy your meal out. There is no proof that AIDS is or can be spread in food. Proper hand-washing by food handlers, though, can eliminate other foodborne illnesses.

ISN'T IT GOOD TO KNOW...

"Wheelock Memorial Hospital was there."

On January 28th of last year, as Bob Flath headed home from a Super Bowl party, he began to have severe chest pains and knew exactly what was happening. He was having a heart attack.

Feeling that he didn't even have time to wait for an ambulance, Bob asked a friend to drive him directly to Wheelock Memorial Hospital where the staff recognized his symptoms immediately and were able to take appropriate medical action. By administering the clot dissolving drug TPA, they were able to stabilize his condition.

Wheelock nurses then set up emergency transportation to take Bob on to a local cardiac unit for further treatment.

Four months later, Bob Flath is well on his way to recovery and today believes, "If it hadn't been for Wheelock and their fast action emergency care, I would not be here today. In fact, as soon as I left the hospital, my first stop was Wheelock where I gave that nurse a big hug and thanked her for saving my life. Wheelock Memorial Hospital was there for me!"

Experts say no connection between MS, fillings

If you're ready to remove your dental fillings to avoid getting multiple sclerosis (MS)—save your money.

Despite recent reports that connect mercury dental amalgams (fillings) with a variety of diseases, MS experts and researchers say there's no evidence of a connection.

Still, dentists throughout the state are being inundated with requests to have mercury amalgam fillings replaced.

The rationale behind the removal theory is that mercury leaks from amalgam fillings and damages the immune system, thus causing a broad range of problems, including MS.

Yet another theory suggests that the leaking mercury combines with nerve in the root canal and induces autoimmunization.

One media report decided that amalgam fillings and MS are related, but they provided no population or epidemiological data to support that theory, according to a position paper from the Michigan Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

In addition, there is no greater incidence of MS among dental professionals than among the general population, and MS as a disease existed before the use of materials in dental care. Also, there are tens of millions of people without such fillings who have MS, according to the MS society paper.

The evaluation of this procedure offers no sound epidemiologic evidence to relate MS to dental work.

Stephen C. Reingold, vice president of Research and Medical Programs for the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, said the amalgam-MS connection has never been proven.

"The theory that MS is in some way caused by gam and MS.

"Reports of remissions resulting from amalgam removal appear to be anecdotal and cannot be separated from placebo effect of spontaneous changes in disease," he wrote.

"There are many people with MS who do not have such fillings, and others with MS who have had amalgam fillings replaced with no demonstrated benefit. Additionally, MS as a disease existed well before amalgam fillings became commonly used in dental care," said Reingold.

The Michigan Chapter agrees and supports the Medical Advisory Board of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, which has concluded that there is no sound epidemiological evidence that relates mercury amalgam fillings to MS.

Plus, there's no sound clinical evidence, gained through controlled clinical trials, that suggests that replacement of dental amalgams leads to any improvement in MS.

So instead of removing those fillings on your next trip to the dentist, you may want to save yourself the trouble.

MS as a disease existed before the use of materials in dental care.

amalgam fillings and that their replacement can lead to a remission of the disease has been present for several years," he said in a recent memo. "The reality is that there has never been a direct association made between amal-

Teach your children to deal with disability

Young children often do not know how to interact appropriately with people with disabilities.

Parents, by discussing disabilities and setting a strong example, can eliminate the fear and confusion that children may develop at any early age.

"Teach your children to treat a person with a disability as they would anybody else," said Dr. James Wasco, medical director at the New Medico Head Injury System.

"Explain that everyone is different; people with disabilities just have differences that are more obvious."

Approximately 35 million Americans have physical disabilities, and an increasing number are able to live independently.

Dr. Wasco also suggests:

■ Tell your children to gently offer, but never insist, on assisting people with disabilities. A polite, "May I help you?" is very effective.

■ When talking with a person with a disability, your children should speak directly to that person; and maintain eye contact.

■ Don't panic if your child asks a blunt or embarrassing question. Most people understand a child's curiosity — explain that the person has a disability but otherwise is just like everyone else.

■ Ask the teachers at your child's school to help educate students about disability. One idea is to ask students to simulate a handicap — use just one arm or sit in a wheelchair for an entire day.

■ Encourage your children to include their disabled friends whenever possible — at birthday parties, play, lunch, etc.

"Setting a good example for your children is crucial," Dr. Wasco said.

"Children need not be frightened or timid when they meet a person with a disability," Dr. Wasco said. "A little education can break down a lot of barriers."

Radon is not a problem in most Michigan homes

A recent Michigan Department of Public Health survey shows that 88 percent of Michigan homes may not have an indoor radon problem, but 12 percent of the homes may have an indoor radon level which exceeds the current recommended U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) action level of four picocuries per liter (pCi/l).

"Less than one percent have a level that is significantly higher than the EPA action level, or in excess of 20 pCi/l. No Michigan homes were identified with indoor radon levels of 200 pCi/l or more which require immediate action.

The survey was conducted on a randomly-selected group of 2,082 single-family, owner-occupied homes.

Indoor radon measurements were taken in the lowest livable areas of homes under closed conditions.

The Radon Resource and Training Center trains contractors for identifying and fixing an indoor radon problem.

The center recommends that any measurement over four pCi/l be followed up with additional measurements for up to one year.

A charcoal test kit can be used for short-term screening measurements.

Radon is a radioactive gas which if found in the earth's rock and soil.

Risk of developing lung cancer is determined by how long a person is exposed to radon and at what level.

The MDPH report makes the following recommendations:

■ All homeowners should measure for radon in their homes to determine if a potential problem exists.

■ Homeowners in counties where greater than 15 percent of the homes are estimated to have radon levels above the EPA recommended action level are strongly urged to measure for radon in their homes.

■ All homeowners in the town of Republic in Marquette County should measure for radon in their homes during the current heating season.

■ Homeowners with a radon measurement above the EPA recommended action level should do a confirming measurement and proceed to reduce the radon level according to EPA guidelines which may be obtained from the state or local health departments.

■ Additional radon measurements should be conducted by EPA, the state health department and local health departments to predict the annual average level.

■ Radon measurement standards should be developed by EPA, the state health department or the RADon Resource and Training Center for rapid assessment of indoor radon problems in larger buildings.

Don't shrug off sugar

Slim resolutions? Don't swear off sugar, say the nutrition experts at the Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

Any caloric food can contribute to obesity. What many people don't realize is that sugar has only 16 calories per teaspoon — about half that of a teaspoon of fat.

The real key to avoiding weight gain is moderate intake of all foods, say experts. Sugar can even help a weight loss diet since the carbohydrate calories of sugar are less apt to be stored as bodily fat than the fat calories in whole milk or butter.

Family childcare has a British flair

BY CURT MCALLISTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

An area family searched for months before successfully locating the childcare specialist of their dreams.

Ironically, she comes from the cradle of "nanny-hood" — Great Britain.

Since June 25, Keith and Dawn Rhodes of Ashare Court, Independence Township, have shared their home with a 20-year-old woman from Birmingham, England. In turn, Fiona Alford has taken care of the pair's two children, helped around the house and learned a great deal about the American culture.

Fiona arrived in the United States as a member of the AuPair program. The program offers young foreigners, ages 18-25, a chance to visit the United States and experience its history and culture. An estimated 90 foreigners are visiting under the AuPair program in northern Oakland County.

Within the program, each student is required to stay with an American family for a year and help with the responsibilities of caring for their children. In Fiona's case, these duties include watching over the Rhodes' children: Kyle, 4, and Laurel, 2.

However, it's not all trials and tribulation. Host families and young foreigners share the cultural exchange together by traveling or participating in "American" activities.

For Fiona, these cultural experiences have included skiing in northern Michigan and traveling to Mackinac Island, Windsor and San Francisco.

She has also taken a beginning business course at Oakland Community College, which covers an educational enrichment requirement in the AuPair program.

Fiona said her most enjoyable experiences have been participating in holidays not recognized in her homeland.

"I've really enjoyed seeing the festivals that you celebrate and we don't," she said. "Thanksgiving and the Fourth of July are interesting, and the American version of Halloween is far different from the way we celebrate it. It's fascinating to see all the costumes and kids asking for candy."

Fiona used one word to describe her perception of America.

"Big," she replied. "Everything here is so big and technically sophisticated."

After returning home, Fiona intends to continue her training in childcare. She hopes to eventually obtain a job working in a nursery school environment.

Until that time, the Rhodes plan to enjoy her company and to show her more of America.

"We just love her. ... She's wonderful," Dawn Rhodes said. "She's very giving and thoughtful, and the kids think the world of her. I'm going to hate to see her go because I already think of her as a daughter."

The children seem to agree. According to Dawn Rhodes, they have still got a lot to teach Fiona.

"Whenever Fiona tells Kyle to do something, like pick up his toys, he'll tell her 'that's not how we do it in America,'" she laughed. "Fiona just tells him that it's a universal thing and goes about her business. The kids usually buy into it because they love her."

Her goal is to enrich, enlighten lives of others

Pam Marin is not afraid of change.

And that's what she experiences daily in her new job as director of the Division of Continuing Education at Oakland University (OU), Rochester.

A 13-year resident of Independence Township, Pam lives on Wah-Ta-Wah in Thendara Park with her husband, Bob, their small, gray 13-year-old dog, Dusty, and a collection of ceramic, wooden and fabric frogs.

In a quickly changing society, Pam's department has become more and more important. And her personal background has prepared her for the challenge.

Pam, who holds a bachelor's degree in psychology and a master's degree in guidance and counseling from University of Detroit, earned a doctorate in guidance and counseling in higher education from the University of Michigan six years ago.

During the 17 years she has been employed at OU, Pam has had six jobs. And with each job she was promoted to an administrative position.

In her last job as executive assistant to OU's president, Pam initially faced the challenges of a new position with a new president, hiring staff, revising goals, developing faculty-staff activities and setting up computerized office systems. When things began to flow smoothly, she was ready to move on.

"I was after some new challenges where I could make a contribution as well as personally and professionally grow," said Pam, about applying for her new job with continuing education.

"The timing couldn't have been better," she said, referring to the creation of the director's position.

"Virtually everything that I've done helps me with this job," said Pam. "I'm drawing from all my past experiences. I have a strength in administration, ... (and) I have always felt that program planning was a strength of mine."

Other skills that Pam calls on are budgeting, setting up student applications and files, counseling for careers, and recruiting students.

Oakland's continuing education is geared to people with a bachelor's degree and beyond, often OU alumni. All the classes are non-credit.

Pam is proud of a The Educational Voyage Series offered by her department. It uses the expertise of the liberal arts faculty and enriches the cultural climate of the OU community, which is Southeastern Michigan.

In addition to the two programs for this series that were already in place — The Classics of Western Tradition (See DIRECTOR, Page 6)

PAM MARIN says continuing education programs conducted by OU staff experts are designed to enrich the community.

Tips for planning a little wedding

Ashley Ball

When my sister Laura was about 8 years old, she and her friends liked to play dress-up — you know, long dresses, big hats, high heels and lots of rhinestone jewelry. But the one dress-up treasure Laura always longed for was a real wedding dress.

My mom searched for one at garage sales. Nothing. Then one day we were driving down Orchard Lake Road, when Laura spotted a wedding dress in the window of a used clothing store.

As my mom and Laura and I walked into the shop, a nice grandmotherly saleslady walked up to ask if she could help us.

"Well," my mom began, "We're looking for a wedding dress and veil. Something really formal ... maybe with a train."

The lady's eyes twinkled, and she smiled at my mom.

"How nice!" she exclaimed, clasping her hands. Then she gazed sweetly at Laura and me.

"And you've brought your little helpers with you to pick it out. Why, I think that's wonderful!" she chirped happily to my mom. "Let me just show you ..."

"Well, no ... you see," my mom interrupted. "It's not for me. It's for ... uh ... my daughter."

Suddenly, the saleslady was smiling at me.

"Well, no ... you see," my mom was stammering now. "It's ... uh ... for her," she said, looking past me at Laura.

The saleslady looked down at my 8-year-old sister who was clearly waiting for the lady to start showing her some dresses. But the lady just stood there for a few seconds, staring at Laura. Then she looked back at my mom with a funny look on her face.

By this time, everyone in the store had a funny look on their faces and my mom's face was turning red.

"It's for dress-up," my mom explained, clearly embarrassed now. "You know ... play ... dress up ...?"

Laura was now frowning at my mom.

"But nice, of course," my mom added quickly, smiling at Laura. "With a veil and train ... and seed pearls all over."

The saleslady's surprised face was now softening back into the smiley one that had greeted us when we arrived, which, it now seemed to me, was about four days ago. I couldn't believe I was somehow involved in this circus of events.

"Well, let's see, missy," the saleslady said, looking down at Laura. "I'd say you're about a size ..."

"I'd have to take it in, of course," my mom interrupted.

"Yes, of course," the lady said as she began searching the racks for a suitable wedding ensemble for Laura.

"With a veil and everything," Laura reminded the lady.

After Laura tried on several dresses ("too plain," "too expensive," "too dirty") my mom asked about the dress in the window.

Fortunately, it was a very small size and had a green tag, which meant it was discounted by 75 percent. As my mom tucked and pinned and explained and re-explained to curious onlookers what the dress was for, I could see that it was certainly the wedding dress of Laura's dreams.

One onlooker, a thin, sweet older lady who had come into the store as my mom was adjusting the dress on Laura in front of the mirror, had apparently not heard all these explanations and continued to stare at us as my mom was paying at the counter.

As we turned to leave, the sweet older lady smiled curiously at my mom and asked, "Are you planning a big wedding?"

It had been a difficult shopping trip for my mom.

Tired and frustrated now, my mom cast a sidelong glance at the lady but answered very calmly.

"No," she said. "I think it will be a little wedding. After all," she said, looking down at Laura, "she's still such a little girl."

The lady stared silently after us, shaking her head in amazement. I knew just how she felt.

FALLING FOR FRILLS

MAKE SURE YOU BUY THE HOUSE and not the frill. You may end up with the right frill and wrong house.

MAX BROOK INC REALTORS

27 S. Main, Clarkston 625-9300

QUESTION: My wife fell in love with a built-in microwave oven and insists we buy a house that is overpriced and out of our financial range. Any advice?

ANSWER: This is one of the typical mistakes a house-hunter can make - buying the frill instead of the house. All too often a family will fall in love with any eye-catching feature and buy the wrong house. Yielding to superficial attractions like these can result in your family ending up with a thoroughly unsuitable house. Bear in mind that the same alluring feature can usually be added to another house at relatively small cost considering the amount of the overall purchase.

Triple anniversary for family

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hine

The month of February is a special one for three generations of one local family.

The three will each celebrate a wedding anniversary on February 9, 1991.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hine, of Davisburg, were married 59 years ago on Feb. 9.

Their daughter, Carol, married her husband, Wayne Ridgeway, on the same date 38 years ago.

And Carol's son, John, and his wife, Cassandra, selected Feb. 9 for their wedding date in 1990.

"I thought about getting married on February 14," explains Carol Ridgeway, "but then I selected my parents anniversary.

"My son was tossing some dates around and I asked 'why not consider grandma's anniversary?'" she continues. "It turned out that it was a Friday on that date."

Charles and Mary Hine have 6 children, 23 grandchildren and 24 great-grandchildren. Charles is retired after 42 years at the Road Commission of Oakland County.

Carol, the couple's oldest daughter, also has six children with her husband Wayne; the couple has 18 grandchildren.

John and Cassandra Ridgeway have one daughter.

Together the three couples have been married a total of 98 years.

Wellness is a joke

You can take a new approach to a healthy lifestyle with hefty doses of humor in a new class offered by Clarkston Community Education.

It has been medically proven that a good laugh has the potential to reduce stress, lower blood pressure and promote healing.

The course includes lots of group participation and will have some "funny" homework.

The classes meet 6:30-9 p.m. on four Thursdays, beginning Feb. 7, at Sashabaw Junior High School.

Pre-registration is required by Monday, Feb. 4. For more information, call 674-0993.

tion and The Enigma of Genius — two more, Perspectives on Art and Sidelights, were added this fall.

Sidelights, a lecture and group discussion exploring issues behind Meadowbrook Theater's plays, was Pam's idea.

"I thought it would be wonderful to enhance the appreciation of the play," she said.

And as technology impacts society and more people choose home-based careers, Pam thinks programs similar to Sidelights will increase in popularity. People will seek social and intellectual interaction that they no longer experience in their jobs.

Even though the position that Pam has held since April was created only a year ago, continuing education classes are historically significant at OU. They were the first classes offered on the OU campus.

In fact, Pam said, in Mathilda Wilson, resident of Meadowbrook Hall, took one of those first classes — speed reading — in 1959. Mathilda said that with the expressway coming out her way she'd need rapid reading to be able to read road signs faster.

Pam sees continuing challenge in her job. Student recruitment will be one. As the recession limits people's discretionary spending, her staff will not cut back on publicity, but will do their homework by selectively targeting their prospective students and work smarter, she said.

For ideas, suggestions and improvements, Pam confers with the vice president for University Extension and Public Service, program managers, field experts, OU faculty and staff and especially class participants.

Pam's biggest frustration with her new job is "wanting to know everything today, which," she laughed, "is contrary to lifelong learning."

But the idea of lifelong learning appeals to Pam and her desire for challenge. Her position as director of continuing education, as the name suggests, will not become static. There will always be new programs to establish, new ideas to generate and new technology to present to students.

"The nature of continuing education is change," Pam said.

Pet of the Week

CAMILLE has an unusual look with her long floppy ears and tall body, but she's lovable.

A happy hound

She's nothing but a hound dog — but she's very lovable, according to the shelter worker.

Camille, a fox-hound mix with brown, white and black coloring, is a 2-year-old stray who's ready for a permanent home.

Her large size, about 60 pounds, prompted the shelter worker to suggest that Camille live with older children.

She's not housebroken yet, nor is she spayed. Camille's $75 adoption fee includes spaying.

To see Camille, visit the Michigan Humane Society, 3600 Auburn Road, Auburn Hills, 852-7420. Hours at the non-profit shelter are 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Business Briefs

New executive chef

Martin Singer of the Clarkston area recently was appointed to executive chef at Machus Sly Fox, Birmingham.

Singer, an honors graduate of Wayne State University, has served as executive chef in such restaurants as Basley's in Flushing and Bay-Valley Hotel and Resort, Bay City. In the Detroit area, Singer has been affiliated with Galligan's and Midtown Cafe.

In his new capacity, Singer has created a menu combining longtime favorites with "Tapas" fare for the casual part of Sly Fox, called Sally's Saloon. Sally's Tapas menu was designed for those who wish to enjoy different small course and various tastes. It represents a free and easy style of eating that has been popular in Spain for as long as anyone can remember.

Sally's menu features such delicacies as asparagus wrapped in fresh salmon, seafood nachos, veal oscar sandwich, cracker bread crab cake sandwich and Sally's trio (three mini burgers sopped in different ways).

Singer's love for cooking dates back to his youth. "I started to appreciate the arts of the kitchen from my mother and father who loved to entertain," he said.

From there it seemed like a natural progression to train under respected chefs as well as study the history and traditions of national and international foods.

Known for his excellent bouillabaisse, Singer also enjoys creating rich and Provencal and Southwest cuisines in addition to fresh California dishes.

Re-elected chairman

Lewis E. Wint of Clarkston was elected to his 14th term as chairman of the Oakland County Parks and Recreation Commission.

This is the 25th anniversary of the parks commission, which was established in 1966.

The commission is the policy-making body of the nine-park system, which includes two waterparks, four golf courses, campgrounds, a nature center, mobile recreation, activities centers and special events—including Independence Oaks County Park on Sashabaw Road, Independence Township, and Springfield Oaks County Park on Andersonville Road, Springfield Township.

The commission meets the first and third Wednesdays of each month at 9 a.m. in the administration offices, 2800 Watkins Lake Road, Waterford Township.

New real estate office opens

A new Jack Christenson, Inc., Realtors office opened Dec. 1, 1990, in Independence Township.

So far, business has been good at the 5896 Dixie Highway location, said manager Ron Moore.

"It's been fabulous," he said.

Of the 20 people working in the office, eight live in the Clarkston area, and many of the real estate agents are from Clarkston area real estate firms, said Moore.

The average number of years in the real estate field is nine per agent, Moore said.

The Clarkston location is the seventh residential office of Jack Christenson, Inc., Realtors, which provide services in residential, commercial, development and new construction areas.

Formerly an ERA franchise, the Jack Christenson firm is in the process of changing—soon it will no longer be affiliated with ERA, said Moore.

He added that while they were a part of that franchise, Jack Christenson offices were number one in sales in the system last year.

Moore said he was looking forward to a healthy year at the new location.

"There's a lot of growth in the area," he said.

The Clarkston location links other Jack Christenson offices in Lake Orion and Troy, he said.

New vice president

Paula Blanchard of Birmingham, a Clarkston High School alumnus, recently was promoted to vice president of Casey Communications Management of Southfield.

In her new position, Blanchard will take on additional responsibilities and continue to work on several key accounts, including R. L. Polk and Co., Michigan Bell Telephone Co. and Haden Environmental.

She heads professional-development activities for the firm and is co-director of the company's communications-training program.

Blanchard joined Casey Communications in May 1988 as an associate vice president.

Schuss day

CLARKSTON Area Youth Assistance sold about 120 tickets to students from Clarkston Schools on their day off from school Friday, Jan. 25. Ticket sales tripled last year's sales.

BECKY CRAIG, teacher at Clarkston High School, gives some pointers to her nephew

Nicholas Craig on using skis and body for balance instead of ski poles.

HEADED TO THE TOP of the hill, Brittney Detkowski hangs on to the tow rope.

SKI SCHOOL is offered to elementary and middle school students at the fifth annual Ski Day sponsored by Clarkston Area Youth Assistance on Jan. 25. Skiers who braved the cold were treated to hot cocoa from the volunteer group, which is dedicated to preventing juvenile delinquency. (Photos by Sandra G. Conlen)

TOW ROPES, snowplowing and learning to lift a ski are all part of this young student's ski lesson at Pine Knob Ski Resort on Friday, Jan. 25.
