Clawson Tank workers on strike

BY DENNIS V. CARTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

About 110 Clawson Tank workers in Springfield Township hit the picket lines May 29 after their contract expired at midnight May 24.

According to Jim Dennis, union steward for Teamsters Local 614, no agreement was reached by the contract deadline.

"We have had about five meetings with the Hardings (the owners) over the past couple of weeks, and when the contract expired May 24, we voted to strike," said Dennis.

According to Dennis, the strike is not a labor dispute, but rather a contract dispute.

"We just couldn't come to terms on the contract," he said. "They wanted to change job classification, which would put more jobs in the labor class and less in the skilled workers class. They also wanted to change our health benefits program."

strike.

"It came as a total surprise to us," said Chuck Harding, president of Clawson Tank. "We were under the impression that they were going to work for a couple of weeks while we negotiated a new contract."

"In fact, when we sent the proposal back with the union people, they seemed happy with it. Usually when that happens, the union will follow and vote for it," he said

According to Harding, the slow economy has affected business at Clawson Tank.

"Our business is very slow right now, and we don't know how long it will be like this," said Harding. "But we still feel our proposal was a good one. We offered a one dollar raise over three years. Also, with the cost of health care so high, our proposal is to go to the preferred protection plan, which most businesses now have. It will still provide them with dental and eye care."

At present, Clawson Tank on Andersonville road is open for business.

"We have a considerable amount of back inventory and are using supervisors to continue to service our customers," said Harding.

The strikers, meanwhile, plan to continue to man the picket lines 24 hours a day outside of Clawson Tank, which produces all types of metal tanks for storage.

At this point, the strikers seem poised to stay with the strike.

"I'm really proud of the way the guys are sticking together on this," said Robbie Evans, a tank builder at Clawson Tank. "It's good to see the guys standing up for their rights. We will continue to strike as long as it takes, but I'm sure they (Clawson Tank) will stay open as long as they can. Right now I just don't know how long this thing will last, but we are ready to go all the way."

According to Harding, Clawson Tank's negotiator will be returning this week to continue talks, and he hopes that a speedy resolution of the strike will result from the talks.

Clawson Tank normally employs about 140 workers, though about 40 were laid off recently.

Voter turnout likely to be low

What a difference half a year makes.

Last February, area residents were embroiled, and some still are, in an election regarding three Clarkston school bond proposals. Nearly 7,400 of the area's 18,000 registered voters participated in the election.

A week before that election, about 450 absentee ballots had been secured by area residents. However, with a week to go before the June 10 school election, only about 37 absentee voter ballots have been claimed.

Independence Township Elections Clerk Rosemary Howey said absentee ballot numbers usually are a pretty good determiner of how many people will vote. The higher the number of absentee ballots, the higher the number of overall voters, and vice versa.

She said time is running short on residents who want to vote through an absentee ballot.

"If they want to vote absentee ballot, they're going to have to have them in by June 8," she said.

However, residents will have to fill out an application form before receiving the ballot. Applications can be obtained by calling township offices at 625-5111. The township office at 90 N. Main St., Clarkston, is open 8 a.m. to noon Saturday, June 8, to accept absentee voter ballots.

School retirees honored

BY JULIE CAMPE
Clarkston News Editor

A power outage meant no air-conditioning for much of Clarkston Community Schools' Eighth Annual Retirement Dinner.

But honorees and guests soon forgot their discomfort and laughed — and cried — at the stories told that night.

The May 29 event at the Deer Lake Racquet Club honored 10 retiring school employees: Patsy Corder, Sybil Foster, Shirley McDonnell, Janet Mack, Mary Evelyn Smith, Mary Girvin, Herley Moore, David Skillman, Carole Hicks and Joyce Hill.

The Racquet Club used a generator to serve up the food and provide a few lights for the evening. And the power actually returned for more than an hour and cooled the banquet room a little.

Despite the distractions, the evening proceeded as planned, with speeches about the retiring employees.

SYBIL Foster becomes misty-eyed while listening to a speech on her behalf made by her former boss, Mary Claya.

TEACHER Shirley McDonnell is accompanied to the Clarkston schools retirement dinner by her husband, Les, and her mother.

Her principal, Jack Hayden of North Sashabaw Elementary, told the crowd that Shirley was cooperative and unselfish.

JAN MACK poses for a photo with former co-worker Tom Brown. The two worked together at North Sashabaw Elementary School before Mack began teaching sixth-graders at Sashabaw Junior High a few years ago.

According to Joyce Fisk, Patsy Corder joined Clarkston Community Schools in 1983 as a part-time cafeteria employee at Sashabaw Junior High School. In 1984, she became a full-time cafeteria employee and soon switched to Clarkston High School's cafeteria.

Corder related well to the students and her co-workers, said Fisk, adding that she would be missed.

Corder plans to travel with her husband, Ed, and to spend time with her son and his family, including 11-year-old grandson, Timmy.

Mary Claya spoke about Sybil Foster, a 22-year employee of Clarkston schools. Foster began her career at Bailey Lake Elementary School in 1969 and transferred to Clarkston Junior High in 1974. By 1980, she had become cafeteria manager.

Claya said Foster always made sure the meals looked and tasted good.

"She had an earthy way of getting things done," said Claya, adding that Foster had an adventurous spirit.

Foster and her husband, Bob, have been married 42 years and have four children and 11 grandchildren.

Principal Jack Hayden said Shirley McDonnell has taught at North and South Sashabaw elementary schools since 1971, under principals Lynn Jervis, Ruth Purslow and Hayden.

McDonnell returned to college as a 34-year-old working mother and earned a bachelor's degree in 1970. She earned a master's degree in 1975 and a degree in environmental education in 1981, said Hayden.

"This is a top-level, energy person," said Hayden. "She's extremely creative. She's very intelligent. ... She runs her classroom with kindness ... and firm expectation."

He said her philosophy of life-long learning is apparent, though she did have one "Achilles' heel."

"In 20 years of teaching, I don't think she has ever loaded a movie projector," he said, and McDonnell and her co-workers burst into laughter.

McDonnell — who plans to spend time with her grandchildren, read, and collect cookbooks during retirement with her husband, Les — said she couldn't have returned to college without the support of her family and friends. Third-grade teachers Jan Mack and Elsie LeVine particularly helped in the beginning, she said.

She also thanked her mother, now 84, for instilling "a desire to keep learning," she said.

Four teens suspended for drinking on field trip

Chaperons contend that fault lies with students, not them

BY CURT MCALLISTER
Clarkston News Associate Editor

Four Clarkston High School students have found their summer vacations reduced by three days for drinking on a school-sponsored field trip to Detroit.

The students, three juniors and one sophomore, admitted to drinking mixed-drinks in a Greektown restaurant May 22.

Mel Leroy Vaara, assistant superintendent of Clarkston Schools, rendered the three-day suspensions after parents appealed the five-day suspensions levied by CHS officials. Vaara said the parents have the option of forwarding their appeals to the board of education, but everyone has reportedly accepted his rendering.

Because the school year is so close to being over, the four students will be allowed to complete final exams. They will be required, however, to carry out their suspensions in a detention hall setting at CHS. The suspensions will begin the day after school ends at CHS.

The four students were part of a 47-person field trip to the Federal Reserve Bank in Detroit. This year marks the fifth consecutive year that Clarkston High students have toured the facility.

This field trip consisted of two economics classes and miscellaneous business law students. The pupils varied from sophomores to seniors.

Due to the high number of attendants, the students were divided into two tour groups.

The students were chaperoned by Carole Hicks, an accounting and consumer economics teacher, and Mike Kaul, an economics instructor.

Kaul said the entire episode started when the school bus, containing his group of students, pulled in front of the Federal Reserve Bank to pick up the second tour group, headed by Hicks. While pulling up to the curb, however, the driver nicked the fender of a Federal Express delivery van.

The police were called to take a report, but they were slow in arriving. After 15 minutes of waiting, Kaul said he escorted the students to nearby Greektown, so they could take in the sights and eat at one of the restaurants.

Once in Greektown, around 11:45 a.m., the students broke off into several groups.

The students were given about an hour to browse and have lunch. They were told to report to a rendezvous point, near the bus, by 1 p.m.

After taking the pupils downtown, Kaul said he returned to the bus, where Hicks and the bus driver awaited police. Within 15 minutes, both chaperons returned to Greektown to eat at the Grecian Gardens restaurant.

Kaul said they bumped into several of the students while touring Greektown and everything seemed fine. He said all the students returned to the bus by the 1 p.m. deadline.

After returning to CHS, Hicks said she was alerted to the rumor that some of the students had been served alcohol at a restaurant. A pupil overheard a couple of students bragging about being served mixed-drinks at the Pizzapapalis restaurant, and she reported it to Hicks.

Hicks said she went directly to Assistant Principal Ginny Farmer and told her of the rumor. School Liaison Joe Lambourn of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department was contacted later about the incident.

Through talking to students, Farmer discovered that a student inquired about buying a pitcher of beer in Pizzapapalis but was turned down. However, the table was reportedly served mixed-drinks soon after.

Farmer said Lambourn has already contacted the Michigan Liquor Control Commission about the matter. She said a hearing will be held at a later date, in either Detroit or Pontiac, with CHS students testifying on the incident.

Even though the students appealed their suspensions, Farmer said all four had previously admitted to drinking alcohol in the restaurant.

Both chaperons said the incident has been very trying for them. They resent being made out as the "bad guys."

"I could have just ignored this rumor when it came to my attention, but then I thought that we would have been sending these kids a mixed message by not acting," Hicks said. "And what would have these parents done had I ignored it (rumor) and they'd gotten wind of it? We would have really been in deep trouble."

Hicks said this episode has also made a lot of the other instructors "gun shy" about taking students on future field trips.

"It's sad because this won't be the only field trip not being taken anymore," Hicks said. "The feeling now, on part of the staff, is that they aren't willing to take the kids anywhere anymore."

"Whether it be a short field trip or a trip to France or Quebec, the teachers don't want to put themselves in this position," she added.

Kaul said the students should be held accountable for their actions and not look to blame others for their predicament.

"Some parents are saying that their child is the victim over our lack of chaperoning," he said. "It boggles my mind that a junior or senior in high school has to be chaperoned for lunch, especially when they leave this campus every day for that very purpose."

School spoke about Jan Mack, who taught at North and South Sashabaw elementary schools for 18 years before joining Sashabaw Junior High School in 1987.

When she hit the junior high, she quickly gave up that "love-dovey talk they use at the elementary," joked Reschke, adding that she had worked for principals Jervis, Hayden, John Reabe and Reschke.

"You gain respect just thinking about that," he said.

Mack and her husband plan to spend time in Gladwin as well as Emerald Isle, N.C., where their son, Donald, lives.

Bus driver Mary Evelyn Smith joined the staff in 1962, said her supervisor, Kevin Bickerstaff.

In that time, she has driven nearly a half-million miles and has delivered children safely to and from school almost a half-million times.

"It's not easy being a bus driver," said Bickerstaff, explaining that drivers begin at 5 a.m. and work through extreme heat, snow and sleet, finishing the day sometimes at 5 p.m.

Smith, though, always managed to come up with smiles and kind words.

Bus drivers are required to have "nerves of steel" and "the patience of Job," said Bickerstaff, adding that Smith was exceptional. She reported to work early and was a safe driver.

She later traded in her big bus to drive the special education bus, which is "a special challenge," said Bickerstaff.

Smith and her husband, Donald, plan to spend winters in Florida and summers in Michigan.

Retiring employees who could not attend the banquet included the following:

Mary Girvin began her career in 1977 at the Pine Knob Elementary cafeteria. She and her husband plan to spend time in Vero Beach, Fla.

Herley Moore joined Clarkston schools in 1961. He taught 20 years at Pine Knob Elementary School and 10 years at Andersonville Elementary. He plans to spend more time on his favorite hobbies: nature, antiques, Indian artifacts and Eskimo stone carvings.

David Skillman began teaching 31 years ago at Clarkston High School. When his wife, Carol, retires, the two plan to return to Skillman's hometown of Oscoda, where they have a cottage.

Carole Hicks began teaching at Clarkston High School in 1969. After retirement, she plans to turn her favorite hobby into a business: catering.

Joyce Hill became a paraprofessional in Clarkston schools 24 years ago. She has worked at Pine Knob and Clarkston elementary schools.

She and her husband plan to travel and golf, and Hill plans to spend time with her new granddaughter and work on needlework and antiques.

Fifth-grade women

Julie Campe

The sight of Jan Mack at the retirement dinner May 29 brought back memories of my fifth-grade year at North Sashabaw Elementary School.

Lynn Jervis was principal, and Jan Mack was my teacher. In my class were Cyndie Blower, Rodney Sutton, Mike Yovich and about 25 others.

I especially remember fifth grade because it was the year we learned about menstruation.

On the designated day, all of the fifth-grade girls filed into the multi-purpose room, while all of the fifth-grade boys were treated to an extra recess. We girls did not think this was fair, but we were too enthralled with the secrecy of our special meeting to protest.

The multi-purpose room was cool, and the metal chairs pulled the warmth from our bodies. We giggled in excitement.

Then we saw a short film — or was it a slide show? — explaining such things as ovaries and menstrual cycles.

Next, the teachers gave us each a little booklet depicting those very things, and Mrs. Mack herself stood at the front, ready to explain.

We all liked Mrs. Mack and trusted her. So we were a little confused. This information was totally unbelievable and completely gross. But it must be true if Mrs. Mack were telling us it was so.

We sat in stunned silence.

Then, we began to ask questions.

"But all that blood — doesn't it hurt?" asked Cyndie.

I hadn't thought of that.

We concentrated on Mrs. Mack, who smiled and said, "No, it doesn't hurt. Oh, maybe you'll feel a little ache in your back, or you'll have some mild cramps or a headache. But it doesn't really hurt."

"Cramps!" said one girl, alarmed. "What do the cramps feel like?"

"You can barely feel them, usually," said Mrs. Mack. "But you'll know you're on your period; don't worry."

Holding up safety pins and a long, white pad with blue pinstripes, she explained what to do about the "menstrual flow."

We were disgusted.

She continued explaining and added that new pads had been invented that had sticky backs to them, so safety pins were no longer necessary.

"But people will know!" said one girl. "It'll show through your clothes!"

Mrs. Mack shook her head.

"No one will know," she said. "It won't show."

Then she really shocked us. Some of us, she said, might start menstruating this year. Others may start in sixth grade, and still others may not start until ninth or 10th grade.

We looked at each other, each hoping that we were the type who wouldn't start until 10th grade.

We missed recess for this? I thought.

In a daze, we listened to the rest of the presentation, then filed back into our classrooms, where the boys sat with gaping mouths, laughing and jeering and trying to pull our menstrual booklets from our hands.

We, however, had changed. Bonded by our womanly knowledge, we did not jeer back at the boys but maturely placed the booklets safely in our desks, to look at them later in the privacy of our own homes.

"What was that all about?" asked Rodney Sutton. "How come you didn't play kickball with us?"

I was stuck for an answer. It was too sickening to say aloud.

Mike Yovich came to the rescue.

"I know all about it; my mom told me," he said.

"Girls have periods. Boys have wet dreams."

I pretended I knew what he was talking about.

Mrs. Mack must have forgotten to explain about boys, I thought.

The Clarkston autistic program would like to thank the grocery store that donated 15 gallons of ice cream, the dairy that donated three gallons of ice cream, the fast food restaurant that donated 45 certificates for ice cream cones and the grocery store that donated $10 toward the purchase of toppings.

Their donations made possible the Peer Pal Ice Cream Social. The ice cream social was held in honor of students who volunteered their recess time to socialize and play games with students in the autistic program. Thanks again for making our ice cream social a fun-filled success.

Event's first year spectacular

The Clarkston Foundation for Public Education would like to thank the teachers, parents, students, and school friends who participated in and enjoyed our first Student Spectacular at the Palace of Auburn Hills.

The daytime showcases of art, music and drama attracted thousands of people and was a wonderful statement about the enthusiasm and talents of Clarkston students.

The evening performance by Ricky Skaggs was a highlight, and your financial support for our raffle resulted in many dollars being given to benefit school groups in our district.

A special thanks to the arena for its generosity, to the automobile company for assistance with display racks, to the automobile dealership for donations to our program, to graphic artist June Smith for her creativity and enthusiasm, to Dr. Mike Maker (Possum Corner) and his band Modesty Forbids, and most of all to the dozens of committee members from the districts of Holly, Brandon, Lake Orion and Waterford, who joined us for many months of planning and hard work.

We are all thrilled about the success of our inaugural event to celebrate the creativity of our children and look forward to seeing all of you next year.

They've made scouting smooth

A great big thank-you goes to everyone who worked at making the Cub Scout Pack 126 Awards Night and Cross-Over Ceremony such a great event.

It seems that many times, occasions are geared for parents or children, rarely both. This was an exception. Special recognition to Pat Weber for the neckerchiefs and to Rich Watson who built the Arrow of Light Award stand. Your actions personify the spirit of scouting.

This has been a busy year for all of us. Helping to smooth the way has been our Scoutmaster, Joe Helpem (yes, the same man running for school board).

Without previous scout leader experience, he freely gave of his own time and energy. Joe, you've held us together through some twists and turns. Our pack usually ends the year with only pennies left to start the new school year. Thank you for listening to our ideas. I think I speak for all involved when I say it's going to be a great start off with a decent bank balance for a change.

I know that Joe Helpem is not returning as Scoutmaster next year. His plans for school board office will keep him busy enough. But if there is any measure of a man's worth, it's the state in which he leaves things for those who follow. Our pack is strong, viable and fun. Thank you, Joe, for a wonderful year.

Jim's Jottings

'Hedrons' have it in golf balls

A year ago, June 6, 1990, I commented on the imaginative copywriters for anything associated with the game of golf and equipment used therein.

At that time I had just read the copy on a box of Slazenger golf balls. It spoke of "triangles locked together within a network of various dimple sizes," and "exceptional geometric integrity," and "a marriage of aerodynamic characteristics."

In the same column I mentioned that Titleist has a golf ball with a 384 icosahedron dimple pattern and dual dimple configuration.

Last year's Maxfli had a ball with "perfect geometric design (called the dodecahedron) based on 12 identical pentagon shapes."

I'm grateful to Jim Burke at Oxford Hills Golf and Country Club for providing me with more golf copywriter imaginative prose.

Above is mentioned the icosahedron and the dodecahedron . . . now comes the cuboctahedron.

Titleist has it. I assume by now all good and knowing golfers have lost a dozen of the Titleist HVC's. Golfers, like fishermen, clamor for whatever is new, colorful and different. Who else would wear a sleeveless sweater over a short-sleeved shirt?

Back to ---hedron, and more particularly the Titleist-hedron. It's made in two pieces and has a Lithium Surlyn cover. Surlyn is made by Du Pont from ionomer resin. You gotta know this stuff if you expect to break par.

And, get this . . . you with little belief . . . the HVC has, are you ready? . . . "identical halves."

That's what the pamphlet Jim Burke provided says. "The HVC is designed with a highly symmetrical cuboctahedron pattern with each of the four parting lines evenly dividing the Titleist HVC into identical halves."

Imagine that, golfers! A golf ball with identical halves! No reason to slice, hook, dribble or sky another drive. Your excuses are all gone. With a ball that's the same on both sides you can be club champ, provided the other people are using the old fashioned, non-matching-halves balls.

One other thing that will make you switch to the Titleist HVC. It has "distance supremacy." Remember that when you're in a sand trap next to the green and you need a 10-yarder to the pin.

Which brings up another question. Why do so many advertisements for golf balls talk about distance? Distance is only important for about 25 percent of a person's golf shots. Seventy-five percent of the time it's club selection that counts.

And, 100 percent of the time it's the magician, not the wand or sphere, that means diddly.

If golf-equipment manufacturers want to help a golfer they should print some basics on their golf glove . . . head down, slow and low, bend knees, finish high, choose partners carefully, bet cautiously.

Letters to the Editor

Motive evident

As a taxpayer, I was surprised to see the superintendent of schools, Gary Haner, is making decisions for the elections division. As a concerned voter, I have filed a complaint with the state elections board to see who is correct.

What really amazes me is that the superintendent would get into a controversy over school board candidates, which this is all about.

But I guess I should not be too surprised that Haner would support this issue, for the issue is supporting Mr. Downs — and Mr. Downs voted for Haner's raise again this year.

Janet Thomas voted against the raise, so Haner is against Thomas and Balzarini, who he believes would also vote against his raise next year.

Now I am, I will admit, a little short of formal education and not real bright, but I think I have this figured out. Vote for Downs, and the administration gets another raise. Vote for Thomas and Balzarini, the administrators do not get a raise, and the school board will be controlled by the voters and not by Mr. Haner.

Mr. Haner, get back to school business and leave the school board election choices to the voters and interpretations to the election board officials.

C.L. Weber

JV baseball team classy, talented

Our Clarkston High School junior varsity baseball team recently completed an undefeated season, and it was my privilege to umpire six of their games.

I want the community to know that not only was this a very talented group of athletes but also, or even more importantly, a classy, sportsmanlike group of guys, who played hard, showed respect to their opponents and umpires, and basically represented their school in a first-class way.

This is a tribute to the leadership and discipline instilled by their coaches, Kurt Richardson and Dave Larkin.

In a sport where so many unpredictables can happen, it's a tremendous accomplishment to enjoy an undefeated season. Again, congratulations and thanks for making it an enjoyable experience to umpire your games.

Dave Smith

Well qualified

I would like to express my support for Joe Helpem who is actively seeking election to the Clarkston school board.

I believe that because of his background, education and personal interest in the Clarkston Community Schools, he is very qualified to serve on our board of education.

Joe seeks to have the board formulate a long-range master plan for the school district as well as establishing short-term goals. Because of his background, he is very familiar with the developing and implementation of such goals.

I would urge anyone who truly has the best interests of our children in mind to vote for Joe Helpem.

Fifth-grade should be in paper more

I am a fifth-grader at Clarkston Elementary, and I am very upset with The Clarkston News. Our school barely ever gets in the paper, while other schools get an article in the paper for the same events we don't, such as a visit from the Oakland County police officers, Festival of the Arts Day and many other things.

When our school does get in the paper, it's usually about younger children, not fifth-graders. When fifth grade does get a story, like when chorus does a concert, you take about 20 pictures and only one small paragraph and a microscopic picture appear in the article.

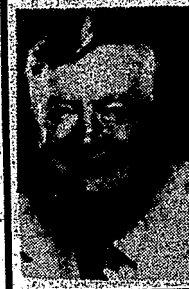

I would like to see some changes.

'If it Fitz . . .'

If Madonna's news, these officials are, too

Jim Fitzgerald

If anything written here today offends state Sens. John Kelly and Gil DiNello, they shouldn't blame me. They should blame Madonna.

Or maybe the senators have the same reading habits as Recorder's Court Judge Dominick Carnovale. If so, it's irony day. It was in a recent column about Carnovale that I declared myself against shooting patsies in a barrel or picking on trapped fish. Translated, that means it's no challenge for a columnist to make a fool out of some public figure if everyone already knows the figure did something undeniably foolish. It's too easy, like taking candy from a falling log.

In the case of Carnovale, he'd handed out a couple of wrist-tap sentences to felons who obviously deserved broken arms. The judge received a ton of bad publicity, and I was reluctant to add to it, for fear of being accused of riding a dead horse. Also, I'm compassionate, and I figured Carnovale had read enough nasty things about himself.

I needn't have worried. In a subsequent newspaper interview, Carnovale said he was unaware of any public criticism because: "I don't read the local newspapers." (The italics are mine, even if they do slant to the right.)

You might wonder how a Detroit judge keeps up with what's happening in Detroit if he reads only, say, the New York Times. I figure Carnovale gets all his local news from public television. From watching endless fundraising programs, he thinks Detroit's biggest crime is electronic panhandling.

Anyway, if Kelly and DiNello also don't read local newspapers, they wouldn't even know it if I wrote what everyone already knew — that they made stupid jerks of themselves by fistfighting on the Senate floor while visiting school children gasped at the incredible statesmanship of their elected representatives. But I was still reluctant to follow the lemmings into the barrel. Until my wife spoke up.

"It took me several days of searching both local newspapers, but I finally found a paragraph without Madonna's name in it," she said with uncharacteristic sarcasm. "It must have been a typographical error."

Her point was that if journalism can give so whopping much free advertising to the obvious fact that Madonna will do or say anything for free advertising, there should be no worry about giving an extra droplet of ink to another obvious fact — that Kelly and DiNello are a disgrace.

It was hard to disagree, in one typical exercise of responsible journalism, my favorite newspaper devoted one quarter of a page to Madonna's deepest expressions of wisdom. For instance, in referring to a lesson learned from making a movie of her real-life behavior, Madonna said: "I learned to love myself. Everybody should make documentaries about themselves."

So I have to wonder if Kelly and DiNello love themselves, and, if not, why don't they star in a documentary for school children about the making and breaking of laws? The lesson taught would be that an ordinary person can get arrested for brawling in a saloon, but a lawmaker can do it in the state Capitol with impunity. All a bright young man has to do is get elected to the Legislature and punch Senator Impunity.

The last time I criticized Kelly — for using incidental-to-holding-office money to fly to Florida for jai alai games — he denounced me in a mangled speech from the Senate floor. After I rapped DiNello for making anti-Semitic remarks, he whiningly rapped me back for not being as gracious as my then-publisher who, when he disagreed with DiNello, invited the senator to lunch. I play jai alai more often than I buy lunch for infantile senators.

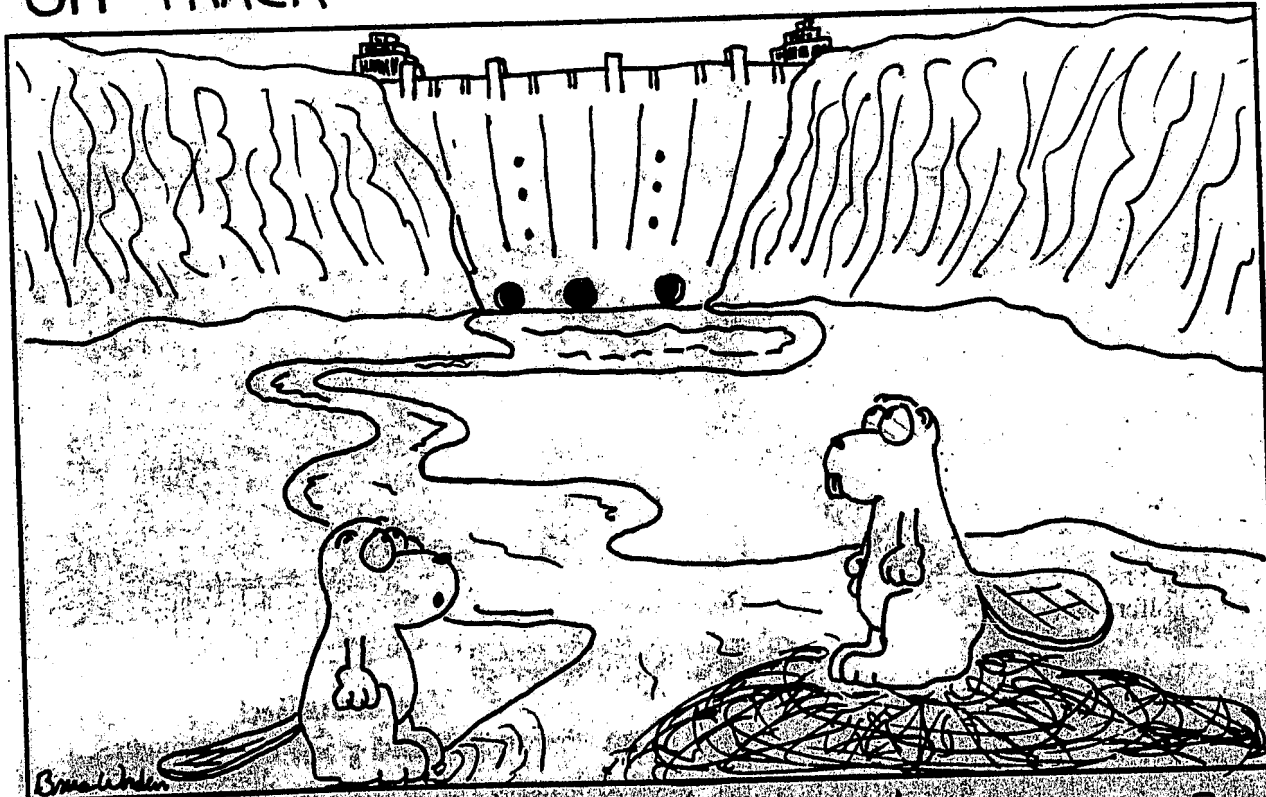

I don't know what the senators' reactions will be this time, if they're still reading local newspapers. Of course, it's possible to read the Free Press without reading me, despite the ubiquitous filler ads that keep urging: "Read Jim Fitzgerald." Sometimes they're printed in appropriate juxtaposition with other ads, such as in this Free Press clipping sent by Jim and Pat Alfredson of Lansing:

"Read Jim Fitzgerald"

"Volunteers Needed"

Just take one step forward. It's easy as ABX, with no penalty for early withdrawal by pug politicians who can't do it without moving their lips.

Rebuttal to letter

I was recently the focus of a letter in this paper from Charles Weber.

In the letter, a serious charge was leveled at me. Mr. Weber suggested that I should not be re-elected to the Clarkston Board of Education and then went on to suggest candidates better suited for the board. Under normal circumstances, a letter like this should be ignored by a candidate, but Mr. Weber's comments truly represent a central issue in this school board election.

The charge against me was that I directed the superintendent to punish the children for the defeat of the bond issue in February. People in the district who know me know this charge is not true. Those people who do not know me will find it so incredible that they will not believe it. The charge is simply too absurd to merit further comment.

More importantly, Mr. Weber goes on to say that he will support three candidates because they will "take over the board."

In listening to people talk about the schools in Clarkston and what needs to be done to get them on track, I heard one message over and over. The people in the community want to see the board members working together and with the administration and staff to achieve the common goal of good schools for our children.

They want to see an end to the constant bickering between factions on the board, between the board and the employees, and between citizen groups representing differing viewpoints. They want to see teamwork. They are not looking for someone to take over the board.

The need for teamwork was one of my campaign themes when I ran for the board last year. I believe that teamwork is needed now more than ever.

We should look at each candidate to see if they want to work with the other people involved in managing the schools. We can be successful only when every board member tries to work together and respect the views of their peers. Full agreement on every issue is not required and probably is not even desirable, but when all board members contribute to decisions, progress in our schools can be achieved.

A lot of campaign literature probably will be handed out or placed in mailboxes between now and the election and may be for and against each of the candidates.

Some of the information will be signed and some of it may be anonymous. I hope that each voter will consider all of the information for believability before using it in their voting decisions. The nature of the literature, its tone and whether it is signed or not should give you some indication of who wants to work with the district team.

Upon my re-election to the board, I will continue to work with my fellow board members to end the arguments on the board and to build the team needed to lead the district.

Durham M. Downs

Independent board candidate

This year we have three of seven school board seats contested. It is no wonder that two power groups, one representing change and improvement and the other restoration of the old order, each trying to get candidates representing their philosophy elected.

As a district that struggles to operate from year to year without additional local taxes in a developing area that has not built a new building or classroom addition in 30 years, we need to elect three candidates that understand the problems we face and are committed to finding solutions we can afford.

Joseph Helpert, a candidate for the one-year term, has visited each school building. He has talked with community groups, individuals, teachers, administrators and parents.

Joe has spent untold hours going door to door talking with people about our schools. Here is a person who wants to represent us on our school board and seeks our input. He has worked with our school district to submit a grant for needed funding from a source other than new taxes. While others tell us how bad things are, Joseph has been working to make things better.

Professionally, Joseph Helpert has experience solving problems and managing multi-million dollar budgets. With three young children, he is concerned our children receive the highest quality education possible, within the financial limitations of a prudent budget.

In an election that has seen much emphasis placed on the desires of groups pushing a narrow agenda, let's not miss an opportunity to elect an independent, talented candidate who is willing to listen. I urge you to vote for Joseph Helpert on June 10.

Superintendent off track on flier

I was surprised to read in a recent paper that Gary Haner, the superintendent of Clarkston schools, is defending the Blue Ribbon Kids flier that recently was sent out.

He said the flier was, according to election officials, a "minor infraction" of the law and that the clear intent of the flier was to oppose Janet Thomas and Carol Balzarini.

Whether or not the flier was a minor infraction or a flagrant violation of the law is not my main concern. I want to know why Mr. Haner is supporting efforts to unseat a current board member.

I have read that Mrs. Thomas has opposed Mr. Haner on several occasions and voted against his recent 6.5 percent raise. Does Mr. Haner want only those candidates who will support his every whim elected?

I do not believe that Mr. Haner's job description (for which he earns in excess of $90,000 per year) includes trying to manipulate school board elections.

Proud of cemetery

I would like to congratulate Independence Township's Department of Public Works (DPW) for the great job they're doing keeping the cemetery at White Lake Road and Dixie Highway clean, neat and free of debris.

It is a pleasure to drive down Dixie Highway and not see the paper trash from the nearby shopping center blown up against the cemetery fence, to see the grass cut and neatly trimmed, and to see the general maintenance job being done so well.

Thanks, DPW, for doing a wonderful job. Keep up the good work.

Time for change

While you're busy planting flowers and pulling weeds this week, why don't you give a few fleeting thoughts to the Clarkston school board election?

When you dig up the dead shrubs in your yard, consider the deadwood that is running for school board. Incumbent Janet Thomas has dredged up two other candidates and is trying to elect a triumvirate. Why? So she can once again wield power, become board president and tell the other board members when and how to vote on school issues.

But here is a hidden agenda, and it's not about school improvement or children. The candidates are tapping into the anti-tax movement and are duping normally intelligent leaders, some of whom live on expensive lakefront property and are fed up with Michigan's tax structure. They have also attracted a mouthy band of local eccentrics.

It's hard to forget election night when two board members partied with the opponent group instead of thanking the 500 volunteers who worked for their election.

It's hard to forget how they voted unanimously to hold that election, committing thousands of taxpayer dollars. And it's hard to forget the female board president who signed a contract with an architect against the advice of school district attorneys after she led a board that paid that architect $600,000 for very little.

Is this any way to run a school district? The staff in the district are sick at heart, and the public is discouraged and disgusted by Clarkston schools' lack of unity and purpose. Our "soap opera" school board is the talk of the county.

The educational needs of this district have taken a back seat to insidious smear campaigns and board meeting battles which go on for hours. These ridiculous open wars are getting us nowhere, and educators know it. Why would we want to return this incumbent to office?

Even anti-tax people must understand that $600,000 is a lot of money to this school district, and no matter how you cut it, these transactions took place several years ago. Who is to blame for that leadership in 1988?

When you get creative with your garden, think about the need for creative thinking in education. It won't happen by returning incumbents like Janet Thomas to the school board or by sending her pals along with her.

A little boy, Craig Shergold of Morristown, Tennessee, has one last special wish as he is dying of a brain tumor. It's safe to say that Dr. Michael Baker, an internal medicine specialist in Clarkston, will always look back fondly on this year's Student Spectacular, held at the Palace of Auburn Hills.

His band, Modesty Forbids, was the opening act for country singer Ricky Skaggs at the May 18 fund-raiser. Baker and his bluegrass band primarily play in the Clarkston area, and they jumped at the chance to open for the country star.

It was the largest audience the local band had ever performed before in its five-year existence.

Modesty Forbid is scheduled to play at the Independence Oaks County Park this summer.

This month's Detroit Monthly magazine features a story about Clarkston's Ivan Rouse, director of the Clarkston Conservatory of Music. The article, which likens Rouse to a town crier, was written by Clarkston's Cara Catallo.

Heavy electric demand recently has broken records in electrical companies. On May 29, Consumers Power delivered 114,806 megawatt-hours, surpassing by 17.7 percent the former 24-hour record for May set in 1988.

An all-time hourly peak record for May of 5,616 megawatts was set on Tuesday, May 28, at 5 p.m., surpassing any previous hourly record established in May or June in the utility's 105-year history.

Protect your pets from heartworms in the spring

Heartworm disease poses a threat to thousands of dogs in Michigan.

To combat this potentially fatal disease, the Michigan Veterinary Medical Association and its member veterinarians are participating in a statewide program to educate pet owners about the risks of canine heartworm disease and how easily it can be prevented.

In the past, heartworm disease was confined to wet, swampy regions where heartworm carrying mosquitoes breed in the millions.

But with more Americans traveling with their pets, the disease has easily spread to almost every state and Canada.

According to Griffith Acker, president of the MVMA, dog owners can reduce the risk of heartworm by asking veterinarians about preventive medication.

"Since mosquitoes are heartworm-carriers, dogs can become infected by a single bite, even if the animal spends most of its time indoors," he explained.

"However, buy placing their pet on a preventive medication program, pet owners can virtually eliminate the risk of heartworm disease."

The disease spreads when a mosquito picks up the first-stage larvae of heartworms by feeding on dogs already infected.

Over the next few weeks, these larvae develop within the mosquito and are transmitted to another dog when the mosquito feeds again.

Once inside the dog's system, the worms travel to its heart and pulmonary arteries, where they can grow up to 14-inches long.

But visible signs of the disease — loss of appetite, weight loss, fatigue and a chronic cough — do not appear until after severe damage to the vital organs has begun.

At this stage, treatment is complicated, risky and expensive.

"The first step toward prevention is to take your dog to a veterinarian for a simple blood test once a year before mosquito season, usually in the spring," said Acker.

"If he does not have heartworm, your veterinarian will prescribe either a daily or monthly preventative medicine."

Although prevention has become widespread, Acker said the disease still is a threat to dogs.

"There are two factors that can lead to the spread of heartworm disease even when owners think they're taking precautions," Acker said.

"People stop giving their animals the medication too soon, and others don't give their dogs high enough doses after they are past the puppy stage."

Zoning change would allow more additions

Residents and business owners in Clarkston soon may have a little more leeway to add to their buildings.

The Clarkston Village Council voted 5-0 May 28 to recommend a slight change in the Clarkston zoning ordinance.

The proposed amendment would allow "enlargement or expansion of non-conforming uses and structures."

In other words, certain additions to a residence or business that does not meet standards in the zoning ordinance now will be allowed, as long as no one habitats that addition.

A resident asked for the change, so he could build a roof that would be placed between his house and garage to protect against rain, snow, etc.

The proposed amendment now will be reviewed by the planning commission for any recommendations before returning to the village council.

Two injured in crash

A 54-year-old Independence Township woman was injured in an accident at the intersection of Dixie Highway and Sashabaw Road, Waterford Township, June 1.

Marlene Smith of Pelton Road, Independence Township, was treated and released from Pontiac General Hospital (PGH). She was wearing a seat belt when the accident occurred.

According to the Waterford Police Department, Nicholas Gregory, 36, of Pontiac was southbound on Sashabaw Road when he hit Smith. Gregory allegedly drove through a red light and hit Smith's car, which was turning left from Dixie onto Sashabaw about 10:10 a.m. Saturday.

Police concluded that alcohol played a factor in the collision.

Gregory, who was not wearing a seat belt at the time of the accident, was also treated and released from PGH. He was issued a ticket for causing the accident.

Four ticketed for selling to minors

Four businesses in the Independence Township area recently were ticketed for selling alcohol to minors.

In a May 24 sting operation conducted by the Oakland County Sheriff's Department, 19 citations were issued to businesses, including three in Independence Township and one bordering Independence and Brandon Township.

In the sting, more than 20 decoys, ages 16-20, tried to purchase alcohol in some 140 businesses in the Oakland County area.

The businesses ticketed in Independence Township were: Country Cones and Deli, Sally Road; A&P Food Store, White Lake Road; and Lakeview Food Basket, Eston Road. The Cracker Barrel on Sashabaw Road, north of Oakhill Road, on the Independence-Brandon township border was also ticketed.

Their fines will be determined in the 52nd District Court, Independence Township. All the establishments have been reported to the Michigan Liquor Control Commission.

Economy dictates budget adjustment

The Independence Township Board voted to adjust its 1991 budget, due to a slumping economy in the first quarter.

On May 7, the board voted 6-0 to reduce estimated state-shared revenues $65,000. Trustee Daniel Travis was absent from the meeting.

According to the township's financial director, Kerry Donahue, Independence has only earned $32,000 in building permits so far in 1991. About $15,000 of this money is from the renovations at the Pine Knob Music Theater.

Donahue said the township had earned nearly $170,000 in permit revenues at this time last year. Due to the economic down-turn, Donahue said state-shared revenues will be $65,000 under budget.

The budget adjustment was approved to help reduce 1991 estimated state shared revenue.

These reductions include: $16,000 from a miscellaneous account that would have been used for an equipment breakdown at the township hall; $9,000 used in case of drainage disasters; $20,000 from a construction fund for Clintonwood Park; $20,000 in contributions to the township library.

Supervisor Frank Ronk said these adjustments are the first of many budget cuts to come this year.

Bomb scare in Toronto

The Clarkston Community Women's Club got more excitement than they bargained for during a recent trip to Toronto, Ontario.

About 15 members took the trip to see "Phantom of the Opera" in April.

On the first night of their visit, they were to leave the Sheraton Hotel for dinner.

As the women were dressing, hotel officials broadcast an announcement that all guests were to stay in their rooms and to avoid the elevators.

Jenny Graham, daughter of CCWC member Sandra Graham, happened to be on the trip in place of her mother, who was sick.

She said no explanation was given at first. "At first we thought it was a fire," she said. "We knew it was something like that because they sounded all panicked over the loudspeakers."

"We started to get scared," she added. After awhile, Jenny and the other members became more curious and left their rooms to discover what was happening.

As they started down the staircase, they met several people who had been sent away from the lobby.

The hotel had been the target of a bomb scare, they learned.

Apparently, the Turkish ambassador was also a guest in the hotel and had been a target of the bomb scare.

The CCWC members left for dinner and never learned for certain whether the bomb scare had been real or just a threat.

The whole incident lasted about two-and-a-half hours, Jenny said.

Once she returned, Jenny, 18, relived the incident in a poem called "Conflicting Tides" she wrote for a class assignment.

Expert urges cleanup of Clarkston road landfill

BY CURT MCALLISTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

An Oakland University chemistry professor is urging Clarkston-area residents to push state officials into making the Powell Landfill cleanup top priority.

On May 29, Paul Tomboulion, chairman of the Oakland University, Rochester, Chemistry Department, spoke to concerned residents about the process of cleaning up landfills.

He gave the seven residents in attendance a history lesson on landfill cleanup and told them what they could do to speed up efforts for the Powell Landfill.

The Powell Landfill, on Clarkston Road near Perry Lake Road, Independence Township, was created in the 1940s and was closed in 1978. The Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) reportedly shut down the site because of insufficient topsoil covering and inadequate compaction of dumped materials.

The landfill is one of more than 2,500 Michigan sites on the DNR's list of contaminated spots. So far, numerous contaminants have been found in neighboring wells in Independence Township and the Village of Clarkston.

The most predominant contaminants are freon and dichloroethene compounds, which are linked to industrial solvents.

According to Kurt Martin, a project director for the East Michigan Environmental Action Council, the contaminants have already inconvenienced several homeowners.

The presence of contaminants has forced residents from parts of Main Street to Perry Lake Road and Northview Drive to hook into municipal water lines. Two miles'

"You've got to use the squeaky wheel syndrome."

Paul Tomboulion

worth of additional water lines had to be installed to service these homes.

Seven monitor wells were installed around the contaminated site in late March. They will help the DNR track the flow of ground water from the landfill and pinpoint other existing contaminants. The test results are to be released by the DNR later this week.

Tomboulion told the sparse crowd that landfill cleanups usually are time-consuming and very costly. He said the average cost usually runs from $20 million to $100 million.

He said the DNR usually goes after the companies with "deep pockets" who used the landfill in the past. The larger companies and the landfill owners are usually called on to carry a brunt of the cleanup costs.

The Collier Road Landfill in Pontiac, for example, cost $50 million to "cap" in 1983. Tomboulion said the City of Pontiac paid for a majority of that work because it had reportedly dumped a lot of industrial chemicals in the landfill over the years.

The site was eventually neutralized by digging a 50-foot moat around the landfill and applying bentonite, an absorptive clay, to the trench. The surface of the site was later capped with several layers of clay to bottle up the contaminated ground water.

Even though the country has been overtaken by a sense of preserving the environment, Tomboulion said half of these contaminated sites probably would not be cleaned up or capped in the next century.

With that in mind, he urged the audience to organize and keep in constant communication with the DNR.

"You've got to use the squeaky wheel syndrome," he explained. "It's important to organize a task force that will keep in contact with DNR officials on a weekly basis. Communication will help press this matter along and maybe make them re-evaluate their agenda."

Groundwater Team program recycles batteries

Dead batteries are the focus of an upcoming recycling campaign in the Clarkston area.

So hang on to your old batteries for a few weeks, and then recycle them through the special recycling campaign coming up.

Sponsored by the Independence Township Groundwater Leadership Team, the battery recycling is a second stage in its program to protect the quality of ground water in the township.

Called "Don't Bury the Dead," the new campaign is designed to make consumers more aware of the potential health problems caused when dead batteries are discarded and buried in landfills.

Once buried, the batteries slowly disintegrate, and their toxic contents leak away, often draining through the soil into the ground water. Since almost all households in Independence Township rely upon ground water for drinking water, the toxic materials can be a major hazard for township residents.

In a few weeks, the Groundwater Team plans to highlight the battery problem with a series of promotional efforts, including a dead battery collection campaign in the coming weeks.

According to James Reed, coordinator of the activities, a variety of collection sites throughout the township will be established. Citizens will be encouraged to discard batteries at any of the sites, including AA and D size, but not auto batteries, watch or hearing aid types.

Groundwater Team members will pick up the discarded for proper disposal. Locations and dates will be announced next week.

Household batteries are the largest single source of heavy metals in the ground water. Lead and mercury create the most serious hazards at this time. Cadmium, used in rechargeable batteries, is an increasing problem.

Lead can cause brain damage, impairing the development of intelligence among children. In various chemical compounds, the metal can cause kidney problems and high blood pressure, especially among adults.

Exposure to lead is No. 1 among all preventable childhood health problems, according to the Center for Disease Control. The EPA recently announced a multi-million dollar program to attack the problem in the nation's cities.

Mercury is even more toxic than lead. A minuscule quantity in the drinking water of an expectant mother can cause damage to the development of her unborn child.

Mercury can also cause major damage to the brain and kidneys of children and adults. Compounds of the metal are so toxic that one gram of mercury can trigger a fish-consumption advisory for an average size lake in Michigan.

Cadmium, also highly toxic, can cause lung damage and kidney failure. In large doses, cadmium is a proven cause of cancer.

The presence of any quantity of these three metals in drinking water is a major hazard because all of them accumulate in the body. Even small amounts taken frequently can build up to damaging levels.

The quantity of metals discarded in Michigan has reached the zone of extreme danger. An estimated total of nearly 50 million household batteries are used in the state each year. This total does not include lead-acid batteries, such as those used in cars. The 50 million batteries generate 25 tons of mercury and more than one ton of cadmium.

Most of these batteries end up buried in landfills where they become slow-release capsules that threaten to poison drinking water for decades to come.

For more information about batteries, recycling or the Groundwater Team, call Kurt Martin at 258-5188.

Tips lessen battery problems

Household batteries cannot be recycled at the local level, and the toxic forms of the heavy metals can persist for years in the environment.

Because of the complications, special equipment and technology are required for proper disposal.

In this situation, the Groundwater Team recommends the following procedures:

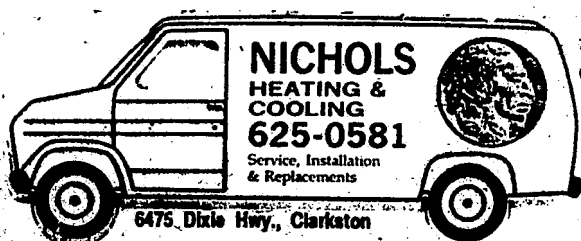

- Use rechargeable batteries whenever possible. They use cadmium, but they reduce the total volume of toxic compounds since their life span is up to 300 times that of non-rechargeable batteries.

- Avoid battery-powered products that are designed to be used and thrown away. Disposal of sealed-in batteries of such products is especially difficult.

- Save all used batteries for proper disposal. More and more drop-off centers are being established.

- Search out and use low-mercury batteries. Some manufacturers, such as Eveready, are currently selling batteries with substantially reduced mercury content. In Europe, several countries have already mandated a 98 percent reduction in mercury levels.

- When purchasing lead-acid batteries for a car, boat, lawnmower, tractor or other purpose, be sure to take the old battery to the retailer. A state law requires the retailers to dispose of lead-acid batteries according to specific procedures.

Centralized mailbox cuts theft, adds convenience

BY DENNIS V. CARTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

It's vacation time and everything is ready go, but who will pick up your mail while you're gone?

With centralized mailbox service available, you won't have to worry.

The centralized box means your mail will stay under lock and key while you're enjoying your vacation — or while you're merely gone for the day.

According to Clarkston Postmaster Mickey Gonzalez, the centralized mailbox service is available at no cost to groups of postal customers choosing to use the system.

"All they have to do is call us, and we will install the centralized mail boxes for them," he said. "It is a great way to keep one's mail secure."

Recently, residents who have their mail delivered at the intersection of Harvard and Dartmouth roads, Independence Township, decided it was time to employ the system.

Fay Crites began the move to get the system after some of her mail came up missing.

"I had nine pieces of mail taken from my mailbox, and it was a real hassle getting it all straightened out," she said. "I called the police and found out others of my neighbors had also lost mail. Next, I called the post office and found out what could be done."

"I sent out 22 letters to my neighbors and got back 20 positive responses."

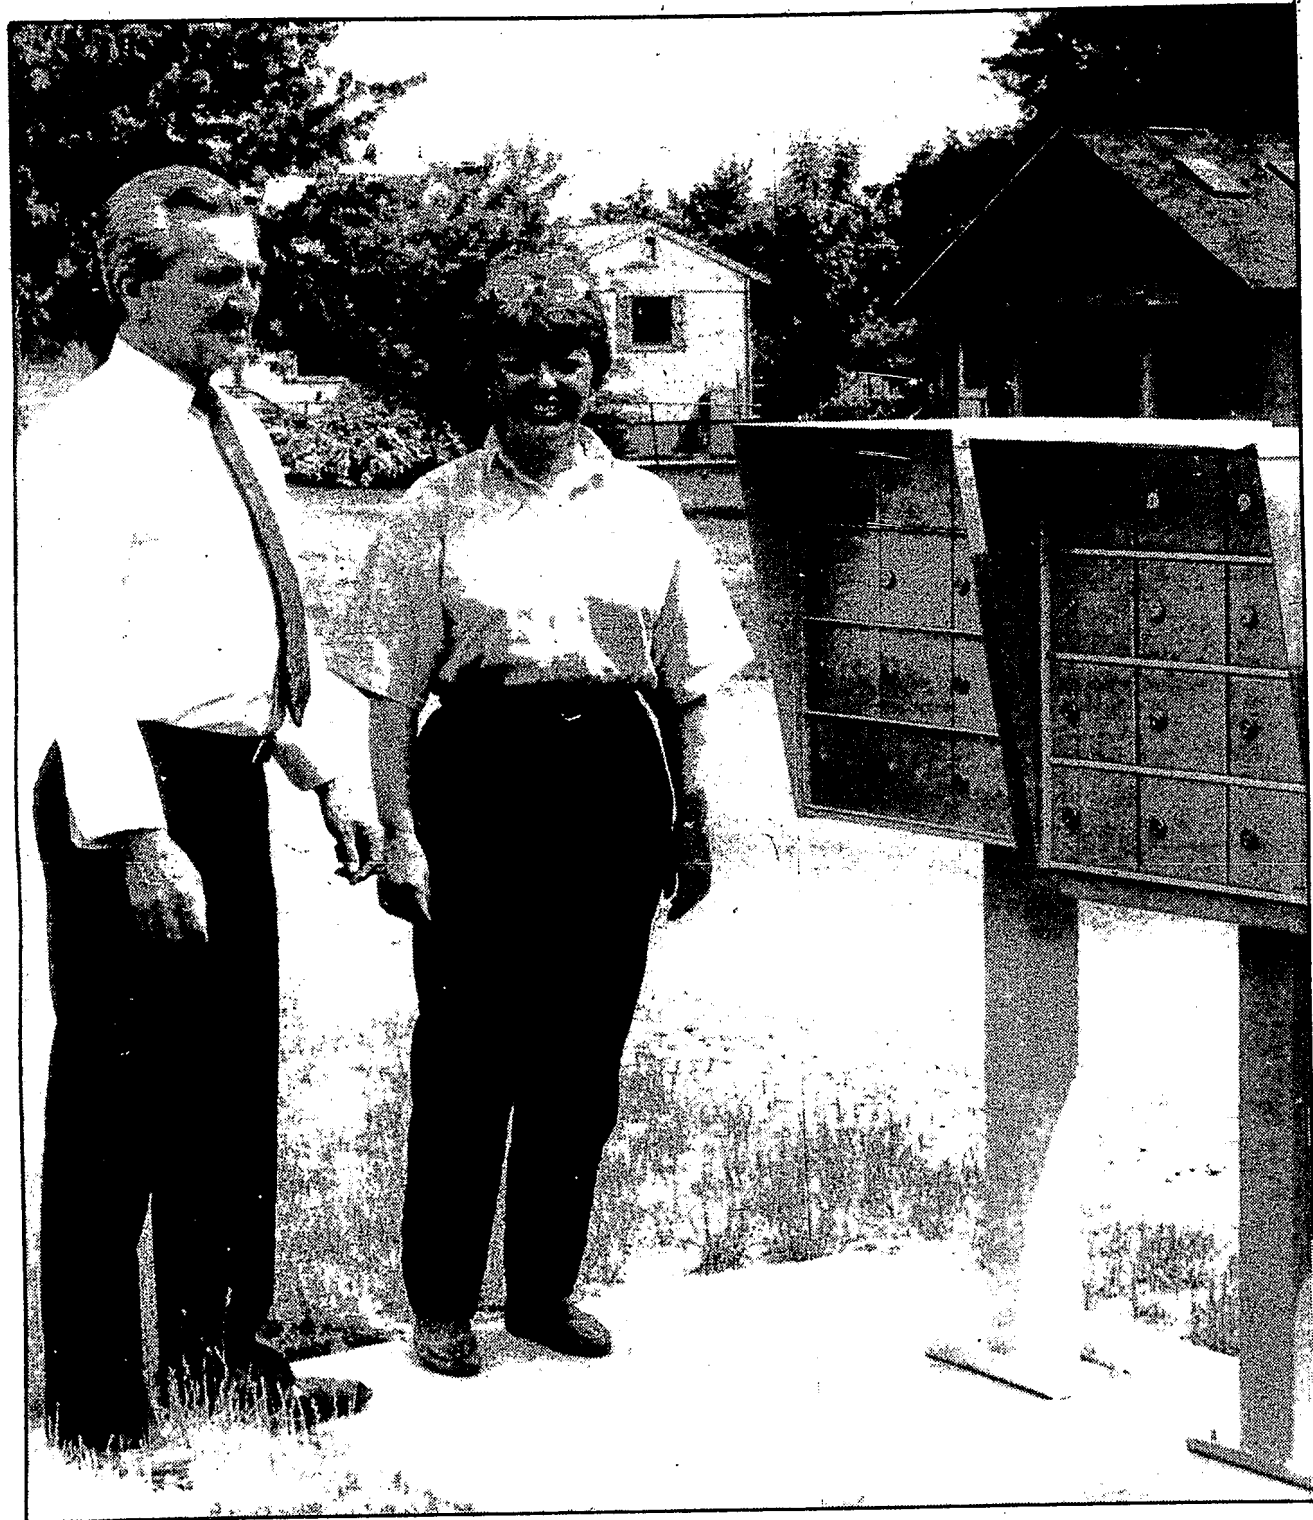

Not only is the system good for securing mail, but now residents also can receive parcels: a special parcel box is included at the centralized location.

With the centralized system, one box with compartments is installed, thus eliminating the clutter of mailboxes in long row along the roadside.

"The centralized system has a much more aesthetic appearance," said Gonzalez. "It puts everything in one central spot where everything can be handled much more efficiently."

At no charge to customers, the postal service installs the centralized box, which includes the foundation, the centralized box and the parcel box.

"All I can say is it is a big improvement, and there is no doubt about it," said Crites.

CLARKSTON Postmaster Mickey Gonzalez and Independence Township residence Fay

Crites take a look at the new centralized mailbox.

Charges dropped

Embezzlement charges were dropped against the owner of an Independence Township group home May 23.

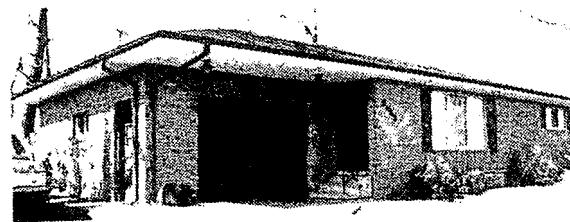

Bradley Kotula, 33, of Waterford Township had been charged with five felony counts of obtaining money in the amount of over $100 by false pretenses, embezzlement and larceny by conversion.

However, Judge Kenneth Hempstead of 51st District Court, Waterford Township, ruled that state's evidence against Kotula was insufficient and dropped the charges.

The charges were in connection with alleged bogus claims for $18,000 submitted to the state Department of Mental Health over a 15-month period.

Kotula owns and operates four group homes for the mentally impaired in Oakland County, including the Horseshoe Circle Home on the 1000 block of Horseshoe Circle, Independence Township.

THE top half of the Rogers' break-away base easily fits over the bottom section.

Safe at first, second and third

BY JAMES GIBOWSKI
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Softball fields in Independence Township are starting to break away from tradition.

This season, new break-away bases have been added to diamond No. 1 at Clintonwood Park, and next summer diamonds No. 2 and No. 3 will get the new bases, which are used to help cut down on injuries from sliding.

Parks Chief Mike Turk

"The new bases can be one step to a better system," said Independence Township Parks and Recreation Director Ann Conklin, who said the bases can help when it comes to liability.

Workers at the fields constantly fill out a checklist of field conditions. If an injury on the field does occur, this checklist and an injury report are used to determine any possible liability. Players also sign waivers before the season starts.

Conklin said she was convinced to purchase the break-away bases after seeing them displayed at a trade show. A University of Michigan study that pointed out that most softball injuries, by far, happen when players hit the bases while sliding also spurred the interest.

Though, several brands of the bases exist, recreation officials decided to purchase a set of three Rogers break-away bases for $395. Sets for the other two diamonds were not purchased this season because they were not budgeted, but they will be in the budget for next season.

When the break-away bases are added next year to field No. 3, the recreation players will not be the only ones benefiting from the change. Clarkston's varsity softball team and its opponents play on that diamond, too.

A Rogers' base comes in three pieces. One piece stays permanently in the ground. Two interlocking pieces of a base connect to the part in the ground. The top half pops off upon strong impact when the foot from a sliding player contacts the side of the base.

Mike Turk, chief of parks for Independence Township, said "There are so many different types of softball players. Many of them don't know how to slide."

Turk, who plays on a nationally ranked softball team that travels throughout the country, said the recreation department has also added other features for players' safety or convenience.

The outfield fence on field No. 1 has been raised from six to eight feet. Home run hitters won't enjoy the extra height, but outfielders will now have less of chance to cut their hands or arms on the top of the fence.

Field No. 1 will have better drainage after rains this year because 100 yards of sand (one truckload of sand equals five yards) have been added to its infield, helping to slope the pitching mound for better dispersement of water. Next season, diamond No. 3 will get the same treatment.

Some new lights have been added, and, eventually, a sprinkler system will be added so the fields can be watered at more practical times.

The 3 R's: reading, 'riting and reporting

James
Gibowski

What do you tell 50 high school students who are interested in possibly going into journalism?

You tell them the truth.

So when I faced the students in two half-hour sessions May 1 at the Clarkston High School "Career Day," I told them, "If you want to make any money in the business, go into advertising."

Actually, this spring I was not one of the guest speakers at the career day, I taught an after-school enrichment newspaper class (through Clarkston Community Education) at Pine Knob Elementary School. Eight fourth- and fifth-graders spent eight weeks writing and laying out The Pine Knob Gazette.

While speaking at the career day or advising Gazette reporters, I started to ask myself some questions, the biggest being, "If I had to do it all over again, would I still go into journalism?"

In some ways, that question didn't always apply to me. A few months after I graduated from Central Michigan University in 1975, I became a high school teacher in Jackson. I was the school's newspaper adviser, but I wasn't a professional journalist.

However, since 1975, I have been a newspaper reporter for four years, in addition to my 11 years of teaching.

Anyway, would I still go into journalism, knowing what I know now?

Yes and no.

And when I spoke to these young wanna-be journalists, I felt it was important not to hide my "yes-and-no" feelings about the field.

One of the biggest reasons on the "no" side is the money. I told them how much I currently earn (which might have been impressive to some students who compared it to how much they make frying hamburgers at McDonald's, but it wasn't nearly as impressive to the unbelieving teacher who sat in the back of the room).

However, I did point out that mid-size dailies pay more than weeklies, and large dailies pay more than mid-size dailies. And I threw in how some journalists make extra cash writing books. And then there's always Bill Bonds making $1 million bucks a year on television...

I also told them that sometimes the hours are a pain, but that can vary if you're writing on a morning or afternoon newspaper, or if you're covering night meetings (or sports) or not, etc.

But I also let them know about some of the good things: I told them one of the best things is the personalities of your fellow workers. Newspaper people are interesting because they invariably know (or think they know) a little bit about everything.

And meeting different people is also a big plus. I let them know that interviewing and photographing people like Alan Trammell, Ernie Harwell and Ken Griffey Jr. is a kick, but there are also big kicks doing a story about Clarkston senior Chris Wasilk (perfect attendance for 13 years) or Clarkston senior citizen Geraldine Feltes (who last summer wrestled away some teen-agers and caught a Trammell game-winning home run at Tiger Stadium).

And, of course, writing on a newspaper is a way of informing, entertaining and sometimes even swaying the community of readers.

There are other pluses and minuses, but maybe they'll have to find those out for themselves.

I guess the fact that 50 students signed up for journalism at the career day (about twice as many that signed up a year ago) is a good sign. After all, they had 21 other occupations to choose from, including business management, dentistry, engineering, veterinary medicine, law, and surgery.

And I was impressed with the work of my eight students who put out "The Pine Knob Gazette." If those fourth and fifth graders are the type of students that newspapers will employ in the future, then the business will be in good shape, well, possibly be in good shape.

Why do I say possibly?

Because there is one more key to the future of the business, and at the same time, a key to the future of an important means of communication our country has had since its beginning.

Not only will newspapers have to attract quality reporters and editors, they will have to attract many of these current fourth- and fifth- (as well as 10th- and 12th-) grade students as readers.

In other words, the battle between television and reading.

The future of newspapers is in their hands composing on the computers and in their hands picking up the paper on their doorsteps.

Do I think it will happen?

Yes and no.

Recreation Roundup

ADULT SOCCER LEAGUES

It's a reality. Independence Township Parks and Recreation Department will be having a Men's Soccer League this summer. The schedule will be completed soon, so any additional players still interested in playing should contact the recreation department.

In addition, the rec. department would still like to get a women's and/or co-rec league(s) off the ground. Those interested should contact the rec. department.

PRE T-BALL CLINIC

This clinic is one way to introduce 5- and 6-year-old boys and girls to baseball or softball.

Although these children may not be ready to participate in Jr. Baseball/Youth Softball Leagues, the clinic gives them an opportunity to learn the basics of the game. The clinic covers proper throwing, batting and fielding techniques.

The fee is $20 for residents. The program is set to begin June 18 and run through July 30 (no class July 2). The class will run from 3 to 4 p.m. on Tuesdays at Clarkston High School.

SWIM LESSONS

Swim lessons are being offered for anyone aged 2 to adult. Three sessions with 10 classes in each will be held Monday through Friday. Registration began June 3 on a first-come, first-serve basis.

WALK MICHIGAN

Participants in any of the rec. department's free "Walk Michigan" walks not only will get some exercise but will have a chance to win a free trip for two to Mackinac Island over Labor Day weekend.

At the conclusion of each day's walk will be drawings for prizes. The Grand Prize winner will be drawn from all entrants of the 1991 Walk Michigan program.

The next scheduled walk is 9 a.m. Thursday, June 20, at Clintonwood Park.

Clarkston News Special Writer

Clarkston, overshadowed by powerhouses Brother Rice, West Bloomfield and Bloomfield Hills Groves, managed three points in a tough tennis regional at Waterford Kettering May 22.

Earning victories for the Wolves (who finished 9-4 during the regular season) were Grant Manley at No. 3 singles, Maarten Cense and Alex Garayo at No. 1 doubles and the No. 3 duo of Jeremy Dody and Renny Abraham.

Garayo and Cense crushed their Walled Lake opponents, 6-1, 6-0, before falling to heavily-favored Brother Rice. With the regional split, Garayo was assured of the best record on the team.

Dody and Abraham dominated their Kettering opponents, also losing just one game. Ironically, earlier in the week, Clarkston lost to Kettering at No. 3 doubles in the opening round of the Greater Oakland Activities League tournament. However, this time Dody and Abraham got the call.

Manley capped an impressive season with a 6-4, 6-3 romp over Milford's Jason Porter. It was the second time this year Porter lost to Clarkston. Earlier, freshman Bobby Brazier dismissed him, 6-3, 7-5.

GOAL tournament, May 14

Clarkston won GOAL championships two events.

Senior Marc Swartout won the No. 2 singles title and the team of sophomore Craig Coxen and freshman Bobby Brazier won the No. 2 doubles crown.

Team awards

Marc Swartout and Alex Garayo were selected as the team's co-Most Valuable Players.

Swartout and Jason Gross were selected All-GOAL and Swartout was also named as the team's Outstanding Senior.

Brendan Kelly was chosen as the squad's Most Improved Player.

Garayo, an exchange student from Spain, and Maarten Cense, from Holland, were given a special International Award.

3-sport athletes a rarity

BY JAMES GIBOWSKI
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Three-sport athletes are becoming rarer and rarer in high school sports.

There are 377 seniors at Clarkston High School. Out of that 377, 94 competed in at least one sport this school year. Of those 94, only three competed in three sports: Carrie Roeser, Stacey Secatch and Mike Stanton.

There are 383 juniors, with 107 of them competing in at least one sport. Only two competed in three sports:

Dugan Fife and Jeremy Burke.

Of the 433 sophomores, 157 played in at least one sport. Thirteen of them played in three sports: Heather Austin, Steve Black, Steve Cohoon, Chris Colburn, Chris Combs, Steve Locher, Scot Matusz, Eric Ryan, Rachel Seiferlein, Nick Shires, Matt Smith, Courtney Whitaker and Amy Winn.

In other words, 1.5 percent of all students enrolled at Clarkston High School competed in three sports. Also, only 5 percent of all athletes played three sports.

Roeser 7th at state, will run again at Indy

BY JAMES GIBOWSKI
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Clarkston senior Carrie Roeser placed seventh in the 800 meter run at the Class A state championships in Grand Rapids June 1.

Roeser, who a week earlier had broken the school's record in the event with a 2:18.39, finished in 2:20.34 at state. Greenville's Sara Minier won the race in 2:17.84.

It wasn't the first time Roeser had raced at the state finals. Her sophomore year, she joined teammates Sonya Schaffer, Jenny Mahler and Nicole Chinavare to win the 3200 relay. Roeser has previously placed sixth in the 1600 at the finals.

Clarkston sophomore Rachel Seifferlein also competed at state in the shot put, finishing 13th.

Roeser's finish gave the Wolves two points, which tied them for 53rd in team scoring.

Ann Arbor Pioneer won the championship with 95 points, well past second-place finisher Detroit Cass Tech which totaled 52.

Roeser's high school career still isn't over. On June 8, she will join other elite seniors who have been invited and run at the Midwest Meet of Champions at Indianapolis. She will be running the 800 for team Michigan, which will compete against squads from Indiana, Illinois and Ohio.

Boy makes triple play — alone

A 7-year-old Springfield Township boy pulled off an unusual feat last week by completing an unassisted triple play in a midget league contest.

Second baseman Jared Osrom collected the gem May 30. His team, Schram Auto Parts, plays in the Davisburg Youth Athletic Association.

According to assistant coach Donna Genre, Jared caught a line drive then tagged two baserunners caught between the basepaths. His team went on to win the game 24-8.

Genre said the play attracted attention from spectators and opponents. "Jared's play excited everyone," she said. "Everyone was cheering him, even the other team. It was a great moment for Jared because his grandparents were at the game."

Jared is a student at Andersonville Elementary School.

Information at your fingertips in township library

BY DENNIS V. CARTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Gaining information is what a library is all about, and now managing that information has become quicker and more accurate in Independence Township.

With a new automated computer system, the Independence Township Library on Clarkston Road has entered a new age of information management.

"What we are doing here is the first step in a three-phase process," said Patience Beer, automation manager.

Other areas in library automation will be added in the future, for example, automation of the card catalogue.

Computer scanners have replaced the old system of the card in the sleeve of book.

"Under the old system, to check out a book, we would remove the card from the sleeve on the inside cover of the book and then stamp the book and the card," said Beer.

"Now all the books have BAR codes, which are coded lines on a tab which is put on the books so the scanner can read them and register the information about that book. If the book is overdue, the computer automatically prints a letter to inform the holder of the book that it is overdue. It makes keeping up with the status of books much faster and more accurate," she explained.

To become "online" — a computer term meaning that information may be retrieved instantly on a computer — many hours were put in by 17 volunteers, who helped with the huge task of getting the books prepared to be programmed in the computer system.

"Some libraries shut down or hire people to go online, but we did it here with volunteers and without having to shut down. These volunteers really brought this to past, and we cannot thank them enough. They really put in a lot of work and were terrific," said Beer.

The project, which began in 1988, received a huge push in October of 1990 with the first phase coming online this April.

Along with preparing the book for automation, the staff was trained on the new system.

"The staff has been trained on system, with training being an ongoing process. As we expand the system the training will continue," said Beer.

According to Susan Aho, a librarian now using the new system, the automation has made many changes in her job.

"This system makes everything so much faster," she said. "If an individual needs to know what books they have checked out, all we have to do is key in their name, and the computer will show what they have out. As soon as a book is returned we can remove that record completely.

"With the old system, it was difficult to have the information at your fingertips, but now with this automated system it is so easy to obtain the needed information. They bring the book up to the counter, we scan it, and it's easy as that," said Aho.

Board says no to King, Shore traffic light

The Springfield Township Board denied the request for a street light at the corner of King Road and Shore Drive May 8.

The request was made by three families who live near the intersection. In a letter to the board, they stated that they were worried about the safety of the children who catch a bus from the corner every morning. The families were concerned about the traffic flow, as well as a suspicious vehicle which had reportedly been spotted near the bus stop.

Trustee Nancy Strole said she visited two other residences in the area and was told they were unaware of any type of problems at the corner.

Strole told the board that she didn't think the corner merited a street light.

"I don't see any justification of installing a street light at this intersection," she said. "This corner isn't any different than the others in the township."

Trustee Margaret Bloom said the petitioners should have secured more signatures on their letter before coming before the board.

Supervisor Collin Walls also said the conditions of the corner weren't dire enough to earn a street light. The proposal was soundly defeated minutes later.

Village millage rate set at 5.4889 mills

Clarkston residents will be paying about the same amount in village taxes this year.

While many homes in the village will be assessed at a higher rate compared to last year, the general fund millage rate will be lowered this year to comply with the Headlee Amendment to the state constitution. The amendment automatically lowers the millage rate whenever the property values increase at a rate higher than the rate of inflation.

Village manager Artemus Pappas said, "Some people might pay more; some will be less, but it shouldn't vary very much."

Last year, the general fund millage rate was 6.15 mills. This year it will drop to 5.4889 mills. The sewer bond and interest redemption fund will remain the same at one-half mill.

One mill is $1 for every $1,000 assessed property valuation.

That means that in the Village of Clarkston, the owner of a $100,000 home assessed at half its market value ($50,000) will again pay $274.45 in taxes to the general fund.

A FEW Crop Walk participants take advantage of this relief station in Depot Park, Clarkston, on Sunday, June 2. According to Rosemary

Pursell, an event organizer, about 192 walkers participated in the event and raised more than $10,000. The money raised this year surpassed 1990's total by nearly $3,000. While rain fell early Sunday, the day cleared up for a cool, comfortable walk.

A STREAM of Crop Walk participants make their way along the 6-mile course. The funds raised will be used by the Church World Service in overseas relief and development work, and 25 percent will stay in the Clarkston area to go into a fund for local hunger needs, administered by the Independence Township Ministerial Association.

Teen writes way to top in statewide contest

BY CURT MCALLISTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

A Clarkston Junior High School eighth-grader has been honored for her stand on helping America's homeless.

Rebecca Radcliff, 14, earned first-place honors in the America & Me Essay Contest. The topic of this year's essay was "How I Will Help Preserve America." Rebecca's winning entry was based on helping America's homeless.

Her essay was chosen from 4,500 other entries submitted by eighth-graders around the state. The top 10 essays were chosen by a panel of judges, which included First Lady Michelle Engler, Lt. Governor Connie Binsfield and U.S. Rep. Bob Carr.

Rebecca was presented with a $1,000 savings bond at an awards banquet in Lansing last month. The event was hosted by Farm Bureau Insurance, which established the contest in 1968.

She and nine other winners were treated to a day at the state capitol May 14. The tour included meeting Sen. Debbie Stabenow and Lt. Gov. Binsfield. These activities were part of the awards day list of festivities.

Already, Rebecca has plans for her contest winnings. She has narrowed her choices to either buying a horse or a car. She noted, however, that her parents are looking at the savings bond as money for college.

REBECCA Radcliff, an eighth-grader at Clarkston Junior High School, is this year's statewide winner of the America & Me Essay Contest. She is the daughter of Harry and Jennifer Radcliff of Main Street, Clarkston.

Wax coatings OK

Wax coatings on fruit and vegetables recently have caused some concerns among consumers, according to Sylvia Treitman, home economist for the Oakland County Cooperative Extension.

Some think the coating is unsafe to eat. But that's not the case, says Treitman.

"It is perfectly safe to eat," she says.

The thin layer of wax is often used to prevent moisture loss, shriveling and mold growth. It has been used by manufacturers for many years. Plus, the coatings are approved by the Food and Drug Administration, says Treitman, adding that the waxes are indigestible and are not absorbed by the body.

The best advice for consumers is to treat the waxed produce as any other fresh produce — scrub it with a brush under warm water to remove any dirt that adheres.

"Never use soaps or chemicals on food," adds Treitman, explaining that that could cause more problems. If desired, peel fruit or vegetables to remove waxed skin.

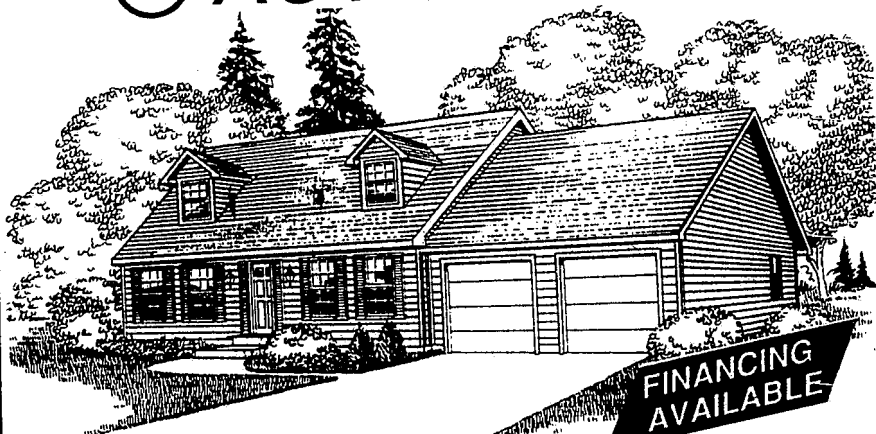

For other food and nutrition-related questions, call the Food and Nutrition Hotline 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday at 858-0904.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

Ron Rodda
Sales Manager

"Let's discuss your Career In Real Estate Sales"

WHERE IS THE SCRIVENER?

QUESTION: There seems to be a tremendous amount of paperwork associated with the purchase of real estate. Was it always this way?

ANSWER: In the early days, land transfer was accomplished by "livery of seizen" which literally means transfer of possession. In the presence of witnesses, the seller would take a clod of turf and twig from a tree and hand it over to the buyer as a symbol or token of the transfer.

The transfer was then made a matter of record by having the "scrivener" (the person in the community who could write) do his thing and write out the transfer on a parchment and affix his seal.

IN THE OLD DAYS, the transfer of property was accompanied by a simple ceremony.

Mr. Vliet's ancestry dates back to the founding of Clarkston as acknowledged in Clarkston's history. Gigi is extremely proud of her heritage from the Vliet side of the family.

Gigi will wear a white satin gown with a sweetheart neckline, double-sleeved with pearl strands adjoining the tulip cap of the top sleeve. Her long train has pearls and sequins covering the lace and netted areas. Pearls and sequins adorn the bodice and waist, and she will be wearing a full brim hat covered with white flowers and pearls.

Gigi and her four bridesmaids (dressed in crystal teal tea-length gowns) will be brought to Depot Park in a white stretch limousine, and each will be escorted from the limousine down the aisle, with Gigi exiting the limousine as the wedding march is played.

Gigi's younger brother and sister, Alana, 9, and Dustin Fisher, 7, will be flower girl and ring bearer for the ceremony. And Joseph R. Fisher, her 19-year-old brother, will be ushering. Music will be piped into the park by a disk jockey.

Gigi will be given away by her father, Gregory Fisher of Davisburg, and her mother, Virginia Vliet Radtke of Clare. The Rev. Max Lynn Tucker of Clawson will officiate the ceremony. Parents of the groom are Gregory and Carol Kreutzer of West Bloomfield.

Teal and white balloons set in netting on the gazebo will be let loose at the time of the bride and groom's descent down the gazebo stairs. A reception following the ceremony will be at Spring Lake Country Club, Independence Township, and the bride's cake is being made by St. Joseph Mercy Hospital's chef and will consist of crystal pedestals and a crystal and 14 karat gold trimmed top.

Laser technology may change field of dentistry

BY DENNIS V. CARTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Laser technology has been revolutionizing medicine for 30 years, but now it has landed in the Clarkston area in the form of a new magic dental wand.

"This laser will change the face of dentistry in the same ways that anesthesia and the high-speed drill has revolutionized it in the past," said dentist Michael E. Hennessy of Independence Township.

Hennessy has been putting the new laser technology in practice since the middle of March and has found that it hasn't failed him yet.

"I use the laser about two or three times a day and will probably work up to about seven or eight times a day in the future. I'm very satisfied with the results. It hasn't let me down yet."

The laser uses a lower wattage than the type of lasers used in the past, which allows the operator of the new ND:YAG laser to work on gums without injuring the tooth.

"What makes this laser so effective is the low wattage and the pulsating action," Hennessy said.

"The low wattage (3 watts) allows you to touch a tooth while working on the gum tissue without causing

DENTIST Michael Hennessy says laser treatment will change the field of dentistry.

His $50,000 machine is one of only a few in Michigan.

What's new in business

any damage to the tooth because it won't melt the enamel. Also, the pulsing action decreases the pain factor that might occur with the use of other instruments. It has another benefit in that it cauterizes the incisions as you go so there is a lot less bleeding while performing the gum surgery," he said.

With tooth decay on the decline, gum disease has become the leading cause of tooth loss.

"This system can be used to desensitize teeth and other on related teeth problems, but utilizing the laser in gum care is the major breakthrough," said Hennessy, who began his practice in the Clarkston area in 1986.

The laser, which is also used to kill bacteria, has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration. By killing the bacteria, the laser helps to control gum disease and speeds up the healing process.

Hennessy's laser, which cost $50,000, is the only one in use in area. In fact, only 23 are in Michigan.

The laser was developed by two Michigan brothers who now operate out of Troy. Terry Myers, a dentist in Walled Lake, and his brother William, an ophthalmologist, began marketing the laser through their company, American Dental Laser, in 1987. The laser is now sold worldwide with some 500 sold internationally.

Hennessy said another benefit of the laser is that it can be employed without the use of anesthesia and is for the most part painless.

"A lot of people are afraid to go to the dentist, but by using the laser, it makes the visit a lot less painful; and I rarely have to use any anesthesia.

"This makes it lot easier for the patient who is already nervous. By the year 2000, you will probably see every dentist office in country using this type of laser," said Hennessy.

THIS laser can even remove print without harming the paper.

She shares magic of natural world

BY CURT MCALLISTER
Clarkston News Associate Editor

Lynn Conover has always provided children with a unique look at nature, and now she's been recognized for her endeavors.

Conover, an assistant parks naturalist at Independence Oaks County Park, has been presented with a plaque of recognition from the Michigan Alliance for Environmental and Outdoor Education.

She received the award for her work in the field of natural history interpretation. Conover was nominated by fellow naturalist Tim Nowicki for her program, "Tuning Your Tots."

The program is designed for children ages 3 to 6. They are taught about the seasons through music, plays and hikes. Conover uses exercises to stimulate all five senses. They help the youngsters become more aware of their environment, she said.

She said early exposure will give the children an opportunity to better understand their natural surroundings.

"My philosophy has been that a child doesn't remember everything he or she is taught in life," she said. "However, if you expose children to the outdoors and its sights and sounds, then you've set a foundation for natural appreciation."

Nowicki said Conover's nomination was the least he could do to recognize her program and accomplishments.

"Lynn has done a great job here at the park. She's very professional and passionate about her work," he said. "Her innovations with the Tuning Your Tots program has brought a lot of people to our nature center."

Conover has been active in the environmental field for 13 years and an employee at the county park for eight years. She has a bachelor's degree in fisheries and wildlife from Michigan State University, East Lansing.

Conover is in charge of various educational programs at the park, as well as serving as the nature center's volunteer coordinator. She also operates Star Lab, a portable, inflatable planetarium. She usually takes the 30-person planetarium to area schools to show the children the universe's many constellations.

During her musical outings, Conover is known to entertain children with a guitar or the dulcimer, a stringed instrument originating from the Appalachian Mountains.

LYNN CONOVER, an assistant parks naturalist at the Independence Oaks County Park, has been cited for teaching children the basics about nature.

She said the most gratifying part of her job is seeing people realize that a different world exists beyond their backyards.

"It's really gratifying to see folks realize that there's a new world beyond their climate-controlled homes and cars. But the kids are the best," she said. "There's nothing like seeing a child hold an earthworm or watch a dragonfly for the first time. It seems almost magical."

"I'm very fortunate to have such a terrific job and work in such beautiful surroundings," she said.

SANDRA Heard, daughter of Bill and Faye Heard of Clark Road, Springfield Township, was recently named National Finalist for the Model of the Year USA competition.

Heard heads for competition

BY TRACY KING
Clarkston News Associate Editor

Though her family and friends have encouraged her from time to time, Independence Township's Sandra Heard never really thought seriously about modeling.

That is until she was named a national finalist in the Model of the Year USA competition, a potential springboard to a full-time modeling career.

The competition, held July 27 at the Macomb Center of Performing Arts in Mount Clemens, is attended by agents from several modeling agencies around the country.

The competition allows agents to arrange interviews with participants, after seeing them in swimsuits, evening gowns and an outfit of the participant's choice.

The young woman chosen as Model of the Year U.S.A. is featured on the cover of Model Business, receives an personal audition with top modeling agencies and receives a portion of $10,000 in prizes.

Sandra, 21, was selected as a finalist for the contest after auditioning at a previous Model of the Year competition in Rochester.

The 1987 Clarkston High School graduate was interviewed and had to "walk and talk" for the judges.

Sandra works as a secretary for Huntington Banks and says she "actually didn't think anything would come from it."

"When I heard of it I said, 'well, why not,'" she says.

Since being chosen, Sandra has prepared for the competition by exercising and eating right, which she says has been "very difficult."

Eventually she will choose her swimsuit and evening gown.

For now, Sandra will get used to her role as national finalist and will prepare for what could be a whole new career.

School secretary known for smile, efficiency

BY LINDA PALACE

Lorelie White will be leaving her job as secretary at Clarkston Junior High School in August, and it will not be easy to replace her.

Laura, as she is more often called, was recently nominated for an Employee Recognition Award by the entire staff because of the many things she does for everyone.

The application read, in part: "Laura's friendly smile and charming personality greet everyone who enters the CJHS office. She is always more than willing to allow anyone who needs help to interrupt her busy schedule, whether it be a faculty member or student."

"Besides her secretarial duties, she also does the following: takes care of the pop and snack machines for students and faculty, oversees the parent volunteer luncheons, prepares food for occasional staff luncheons as well as snacks for all faculty meetings, organizes surprises for special occasions and keeps the office pleasant and attractively decorated for the different seasons and holidays."

"Laura's efficiency, conscientiousness and attention to detail are first rate. She is an A-1 secretary whose extra touches make our lives easier and happier."

Laura was born in Troy and grew up there. She then attended Patricia Stevens' Finishing School. She worked as a personnel assistant for a company in Detroit before beginning her career at Clarkston schools 16 years ago. She has been at Clarkston Junior High for 12 years.

Eighteen years ago, Laura married Lee and added his two daughters, Jan and Sheri, and son, Ed, to her family, consisting of her daughter, Kim.

Laura and Lee enjoy snowmobiling, boating and hunting for morel mushrooms. She also finds time for crafts.

Although Laura is anxious to move to Torch Lake, she says she will miss her many friends in Clarkston, especially those at CJHS. She will see the last of many of them when school is over for teachers on June 13. The staff will attend a special luncheon in her honor on June

Eating nutritious snacks is better than going on fast

Many busy Americans skip breakfast or lunch routinely to try to save time and control weight gain, says Sylvia Treitman, home economist for the Oakland County Cooperative Extension Service.

This often results in gorging on high-fat, high-calorie foods late at night. Calorie consumption is often higher than normal this way, and weight is gained.

"Eating several small nutritious meals, even at one's desk at work, is better than fasting all day and gorging on everything in sight at night," advises Treitman.

If you are very busy and have little time to spend on meal preparation, relying on frozen dinners and fast food restaurants for meals may not provide the important vitamins and nutrients you need. Most convenience foods contain too much sodium, fat and sugar.

Here are a few ideas to help you eat healthfully when "eating on the run."

■ Try to eat breakfast or a mid-morning snack, for example, a whole grain muffin and yogurt/ fruit, bagel with low-fat cheese each day.

■ Keep small healthy snacks in your desk: low-fat crackers, boxed juices, microwave natural popcorn, fresh fruits like oranges, bananas or apples, dried fruits and nuts and seeds (good alternative to candy bars), water-packed tuna in small cans are handy.

■ At home, use time-saving cooking methods, not "fast food" from restaurants. Slow cookers and microwaves make easy one-dish meals. Start a simple balanced meal in your slowcooker before leaving for work.

■ Keep plastic bags of cut vegetables in your refrigerator "ready to grab."

■ Stay away from the vending machines unless they offer fresh fruit or yogurt.

For other useful tips on nutritious eating or feed and nutrition questions, call the Food and Nutrition Hotline at 858-0904, Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Library offers 'wild' reading this summer

Children who are wild about reading and who enjoy adventures may want to register for the Independence Township Library summer reading program.

"Read on the Wild Side" officially begins Tuesday, June 18, and registration is taking place now at the library at 6495 Clarkston Road, Independence Township.

The program runs Tuesdays through Aug. 6. Children who will be in grades one through three meet 10:30-11:45 a.m. Children who will be in grades four through six meet 1-2:15 p.m.

Children will be awarded special "wild" certificates depending upon the number of books they read.

In addition, the theme carries through each Tuesday session, with fun events for participants.

For example, on June 18, children may make wild wonderful music with musician Brenda McDonald, and on July 2, a truly wild animal visits: a Vietnamese pig. On July 4, children are asked to wear a "wild thing" costume and march in Clarkston's Fourth of July parade. That same costume will come in handy July 30 during the Wild Thing costume party, highlighted by cookies and cold drinks.

Pet of the Week

Shy but lovable

Randy is shy, and it's understandable, considering his past.

This 4-year-old Siamese was one of 250 cats found cooped up in the home of a Pontiac woman last year. As well as being malnourished, Randy is believed to have been caged for nearly four years.

Randy is a lovable cat, and he's been neutered. His adoption fee is $47.

To see Randy, visit the Humane Society, 3600 Auburn Road, Rochester Hills, 852-7420. Hours at the non-profit shelter are 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Voter's guide to candidates and millage renewal

Carol D. Balzarini

Carol Balzarini, 53, of 10270 Reese Road, Independence Township, has lived in the area for 20 years. She is an editor at Electronic Data Systems Sales Support.

Balzarini holds a bachelor's degree in communications from Michigan State University (MSU), East Lansing, and an elementary teaching certificate from MSU.

She served four years on the Independence Township Board and six years on the Independence Township Planning Commission.

Other community activities have included 1981 co-chairperson of CURE (Citizens United to Restore Education) and a member of the 1978 Clarkston Schools Citizens Advisory Committee.

She and her husband, Don, who served as the Clarkston High School ski team coach for six years, have two children: Angela, 27, of Dallas, Texas, and Andy, 25, of Scottsdale, Ariz.

Q: What is the biggest problem in the Clarkston school district? What's your solution?

Communication. For example, the district sends many newsletters to parents, but the newsletter to everyone, including people without children in school, is sent only twice a year. Communication is currently so poor that the millage renewal may fail. Too much time is spent telling the taxpayers who to vote against and not what to vote for! If the millage renewal fails, all other problems will be secondary.

Solution: Spend less time communicating with parents and more time communicating with people who aren't aware of the needs of the district. They represent 70 percent of the taxpayers, the people most likely to vote "no."

Q: Do you think area residents trust school officials? If not, how would you improve that? If yes, to what do you attribute that trust?

Right now, no. They did at one time, but the situation has changed in the past few years. We need return things to the way they were. We must restore the credibility of the board for the good of education.

We can do this by electing people who recognize that education is a service business, who believe that educating children is a top priority, who demonstrate good judgment, who believe in fiscal responsibility, who work to convince people of the real needs of the district, who realize that tax dollars only go so far, and who will work within the budget.

Q: What do you think should be done about Clarkston's facilities problems?

We must go back to the "drawing board" and re-evaluate our needs. We need to determine what we absolutely must have to properly house and educate our children. Then we must communicate those needs to the taxpayer.

We must do the best we can with the resources we have. But, on the other hand, we cannot afford to put our elementary music classes back in storage rooms, for example, or have special programs meeting in the halls as we once did. Nor can we afford to cut new programs that help our children compete more successfully in the modern world.

On the ballot: millage renewal

An explanation of the ballot issue in the Clarkston Community Schools June 10 election follows.

What it says:

Shall the limitation on the amount of taxes which may be assessed against all property in Clarkston Community Schools, Oakland County, Michigan, be increased by 20 mills ($20 on each $1,000) on state equalized valuation for the year 1991, for the purpose of providing additional funds for operating purposes (this being a partial millage renewal of 20.9271 mills previously approved by the electorate for operating which with the 1990 tax levy)?

What it means:

The proposal asks area residents to renew a school operating millage, which expired at the end of the 1990 fiscal year.

It's considered a partial millage because it's asking for 20 mills instead of 20.9271 mills approved in a previous election.

If approved, residents would continue to pay $20 for every $1,000 in assessed property valuation for one year.

That means that a homeowner with a $100,000 home assessed at half its market value ($50,000) would pay $1,000 per year in school taxes for one year.

If approved, the millage renewal would generate more than half of Clarkston school district's $27.5 million operating budget.

Joseph A. Helpern

Joseph A. Helpern, 35, of 53 Waldon Road, Clarkston, has lived in the community two years. He is director of NMR research in the department of neurology at Henry Ford Hospital.

Helpern earned a bachelor of arts degree in chemistry from Case Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio; a master of science degree in chemistry from the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill; and a doctorate in physics from Oakland University, Rochester.

He and his wife, Mary, have three children: Joey, 7, a first-grader at Clarkston Elementary School; Jackie, 5, who will enter kindergarten at Clarkston Elementary School in the fall; and Natalie, 2. Helpern is pack master of Cub Scout Pack 126.

Q: What is the biggest problem in the Clarkston school district? What's your solution?

A major problem has been the inability of the school board to work cooperatively and to decisively and effectively tackle problems before they reach a critical stage. This indecisiveness has resulted in the current crisis-by-crisis management style.

To encourage cooperation and to facilitate communication, I propose to 1) broadcast board meetings on cable television, 2) publish the minutes (condensed) of board meetings and 3) work toward the development of a master plan, which would be used to explicitly outline the educational goals and objectives as well as long-term curriculum, facility and financial plans of the district.

Q: Do you think area residents trust school officials? If not, how would you improve that? If yes, to what do you attribute that trust?

The school board is responsible for providing our children the opportunity for a sound education. In turn, the board must hold the administration and teaching staff responsible for accomplishing this goal while allowing them a reasonable margin of freedom in performing the duties for which they have been hired.

Any question of trust, therefore, must be directed at the school board, for we, as members of this community, have entrusted them with the responsibility of overseeing this process. Ultimately, responsibility for our children's education lies not with our school officials but in the hands of the members of this community.

Q: What do you think should be done about Clarkston's facilities problems?

First, I would rank our needs in order of priority. Subsequently, I would pursue changing our debt retirement millage rate from a declining rate to a constant rate. Using the current rate, this step alone could result in about $21 million in revenue without increasing our taxes one dime and is close to the $25 million requested for the recent elementary school proposal. Additionally, I would push for 1 to 2 mills of our current millage to be designated for maintenance alone. Taxpayers could then be assured that what they do purchase will at least be well maintained.

Durham M. Downs

Durham M. Downs, 44, of 9675 Allen Road, Independence Township, has lived in the community eight years. He is manager of program planning at General Motors Truck and Bus. Downs earned a bachelor's degree in industrial engineering from General Motors Institute.

He has served one year on the Clarkston Board of Education and is a member of the Clarkston Band Boosters. He also has performed volunteer work for the school district.

He and his wife, Janice, have four children: Thomas, 15, a student at Clarkston Junior High School; Anthony, 17, a student at Clarkston High School; and Daniel, 20, and Steven, 21, both CHS graduates.

Q. What is the biggest problem in the Clarkston school district? What's your solution?

The Clarkston schools do not have the consolidated support of the community. There are many groups in the community with their own highest priority interests. These group interests are usually conflicting and provide the basis for debate in the community about what the schools should be and how they should be operated.

The school district must provide the opportunity for all viewpoints to be expressed and consensus to be achieved on the fundamental directions for the schools. The recently initiated School Improvement Planning activities can provide the common ground necessary for gaining community support.

Q. Do you think area residents trust school officials? If not, how would you improve that? If yes, to what do you attribute that trust?

It is clear that school officials are not trusted by the community. This is due primarily to inadequate communication with the community about the needs of a modern school system.

Without understanding today's education requirements, the community views any request for money or change in the schools as suspicious. The community should be surveyed to assess the level of understanding and to identify the critical issues. Small group interviews should be conducted to further clarify the findings. The school system then must enhance its communication plan to more effectively share information with the community on an ongoing basis.

Q. What do you think should be done about Clarkston's facilities problems?

The community has indicated that the total district facility needs should be addressed in phases.

Based upon the expanding population in the elementary grades, the first phase should be the construction of a new elementary school and the refurbishment of the other elementary buildings. This is the lowest-cost way to address the elementary needs.

Cost estimates show the lowest-cost approach for the secondary schools is the construction of a new high school and conversion of the existing high school to a middle school. This phase of construction should be done as soon as voter approval can be gained.

Kurt G. Karlstrom

Kurt G. Karlstrom, 37, of 6975 Tappan Ct., Independence Township, has resided in the community two years. He is purchasing manager for Anderson-Cook, Inc.

Karlstrom was graduated from Youngstown State University, Youngstown, Ohio, in 1977 with a bachelor's degree. A former Jaycee member, Karlstrom now is a member of the Clarkston United Methodist Church and has been a member of the Independence Township Zoning Board of Appeals.

He and his wife, Carol Galbraith, a life-long Clarkston-area resident and 1972 graduate of Clarkston High School, have three children: Ryan, 15, a Sashabaw Junior High School student; Kira, 6, a Pine Knob Elementary School student; and Erica, 2.

Q. What is the biggest problem in the Clarkston school district? What's your solution?

The biggest problem is that Clarkston schools need more money than they have in order to meet future challenges.

The other side of that coin is that the community is not convinced that the needs are that great and so are not willing to support unrealistic proposals such as the bond issues.

Therefore, the school board's primary responsibility must be to determine what level of funding the electorate would be willing to provide and how to effectively utilize that funding to solve the most basic problems. I feel this approach would show integrity, objectivity and build trust for the future.

Q. Do you think area residents trust school officials? If not, how would you improve that? If yes, to what do you attribute that trust?

There seems to be an underlying feeling that people do not fully trust what our school officials are saying. I think the overwhelming defeat of the recent bond issue was one indication of this. In addition, there are many in the community who feel the Clarkston school system has a multitude of problems and the school board is not taking the proper approach toward solving these problems.

I believe that we can regain the community's trust by demonstrating conservative financial management and communicating with the public in an open, straightforward and honest manner.

Q. What do you think should be done about Clarkston's facilities problems?

The real question that needs to be asked is how much is the public willing to pay to solve some of our facilities problems. It is evident that an "all or nothing" approach will not work. Therefore, we must explore other alternatives now.

For example, one proposal that has not received consideration to finance certain facilities needs is to stretch out our long-term debt. Currently, 1.85 mills is used to pay off current debt. If we keep this 1.85 mill at its current rate and extend it over 30 years, we could receive $20 million with no change in tax rates.

David O'Ryan

David O'Ryan, 36, of 5550 Edgar Road, Springfield Township, has lived in the area for three years. He is an environmental systems specialist at ABB Flakt.

O'Ryan holds a bachelor of science degree in business education from Bowling Green State University, Bowling Green, Ohio, and a master of business administration degree in business and marketing from Baldwin Wallace College, Berea, Ohio.

He and his wife, Dorothy, have three children: Kelly, 11, and David, 9, both students at Pine Knob Elementary School, and Charlie, 2.

Q. What is the biggest problem in the Clarkston school district? What's your solution?

The declining or volatile situation of school funding and the public's perception of misuse or waste.

Answer: Continued work on state funding for schools to acceptable levels, re-focusing of education to basics (thereby cutting some costs) and the increase in levels of communication to the parents, educators and taxpayers.

Q. Do you think area residents trust school officials? If not, how would you improve that? If yes, to what do you attribute that trust?

Unfortunately, no!

Answer: Improvement will come from re-establishing effective and credible communication with area residents, as well as from eliminating the public displays of infighting (in the press and at public meetings).

Q. What do you think should be done about Clarkston's facilities problems?

Unfortunately because of the public's perception of poor use of funds (No. 1) and a general mistrust of current school and board officials, a bond issue for new schools will probably never sell until the public's attitude changes. "Selling" the need for renovation and some expansion is both appropriate and acceptable to the taxpayers.

Janet R. Thomas

Janet R. Thomas, 52, of 5614 Warbler, Independence Township, has lived in the area 24 years. She is a self-employed accountant.

Thomas earned a bachelor's degree in accounting from the University of Detroit. She has served four terms on the Clarkston Board of Education and was elected president 10 years, vice-president one year and treasurer three years. She was appointed Oakland Schools designate six years, Oakland County School Board Association (OCSBA) Legislative Committee seven years and OCSBA Finance Committee five years. Thomas has worked with 21 board members and three superintendents.

She has served 12 years on the OCSBA Board of Directors (elected by board members of the 28 Oakland County districts) and served six years as treasurer and two years as president.

She also was appointed by the State Board of Education to the Special Education Advisory Committee for three years. She served one year as vice-chairperson.

Thomas and her husband, Michael, have four children: Gina, a graduate of Michigan State University; Carrie, a graduate of Ferris State University; Kim, a graduate of Western Michigan University; and Kevin, a junior at Grand Valley State University. All attended Pine Knob Elementary, Sashabaw Junior High and Clarkston High.

Thomas also is a member of the Clarkston Community Women's Club and St. Daniel Catholic Church.

Q. What is the biggest problem in the Clarkston school district? What's your solution?

Limited financial resources remain the major problem in this district. While the state does not seem able to solve the school funding inequity issue, residents, by authorizing a levy of 38.83 mills, have demonstrated willingness to support their schools.

These taxpayers have a right to expect that their tax dollars will be used responsibly — to offer consistent educational opportunities. To accomplish this, it is vital that the school board carefully consider spending priorities. It is imperative that the board incorporate in its planning process the effect of each decision on the current budget and its impact on the future.

Q. Do you think area residents trust school officials? If not, how would you improve that? If yes, to what do you attribute that trust?

It's apparent that a lack of confidence does exist. Conflicting explanations, projections perceived as unnecessary threats, and rumors based on inaccurate or incomplete information have contributed to this situation.

To regain credibility and to work effectively toward our common goal of providing excellence in education, the board must make every effort to communicate with the entire community. Diverse opinions and perspectives must be respected and viewed as opportunities to develop a strength and unity that comes from responding to and accommodating many points of view.

School officials must develop a spirit of cooperation that reflects positive attitudes about our schools.

Q. What do you think should be done about Clarkston's facilities problems?

There is a general awareness that our aging facilities need attention. It will be up to the school board to review available information developed over the years by district personnel, citizen volunteers and professionals. Further, the board must rigorously investigate any and all possible options.

It is imperative that the board suggest a plan for improvement that clearly defines the prioritized needs of the district with cost estimates for each project. The plan must accommodate the educational requirements of students and be acceptable to the taxpayers. The community has never failed to respond to the proven need of the district.

Interview with serial killer airs next week

Serial killer Ted Bundy is featured in an exclusive interview on Independence-Clarkston cable-TV Channel 65 next week.

Just 15 hours before his execution, Bundy was interviewed by psychologist James Dobson, about whose studies on pornography and its affect on society Bundy had read in prison. Bundy requested the visit from Dobson and spoke against pornography during the interview.

At 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, June 12, the entire 26-minute interview will be aired in an hour-long program on Independence-Clarkston Channel 65. Dobson talks about pornography and its ill effects on individuals before and after the interview.

The interview will not be shown on network television because Dobson requires that it be shown in its entirety, without cutting, said Sally Salter, community outreach specialist at United Cable's Independence-Clarkston studio.

The major networks declined under those circumstances, she said, adding that Bundy gives the show an anti-pornography slant.

The Rev. Kurt Gebhard secured the program for the Clarkston area. Gebhard and his church, the North Oaks Community Church, recently have presented Dobson's series "Focus on the Family" through the Independence-Clarkston Channel 65.

The Bundy interview is important for people to see, said Gebhard, because it shows a connection between pornography and serial killers such as Bundy.

"Most people aren't aware of the effects of pornography on us and our society," Gebhard said. "People in general need to say, 'Hey, is this what we want to see in our society?'"

Township to offer summer activities to teens

BY CURT MCALLISTER
Clarkston News Associate Editor

Teen-agers, bored out of their minds this summer, will have an outlet, courtesy of the Independence Township Parks and Recreation Department.

Since September, the township has been offering a variety of activities through its "Teen Club" program. It's available to all Independence teens ages 13 to 18. Parks and recreation department Director Ann Conklin said the program was created out of necessity.

"We identified a need for this age level, through talking to teens and parents," she said. "There really isn't a whole lot of things to do for this particular group, so we started the 'Teen Club.'"

Conklin said the activities usually attract between 20 and 30 teen-agers. The events can range from going to concerts to organizing hayrides.

Conklin said she likes this program because it helps keep teens out of trouble.

"It's a good program because it gives teens the opportunity to participate in a constructive activity, while keeping them off the street where they might be destructive," she said.

Take precautions for water safety

Now that the boating season has arrived, people may want to observe a few land and water safety precautions to avoid personal injury and property damage.

According to Detroit Edison, these precautions can make a difference:

Safety on land

■ Most accidents involving overhead electrical wires occur on shore. So, on arrival at the lunch site, "Look up" for overhead electrical wires.

■ When moving a boat or raising and lowering the mast, make sure masts and antennas clear electrical wires.

■ Use a ground fault interrupter when plugging into shore power outlets to avoid serious electrical shock that could result from defective tools or electrical appliances on a boat.

■ When drying sails on the rigging at the dock, make sure sails or lines do not blow into overhead wires.

Safety in the water

■ Check for adequate clearance between the mast and the power lines and keep in mind that water levels may rise. Lines you sailed under previously may no longer have the necessary clearance.

■ If a boat does come in contact with power lines while on the water, remain low in the boat and do not touch metal parts of the craft. Leave the boat only after arching has stopped.

■ If an electrical storm begins, leave the water as quickly as possible.

Above all, says John Keller, public safety coordinator for Detroit Edison, always be prepared for accidents. And if you observe any dangerous conditions involving power lines, notify Detroit Edison immediately.

Wellness program means staff is physically fit

BY DENNIS V. CARTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

With President Bush's emphasis on physical fitness, wellness programs have become very popular.

At Pine Knob Elementary School, some 20 staff members have been participating in a program that includes walking and a weight-loss support group.

According to Donna Rudolph, co-chairwoman of the wellness program with Marilyn Bidinger, five staff members will be presented awards for completing the walking category of the Presidential Sports Award program.

The five began walking in January. To qualify for the award, they walked a minimum of 125 miles in four months with a maximum of 2.5 miles per day.

"You must also walk a 15-minute-per-mile pace because they want to make sure that you carry it out over the extended period of time, and you must keep a journal of your walking," said Rudolph. "We completed the 125 miles about two weeks ago and submitted our journals."

After turning in the journals, the walkers are to receive a certificate of achievement from President Bush and a letter of congratulations from Arnold Schwarzenegger, who is chairman of the council.

Walkers also receive a blazer patch signifying the sport or fitness activity in which they earned their award, a sports bag identification tag, and a "shoe pocket" to hold valuable and an identification card while they work out.

The school's weight-loss part of program has 10 participant who get together as a support group.

"We get together and provide support for each other," said Rudolph. "We share recipes and provide motivation as a group to lose weight. We had one person lose 60 pounds and another one lost 45."

Those walkers receiving awards are: Nancy Van

Wagner, Elizabeth Gillford, Ruth Powers, Jackilyn Pascoe and Donna Rudolph.

According to Rudolph, the wellness program has a flexible schedule.

"It's for anyone who wants to walk. We walk between 30 to 45 minutes a day. It really is a do-your-own-thing-type situation: just grab a buddy and take off," she said.

I want to be with You and my loved ones in Your perpetual glory. Amen. Thank You for Your love towards me and my loved ones. Persons must pray this prayer three consecutive days with out asking your wish. After the third day, your wish will be granted, no matter how difficult it may be. MIKA JON CALICO of Stillwell, Okla., is one of 10 cowboys to compete in the bull-riding competition. He was pitted against "Iceman," the IPRA's world champion bull. Only two cowboys have successfully ridden this 2,000-pound monstrosity in 110 attempts. Calico did it two years ago, but on this day, June 2, he was "iced" in a little more than four seconds.

DONNA VAN PELT of Fombell, Penn., pushed her horse to the limit in the cowgirls barrel racing contest. She competed against 14 other riders from nine different states.

Rodeomania

CHARLOTTE KENNEDY of Otisville was one of four Michiganders to participate in the cowgirls barrel racing contest. This was one of five events held June 2. The three-day rodeo was sponsored by the International Professional Rodeo Association (IPRA) and held at the Springfield Oaks County Park.

JUSTIN ROWE of Tulsa, Okla., performed an exhibition ride in the saddle bronc riding competition. However, the unavailability of bronc horses caused the contest to be scratched.
