Strike ends

Strikers were back to work at Clawson Tank in Springfield Township after a contract agreement was reached last week.

Some workers were called back to work June 12 to start up the lines.

"We called back 34 workers on Wednesday, with some 30 more to be called back on Monday (June 17)," said Chuck Harding, president of Clawson Tank.

Workers first hit the picket lines May 29, with health benefits as the major concern in a contract dispute.

According to Earl Walker, vice president of Local 614 of the Teamsters union, both sides compromised on issues to end the strike.

"There were a lot of little things that each side gave on, but the major issue was the health benefit program," Walker said. "We felt that the offer on the benefits was improved."

Management officials at Clawson Tank agreed.

"Both sides came to a mutual agreement," said Harding. "We each gave a battle on different issues with the health benefit program being the key point of contention. We gave some on the health program, and they gave some on the hourly wage."

According to Harding, the company had been to pay for the sharing of health care costs between the company and the employees.

The cost of the program was $10 per hour per worker.

increase) would take effect over the course of the three-year contract instead of in the first year," he said.

Under the old program the employee paid 20 percent, but now the 20 percent will increase to 30 percent over the course of the contract.

"We also reduced the office visit cost to them from 10 dollars to eight dollars, which is an increase of three dollars over what they now pay," he said.

However, the cost will increase to $10 over the course of the contract, he said.

Another major component in the contract was a pay raise of $1 per hour over the length of the contract.

"We feel this contract is a good one and are happy to have the strike over with. We feel both sides can be happy with this contract, and now the employees can come back to work," he said.

According to union officials, some 65 to 70 workers are expected to be called back to work gradually.

SJHS principal appointed to administrator's spot

After three years of service, Dr. Judith Backes is stepping down as director of curriculum and staff development.

Sashabaw Junior High Principal David Reschke has been named as her replacement.

On June 17, the Clarkston Board of Education accepted the resignation of Backes. She will be leaving the state to take over as supervisor of school performance and assessment in Carroll County, Maryland. The move was prompted by the transfer of her husband, Jim, to the east coast.

Supervisor Gary Haner expressed the sentiments of

'Breakfast Club' exams postponed

Eleven men associated with the alleged drug ring nicknamed the "Breakfast Club" had their preliminary examinations adjourned in 52nd District Court, Clarkston.

On June 11, Judge Gerald McNally decided to postpone the exams to allow defense attorneys time to prepare their cases.

The men have been charged in connection with a drug ring that has allegedly distributed about 50 kilos of cocaine in Oakland County. Four men with ties to the Clarkston area have been charged in this case.

The members were dubbed the "Breakfast Club" because they supposedly discussed their operations over breakfast at various restaurants in the Ortonville and Clarkston areas.

Charles Abraham, 33, of Florida was the only defendant to waive his examination. He is to be arraigned in Oakland County Circuit Court June 27.

The remaining 10 men have had their preliminary exams rescheduled for June 25 before Judge McNally.

the board when he told Backes he was sorry to see her leave.

"There has been a lot of great strides made in the department of curriculum and staff development since Judy's been here," he said. "My only regret is that she has to leave us so soon."

Shortly after Backes' resignation was approved by the board, Reschke was named her successor.

A graduate of Eastern Michigan and Michigan State universities, Reschke brings nearly 20 years of education experience to the position.

He began his career as an English teacher in the Waterford Community School District in 1970. He later moved into an administrative role as a member of Waterford's staff development department.

In 1984, Reschke came to Sashabaw Junior High School to serve as the assistant principal. In 1987, he took over the duties as principal and has served in this capacity until now.

During his stint as principal, SJHS was cited as an "Outstanding Exemplary School" by the U.S. Department of Education. Sashabaw was only one of four middle schools in the state to receive the honor during the 1988-89 school year.

Reschke told the board he was excited with the new challenges that lie ahead but sad about leaving Sashabaw

Junior High School.

"It's with mixed emotions that I leave my students and staff," Reschke said. "I'm excited about the direction this school district can elevate to through hard work. I agree with Judy's belief that curriculum is only as good as it's delivered, and staff development is a tool used to enhance its effectiveness."

"I'm making this move because I think I can help a bigger group of kids in the district, even though I find myself already missing the kids at Sashabaw (Junior High) dearly," he added.

School officials listen

Residents air gripes in open forum

BY JULIE CAMPE
Clarkston News Editor

Spending, incompetent teachers, "inclusion" of disabled children, outdated textbooks and the credibility of school officials were some of the concerns of Clarkston school district residents last week.

About 20 people came and went during the school district's three-hour open forum June 11.

Throughout the evening, residents expressed frustration over most of the issues and agreed that nearly each topic was worthy of a forum all its own.

School board trustees Paul Van Klaveren and Karen Foyteck tacked to the wall poster-size lists of topics addressed, so the school board could discuss each at a later date.

Tiresome textbooks

Lisa Halleran said she was unhappy with the district's 10-year-old textbooks.

"I had a problem with the bond issue," she said, referring to the February election when voters denied a request for money to build a new high school, elementary school and pool.

"We don't need a brand new building to order updated science books," she said.

Van Klaveren said the board had approved $300,000 for textbooks just a week prior to the open forum.

Halleran also said that overcrowding has been a problem, and she doesn't see any improvement.

Newly elected trustee Joe Helpem said, "If we hired new teachers, where would we put them?"

Doug Carlson said part of the facilities problem could be solved if the school district had a mill or quarter-mill levy solely for building maintenance.

Who to believe?

Phil Dutton said he had been in the community four years.

"What we're dealing with here is a basic credibility problem," he said, explaining that the entire community is taking pay cuts and fewer bonuses.

However, some of the latest millage hike paid for a 6 percent administrative pay increase.

"You posed these questions as 'for the kids,'" said Dutton. "This may sound mean spirited. ... We are in an environment where not everyone gets an increase every year. You question the priorities."

It was a similar case with the February bond issue, he said.

"What I don't like to read about in the paper is how if we don't vote for the bond issue all the awful things that will happen to our kids. Don't insult my intelligence," he said.

Helpem noted that 80 percent of the school district's budget paid for salaries, which left only $5 million for everything else.

When board members explained that the pay increases were all part of the contract, Halleran responded.

"Why don't you publicize the fact that you're in contract negotiations before an election, so people will know that the money will go toward a 6 percent increase?" she asked. "Make the public understand. I read about the increase after the millage had been passed. ... I want to know up front what I'm paying for."

"Our product is kids, and we can't afford even a 1 percent defect."

Money woes

Halleran also questioned the fact that the school district never seemed to know exactly how much money it would have with which to operate.

"It looks kind of fishy to me," she said, noting that the district wavered between being in the state's funding formula and out of that formula.

Most at the forum thought the school district should have a reserve fund.

At present, we're asking a $24 million company to operate penny to penny," said Mark Deacon.

Trustee Janet Thomas said, "We always had a reserve up to the last couple of years. ... It just depends on how you budget. You budget to spend all you take in, or you budget a reserve."

Educating all

Parent Judy McKinney said, "I'm not so worried about buildings. I'm worried about the quality of education."

She explained that her mentally and physically disabled child spends part of the day in a "regular" classroom as part of the state's inclusion law.

"My daughter is providing the 'in-service' for the teachers," she said. "She's went through a pretty traumatic time because nobody knew how to deal with her."

She said the inclusion law means there are no alternatives. "Her classroom at the (Waterford) Training Center is being closed down. They're being sent back to their neighborhood schools," she said.

Clarkston teachers should be trained to handle pupils like her daughter, she said.

"Children have come up to me and said, 'I like having Megan in the classroom, but I don't want her in the classroom next year because I can't hear the teacher. Megan screams. Well, she shouldn't be screaming. She wouldn't be if her needs were being met,'" said McKinney.

Three parents, who later asked that their names not be used, also addressed the issue.

One parent said she was not sure inclusion and "mainstreaming" were working.

"At Clarkston Elementary, there's kids with special

"Teachers are in control of the school year instead of the board."

needs wandering the halls all the time," she said. Or sometimes, a special education child who misbehaved will be sent to the hall.

"They're not being taught," she said. "Other kids are not being taught if a teacher has to concentrate on that kid."

Another parent said general education parents aren't being told enough about inclusion.

"Inclusion (wasn't) widely publicized until after the fact," she said. "It's a sacred cow. It's difficult to bring up."

Carlson said he had heard "an excellent presentation" on inclusion at a recent board meeting. He suggested a repeat of the presentation with widespread publicity before the fact.

Another parent said an autistic child was causing problems for other kids in Clarkston Elementary.

"When the teacher is spending all this time with other kids, my daughter doesn't learn," she said. "It all sounds really nice in theory, but these are our kids."

Measuring success

Deacon said the school district should have a list of goals and should have a way of measuring whether or not the goals are reached.

"Our product is kids, and we can't afford even a 1 percent defect," he said.

Van Klaveren said the district does those very things. "You obviously care, or you wouldn't be here," Van Klaveren said. "Yet we missed you, with all that communication."

Earlier, a straw poll showed that the people had heard about the open forum nearly equally between The Clarkston News, the Clarkston Connection (district newsletter) and by word of mouth.

Too much power?

Other parents did not like the power of teachers and sometimes the attitudes.

Beth Manojlovich said she didn't like it that teachers don't have to check their own homework — aides help them.

"The whole problem is to see where the child is," she said. "If the teacher is not checking it, how can she know where the child is?"

Another parent said her son's kindergarten teacher missed 30 days of school this year, plus, some of the afternoon classes were called off during winter due to the weather.

"What we're dealing with here is a basic credibility problem."

Phil Dutton

"They spent the whole year trying to catch up," she said, explaining that the teacher was involved in in-service, conferences and board office meetings.

One parent of a sixth-grader said one teacher was "maybe certified but not qualified" to teach in his field.

Another parent asked what recourse parents have if they aren't satisfied with the teaching.

"If he doesn't teach that one subject well, you will pay for it the next year and maybe later," he said.

One other parent added, "If you complain during the school year, there are repercussions."

The first parent broaching the issue said, "I'm concerned in the classroom because this teacher is now in seventh and eighth grade. My daughter will have to see him again and again. ... I won't be able to complain until she graduates."

Trustee Durham Downs said the first step is the school principal.

Deacon interjected.

"The perception is that the teachers' union dictates education in Michigan," he said.

Les Haight agreed and said he was opposed to the long school year due to the fact that more days are off during the year so teachers may have in-service days. He also didn't like it that teachers were allowed to take time off to mark report cards — substitute teachers were paid to take their places.

"Teachers are in control of the school year instead of the board," Haight said.

Thomas said the calendar is negotiated with the teachers each year, and the 1991-92 calendar already was in place.

She asked the audience, "Do you have a problem with starting before Labor Day?"

A loud "yes" exploded from the people.

School funding snarl

Residents also expressed confusion over the school's revenue and wanted to know the connection between the state and Clarkston.

Thomas addressed the issue.

"School funding has been a problem since a bill was passed in the mid-'70s, but you didn't hear about it until it became a crisis situation," she said.

The biggest problem is that "school districts can't get together."

"If 28 districts in Oakland County would get together, that would pass," she said.

As it stands, however, "we're an in-formula district that will be a poor out-of-formula district," she said.

"You're paying 38.3 mills. We're paying because we want to be a bedroom community," she said, adding that community members need to talk to the legislature.

Board members "can holler all we want, but they're going to listen to the community because they figure I have a vested interest," she said. "If there were an easy solution to this problem, it would be solved."

Deacon named one problem: "If millages continue to be passed, nothing will happen," he said. "It puts me in a catch-22."

Thomas said, "We need to decide what's the most important thing in the state. Right now it seems to be prisons and DSS (department of social services)."

Van Klaveren said that it seems as if "you don't change to make something better — you change only when it's a disaster."

Superintendent Gary Haner said the state's proposed property tax freeze would mean about $1.5 million less in projected revenue in Clarkston schools next year and the legislature will not offset the loss.

Residents divided over proposed lake hunting ban

Hunting Area Control Committee to render recommendations; townships to have final say

BY CURT MCALLISTER
Clarkston News Associate Editor

Safety of children and bacteria in water were some of the concerns of area residents who spoke about a proposed hunting ban around Heather Lake.

The June 11 public hearing was conducted by the Hunting Area Control Committee, which was assembled on the request of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR). The lake property under question is off Clarkston Road and lies in Independence and Orion townships.

The six-person committee consists of the supervisors from Independence and Orion townships and representatives from the DNR, Michigan State Police and the Oakland County Sheriff's Department.

The Hunting Area Control Committee is to weigh all sides of the argument and conduct a field review of the Heather Lake Estates area. The committee's recommendations will be turned over to the townships within 30 days.

The townships will then decide how to handle the situation.

The controversy stems from the shooting of geese on Heather Lake last fall. Several residents said the continuance of hunting endangers homeowners around the lake. Hunting advocates, on the other hand, say the abundance of geese is causing bacteria levels in the lake to reach hazardous proportions.

The hunting advocacy was represented by officers from the Heather Lake Estates Homeowner's Association. They contend that goose season is necessary to cut down on the high number of Canada geese around the lake.

Clint Yerkes, president of the homeowner's association, said the geese are a detriment to Heather Lake. He said the waterfowl's droppings cause the lake to be overrun by algae. The excrement also is reportedly pushing the water's coli count to dangerous levels.

A fecal coli count measures the amount of a type of bacteria that can carry disease. If the level reaches 200, the DNR usually closes the waterways to swimmers and water skiers.

According to lake resident Chuck Monk, test results indicate that the water's bacteria levels were at 100 earlier this spring. The warming temperatures of summer will naturally increase the bacteria count, and Monk said he fears that the lake's level could be 200 by the time July rolls around.

With this in mind, Yerkes presented a proposal to rid the lake of geese. The proposal states that only three to four people will be allowed to hunt on the lake at a time. This time period will consist of one hour in the morning and one hour in the afternoon.

The homeowner's board also proposed that hunting not occur every day of the season, and all residents be notified prior to these hunting dates.

The proposal also said that only registered hunters will be allowed to hunt on the lake. The ammunition also will be limited to birdshot, with shotguns holding only three shells at a time.

Yerkes said the homeowner's association plans to have Critter Control, a wildlife preservation agency, come out a couple times per year to round up some of the excess geese.

Tim Payne, a specialist in the DNR's wildlife division, said hunting would be a suitable alternative in ridding the lake of the bothersome birds. He said the geese have no reason to fear their surroundings, and this must change to drive them off.

"If you've got food, shelter and water, then the geese won't move," Payne said. "Hunting is a good tool in getting them to change their environment."

Payne added that the sound of gunshots also will make "shellcrackers" more efficient in driving the birds away. Shellcrackers are loud firecrackers used as a scare tactic.

Despite the board's proposal and the testimony of the wildlife specialist, some residents remained opposed to hunting around the lake.

"There's no question the geese are a nuisance," said resident John Risher. "However, I find it very unfortunate to have a hearing over an area as developed as Heather Lake Estates. There's over 120 families in our development, with more coming in every day. We were surprised that hunting was allowed in the first place."

His wife, Jody Risher, told the committee that she knew of one little girl from a neighboring home who was stunned by noise of shotgun blasts last year. She said it took nearly two hours to calm the child down.

Resident Cleo Catalfield told a similar episode about her son and vehemently opposed the use of firearms around the 110-acre development.

"I'm not against the roundup of geese, but I'm concerned about the children around the lake," she said. "You can round them (geese) up, but don't use ammo."

At the forum

Julie Campe

The three-hour open forum held by the Clarkston Board of Education June 11 was a great idea, but it left my head swimming.

So many issues, so little time, such important tasks.

The atmosphere was relaxed. Board members, in casual clothing, sat in the audience with only Trustee Paul Van Klaveren at the front of the room, leading the discussion.

Most in the audience arrived at the 7 p.m. starting time, but more came later; and some wandered in and out. Somehow, they had managed to leave the kids for a while to attend this meeting.

A few faces were familiar — they had attended school board meetings in the past. But the majority were not. Many of the people had never spoken at a public meeting in their lives, they said later.

With this setting — no microphones, no blue suits, a smaller board room — it was not difficult to speak up. They could change topics whenever they wanted, express whatever had been bothering them, ask questions, make suggestions or simply listen.

They did all — with no shouting or name-calling, as has happened on occasion during regular board meetings.

I marveled at the thought they had put into their topics. I was impressed by the sincerity of each person in the room.

I was surprised that so many of them shared so many of the same concerns — and that there were so many concerns. Once a topic was introduced, always more than one wanted to speak on it.

Education is like no other field. Comparisons were made between Clarkston's $24 million annual expenditures and other $24 million companies. But the comparison was not valid. As one parent pointed out, the products in Clarkston are children.

Education can be approached on so many levels. Philosophically, what should be the goals of education? Is it purely job training? Is it prevention of juvenile delinquency? Is it a love of learning for learning's sake?

And teaching itself can be approached in hundreds of ways. Given the money available, what's the best way? Is it memorize, drill and test? Is it discuss, think and try?

And what about the individuals? It was interesting discussing the best way to handle this or that and possibly changing something for next year or the year after. But what about little Johnny right now?

What if Johnny had always loved school and performed well and suddenly this year flunked math and hated the subject? Or what if it was a whole class of Johnnies who fell into those circumstances?

Parents, teachers and school district decision-makers deal with those sorts of questions all the time, not to mention the nuts and bolts of running an organization of Clarkston's size.

This also does not touch the nest of trouble hatching from the state's school funding process. Of course, that could be another forum.

At 75, she helps community as aide

I'm 75 years young, and I keep mentally alert and make extra money as a senior aide for the Oakland Livingston Human Service Agency (OLHSA).

OLHSA gave me a chance to prove that I still have a lot to give — that's a chance most businesses wouldn't give me.

I currently work as an assistant outreach worker in the senior department at OLHSA. I assist the senior advocacy director, doing whatever is necessary to help her. Since I've been in this position, I've upgraded my typing skills, learned how to use a computer and learned a lot about how the senior department at a community action agency works. I also input information for and about seniors on cable-TV Channel 51.

I was an outreach worker in Lake Orion seven years ago — that's how I found out about the Senior Aide Program.

By profession, I am a piano teacher. I enjoy sharing my love of music by teaching children to play the piano. I also love animals — I have a Russian blue cat I call "Kooky." Writing is another hobby. I am currently working on a mystery novel.

Having a lot of interests is stimulating. But I am a widow, and my job at OLHSA helps because, for a woman alone, it can sometimes be difficult to get along financially. I get great satisfaction from my hobbies and my music. One former student is going on to major in music at college.

My job at OLHSA is also a great source of satisfaction. I like working for an organization whose mission is to help the low-income, elderly and handicapped, while I enhance my job skills and make extra money. Thanks, OLHSA, for having faith in this senior citizen's ability to be a contributing member of the community.

Letters to the Editor

School facilities: Time for action

Last week in his letter to the editor, Doug Carlson asked for the facts on our school building needs.

While I applaud his interest, I am concerned about our failure to address a problem that continues to worsen.

In January, 1989 a community-based Facilities Review Advisory Committee submitted a comprehensive report based on three months of review by a committee of 30 community residents. These individuals were solicited as representatives of various community groups, and a request was made for volunteers from the community at large.

We visited buildings and met with staff as Doug is now proposing to do. As co-chairman of this committee, I can attest to the thoroughness of this study. We started with a charge to review the recommendations of the district's architect, Charles Sherman Associates.

These recommendations were found to be flawed, and independent recommendations were developed. These recommendations remain valid today. What is needed is phased implementation of these recommendations as has been debated for the last 2 1/2 years.

Our findings were that we needed additional elementary school classrooms and additional junior high classrooms. With the failure of the February 1991 bond proposal, we need to tailor a plan to the community and one and only one building. That building is a new high school.

The cost to build a new junior high school and add on to the existing high school is nearly the same as the cost to build a new high school. An addition to the existing high school would result in a school initially designed for 800 students being expanded to a capacity of 1,800 students. Substantial changes to such core facilities at the cafeteria, library, gym and music facilities greatly impact costs.

Foundation and soil conditions necessitate building on instead of adding floors to the existing building, resulting in a significant decrease in outside athletic facilities. For these reasons, expanding the current high school is not economically feasible.

In contrast, the current high school space minus the district's central kitchen, which is housed at the high school, is nearly equivalent in size to Sashabaw Junior High School. It can handle 1,000 junior high students with minimal rearrangement.

The current Clarkston Junior High School can be partially utilized as the needed additional elementary school until the end of the downtown development authority. At that time, additional commercial tax base would significantly decrease each taxpayer's burden for the new high school, providing the opportunity to modernize both junior high schools, construct a new elementary school and update and enlarge the existing elementary schools without placing a new tax burden on school district residents.

Copies of the January 1989 study are available. I am willing to discuss the contents with any group. Concerned groups should also consider the cost of further delays and study as developers continue to reduce the number of vacant property sites available for a new high school. Only one site serviced by sewers remains available of those discussed 2 1/2 years ago.

The cost of new school buildings will increase faster than our assessments if we are forced to build new sewers and purchase land in competition with developers.

Our children have waited three years already. How many more years must they wait for adults to put aside their differences and act to solve the school facility problem? It is time for Clarkston to end its string of 32 consecutive years without building a single new classroom.

Frisking not good

Visiting with my daughter and her family recently, I was excited to witness the fun my grandchildren were having celebrating their last day of school.

I overheard my grandson asking his mother to take him to the store to buy some shaving cream. It seemed he wanted to squirt his fellow classmates as they left the school for the last day before summer vacation. I thought, "What good, clean fun."

Later I heard that the kids were forbidden to use it on the school grounds. They were even "frisked" for it, and if they had the shaving cream in their possession it was taken away from them. This seemed pretty unfair to me.

In California and other big cities, they frisk the kids for switchblades, guns, drugs or spray paint. What harm can shaving cream do?

The kids use it on each other, not on store fronts or other people. Then to have the police called to squelch this innocent fun seemed to me a real put-down for the kids. Can you imagine having your child arrested for squirting someone with shaving cream?

The school must have its reasons for not allowing the kids this fun, but I can't imagine what they could be. As far as I can see, shaving cream does not deface buildings, nor does it hurt people.

You should consider yourselves extremely lucky that the shaving cream is their outlet and not some destructive prank.

I'm glad that my grandchildren are growing up in a community where shaving cream is the biggest worry parents have when the last day of school is celebrated.

The time stands still in Grandpa's fantasy

Jim
Fitzgerald

Melissa, my second-oldest granddaughter, graduated from high school last week. I don't think I want to tell you what Michele, my oldest granddaughter, has been doing lately.

Today's column is about something startling that happened to me while I wasn't looking. I became practically 65 years old. I phoned Social Security last week to see how much I'd be paid for not working. I'm not planning to retire, but I wanted the information to file away for possible future use, in case I ever happen to get old.

The meager amount of the monthly Social Security stipend wasn't nearly as unsettling as the fact that I'm almost eligible for it. Naturally, I immediately felt constrained to take Emily, my third-oldest granddaughter, to Belle Isle and swoop down the Giant Slide with her.

"That's how impulsive young people often behave," I explained to my wife. She said I might be the oldest person to slide down the Giant Slide. Please, someone, tell me I'm not. Please.

Reader Martie Schultz recently wrote that she'd lost her clipping of a favorite column I wrote "a few years ago," and could I replace it? She'd forgotten the publication date but remembered the plot:

"You were in a McDonald's with Emily. She commented (with the usual tact of a small child) on a man loudly blowing his nose. You brought up the Chanel No. 5 perfume commercial that was running on TV at the time: John Huston as the voice of God intoning 'I am made of blue sky and the golden light and I will feel like this forever. Share the fantasy.'"

Sure, I remembered that commercial. In an awesome voice-over, actor-director Huston proclaimed the fantasy while a bronze man arose like a phoenix from a swimming pool and sloshed solemnly toward a beautiful woman who was waiting on shore with both knees higher than her head. And I remembered the column. It described how a huge man gave me an exceedingly dirty look for having a grandchild rude enough to loudly ask "What was that?" when the rude boob honked his honker into his hamburger.

And I looked at my wife and said: "I am made of blue sky and the golden light and I will feel like this forever. Share the fantasy."

The point of that column is still good today: When I find myself trapped in a stressful situation, such as a McDonald's with three small grandchildren, I often remind myself that I'm made of blue sky and golden light and nothing can bug me, not even a loud-mouthed grandchild who puts me in danger of being slugged by an over-muscled honker honker.

But I couldn't find that blue-sky column in my "Emily" file. I was about to send my regrets to Martie Schultz when my searching stopped over into my "John" file and found success. John is my oldest grandson and it was he, not Emily, who endangered my life in McDonald's. Emily wasn't even born yet.

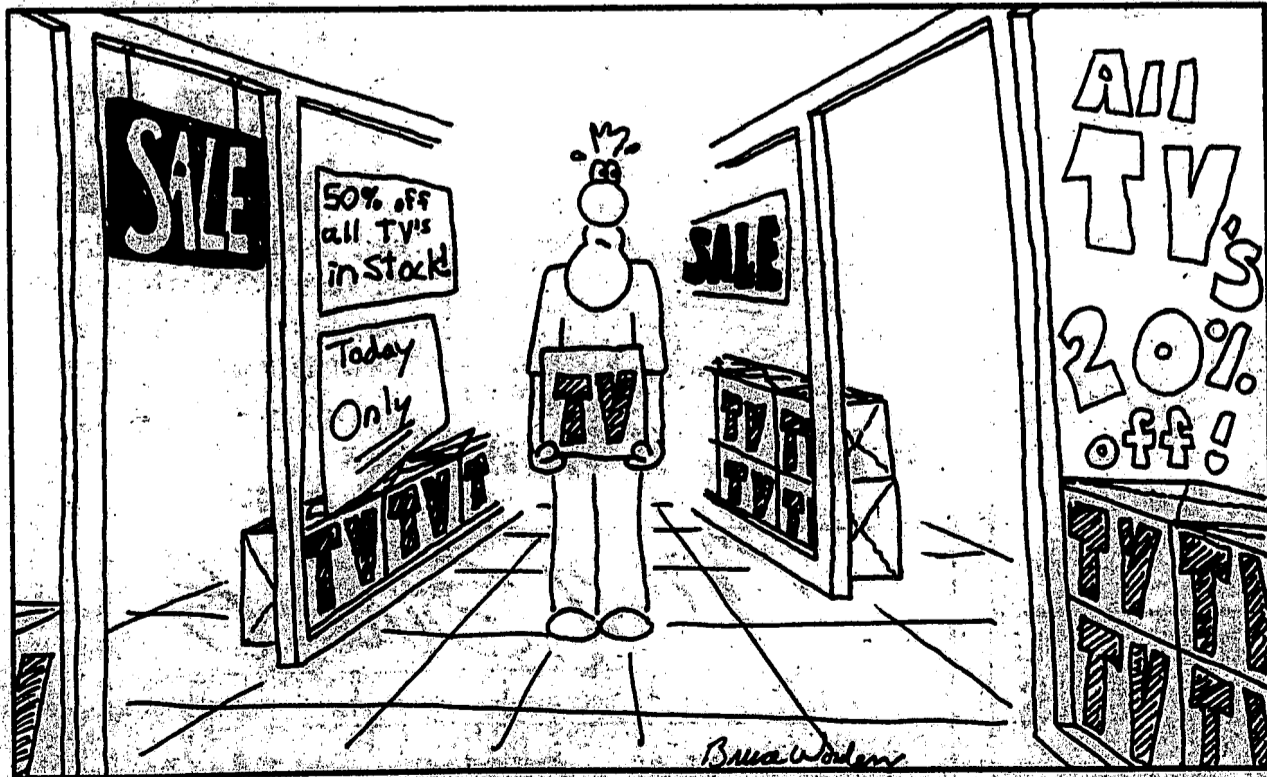

But how could that be? It was just the other day that I wrote that column, wasn't it? And at Melissa's graduation last week, I stood next to John and looked up. He is bigger than the honker honker who stressed me in McDonald's "just the other day." I understand how Schultz could get my grandchildren mixed up, but how did so many years go by without my noticing them?

According to that resurrected column, written in 1980, Michele, my oldest granddaughter, also was in McDonald's on the day I used fantasy from a TV commercial. Michele was 10, and I wrote she looked so old that I hoped strangers would think I was her father, not her grandfather.

So, what the heck, I'll tell you what Michele's been doing lately. In August, soon after I become eligible for Social Security, Michele will become a mother. Lord help me, I will soon take her child to McDonald's and hope that strangers think I'm the grandfather, not great-grandfather.

But I don't care. I am made of blue sky and the golden light and I will feel like this forever. Share the fantasy.

Animals need love, too

Christine Kovacs, 13, of Cherlande Drive, Independence Township, was recently named a finalist in the third annual RespecTeen "Speak For Yourself" letter-writing contest.

Kovacs was chosen from among 8,000 students nationwide who submitted letters they wrote to members of Congress, stating their views on public policy issues.

Kovacs, an eighth-grader at St. Stephen Lutheran, is the daughter of Dave and Natalie Kovacs. She wrote a letter to U.S. Rep Bob Carr on animal abuse. The contest is part of a nationwide program sponsored by Lutheran Brotherhood. Kovacs' letter is printed below.

Dear Representative Carr,

I think the issue of animals being killed has gone too far. I love animals, and I want to see something being done with all of the torturing that is going on.

Once received a brochure from the Humane Society that told about a cat who's owners enjoyed smoking. When they were done with the cigarette, they put it out in the cat's fur. Even in its eyes. In the end he was set on fire. I think that is totally cruel.

I've heard of boys shooting birds with BB guns, taking the nest of those birds and the baby birds in them and smearing them on the walls of their tree house.

My friend had a neighbor who owned the two most adorable puppies. She took me to see them, and she told me that they leave the puppies outside at all times, in a secluded area. They were never let out or fed. Only trash was thrown in there and poisonous things they could die from. The next time I saw her the puppies were long gone. That family also ran over all of their cats.

I think that animals need just as much love as we do. People need to know that. What I'm asking you to do is encourage the people in today's society to see what's going on and donate to funds that are against animal abuse. We can do this by putting more adds on television and in the mail.

Thank you for reading what I have to say. I hope there is some way you can help.

Major success

Graduation '91 was a major success at Clarkston High School.

From the commencement activities at Pine Knob Music Theater through the post-graduation party at Deer Lake Racquet Club, the 375 seniors had a beautiful experience that they will remember for a lifetime.

Relative to commencement, Tom Wilson and his staff at Pine Knob, especially Connie Marshall and Mike St. Peter, are to be commended for their cooperation and assistance.

We couldn't have received more help. They were there at every turn.

Following graduation, the seniors attended an all-night party that was an unquestioned success. Forrest Milzow, as he has done for the past four years, was gracious in providing the Deer Lake facility. Ellie Devereaux was our contact person, and she did a great job in assisting the parents.

The parents of our seniors were, of course, responsible for organizing the party. Cricket Bishop and Becky McChesney provided outstanding leadership for the more than 75 parents who were the mainstays in the organization of this effort. They handled every problem, every crisis, every challenge quickly and effectively. They never wavered in taking on this major activity.

I would also thank Clarkston merchants, service groups, the churches and many, many citizens. Your support, financial and moral, was important to our success.

June 12th was a special day for Clarkston's 375 young adults. The entire community is to be thanked and commended.

Tribute to faculty

Dear Teachers:

It is said that charity begins in the home. I am sure that the same can be said of the education, as well.

Those first few formative years that a child spends almost entirely at home are, to be sure, very important in the development of his or her abilities and attitudes. However, once the young person enters school, a very different and new phase of development begins.

That is why I would like to take a brief moment to thank most sincerely the Clarkston Junior High and High School teachers and administrators who have had such a profound impact on my oldest daughter, Meredith.

Now that she has graduated and will be moving on to another very different and new phase of her life, I know that she takes with her some very important tools that you have given her. You not only greatly intensified her zest for learning, but you also provided her with the means to continue adding to the successes she has already achieved.

While we do have a student who went from the junior high school to pursue his high school studies at Birmingham Brother Rice, he, too, owes much to the excellence of the Clarkston faculty and is faring most well, thanks to you.

Further, having a couple more students coming up through junior high school who plan on attending the high school, I have every confidence that they, too, will continue to benefit greatly from the same wisdom, skill and professional dedication I have seen lavished not only on Meredith and our three other students but on those of other parents as well.

Clarkston schools has long enjoyed a reputation for its outstanding faculty and student achievements. It is a growing tribute to our principals and student achievements. It is a glowing tribute to our principals and teachers that so many of our students go on to do so well.

As parents in the Clarkston school district, Micki and I would just like to say, "Thank you, principals and teachers," for your attention, your care and your effort in providing the very best to our students.

Cliff and Micki Higdon

Springfield woman faces arson charge

A 35-year-old Springfield Township woman has been charged with arson for allegedly burning down a home she shared with her mother.

Mary Moore was charged June 4 before Judge Gerald McNally, 52nd District Court, Independence Township. She has been accused of burning down her Clarridge residence Dec. 9, 1990.

According to Oakland County Sheriff's Detective Don Pebbles, Moore is mildly retarded. Tests conducted by the Center for Forensic Psychiatry in Ann Arbor has determined that she presently operates on a third-grade level, he said.

Despite her handicap, Moore was deemed competent to stand trial for the fire.

Moore is free, guaranteeing she will appear in court or forfeit a $50,000 bond. Pebbles said the case should come up before a circuit court judge sometime this year.

Scott said the man wasn't taken into custody. Police are presently awaiting a full report from their drug laboratory on the precise quantity of marijuana found at the scene.

Mobile home park to expand in Springfield

BY DENNIS V. CARTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Residents in Springfield Estates mobile home park soon may have new neighbors.

The Springfield Township Board voted 4-2 June 12 to approve — with conditions — the expansion plans for the park on Oakhill Road, south of Dixie Highway.

Voting yes were Clerk J. Calvin Walters and trustees Charles Oaks, Nancy Strole and Dennis Vallad. Voting no were Supervisor Collin Walls and Treasurer Lois Stiles. Trustee Margaret Bloom was absent.

Expansion plans call for 133 additional units on 25 acres. Construction is to begin as soon as the developer receives state approval.

According to Stiles, many questions remain un-swered.

"I still have concerns about the backup generator for the water hydrants and felt there are too many conditions in the plan, and I just didn't feel the plan was ready to be approved," she said.

After the board's discussion, Walls said the plan was a revised version that needed to be looked at again.

"I felt the board should have a chance to review the plan after some of the conditions have been met," he said. "I have concerns over the drainage of the of the project and on the landscaping. We are having the township engineers review the drainage, and I felt we should have the option to see the plan again."

The approval was also subject to sidewalk extensions, a change in lighting and an addition of a buffer area.

Decorating contest marks Clarkston's July Fourth

A patriotic decorating contest is new for this year's Fourth of July festivities in downtown Clarkston.

Business and homes on the parade route will be judged in separate categories, and prizes from Bordine's Better Blooms will be awarded to the winners, said Capt. Mike Fahrner of the Independence Township Fire Department, which runs the July 4th parades in Clarkston.

The theme this year is: "A salute to armed forces."

Cemetery money OK'd

Andersonville Cemetery again will look nice this year.

The Springfield Township Board voted 6-0 June 12 to approve $1,000 for the supplemental fund for the Andersonville Cemetery Association.

The association will use the money to help maintain the cemetery.

The township granted the same amount of money last year for the cemetery at the intersection of Big Lake and Ridgewood roads.

Welcome home and thank you."

Gov. John Engler is slated to be a guest at the parade, as is the United States' official "Uncle Sam," who is staying near his Auburn Hills home this year instead of participating in the Washington, D.C., parade because he is awaiting a heart transplant.

So far, plans include a parade announcer from WLLZ radio and a special monument to be dedicated in Clarkston's Depot Park following the parade. The monument is dedicated to U.S. service personnel, said Fahrner.

Also in the park, "That's Entertainment," a musical group from the Clarkston area, is to perform, and a display of classic cars will be on hand.

Community groups interested in fund-raisers or community service may want to contact Fahrner about serving refreshments in Depot Park following the parade, he said.

As for the parade, it will be filled with red, white and blue balloons as well as yellow ribbons and U.S. flags — and lots of floats and clowns.

However, the parade still needs a little more music, said Fahrner, and it also could use a few more floats.

Community groups, businesses and neighborhoods may want to construct one for this special celebration, Fahrner said.

For more information or to register for the parade, call Fahrner at 625-1924.

Phone survey to begin

Don't be surprised if someone calls some evening next week, asking your opinion on a few issues.

The Clarkston Community Education Department will be conducting a district telephone survey, evenings, during the week of June 24. The purpose of the survey is to define the changing needs of the community and to structure the community education program to meet those needs.

Four hundred randomly selected homes will be called, and the survey should take between five and eight minutes to complete.

Printing firm looks to fill void of National's loss

BY CURT MCALLISTER
Clarkston News Associate Editor

The demise of The National Sports Daily has set back a Springfield Township company nearly 25 percent. On June 12, the sports-based newspaper announced its closure after 17 months of operation. The newspaper's owners, spearheaded by Mexican publisher Emilio Azcaraga, lost an estimated $100 million in the venture. Locally, Michigan Web Press lost a valuable client and a quarter of its business. The firm was responsible for printing The National for distribution in Michigan, Toronto, Cleveland, Buffalo and Pittsburgh.

Michigan Web Press opened its 25,000-square-foot facility off Dixie Highway after owner Mike Wilcox landed printing privileges for the aspiring publication.

Wilcox presently is trying to lure other clients to his business to make up for The National's void.

"It's only been about a week since we got word of The National's closure, and it's going to take a while to make up for their loss," Wilcox said. "It's going to take some time to woo prospective clients."

Wilcox said the newspaper was hurt by the expenditures associated with starting in a national market and with opening when the business climate for newspapers were in somewhat of a lull.

Despite the loss of business, Wilcox doesn't foresee the immediate reduction of his 40-person staff.

"Our employees are presently working a lot of overtime, and that will be probably be reduced," he said. "In terms of layoffs, we'll have to re-evaluate the situation but I doubt we'll have to let anyone go."

Reporter's Notebook

On June 10, Independence Township resident Iva Caverly called The Clarkston News to report she'd been the victim of a power blackout while casting her vote in the school election.

Iva said she was about to vote in a booth at the Carriage House in Clintonwood Park, Clarkston Road, when the lights went out. Apparently, a nearby power line had fallen, causing a small blackout.

Ingenuitively, Iva cast her ballot by fishing a penlight from her purse. Election officials asked to borrow the light so others could vote as well. Due to her busy schedule, Iva left the light with the officials so they could accommodate others during the hour-long blackout, she said.

It's still uncertain if she ever went to Carriage House to retrieve her small flashlight.

At a June 17 special meeting of the Clarkston Board of Education, President Thomas Howard told outgoing Trustee Durham Downs that the board intended to plant a tree on the premises in his honor.

Howard said, jokingly, that the administration would choose the species of tree because Downs might choose some exotic variety.

Downs countered by saying he didn't care what type of tree it was as long as it wasn't a weeping willow. Downs lost is bid for re-election June 10.

Graduating seniors from Clarkston High School racked up $134,341 in scholarships this year — that's a decrease from the $233,103 reported in 1990.

While local scholarship money was up slightly this year (at $21,895), all other award categories were reduced. School officials attribute the decrease to a smaller class size.

In other scholarship categories, Clarkston seniors received $74,356 in college awards, $4,600 from special organizations and $33,490 in state scholarships and grants.

Previous monetary awards include $146,246 in 1989, $137,887 in 1988 and $120,704 in 1987.

Items for Reporter's Notebook are compiled by Clarkston News staff members.

Timbers plan needs wetland approval

A 19-acre site condominium project cleared its first hurdle June 13.

On Thursday, the Independence Township Planning Commission voted 6-0 to grant preliminary approval for the "Timbers of Lake Oakland." Commissioner Harry Mosher was absent from the meeting.

The 15-site project has been slated for south of the Lake Oakland Woods subdivision, west of Oak Park Drive. The area is zoned single-family residential.

Site condominiums are like a single family subdivision, except the property between houses is owned by the condominium association, which is made up of homeowners. The homeowner owns his house and a small "building envelope" in which it sits.

The petitioners for Timbers of Lake Oakland are Homer Tolliver and Forrest Milzow.

Due to the topography of the site, the petitioners are requesting to fill a small wetland area to make the project more accessible. This request is required to go before the Wetlands Board.

Public water will provided to the site via the Lake Oakland Woods subdivision pumphouse.

PICKING OUT A CASKET

If the deceased has not specified the kind of casket he or she prefers, the survivors must make the decision themselves. Probably the two most important criteria for this decision are the tastes of the deceased and what can be afforded.

If the deceased drove around in a yellow Rolls Royce, one can expect that a simple pine box would not be suitable. In contrast, if the deceased were understated and frugal in life, lavishness and extravagance would be inappropriate in death.

Remember also that the funeral should not become a great financial burden to the family. As with many types of purchases, a good rule of thumb is to buy the best that you can comfortably afford. For many families, a fine, well-crafted casket can be a source of comfort, pride, and security. It can help the esthetic of the funeral, be an expression of feeling, and a final, family gift.

Hobby nets area student $50

BY DENNIS V. CARTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Shrimp and crab have always been favorites of Derek Parker's, but recently, he's become even more fond of the marine invertebrate.

The aquatic creatures inspired Derek to write an article on how to keep shrimp and crabs in an aquarium. His article was published by a national magazine, which paid Parker $50 for his efforts.

"I sent in a copy of my story to Tropical Fish

Village sewer fees up

The average household in Clarkston soon will be paying $10 more a year for sewer costs.

Clarkston residents will first start noticing a quarterly increase from $29.50 per unit to $32 per unit in their Aug. 1 billing.

The Clarkston Village Council voted 7-0 June 10 to approve the increase.

Village manager Art Pappas said the increase has been passed along to Clarkston residents because Detroit Water and Sewer Systems has recently informed the council that it will increase its rates $2.44 on a quarterly basis.

Park memorial planned

Gov. John Engler and the nation's official Uncle Sam will take part in the dedication of a memorial for veterans of war July 4 at Clarkston's Depot Park.

The marble memorial, which measures 4 x 28 inches and is 8 inches thick, will be inscribed with the words, "In honor and memory of all veterans." The emblems of the five armed services will also be displayed on the memorial.

The Clarkston Village Council voted unanimously June 10 to pay $250 for half of the cost of the memorial. The other half will be paid for by Independence Township.

Hobbyist just to see if they would publish it," said the Clarkston resident, a junior at Clarkston High School. "I really didn't expect them to buy it."

According to Parker, he writes just for the fun of it, and he enjoyed writing about a subject he likes.

"My main hobby is aquariums and aquatic life, but I do like to do some creative writing, so the two just went together naturally," he said.

Parker, who plans to study biology at college, wrote the article first and then decided to send it to the magazine for publication possibilities.

"I didn't really know where they got their stories from," he said. "I wasn't sure if they had staff writers or if they received articles from stringers, so I looked in the front of the magazine and got the address and sent in my story."

"It took about four weeks before I heard anything from them, so the story had really been pushed to the back of my mind. When I received the letter from them, it came with a lot of other mail so I decided to open it last," said Parker.

Parker wasn't sure what the letter would say, but he really wasn't ready for its contents.

"When I received the letter, I didn't really know what to expect, but in the back of my mind I thought it would be a nice letter thanking me for submitting the article and then would say try again at a later date. But when I opened it, there was a sales contract in there for the rights to publish the story. I really couldn't believe at first. It really came as big surprise," he said.

Parker, who said his fourth-grade teacher got him interested in writing, plans to continue to write—but only as a hobby.

"My real interest is biology. I still plan to write some, but more along the lines of creative writing. I would like to do something in the area of short stories, but I'm not sure I have the patience to finish a complete set of stories."

"Right now I will just continue to write for the fun of it. It helps to fill time, and in this case, it helped to fill both my time and my pocketbook," he said.

WRITING IS just a hobby for CHS student Derek Parker.

Board says yes to Shiawassee Basin master plan

BY DENNIS V. CARTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Construction at the Shiawassee Basin could begin as early as this fall.

The Springfield Township Board voted 6-0 June 12 to approve the master plan for the project. Trustee Margaret Bloom was absent.

Also approved by the board were the consultant agreement revision, which allows Carlisle Associates of Ann Arbor to continue to work with board on the parts of master plans already funded, and up to $1,800 for work to be done on a tenant-occupied house at 8625 Eaton Road on project land.

Work on the house includes reshingling the roof, repairing gutters and down spouts, and building a deck. The 300-acre site on Eaton Road has been designated a nature preserve, while the remaining 90 acres near Davisburg and Ormond roads will be developed as multi-purpose, recreational park.

Now that the board has approved the master plan, it can begin planning for the first phase of construction, which may begin this fall.

According to the project's master plan, the 300-acre preserve will offer a series of three trail loops — more than three miles of natural walk paths. An entrance and picnic area with shelters and comfort stations will be constructed north of the residence on Eaton Road.

The 90-acre park is scheduled to include four ball diamonds and two soccer fields. Plus, 200 parking spaces are planned, with 100 in each sports area. A trail will connect picnic areas with shelters and parking lots as well as provide access to meadow areas from Davisburg Elementary School.

Two play lots to accommodate younger patrons, plus a bike path, have been slated for the south edge of the property.

The parks and recreation department is to oversee the project.

In addition, those who pre-register are eligible to win such prizes as a compost bin, stackable recycling bins or an 8- to 10-foot tree with free planting.

The program is paid for through a grant from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources under the Protecting Michigan's Future bond.

For more information, call Carole Ann or Rita at the Independence Township Hall at 625-5111.

Board buys trailer

A few junior high school pupils will attend class in a trailer this fall.

The portable-trailer classroom will be set up at Sashabaw Junior High School off Maybee Road, Independence Township.

The Clarkston Board of Education unanimously approved the purchase June 10. The unit will be similar to the trailers at Clarkston Elementary and the Children's Learning Center.

The reconditioned trailer is to be purchased for $26,000 from the R.J. Taylor Corp., Clarkston. It will be used by general education students because one existing classroom is to be set aside for autistically impaired children.

Oakland Schools is to reimburse Clarkston schools for the cost of the classroom.

What next? Computer images assist hair stylist

BY DENNIS V. CARTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Changing one's hairstyle can seem like risky business, but with the help of computer images, hair stylists now can give a change without actually touching hair.

At More Than Hair at the corner of M-15 and Dixie Highway, Independence Township, computer technology of the New Image System has been employed by the owners since February.

According to co-owner JoAnn Moor, the system helps the stylist by showing a client what he or she will look like before the stylist actually does anything to the person's hair.

What's new in business

"We take a picture of the person, and then they can either bring in frontal color picture of what they want or we have styles on file here," said Moor. "We can also change hair color so they can see how it will look on them."

The process — $35 per session — works as follows. First, a photo of the client is taken. Then, the picture of the client shows up on the computer screen.

Next, the stylist designates what style the client would like to "try." At that point, the stylist superimposes the hair on the picture of client. The stylist can then shape the image of hair to fit the shape of the client's head. The stylist also can change color or change the type of haircut on the picture.

After the stylist has formed the cut to the client's liking, a photograph can be made, which the client can then take home. Up to four pictures of different styles can be made.

The technology is a novelty, said Moor.

"People drive in from all over to have this done," she said. "Some of them come just to see how they would look, but a lot of them take the picture home and then call me and want to have the styling done."

Moor said she thought the system would benefit people in the area.

"It helps us to help them get over the fear of having

ELEONORE Slater (left) and JoAnn Moor, co-owners of More Than Hair, talk over the their hairstyle changed," she said. "We find that the fear of change is biggest reason people won't try something new."

More than 250 hairstyles for men and women are available on the system, and more are added each day, said Moor, a hair stylist for 15 years.

"We want to keep updated with the styles that are always changing," she said. "We update our files every-computer image system they are putting to use for hair styling day to keep abreast of new styles that are popular."

Moor, who is a partner with her mother, Eleonore Slater, finds that clients enjoy seeing how they can make a change in their hairstyle.

"It's a lot fun, for both the clients and the hair stylist. The people really seem to get a big kick out of seeing what they would look like with a different hair style or different hair color," she said.

New bus in school fleet

Nineteen school children may be riding a brand-new school bus this fall.

On June 10, the Clarkston Board of Education unanimously voted to purchase a 19-passenger special education bus.

The bus will be purchased from Hoekstra Truck, Thomas Body for $25,412. This bid was the highest of three considered by the board.

The company was chosen because the other two bidders didn't comply with the district's specifications regarding tires, mirrors and heater.

The Worm 'excited' about Clarkston visit

BY JAMES GIBOWSKI
Clarkston News Staff Writer

The last time they faced each other, Dennis Rodman and Tim McCormick were battling against each other under the boards in the opening round of the NBA playoffs.

On Tuesday, June 25, Rodman will be a guest speaker at the seventh annual Tim McCormick Basketball Camp at Clarkston High School.

McCormick, a Clarkston graduate who now plays with the Atlanta Hawks, says about Rodman, "He's excited to come out and meet the kids."

Rodman's speech is open to the public. The camp is gaining in popularity with each succeeding year. Fifty-eight players signed up the first year. This summer, between 185-190 will take part. About 30 of those players will be girls.

"The girls are a tremendous asset to the camp," said McCormick. "And the guys act real as teammates with them."

The camp, which begins June 24, will be divided into two age groups, grades 3-6 and 7-9.

McCormick says the camp stresses not only basketball fundamentals but having fun as well.

The 7-footer will also be starting something new later this summer. On Aug. 23-25, he will be conducting a father-son camp at St. Mary's College in Orchard Lake.

Fathers and their sons (8-16 years old) will compete and learn together in an overnight basketball camp.

Donor could put name on new team building

Anyone who donates $15,000 or more toward costs of the proposed "team building" at Clarkston High School could have the structure named after them (individually or after their company, etc.), according to athletic director Paul Tungate.

The Clarkston Athletic Boosters are spearheading the fund raising for the structure, which will be built adjacent to the football field and track.

The building, which will contain no lockers or showers, will help house several home and visiting football, soccer and track teams, along with officials during warm-ups, halftime, post-game talks, etc.

For example, in the past, opposing teams have stayed in buses during electrical storms, while Clarkston athletes have run for cover by heading back to the locker room located hundreds of yards away in the school.

Wrestlers place at regionals

Several area wrestlers placed at the AAU Junior Olympics regional championship June 14-16.

Competition was held in both Greco and freestyle at Hulman Arena, located on the campus of Indiana State University.

Six wrestlers from the Clarkston area and six from Goodrich traveled together for the meet.

In Greco-style wrestling, Clarkston's Franco Vega placed second and Corey Grant was third. For Goodrich, Andy Stores, Jamie Bartley and Brad Taylor each took first and Billy Rice was third.

In freestyle action, Clarkston's A.J. Grant finished first, Chad Auten was fourth and Christopher Haag was sixth. For Goodrich, Stores, Bartley, Taylor and Tony Johnson grappled their way to first, Archie VanDusen placed second and Rice took third.

The wrestlers will next compete at the national Junior Olympic championships, July 10-13, at the Kellogg Center in Battle Creek.

Swinging from the Heels

One-on-one with the village council

James Gibowski

I've been witnessing a new kind of sport at the Clarkston Village Council meetings the past few months.

On the second and fourth Mondays of every month, the council often devotes part of a meeting to stopping John Q. Public from trying to change the village's zoning ordinance.

John Q. might already own a house in the under-one-square-mile plot of land known as Clarkston, but usually he is someone who subtly threatens the seven-person council that he will purchase a house only if one of the bedrooms can be used for his part-time Chia planter business.

In other words, he wants ("...please, just this once...") the zoning ordinance changed from residential to commercial.

The council does listen to the arguments, but they know (and now, I always know ahead of time) that John Q. has a better chance of being struck by lightning twice, in the same day, than getting the ordinance changed.

They make sure to tell John Q. that he is welcomed in the community with open arms, but not with any Chia planter business run out of a third bedroom, or appliance storage in the basement or pottery sold from the garage.

Personally, I agree with the council. I've seen plenty of McDonalds-K-Mart-Burger King-Dunkin' Donuts-Taco Bell-Wendys-filled Dixie Highways all over the country, but very few Villages of Clarkston.

Most councils would cave in, but most councils aren't the Clarkston Village Council.

Sometimes, a council just has to be cruel to be kind.

During one meeting, I thought to myself (I must admit, sometimes there is plenty of opportunity to think to myself while there), what would happen if the Clarkston Village Council became the governing body of the NCAA?

This is what I imagined:

After approving the agenda, council President Sharron Catallo begins the discussion of old business by bringing up the request by Eastern Michigan University to change its mascot's name from the Hurons to something else.

Catallo points out that she has received letters not only from American Indians who are offended by the use of Hurons, but has received just as many letters from Indians who wrote that they are proud that the school uses it.

The letters are read and Trustee James Schultz opens the discussion by saying, "Both sides have a point..."

But Trustee William Basinger interrupts. And after apologizing for his interruption, points out, "On page 24, paragraph three in the Document of NCAA Rules and Regulations, it states, 'No college or university may change its mascot once said mascot has already been approved by that school, and has kept that mascot for at least seven years.'"

"Eastern has been the Hurons well over seven years," says Trustee Dom Mauti.

"So it can't be changed," insists Basinger.

"Anyway, what would they do with all that Huron memorabilia in their bookstores?" wonders Catallo. Council attorney John Steckling laughs at the thought of changing 10,000 Huron emblazoned notebooks, but regains his composure and notes, "You can't argue with what's on page 24." Trustee Eric Haven says, "I motion that Eastern..." Attorney Steckling says, "A vote isn't necessary because of what is already stated on page 24."

"I agree," says Basinger. "So, be it," says Catallo, who then brings up the first item under new business, the request for an increase of pay for Bill McCartney, the University of Colorado's head football coach.

U of C Athletic Director Bill Marolt stands up in the third row of the seats facing the council and says, "Coach McCartney led us to the national championship last season. The Buffalo athletic department feels his pay should be raised to $700,000. We made much more than that on the Orange Bowl television rights alone."

"I think Norma (Goyette) has that documented," says village manager Art Pappas.

"Right. The Orange Bowl made $1.2 million, second only to the Rose Bowl's $1.4," says Goyette.

"That was one heck-of-a game," says Trustee Doug Roeser about Colorado's 10-9 victory over Notre Dame. "You know, my daughter, Carrie, once thought about going to school in Colorado."

"We would have loved to have her," says the Colorado athletic director. "That's not the point," retorts Trustee Robert Whitmer. "The point is, do we want football coaches making $700,000 while chemistry professors are barely making 50 grand?"

"But how many touchdowns have any of those professors scored, especially on national TV?" asks the Colorado AD. "And, by the way, U of C has never tried to change its mascot, and never will."

"Rob is right," says Roeser. "The championship was exciting, but, hey, it's not as important as a good education. Think how many Bunsen burners $700,000 can buy."

"So who will make a motion?" asks Catallo.

Basinger says, "I make a motion that McCartney's salary should not be raised to the requested $700,000. And, not only that, but his salary will be lowered to $45,000, a little less than the salary of chemistry professor Frank Lytle."

"But..." stammers the athletic director.

"I second the motion," says Schultz.

"But..." continues the AD.

The motion is passed, 7-0.

"Next on the agenda," says Catallo, "is the request by University of Indiana basketball coach Bobby Knight to drop his three-game suspension, without pay, for throwing a chair across the court in a Feb. 24 game. Mr. Knight is here to try and amend what is written on page 53 of the Document of NCAA Rules and Regulations ..."

Bobby Knight and others involved in the big business of college sports have received (and only expect) slaps on the hand by the NCAA.

But then again, Knight never went one-on-one against Catallo, Basinger, Haven, Mauti, Roeser, Schultz or Whitmer.

REAL ESTATE INSTALLMENT SALE

Ron Rodda
 Sales Manager
 "Let's discuss your Career in Real Estate Sales"

QUESTION: I want to sell a commercial building which I own free and clear. The problem is that the buyer does not want to take out a bank loan at today's high rates. Also, I don't care to have a big capital gains tax during this calendar year. What do you suggest?

ANSWER: Serious consideration should be given to structuring transaction of the installment method of reporting the gain. This would allow you to report the gain proportionately over the years in which you actually receive cash payment from the buyer. Installment sale reporting has been simplified. There are no longer any dollar or time restrictions to qualify any sale as an installment sale.

Having a yard sale? Prepare well in advance

BY DENNIS CARTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Stop ... It's a yard sale! This becomes the battle cry of bargain hunters throughout the area this time of year. Yard sales are not only a good way to find bargains, but they also are a way to recycle items instead of just tossing them out.

If you are planning to hold a yard sale this summer, you may be interested in the following tips:

■ Two days should be enough for your sale. Many people feel that after two days, all the good items are already gone, and usually they are right. You usually find that the first couple of hours are busy as bargain hunters hurry to grab the best buys first.

■ Thursday-Friday or Friday-Saturday sales usually attract crowds of people.

■ Set up your display the day before the sale. Use picnic tables and benches, folding tables, boards laid across sawhorses. This way, you'll be able to scatter the items so each one will be easily seen and can be picked up without disturbing other items. Open your doors promptly at the advertised time.

A variety of items is a key to any successful sale.

■ A variety of items is a key to any successful sale. Variety promotes more interest among lookers and buyers. Some people come strictly for certain items, but many times professional buyers shop for resale shops.

■ Put toys and children's games close to floor, and have a basket or box of small items people can rummage through.

■ Tagging your items will save you answering a million questions about price. Keeping the tags in a box until the sale is over will help balance sales against receipts.

■ Some items you may not want to tag individually. Have sign saying, "All records 50 cents" or "Jewelry $1".

■ If it is a two- or more-family sale, have different colored tags or marking pencils for each family. This tells you who sold which items.

■ Don't overprice. If you are unsure of price, don't put one on it, but get an idea in your head on what you will take.

■ If you live on an out-of-the-way road, borrow someone else's garage. Customers won't seek you out if you are too hard to find. A good idea is to put directions in your ad.

■ Some of the most successful sales are by several people along a road who put on the sales at the same time. This brings more people because they can visit a number of sales in the same area.

■ If someone asks you to hold an item, do it. But take down the person's name and phone number in case they don't show up to buy the item. If someone else shows an interest in the item, take their phone number and tell them you will contact them if the first party doesn't show to claim the item.

■ When you are down to maybe a third of the items, consider making everything half price. You are having the sale to get rid of items, so half price is better than giving them away.

Student, 64, proves you're never too old to learn

BY CURT MCALLISTER
Clarkston News Associate Editor

Whoever said "you can't teach an old dog new tricks" evidently has never met Bob Glenn.

The 64-year-old Detroit native is about to complete his first year of courses at the Oakland Technical Center-Northwest (OTC-N) campus. He is presently taking courses in automotive electronics and heating/air conditioning.

Glenn is one of nearly 50 General Motors employees taking courses at the vocational school. The automaker made the classes available to hourly workers at the Pontiac branch of the Chevrolet-Pontiac-Cadillac (C-P-C) division last year.

Glenn has been employed at GM for the past 40 years as a tractor-trailer driver. His past 26 years have been spent working in Pontiac out of Local 653 of the United Automobile Workers of America (UAW).

Bob Glenn

Glenn said he'd always wanted to go back to school and further his education. However, at this stage of his life, his schooling is more for information than advancement.

"I see these classes as more of a hobby," Glenn said. "I plan on retiring as a truck driver this year, and these classes will help me maintain my equipment. I want to enjoy my retirement, not give my money to someone else for fixing something."

Glenn is the father of three grown children and the grandfather of eight.

At 64, Glenn is the oldest student at OTC-N. He said being around the younger students, many the same ages as his grandchildren, has been a treat.

"It's both fun and rewarding being around them," Glenn said. "We've learned a lot in our time together, and they can't help but make me feel young."

"They've helped bring back memories of raising my own kids many years ago," he added.

Principal Daniel Manthei said the student body and faculty have fallen in love with Glenn.

"Mr. Glenn is a true gentleman and a dapper dresser," Manthei said. "Both students and faculty enjoy being around him. He's been an excellent role model for the students. A lot of them look up to him and see him as either a surrogate father or grandfather."

Glenn was chosen as a keynote speaker at the May 29 awards ceremony, and, there, he prodded his classmates to consider all forms of higher education.

"I'm here to try to encourage you, all of you, thinking that 12 years of school is enough ... forget it," he was quoted as saying. "If you stop school after 12 years, 20 years from today, you would be just like a student who has never gone to school."

In his year at OTC-N, Glenn has received several certificates of recognition for perfect attendance and all A's. He hopes his story can serve as an example that it's never too young to learn.

"I hope this can entice others, regardless of age, that it's never too late to go back to school," Glenn said. "It keeps your mind active and young."

Elementary pupils remembered at graduation

BY DENNIS V. CARTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

As Seals and Croft harmonized in their song, "We May Never Pass This Way Again," so it goes with many of the Clarkston High School seniors who graduated this month.

But for Ruth Powers, Barbara Sheffer and Lucille Richley, three Pine Knob Elementary teachers, the memories of their former students pass through their minds again as they reflect on these seniors at graduation time.

The teachers somehow find time in their busy end-of-year schedules to write congratulation cards to each of their former students who have now graduated and are embarking on a new phase of their lives.

"We go through the yearbook and reflect on the seniors who we had in our classes as youngsters," said Richley, a third-grade teacher the school. "It's fun to see how they have grown up, and it's rewarding to see the accomplishments that many of them have made. It really brings back the memories."

Collectively, 45 seniors will hear from one of the three teachers who have been sending the cards for about five years.

"Ruth Powers actually began the card sending, and when we I saw the satisfaction she received from the about many students.

"It is really funny how much about these students comes back to you when seeing their picture in the yearbook. I look out over my classroom and can actually remember where they sat when they were my students.

The memories of my former students often pass through my mind, not just now but at other times, too," she said.

Although many of these students may not pass this way again, their memories will continue to pass through the minds of their former teachers.

cards for former students who recently graduated from Clarkston High School. Powers instigated the effort a few years ago.

letters and notes she got back I decided to do the same," said Richley. "It is a very busy time of the year for us, so it has to be rewarding or we wouldn't do it."

Only students who actually attended the teachers' classes in the past receive the cards.

"We sign the cards and tell the senior when they were in our class. Many times the students can't remember my name, but they always remember my big half-moon desk," she said.

Since the three have been sending cards, they have received numerous invitations to former students' open houses and to graduation.

"It's really nice when these seniors write us back and thank us for the cards. In the notes we receive back, the students express how pleased they are that we remembered them. Those return letters really makes it all worth while," Richley said.

According to Richley, who has been teaching at the school for 33 years, she can easily remember specifics

Summer a good time to plan for a tree

Can you think of a better time to decide where to plant a shade tree than in the summer? If you catch yourself saying, "I wish we had more shade around the house," now's the time to plan some.

Before rushing out to buy the first tree you run into or sending for a "miracle tree" ("grows 25 feet the first year") off the back of a newspaper supplement, take stock of the growing conditions in the proposed planting site, suggests Curt Peterson, extension horticulture specialist at Michigan State University. Also take time to figure out what traits you want in your tree.

"For instance, how large a tree do you want?" Peterson said. "Some trees never grow beyond 25 feet; others may reach 80 to 100 feet. Too large a tree may tower over your home; too small a tree will likewise be out of proportion."

Shape is another consideration. Some trees are tall and narrow; others are round or oval and spread their branches wide. You need to match up shape and size with the space available for the tree to grow in.

Susceptibility to storm damage or pests, the presence of flowers or fruits, leaf color, and even the texture and color of bark can enter into your decision.

"If you want a trouble-free tree, you want to avoid trees as willow and silver maple, which are prone to damage from wind and ice storms, and European white birch, which usually falls victim to bronze birch borers," Peterson said. "Certain trees that might otherwise be welcome in the landscape are generally avoided because of their fruit. Mulberries, for instance, and the hulls of black walnuts stain everything they touch."

The soil, moisture and available sunlight also need to be taken into account. Though many plants are tolerant of a range of soil types, most prefer a well-drained site. Others do best on a sandy soil, and a few prefer constantly moist soil. Some trees, such as dogwoods, are forest understory plants and so do best in the shade and shelter of larger trees. Others, especially some evergreens, need shelter from prevailing winds and bright sunlight in winter to prevent damage to foliage caused by moisture loss. Still other plants do best when they are grown in full sun.

Winter hardiness is a critical factor in Michigan, Peterson said. Plants native to milder climates may simply not survive a typical Michigan winter. Others may survive in a carefully chosen, protected site or in an unusually mild winter, but not in a location exposed to wind and normal winter weather.

"Plants grow much better and have fewer problems with insects and diseases when they're planted in sites that meet their specific needs," Peterson said. "Finding out what conditions prevail in the proposed planting site and selecting plants that will thrive there increases your chance of success."

Growing fruit trees requires some training for a desired form

There's more to growing tree fruit than merely propping a tree into a hole in your backyard.

Fruit trees require watering, proper nutrition, protection against diseases and pests — and training and pruning.

"Training gives young, non-bearing fruit trees a desired form and promotes the development of a strong framework to support the fruit in later years," says Jerry Hull, Extension horticulturist at Michigan State University. "The best time to prune is in late winter or very early spring, while plants are still dormant but after severe winter weather has passed."

The two training methods most often used for fruit trees are the modified leader method and the open-center method.

Apples, pears, cherries and European varieties of plums are usually trained to the modified leader method. Peaches and Japanese plums are usually shaped by the open-center method.

The main difference between the two methods is the presence or absence of a central leader, a central trunk from which a number of main lateral or scaffold branches extend, Hull explains.

When training a modified leader tree, select a shoot to be the central leader at planting time to open up the center of the tree, and select three well-spaced scaffold branches the next year.

Once you've selected these laterals, the trees usually require very little further training.

With either method, you select scaffold branches that form wide angles with the main stem.

Sharp, V-shaped crotches are weak and prone to breakage under the weight of a heavy fruit crop or a load of ice or snow, Hull explains.

"After the framework is established, young fruit trees need little pruning until they come into full bearing," Hull says. "Heavy pruning each year will keep the tree smaller, but it comes into bearing later and bears smaller crops — at least for the first few years — than one that is pruned lightly."

Too little pruning, on the other hand, will give you a poorly shaped tree that may break down under the weight of its own fruit.

For details on how to prune fruit trees or other landscape plants, contact your county Cooperative Extension Service office.

Meeting called to order by President Catalo at 7:38 p.m., followed by the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag.

Roll: Present-Basinger, Catalo, Haven, Mauti, Roeser, Schultz and Whitmer.
Absent-None.

Motion by Mauti to accept the minutes as presented. Seconded by Basinger.

Three items were added to the agenda and then approved. Motion by Haven to approve the bills - totalling $25,367.40. Seconded by Schultz. Roll: 6 ayes. Nays-None. Motion carried.

Discussion about Church signs in the Village.
Discussion about parking bumpers along E. Washington.
Also discussion to paint yellow lines along the edge of the black top. This will be discussed further at the next meeting.

TO: Village Council
FROM: Art Pappas
SUBJECT: Budget Amendments & Sewer Charge Increase

We have received word from the Oakland County DPW that at the next billing the sewer rates will be raised $2.44 per unit. Following is a breakdown of the billings:

Current Village Charges: $29.50, per unit
County Charges will be: 24.76
Charges by Independence Township for Maintenance: 4.52
Administrative Fees and Reserves (Village): 2.72
Recommended new charge per unit: $32.00

It is recommended that the unit rate be raised to $32 which would allow $2.72 per unit for administrative fees and reserves. About half of this would be used for administrative (supplies, salary, postage, etc.) and the balance is for reserves.

The following motions are requested with regards to the budget and amendments:

Moved by Basinger, Seconded by Schultz, "That the motion made in the May 27, 1991, minutes regarding the loan to the Street Funds from the Sewer Operations and Maintenance Fund be rescinded." Roll. Yeas 6, Nays 0 (After discussions with the auditor, he recommends that we have the General Fund do the borrowing for street repairs due to restrictions by the Road Funds with regards to borrowing. This should not make a significant difference in the end result.

Moved by Basinger, Seconded by Mauti, "That $18,200 be transferred from the Sewer Operations and Maintenance Fund for road repairs and this amount is to be repaid to the Sewer Operations and Maintenance fund within a three year period at an interest rate of 4.75 percent per annum." Roll. Yeas 6 Nays 0. Motion carried. (The original amount of $16,500 was in error. $18,200 will cover all of the estimates we now have. We are still waiting for an estimate on Waldon Road, Middle Lake, and Overlook).

Moved by Basinger, Seconded by Whitman, "That the 1990-91 General Fund Budget be amended to transfer $52,000 to the Major Road Fund." Roll. Yeas 6 Nays 0. Motion carried. (This is to adjust the transfer of the reserves from the General Fund to the Major Road Fund.)

Moved by Basinger, Seconded by Schultz, "That the 1990-91 Major Road Fund Budget be amended to show a transfer of $52,000 from the General Fund instead of the previously budgeted $28,093." Roll. Yeas 6 Nays 0. (This is the counterpart of the previous motion.)

Moved by Basinger, Seconded by Whitman, "That the following revised budgets be approved as follows (copies attached to minutes): General Fund: $262,415; Local Road Fund, $26,195; Major Road Fund, $31,010." Roll. Yeas 6 Nays 0. (To approve budgets for 1991-92.)

Copy of Budget in the Minute Book.

When young wild eagles come of age, they are pushed from their cliff-side nests into empty air. They fall. Tumbling toward the ground, they must quickly combine instinct with everything they've learned so far. It's scary at first, but, like you, they'll struggle, adapt, and eventually soar. We know you've got it in you. Because you are the young eagle, and now's your chance to fly.
