Business, homeowners survive storm

BY AMANDA PESKE
Clarkston News Special Writer

Some area residents resorted to picnicking during a power outage caused by the July 7 storm.

However, most Detroit Edison customers would agree that the blackout — the worst in history for the Oakland County area — was no picnic.

The Clarkston and Davisburg areas suffered much tree and shrub damage, as well as damage to homes and other structures.

Some businesses also suffered loss of income due to the power outage, and some government offices also were out of service due to the loss.

For Carols' Village Grill on Main Street, Clarkston, it was two days no pay.

Carol's lost a shipment of fresh ice cream it received on Friday. On the bright side, owner Carol Borngesser said, "it gave us a chance to clean out the refrigerator."

That was a common chore among business owners and homeowners, unless they were lucky enough to have a generator or they never lost power, such as the Main Street Deli on Ortonville Road and Dixie Highway, Independence Township.

The Deli, which had lost business since the A&P grocery store moved to a new location, actually gained more business during the power outage.

Luck was on the side of some businesses, such as Beverly's flower shop on M-15, Independence Township. With the great amount of business Beverly's does, employee Betty Bigger said it was a relief that the shop only lost a few flowers in the refrigerator.

Since it was the weekend, the business had few flowers to be lost. It reopened the morning of Tuesday, June 9, after receiving power again. Bigger said damage was minimal compared to damage caused by the ice storm a few years back.

In addition to area businesses, the Clarkston school system also had to operate without power.

Robert Burek, principal of Clarkston High School, said CHS sent its summer school students to Sashabaw Junior High for a few days before receiving full power on (See BUSINESS, next page)

KATHERINE Sedlak, 2 1/2, turns wild at the sound of music and spins wildly around and around, until she falls. Then, she picks herself up, laughs, checks to make sure her parents are watching, and spins again. Katherine and her parents, Dave and Sharon Sedlak of Deerhill Drive, Independence Township, were among the hundreds enjoying the free Russ Simonson jazz concert in Clarkston's Depot Park on Friday, July 12. Free concerts are scheduled for the next two Fridays.

Bopping to banjos

Back by popular demand, the Auto City Banjos will liven up Clarkston's Depot Park with a free concert Friday, July 19.

The 15 banjo players from the Flint area were well liked last year, said concert organizer Don Brose, adding that the group's proceeds are donated to charity.

The free 7-9 p.m. concert Friday is part of a five-concert series sponsored by the Clarkston Area Chamber of Commerce and First of America. However, donations are accepted to help offset the cost. Send a check or money order to the Clarkston Area Chamber of Commerce, Concert Fund, 5897 Dixie Highway, Clarkston, MI 48346.

This week, the Clarkston Foundation will be serving refreshments at the park on Depot Road off Main Street, but concert-goers may want to bring a picnic dinner to the show, as well as bug spray and lawn chairs or blankets.

The last concert of the season is next Friday, July 26, when the Metropolitan Jazz Orchestra performs.

For more information, call Brose at 623-7900 or Cathy S. Scott at 625-4111.

Business, homeowners survive storm damage

Thursday. As for drivers education at CHS and the SCAMP program at Sashabaw, things ran as usual with a few minor adjustments, he said.

A Monday night school board meeting was held at the Oakland Technical Center-Northwest in Springfield Township because the board office on Clarkston Road. Independence Township, lost its power.

Springfield Township offices were without power until about 8:30 p.m. Thursday, July 11, but the township board elected to have its Wednesday night meeting in the powerless hall on Broadway anyway. That meant no lights and no air conditioning.

However, Springfield Township has held meetings for years without air conditioning, so that was not a hardship, said Supervisor Collin Walls.

Some even suggested that the lack of light was not a change from the norm.

"I heard lots of comments like, 'We've been operating in the dark for years,'" said Walls, who managed to keep his humor through the ordeal.

He admitted the meeting ended earlier than usual. "When we couldn't make out the faces in the audience anymore, we knew it was time to adjourn," he said. Much of the township still was without power as of loss, which meant computers were inoperable, shutting down some of the township's services.

According to Supervisor Frank Ronk, the July 7 storm was particularly damaging because it hit the entire township. Hardly any household was left untouched.

Amanda Peske is a junior at Clarkston High School. Editor Julie Campe contributed to this story.

Neighbors make party out of power outage

A power outage party was just the inspiration for some Springfield Township neighbors on Thursday, July 11.

A ravaging storm hit the area on Sunday, July 7, leaving many without power for days.

About 25 residents on Clark and Ridgewood roads decided to take advantage of the situation and become neighbors.

"We decided to do something fun instead of just complaining," said Cheryl Brady of Clark Road.

So they had a cookout at Fred and Sue Vandervoord's house on Ridgewood. Everyone brought food, and the group had a "great time," said Brady.

"It went well," she said. "We said we're going to get together every night until we get power."

That could be a long time, Brady said on July 12 — after five days of being powerless — that she and her neighbors were told it could be another week before power is restored to the area.

Those participating in the power outage party were the families of Dean and Sandy Nelson, John and Cheryl Brady, Wayne and Martha Simons, James and Janice Taylor, Jack Larson, John and Carolyn Dennis, Sam and Dody Savas, Russell Price, Arnold and Lois Johnson, Barb Misiak and hosts Fred and Sue Vandervoord.

the weekend, but township services were back on track again. Many employees, such as building inspectors, had been conducting business from their homes, said Walls, adding that the storm completely knocked out the township's computerized phone system, so communication was nil.

SASHABAW JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL served as one of the county's emergency stations after a July 7 storm left most of the area without power. The school was open all last week, with the American Red Cross providing citizens with bottled water and dry ice. The Clarkston School District also provided residents with shower privileges. Here, resi-

A LOCAL couple receive a case of bottled water from an American Red Cross volunteer July 9. These two were among the hundreds who visited Sashabaw Junior High School last week to pick up supplies or use the school's showers, after a July 7 storm knocked out the electricity in a majority of Oakland County.

CAROL'S VILLAGE GRILL echoed the sentiments of nearly everyone in Oakland County this week. The Sunday evening storm crippled the east side of Clarkston's downtown district, causing most of the businesses to close Monday and Tuesday.

DPW: Free drop-off site for broken trees

Residents who plan to spend the weekend cleaning up after the storm now have a place to cart their fallen tree limbs.

The Independence Township Department of Public Works (DPW) is accepting brush from township residents during regular business hours 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday — plus 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. the next two Saturdays, July 20, 27.

The DPW will not accept brush after Saturday, July 27, and it will not accept lumber, garbage, blocks and other non-storm related material.

The DPW extended its hours because of the many calls from township residents, said Linda L. Richardson, administrative assistant at the DPW.

"I've never seen anything like it," she said. "As you drive down the road, there's branches everywhere."

The township's Lakeview Cemetery on White Lake Road at Dixie Highway also suffered the loss of a "huge" oak tree, said Richardson, adding that it fell onto "one of the older headstones" in the cemetery.

Normally, family members are responsible for the upkeep of headstones, but family members probably aren't around any longer for the broken headstone, she said.

In this case, the township's insurance may cover the repair work because the damage was caused by an act of nature, she said.

Residents who drop off their tree branches at the DPW on Flemings Lake Road off Clarkston Road (between Main Street and I-75) must show proof of residency, said Richardson.

She noted that the storm provided one bonus: woodchips made from the dropped-off brush is available for free to township residents.

New attendance policy draws flak from students

BY LAURIE PESCOR
Clarkston News Special Writer

Most students polled about a new Clarkston High School attendance policy did not like the changes, while a few approved of the new policy that will take effect this fall.

The new attendance policy states that if a student accumulates 15 or more absences in a semester, excused or unexcused, the consequence will be a four-hour Saturday detention.

Any days missed after the detention could result in the failure of all present classes. Exceptions will be made for severe medical problems.

This new policy is being instated in hopes of increasing the current daily attendance percentage of 91 to 92 percent at Clarkston High School to 95 or 96 percent, according Principal Robert Burek.

A few students disagreed with the policy on its inclusion of excused absences.

Sophomore Melissa Kymila said, "I can understand if they're unexcused, but if they're excused, it's kind of stupid."

Junior Mike Warchok agreed.

"It sucks," he said. "If they're unexcused I can understand that, but if they're excused then it sucks. I had mono in eighth grade and missed a month and a half, and it's not fair. It would be too much hassle because all the parents would raise hell."

Anthony Thompson, a junior, also found fault with

"I don't think it's fair because our parents should be looking after us and not the schools. Our parents should be able to keep us out for as long as they want."

penalizing students whose absences are excused.

"I don't agree so much with the excused absences. Other than that it's fine," he said.

Other students said the entire policy is unfair.

Mike Kunkler, a sophomore, said, "I don't think it's a fair policy. I usually stay home about four days a semester. If (Dr. Burek) thinks 91 percent is bad, he should go to the junior high where it's 70 percent."

"I think they're going to find a lot more people in detention than they thought."

Amanda Uhan, a sophomore, stated, "It stinks. It's not fair. Especially for people that like to go away in the winter or people that have bad illnesses that aren't considered bad by doctors.

"I think it should be up to our parents because our taxes pay their salaries. So I think it should be up to our parents whether to take us out."

Another sophomore, Glorie Lymperis, said, "I don't think it's fair because our parents should be looking after us and not the schools. Our parents should be able to keep us out for as long as they want."

A couple students said that if a student's school work isn't suffering, the number of absences should be of no matter.

Sophomore Kristin Schoenweg stated, "I think 91 to 92 percent is good. If it doesn't affect your school work,

"It would be too much hassle because all the parents would raise hell."

it doesn't matter how many days you miss."

Another sophomore, Kate Yarber, said, "If it doesn't affect your school work, it shouldn't really matter how many times you're absent."

Not all the students reacted negatively to the new policy. Two students found it to be agreeable.

Junior Matt Perry said, "I think it's fine with me. I agree with that."

Senior Natalie Luhrs said, "It's fine just as long as

37 apply for principal position

BY CURT MCALLISTER
Clarkston News Associate Editor

It could be about a month before students attending Sashabaw Junior High find out who their new principal will be for the upcoming year.

According to Duane Lewis, director of personnel for Clarkston schools, the district has received 37 applications from people looking to fill the void left by former principal David Reschke.

Reschke resigned from his job in June after accepting the position of director and staff development for the Clarkston school district. He'd been the principal at SJHS since 1987.

Lewis said the interviewing process will be held this week, with several meetings lumped into a two- or three-day period.

Lewis said the applicants will be reduced to six by week's end. Of the 37 resumes received, he said, only one was from within the Clarkston school district.

Lewis said Supervisor Gary Haner will help make the final selection. He will then take his recommendation to the Clarkston Board of Education for approval.

Lewis said the task could be difficult because of the number of highly qualified people vying for the job.

"We've got a good field of applicants," Lewis said. "Their qualifications will make for some tough decisions."

If all goes well, he added, a new principal could be approved at the Aug. 12 school board meeting.

"If it doesn't affect your school work, it shouldn't really matter how many times you're absent."

(Dr. Burek) makes exceptions for school-related absences. Otherwise, a lot of people are going to have lower grades."

Laurie Pescor is a senior at Clarkston High School.

Tests 'pending' on contaminated Clarkston water

BY JAMES GIBOWSKI
Clarkston News Staff Writer

The search continues for contaminated water in the Clarkston area.

Water samples have been taken from houses on Main Street, Clarkston Road and Wompole in Clarkston, along with Perry Lake Road and Northview Drive in Independence Township.

Lois Graham, environmental sanitarian for the Michigan Department of Public Health, said she couldn't give an exact number of houses that have been tested.

"That would be impossible for me to tell you," said Graham.

The source (or sources) of the contamination still is unknown.

Graham said a large majority of the test results are still pending. She said most of those results probably will not be available until sometime in August. More, less or no testing in the future will be determined by those tests still pending.

The source (or sources) of the contamination still is unknown. However, speculation has centered on the closed Powell landfill on Clarkston Road, near the Church of the Resurrection.

And some members of the Clarkston Village Council said they were concerned about possible leakage from buried empty gasoline tanks at Village Muffler and Brake Specialist on the corner of Main Street and Clarkston Road.

If a house is tested positive of contaminants, the department notifies the residents and the house is resampled. If the resample again turns up positive, the residents are notified to discontinue use of water for cooking and drinking (by state law, bottled water is then given free to residents until the problem is solved). If the resample turns up negative, the house is tested a third and last time.

While Graham said she couldn't give an exact total of houses tested, she did say about 17 houses (from 104 Main St. to 180 Main St.) in Clarkston have been tested.

In last week's Clarkston News, Clarkston village manager Artemus Pappas said five residents had received letters saying their water was contaminated. However, only two of the five letters actually stated the water was contaminated. (Pappas didn't see all five letters but "assumed" anyone getting a letter had water contamination, he said.)

Along with the two houses on Main Street having confirmed contamination, one house has been not confirmed (one positive and two negative tests), and two houses have samples pending (one positive test so far).

The remaining houses on Main Street still have their first test pending.

The Goyette Funeral Home on 155 Main St. is one of the two houses with confirmed contamination. It was found to have traces of 1,2-dichloroethane, a solvent that also is used as a scavenger for lead combustion products in gasoline and does not naturally occur in ground water.

Five houses have been tested on Wompole. One of those houses has been found to have been contaminated with Tetra Hydro Furan and Freon. One house has been resampled and the other three have test results still pending.

Houses also have been tested on Perry Lake Road and Northview Drive, which are located near the Powell landfill.

That area was connected to a municipal water system after residents lived for a year with bottled drinking and cooking water.

Chimps now safer at Detroit Zoo

Animal rights activist Susan Yoh of Clarkston was happy to report July 10 that the Detroit Zoo is installing a "hot wire" around the chimpanzees' moat at the zoo in Royal Oak.

Yoh, who helped organize a protest at the zoo last year after a chimpanzee drowned in the moat and another chimp nearly drowned, said a high fence also would be installed — high enough so the chimps can't climb over it and get near the dangerous moat.

A security guard told her the fence, too, would be electrified, said Yoh.

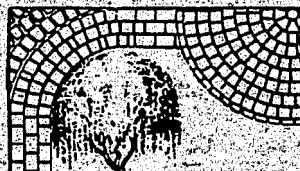

"They'll probably touch it once and get a shock and won't go back," she said, adding that it was a shame the chimps had to be on display at all.

"The big thing is I want all big primates out of captivity, but if they have to be in captivity, I want them to be safe," she said. "They shouldn't have to die for our amusement."

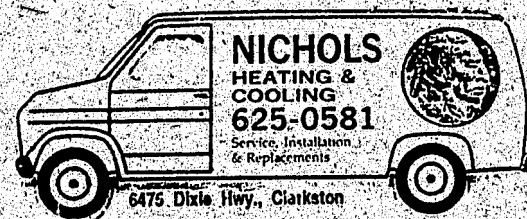

Yoh said hundreds of people showed up for the demonstration at the zoo last September, protesting the unsafe chimpanzee display and some of the zoo's animal control practices. She credited the demonstration for bringing about change.

"I really believe that, without all the publicity we've gotten, they wouldn't have had the pressure to do something," she said.

Gales of July

Julie Campe

In my later years, I may refer to last week as The Great Storm of '91 — or more accurately, The Whole Gale of '91.

But I doubt anyone will listen. Besides, by the time I begin talking in that manner, we'll be in the 21st century, and I'll have to specify to which '91 I'm referring — and I'll have forgotten the correct name of the storm.

A whole week after the blustery debacle, people still are talking about the storm, with its 60-mph winds.

Funnel clouds were sighted in the Waterford area, but no verification of an actual touch-down of the funnels has been announced.

In the newsroom, such storms bring about important debates such as: When does a funnel cloud become a tornado? And: What's the difference between a tornado and, say, a cyclone? Or between a cyclone and a hurricane?

After much scouring through reference books and much examining of general usage, we've come to the following conclusions.

A funnel cloud (dangerous in its own right) becomes a tornado when it touches the ground (much as a meteor becomes a meteorite when it touches the ground), though many people refer to the funnel clouds themselves as tornados.

A cyclone is generally used as another name for a tornado; however, it actually is a more specific name for a type of funnel-cloud storm, whether or not any funnels touch the earth.

According to Webster's dictionary definition, a cyclone is a storm or system of winds that rotates about a center of low atmospheric pressure clockwise in the southern hemisphere and counterclockwise in the northern (what happens on the equator, I wonder?), advances at a speed of 20 to 30 mph, and often brings abundant rain.

If that cyclone were to take place in the tropics and include winds of 74 mph or greater, it would be called a hurricane, which is usually accompanied by rain, thunder and lightning and sometimes heads to more temperate areas of the globe.

The names of such storms are important — they help us categorize and put order into such uncontrollable events.

One man even went further by devising a system to measure weather by its winds.

In 1858, Sir Francis Beaufort came up with what is now known as the Beaufort Scale, though the U.S. uses a slightly higher mph as a criterion for hurricane.

The scale ranges from (0) "calm," with winds less than 1 mph (smoke rises vertically), to (12) "hurricane," with winds 73-136 mph and with devastation.

According to this scale, the Clarkston area on July 7 rated (10) a "whole gale," with winds 55-63 mph, which — according to the scale — causes trees to be uprooted and considerable structural damage.

Compare this to (7) a "moderate gale" (winds 32-38 mph), which is described by whole trees in motion and inconvenience in walking against wind.

Or how about (8) a "fresh gale" (winds 39-46 mph), which breaks twigs of trees and generally impedes progress.

A (9) "strong gale" on the other hand (winds 47-54 mph) causes slight structural damage and removes chimney pots and slates.

On Beaufort's scale, today would rank (2) a "light breeze" (winds 4-7 mph), which means the wind can be felt on your face, leaves rustle and an ordinary vane is moved by the wind. Trees stand steadfast in the ground.

It's not like a whole gale.

Strange way to observe freedom

It's a shame patriotism didn't flow from the hearts of the Robert Cook home (81 N. Main St.) as their decorations indicated on the Fourth of July.

Numerous parade-watchers (young, old, even a veteran) were not allowed to view the parade from the sidewalk in front of this home.

As the Cooks entertained on their porch, they exhibited their freedom by telling area residents to move elsewhere to see the parade.

Just jotting

Jim Sherman

We moved to First Street in Oxford in May, 1955. Son Jim was six months old. Luan joined the family in 1957.

We had little trouble finding babysitters in our neighborhood during those first years in town.

One of them crossed our path recently. In renewing acquaintances with Ann Bromley she told us why our finding sitters was easy. She said, "Everyone wanted to babysit at your house. You had a color television."

Up to then I thought it was because our kids were so good-natured and well-mannered.

Seldom have we been among the first in buying anything. We just this year bought a VCR. We didn't buy a CB radio, don't own a car phone, have only read about compact discs and never owned a sun-roofed car.

We're followers, not leaders. But, we were early in getting a television. In 1951 we had a TV and 40-ft tower when we lived in Gladwin. Lansing's Channel 6 came in fuzzy, but we enjoyed it.

We used the same tower when we moved to Oxford. Reception was fine, though interruptions were frequent. Obviously, sitters didn't mind.

The south wind brings wet weather, the north wind, wet and cold together, the west wind always brings us rain... the east wind blows it back again.

Last Sunday evening, when electricity stopped for much of northeast Oakland county, you couldn't tell what way the wind and rain was coming from and the only way to escape was down.

Higher taxes are hitting all of us. One government agency said the way for businesses to maintain earnings was to "share" these higher taxes (costs) with customers.

That's not even a good suggestion for businesses, and doesn't work at all for the customers (the taxpaying public).

Politicians have a way with words, except when it calls for cutting spending and taxes.

Recycling is old stuff at our house. Only Hazel calls it antiquing.

Longtime readers of Jottings will recall our printing the following quote more than once. It bears repeating more than once.

"I wept because I had no shoes, until I saw the man who had no feet." — ancient Persian saying.

We'll close with Will Rogers: "I tell you folks, all politics is applesauce."

"Everything is funny as long as it is happening to somebody else."

"More men have been elected between sundown and sunup than ever were elected between sunup and sundown."

"I never met a man I didn't like."
He must have regretted that last one.

Parade best ever

My letter regarding music in parades came out a week late, so I can take no credit for the parade. But I can sure give credit!

It was a wonderful parade, the best ever! Music, gait, fun, joy, lots of noise and a whopping crowd! Thanks to all who participated.

Exciting turnout

The firefighters of Independence Township would like to thank all of the people who helped to make this year's Fourth of July Parade the best this town has ever seen.

It was most exciting to see the extraordinary crowd turnout. The support and participation we had from the community was overwhelming and very much appreciated. Everything from the pre-parade celebration through the memorial for the military personnel in Depot Park was a complete success.

We would also like to give a special thank you to L. Brooks Patterson, who at the last minute filled in as master of ceremonies when we received word that WLLZ's Byron MacGregor's father-in-law had a stroke that morning, causing Byron to miss the parade.

Once again, thank you to everyone who helped us celebrate our nation's independence.

Parade Committee

Truly the biggest

I would like to thank the community for such a great turnout at the Independence Fourth of July Parade, truly our biggest yet.

The interest among the people was very gratifying. Without their support and contribution, we would not have achieved the successful celebration we were able to endow.

It gave us much pleasure to provide an exceptional ceremony to all of the armed forces. A special thank you to the Clarkston Village Council and the Independence Township Board for covering the cost of the memorial monument, placed at Depot Park.

I would also like to extend my appreciation to the Independence firefighters for coming together and contributing their efforts.

Many thanks to secretary Peggy North and to two of my captains, Mike Fahrner and Steve Ronk. Without these three, the parade would not have taken place.

Chief Gar Wilson
Independence Fire Department

They were there in our time of need

The high winds and rain that hit the Clarkston area July 7 left us with a loss of our easy way of life.

I would like to thank all township officials, all township firefighters, Oakland County Sheriff's Department and Detroit Edison.

I also thank the Village of Clarkston Department of Public Works for all the many hours of work the employees put in to help all the people.

It's so nice to see people work together.

Norma Goyette

Thanks to all from Lighthouse North

We would like to thank the people of Clarkston who supported us in raising $1,700 for Lighthouse North. The concert was enjoyable for us to organize and enjoyable to entertain all who could come the evening of June 2 at the Kirchgessner Theatre.

We would especially like to thank the Clarkston Area Optimist Club, which contributed an additional $300 earmarked for the children at Lighthouse North.

It was through the generosity of the people here in Clarkston that made the concert such a success.

Again, thank you to Paul and Jeff Hayward for the guitar rendition, Nina Geren for a delightful classical flute piece, the Lakeland Players for their many songs, Antal Lang for the superb piano concertizing, Tammy Bridger and her inspiring voice, the B to Z Band, the Academy Singers: Amy DesRochers and Erica Scrugis, Kathi Thornton, St. Daniel's Quartet, Jessica and Carl Schulte, our delightful and comical masters of ceremony: Jimmy Territo and John Stang, Scott Taylor (the sound man), John Bruggerman, Joel Burnell and the Clarkston area cable company, Gene Wenson, Stan Garwood and George Krull.

It is through your generosity and concern for Lighthouse North that we were so successful.

'If it Fitz . . .'

To people up north,
city's already marked

Jim
Fitzgerald

Up north, the long and two shorts of it. Following the scary fireworks publicity, I defended my neighborhood by writing: "It's ridiculous to suggest that, because of two videotaped muggings, everyone should be afraid to come to downtown Detroit."

"It may, indeed, be ridiculous," responded Bill Rabe, "but I think Detroiters don't understand how outsiders, particularly UPers, view Detroit. . . . You, or the police chief of some 'spokesman' can say with all logic that an action is not representative of Detroit or Detroiters, but this doesn't make any difference. That indelible black mark is there, and all the black marks past, and to come."

Rabe is a native Detroiters who moved north in 1969 after becoming well-known as an innovative publicist for the University of Detroit. There is nothing racist intended by his reference to "black marks." Rather, it reflects his Roman Catholic background.

Every time northerners read that someone in Detroit "has been shot or beat up, or had their home broken into or they read how to secure your Detroit house with chains, locks, bolts, electronic alarms and bars - every time they read this sort of stuff it puts an indelible black mark on their souls, as the nuns used to say," Rabe explained.

"God knows what it will take to erase those marks, but until they are erased and until they stop multiplying, most of the UPers will be very thoughtful before making the 350-mile trip to 'sin city' or 'murder capital.' That's the way it is."

Rabe lives in Sault Ste. Marie, retired from his publicity position at Lake Superior State University but still spreading the good word for Mackinac Island, particularly the Grand Hotel, and other projects, such as stone kerplunking, dear to his offbeating heart. He stressed that northerners are influenced not just by what they hear about Detroit, but also by how they feel about their home.

"They all believe that where they live is best. Not better, but best. Consequently, there has to be a very good reason for them to go elsewhere, like Florida, or Detroit," Rabe said, pointing out that many Soo area residents still don't think they're far enough away from pavement and people. In the summer, they move into forest cabins only 15 or 30 minutes from their winter homes.

"I thought this was odd when I first moved north, but I'm beginning to understand. They want as many of those damn trees around them as possible, and they'd rather not see any neighboring houses," Rabe said.

To echo his own, I think that I shall never see a person half as boring as a tree.

'The best place in the world'

But no hard feelings; I'll even help Rabe with his publicity chores. Emily, my 9-year-old granddaughter, recently wrote an essay titled, "The Best Place in the World." The first draft was spelled phonetically and, as a former ad copywriter, I like it better than the corrected version ultimately submitted to her teacher. Retrieved from the wastebasket, here it is:

"All my live, I have thout that Macamacisland is the best place in the world. I may say this because of no cars no motor bikes just horsenbugys and bikes. Or maby because they have the best fuge or best penut butter brittel, or maby because of the littel stors. Or maby becaus of the ponyrids.

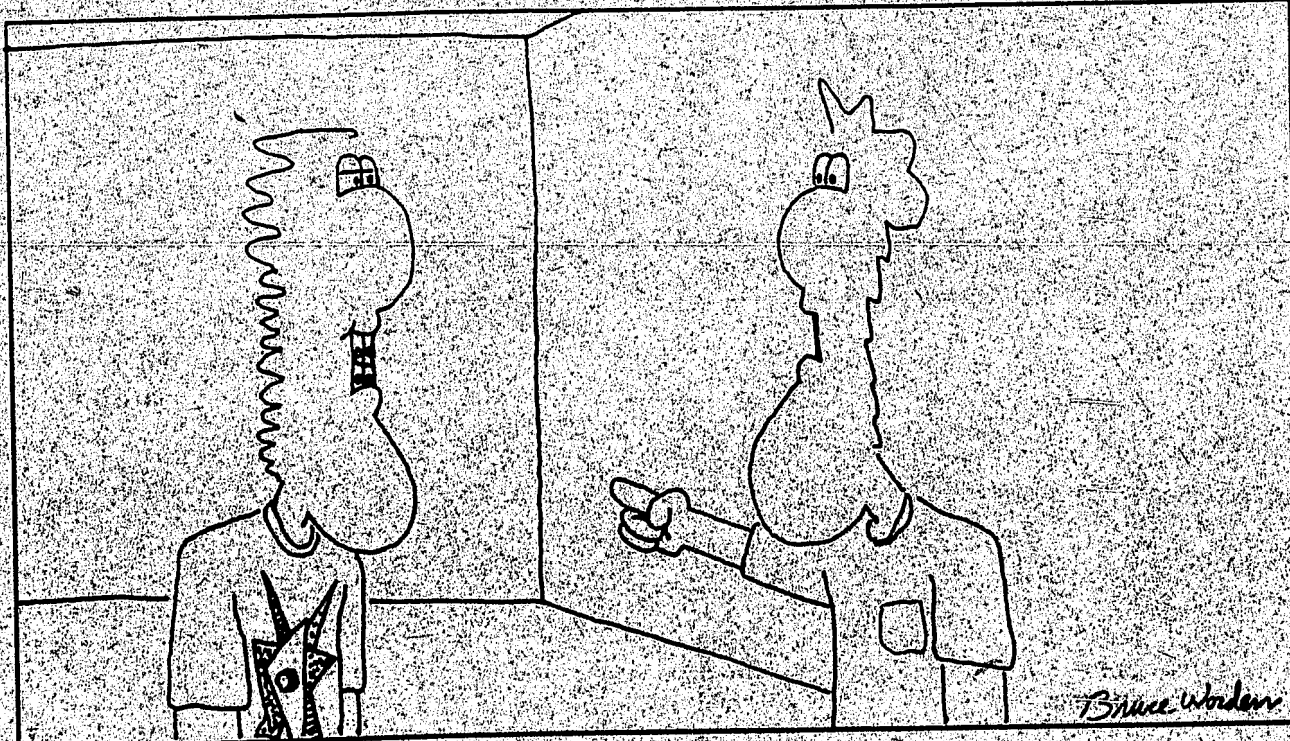

"Or maby becaus of the littel cafay I like. Or maby I like the good memoreys. But any way you put it it is the best place in the world."

Calling for postcards

Phil Marcus Esser, erstwhile Detroit singer-director-producer now moved north, wants to borrow your old postcards, circa early 1900s. He'll show them on a screen while performing in a musical review, "Postcards," at the City Opera House in Traverse City through Aug. 24. Mail to City Opera House, 112 1/2 East Front St., Traverse City 49684.

Esser is also producing an opera for children, plus two shows, including a Cole Porter retrospective, at the nearby Grand Traverse Resort. You could deliver the postcards in person and get good memoreys up north without having to worry about a tree falling on you.

Woman injured in hit-and-run mishap

A 22-year-old Clarkston area woman was injured in a hit-and-run accident June 29 in White Lake Township.

Michele Crites, a 1987 graduate of Clarkston High School, was hit on the way to her car on southbound Elizabeth Lake Road near Pardike, White Lake Township, about 10:30 p.m.

She had just attended a coming-home party for a friend who had served in the Persian Gulf War, when she was struck by an unidentified driver. Crites was rushed to St. Joseph's Mercy Hospital in Pontiac with back injuries, a fractured ankle and third-degree burns on her leg from the car's catalytic converter.

She was released from the hospital July 4.

Crites, a mother of one, was unable to identify the driver of vehicle because it was dark. White Lake Police are still investigating the case.

Driver in crash found guilty of manslaughter

A 22-year-old Clarkston area man could be spending the next 15 years in prison for the death of a friend last March.

On July 3, a jury found James A. Wilson, 22, guilty of causing an automobile accident that killed his passenger, James J. Turner, 20, in Pontiac.

Turner was also from the Clarkston area. The accident occurred on Baldwin Avenue and New York Street, Pontiac, March 27.

According to Oakland County Assistant Prosecutor Robert Hedges, the men were on their way home from the Dixie Bar in Waterford Township when the accident occurred.

Hedges said Wilson's truck ran through a stop light on Baldwin and struck another truck broadside. Besides killing Turner, the driver of the other truck was also severely injured in the crash.

Neither Wilson nor Turner were wearing their seat belts at the time of the accident.

Wilson's blood alcohol content was found to be above the legal blood-alcohol limit of .10 after the accident. Hedges said Wilson registered a .16 about 50 minutes after the crash.

A manslaughter conviction carries a minimum penalty of probation and a maximum punishment of 15 years imprisonment. Wilson is presently free on bond.

He is to be sentenced before Oakland County Circuit Court Judge Steven N. Andrews July 30.

Park open to visitors

Mosher resigns from commission

BY CURT MCALLISTER
Clarkston News Associate Editor

Seven months after accepting the seat, Harry Mosher has resigned from the Independence Township Planning Commission.

The 64-year-old Independence Township resident said he stepped down because of poor health.

He'd been a member of the planning commission since January, when he replaced retiring commissioner Jo Fussman. Prior to being named to the commission, Mosher had been a member of the wetlands board for nearly three years.

In his short span with the commission, he missed about half the regular meetings because of health-related complications.

Mosher, a retired civil engineer and land surveyor, credited his former colleagues on the planning commission for steering the township in the right direction in terms of growth.

"They're a very good commission," he added.

With Mosher gone, the planning commission will be forced to run meetings with six members. A replacement must be recommended to the township board by Supervisor Frank Ronk. Ronk is uncertain when someone will be chosen to fill Mosher's vacancy.

The supervisor said Mosher will be sorely missed.

"He served well on the planning commission and the wetlands board. It's a great loss for the township, because of his past involvement," Ronk said.

BURGER King made a whopper of a comeback in a July 11 Pony League game against Pizza Magic at the Clarkston High School field. Burger King trailed 5-0 going into the last inning but then scored five runs to tie. It then scored in extra-innings for a 6-5 victory. Pictured clockwise from above are Burger King's winning pitcher Eric Carlson, action around second base during Burger King's 5-run seventh-inning and Burger King's Kevin Covert with a head-first slide in what proved to be the winning run as Pizza Magic catcher Darren Adams awaits the late throw. The Gator

James
Gibowski

Gates Brown was responsible for the best time I've ever had at Tiger Stadium. On Aug. 11, 1968, I watched the Gator dramatically win both games of a doubleheader against Boston.

Last week, nearly 23 years after the event some have labeled as "The Gates Brown Doubleheader," I got the chance to talk with Brown at Independence Oaks County Park.

Brown, his 1968 World Series teammate catcher Jim Price and pitcher Dave Rozema of the 1984 World Champions were at Independence Oaks giving a baseball clinic to youngsters. The hour clinic, which will next take place 6 p.m. July 30 at Waterford Oaks County Park, is co-sponsored by the Detroit Tigers Alumni Association.

Brown, who still holds the American League record for pinch hits with 108, still clearly remembers what happened Aug. 11, 1968.

"Some games you can't forget," said the former outfielder. "Outside of my first time up (in the majors), that was my finest moment."

Boston pitchers dreaded the left-handed hitting Tiger. Not only was the Gates Brown Doubleheader against the Red Sox, but his first major league at bat (June 19, 1963), a pinch-hit home run, was also off Boston pitching.

I went to what was to become the Gates Brown Doubleheader with one of my best friends, Mark Mikolajczak, and his dad, Clarence. We didn't have tickets so we bought three reserved seats when we got there.

Nearly 50,000 people crammed the stadium that day. We ended up sitting in the last row of the upperdeck in leftfield (after the first game, we found some "new seats" in the upperdeck between first and home).

The Tigers came from behind in both games.

The Red Sox, who had won the American League pennant the year before, jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first inning of the opener. But with homers from Bill Freehan and Wayne Comer, the Tigers eventually tied the game, sending it to extra innings.

The game remained tied at 4-4 until the bottom of the 14th. With two outs, Brown pinched hit and stroked a game-winning home run off Lee Stange into the upperdeck in rightfield.

"I was so happy, I was clapping to myself. I don't even know if I touched homeplate," recalls Brown.

And Brown would have even more heroics a few hours later.

The second game started out as a pitchers' dual, with goose eggs for both teams in the first six innings.

Boston broke the scoreless tie with two in the seventh, but the Tigers tied it with two in the bottom of the eighth.

The Red Sox then went ahead 5-2 by scoring three times in the top of the ninth. Being down by three runs going into the last inning, coupled with the long 14-inning first game, sent about half of the 49,087 people home as the summer sun began to set.

I will forever be grateful to our driver, Clarence Mikolajczak, for not leaving early. Whether he believed the "game wasn't over 'til it's over" or his son Mark and I reminded him of that, I can't recall. But I do remember that Dennis Miller, my phys. ed. teacher from Bay City All Saints who we earlier had seen sitting a few sections away from us, had left.

And I do easily recall those never-to-be-forgotten images of the Tigers coming back from a 3-run deficit in the last inning. (I also remember how a Don Wert foul ball that inning dropped not more than two inches beyond my grasp, but that's another story).

There were a series of seeing-eye singles in that ninth, slipping past frustrated Boston infielders. In fact, I think all of the hits were singles, and the Tigers had tied the game at 5-5 with still only one out.

At that point, the Gator, who had started the second game, entered the batter's box. The crowd that remained remembered how he had won the first game and were clapping for more.

Brown responded by again driving in the winning run off Sparky Lyle, this time with a single.

GATES Brown signed autographs last week after the baseball clinic at Independence Oaks.

The crowd went crazy for the Gator and the Tigers' 4-run ninth.

"There was electricity," recalls Brown.

I remember that crowd noise as being something I have only experienced twice in my life (the other time was at a pep assembly after our high school basketball team had lost in the quarterfinals our first year as a school...but that's still another story).

It's hard to describe that noise after Brown's second game-winning hit. It's not the loudest I had ever heard a crowd (after all, about half of the people had left), but it was the most emotional. It was kind of eerie and spiritual at the same time.

I've attended more than a hundred major league games after that, but I've never experienced quite that feeling again.

So what does Brown do now, now that he is no longer killing the Red Sox?

After his playing days were over, Brown became the Tigers' batting coach and he held that position during the Tigers' 1984 World Championship season.

But before the next year started, Brown and Tiger management had a squabble over money. Brown felt that the players were making millions and the Tigers were getting upset over his request in the thousands.

So the Tigers in 1985 hired the current batting coach, Vada Pinson.

Brown was bitter, especially since he had been a part of the Tiger organization for over 20 years. Brown wasn't the only person from that 1984 World Series team to leave with that feeling. Later, Kirk Gibson, Lance Parrish and Jack Morris would follow.

Now Brown is president of Ben G. Industries, Inc. in Mt. Clemens. The company manufactures plastic injection moldings for auto companies.

While Brown remains bitter about the way he was replaced as hitting coach, he has nothing but good memories about the Tiger fans.

"The people were good to me. I rarely heard boos. The fans were always there for me," said Brown, adding, "They don't know how much they helped me."

The Gator was good to the fans, too, especially on Aug. 11, 1968.

After nearly 23 years, I'm glad I had the chance to thank him for all that electricity.

Purpose of Embalming

Embalming is only required by law in cases where the deceased had one of a few specific contagious diseases or if the body is to be transported a great distance. However, embalming is almost always routinely done as soon as possible after the death. There are various reasons for this. The primary purpose of embalming is to preserve the body for the week or so of the visitation and funeral. If the family wishes to have the body present at the funeral, embalming would be necessary. At the same time, restoration procedures would be followed. This involves shaping and cosmetology work to make the deceased appear as life-like as possible. Unless you specifically request that it not be done, the funeral director will probably assume the family wants the body to be embalmed. If no embalming were performed, you see, the body would have to be immediately disposed of either by cremation or burial.

Psychologist helps athletes find essence of sport

BY JAMES GIBOWSKI
Clarkston News Staff Writer

There is more to sports than just speed, strength, experience, stamina or talent.

Don't forget about the mental edge.

"We all know the mind and body are hooked up," said Ron August, a part-time sports psychologist at the

"When someone doesn't capture the essence of the sport, the feel of the bat on the ball, the spikes in the dirt, it's hard to love the sport."

Ron August

Consortium for Human Development, Inc., on Sashabaw Road, Independence Township.

August's full-time job is being a school psychologist for the Waterford School District, which he has done for the past 16 years.

But about five years ago, his love for sports sparked the beginning of his part-time position in sports psychology. At first he worked two years with some of physician Daniel Bielak's patients, who were recovering from athletic injuries. The last three years he has been at the Consortium.

August said some of his patients refer themselves. But when it comes to most of the younger athletes, he said, "you don't want to fool around with athletes unless the coach asks you to."

August said about 55 percent of his patients are athletes "dealing with injuries." He said some Clarkston High School athletes are among those he has treated.

Many of the injured athletes he sees have bouts of depression.

"So much of their self-concept is as an athlete," said August. Because these athletes are often anxious to get back into competition, August said he tries to help his patients avoid returning too soon, which could make an injury even worse.

Most of his remaining patients comprise athletes lacking motivation, athletes interested in enhancing their performances or coaches who are having problems with their teams.

August said when athletes say "I want to get better" at their particular sport, his goal is also to make them better in non-sports situations.

"There are a lot of carry-over skills," said August. "I hope they walk away with additional skills."

August said most of those athletes he sees for performance enhancement are at a "more advanced level of competition."

Since track and field is one of August's favorite sports (he won a silver medal in the triple jump at the 1984 national Masters track meet in Oregon), many of those more advanced athletes have been Olympic-caliber track athletes.

While August treats many patients who are hoping to improve their skills for immediate competition, he hopes to help all of his patients realize that athletics should go beyond high school football or college basketball.

August said the athlete should ask him or herself,

"Maybe a person once loved swimming. Then swim instead of doing aerobics."

Ron August

Dentistry in the future

American can look forward to a more cavity-free society, thanks to scientific advances.

Princeton Dental Resource Center was established to report scientific breakthroughs and to forecast how research will affect the practice of dentistry. Some predictions about dentistry in the year 2000 include:

■ Three-dimensional X-rays — for a more accurate reading of trouble spots in the mouth.

■ Electric braces — a small battery installed on the frames of the braces will move teeth twice as fast as conventional methods.

■ Time-release fluoride device — these devices are bonded to the teeth and may last up to six months.

■ An anti-cavity vaccine — part of a regular dental check-up might include receiving a vaccine that will prevent cavities.

■ Lasers — will be used to smooth the areas on the tooth's surface where food gets trapped.

"How will my involvement in athletics affect my adult life?"

Too many times, said August, an athlete will compete at the high school level but then forsake the sport after graduation.

And then when the person gets into his 30s or 40s, he often doesn't continue the sport he loved as a child, but takes up jogging or aerobics, something that he hopes will get him quickly back into shape.

"Some see exercise or athletics as a job," warns August. "They say, 'From 9-10, I've got to do aerobics.'"

He said that type of attitude probably causes more stress than healthy exercise, pointing out he has seen far too many runners with shinsplints.

August said it is important to think about the sports one loved as a child.

"Maybe a person once loved swimming. Then swim instead of doing aerobics," said August.

Another concern of August's is "a lack of spontaneity," especially in young athletes. He said some sports have become over-organized and have "squeezed out the spontaneity."

Young athletes almost always now only play under adult supervision and seldom play pick-up games with each other. He said it is important for children to have some time together without being under the constraints of adults.

RON AUGUST combines his vocation as a psychologist with his avocation of sports to help athletes achieve their goals and maintain their love of a sport.

"The time they seem to only play is spent during practice and games," August said.

August also said sometimes youth programs "weed kids out too early."

"If our goal is not participation, then we are headed in the wrong direction," he said.

August said competition means different things to different athletes. It may mean being on a first-place team, having the best individual scoring average in the league or breaking a personal record in the mile while coming in fourth.

While competition is important, the love of the sport is probably even more crucial when it comes to the desire to participate in that sport year after year.

August thinks of this love as feeling the "essence" of the sport.

"When someone doesn't capture the essence of the sport, the feel of the bat on the ball, the spikes in the dirt, it's hard to love the sport," said August.

If you're out of that essence, the doctor is in.

Mosquitoes: Fascinating, annoying, dangerous

With summer here, thoughts often turn to the beach, cookouts, fishing and other outdoor activities.

Unfortunately, sometimes the best laid plans can be ruined by mosquitoes, and the mosquitoes of 1991 are as abundant as ever, according to the Michigan Mosquito Control Association of Bay City.

Although the insects are pests and sometimes transmit diseases, they are also fascinating creatures.

Mosquitoes are like butterflies in that they have four stages to their life cycle: egg, larvae, pupae and adult. In fact, some of you might recall spending many summer days as a child splashing around the local ditch or swamp looking for frogs, turtles, dragonflies and maybe even mosquito wrigglers (larvae) and tumblers (pupae). People who continue this kind of behavior as adults are sometimes called entomologists.

Michigan has more than 50 species of mosquitoes with many of them accomplishing truly incredible feats. For example, the Marsh Mosquito (Coquillettidia perturbans) actually spends 10-11 months as a larvae underwater attached to the root hairs of plants such as cattails. They get their oxygen through the plant and live the winter months under the ice.

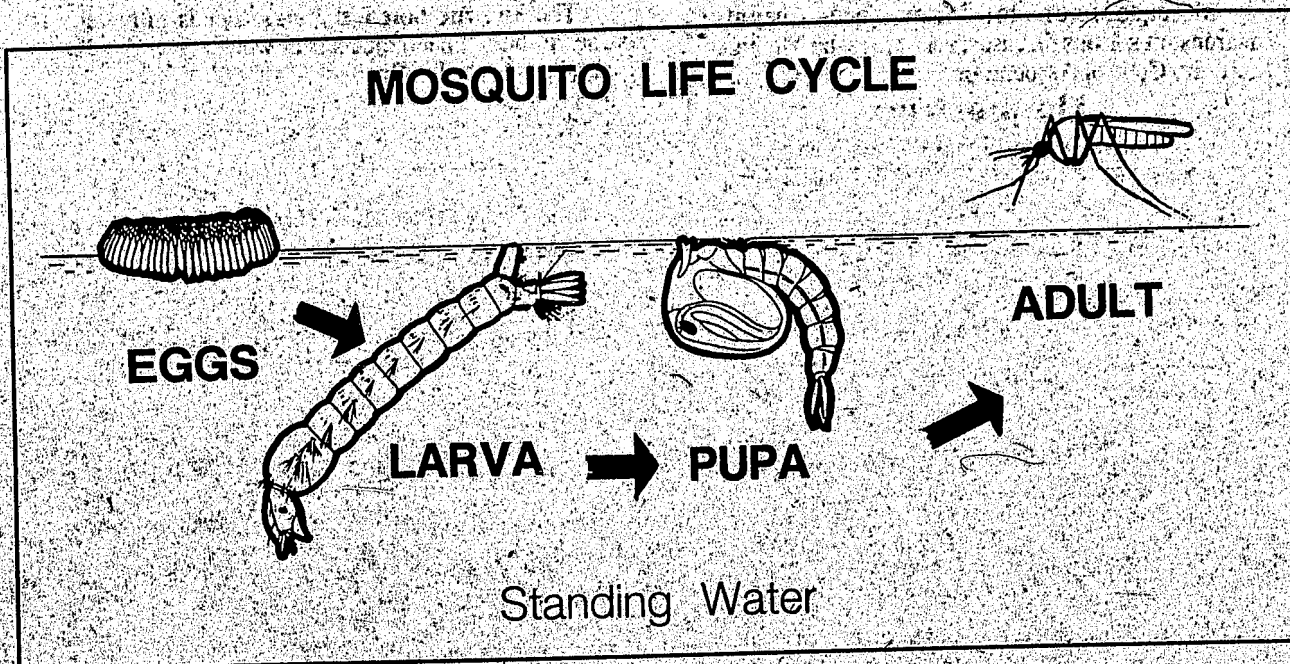

The Marsh Mosquito annually hatches around the end of June in time to join humans for the Fourth of July celebrations.

The Marsh Mosquito is unique in its ability to overwinter beneath the ice. Mosquitoes from the genus

Only female mosquitoes bite, as they need the protein in the blood for egg development.

Culex and Anopheles overwinter as adults by hiding in hollow trees, barns, crawl spaces and any place else that affords them protection. These are the mosquitoes that harass us during a seasonally warm March day.

Other mosquitoes such as the genus Aedes lay eggs that are so durable that they can survive on the ground through the winter (or many winters) and then hatch during the spring and summer when flooded by melting snow or heavy rains.

Some mosquitoes benefit humans. Larvae of mosquitoes in the genus Toxorhynchites are predaceous, even feeding on other mosquitoes. Unfortunately, these are not found in Michigan.

Only female mosquitoes bite, as they need the protein in the blood for egg development.

Some fly amazingly far to meet this need. The Floodwater Mosquito (Aedes vexans) will migrate long distances from their breeding places, 5-10 miles being rather common.

Brackish water and run-off from brine wells often breed the Salt-Marsh Mosquito (Aedes sollicitans), which is known to travel over 40 miles just to get a blood meal. To avoid mosquito annoyance, use repellents and wear light colored clothes, as mosquitoes are more attracted to dark areas.

Not all mosquito species attack humans. Some prefer birds, while others feed only on cold-blooded animals, such as snakes and frogs. Some mosquitoes may acquire sufficient protein as larvae to enable them to eschew blood-feeding.

When you go mosquito hunting, don't forget to check items that hold small amounts of water such as tires, tree holes and cans. These small habitats can develop hundreds of mosquitoes every 10-14 days. It's also helpful not to cast a shadow over the stagnant water as this will alarm the larvae and cause them to dive to the bottom of the habitat.

Controlling a group of insects which are so adaptable, cunning, clever and ingenious is difficult, not only for the homeowner but also for trained professionals.

In an effort to share information on mosquito biology and control, the Michigan Mosquito Control Association was founded in 1986. This association conducts a yearly conference, publishes a quarterly newsletter, has a reference library and an assortment of video tapes concerning mosquitoes. For more information, write MMCA, P.O. Box 366, Bay City, MI 48707, or call (517) 755-5752.

Protect from mosquito bites

The Michigan Mosquito Control Association offers these tips to protect from mosquito bites:

- Avoid places and times when mosquitoes bite.
- Wear protective clothing. Tightly woven materials that cover arms and legs provides some protection from mosquito bites. Keep trouser legs tucked into boots or socks and collars buttoned.
- Have good screening. Make sure door and window screens fit tight and all holes are repaired.
- Use mosquito netting when sleeping outdoors or in an unscreened structure and to protect small babies any time.
- Use mosquito repellents. Apply repellents to exposed skin: hands, arms, legs, neck, face and to clothing that fits tight to the skin.
- Use insecticides. Insecticidal fogs or mists are good only for a short duration in the immediate area of application. Mosquitoes will return when the effect of the spray has ended.

Mosquito light electrocutors "zappers" do little to reduce biting mosquitoes in an area, according to the Michigan Mosquito Control Association.

Reduce mosquito population; empty water

Mosquito larva or "wrigglers" must live in water that stands five or more days to complete their growth and change into adult biting mosquitoes capable of transmitting disease. The number of mosquitoes in an area can be much reduced by removing standing water.

■ Get rid of old tires, tin cans, buckets, drums, bottles or any water-holding containers.

■ Fill in or drain any low places (puddles, ruts, etc.) in yard.

■ Keep drains, ditches and culverts clean of weeds and trash so water will drain properly.

■ Keep eaves troughs clean of leaves and other debris.

■ Cover trash containers to keep out rain water.

■ Repair leaky pipes and outside faucets.

■ Empty plastic wading pools at least once a week and store them indoors when not in use.

■ With sand or concrete, fill in tree rot holes and hollow stumps that hold water.

■ Change the water in bird baths and plant pots or drip trays at least once each week.

■ Store boats and canoes covered upside down or remove rain water weekly.

■ Keep grass cut short and shrubbery well trimmed around the house so adult mosquitoes will not hide there.

Only a constant, systematic program to control mosquitoes will reduce the numbers, the nuisance and the danger of disease.

Mosquitoes may carry serious diseases

Mosquitoes are more than a nuisance—they also can transmit serious diseases, according to the Michigan Mosquito Control Association.

The problem

When humans are bitten by mosquitoes, it is painful and causes itching, which—with the accompanying scratching—may cause infected sores.

However, mosquitoes also may transmit serious and sometimes fatal diseases.

Diseases

Encephalitis, commonly known as "sleeping sickness," is an inflammation of the brain. The symptoms of encephalitis can range from mild to severe.

Severe symptoms include acute headaches, high fever and mental disturbances, such as confusion, irritability, tremors, stupor and coma. Severe cases sometimes end in death, or survivors may suffer permanent loss of limb function and/or mental retardation.

At least four types of encephalitis cause human disease in Michigan: Lacrosse, Jamestown Canyon, St. Louis and Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE).

The first two are types of a group called California encephalitis and produce milder symptoms than the other two, which sometimes cause death.

Mosquitoes can also infect dogs with heartworm. The worms live in the heart and can severely weaken or kill the dog. Veterinarians can prescribe medication to prevent heartworm in dogs.

Horses can be vaccinated to prevent EEE, which is usually fatal to horses.

How to keep your cool in hot weather

The kids are bored, the grass needs mowing, the barbecue hasn't been cleaned in weeks, and it's 90 degrees in the shade. Brace yourself for warm weather stress.

With dual-income families becoming more prevalent, families more often rely on weekends to provide relaxation.

However, nearly 90 percent of 1,000 survey respondents reported returning to work Monday morning just as tired as when they left the previous Friday, according to a national survey recently commissioned by Hilton Hotels Corp.

On average, Americans spend 14 hours each weekend on chores such as cleaning, cooking, laundry and making household repairs—instead of relaxing.

A few tips can help make weekends more enjoyable and less stressful.

■ Don't save all the mowing, gardening or laundry for the weekend. Conquer chores one at a time and do some during the week, so your weekends will be more relaxing.

■ Plan occasional getaways. Warm weather months are the best time of year to enjoy the outdoors, and the more you enjoy yourself, the more relaxed you'll be.

■ Extend weekend getaways by starting on Thursday or ending on Tuesday and avoiding the crowds.

■ Pamper yourself. Even if you can't get away, plan time to relax by enjoying your favorite activities: go to the beach, play golf or lounge in the sun.

■ Spend time with family and friends. By removing yourself from your daily routine, you'll be happier for it, and the time you spend with your family will encourage bonding.

■ Don't forget romance. Rekindle the flame. Surprise your spouse with an evening of dinner and dancing or a romantic stroll on the beach or in the park.

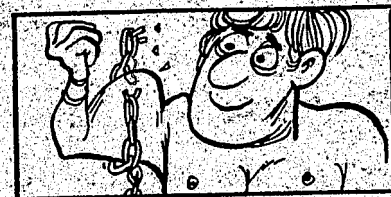

■ Eat well. If your schedule won't permit much more than fast or frozen foods during the work week, plan some healthy meals on the weekends.

■ Exercise. Take advantage of warm weather and sports. Swim, jog, walk, ride your bike.

■ Challenge your mind. Mental fitness is as important as physical fitness. Dig in and attempt a difficult crossword puzzle, or choose a subject that interests you and become an expert.

Dogs at risk, too

Passive smoking kills dogs, too, according to SelectCare Health. Dogs whose owners smoke are at a 50 percent greater risk of developing lung cancer than those whose owners do not smoke.

Houdini was as much an athlete as a magician. He accomplished many of his feats by superb muscle control.

Can cancer be treated with nutrition therapy?

I hear that lung cancers can now be treated with lasers. Can lasers cure people who couldn't be helped in the past?

There are multiple uses for lasers in lung cancer treatment. The role of the laser in relieving symptoms of lung cancer is well established.

The effects of laser light in combination with light-activated chemicals is also being studied in attempts to cure cancers on the surface of the lung.

When lung tumors invade the windpipe and lead to uncontrollable coughing, bleeding, shortness of breath and lung collapse, the laser can be used to destroy or "vaporize" the part of the tumor invading the airway, or to stop bleeding.

But since any part of the tumor located outside the windpipe cannot be reached with the laser, cure is unlikely.

Research is under way at several U.S. institutions, including our own, to cure surface or early-stage lung cancers using light-sensitive chemicals.

These "photochemicals" are injected intravenously and are then picked up in concentrated amounts by the tumor.

A dye laser's beam then is directed at the area to start a chemical reaction, so that the chemical-laden tumor is destroyed and normal lung tissue is spared.

Early results from this form of lung cancer treatment are encouraging. To find out if you are a candidate, call your local cancer information service or the National Cancer Institute information line at 1-800-4-Cancer.

I've read that cure rates improve and treatments are more effective when cancer is detected early. Could you please print the list of Cancer Warning Signals?

Remember that experiencing one of these symptoms does not mean that you have cancer. Many times, these symptoms are caused by something other than cancer.

Cancer Answers

Cleveland Clinic Foundation Cancer Center

However, the only way to find out for sure is to see a physician.

If you have any of these symptoms, see a doctor, immediately:

- A change in bowel or bladder habits
- A sore that does not heal
- Unusual bleeding or discharge
- A thickening or lump in the breast or elsewhere
- Indigestion or difficulty in swallowing
- An obvious change in a wart or mole
- A nagging cough or hoarseness

For early detection of cancer in individuals without symptoms, the American Cancer Society has also suggested guidelines for cancer-related checkups.

If you are interested in these, send for the free brochure, "Cancer-related Checkups," The Cleveland Clinic Foundation, One Clinic Center, 9500 Euclid Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, 44195-5123.

I've read about a special diet that is used to treat cancer. What can you tell me about treating cancer with nutrition therapy?

Although good nutrition is important for preventing certain cancers and for maintaining strength during established cancer treatments, there is no diet that has been scientifically proven to cure cancer.

Advocates of the macrobiotic diet, laetrile (an agent derived from apricot pits) and other unproven, unscientific dietary treatments claim that these effectively kill cancer cells without affecting normal cells and causing side effects.

But it is doubtful that any treatment that claims not to affect normal cells will affect cancer cells either.

Cancer researchers have not yet found a way to target established treatments only to cancer cells.

If patients delay receiving established treatments to try unproven dietary methods, their cancer may progress beyond its early stages and be more difficult to cure.

Another word of caution: regimens such as the microbiotic diet lack enough protein, calories and vitamins to provide balanced nutrition.

And laetrile can actually be harmful, since it contains cyanide that is released inside the body.

If you would like more information, write for the free booklets, "Diet, Nutrition & Cancer Prevention: The Good News" and "Eating Hints: Better Nutrition During Cancer Treatment."

Questions may be directed to: Cancer Answers, Cleveland Clinic Cancer Center, One Clinic Center, 9500 Euclid Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, 44195.

All questions will be answered by mail.

Tips for safe grilling

■ Marinate foods only in the refrigerator. Reserve a portion of the marinade before raw meat is packed in it for use later in basting or as a dip for cooked food.

■ To avoid flareups and charred food, remove visible fat from meat.

Don't partially cook unless food will go immediately into the grill.

■ If cooking ahead, cook completely, then cool down real fast for reheating later.

■ Cook meat and fish thoroughly to 160 degrees. For taste, cook poultry to 180 degrees. Flesh shouldn't be pink, and juices should run clear.

■ Serve food from the grill on a clean platter, not one that has raw, possibly contaminated juices on it.

Swimmer's itch a prickly problem

People who swim in lakes may want to take a few precautions to prevent "swimmer's itch."

Swimmer's itch is an allergic skin reaction that occurs to lake swimmers in early summer, according to the Oakland County Health Division.

The itch is caused by small parasites (cercariae) that burrow into a swimmer's skin. These cercariae enter through the skin pores and die almost immediately as people are not suitable hosts. The parasites are looking for a bird or non-human mammal. Usually, warming of the water will trigger the release of the parasites from certain snails.

Swimmer's itch is usually more of a problem in early summer. However, the parasites can be released at different times throughout the summer.

Not all people are allergic to these parasites. Only 30 percent to 40 percent of the exposed swimmers are sensitive to them.

■ To reduce exposure, avoid swimming in areas with large bird populations.

■ Where swimmer's itch has been a problem, avoid swimming if the wind is blowing toward shore or in stagnant bays.

■ Towel off immediately after leaving the water as time is needed for the parasite to burrow into the skin.

■ Avoid swimming for long periods of time along the shoreline in water less than three feet deep.

"We stand out in the crowd."

Moderation is key when grilling food outdoors

Barbecue use is on the rise in most parts of the country, so outdoor cooks should learn safe food handling practices, especially in warm weather when foodborne illness rates increase anyhow.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture offers the following guidelines for a safe outdoor meal, whether it's marinated shishkabobs or your favorite grilled franks.

Get ready

■ Transporting: When transporting food, either from the grocery store or to a picnic site, keep it cold to minimize bacterial growth. Pack meat, poultry, salads and other perishables in an insulated cooler with an ice source.

Keep the cooler in the shade and avoid opening the lid too often. In fact, if you're taking a lot of beverages for a large crowd, pack beverages in one cooler and perishables in another.

■ Marinating: Marinate meats in a glass dish in the refrigerator, not on the counter. Reserve a portion for a dip or basting sauce that hasn't had raw meat in it. Don't re-use the marinade used on raw meat unless it's been boiled.

■ Precooking: When cooking ahead, be certain to cook the food completely in the microwave oven. This ensures that bacteria in the raw food are destroyed. Reheating later on the grill can provide a barbecued flavor.

Partially cooking meat or poultry in the microwave or oven, or parboiling to reduce grilling time is safe only if the food then goes immediately onto the grill.

Get set

■ Heating the grill: For safety and quality, the coals should be very hot before cooking food. It can take 30 minutes or longer before the coals are ready. They should show a light coating of ash for optimal heat.

■ Carrying out the food: Wash forks, brushes and plates that come in contact with raw products before using them to handle cooked food.

Keep vegetables or fruits intended for grilling separate from the raw meats. Someone may come along and eat some of those luscious-looking raw items. You wouldn't want them to be contaminated with juices from the raw meats or fish.

Be sure to take a fresh plate out to the grill to hold the cooked food. Bacteria that may be in the juices of raw products could spread to the cooked food if it is placed on the plate that held the raw products.

Take outside only the quantity of food that you will cook and eat. Foods should not sit at outside temperature over two hours. When it's over 85 degrees, the time limit is one hour or less.

Grill

■ Cook well: Cook everything thoroughly. Rare or Does grilling pose a cancer risk?

Some studies have suggested there may be a cancer risk related to grilling muscle meats such as fish, meat, poultry, game and so forth.

As with many things, "moderation" is the watchword. Based on present research findings, eating moderate amounts of grilled foods cooked to a safe, yet medium temperature does not pose a problem for barbecue lovers, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

But if you are concerned, you can further lower the risk with these tips from the American Institute of Cancer Research:

■ If you grill more than several times a week, consider precooking (microwaving or parboiling) the meat so it is not on the grill very long.

■ Raise the level of the grill so food is farther from the heat.

■ Remove visible fat to avoid flare-ups.

■ Cook meat until it's done and avoid consuming charred meat.

■ Clean the grill after each use.

medium rare meat or poultry can harbor harmful bacteria. Fish should always be fully cooked. For optimal safety, meat should reach 160 degrees on a meat thermometer, and poultry should reach 180 degrees for doneness.

Since grilled food often browns very fast on the outside, make a "sample cut" to visually check for doneness. The juices should run clear and flesh should not be pink. Be careful also not to overcook, and don't consume charred food.

■ Smoking: Smoking is a grilling technique used to add flavor to large cuts of meat, using a slower cooking method. Depending on the size of the product you're smoking, the process can take up to eight hours.

Use high quality charcoal to build a hot fire. Pile about 50 briquets in the center, and when they are covered with gray ash, push them into two piles. Center a pan of water between the two piles.

Chips, such as mesquite or hickory, are used for additional flavor. Using dry chips at the start creates a fast smoke; wet them later for sustained heat.

Center the food over the water pan and close the lid. Keep the grill vents open.

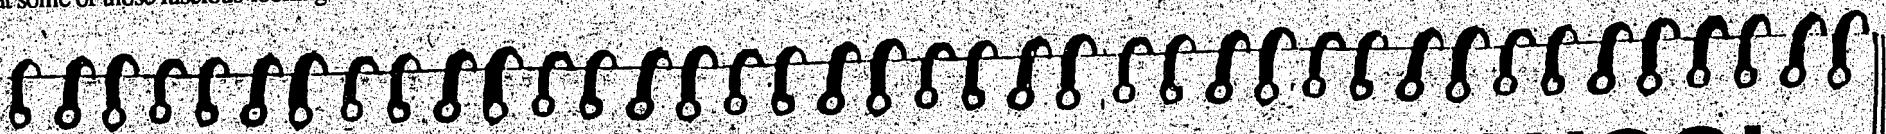

The temperature in the smoker should be maintained between 250 degrees and 300 degrees for safety. Add about nine coals every one to two hours during the smoking process.

Smoking times vary considerably with the outside temperatures, so monitor the smoker temperature carefully in colder weather.

At the finish

■ Serving the food: Serve immediately to keep hot foods hot. During the serving, perishable foods should not be off refrigeration over two hours. If the temperature is 85 degrees or above, try to keep serving time under one hour.

■ Cleaning up: Clean the grill. Refrigerate any leftovers promptly, dividing larger quantities into small, shallow containers. If you are returning home from an outing, you can save leftovers kept in a cooler that still has an adequate cold source so long as they didn't sit out at a high seats over the time limits.

Prevention a must

Lyme disease-carrying ticks can be dangerous

BY DENNIS V. CARTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

It's only the size of a pinhead, but it can be very dangerous.

A deer tick, which is a carrier of Lyme disease, has been appearing throughout the United States. In 1988, new cases were reported in Michigan at a rate of 0.1 to 1 for every 100,000 people, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

In 1990, there were 10 reported cases in Oakland County, according to Joel Blostein, epidemiologist with the Oakland County Health Division.

Lyme disease first recognized in 1975

Lyme disease was first recognized in the United States in 1975 in children from Lyme, Conn.; however, the bacterium that causes Lyme disease was not identified until 1982.

Since then, Lyme disease has been reported with increasing frequency. The majority of cases occur along the East Coast from Delaware to Massachusetts, Wisconsin and Minnesota, and California. However, cases have been reported from 43 states including Michigan.

In Michigan, the first official reported human case of Lyme disease was in 1985. From 1985, eight cases were reported, all from the western Upper Peninsula.

Beginning in 1988, cases were also reported from 17 counties in mid and lower Michigan, including Oakland County.

More than 30 cases were identified during 1988, and since, the number of cases has increased.

"The picture is not crystal clear when it comes to Lyme disease," said Blostein. "Diagnosis is not easy. There are no clear-cut lab tests to tell for sure if the person has the disease. So it often goes undetected and unreported."

Usually early signs or symptoms of Lyme disease are spotted rather than patients actually seeing the tick or its bite.

In its early stages, Lyme disease may be a mild illness with symptoms similar to the flu. It can include a stiff neck, chills, fever, sore throat, headache, fatigue and joint pain.

But this flu-like illness occurs usually out of flu season, commonly happening between May and October when ticks bite.

Lyme disease is carried by the deer tick and spreads to humans through the bite. The disease is sometimes characterized by arthritis in larger joints as well as a rash.

Although Lyme disease is one of the few forms of arthritis that is curable when detected in early stages, the condition may be misdiagnosed since the symptoms appear to come and go at random.

According to Paul Baxendale, executive director of the Arthritis Foundation, Michigan Chapter, the disease — which has been spreading — does have a treatment which was discovered through research by the Arthritis Foundation.

"Scientists have discovered a bacteria as being the cause of the Lyme disease," said Baxendale. "And while it is curable with penicillin, symptoms can appear many years later if the disease goes untreated."

The tick Ixodes dammini is the most common carrier of Lyme disease in Wisconsin, Minnesota and eastern coastal states. Other species of ticks such as the dog tick or wood tick, the lone-star tick, the rabbit tick and biting insects such as mosquitoes, deer flies and horse flies have been shown to carry the Lyme disease bacteria. However, their ability to transmit the disease is not known at this time.

Studies are continuing in Michigan to determine the extent of the Ixodes tick population.

According to Blostein, the focus is on prevention. Following are some of his suggestions to avoid getting a tick bite:

■ Avoid tick infested areas such as shrubs, wooded areas or wood lands.

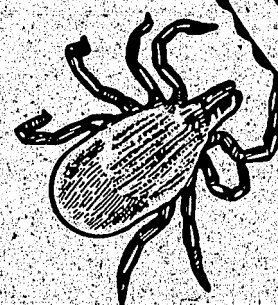

■ If you do go into these types of areas, use an insect repellent that contains DEET. Use the repellent only as directed on the label.

■ Wear light colored clothing. This will allow you to detect any ticks that may have gotten on your clothes.

■ Stick your pant legs into your socks to keep the ticks away from skin areas. It is also a good idea to put tape around the socks where the pant legs are tucked in.

■ When hiking, stay on the trails and as close to center as you can. These ticks usually cling to low leaves of shrubs.

■ After leaving an area that may contain ticks, shower and check your self for the ticks.

If you discover you have a tick on you, either contact a doctor to remove it, or, using tweezers, grasp the tick as close to the skin line as possible and use a gentle steady pressure to remove the tick. It is a good idea to take the tick to a doctor or the health department to have it checked for Lyme disease.

During the summer months, people want to get out, so if you are going to be in areas where ticks may be present, focus on prevention.

Foot facts

The human foot has 26 bones: seven tarsals, or ankle bones; five metatarsals, or instep bones; and 14 phalanges, or toe bones.

To get off on the right foot each day, podiatrists advise you to wear a shoe that's made for the activity in which you're participating — basketball shoes for basketball, tennis shoes for tennis, etc. Each shoe is designed to enhance performance and protect against injury in a specific way.

Women should avoid high heels and pointy-toed shoes as much as possible. High heels distribute weight unevenly on the foot and result in extra pressure on the front. This can cause bunions, ingrown toenails and cramps.

Protect skin from the sun this summer

Summer is time in the sun — gardening, picnicking, swimming or relaxing on the patio.

But to make summer sun time safe, the American Institute for Cancer Research and many other health organizations are urging common sense when it comes to enjoying summer sun activities. And what that really means is limiting your exposure to dangerous ultraviolet (UV) radiation.

UV radiation from the sun is the cause of a national epidemic of skin cancer — an estimated half million cases this year, and an estimated 7,800 deaths annually.

The Skin Cancer Foundation reports that the risk of a white child developing skin cancer in his lifetime is 1 in 100, 15 times the risk a child faced just 40 years ago.

Risk of skin cancer doesn't mean you have to spend the summer indoors, but it does suggest some common-sense precautions:

■ For both children and adults, look for a sunscreen product with a sun protective factor (SPF) of at least 15, and use it regularly when out in the sun.

■ Avoid being out and unprotected in direct sunlight during the sun's most intense period, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Daylight Savings Time.

■ Wear clothing that shields your skin. Broad-brimmed hats and loose, light-weight clothing with long sleeves can be comfortable and protective.

■ Eat lots of yellow and green vegetables and fruit to get a good supply of beta-carotene, a form of vitamin A that has been linked to lower rates of skin cancer.

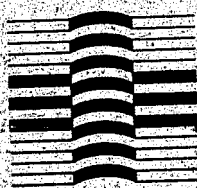

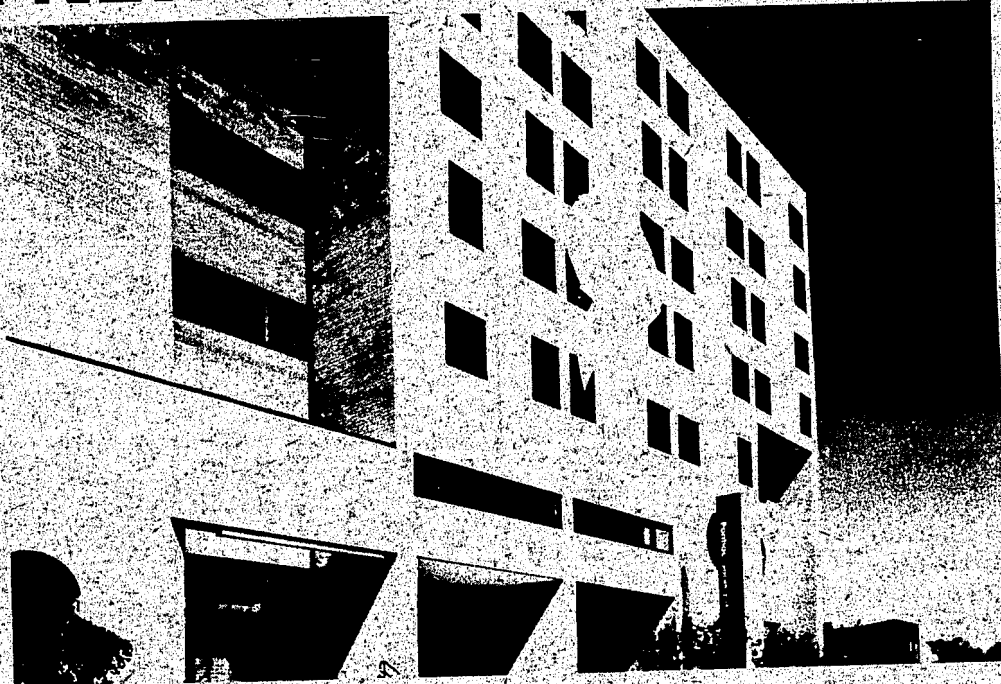

■ People with fair skin or freckles, blond or red hair, and blue, green or gray eyes tend to be at greater risk of developing skin cancer. However, a significant number of skin cancers are found among people with mid-tone and darker complexions.

For all, the best advice is to develop and use good sun sense.

The average person in the course of a lifetime walks a distance equivalent to almost three times around the equator.

Introducing A NEW NAME FOR CARING

North Oakland Medical Center Pontiac General Hospital Division

461 West Huron
Pontiac, Michigan 48341-1651
(313) 857-7200

Back in 1910, "caring" meant Pontiac residents raising $25,000 to build "Oakland County's First Hospital" in what was then a village of 5,000 people.

Five years later, caring meant the Oakland County Hospital Association donating the hospital to the thriving industrial center of Pontiac, and Oakland County Hospital became Pontiac City Hospital, which was changed to Pontiac General Hospital in 1931. Today, new communities all over Oakland County look to the same hospital for caring in the 1990's for services such as:

- Complete care for new mothers and babies, including family-centered birthing and northern Oakland County's leading intensive care unit for newborns.
- Satellite centers offering walk-in medical care and diagnostic services.
- Expanded programs in physical rehabilitation, county-wide psychiatric services and cardiac care.
- State-of-the-art laser and outpatient surgery.

With these new "caring" services and a patient base throughout Oakland County, our hospital has earned a new name.

It's a name...and a tradition of caring...of which we can all be proud. Come see for yourself as we celebrate at a special ceremony

Heart disease on the rise in smoking women

At the turn of the century, cigarette smoking was considered risqué for American women. By the 1950s, it was fashionable.

But today women are faced with the reality that what was once a "fashion statement" is now killing them.

Nearly 22 million American women still smoke. And the American Heart Association urges those women to consider some alarming facts:

■ Smoking is the greatest single preventable cause of death in the United States.

■ Heart attack is the No. 1 killer of American women.

■ For women, smoking is the most significant risk factor for heart attack.

The solution: If you smoke, quit.

Studies have shown that women who smoke are two to six times more likely to have a heart attack as non-smoking women. In fact, any smoker who has a heart attack is more likely than a non-smoker to die from it and is two to four times more likely to die suddenly.

In addition, women who both smoke and use oral contraceptives are in greater danger. Recent studies show that women smokers who use oral contraceptives are up to 30 times more likely to have a heart attack and up to 22 times more likely to have a stroke than women who neither smoke nor use birth control pills.

More studies are needed to understand the influence of birth control pills on heart attack and stroke risk. However, it may be because they tend to cause slight to moderate elevations in blood cholesterol and blood pressure.

Studies show that if a woman starts to smoke, she is less likely to quit than a man. However, if she stops smoking, no matter how long or how much she smoked, her risk of heart disease rapidly declines.

In short, the days of "fashionable" smoking are over. For more information on the dangers of smoking and how to quit, contact the American Heart Association at (313) 557-9500.

Creativity needs sleep

In addition to crankiness and fatigue, lack of sleep causes a decrease in creative thinking. Studies show that people who lost a night's sleep were less likely to come up with imaginative answers to problems than those who were well-rested, according to SelectCare Health Plan.

The left foot is just a little bit larger than the right foot on most people.

The skin is the largest organ of the body, accounting for about 16 percent of total weight.

How to reduce your cholesterol level

According to SelectCare Health Plan, the following steps are recommended to reduce cholesterol levels:

1. Exercise: Regular aerobic exercisers have a healthier ratio of high density lipoproteins (HDL) to low density lipoproteins (LDL) than do non-exercisers.
2. Relax: Tension appears to raise cholesterol levels, possibly by stimulating the release of the stored fat into the blood.
3. Don't smoke: Tobacco suppresses HDL levels. If you quit, your HDL number will rise.
4. Watch your medications: Birth-control pills and some blood pressure drugs may raise your cholesterol level.
5. Lose weight: Heavier people tend to have higher LDL levels. Losing pounds can reduce the number.
6. Eat wisely: The most important dietary strategy for combating high cholesterol is to lower the amount of fat you eat.

It takes the average person six-tenths of a second to walk one pace.

The hot days of July have become synonymous with hot air balloons in Springfield Township.

When the air warms up, area residents expect to see a sea of balloons fill the sky. This year is no exception, and residents are not likely to be disappointed.

An evening "balloon glow," balloon launches, games, pony rides, entertainment and more provide fun for all ages at this weekend's Sixth Annual Springfield Oaks Hot Air Balloon Festival.

Planned for 8 p.m. Friday and 11 a.m. to dark Saturday and Sunday, July 19, 20 and 21, the festival should be bigger and better than previous years, said organizer Helen Vergin, program director of Northwest Oakland Community Services.

New this year is a parachuting group that is sure to amaze onlookers, she said.

Those who are inspired by the festival sights may want to compete in the photo contest, said Vergin. Details are available at the festival.

Vergin said the Springfield Oaks balloon festival began with Springfield Township's sesquicentennial celebration and has grown from there.

It's a "wonderful" festival, she said.

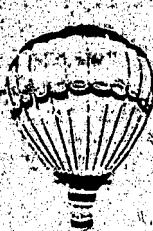

"There are so many people that are in love with balloons — they just love the color," she said. "I've been up. I don't know how to express it. ... It's just a wonderful, fun experience."

While it's interesting to watch the balloons launch

RAINBOW Rider, a bright, multi-colored hot air balloon, belongs to Dale Duthie. He participated in last year's Springfield Oaks Balloon Festival.

(planned for 7 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, weather permitting), it's also beautiful to see them tethered at night, said Vergin.

At 8 p.m. Friday, the gates open for the "Balloon Glow" — a fascinating sight of balloons that are inflated, tethered and ignited so that the balloons are illuminated. "It's gorgeous," said Vergin.

The entire weekend is a one-of-a-kind experience, she said.

"It's a family experience. There's no alcohol; you can relax, do what you want," she said, adding that 80 percent of the time the weather cooperates and the balloons do launch.

Sandi Hall of White Lake, another festival organizer, agreed with Vergin's assessment.

"There's something for everyone," she said. "It's a cheap way to entertain your family in the summer."

She added that the Friday night Balloon Glow is definitely worth seeing.

"It is awesome," she said.

More than 20 balloonists will be participating in the weekend festival, including a few out-of-state balloonists, she said, explaining that the festival does not help pilots qualify for year-end standings.

"It's just a weekend of fun," she said.

Parking is $2 a day or $5 for the weekend. For more information, call 625-8133.

CHS grads: Have song, will travel

BY JAMES GIBOWSKI
Clarkston News Staff Writer

High school is over for Anissa Howard and Carrie Monroe, but the show still must go on this summer.

Howard and Monroe, 1991 graduates of Clarkston High School, are members of a mobile singing troupe sponsored by the Oakland County Parks and Recreation Commission.

Since June 3 and continuing to Aug. 12, they and four other singers have been entertaining people in Oakland County parks with their "Traveling Music Show."

The singers offer two 45-minute shows, "A Yankee Doodle Medley" and a "Salute to Cole Porter." Some days they perform both shows at a particular park. Other days, they may only perform one of the shows.

Some of the songs in the Yankee Doodle medley include "Grand Old Flag," "Give My Regards to Broadway" and "Yankee Doodle Dandy." Some of the Cole Porter songs sung are "Let's Do It," "Anything Goes" and

"My Heart Belongs to Daddy."

The group often sings at senior centers or nursing homes. It also sings before young children at day camps and to other public and private audiences.

In addition to the two Clarkston graduates, other group members are Jennifer Hoemke of Farmington Hills, Mark Young of Rochester, Matt Oliver of West Bloom-

Lots of help

Lots of people joined together to produce the Sixth Annual Springfield Oaks Balloon Festival this weekend.

Committee members, who have worked a year on the event, include Sandi Hall, coordinator of the festival; Ron Hall, vendor and car show coordinator; Rick Brown, balloon coordinator and balloonmeister; Sherry Swindell, director of Springfield Township Parks and Recreation; Jim Mansfield, recreation supervisor for Oakland County Parks and Recreation Commission; Helen Vergin, program director for Northwest Oakland Community Services; Bob Kinney, Davisburg Rotary representative; and Bob Clark of the Springfield Parks and Recreation Commission.

field and Victor Minatola of Detroit.

This is the first summer the three women have been in the show. All three men performed last year.

About 30 people auditioned for the show. Amy Malany of Farmington Hills, who has had experience in off-Broadway shows, was in charge of the group during rehearsals. John Frutier is the road manager.

Singing together isn't new for Howard and Monroe. At Clarkston High School, the two joined each other in musicals, drama club, Madrigal Singers, Solo Ensemble Festival, Girls Select Ensemble and Varsity Singers.

They will use the money earned by singing to help pay for college expenses. Howard plans to attend Central Michigan University, Mount Pleasant, where she plans to major in psychology; and Monroe plans to major in communications at Oakland University, Rochester. Both hope to minor in music.

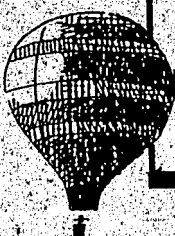

ANISSA Howard (left) and Carrie Monroe, previously fellow vocalists at Clarkston High School, continue performing together after graduation in Oakland County Parks' mobile singing troupe this summer. The two, plus the other four troupe members, make an appearance this weekend at the Springfield Oaks Balloon Festival.

Sky diver finds freedom, fun in free falling

BY DENNIS V. CARTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Whoosh! Out of the plane's door he sets off in flight. Soon reaching speeds of 125 mph, he plunges toward earth in a free fall.

To Rick Brown of Union Lake, this is something really special.

"About 20 years ago I made a list of the things I

Women's support group deals with intimacy

A new support group for women at the Consortium for Human Development deals with personal and sexual intimacy issues.

"Women In Touch" explores intimacy as experienced within the family and in current or past relationships, examines how body image and self esteem can affect intimacy in individual relationships, and guides the group to a greater understanding of male and female relationships.

Group therapist Lisa Padzensky sees a variety of clients at the Consortium on Sashabaw Road, Independence Township, and especially enjoys group therapy.

Male/female relationship building is a key element to developing intimacy in a long-term relationship, she says.

This group will help people who have felt unsuccessful in male/female relationships in the past and who would like to learn ways to improve their relationship skills.

The six-week session is 7-8:30 p.m. Mondays, July 22 through Aug. 26, at the Consortium office at 5645 Sashabaw Road, Clarkston.

Insurance will be billed for group therapy. To register, call 625-9600.

wanted to do in my life," said Brown. "Sky diving was one them, and a few years ago I saw some sky divers and decided it was time to give it a try."

According Brown, who has some 400 jumps under his belt, sky diving is something else.

"It is sensation that you can't really get anywhere else. It's like flying. When you free fall, it is a feeling of really being free," he said.

Brown, a member of a sky diving team known as the Sky Riders, doesn't feel that sky diving is a death-defying act.

"Sky diving is really a very safe sport. With improvements in parachutes and safety equipment, the sport is a lot better now. The landings are a lot softer and with the square parachute, you have control over where you will land," he said.

In fact when it comes to control, Brown's team has had plenty of practice. It competes in accuracy landings. In these contests, the sky diver must land within inches of a disk the size of a paper plate.

"With a square parachute, you can travel up 25 mph in a forward motion, which allows you to make turns and steer the flight of the chute," Brown said.

According to Brown, who's team will be performing at the Springfield Oaks Hot Air Balloon Festival July 19-21 at the Springfield Oaks County Park, Andersonville Road, Springfield Township, the cost of sky diving can be expensive.

"When you first get into sky diving, the equipment is kind of expensive, but after that it's just (like) golfing or bowling," he said.

The team performs at a of different functions such as weddings, the Fourth of July and football games.

"We do a lot of events. Sometimes we drop in at the beginning of a football game with the ball, or land at wedding with the rings. It's a lot of fun and it seems like the crowd always get into it," said Brown.

Of the sky diving team's six members, four dive at time.

"When we jump, we usually wear a flag or streamers or have smoke trailing us. A lot of it depends on the weather. It's hard for the crowd to see lot when you jump from 13,000 feet, so we usually jump from about 4,000 feet. We do some turns and steering for them and streamers and smoke lets them see us a lot better," Brown said.

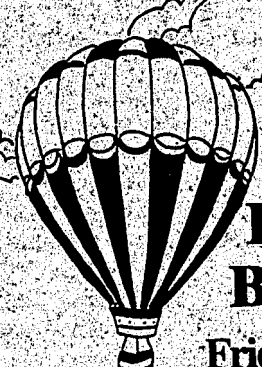

The other members of the team to perform are: Ronda Cheever of Tecumseh, John Davis of East Lansing, Pat Walsh of Tecumseh, Dan Schultz of Tecumseh and Bernie Steinbaugh of Toledo, Ohio.

At the plane's door, he prepares to jump. As he steps out to freedom, he's off again — whoosh!

Playing video games pays off for CHS student

BY DENNIS V. CARTER
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Beep, beep, beep. The computer begins to accept a video game program.

After the program is ready to play, it's time for Russ Robinson to begin his evaluation.

Robinson, 16, of Independence Township, has turned his hobby of playing video games into a way to curb the cost of the pastime.

"I have video game companies send me games, and then I evaluate them," said the Clarkston High School student. "Once I finish playing them, I write a review for a magazine, and the video company lets me keep the game as long as I send them a copy of the review when it's published."

Robinson, who will be a sophomore this fall, has found that writing the reviews has saved him a lot of money.

"I use to spend a lot of money on video games, but now that I get the games for writing the reviews I save a lot of that expense. Some of these games cost as much as $125," he said.

Robinson, who works at the Video Game Master on Dixie Highway, began writing the reviews last year after winning a contest in the Video Games and Computer Entertainment Magazine.

"I submitted a review on Turbo Graphics games, which was published by the magazine as part of a contest. Then I was contacted by the publishers of the magazine, Syberbeat. They said my review was very good and asked me to submit reviews to the magazine each month," said Robinson.

According to Robinson, who enjoys swimming and listening to music when he's not playing video games, he has been playing video games since he was about five.

"I've been playing video games every since I knew I had fingers it seems. We had a video game system in the house and I just started playing," he said.

In the future Robinson hopes to put his video games knowledge to use as a career.

"I'm hoping to get into programming video games. Right now a friend of mine and I are working on a video puppl, as he now writes reviews of games for a national magazine.

EVALUATING video games has paid off for Russ Robinson, a Clarkston High School

game program of our own. Working on these programs are interesting as well as entertaining," said Robinson.

It usually takes Robinson about three days to do the actual programming, evaluating and reviewing of the games for Syberbeat, which is a magazine sold nationwide by subscription and is dedicated to video game players.

"The companies send three or four games at time, unless they just send me a new release. It takes time to program and review the games, but it's a lot of fun, and it has paid off," he said.

After the game is finished, Robinson switches his computer from game-playing to typing.

195-foot tower topic of public hearing

A cellular telephone switching station will be the topic of conversation at a public hearing later this month.

On Thursday, July 25, the Independence Township Planning Commission will be conducting a hearing for the possible installation of a station near I-75 and Sashabaw Road.

The Detroit Cellular Telephone Co. proposes the construction of a station along with an equipment shelter and a 195-foot monopole tower for transmitting and receiving communications.

The proposed two-acre parcel is zoned light industrial.

The 7:30 p.m. public hearing is set for the township annex, 90 N. Main St., Clarkston.

For more information, call 625-8111.

Pet of the Week

Starlight is bright

Starlight is looking to be the twinkle in some lucky owner's eyes.

This 1-year-old Doberman pinscher weighs 62 pounds, and she's yet to be spayed.

According to shelter officials, she should be adopted by adults with no pets. Apparently, Starlight doesn't tolerate small children and other animals.

Her $87 adoption fee includes spaying.

To see Starlight, visit the Michigan Humane Society, 3600 Auburn Road, Rochester Hills, 852-7420. Hours at the non-profit shelter are 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

The Clarkston News

Photos by Julie Campe

THE ENTIRE Kingsbury family turns out for the free Russ Simonson jazz concert in Depot Park, Clarkston, on July 12. From left are Dale Kingsbury of Elkrum Drive; his daughter-in-law Kelly with son, Stephen, 2 1/2, and husband, Mike; Dale's wife, Sharon; and Gordon and Donna Graham (Sharon's sister) of Davison. Two more free Friday concerts are scheduled.

All that jazz

ROBERT Burek, principal of Clarkston High School, finds that he can easily hawk popcorn for the Clarkston Area Optimist Club during the free concert in the park, sponsored by the Clarkston Area Chamber of Commerce and First of America.

MUSIC inspires Josh Stephenson, 2, to run madly about Depot Park with the other children, while his parents, Ellen and Alan Stephenson of Waterford, sit nearby.
