Fire hits on Christmas

An Oakland County Sheriff's report said a neighbor noticed flames coming out of the kitchen about 1:30 p.m. and called 911.

Independence Township firefighters broke down the front door and extinguished the fire without injury. The family had left the home that morning for a holiday visit, so the home was unoccupied.

According to the fire department, the fire began in the dining area of the home when an Advent candle either reignited or was accidentally left lit.

A dollar estimate of the damage was not available, though the fire department said nearly every room was damaged in some way.

Library cuts hours

Starting Jan. 4, 1993, the Independence Township Library will offer fewer hours to the public.

According to Director Molly Lynch, budget constraints have dictated a reduction in staff and in hours of operation.

The new hours include:
1-9 p.m. Monday & Tuesday
10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesday & Thursday
1-6 p.m. Friday
10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday

Woman found in 'unlivable' conditions

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Police were called to a Heath Road, Independence Township, home Dec. 26 when neighbors reported that an elderly woman's lights had not been on for some time.

Upon arrival, the Oakland County Sheriff's deputies found the 85-year-old woman in a heap on the floor. She was cold and incoherent.

According to the police report, garbage and debris lay throughout the home. There was so much debris at the door that the emergency crew could not get their equipment in.

The report said human waste was found wrapped in toilet paper on the kitchen seats, the floors were wet and frozen, and there was an open hole in the ceiling in the bedroom. The ceiling was caving in throughout the home.

There was no electricity in the home, due to a blown fuse, and there was no food or running water.

The woman was taken to St. Joseph Mercy Hospital,

Pontiac, where she was listed in fair condition Tuesday. Her family was called, as was Protective Services for Adults.

The house was later marked "Uninhabitable" by Independence Township officials.

'Family' member sentenced to 3-7 years

Philip Laycock, a member of the alleged drug-ring named "The Family," was sentenced to three to seven years in prison in Oakland County Circuit Court Dec. 23 for conspiring to sell LSD to Clarkston High School students.

Laycock, 18, of Lansing had pleaded guilty to attempting to sell the drug. He was sentenced by Judge Gene Schnelz.

Four others also charged are: Stanley Watkins, 18, Jason Smith, 18, and Bryce Kidder, 17, all of Clarkston; and Mark Bierman, 20, of Troy.

Watkins, the alleged leader of the group, also pleaded guilty and is to be sentenced Jan. 21, 1993.

Carnell to remain free

Despite an appeal by the Oakland County Prosecutor's Office, Brandon Carnell, 19, will remain free.

Oakland County Circuit Judge Edward Sosnick ruled Dec. 23 that Judge Sandra Silver was correct in ordering Carnell's release on his 19th birthday Nov. 25.

Carnell, a Springfield Township native, was convicted of killing his parents and younger sister when he was 14. Because of his age, he was tried as a juvenile. According to Michigan law at the time, he could be held in a juvenile detention facility only until age 19.

Later the same year, the law changed to state that juvenile offenders could be held until age 21 for certain offenses.

The prosecuting attorney's office argued that the law was effective before the triple killing and should be applied to Carnell. Officials have stated they are willing to take this case to the Michigan Court of Appeals

One injured in accident

According to Lt. Joe Quisenberry of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department, one car was southbound on Dixie Highway, Independence Township, when it crossed the double-yellow line and hit another car northbound. The accident took place near M-15.

The Independence Township Fire Department report stated that one person was extricated from a car.

The names, ages and injuries of the drivers were not available from OCSD because officials were on vacation and could not be reached. Alcohol was a factor and the accident is under investigation, according to the OCSD.

Reward offered for break-in information

A rash of break-ins in the area has prompted police to offer a reward to those with information.

Since mid-November, 15 break-ins of unoccupied homes have been reported in the Deerwood, Deerhill subdivisions, according to the Oakland County Sheriff's Department.

Police are offering a $100 reward for any information that assists them in the investigation.

Anyone with information can call Detective Joe Duke at 620-2470. Information can be kept confidential.

'Neglected majority' can benefit from technical education

American Education

Editor's note: This is the final story in The Clarkston News' series on American education, begun during American Education Week.

BY JULIE CAMPE
Clarkston News Editor

Daniel Manthei has heard all of the laments about American education.

□ American students lag behind their counterparts in industrialized nations in math and science. □ They are not prepared for the workforce. □ They graduate from college but have no skills. □ Businesses can't find the trained personnel they need.

Manthei, principal of the Oakland Technical Center-Northwest Campus, has some answers. The main solution: Blend academics with application.

"About 70 percent of students learn better with application followed by theory," he said.

And that is the crux of education at the technical center.

A little background

The tech. center — on Big Lake Road, Springfield Township — evolved from the Northwest Oakland Vocational Education Center, one of four regional centers in Oakland County. The name changed about five years ago. The official goals of the centers changed last summer, when a new mission statement and objectives were adopted.

It all began with Sputnik in 1957, said Manthei. When "the Russians" made it into space before the U.S., the nation realized it was not competitive in math and science.

So the federal government came up with money to train and update science teachers. In the early 1960s, the federal government gave money to construct vocational training centers. In 1968, Oakland Schools took advantage of the program by levying one-half mill to meet the federal requirement of matching funds. (One-half mill is 50 cents for every $1,000 in assessed property valuations.)

Four vocational centers served the four quadrants of the county. Clarkston Community Schools accepted control of the Northwest Oakland Vocational Education Center (comprising Brandon, Clarkston, Holly, Our Lady of the Lakes and Waterford schools).

From job training to technology ...

"At that point, vocational education was viewed somewhat narrowly," said Manthei.

It provided specific job training, with academic background provided by the home school. For instance, a student would study reading, history, math and science at his regular high school and would attend the voc. school to learn, say, automotive or electronics repair or dental assisting.

That type of education was appropriate for that era, which was ending, said Manthei.

"There was a fairly short honeymoon when the curriculum really matched the needs," he said.

At the time, 70 percent to 80 percent of Americans were employed directly or indirectly by the manufacturing-production industry.

"We were dominant in the world," Manthei said.

However, that changed. The U.S. economy has moved to computer technology and service industries. Today, said Manthei, only 17 percent of people are employed in the manufacturing-production industry.

An example: Pontiac Motors. In the 1960s, the Pontiac facility employed 14,000. Today, now called the C-P-C Division, it employs less than 2,000.

"The expectations of entry-level workers are vastly different," said Manthei. "The curriculum that we provide has to change quite dramatically."

"We cannot just provide training for someone to be a mill operator or a lathe operator. They need a much broader base of knowledge," he said.

They need math, science, computer and communication knowledge.

"But they need these things not for the sake of credit. They need it to solve real problems," he said.

What use, college?

Typical high school education prepares students for college curriculum — which may or may not prepare students for work, said Manthei.

At college, a few students may train for the work world — those who study law or medicine, for instance. But the rest simply gain more education, he said.

TOM Lawson (left), 16, of Holly High School and Steve Cohoon, 18, of Clarkston High School, work on a pressure lab during their principles of technology class. Tom said this particular lab was harder to put together than other labs. But Steve said it had other compensations. "It's interesting," he said.

"A major problem with our economy is we're glutted with college-educated people who have no training," he said.

A recent study shows that only 15 percent of college graduates with baccalaureate degrees are employed in areas related to their education.

The rest, said Manthei, are underemployed, unemployed or are working in unrelated fields.

"While all of this is going on, 82 to 84 percent from Clarkston go to college. ... What's missing is the long-term tracking. How many complete college? How many are employed in their fields?" he asked.

For businesses to hire these new graduates, they must spend money for months of training. Some companies, however, have found cheaper ways. General Motors, for instance, recently hired 700 body draftsmen from the United Kingdom. The company could not find already-trained draftsmen in the United States.

Changing trends

The educational trend is beginning to change, however. The Oakland Technical Center-Northwest Campus now offers applied mathematics and applied principles of technology. It teaches "technology" as well as specific skills and the theories behind them.

Manthei noted that his school was among the first in the state to offer applied math and science courses, and the instructors for those courses are contracted to train other teachers throughout the Midwest.

Another new program — a partnership with business — tries to identify potential technology students in elementary and middle school levels and to guide them into the right classes.

Clarkston lags

However, Clarkston schools lag behind the trend, he said.

"An example, Clarkston High School is closing its technical shops to provide classrooms for math and science."

"They're moving farther away from the direction they should be moving. They're nailing the coffin on some of the students' futures," he said.

Clarkston serves as an example of how educators react to the news that standardized test scores aren't good, that students aren't competitive in the worldwide market.

"There's an old saying that if you keep doing what you're doing, you're going to keep getting what you're getting," said Manthei.

Increasing "seat time" in academic courses won't help the neglected majority of students who learn by doing, he said.

Those drafting and machine shop classes provided essential knowledge and skills in education, he said.

To prove his point, Manthei cited the Downriver sunroof manufacturing company that has a policy against interviewing and accepting applications from engineering graduates of the University of Michigan and Michigan State University — schools known for theoretical emphasis.

Instead, it only accepts engineering applications from graduates of schools such as GMI or Lawrence Technological University, schools known for hands-on emphasis.

Engineers must have knowledge of machine shops and drafting, or "the engineer can't possibly communicate with the manufacturing end of business," said Manthei.

"Technology education recognizes there is a strong need for academics, but ... it is an applied academics. It could allow the student to solve problems, to analyze, with real-world work, not theoretical only."

Manthei also cited the studies that show these "middle-range" students of applied mathematics and physics score higher on standardized tests than the "gifted" students in advanced placement math and science classes, which focus on theory.

He said education today provides for those with learning problems and those gifted students who learn better with abstract means. But the middle 50 percent of students are neglected, he said.

Goals of education

Parents and educators should re-examine the goals of education — and that is the biggest frustration Manthei (See COLLEGE, next page)

Too many college-educated people have no training

faces at the tech. center.

"People don't appreciate the changes," he said. "They still view us as a place for students with behavioral or learning problems. ... All parents want the best for their children, and they equate that with going to college and getting a degree.

"For the neglected majority, the middle range of students, the key to success for them would be an associate's degree so that they would be marketable, technical people," he said.

Good-paying jobs unfilled

Manthei cited another example. From his desk, he produced a recent job order from McLaren Co., which had a contract with General Motors. The company needed 60 experienced engineering teardown technicians, inspectors, engine assemblers and others. Pay ranged from $9 to $14, depending on experience. The company had trouble finding employees — until it visited the Oakland Technical Center.

"When they came out and saw our diesel technology, they found it perfectly matched their needs," said Manthei. "The problem is, we can't get students to enroll in diesel technology."

Instead, students are packaged off to college. But when they graduate, the majority can't find such $9- to $14-an-hour, challenging jobs that offer fringe benefits.

He noted that those types of technological jobs involve research and development and testing.

"Businesses won't go to universities to find people with these skills. They'll go to community colleges, technical schools; or they'll import people from England or Japan."

The same is true with clerical jobs. The Troy Chamber of Commerce grappled with the shortage of trained clerical workers when several businesses — which were willing to pay $25,000 or more plus benefits for trained clerical help — planned to move their businesses because of the secretarial shortage. The Chamber formed a worker recruiting council to deal with the shortage.

The tech. center also offers programs in automated office.

Challenge: Recruiting students

Problems arise, however, when the perceptions of parents and educators are combined with student perceptions.

"The attitudes and ideas are formed early. If a student believes the technical schools is for burnouts, it's the stereotype, the image," he said. "They don't want that label."

In addition, parents expect their children to attend college. And unless students plan early, it can be difficult to meet academic requirements of colleges while attending the tech. center at the same time.

"The challenge is to get the students early enough — in upper el. or middle school — so they retain an open mind and use electives wisely," said Manthei.

But education as a whole should change, said Manthei. He noted that the elementary level in Clarkston already was headed in the right direction.

With "Math Their Way" and the newer writing curriculum, pupils learn by doing. They learn the theory as well as the application.

If that trend continues throughout educational levels, in another generation, perhaps, education will prepare students for the working world.

"I remain optimistic that it's going to change," said Manthei. "We're working much more closely with business and industry to help recruit students."

Students benefit from hands-on work

BY JULIE CAMPE
Clarkston News Editor

A look inside the classrooms at the Oakland Technical Center-Northwest shows what could be the trend in education.

Unlike many classrooms at their "home schools," the students don't sit at their desks, hands folded, listening to their teachers lecture hour after hour.

Instead, they learn while doing.

■ In principles of technology — an applied academics class — pupils are paired off at the lab bench in the perimeter of the room. They talk quietly among themselves, while working at their pressure lab, during which they calculate the different aspects of hydraulic cylinders.

They write in their worksheets now and then, while the teacher goes from group to group, answering questions as he goes.

■ In culinary arts, students prepare and serve hot and cold foods to lunch customers. In the process, they learn about nutrition, presentation, proportions and ratios.

■ In diesel technology, students work in small groups, each tackling a different task. One group work with fuel injection components, while another tests engines on a dynamometer.

■ In building trades, the students aren't in a classroom at all. Or rather, their classroom is an actual house, where they learn carpentry, dry walling, roofing, masonry and more.

Busy classroom

The classrooms put into action the philosophy at the tech. center: to teach pupils actual skills, to teach them the technology surrounding those skills, and to teach them the abstract theories behind the technology.

The about 650 pupils from Brandon, Clarkston, Holly, Our Lady of the Lakes, Springfield Christian, and Waterford schools may choose from advertising design, auto body repair, automated office, automotive electronics, building maintenance, building trades, climate control, culinary arts, dental assisting, diesel technology, electronics technology, floral design and sales, landscape technology, machine technology, marketing and printing technology.

The tech. center also accepts adults, and those without a high school diploma are eligible without tuition costs. Adults over age 20 who have a high school diploma pay a fee to enroll. Summer school also is offered.

Overall, the pupils at the center seem to enjoy their classes.

Nathan Raupp, a Holly High School sophomore enrolled in electronics technology, said, "It's the best academic decision I've ever made."

Desiree Mesnard, a Holly High junior, agreed. "It's a really good educational thing. You can get a lot of good careers out of it—and they pay well," she said.

Mesnard is considering becoming a nurse after graduation, but she said her electronics technology class will allow her to work her way through college, if necessary. At the very least, the knowledge will prove helpful when she's on her own, she said.

"I can fix my radios and headphones and TV's, and I can rewire my house," she said.

Grab bag

Julie Campe

Sometimes it gets so busy around here that we don't get to answer half the mail we receive.

Sure, many of the letters end up in The Clarkston News, but many we can't use and don't have time to answer personally. So here's a dip into the grab bag. (For the record, these are excerpts from real letters.)
Dear Julie,

I would like to submit an anonymous column written by myself called Average Joe. It would cover everyday items of interest such as TV shows and commercials, music, movies, area businesses and other items.

An example:

Coke commercials with Bogle, Satchmo, are some of the best new commercials. I also like the Listerine Mint commercial. ... Kudos to Greg Christopher and the Independence Woods Mobile Home Community. Greg took what was basically a landfill and turned it into an area that we can be proud of. Good job, Greg!

Please print your answer in your column. Just say something like: A.J. Go for it.

Average Joe

Dear A.J.:

No go.

Dear Julie —

I'm writing this to you because I enjoy the paper so much. In the article about house plants in the third paragraph, I found one of the "goofs" which can happen in any paper.

It's a "HONEY!"

I used to be a proof-reader at the Pontiac Press years ago, so I automatically notice the goofs. (I have many house plants so I was interested in the article.)

When I noticed the "goof," I laughed so hard that my dog Bridget wondered what had happened.

Now I'm 83 and quite well, but not very active — but I can still enjoy a good goof.

Mrs. Mason

Dear Mrs. Mason:

I was a little embarrassed about this honey, especially since I didn't catch it before it went into print. But after you pointed it out, I, too, laughed aloud. After all, it makes more sense to keep your plants green than to keep your pants green.

Dear Clarkston News,

Please print my poem. It was written 8/29/92 at 4 a.m., my last night in the hospital. I dedicate this poem to my family for their love, courage and support.

Rita Timulak
Room 570 — Bed 3
Operation 8-26-92

"The Big H"

Hysterectomy, Hysterectomy!
What is this scary, hardly spoken word?
What does it mean total or partial?
And oh, who should operate, dear Lord?

Hysterectomy! Hysterectomy! Where is my guide book?
What are the risks? The estrogen patch or the pill?
So many questions, where do I look?
My friends say "Yes, do it," "No, don't," "I had mine five years ago and still feel great," "Take it all," "Leave just one ..."

Lord, it's up to you — 'cause I'm still confused.
Wait! It's over — I'm lying here looking at my two other roommates, Ora Lee and Jeanette.
I made it. I didn't die.
But please excuse me, I must throw up a bit and cry. ...

Dear Mrs. Timulak:

Thank you for sharing your poem, though we don't usually have room for such a long discourse in The Clarkston News.

However, your work inspired one staff member to begin a poem of his own: "Prostate gland, prostate gland! What is the function ..."

Editorial

Community-mindedness prevails

In reviewing the year's happenings in the Clarkston area, we are struck by the sense of community that has prevailed through tough economic times and divisions of other sorts.

Yes, Clarkston became a city and is no longer part of Independence Township. And yes, Clarkston school teachers went on strike for five days. Crimes occurred, fires took place, and many lost their jobs.

But through all the turbulence, people helped one another. Volunteers pulled off the annual parades downtown, as well as the annual Fun Daze. Other volunteers quietly went about their work, giving scholarship money to young people in the community, buying books for the library, or throwing holiday parties for those less fortunate.

Others decorated the town with flowers and banners, while still others cleaned area roads during Spring Cleanup or on their own.

And perhaps most importantly, people donated money, food and clothing to Lighthouse North, Neighbor for Neighbor, area churches and other organizations — even though money was tight with most families.

According to Sherry Kaars of Lighthouse North, the need was greater than ever before in the area, and still, people managed to dig deeper into their pockets and help out.

That's what small-town living is all about. And that's why the community is a community, whether the people call themselves residents of Davisburg or Clarkston or Independence or Springfield.

More boring back stuff

It must be Gumperson's Law — when you have a sore back you drop more things and all of them fall to the floor.

Anyway, thanks for all your "get well" wishes and prayers. The promised disc rupture surgery went exactly as promised:

- Into Crittenton Hospital at 5:30 a.m.
- Surgery at 7:30 a.m.
- Immediate relief from previous pain.
- Hospitalized one night, released next day with few instructions. Walk more each day, don't lift, don't climb stairs.

Here are some of my observations from five weeks of bed time:

Nothing tastes as good through a straw.

I was surprised and frightened by the mental effect of surgery. I thought I had more control than I did.

Television really is a vast wasteland. The promos for Sally, Jenny, Donahue, Oprah, Montel, Geraldo and Jerry were enough. All were completely shut out.

So were all daytime soaps. I did watch Regis and Kathy Lee (oh joy) a couple days a week.

On news programs I thought I caught a fashion trend change when Bill Clinton and Al Gore showed up in black-and-white ties two days in a row. But the next week it was the politically correct dark suit and red tie again.

The great excuse of the '90s is alive and well. I called Dr Portnoy's office to see if they had checked with Crittenton for an admittance date. Crittenton couldn't respond. Their computers were down.

On TV advertising: Why would a man want to shave in a shower where any mirror would be steamed up?

Is all carpet always on sale at 40 to 70 percent off with pad and labor free--AND at this "one time only" deal closeout?

Among the forms I signed at the hospital was one saying these operations are 90 percent successful. I wanted better odds.

I read three books on backs. They'll never replace "The Regulator" cowboy paperbacks.

About staff editorials

We at The Clarkston News realize that an important duty of a newspaper is to provide more than just the facts found in news stories.

Since we're out there uncovering the news, we get an inside look at the issues. In our staff editorials, we will give our opinions on those issues, just as other writing on this page — letters and columns — also offers opinions.

We leave the editorials unsigned because we've written them as a staff. Every week, we talk about the issues and take notes on everyone's opinions. Then one of us writes it and the rest of us change it until we're all satisfied.

While our opinions aren't always unanimous, our editorials reflect the majority views of the staff. If the staff splits evenly on an issue, we'll write two editorials on the subject.

We welcome your response to our views.

Letters to the Editor

Buyer beware

I take strong exception with real estate ad on Page 15A Dec. 23 that reads, "Keep your boat on Deer Lake." This ad leaves the impression that the person who buys this house can have their boat full time on Deer Lake.

The fact is, this non-waterfront house is located in Deer Lake Pines subdivision. As with non-waterfront homes in Deer Lake Farms and the new condos on White Lake Road, Deer Lake Pines homeowners must remove their boats at the end of each day.

Those boat owners in the Pines who continue to park their boats overnight display total disregard for their neighbors, the lake and township residents as a whole.

This is the third real estate company in the Clarkston area to use this deceptive advertising practice. All of Independence Township is welcome to "Keep Your Boat on Deer Lake," not overnight, and for a nominal fee.

These restrictions are in place to reduce boat traffic and preserve this wonderful lake, for all to enjoy. Remember, Deer Lake is only 137 acres. With a 37-acre "No Wake Zone" and 100-foot distance laws from stationary and moving objects, this lake becomes very small.

I only ask that local realty companies research all conditions upon which a house is offered for sale. This will prevent misleading ads and unhappy buyers

Don't hide from new curriculum

I am an eighth-grader attending Clarkston Junior High School writing partially in response to a few personally disturbing letters which recently appeared in this newspaper, but in a larger sense, to bring due attention to an issue which is very important to this community, particularly people of roughly my age group.

That is public concern over teaching curriculum, and, in this case, curriculum for CAT, Clarkston's elementary school gifted program.

Mrs. Nancy Doyle recently wrote a letter to the editor stating her obviously well-intentioned but unresearched and blown-out-of-proportion negative feelings about an assignment for fourth-graders intended to combine learning and creativity. The students took on the role of ancient Egyptians, beseeching the Egyptian god of the dead, Osiris, for eternal life and prosperity.

Mrs. Doyle assumed that children who did such assignments were being bombarded by "occult ideas" and "New Age teaching."

Since her remarks have already been answered (and in my opinion, quite effectively), it would be redundant of me to explain that there is a roughly 3,000- to 4,000-year time span here, and that any fourth-grader, especially in the gifted program, is not nearly as easily influenced as you might think by an assignment like this in which he/she is actually being asked to create something original, not just spitting back information. At least, not from a religious perspective.

Instead of responding directly to Mrs. Doyle's accusations, I would like to respond to her advice to avoid and/or fight back against modern teaching methods. Many people of a certain age can remember back to when schools focused on the "three R's." I would be interested in seeing how a student learning only the three R's today is going to be even remotely competitive years from now in a high-tech, sophisticated, and, yes, "creative" world.

Literacy and simple mathematical calculations aren't enough to get by in a world of constant progress, let alone to be a part of that progress.

Gifted classes select students with exceptionally high creativity and show them how to use their creativity while teaching them about, in this case, ancient civilizations.

Do not hide from new teaching methods, whether you're Mrs. Doyle or anyone else. As a gifted student myself, I can tell you that I've gained a lot more from interpreting information than just spitting it back.

Colin McIntyre

Unequal treatment

I am writing to you to complain about the service I have received at a Clarkston-area restaurant.

I am 14 years old and many times I have stopped in this restaurant for an afterschool snack with my friends. We are looked upon by the owners as though our money is not as good as the next person's. I don't understand this treatment, considering we are not noisy or rude to the employees.

I am not complaining about the teen-agers who work there because they are friendly and do an excellent job. The owners, though, treat us as if we do not exist. I am only writing to inform you of this disgrace because my friends and I feel we should be treated equally.

Audience etiquette

One of my favorite pieces of music is Handel's "Messiah." The man was an absolute genius, and anytime that I can hear the piece performed I go.

Earlier this month I went to see the "Young Messiah" performed at The Palace with my family. This version of the masterpiece is "jazzed" up a bit and just as beautiful as the original. The soloist are famous Christian artists, including Sandi Patti, Larnell Harris and trumpeter Phil Drisco; and the choir is made up of people from the area.

A group of people around me could have ruined my enjoyment of the concert if I hadn't decided after being annoyed for 15 minutes I'd write a column about them. This a column for the people who sat behind me in Section 118 at the "Young Messiah" (and you know who you are).

Eating. I know that popcorn and nachos are available at the concession stands, and you were probably hungry. But did you need to eat popcorn through the entire second half — with your mouth open? My suggestion for you if you feel you need to eat during a concert is to at least chew to the beat, it won't be as annoying to the people around you.

Talking. I really believe that reminding the man next to you, ma'am, that you needed to stop at the grocery store tomorrow could have waited until 4Him was done singing. Comments about your job, school and the kids could have waited, too. I paid almost $20 to hear "The Messiah," not your grocery list.

Bathroom breaks. This is for the people in my row. I know as well as anyone that when you have to go — you really have to go. But we stood up and sang carols for almost 10 minutes, and then we also had an intermission. Please don't wait until everyone sits down from singing to leave to use the restroom. I left when we stood up to sing carols, and I was back before everyone sat down. We're all adults, and we can hold our bladders until the window of opportunity of an intermission.

Singing. This is especially for the chick who sat right behind my uncle. SHUT UP! No one cares that you know every word to the Messiah and that you can "enhance" it with your voice. It is obvious you like to sing; next year maybe you should join the choir. Everyone in my row heard you sing with Sandi, Larnell and a hundred-voice-plus choir as backup. I'm usually not violent, but I wanted to beat you. Next time I may.

Detroit's parking scam

Jim Fitzgerald

Teacher Jerry Eggen and 15 students from Sterling Heights High School drove to downtown Detroit in five cars last Wednesday afternoon to help the homeless.

What happened to them in the big city makes me so angry I want to punch Mayor Coleman Young, even if he does have 1,400 bodyguards.

Eggen heads a Human Rights Club at the school. For several years, the club has been donating clothing and furniture, plus money, to the Coalition on Temporary Shelter (COTS), which justifiably describes itself in fund-raising literature as "a beacon of hope for poor homeless people, providing shelter, food and care they so desperately need."

Following that beacon, Eggen's caravan pulled up in front of the COTS building on Peterboro to deliver many bulky gifts. "A COTS employee said it would be OK to park in a no-standing zone while we unloaded," Eggen said.

You've guessed it, of course. When Eggen returned, there was a $30 parking ticket on his car. Several other nearby, illegally parked cars weren't ticketed. "I have no idea why they picked me," Eggen said.

Subsequently he phoned the Parking Violations Bureau to plead his case. "I got no sympathy," Eggen said. "The woman simply said COTS had no right to say I could park there to unload."

And that's not the only miserable bit of Detroit inhospitality suffered by the teacher and students. Before heading home, they stopped at the Lindell AC for (in my opinion) the best hamburgers in the world. They parked three cars on Times Square, a short street just north of the restaurant. They were careful to put enough money in the parking meters.

When they returned, there was still plenty of time left on the meters, but there was a $30 ticket on each of the three cars, not for parking overtime, but for parking at 3:10 p.m. The youngsters had been so busy putting coins in slots they hadn't noticed the nearby sign announcing the sleaziest scam in downtown Detroit.

There are many of these sneaky signs scattered around town. They say you can't park at the meters between 3 and 6 p.m., or 4 and 6 p.m. Why? Because of the "rush hour." Supposedly, extra lanes are needed to accommodate added traffic.

What a hoot. There hasn't been a rush hour in downtown Detroit in 20 years. We don't have a rush minute.

But the anachronistic parking restrictions are still enforced because they're a great source of income sucked out of unwary visitors who don't see the occasional signs and understandably assume the metered spaces wouldn't be offered if you weren't supposed to park in them. Only a few months ago, I quoted a bleeding downtown merchant as saying the unneeded "rush hour" ticketing was "the biggest problem we have." He said he'd been protesting to City Hall for 15 years to almost no avail.

Teacher Eggen said he phoned me because he'd read my many back-page gripes about the Municipal Parking Department. He might also have read a recent front-page series that cited parking tickets as one of the big reasons people don't want to shop downtown.

To make Eggen feel even worse, I described the parking scene in front of the exclusive Detroit Club at 4 p.m. Dec. 15. Twelve cars were double-parked on the east side of Cass, and four on the west side, leaving only two lanes for "rush hour" traffic. And access to an adjacent public alley was blocked by two more illegally parked cars.

No tickets were issued, of course, because of the "relaxed enforcement" approved by one of the club's most esteemed members - Coleman Young. The mayor was recently quoted as saying he is reluctant to kiss the rear ends of business leaders, but I think he's making an exception for fellow club members.

It cost $120 for a suburban teacher and 15 students to park at the curb for a few minutes while in Detroit on a charitable mission. It costs nothing for members of a plush club to park in the middle of the street for several hours.

God, but that makes me so mad.

Police go too far

I would like to inform the public how I feel about the Clarkston Police.

The Clarkston Police make people more cautious when driving, especially during school hours. I feel this makes the younger children feel safer.

But I also feel they give out too many unnecessary tickets. Instead of sitting in one place continuously, they should be making appearances at main attractions such as downtown Clarkston, Depot Park and routes that children walk home after school.

Finally, the Clarkston Police will give you tickets for jaywalking or only going three miles over the speed limit. I feel that this is wrong.

Yes, this is what you the people voted for, but ask yourself this: If you could vote again, would you change your vote?

Kevorkian helps

Since June 1990, when the first doctor-assisted suicide was publicly announced, until Dec. 16, 1992, Dr. Jack Kevorkian has helped eight women die.

Some call this murder; I call it help. All of these women suffered from terminal or debilitating diseases. To them, there wasn't anything left to live for and they wanted to seek help from Dr. Kevorkian to end their misery. That was their right. No one or any law should be able to decide whether you live or die.

I only believe that suicide is an option when it concerns a terminal disease. Someone, somewhere can always help if you have a problem, but those women were only bodies on earth. They wanted out to escape the suffering they were in.

For now, we have the choice to determine our lives, but soon, we will not. The law will make that decision for us. No law should have that power.

I am sure that I would want to determine my fate if I ever had to make the choice. Wouldn't you?

No AIDS cure, but prevention possible

Although there is no cure for AIDS, the behavior the Rev. Gebhard stated in his letter — abstinence, monogamy and a drug-free lifestyle — would go a long way in preventing the spread of the virus.

I applaud the Rev. Gebhard for standing up against sex outside of marriage and homosexuality, which are very touchy subjects in a world where we are suppose to pretend there are no absolute rights or wrongs. I'm also thankful that he did not condemn the person, but rather the act. Many people do not separate the two. God loves the sinner — hates the sin, and we should do the same.

There is no such thing as "safe sex" anymore. People who feel that wearing a condom can allow them still to be promiscuous are risking their lives. The HIV virus is 1/25 the size of a sperm and can pass easily through the smallest gap in a condom (Journal of American Medical Association May 1, 1987). Researchers studying gloves made of latex, the material condoms are made out of, found "channels of 5 microns that penetrated the entire thickness of the glove" (Nature Sept. 1, 1988); HIV is 0.1 microns (American Journal of Nursing October 1987).

Since 1970, the U.S. government has spent $3 billion on "safe sex" campaigns. Still the Centers for Disease Control estimates there are 1 million cases of HIV infection nationwide, and since September 1989, the rate of heterosexual HIV transmission has increased 44 percent (American Medical News Feb. 3, 1992).

Informing our children and the community of the risks of promiscuity and advocating abstinence and monogamy as Rev. Gebhard has so boldly done will go a long way in stopping the spread of this deadly disease.

No cure for AIDS

This is a response to the Rev. Gebhard's letter, "One Sure Cure."

Do your homework, Rev. There is no cure for AIDS. And guess what? People of all walks of life — doctors, kids, dentists and even preachers — can get their disease from blood transfusions.

I was always under the belief that God loves everyone. Remember St. Matthew 7:1, 2: "Judge not, that ye be not judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."

We have rapist, killers, muggers, speeders, cheaters, liars and wife beaters; they're all God's children. God loves everybody. I'm glad I don't listen to your sermon every Sunday because I have sinned.

I think you should read St. Matthew chapter 7, also St. John 8:7: "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone."

God bless you.

Students enjoy technical education curriculum

She demonstrated her work for the day — working at her own pace on a computer to learn the fundamentals of direct current. At her side is equipment that gives meter readings, so she can get hands-on experience.

Her classmate Rich Hartwick, a junior at Holly High, said he appreciates the class structure.

He said he likes "the fact that you don't have to just sit in a classroom with just book stuff, and you get to use what you're talking about."

The electronics class requires a lot of math, which he now enjoys, he said.

"In this class, yes, I like it. I never liked algebra or anything like that (in a regular classroom), but here you can use it for something practical," he said.

Stephen Locher, a Clarkston High senior, said the class prepares him for life after high school.

"It offers a lot for the future because it's an electronics future," he said.

They believe that from what they've heard from college representatives as well as recent graduates now in the working world, said Locher, explaining that electronics instructor Don Peters often invites guest speakers to talk to his pupils.

In auto body repair, Shane Solheim, a Clarkston High senior, said he enrolled to learn how to fix up his 1966 GTO and plans to enroll again next year, as a post-grad. student.

"I'm learning a lot from it," he said. "I like it. I enjoy it."

However, to meet graduation requirements, he attends night school-for one class, he said.

Peters, the electronics technology instructor, said the tech. center's emphasis has changed since its vocational school days.

"We're teaching technology, not just vocational skills. So as the job market evolves, students will be able to change along with it," he said.

And that could be yet another educational trend at the technical center.

Dugan Fife

Swinging from the heels

Fife's transition tops 1992 highlights

James Gibowski

While carefully glancing through the items contained in "1992 Sports in review," I began to list some events in order of importance.

The result of that glancing is my Top 10 list (with apologies to David Letterman) of sports events covered in the 1992 editions of The Clarkston News.

1 Dugan Fife's transition from his four-year high school basketball career to being a freshman on the highly-ranked University of Michigan's team was as smooth as one of his jump shots.

Fife, a two-time basketball all-stater and one-time football all-stater, finished his last year at Clarkston in 1992 by amassing 2,032 career points (a school record), scoring 49 points in one game and being runner-up in the Hal Schram Mr. Basketball Award.

Fife, selected as the school's top senior boy athlete, also helped the Wolves win their fourth-straight Class A district basketball championship.

In the winter of 1992, the 6-2 guard found himself on the bench for the first time with the Wolverines. However, Fife is no longer the last Wolverine coming off the bench and is gradually seeing more-and-more playing time.

2 The Clarkston varsity baseball team not only captured its first Class A district title in 10 years but the Wolves won it dramatically against a team which was a state finalist the year before.

(It should also be noted that it takes more games to win a baseball district than basketball, for example, because of pre-districts, etc.).

Playing under a constant rain, the Wolves edged host Rochester, 1-0. In one of the year's top individual efforts, southpaw Derek Wiley hurled a 2-hitter and knocked in the winning run.

Throughout the season the Wolves, managed by Roy "Pops" Warner, relied on their pitching depth, strong defense and timely hitting.

3 For the second straight year, the Clarkston varsity boys' soccer team won a district championship.

The Wolves, coached by Dan Fitzgerald, also won their first regional match, making them one of only eight teams left in the state tournament. Brighton spoiled Clarkston's chance to get into the semifinals, edging the Wolves, 2-1, in the regional finals.

Scott Rooney led the team offensively, scoring 25 goals in 1992. After the season the senior, who will play college soccer next fall, was chosen as an all-stater by the Soccer Coaches' Association.

4 After 23 years, one of the best rivalries in Clarkston ended when Clarkston Junior High and Sashabaw Junior High played their last ninth-grade football games against each other.

Clarkston Junior High won the last contest in an appropriate nail-biter, edging the Cougars, 22-19.

The Wolverines ended the 23-year arch-rivalry with a 25-19-2 advantage. The two teams will merge in the fall of 1993.

5 The Clarkston varsity girls' basketball team had a terrific regular season but again failed to win its first Class A district championship since 1975.

Host Lapeer East played a strong game and defeated the Wolves, 63-56, in the district finals.

However, the Larry Mahrle coached Wolves (who were ranked as high as No. 10 in the state) were a perfect 10-0 in league play, winning their first-ever outright GOAL championship.

Another highlight of the season was Alyson McChesney breaking the Wolf girls' school scoring record by netting 37 points against Grand Blanc. The 5-10 McChesney will be playing basketball for Oakland University next year.

6 A seasoned Clarkston boys' ski team was supposed to be strong but a young Wolf girls' ski team made sure there were two Clarkston teams earning a trip "up north" to the state finals.

The boys ended up finishing seventh in the state and the girls 10th. Both teams were coached by Judy Roeser.

The boys also finished first at regionals and won the overall Pine Knob Division title. The girls finished second both at the regionals and overall in the Pine Knob Division.

7 Once again, Clarkston athletes had to resort to pay-to-play as voters in the school district turned down a 2-mill increase.

Junior high sports were originally threatened but they were saved after the school board voted to spread out pay-to-play payments for both junior high and high school athletes. The cost, $75 per sport.

8 The Clarkston varsity wrestling team would had love to have him suit up for the Wolves, but Birmingham Brother Rice was glad Derek Moscovic grappled for the Warriors.

Moscovic, an Independence Township resident, won an amazing three-straight Class A individual wrestling state championships.

Moscovic is now a Hoosier, receiving a scholarship at the University of Indiana.

9 World-class speed walker Gary Morgan, an Independence Township resident, finished second at the U.S. Olympic Trials in New Orleans but still doesn't qualify for the trip to the Summer Olympics in Barcelona.

To try and cut down on the number of Olympians, a world-wide Olympic committee decides that only the winner of the speed walker trials qualifies (or others who can make it under a specific time).

Morgan plans on continuing to walk or even to start seriously competing in cross-country skiing.

10 The top Clarkston athletes of 1992 will come and go (and some have already gone), but the school's new athletic building will be around for years and years.

The building, which stands near the Clarkston High School football field, was and still is being funded through donations and fund-raisers collected by the Clarkston Athletic Boosters.

Junior high and high school athletes (football, soccer, track) use the building. There are no lockers in the building but teams (home and visitors) use the covered area for pre-game, halftime, and post-game needs. The building also contains rooms for officials and a trainer.

ate) and 67-year-old partner Al Widing Sr. (of Mio) finish 18th out of 33 teams at the Weyerhaeuser AuSable River Canoe Marathon.

AUGUST 19

Race car driver Dave Simko, an Independence Township resident, finishes six times in the top 10 in his first 15 starts in the Automobile Race Car Association Supercar Series.

Rollerskater Christie Williams, a freshman at Clarkston Junior High, qualifies for the Junior Olympic national finals at California in September.

SEPTEMBER 2

Pepsi, Kroger's and other local merchants help the Clarkston Athletic Boosters with fund-raising by selling 10,000 cases of Pepsi products at the Kroger store on Dixie Highway in Independence Township.

Depot Park in Clarkston is a detour for hundreds of bicyclist participating in the Detroit Free Press' Michigander bicycle race.

SEPTEMBER 9

Mike Turk, of Independence Township, is selected as an All-American as he and his Nothdurft teammates win the American Softball Association Masters 35-and-over slow-pitch national championship held in Troy and Rochester. Local team Smith's Disposal also competed in the tournament, winning one of three games.

SEPTEMBER 16

Clarkston 5-10 senior Alyson McChesney scores 37 points against Grand Blanc to break the single-game scoring record for Wolf girls' basketball.

SEPTEMBER 30

Clarkston's varsity boys' soccer team blanks three straight opponents. Goalkeeper Nathan Forbes is credited with all three shutouts.

OCTOBER 7

Clarkston's pom pon squad is selected as the "best all around" squad at the National Cheerleader Association camp at Oakland University.

OCTOBER 14

Three days after winning the overall GOAL championship, the Clarkston varsity boys' golf team fails to qualify for the state tournament by finishing sixth at regionals.

OCTOBER 21

In a battle for the GOAL football championship, Pontiac Northern defeats Clarkston, 24-7. The homecoming loss for the Wolves ended a four-game winning streak.

Both the Clarkston boys' and girls' cross-country teams finish second in the GOAL.

OCTOBER 28

Clarkston's varsity boys' soccer team wins its second straight district title; then it is one of only eight teams left in the state, reaching the regional finals.

NOVEMBER 4

Clarkston Junior High edges arch-rival Sashabaw Junior High, 22-19, in the last ninth-grade football game played between the two schools (there will be one ninth-grade team starting next season). Clarkston finishes the 23-year-old series with a 25-19-2 advantage.

NOVEMBER 11

A 60-25 victory over Lake Orion clinches a first-ever outright GOAL championship for the Clarkston varsity girls' basketball team.

Cross-country runner Leah Scharl, a sophomore, becomes an all-stater by finishing 22nd overall at the state finals.

Sanders' Martial Arts students earn 71 trophies in two karate competitions.

NOVEMBER 18

Alyson McChesney, a Clarkston senior, signs her letter of intent to play basketball next year at Oakland University.

Steve Howe, a Clarkston graduate, is again reinstated into Major League Baseball. Howe, a New York Yankee, had previously been suspended by then-commissioner Fay Vincent following the pitcher's seventh incident related to alcohol or other drugs.

NOVEMBER 25

Clarkston varsity girls' basketball team, which hasn't won a district title since 1975, loses to Lapeer East, 63-56, in the finals.

Dugan Fife, former Clarkston all-state basketball and football player, scores five points for the University of Michigan in a 103-83 victory over the Russian national team at The Palace.

DECEMBER 9

For the first time in seven years, the Clarkston JV cheerleading squad wins a trophy, placing seventh out of 19 teams at the 20th annual Oakland-Macomb Cheer Competition.

DECEMBER 23

Detroit Lion guard Ken Dallafior, an Independence Township resident, is chosen as the Lions' 1992 recipient of the Ed Block Memorial Courage Award.

Two-time defending champion Clarkston finishes second to Troy at the 43-team Oakland County wrestling meet.

Wrestlers open dual season with easy wins

BY JAMES GIBOWSKI
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Clarkston's varsity wrestling team is usually one of the strongest teams at an invitational but the Wolves feel even stronger at a dual meet.

The Wolves, who recently finished second (to Troy) at the 43-team Oakland County Meet, easily won their first two dual meets of the season Dec. 22 at Troy Athens against two teams which finished in the top 10 at that county meet.

Clarkston, with the help of six pins, topped Athens 44-23 (Athens finished eighth at the county meet). Then the Wolves, with the help of four wins by voids, crushed Oak Park 50-21 (Oak Park finished fifth at the county meet).

"Everybody that wrestled did a good job. It was one of those meets that help show our depth," said Clarkston coach Mike DeGain.

And the entire depth of Clarkston wasn't on the mats, with two of the top Wolves out with injuries (Corey Grant and Jason Roughton).

"I was worried because some guys were sitting out. So I'm happy with the results," said DeGain.

The six Wolves who pinned Athens' wrestlers were: Brett Walter (119) against Jesse Cacchini at 1:53, Armin Michelsen (135) against Gary Eberhard at 1:50, Jerry Anderson (140) against Jacques Rapchick at 4:54, P.J. Vandermeer (160) against Ed Masters at 3:41, Brett Hummel (171) against Jeremy Voeltz at 1:53, Brett Rebb (189) against Larry Wei at 5:32.

Two Wolves on major decisions:

Chad Auten (112) 19-9 over Brian Beauchamp and Frank Lafferty (145) 17-4 over Tim Hannick.

The five Athens wrestlers who won were: Jason Messer (103) pinned Phil Cuthbertson at 40 seconds, Sean Francis (125) on a void, Jay Reynolds (130) 12-7 over Jesse Laycock, Tom Van Smaeys (152) 6-4 over Jack Dyer, Dave Feldman (hvt.) 18-1 technical fall over Steve Hunkele.

In Clarkston's victory over Oak Park, Auten was the only Wolf to win on a pin. The freshman stopped Mark McCleskey at the 1:24 mark.

Wolves who won on decisions were: Walter 6-2 over Chico Johnson, Laycock 9-2 over Darryl Taylor, Vandermeer 20-8 over Robert Embree, Hunkele 14-2 over Brett Cason.

Cagers' 'morale booster' ruins Athens' early lead

BY JAMES GIBOWSKI
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Their top-scorer was not in but the Wolves were still not out of the game, as host Clarkston topped Troy Athens, 56-48, in non-league action Dec. 22.

Nick Shires, who has been averaging about 17 points a game for the Wolves, left the game in second quarter with a sprained ankle.

"After we lost him in the second quarter, I thought 'man, it's going to be a long night,'" said Clarkston coach Dan Fife about Shires, who finished with seven points in his stint.

The Wolves were down 15-13 at the end of the first quarter and 27-26 at the half but a 16-11 third quarter Clarkston advantage and 13-11 fourth quarter sealed the victory, which improved the Wolves' record to 3-2.

"Just about everybody contributed," said Fife. "It was a big win, a morale booster. It's good to go into Christmas with a 3-2 record. We could have easily been 1-4."

Matt Underwood, who came off the bench in the previous game to score 18 points (including the game-tying basket and game-winning free-throw against Troy), scored a game-high 24 points. Underwood sank three 3-pointers and was 5-of-7 from the free-throw line.

In addition to Underwood and Shires, five other Wolves scored. Chris Combs netted eight points, Jeremy Fife seven, Brad Agar six and Pat Mulligan and John Weeks each had two.

Athens, 3-2, was led by Steve Dady with 12, Adam Maniapane with 11 and Phil Thomas with 10.

Realtor finds homes for 'goldies'

BY CURT MCALLISTER
Clarkston News Associate Editor

Most people consider themselves dog lovers, but very few go to the lengths to help man's best friend as does Laura Culp.

For the past eight years, this Independence Township resident has been in the business of finding homes for wayward golden retrievers. Culp serves as rescue committee director for the Fort Detroit Golden Retriever Rescue Service.

Formerly of Dearborn, Culp has helped the organization since 1990. She was in a similar organization in Raleigh, N.C., six years prior.

Upon returning to Michigan two years ago, Culp discovered that a statewide rescue service had formed in southeastern Michigan, and she immediately joined its ranks.

Resembling an adoption service, the Fort Detroit rescue service finds homes for golden retrievers in need. Fifty percent of the dogs are usually those given up by their owners, while the other half come via vet and animal shelter referrals.

Culp says they've saved several "goldies" from certain death.

"When we hear that a golden retriever is facing euthanasia at a shelter, we'll adopt the dog ourselves and hold it until we can find suitable owners," said Culp, a real estate sales person with Max Broock Realtors, Inc., Clarkston.

Over the past two years, Culp said the rescue service has found homes for nearly 150 dogs. Since taking up this cause eight years ago, she's fostered 52 golden retrievers in her Raleigh and Clarkston-area homes.

Culp said she fell in love with the breed for the same reasons so many people buy them — they're considered the ultimate family dog. However, this reputation has its drawbacks, she said.

"Because of their reputation as a family dog, retrievers are often purchased on impulse," Culp said. "After a few months, owners might find that the dog has grown too big, knocks down small children or is too excitable.

"They give up on the dog because they don't understand them or don't have the time to train them," Culp added.

Regrettably, Culp said the biggest referral period for their organization usually arrives six months to a year after Christmas, when impulse buying is at its peak.

According to Culp, there are a lot of misconceptions about golden retrievers. She says they have to be exposed to both indoor and outdoor environments equally.

"Goldies aren't meant to be outdoor dogs, despite the fact that they're sporting dogs," she said. "They do need a lot of exercise, like walks and runs, but they need human companionship even more."

FOR the past two years, Laura Culp has helped the Fort Detroit Golden Retriever

As a foster owner, Culp is responsible for interviewing and approving appropriate owners for each homeless dog.

This process includes: a phone interview, a visitation where the applicants can interact with the dog and a two-week trial period with the retriever. If the prospective owners want the dog, they must pay a donation of $150, which covers: grooming, a spaying or neutering charge, up-to-date shots, heartworm preventative medicine and fostering time.

Since its formation, Culp says Fort Detroit has less than a 1 percent return rate of adopted dogs.

She considers a successful adoption as the most gratifying part of her service.

"When the right match is made, it's almost magical," she said. "Believe me, the dog knows if the chemistry is there or not."

Culp says that the age of most of these homeless retrievers can range between three months and 10 years. Even though they're not puppies anymore, she said adult dogs definitely have their advantages.

"The perks of buying an adult dog is that it's housebroken and past the chewing stage," she said. "And, in most cases, a lot of people don't have time for that developmental first year.

"In our home, however, we try to work with the dogs in terms of housetraining and obedience," she said. "Our goal is to make them good canine citizens."

Applied academics makes sense of math, physics

American Education

BY JULIE CAMPE
Clarkston News Editor

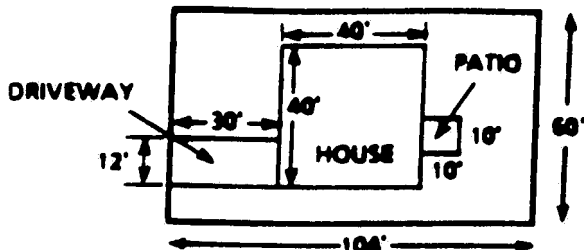

For two teachers at the Oakland Technical Center-Northwest, applied academics not only is enjoyable to teach, it also works.

Dave Johnson, the applied math instructor at the tech. center on Big Lake Road, puts it this way: "I've been teaching math for five years. I've been teaching students math the past four."

The past four years, he has taught applied math at the tech. center. His curriculum, developed by a non-profit occupational research and development agency (Center for Occupational Research and Development, Waco, Texas), covers abstract theory side-by-side with the concrete use of that theory.

As in the other applied academics classes at the tech. center, the pupils work in small groups on real-world lab problems.

For instance, here's one problem the students solved. "It's time to fertilize your lawn with your new fertilizer spreader. The bag of fertilizer you've bought says it will cover 5,000 feet. Below is a sketch of your house lot, showing the house, patio and driveway — areas that won't be fertilized. Using the sketch, determine if you have enough fertilizer to apply to your lot at the recommended rate."

(The solution requires finding the total lot area and subtracting the area not to be fertilized. The remaining area to be fertilized equals 4,180 square feet — so they have enough fertilizer.)

Other labs cover similar real problems and often coincide with the students' chosen field of study. For instance, a lab on converting cups to ounces would be useful to a culinary arts student, while a pressure lab in the principles of technology class might be helpful to an automotive student.

The idea behind applied academics follows an old proverb, said Johnson, quoting: "Tell me, I forget. Show me, I remember. Involve me, I understand."

"That's what this is all about," said Johnson, who admitted that the curriculum is a lot of work for the teacher. Lab preparation and supervision are the biggest challenges, he said.

But it's the best way for the majority of pupils to learn, he said.

"Here for too many years, students could skate by and get their diploma," he said, noting that the students didn't remember much of what they'd learned and many performed poorly on standardized tests.

"The kids saw no meaning in this. They just wanted to get the grade, get the credit and graduate. ... Mathematics has traditionally been a filter, keeping kids out. Applied math tries to change the metaphor. Instead of being a filter, it becomes a pump."

The curriculum was designed as a response to the work world. Jobs changed and required "head skills" as well as "hand skills," both of which are taught in applied academic courses, he said.

A year after the curriculum was introduced at the tech. center, the Michigan's educational assessment tests were changed in the area of mathematics and included critical thinking — which is taught in applied math.

The result: the applied math students performed as well (or better) than pupils in advanced placement math classes.

"You can't cram for critical thinking," said Johnson. "It's a process that has to be developed over a year or two."

Another by-product of the class: teamwork.

"Employers want people who can work together. The number one reason people get fired from their work is not because they don't have the skills to do their jobs. It's because they can't get along with their coworkers," he said.

Jeff Fagan, in his fourth year as the instructor for principles of technology — an applied physics class — said critical thinking skills are what sets his students apart from the students of the past.

"You need learners in today's workforce because technology changes rapidly," he said. "You need workers who can think because they can help you."

And people who can think and who have technical skills are in short supply, he said.

"College prep. is outdated," he said, explaining that many students with a four-year college degree must go to a two-year technical school or college afterward to gain specialized training, so they can be more marketable in the the workforce.

The technical field is booming, he said.

"We live in the most technological country in the world, and the vast majority of our citizens don't have any idea how things work," he said.

In Fagan's class, students learn just that. His classroom is stocked with $50,000 in equipment, from pressure gauges and air motors to lasers, transducers, voltmeters, accelerometers and more.

"It's complicated stuff," said Fagan.

Students use algebra, geometry and even statistics and probability in some of the labs — and they understand it, said Fagan.

And when the students finish the course, they're immediately marketable for some jobs. And with a few years in a technical school or community college, they'll be in high demand, he said.

"It's just getting the message out to students. There's dozens of kids who should be out here, but they're not," he said.

Honored for attitude

Evelyn Newton

Evelyn Newton was recognized at the North Oakland Medical Center, Pontiac, employee holiday dinner for her outstanding guest relations attributes.

Newton, a 31-year employee in the hospital patient accounts department, briefly retired in April 1985 when she took a 7,000-mile trip. She came back to the hospital she calls "like home" in June 1985. In accepting recognition, Newton said she "loves working with people, especially her co-workers."

Evelyn and her husband reside in the Clarkston area. Hospital employees annually vote on the employee who exemplifies caring, a positive attitude, good customer relations, attendance and one who participates in hospital activities.

Christmas trees can be recycled

Recycling today could preserve holiday traditions for tomorrow.

That's the message the Oakland County Parks sends this season. Christmas trees will be accepted for recycling on weekends, Jan. 2-3 and Jan. 9-10, at nine Oakland County parks. Drop-off times are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. There is no charge to participate.

New this year, the Oakland County Parks will accept roping and wreaths. However, all metal materials must be removed. Plastic used to transport trees must be removed at the recycling sites.

Recycled trees are chipped for use on park trails and as mulch and compost. The recycling program was developed in response to public awareness of the burden Christmas trees place on landfills.

For their conservation efforts, recyclers will be given complimentary passes to the Independence Oaks Nature Center's Earth Fair in April. There, they can obtain a free pine seedling, compliments of the Hoo Hoo Club of Detroit, a lumber industry organization.

Independence Oaks is on Sashabaw Road, 2 1/2 miles north of I-75, Independence Township.

FINANCE CONTINGENCY CLAUSE

Ron Rodda
Sales Manager
"Let's discuss your Career in Real Estate Sales"

RELO

QUESTION: I want to be sure I can get the necessary financing before going ahead with my home purchase. How can I handle this?

ANSWER: The answer is in a contingent offer and is common. You can agree to purchase the house contingent upon your obtaining a specified amount of financing on specified terms.

You will normally be asked to meet the terms or eliminate it within a relatively short period of time. If the seller grants you thirty days to obtain a mortgage commitment and you can't obtain it, the contingency may require you to decide between purchasing the property for cash or voiding the transaction.

FINANCE CONTINGENCY clauses are common in purchase and sales agreements.

VINCE LICATA, principal at Clarkston Junior High, got a big surprise Dec. 22 when he opened his office door and saw the new decor. Linda Betz, a first-year para-professional at CJHS and Licata's Secret Santa, decorated the office with toilet paper and confetti, then placed a snowman in Licata's chair. "It came as a complete surprise," said Licata, "I had no idea it was her." "Now you know what is behind that pretty smile of hers," said Vice Principal Jan Gabler. Licata laughed and said, "Yeah, a devious mind." (Photo by Catherine Passmore)

Recipe Corner

Savory muffins

Do you want to rekindle the summer feeling now that we are in the midst of winter? You may want to try these savory zucchini muffins. The recipe comes from Weight Watchers Group, Inc.

SAVORY ZUCCHINI MUFFINS

Makes 12 muffins

- 1 1/2 cups shredded zucchini
- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 3/4 cup less 1 tablespoon whole wheat flour
- 3/4 ounce reduced-fat Cheddar cheese, shredded
- 2 tablespoons granulated sugar
- 2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup plain low-fat yogurt
- 2 eggs
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 teaspoon dried finest herbes

1. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In center of kitchen towel arrange zucchini; gather corners of towel to enclose zucchini and squeeze to remove excess liquid.

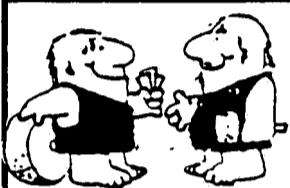

2. In large mixing bowl combine zucchini, flours, cheese, sugar, baking powder, baking soda, pepper and salt; set aside.

3. Using a wire whisk, in small mixing bowl whisk together yogurt, eggs, oil, and finest herbes. Add yogurt mixture to flour mixture and stir until blended (don't overmix).

4. Spray 12 2 1/2-inch-diameter muffin-pan cups with no-stick cooking spray. Fill each with an equal amount of batter (each will be about 2/3 full). Bake in middle of center of oven rack for 20 minutes (until muffins are golden and toothpick inserted in center comes out dry).

5. Set pan on wire rack and let cool slightly. Invert muffins onto wire rack and let cool.

Area families needed to host foreign pupils

Foreign high school students will be arriving soon in the Clarkston area for homestays, and the sponsoring organization urgently needs a few more local host families for their second semester program.

According to Pacific Intercultural Exchange Executive Director John Doty, the students are ages 15-18, have their own spending money, are fully insured and are anxious to share their cultural experiences with their new American families.

PIE representatives match students with host families by finding common interests and lifestyles through an informal in-home meeting.

Prospective host families review student applications and select the "perfect match." As there are no "typical" host families, PIE can fit a student into just about any situation, whether it be a single parent, a childless couple, a retired couple or large family.

For the upcoming programs, PIE has students from Spain, Germany, Yugoslavia, Italy, Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, New Zealand, France and many other countries.

For more information, call 1-800-245-6232.

Annual Burning of the Greens set for Sunday

Clarkston-area residents have a final chance to sing Christmas carols and observe holiday traditions at the annual Burning of the Greens Sunday.

The Jan. 3 event at Calvary Evangelical Lutheran Church on Bluegrass Drive, Independence Township, begins with a potluck dinner at 6 p.m. and is followed by the burning of the greens at 6:45 p.m.

The event is capped off with entertainment inside the church by Surefire, which includes Kim (Reynolds) and Dennis Niec, who perform on cruise ships and in clubs; and by Project God, which includes Shawn and Heather Smith. Kim Niec and the Smiths were graduated from Clarkston High.

Area residents may drop off their dry Christmas trees anytime up until the 6:45 burning. For more information, call 625-3288.

How's your child doing at school? On the dean's list? In a new sorority? Captain of an intramural sports team? Let us know at The Clarkston News, and we'll put it on the Millstream page. 625-3370

Programs for kids aims to prevent head injuries

Each year, about 10,000 people in the United States sustain spinal cord injuries and another 500,000 suffer serious head injuries.

Teens and young adults are at greatest risk. These injuries are preventable. In response to this, Greenery Health Care Center in Independence Township sponsors a local closed head and spinal cord injury prevention program entitled "Think first."

The program, about 50 minutes long, is designed for junior high and high school students and is available in either classroom or assembly format.

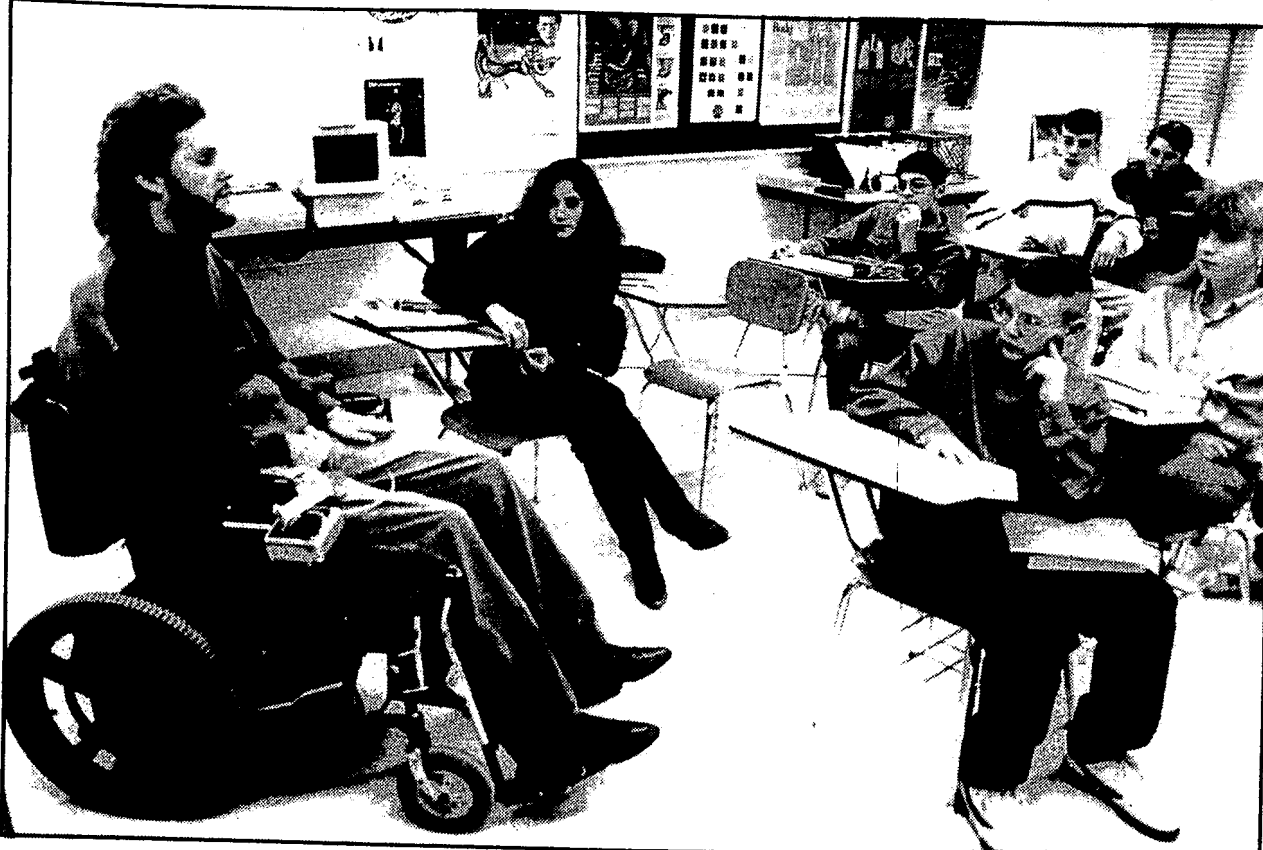

The school curriculum begins with the award-winning film "Harm's Way," followed by a brief discussion of the anatomy of the head and spinal cord. A young person with a head or spinal cord injury then speaks frankly with students about how his or her life has been affected by the injury. Prevention tips are emphasized throughout the program.

The program's underlying assumptions are that teens often do not listen to adults giving them safety messages, and the injury-producing, high-risk behaviors are strongly affected by peer pressure. Greenery's program tries to affect attitudes and high-risk activities of the student through peer-to-peer safety education.

"Think First" was initiated in the Clarkston area this fall. The program has been presented to students at Clarkston High School and both junior highs.

This program is a community service; there is no cost to schools or other groups. If interested in scheduling a "Think First" presentation or for more information, please call Mary Jane Swanson or Colette McLachlin at 674-0903.

"It could be a heart attack!"

Heart disease is the leading cause of death in America. Every day, 1,500 Americans die of a heart attack. Many die because they did not seek help soon enough. Chest pain is the primary early warning sign that a heart attack is imminent. That's why North Oakland Medical Center established the Chest Pain Emergency Center.

If you come into our center with chest pain, you will receive treatment immediately, and we have specific protocols for heart attacks. Our full-time, dedicated emergency physicians and nurses have specialty training in the latest life-saving technology.

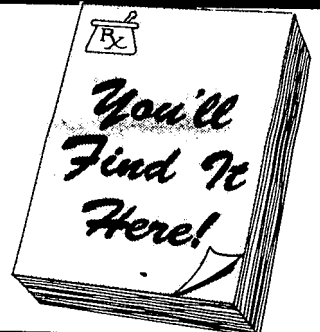

We will be here for you when you or a loved one is in a crisis. That's why our Chest Pain Emergency Team is on-site, every day, 24 hours a day.

Chest pain can be serious. SO, refer all chest pain experiences to the Chest Pain Emergency Center at North Oakland Medical Center.

ANDREW SOKOLNICKI, 10, has fun while working on his own derby car. The Derby Car Club involves more than the children — each child comes with a parent, and they work together on the car. Andrew's sister and parents all take part in the club.

JOB CATINELLA (left), 10; his friend Jonathan Adams, 8 1/2; and Job's dad, Nick, all work on a derby car. The Derby Car Club is sponsored by the Northwest Oakland Community Services and Springfield Parks and Recreation Commission.

KRISTY SOKOLNICKI, 12, of Springfield Township and her mother, Peg Sokolnicki, work together to build a derby car. The Sokolnickis are a part of the Derby Car Club, which meets the third Saturday of each month at the Hart Community Center near the Mill Pond in downtown Davisburg. (Photos by Catherine Passmore)
