BY CURT MCALLISTER Clarkston News Associate Editor

Despite administrative recommendations to cut the 1993-94 budget by $637,000 and raise the pay-to-play fee to $140 per sport, the Clarkston school board has opted to sit and wait.

On Monday, the board of education collectively decided to await final word from Lansing before enacting, cuts from the district's $31.9 million operating budget. "It's like being between a rock and a hard place," said board President Joseph Helpern. "We'd hate to cut funding for a program that may have been saved by just waiting.'

Coming into the meeting, the administration had recommended that the board cut $637,000 from an already prioritized "cut list," approved a couple of months ago. Totaling $1.7 million, this list entails 60 items, which touches a variety of district programs, activities and operations.

The list was created to help prepare the district for the possibility of the state Legislature severing $500,0000 to $1.1 million in state aid to Clarkston.

In the past, the state has covered 95 percent of the costs associated with Michigan school employees' Social Security and retirement benefits, but that appears to be coming to an end.

The administrations' proposal of cutting $637,000 would have included the first 33 items of the original 60item list. Among these cuts, is a loss of $200,000 from the athletic department.

Woman raped in own home

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE Clarkston News Staff Writer

A 41-year-old Independence Township woman was raped in her home early Aug. 8.

A man out on bond awaiting trial for an unrelated scx crime was charged with the crime.

Delbert Nelson Breeding, 30, also of Independence Township, was arraigned in 52nd District Court Aug. 9. Judge Gerald McNally set bond at $600,000, and Breeding remains in Oakland County Jail. His preliminary exam was set for 9:30 a.m. Aug. 13 before McNally.

Breeding was arrested in the area of Oak Park Drive and Maybee Road, where the crime took place.

According to Lt. John Taylor of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department, the woman woke up around 3 a.m. to use the bathroom and was confronted in the the hallway of her house by the man. The man apparently entered the house through a bathroom window, after removing the

They struggled, and the woman managed to g butcher knife, which she used to cut her attacker.

The man took the knife from the woman, sexually assaulted her, and then left the scene.

The woman was treated and released from St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, Pontiac.

When police arrested Breeding, he had fresh scratch marks on his body and a cut on his hand, said Taylor. Neither the woman nor the man sustained any serious physical injuries.

Breeding was out on bond in connection with a sexual crime that allegedly was committed against a boy in Independence Township in July 1992.

Breeding, who attended Clarkston schools, was described by a former classmate as quiet and shy.

"You wouldn't think he'd harm a fly," said Don Rush, who knew Breeding in elementary and junior high schools. "I was shocked to see him on TV."

A neighbor of 26 years said Breeding had a rough upbringing.

"It's a sad situation," she said. "I always felt it was an accident waiting to happen."

Schools hold off on budget cuts, play-to-pay hike

(SCHOOLS, from previous page) operations, said the $637,000 in proposed cuts represents the best-case scenario for the district.

"From what I've been told, the state House's (of Representatives) plan would mean that Clarkston would have to assume responsibility for $500,000 of previously paid state aid," Lenar said. "On the other hand, the state Senate's version of this plan would have us paying $1.1 million, so an eventual compromise will land us somewhere between those two numbers."

Coupled with the early estimate of $500,000 in losses from the House's plan, Lenar said the district will also lose about $100,000 in tax dollars this year. These losses represent the sum total of state equalized value (SEV) tax appeals which went in favor of the district's numerous property owners, either through the Board of Appeals or the Michigan Tax Tribunal, Lenar said the passage of the proposed cut package would help the district prepare for the inevitable, but a few board members didn't agree.

Trustee Bill Craig discussed the possibility of dipping into the district's $1.1 million fund equity account to help offset any potential damages. The fund equity aceount is considered the district's "rainy day fund."

Trustee Janet Thomas opposed this suggestion, saying an exhausted account would offer little assistance for the district if immediate needs happen to crop up in the future.

Helpern concurred.

"This has become a waiting game," he said. "I'd be hesitant to move on or adjust any of these shortfalls with fund equity money, especially on such premature projections."

Thomas suggested that the items on the list be considered for removal, especially the ones affecting students directly, such as athletics, middle school intramurals and co-curricular activities.

Superintendent Gary Haner warned against the board "piecemealing" the list at this time, with the future still uncertain. If the $637,000 cut package were approved, he added, and the district wasn't made to pay as much as early projected, then some of the items could be re-considered for reinstatement.

Despite the board's apprehension of cutting $637,000 from the budget, it did unanimously vote to raise the payto-play fee to $80 later in the meeting. The $5 increase represents inflationary costs, district officials said.

However, this small hike doesn't eliminate the possibility that the fee could eventually be set at $140. Lenar said the administration will be satisfied to keep the rate at $80 if the district is ordered to pay less than $500,000 per year to the state. But if this amount exceeds $500,000, the

School board recalls seven employees

Seven employees, originally laid off, have been called back to work by Clarkston Community Schools.

On Aug. 9, the school board unanimoulsy approved the full or partial recall of these workers. The recall of four teachers is due to a change in the anticipated budget reductions from the state, school officials said.

Teachers Heather Smith and Hanan Spencer will be recalled to full duty, while Lynda Faught and Mary Reed return to a partial work schedule.

At the Oakland Technical Center, three paraprofessionals will be recalled to work one-half time positions. They include: Jim Bohl, machine technology program; Denise Coben, landscape design program; and Dee Coleman, culinary arts program.

District officials said these part-time schedules are necessary to decrease funding for support personnel from the Oakland Intermediate School District budget.

recommendation of $140 will stand.

Even more perilous, Lenar added, is if the district is somehow socked with paying at least $1 million per year to the state. He said the recommended fee per sport would then jump to $280 per sport, with no immediate plans for multiple-sport or multiple-athlete families receiving discounts.

The board agreed to continue discussing the topics of budgetary cuts and its pay-to-play system at subsequent board meetings, until the state Legislature makes a decision.

Adult care home gets final OK from split board

BY CURT MCALLISTER Clarkston News Associate Editor

A long, drawn-out battle over the right to open a foster care home on Eston Road finally ended last week.

The Independence Township Board voted 4-3 to rezone a single-family parcel at 8541 N. Eston Road to planned unit development (PUD), making way for a group care home at the site.

Clerk Joan McCrary and trustees Bruce Mercado, Mel Vaara and Daniel Travis voted in favor of the motion. Supervisor Dale Stuart, Treasurer John Lutz and Trustee Jeffrey McGee voted against the proposal's adoption.

A PUD is a rezoning tied to a specific site plan. In this case, the approval means "Adultcare of Independence Township" will occupy the 61-year-old, 5,180-square-foot residence presently on the site. Located on the shores of Walters Lake, north of Clarkston Road, this building was originally the Sunny Beach Club House. As an adult care foster home, it can house 20 senior citizens and up to five caregivers at a time. The facility will be operated by Jeanette Reichner, who also runs a six-resident foster care home on Whipple Lake Road.

Upon the recommendation of building department Director Beverly McElmeel, Supervisor Dale Stuart urged the board to send the proposal back to the planning commission to clear up various concerns.

These concerns included: parking and signage, location of perimeter fencing, the policing of the property's lake lot and the possible asphalting of the facility's loop drive.

"I just don't feel comfortable, at this point, to make a final decision," Stuart said.

Lutz agreed, saying he still wasn't convinced that the township needed another adult foster care home. Lutz, who lives near the site, said Independence already has 21 similar facilities, which still have vacancies.

McCrary argued that the township and the planning commission had already addressed the site's major points of concern at previous meetings.

"We've already dealt with parking, perimeter fencing and prohibiting occupants and their visitors from the lake lot," she said. "I don't want to see us going through these matters again once a month."

Mercado concurred.

"I don't think it's fair to continually deny this proposal for every little concern that arises," he said.

Tom Bullen, attorney for Reichner, said it was unfair that some officials keep bringing up a list of new concerns every time the matter is brought before the board. He said that $20,000 had already been put into the project and that further delay could hurt his client's chances of buying the property. "The bottom line is that this is a good project," Bullen said. "It's going to serve 20 senior citizens at good rates.'

Bullen also told the board to ignore the concerns of the residents, who he said were only looking out for their own best interests.

ana in the second as a month of the second second

The Clarkston (Mich.) News Wed., Aug. THE DES BURNSHIE CHRACT.

Eston Road-area residents packed the meeting, as they've been doing for the past year, when the project first surfaced. About 30 citizens attended this meeting, and they remained adamant about keeping this type of facility out of their neighborhood.

"If the petitioner wants to use the building for six people, that's fine," said Mary Proctor. "But 20 people and the added traffic generation will deteriorate the buildings and property values in the area."

Numerous other residents spoke on similar concerns, but the board still granted second-reading approval.

Overall, this approval was contingent on a few conditions. They included: that no one be allowed to use the beach and upland lake lot areas and that the homeowners' association have first right of refusal if the property is sold in the future.

substitutes from $57 to $59.50.

Voting to deny the raise were President Joseph Helpern, Vice President Tom Howard, Treasurer Bill McGregor and trustees Bill Craig and Kurt Karlstrom. Secretary Sheila Hughes and Trustee Janet Thomas voted in favor of the hike.

The administration had proposed the increase, so Clarkston could stay competitive with other districts in northern Oakland County. Presently, Clarkston's pay rate lags behind districts, such as Waterford, Holly and Oxford.

Superintendent Gary Haner said the increase would make Clarkston more desirable to prospective substitute teachers, who are looking for work in this part of the county.

However, a majority of the board saw the denial as an opportunity to sever added expenses on an already uncertain budget for the 1993-94 school year.

Fossil business benefits from dinosaur-mania

BY CURT MCALLISTER Clarkston News Associate Editor

It appears that director Steven Spielberg and Universal Pictures aren't the only ones cashing in on the popularity of the blockbuster hit "Jurassic Park."

A local business has also found itself at the center of dino-mania. Since the movie's debut, the owners of the FredRock fossil and mineral store on White Lake Road, Independence Township, have seen a rise in business.

"It really started when the movie came out in Clarkston," said co-owner Donna Miller. "It seemed to pique the interest of a lot of people. "Matter of a fact, we actually closed the store down early, so we could see it ourselves," she added. Since that time, a lot of people have visited the store to check out its fossils, minerals and natural jewelry.

of millions of years.

Donna said the "younger" pieces of amber are actually what scientists are using for DNA research today. She said there's a good chance to find tissue samples in pieces about 25 million years old, whereas older pieces depicted in the movie are near remote.

Dinosaurs had long but died out about 25 million years ago, Donna said. But it's a good chance that some of these embedded insects could contain the blood of small, ancient horses or sabertooth tigers. Store founder Fred Miller said he gets his pieces from Kenya, but the Baltic states represent the biggest deposits in the world. Smaller deposits have even been found in parts of New Jersey and Virgina, Donna added. The couple also report that fossilized dinosaur bone fragments are hot sellers in their store. FredRock offers several drawers full of bones from various dinosaurs including hadrosaurs and triceratops.

"The kids really love looking at these bones," Donna said. "They'll compare the fragments to the charts we have and try to figure out what part of the dinosaur it came from. I'm astonished at how good some are at actually locating their origins."

The Millers say that kids are their favorite customers, especially school classes that visit on field trips. 'You'd be surprised at how quiet a group of elementary children can get when you're talking to them about dinosaurs," she said. "Like most people, they're amazed that these creatures actually walked the earth. They just want to learn more."

"It's just our little contribution toward community service," Fred added, smiling.

Son of Clarkston physician murdered in Denver

The 30-year-old son of an area physician was murdered July 23 in Denver near his home.

Thomas Hollar and his wife, Christina, 27, were arriving home after attending a Denver Rockies game July 23 when two men attacked them and demanded their money around 12:55 a.m.

They forced Hollar out of his car, shot him twice, then abducted and beat his wife.

She is out of intensive care at Denver General Hospital with facial cuts, bruises and broken bones.

Hollar is the son of physician Nedra Downing of Clarkston and dentist Edward Hollar of Montrose. He is survived by two sisters, Laura Kovalcik and Margaret Hollar, D.O., and step-father, Howard Downing Jr. of Security First Insurance in Flint.

Two arrests have been made in the murder assault. Suspects have been linked to a Denver gang. The two had been seen in the area prior to the killing on several occasions and were seen casing the parking lot the night of the killing. They were dressed in gang clothes: sagging tan trousers with black belts. They also used gang slang. Hollar and his wife promoted concerts and rock

I could only smile when looking at photos from a week in Vermont with some of my siblings and their children.

Looking at the pictures made me remember some of the conversations — in particular, between my sister Valerie and her children.

For instance, her two kids had to share a room, since three people were visiting for a week. That gave 7-year-old Ursula a chance to share the ghost stories she had heard the week before on an overnight camping trip. The trouble was that Ursula is a very good storyteller, and 2-year-old Nicky believed every word.

Once, at bedtime, when the two repeatedly got out of bed, saying they were afraid, I could see Valerie nearing the end of her rope on this tiring day.

Finally, she stood up and said, "I told you before, there's nothing in your bedroom. Now what's the only thing you should be afraid of?"

Ursula answered right away, "You!" and ran to the bedroom.

Nicky, however, remained standing in the middle of the living room and answered hesitantly, "Ghosts?"

Then there was the visit to the Von Trapp Family lodge. Ursula, it seems, had learned all of the songs from "A Sound of Music" at school and had watched the movie many times.

She was enchanted with her visit and was pleased as punch with the "Sound of Music" soundtrack cassette tape her mother bought for her.

On the long drive home, Ursula was in her own world, singing song after song, in a sweet soprano voice, to the delight of the entire carload.

Once in a while, every 10 minutes or so, she would ask her mother a question.

"You mean that wasn't really Maria in the movie?" she asked Valerie.

"No, it was an actress named Julie Andrews," Valerie answered.

"So Maria didn't really look like that?"

"Nope," answered her mother.

Ursula did some more singing and thought about this.

"But did the Von Trapp Family Singers know those songs?" she asked.

"Maybe," answered Valerie.

Then Ursula was off in her own world again ----for a short time.

"What happened to the family?"

Valerie, who had read, a plaque giving a brief history of the family and lodge in Vermont, explained that Maria had died and that one of the boys was in charge of the lodge.

"How did Maria die?" asked Ursula.

"I don't know," said Valerie.

"Which boy is in charge of the lodge?"

Right to property clear and simple

Wild ideas about forcing an area doctor to give his property to the community rather than develop it over the next decade or so is an opportunity to reflect on this nation's laws.

It's clear and simple. Dr. O'Neill should be allowed to do with his property whatever he wants, within the boundaries of the law — just as any other homeowner is allowed to use his property within the confines of the law.

This nation operates as a democracy, with special protections for the rights of the individual. That includes the right to own property and the right to use or not use property.

This nation also is governed by laws, rather than by the whim of a person or people. Those laws apply to everyone in the same way. They protect the weak from the powerful — and the powerful from the weak.

Therefore, if a person objects to a proposal to use land, he or she should base the objections on legal grounds, not wishes and whims. meeting wasn't required by any law, nor by any outcry from the people.

Rather, board members opted to hold an extra three-hour meeting to give residents a chance to sit in on the decision-making process. We applaud that.

The hearing expressly invited residents' opinions, which they're welcome to give at any regularly scheduled board meeting, as well. (Clarkston schools, Springfield Township and the City of Clarkston also have public comment portions during their meetings.)

A fire hall, which probably will cost over $1 million, is a big expenditure. The officials recognized that and recognized that people don't want to spend more money but do want the best protection possible from the fire department.

This meeting — and the 7,000 letters mailed to property owners announcing it — was an admirable attempt to involve the people in an issue that will affect their safety as well as their pocketbooks.

Though Monday night's meeting lasted nearly three hours and some were disappointed that no concrete plans were presented, we know that the whole point was to let residents in on the decisionmaking. And that's an important step — just consider the alternative.

Sure, it takes longer. And the board won't act on it again until September, so it'll take longer still. But that very time lag allows even more comment — from those who couldn't attend the meeting, for instance.

That extra public meeting was an extra boon to the public's right to know what goes on in the community.

Well done, board members.

Fascinating reading

On the walls in our Oxford office are six framed old Oxford newspapers. Two are of The Oxford Leader, one when it was The Oxford Intruder. A contest brought the name change in 1898.

These newspapers are there only partly because they are part of the history of newspapers in Oxford. Another reason is because I love reading old newspapers.

In the 1800s and early in this century editors wrote very vividly. Like, people were "slaughtered" when the electric train hit their horse and buggy. Today it's "killed in a crash." Editors called competitors names, never fearing lawsuits. And, they printed gossip. This from the April, 1879 Oakland Co. Standard, published in Oxford: "We saw an Oxford man, who stands high in society, coming out of a house not a church at Pontiac a few days since. He requested us to keep dark." look at some old Pontiac Gazettes. 1888 copies.

They, like most newspapers of that day, had correspondents in various communities. They had Orion Opinion, Oxford Oracle, Clarkston Chronicles and Addison Advance among others. Clever names, eh? The Opinion had an item about a 100-year-old woman singing at the Lake Orion Methodist Church. The Advance: "Addison now contains 400 voters." "Leonard's sawmill cut 2 million feet of lumber a year. It will take 10 years to close out lumber trade in that section."

"I don't know ... Richard, maybe." "There was no Richard — which one, Mom?" "I don't know."

Ursula was a little disappointed that her mother couldn't remember the name. But she sang some more, then paused.

"What are the rest of the children doing?" she asked.

"Well, a few of the girls are teachers or married to teachers, and one died during childbirth —" "One died? Oh, no! Which one?" asked Ursula. "I'm not sure ... Greta maybe?"

"Oh, no! Not Greta ---"

Her mother explained that 20 years ago, the medical field didn't know as much about difficult births as they do today.

"But poor Greta," said Ursula, who could not sing for a short time after this news.

While my photographs show smiling relatives, they don't reveal the conversations surrounding those moments. I guess that's what memories are for ... Interesting to me, The Standard and The Bee, another Oxford paper, started the same month of 1879.

I went to another good funeral Monday night. It seems to be an oxymoron to say that, but it was a wonderful funeral.

It was for a man in our church, Doug, who died at 41 after a long illness. The music was beautiful; the sermon was uplifting, and I left feeling comforted.

Going to funerals has been a part of my life since I was 6, and my vision of what they are designed to do has changed throughout the years and has finally ended up where it began.

When I was 6, my grandfather died, and my father told me he went to visit Jesus. I hoped he'd bring me back a souvenir. At the funeral home I touched him and played around the casket --- it didn't really bother me that Papa had died. I'd been told he was in Heaven and that if I were good I'd see him again. I accepted that and went on with my life.

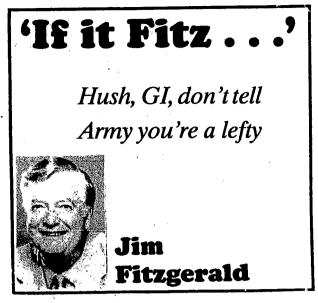

The next five funerals I went to at ages 16, 18 and 19, I bought into the train of thought that these were times to mourn. For the three funerals I attended at noticed how busty Cindy had suddenly become when we first saw her in her casket. We joked that now she wouldn't have to decide what she wanted to be when she grew up or have to make up an English Literature test she was dreading.

At Alex's funeral when we talked about him, it was never, "Oh, poor us, Alex is dead." We talked about his imitation of an orangutan, peas stuck in his teeth, the word "darlin" and the song "To All the Girls We've Loved Before."

For people who believe when you die you go to Heaven, funerals shouldn't be a time of mourning. It should be a time to be thankful for the time the person was with you on earth and to celebrate that this person has accomplished something they've worked for their entire lives — going to Heaven.

I hope when I die my surviving friends and family have a good ol' time at my funeral telling stories and singing songs. I'll have joined Cindy, Alex and Doug in that Heavenly choir and will be having a wonderful time. Maybe up there I'll be able to sing soprano.

The Clarkston (Mich.) News Wed., Aug. 11, 1993 7 A

The TV news anchor said researchers have identified a gene pattern linked to male homosexuality, "adding persuasive evidence to thetheory that the tendency to be gay can be inherited, the same as the tendency to be left-handed."

Based on my Army experience, I favor a policy that would allow left-handed men in the military, providing they don't tell anyone they're left-handed, or actually do anything left-handed, such as eat or shave.

The great majority of soldiers and sailors are righthanded. In a crowded latrine or head, with individual sinks jammed tight together, it is difficult, even dangerous, for a right-handed person to shave next to a left-handed person. National security could suffer from razor cuts.

The situation is similarly risky in mess halls, where eaters are often crowded cheek to cheek, as it were, on benches. Once an overt left elbow caused me to fork myself in the nose. My request for a Purple Heart was denied.

The key word is "overt." To protect right-handed servicemen, if a left-handed serviceman wants to openly shave left-handed, he should be required to do it off base, in the nearest town containing no military installations. And openly left-handed eaters should be forced to dine in a Chinese restaurant in China.

If two or more left-handed servicemen fell constrained to gather to talk about being left-handed, perhaps to even salute each other left-handed, a waiting period should be mandatory. They should wait until they become astronauts qualified to be sent on a one-way trip to Mars.

It isn't only the danger of forked noses and razor-slit chins, of course. It's the exposure to recruitment. Righthanded servicemen must be protected from even seeing lefthanded servicemen using left hands, or from hearing them discuss the advantages of being left-handed. Otherwise, the right-handers could be persuaded to become left-handed so they'd have an easier time scratching inside their left ear.

If I were a member orf the Senate, that's the policy I'd support - to allow left-handed men in the military just as long as they don't declare their handual orientation by statements, full left-hand use, or even one-finger gestures.

I wouldn't go as far as Sen Sam Nunn, who undoutedly would insist upon legislation banning military service by men with even a propensity to engage in left-handed acts. That would mean limiting left-handed military service to those who not only don't shave or eat left-handed, but also don't have the slightyest urge, conscious or unconscious, to do anything left-handed, not even scratch inside their left ear.

But what, you ask, is so all-fired important about banning overt left-handedness in the military. My answer is to point to what happened in the Philippines when the U.S. armed forces allowed overt heterosexuality. It causes a $68-million lawsuit!

The class-action suit contends our Navy effectively fostered and regulated an elaborate nightlife and prostitution industry that resulted in the birth of an estimated 8,600 Amerasians near the Subic Bay Naval Station. And now that the Philippine government has closed the station, and the overt heterosexual fathers have gone home, there are no longer jobs for the "hospitality women" with whom the heterosexuals were overt. The lawsuit argues the United States has a legal and moral responsibility to provide medical care and an education for the overt evidence youngsters - left behind by the overt heterosexuals. So, isn't that bad enough? As U.S. taxpayers, do you also want to be sued for $800 million because left-handed U.S. soldiers stationed in, say, Panama, recruited thousands of Panamanians into becoming left-handers who subsequently scratched themselves deaf in the left ear? Onward and Upward, and if you must be as silly as some of our senators and military leaders, please do it covertly. When such stupidity is overt, it makes me reach for my throwup pot. With both hands.

age 19, I cried more at the funeral than I had the first few days after the death. It was emotionally and physically exhausting. By the end of my sophomore year in college, I thought I knew that funerals, even if you believed the person had gone to Heaven, were times to mourn.

Then came my senior year of college when two of my best friends were killed in a car accident. I had grown up a little; I had more faith, and I returned to my childhood perspective on death and funerals.

My friend Kim's husband cannot understand how she and I can laugh and talk about Cindy and Alex's death and funerals. We came to the realization a couple years before --- when Kim's parents died and she teetered on the edge for a couple weeks --- that the world allows mourning for about a week, and then life has to go on.

We knew that laughter was the best medicine; our friends were in a better place, and we'd see them again.

She and I laughed until we cried when we

About staff editorials

We at The Clarkston News realize that an important duty of a newspaper is to provide more than just the facts found in news stories.

Since we're out there uncovering the news, we get an inside look at the issues. In our staff editorials, we will give our opinions on those issues, just as other writing on this page - letters and columns - also offers opinions, 11

We leave the editorials unsigned because we've written them as a staff. Every week, we talk about the issues and take notes on everyone's opinions. Then one of us writes it and the rest of us change it until we're all satisfied.

While our opinions aren't always unanimous, our editorials reflect the majority views of the staff. If the staff splits evenly on an issue, we'll write two editorials on the subject.

We welcome your response to our views.

Developer sues Springfield over clustering denial

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE Clarkston News Staff Writer

A developer has filed a lawsuit against Springfield Township and five board members.

Independence Township resident Stephen Proctor of Unique Designed Homes, Inc., filed the suit in the name of his company in Oakland County Circuit Court on June 30. The case has been assigned to Judge Barry Howard.

The suit names the township, Treasurer Lois Stiles, Glerk Nancy Strole and trustees Margaret Bloom, Charles Oaks and Dennis Vallad in their professional capacity.

The suit was filed after the board denied a "cluster" option in May for a development proposed by Proctor's company and after the board refused to reconsider the plan a month later.

The 10-acre parcel — dubbed The Meadows of Springfield — is on the north side of Andersonville Road, east of Edgar Road.

In Springfield, parcels that qualify for clustering are zoned single-family residential or suburban estates residential and must contain: natural assets that would be preserved with the cluster, major topographical conditions that make normal development impractical, and/ or substantial portions of wetlands or woodlands.

The township's ordinance also allows clustering if 66People come to me for good rates... they stay for my Good Neighbor service.?? the parcel is oddly shaped. Proctor said that means his 15sided property qualifies.

Clustering allows homes to be built closer together than the zoning allows but limits the total number of homes in the development to the number that would have been allowed without clustering.

After the May meeting, Strole said the land could be developed under the non-cluster provision, and usable lots could be sold without clustering.

According to the allegations in the suit, the township's engineer and planners recommended approval of the cluster option, as did the Springfield Township Planning Commission.

The suit also states that the board's rejections amount to a confiscation of property, since the zoning restrictions wouln't allow "its use for any purposes to which it is reasonably adapted."

The suit asks the court to direct the township to approve the cluster request, declare the ordinance as applied to it as unconstitutional, and issue a judgment against the defendants, jointly and individually in an amount in excess of $10,000.

The attorney for Unique Designed Homes, Inc., requested a jury trial for this lawsuit.

Man, 61, rides bike across U.S.

He survives floods, snow, mud and mountains

BY CURT MCALLISTER Clarkston News Associate Editor

Despite rain, snow, mud and floods, Ken Peterson of Independence Township recently completed a 3,200-mile bike tour across the continental United States.

The 61-year-old Shelley Drive resident teamed up with 47 other riders to make the 43-day trek from Seattle to Rehoboth Beach, Del. An avid rider for the past 10 years, Peterson took part in the 22year-old Wandering Wheels Tour, which is headquartered in Upland, Ind.

Prior to participating in the coast-tocoast tour, Peterson's long-distance experience had included riding in three Delmac tours, which are five-day journeys from Lansing to St. Ignace in the Upper Peninsula.

Besides riding in local excursions, Peterson had also competed in the 6-kilometer bike race at the 1992 Michigan Senior Olympics where he earned a bronze medal in his age group.

Peterson, an agent with the Internal Revenue Service, said he learned of the Wandering Wheels Tour through a friend and considered it the ultimate challenge.

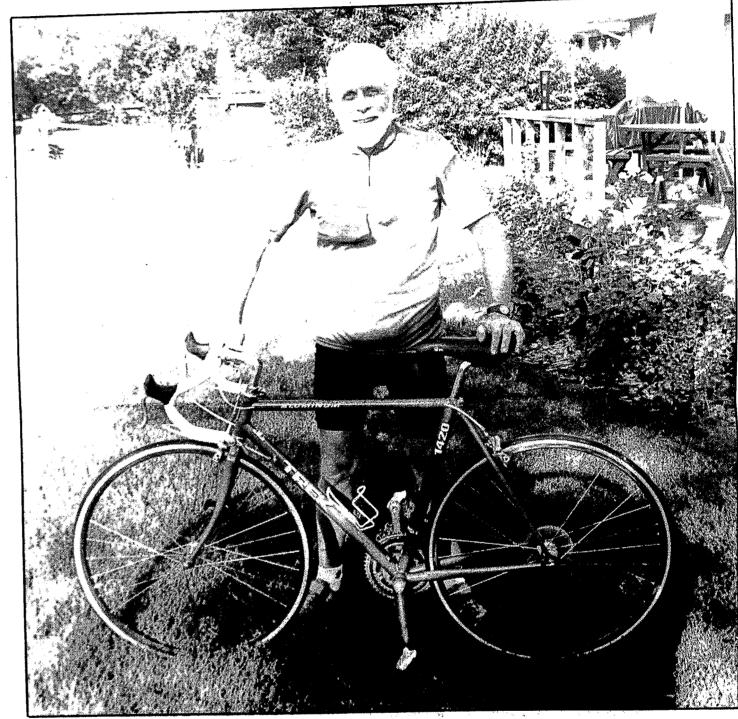

"I was really sold on the idea of seeing America from a bicycle," he said. "It seemed like a crazy idea at first, but I'm glad I did it."

For a fee of $1,700, touring cyclists were provided with overnight accommodations at designated rest stops, a mobile kitchen, a traveling nurse and mechanic, and transportation to and from Wandering Wheels' headquarters.

Prior to embarking from Seattle, each rider dipped their rear tires in the Pacific Ocean, with the hopes of eventually immersing their front tires in the Atlantic Ocean — 3,200 miles away.

According to Peterson, the group consisted of people ages 16-70, and they rode about 100 miles per day, with a 128mile stretch being the highest one-day total. The bicyclists rode 39 out of 44 days, with each Sunday reserved as a day of rest.

During the course of the trip, Peterson rode through myriad landscapes.

KEN PETERSON, 61, of Independence Township just got back from a 3,200-mile trek across the continental United States. He and his 21-speed touring bicycle traveled coast to coast in a matter of 43 days.

"In Washington state alone, we rode through a variety of terrains, such as mountains, flat wheat fields and even some desert areas," he said. "In all, we went over five different mountain passes during the tour."

Peterson said the troupe also ran into a variety of weather patterns during the trek, especially in Montana. This included snow and sleet along MacDonald Pass, and seven miles worth of ankle-deep mud along a road under construction in the eastern part of the state. Luckily, the group was helped out by a rancher with a long, horse trailer, who transported them through the bogged-down construction zone.

Peterson and his comrades also found themselves in a quandry when they hit the flood-plagued midwest. Upon reaching Iowa, the troupe came upon the town of Farmington, where flood waters from the Des Moines River had submerged it, as well as all the thoroughfares. However, luck again shined on the group as they were transported out of the "flood zone," via an aerial trolley car that dropped them off in Keokuk, Ill.

Looking back, Peterson considers Coeurd 'Alene, Idaho, to be the most picturesque point in the journey.

"It was one of the most beautiful places I've ever seen in my life," he said of the town's rolling hills and attractive waterways.

Peterson considers the group's ride through historic Washington, D.C., and a visit of the comical "Carhenge" in Alliance, Neb., as two of the trip's most memorable stops. At Carhenge, an artist has stood old Cadillacs on end, so they resemble the ancient "Stonehenge" monument found in England.

Yet Peterson found many of the tour's jaunts through America's small, backwater towns to be just as enjoyable as visiting sites such as Washington, D.C., or Mount Rushmore.

"We met some of the most interesting people in some of the tiniest towns," he said. "In some of these places, people would take us in and give us food ... a lot of food.

"However, we felt this friendliness factor diminish the more we headed east," Peterson added.

Peterson said the all-day grind of riding also gave the riders a ferocious hunger.

"I found that riding for just a couple of hours gave me a tremendous appetite," he said, smiling. "Out west, I don't know how I would have survived without either Dairy Queen or Conoco gas stations, with their convenience store items."

Ultimately, after thousands of miles and numerous obstacles, the group reached their final destination in Delaware. During the course of the journey, only four riders quit, meaning 43 cyclists got to toss one another into the Atlantic Ocean.

Peterson considered this leg of the journey to be the most gratifying.

"I was just happy that I was able to do it," he said. "Seeing the Atlantic Ocean, it finally hit me on what I had accomplished. I was on Cloud Nine."

Upon completing the trip, all the bicyclists were given medals by Wandering Wheels founder Bob Davenport, a former football coach at Taylor University, who's made the coast-to-coast trek on all 44 occasions.

When asked if he'd attempt this tour again, Peterson declined.

"My goal is to never do this one again," he said, laughing." I got to see a lot of great sites and meet some terrific people, but once is good enough for me.

"They say it's a once-in-a-lifetime race, and, for me, it was," Peterson added.

Robby Hukka of Clarkston sank a hole-in-one at Spring Lake Golf Course on Maybee Road this past weekend.

The 14-year-old Clarkston High School sophomore aced the fifth hole, which is 200 yards and par-3. He used a 5wood on the shot.

The ace was witnessed by Bobbie Blue, 16, of Clarkston.

Wanted: CHS golfers

Tryouts are Monday, Aug. 16, for Clarkston High School boys' golf teams.

Team try-outs begin 7 a.m. at Spring Lake Golf Course, Maybee Road, Independence Township. About 16-20 total spots are available on the varsity and junior varsity squads.

Players are asked to bring their own clubs to the try-out. For more information, call varsity coach Jim Chamberlain at 625-5740.

Boy recognized for good sportsmanship

A local little league baseball team received a special invitation to visit Tiger. Stadium July 28 and be part of the festivities.

The invitation was made possible when Jeff Oliver, a member of the Clarkston Rockies 12-and-under baseball team, was tapped as one of 10 winners in a good sportsmanship contest sponsored by WJR Radio. Jeff had submitted a paragraph on what he felt good sportsmanship and fair play was all about.

The 10 winners received 20 tickets to the game for their ball teams, 20 wool Tiger caps, and participated in pre-game ceremonies. During these ceremonies, the teams marched around the playing field and got a little taste of what it feels like to be cheered in a major league ball park.

Jeff, who pitches and plays outfield for the Rockies, dreams of one day being a pitcher for the Tigers. If that doesn't work out, he'd settle for being a sports writer. Jeff's winning entry reads:

"Having good sportsmanship means playing by the rules. It means encouraging teammates to work hard and try their best. Don't brag or get too cocky. Fair play is playing by the rules. Not having fair play is what not to do with whatever sport you play. Fair play can make games fun and exciting as long as you play by the rules. You might be the best athlete on your team, but if you don't have good sportsmanship or don't play fair, you won't be on the team for long!"

Pee Wee champs

CLARKSTON PEST CONTROL was dubbed the Pee Wee Major division's playoff champ after they topped Burger King in two games July 24. The team took second during the regular season in the Independence Township Parks and Recreation league with a record of 8-4. Team members include: Donny Chambers, Greg Kiester, Aaron Martin, Chris Clontz, Chase Morris, Josh Brown, Michael Grieme, Tarry Parsons, Derek Ranck, Kevin Singles, Mike Young, John Grusnick, Andy Sokolnicki, batboy Steve Kiester, head coach Mike Kiester, coach Jay Martin and coach Andy Grusnick.

Wint golf outing set for Sept. 24

On Sept. 24, the Oakland Parks Foundation plans a memorial golf outing in honor of the late Lewis E. Wint.

The outing at Springfield Oaks Golf Course begins at noon with lunch. It includes 18 holes of golf with cart, fourperson scramble (men and women), with a shotgun start at 1 p.m.

The $100 golfing fee benefits the Oakland Park Foundation's fund-raising for the expansion of the nature center at Independence Oaks County Park near Clarkston. Once completed, it will be rededicated as the Lewis E. Wint Nature Center. Wint, founder of the Wint Trust 100 Funeral Home in Clarkston, died Nov. 13, 1992. He was a founding member and trustee of the Oakland Parks Foundation and served on the Oakland County Parks and Recreation Commission for 18 years, including 15 years as chairman. He was the recipient of the United Way "Heart of Gold" Award in 1985 and served actively in the Clarkston Rotary Club, SCAMP and other community organizations.

Those interested should register early for this event. For registration information, call the Oakland Parks Foundation at 335-2771.

Goodrich woman charged in assault

A 19-year-old Goodrich woman was arrested after she allegedly assaulted a Springfield Township woman.

Nicole Angela Tenaglia was charged with assault and battery, a 90-day misdemeanor; and felonious assault, a four-year felony.

The charges stem from an incident on June 19, when two cars full of teen-agers were supposedly harassing and chasing one another for more than an hour through Independence and Brandon townships.

The chase ended in Independence Township, where Tenaglia allegedly ran into a 19-year-old Springfield Township girl with her car, got out and punched the woman, and sprayed either Mace or pepper gas at her.

Tenaglia's preliminary exam was set for 9 a.m. Aug. 12 before Judge Gerald McNally in 52nd District Court, Independence Township. She is out on personal bond and is under curfew.

Squash family hit by beetles, bugs, borers

Planting cucumbers and squashes in your garden is like sending dinner invitations to a number of garden pests.

and the second and the second of the second s

A combination of cultural and chemical controls, however, can keep plants healthy and high yielding.

Ed Grafius, Extension entomologist at Michigan State University, East Lansing, says the three main pests of the cucurbits — the plant family that includes cucumbers, summer and winter squash, melons and pumpkins are cucumber beetles, squash bugs and squash vine borers.

"Cucumber beetles often seem to be waiting for the first seedlings to emerge," Grafius observes. "In a way, this is true, because these insects overwinter as adults in fence rows, woodlots, ditch banks and other sheltered areas. They feed on the young plants for a few days, then mate and lay eggs at the base of the plants. The larvae then feed on plant roots."

Spotted cucumber beetles are yellowish green with 12 black spots on their hard backs. Striped cucumber beetles are yellow with three lengthwise black stripes.

Direct damage from these 1/4-inch beetles can stunt or kill young plants. The main threat, however, is that the beetles carry the organism that causes bacterial wilt. Once a plant is infected, it cannot be cured and must be removed or burned.

The only sure way to prevent the disease is to control the beetles with routine applications of a home garden insecticide labeled for that purpose. Hand picking beetles and not planting cucurbits for a year are non-chemical approaches that may help.

Because both striped and spotted cucumber beetles overwinter elsewhere and come into the garden only when cucurbit plants are present, a fall garden cleanup of plant debris is not an effective control. Sanitation is very important in controlling the squash bug, however.

Squash bug adults overwinter in garden debris and lay eggs as plants begin to emerge. Adults and newly hatched young feed together, sucking plant juices from leaves and stems. Leaves shrivel, turning brown or black. In severe cases, whole plants may wilt and shrivel. Late in the season, the bugs will even attack the fruits.

Adults are 5/8 to 1 inch long and ash-gray to brown. The immature stages look much like the adults except that they lack fully developed wings.

Though squash bugs are fairly easy to control with chemicals, a little preventive attention early in the scason may reduce the need for pesticides. Look for and remove and destroy egg masses in the spring, Grafius suggests. Look for them between two main veins on the underside of a leaf. They look much like potato beetle egg clusters except that they are yellow to brown rather than bright orange.

Squash bugs can also be trapped under boards placed in the garden at night. Simply lift up the boards in the morning and destroy the bugs. Or bury a cake pan to the rim in the soil, pour a little soapy water in the bottom and place a board over it. Bugs crawling under the board will fall into the pan, where the slippery water will prevent their escape. A sudden and dramatic wilt of a squash stem or runner is usually the first indicator that a squash vine borer is at work. The borer is the caterpillar of a clear-winged moth that resembles a wasp. The moth lays its eggs on the plant stems, and the young bore inside, where they feed on the pith. Behind them, the stem or runner wilts.

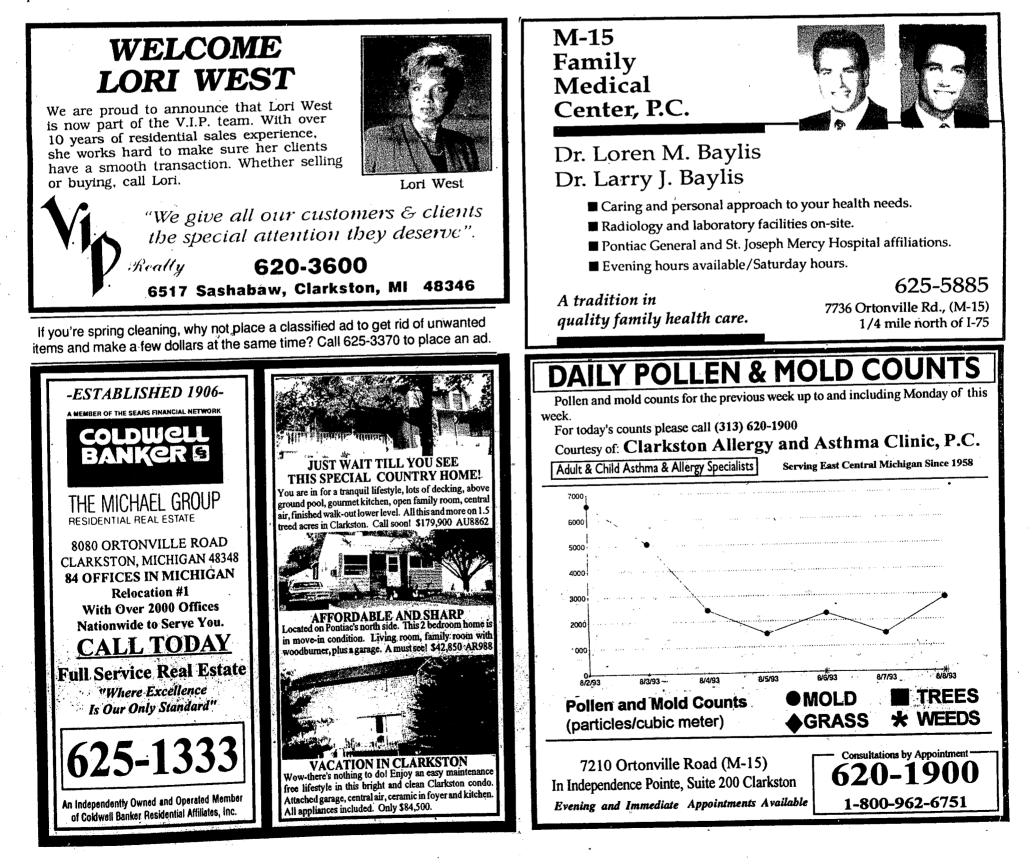

Squash vine borers are most attracted and most damaging to the hard winter squash varieties. A clue that wilting in these crops is due to borer activity rather than bacterial wilt is the presence of greenish yellow frass (caterpillar droppings) oozing from holes in the stem. The hollowed-out stem behind the borer is likewise packed with it.

Once the borer is inside the plant, it's safe from ordinary garden insecticides. If damage has been severe in the past, you can spray the bases of young plants every 7-10 days with an appropriate insecticide, starting about the time plants tip over and start to runner.

If borers are only an occasional problem, you can slit the stem and kill or remove the insects. This is rough on the plant, of course. Covering the damaged area with moist soil may induce it to root and so save the rest of the stem and any fruits it might bear. If that doesn't work, you're no worse off than you were before you tried, Grafius notes.

Tilling the garden thoroughly in the fall or in early spring should help reduce borer problems, he suggests. The insects usually overwinter as pupae in cocoons in the soil beneath garden debris. Tilling may bury or damage them and so reduce adult emergence and egg laying. Adult moths can fly in from other areas, of course.

Swedish girl returns visit of American friend

BY CURT MCALLISTER Clarkston News Associate Editor

For the past month, Katie Freeman, 15, has played host to a teen-ager from Sweden.

Kristina Jordo, 14, visits America as a participant in the exchange program Children's International Summer Villages. Last summer, Freeman, a sophomore at Clarkston High, visited Kristina's home in Angelholm.

During their time together, the pair have become inseparable as they learn more about each other's cultures, while sharing the same interests of typical teen-agers.

Kristina said she's enjoyed her stay in America, especially visiting the county's large shopping malls. During her stay, she's also fallen in love with an American delicacy — macaroni and cheese.

Katie said the two countries differ in a variety of areas, with "openess" being the most obvious difference.

"The Swedish people are much more open about things and more free about their bodies," she said. "For example, their high schools' dress policy allows for offthe-shoulder dresses and tops exposing their midrifts. Their clothing policies aren't as restrictive as the ones here."

Kristina and Katie have done a fair amount of traveling during the past month. Katie's parents have taken the girls to Lake Cumberland, Ky., and to Cedar Point. The duo have also taken in a few movies and a Detroit Tiger baseball game.

The girls said they'll continue to write back and forth to each other, after Kristina goes back home. The pair is scheduled to reunite in two years, when Katie flies back to Sweden after the conclusion of her junior year.

Citizens to perk up Depot Park

If you live in the area and have kids, chances are you have spent a few hours in Depot Park.

Now you have a chance to help the park.

At 7 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 12, anyone who would like to help improve Depot Park playground can meet to discuss ideas and fund-raising. The meeting takes place at the Village Hall on Depot Road.

At last week's meeting, people considered an idea to invite playground designer Bob Leather to design the park, with community people providing the labor.

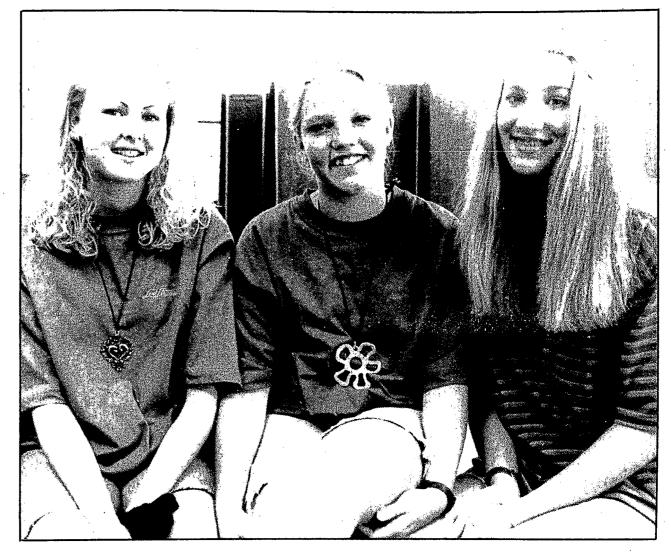

Those who are unable to help physically or who don't have enough time, also may help by donating money.

To contribute, send tax-deductible donations to: Depot Park Playground, Clarkston City Hall, 375 Depot Road, Clarkston, MI 48346.

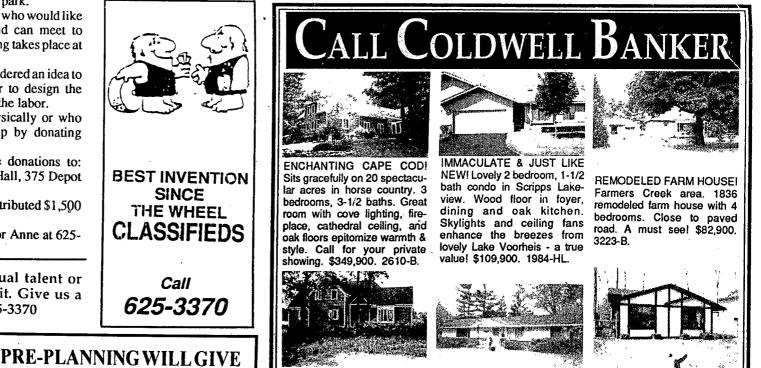

Two organizations have already contributed $1,500 toward improving the park.

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE Clarkston News Staff Writer

Lt. John Taylor of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department asked for a transfer to Independence Township because it was a quiet place.

So far, it hasn't lived up to its reputation.

In the first 48 hours of his new assignment, six thieves were arrested for breaking into cars, and a rape occurred. He hasn't gotten much sleep. But then, that's just part of the job, he said.

Despite all the first-week work, the 48-year-old Oxford resident said, "I am more than just a little pleased to be here."

Taylor replaces Lt. Joe Quisenberry, who was in charge of the Independence Township sub-station for three years. Quisenberry was reassigned to Rochester Hills.

The new man in charge is grateful to Quisenberry, he said.

"I think my predecessor did a great job of laying out the foundation of this station," he said.

Taylor's 24-year professional career with the OCSD has been diverse. He has served in or supervised every division in the department. The bulk of his years have been spent in investigations. He has never had disciplinary action taken against him. And Taylor has received 11 citations and was named Officer of the Year in 1978.

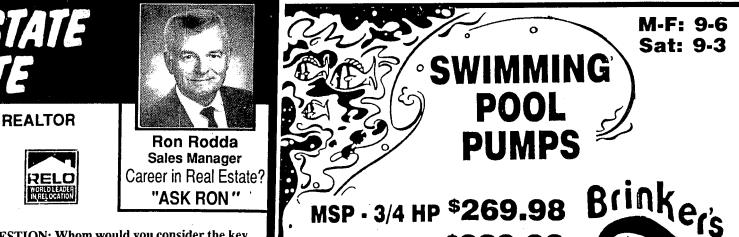

He has special training in everything from narcotics to internal investigations. He is a 1989 graduate of the FBI Academy, has been trained in Washington, D.C., in dignitary protection, and has had training in criminal and homicide investigations.

Taylor has served this community prior to this assignment. His first year in the department, he tried to get assigned to District 1, which included Independence Township, as often has he could, he said.

Although subdivisions now stand where farms previously existed, Taylor said the people in the community are still as enjoyable.

"I am certainly looking forward to serving the citizens of Independence Township. I find this a very nice community to work in," he said.

ANSWER: I would have to say that the Realtor is the key person. The Realtor prepares the agreement of sale, a responsibility much greater than many people realize.

Although the Realtor is the agent of the seller, he still must keep the protection of the buyer in mind. Therefore, the wording must be clear and understandable without any allowances for ambiguous statements. The agreement of sale is as important as the deed, because it is the agreement that determines what goes into the deed.

No election planned

Fire hall could cost $15 more a year on average

and the second second

BY JULIE CAMPE Clarkston News Editor

A new fire hall will cost homeowners about $15 more a year - but they probably won't be asked to approve higher taxes in an election.

Further, the new fire hall may include space for a police sub-station — but not if it will delay the project.

The Independence Township Board took no action on the fire hall at the Aug. 9 special meeting at the library meeting room. But members verbally agreed to such plans following a 2 1/2-hour public hearing.

They did not agree on a site or any specifics of the fire hall, though a committee recommended a two-acre site on Citation Drive, off M-15. The committee's second-choice recommendation is the Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital site on Dixie Highway at White Lake Road.

The board plans to choose a site and a plan of action at the 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 7, meeting at the township annex, 90 N. Main St., Clarkston.

A new fire hall is needed to replace fire station No. 1 on Church Street, Clarkston, which was sold to John and Connie Morgan, who also own the adjacent service station on Main Street. The township now pays $2,000 per month to rent the fire hall - plus property taxes.

Fire hall wish list

Before the hearing began, Chief Gar Wilson presented a wish list for the fire station, which included "bays" for two pumpers, a rescue truck, a hazardous materials truck, a grass fire truck, plus room for an aerial truck that probably will be needed in the future; a training room that could be used for other township purposes; plenty of parking; living quarters for the full-time fire fighters, including a kitchen-eating room and bathroom; decontamination room; control office; storage space; and an exercise room.

He also listed special equipment that would be needed, including: generators, a washer-extractor for laundry, exercise equipment, an exhaust system, air compressors, fire equipment, and a hose washer and dryer.

He noted that two plans for a new station in the past were turned down by voters.

"The problems, as best as I can put it, are that we didn't do what we're doing tonight --- we didn't come to the people," said Wilson.

Best location for now — and future

Wilson also talked about the location of the new fire hall. He said station No. 1 serves the full west side of the township, since it can reach it more quickly than the other stations can. It responds to 5-6 runs a day. The township averages a 4-second response time per run.

To adequately serve its portion, the new station should be located on M-15 between Dixie Highway and I-75, said Wilson. That puts it in the southwest quadrant of the township but allows fast access to busy, populous areas, where the fire department is most needed.

As the township grows, said Wilson, it will need two more stations. He plans to add a station in the northeast quadrant --- probably around Whipple Lake Road and Eston Road — and another in the northwest quadrant probably around Allen and Rattalee Lake roads.

So the new station No. 1 needs to remain in the southwest quadrant, he said.

"We have to look at the total picture," he said. "We don't want to have two stations next to each other in 20 I know ---- we don't care, but our kids might."

"This issue has been very controversial over the years, ... and we want it to be crystal clear. It's very important that we have public support for what we do."

Supervisor Dale Stuart

Citation Drive site at top of list

The committee ranked seven sites, based on location, cost, infrastructure, topography, availability and size.

The two-acre Citation Drive site received the highest rating, followed by the 50-acre POH site. The POH site's problems included its availability. It's under consideration for an office building now, and the hospital probably wouldn't give the township the parcel closest to the road, nor could it guarantee a time when it would be available, said committee member Joan McCrary.

While the hospital in the past offered to donate land for a fire station, it wouldn't guarantee a donation now. So the committee estimated a cost of property, based on the price the hospital charged for the township water tower.

One other site --- at one time offered as a donation by pediatrician James O'Neill --- has been sold and is no longer available.

Three options to pay for station

Township bond consultant Paul Wyzgoski said the township board has three options to raise the about $1.2 million for a new fire station.

Option No. 1 calls for voter-approved bonds. That means voters would be asked to approve a bond issue, which would provide the money up front to pay for the station. Then, the township would levy taxes to pay back the debt over about 15 years.

Option No. 2 calls for a building authority (3-7 members), which would be appointed to sell bonds, build the fire station and own it until the bonds are retired. The township would make "rental" payments to the authority.

An election is not required, but a notice must be published in the newspaper. Voters would have 45 days to petition for a vote on the issue (10 percent of registered voters --- about 1,800 people --- must sign the petition).

Planning a wedding? Stop by The Clarkston News and check out our wedding supplies: invitations, napkins, thank-you cards and nore. 5 S. Main St., Clarkston 625-3370

673-1244

The township board could not levy extra taxes to pay back the debt. The debt would be paid back probably in about 10 years.

Option No. 3 calls for an installment purchase contract. In this case, the township would receive the fire station from a contractor and would pay for it in installments. A bank or other financial institution would finance the cost.

The township would have to pay off the debt from its existing millage and could not levy extra taxes. The debt would be paid back in 10-15 years.

Wyzgoski note that municipal bonds currently have low interest rates - around 5 percent.

Clerk McCrary said that a special election for a bond issue would cost about $7,000 to $8,000 and would required 60-90 days. About 2,500 voters could be expected to turn out at the polls.

Paying for new station without election

Township finance director Kerry Donahoe said a $200,000 two-acre parcel could be paid for from the fire department's fund balance.

The remaining $1 million estimated cost of the fire station would require an extra .21 mills to pay off over 11 years, with payments of $115,000 per year.

While voters could approve that amount in an election ($13 per year for a homeowner with a $112,000 home), it also could be covered through the fire department's current millage rate.

Voters approved 3 mills for fire operations, but the board levies only 2.79 mills of that. If the board held a truth-in-taxation hearing, it could again levy the full 3 mills. Homeowners still would end up paying about $13 more than they pay now --- but the township wouldn't have to hold an election, he said.

One mill is $1 for every $1,000 in assessed property valuation. Property is assessed at half its market value.

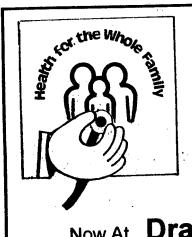

Audience member Rudy Lozano, a former township trustee, said, "We need another station. ... I for one am not looking for additional taxes."

He said the township should find property for free or buy the cheapest parcel, hire a designer, lay out the station, put bids and get real cost estimates.

"Everything we're talking about tonight is premature," he said. "The township board needs to come back with tangible plans. ... I think the board ought to buy it and move on.'

Supervisor Dale Stuart suggested the board eliminate the voter-approved bond issue from the options. An election asking for more money would only alarm voters, especially with the confusion over the state Legislature's elimination of property taxes for schools. And it would take too much time.

Photos, documents important for family history

BY VIRGINIA BLOCK

A photograph of a child age age 5 is the only key to the location, hopefully, of a half-sister of an adult adoptee.

An unidentified picture of a great-grandmother is the only thing standing between the proof of ancestry with a patriot lineage — if only the name had been written on the back of the photograph. Preservation of those special family portraits is an evergrowing interest, and the laser color reproductions available in local camera shops greatly reduces the need for concern of deterioration. Even newspaper articles, obituary notices, baptismal marriage or death records can be "exchanged" via photography by color Xerox (even if the item is printed in black and white) for far less than the $10 to $13 fee charged at courthouses.

Fire hall on September agenda

building, payment methods

Board members also discussed combining the police and fire departments in one building. The benefits include possibly saving on clerical costs and providing a central location for all public safety services. Further, they said, the current police building — a former bank office on M-15 at Dixie Highway — is inadequate for a police substation.

Trustee Jeffrey McGee said he favors accepting the committee's recommendation on a fire hall site, using the fund balance to buy it or get an option to buy it, and talk about financing the cost later.

Trustee Bruce Mercado asked whether the committee looked closely enough at the POH site, since its 50 acres provide great potential.

Chief Wilson said the parcel's wetlands and infrastructure problems combined with its availability make it questionable.

Trustee Mel Vaara said he favors the installment purchase option.

Treasurer John Lutz said, "I just hate to cloud this issue again with police and fire ... I don't want to hinder it. We need to build this station as quickly as possible."

No secrets

Mercado also noted that, in the past, some people thought the board was "secretive" when it considered building a new fire station without an election, using only millage money. He also said some people question the allowable uses for the fire department's operational millage.

He said the board needs an "interpretation of whether that's for operating or bricks and mortar."

Supervisor Stuart said the entire purpose of the public hearing was to give residents an opportunity to sit in on the decision-making process, to keep everything as open as possible, and to give them an opportunity to voice opinions at every stage.

"This issue has been very controversial over the years, ... and we want it to be crystal clear," he said. "It's very important that we have public support for what we do. "It's important that we have the right facility to protect your property."

Once a family member agrees to share, rare photos can become treasures shared by many. As two separate appeals for help in acquiring information on birth parents, by adoptees, we are including a prayer written by adoptee Ken Schury, whose efforts have paid off well, enabling him to unite with members of his birth parents' family, and subsequently trace his birth lineage back 200 years or more.

Adoption: A prayer of thanksgiving and healing

We thank you for the birth parents who gave life, but found they could not nurture it.

We thank you for the adoptive parents who nurtured and sustained a life they did not create.

We thank you for adoptees shaped by two different lives; the product of two different loves, one of letting go and one of taking in.

We ask you to comfort those who grieve for a child lost.

We ask you to make whole those who feel torn between two kinds of love.

In all, we ask that love triumph in restoring and strengthening the bonds of family love. Amen.

Ken wrote this prayer a couple of years ago, but in the nation's attention focused on little Jessica and her heartbreaking story now being headline news, we better understand what prompted Ken to write this prayer and know he is blessed for sharing it with us.

Next column, we will return to the queries and answers of our readers, hoping to hear from those adoptees who are striving to piece together their family history under greater difficulty. We will offer help wherever possible.

Township asks county to look at moth damage

The Independence Township Board sent Oakland County officials a message Aug. 3 — address the gypsy moth dilemma now.

That evening, the board unanimously approved a resolution that urges county officials to recognize the severity of the moths' infestation and to devise a plan of action. The resolution said county government should face "this issue by becoming the governing body responsible for the suppression of the gypsy moth."

The township board is seeking pro-active measures against an insect that has migrated to Oakland County, after defoliating thousands of acres of trees in northern Michigan since the mid-1980s.

Ā copy of the resolution has been sent to County Executive L. Brooks Patterson, all county commissioners, Sen. David Honigman, Rep. Tom Middleton, Ron Priest of the Michigan Department of Agriculture and all municipalities within the county.

The Springfield Township Board approved such a resolution in July.

Family life revolves around 10-hour IV-tube feedings

In some respects, Kaitlyn Davis is just like any other 2-year-old.

She likes to play with her brother and sister, loves Barney the Dinosaur, and empties any cupboard or drawer she can reach.

However, she is unlike most toddlers in other respects. Kaitlyn has never eaten a cookie and has had four life-threatening surgeries. And doctors have said this inquisitive, loving child could die before her third birthday

The little Independence Township girl was born with intestines that did not function. At two days old, Kaitlyn had surgery to remove a blockage in her intestines. Two weeks later, she weathered another surgery to remove a narrowing in the intestines. Later, gangrene was found in her intestinal tract, and even more had to be removed.

poked every time she needs nutrients or medicine.

In fall 1991, Kaitlyn took another turn for the worse. She suffered from necrotizing enterocolitis (NEC), which means her gut was dying, said her mother. She ran 104degree fevers, vomited blood, and her liver began to fail.

After exploratory surgery in April 1992, doctors once again told the Davises that their youngest child probably would not live. Kaitlyn surprised them again and came through the episode.

"This child has a will to survive," Laura said.

This spring, Kaitlyn's doctor at the University of Michigan Hospital told the Davis family they should try to get a liver and intestine transplant for Kaitlyn. Her liver has been damaged throughout her life because of the intravenous feedings.

The Davises' insurance company, Blue Cross/ Blue Shield, will pay for Kaitlyn's evaluation and for the liver transplant. However, it won't pay for the intestinal transplant and the cost the family would incur because of the operation.

That portion could cost hundreds of thousands of dollars, which is overwhelming to the Davises.

"How can you base a decision on your child's life on finances?" said Laura. "I cannot base whether she lives or dies on finances."

After a July visit to the Pittsburgh Children's Hospital for evaluations, the Davises found that Kaitlyn qualifies as a candidate for the dual transplant. No date has been set for the operations. Kaitlyn is on a waiting list for donors, and the Davises remain on call. The operations will take place in this hospital, where 50 percent of the children who have transplants eventually live happy, healthy, normal lives.

Flotation is a relaxation therapy at new spa

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE Clarkston News Staff Writer

How do you spell relaxation? F-L-O-A-T-I-N-G. At least that's how the owners of Baja Beach Spa spell it.

Doris Wainwright of Waterford and Chris Maybee of Independence Township opened the spa on Dixie Highway, Independence Township, a month ago.

The staff includes three certified message therapists and two nail technicians. The store includes tanning units and a-relaxation unit --- the only one in the area.

"We've done a lot of research on tanning salons," said Wainwright. "We wanted to come up with something a little better."

The relaxation unit is also called a flotation spa. The enclosed structure measures 10 feet long, 5 feet high and 6 feet wide and contains a shallow pool of warm water with 1,200 pounds of epsom salts dissolved in it.

When the door to the spa is closed, the tank is totally dark and silent. Since the clients' ears are underwater and they wear earplugs, there is an almost total absence of sound in the spa. If a client doesn't want to be in total silence for an hour, music or videos can be played in the spa If a client becomes claustrophobic in the spa, the door can be propped open. Actually, the feeling of spaciousness is more common, and the claustrophobia quickly passes, said Wainwright.

Both spa owners swear by the spa for relaxation, and they recommend it for others.

"Nobody takes the time to relax," said Maybee about hectic schedules these days.

Her business partner agreed. "People are so stressed out, we felt that the message therapy and the relaxation spa would do a lot of good," said Wainwright.

"This is life — it's a very stressful life," admits Laura, who cares for Kaitlyn herself.

Kaitlyn's brother and sister, Frank, 5, and Brittany, 3, live with the illness as if there is no other kind of life. One even asked Laura if she had changed the dressing on their Broviacs when they were little. Laura said Kaitlyn's problems have strengthened her close-knit family and her marriage to her high school sweetheart, Frank.

But it's difficult.

"You never expect you'll have a chronically ill child," said Laura. "We're tired mentally and physically."

She must awaken every three hours at night to change Kaitlyn, so the Broviac site doesn't become infected.

Young Brittany and Frank know about the transplant, and they know that Kaitlyn is sick, though they don't know the details.

However, the two children got a first-hand feeling for the seriousness of Kaitlyn's problem in June, when the family packed up all the medicine and equipment for a doctor-approved trip to Sea World in Ohio. While in the hotel room that night, Kaitlyn stopped breathing, her eyes rolled back, and she turned blue.

Laura and Frank revived their daughter, but it left a mark on the other two children, who slept with their parents for the next couple of weeks.

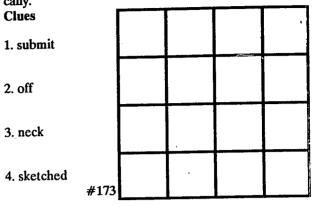

The Davises know the only hope for their little girl is the dual transplant. To pay for the surgery, they have turned to the community. Canisters have been placed in area businesses, a golf outing is planned in Sept. 20, and a hair salon is offering a cut-a-thon Aug. 23.

We don't know what will happen (to Kaitlyn)," said Laura. "She's such a fighter - I just can't give up on her now."

Donations for the intestinal transplant can be sent to the Kaitlyn Davis Transplant Fund, P.O. Box 103, Clarkston, MI 48347.

AFTER GLOW

AFTEH GLOW I'd like the memory of me to be a happy one. I'd like to leave an afterglow of smiles when life is done. I'd like to leave an echo whispering softly down the ways, Of happy times and laughing times and bright and sunny days. I'd like the tears of those who grieve, to dry before the sun of Happy memories that I leave

y memories that . when life is done. (by HL Marshall) LX33-1

We are SIDING and GUTTER Specialists

We are not a jack-of-all-trades. We can not guarantee you the absolute lowest price, as we will not sacrifice the quality products or workmanship that you deserve. But what we will guarantee is an honest and fair price with products and workmanship of the highest quality. We also do our own work. We don't get your job and sub-contract it out, or sell it. So if you are only looking for the cheapest way out, call someone else who claims out, call someone else who claims they can beat any price. If you are looking for an honest and fair price, quality products and workmanship, dependability, and someone that will still be here after your job is completed, give us a call. Helping you make your home the one you've always dreamed of is what we do.

What's hot: Boots, basics What's not: Bell bottoms

BY JULIE CAMPE Clarkston News Editor

Despite what you see in fashion advertisements and on TV talk shows, don't expect to see bell bottom jeans on teen-agers in the Clarkston area.

That item tops the list of clothing that area teens would never be caught wearing.

You'll have to look closely to find the "in" trends, though. Bead jewelry, hiking boots or work boots, and hats for girls are among the more fashionable attire among Clarkston High School teens, thought hats are against the CHS dress code.

But the prevailing trend is to dress simply, wearing basic jeans and tops. Teens also said they don't spend too much valuable time before school on makeup and hairstyles. So a more natural look also is in style.

A few Clarkston High School seniors talked to The Clarkston News about their fashion choices for school.

Nick Bielak, 18, and his sister, Gabrielle, 16, of Holcomb Road; Christina Gilleland, 17, of Placid Court; and Meg Bliesath, 18, of Fairfield Circle all listed bell bottoms first when asked what they would never wear. Nick called them "those big, wide jeans."

Meg explained, "They're the most unflattering piece of clothing known to man."

But the teens didn't dislike only the '60s-style jeans comeback — Gabrielle also said she wouldn't wear Spandex clothing for the same reason she wouldn't wear bell bottoms: they're just not attractive.

Christina, however, said she often wears Spandex because it's so comfortable. However, she said, she would not be caught dead wearing, "big flowery dresses with a lot of lace. That's not me. I've never been a Pollyanna."

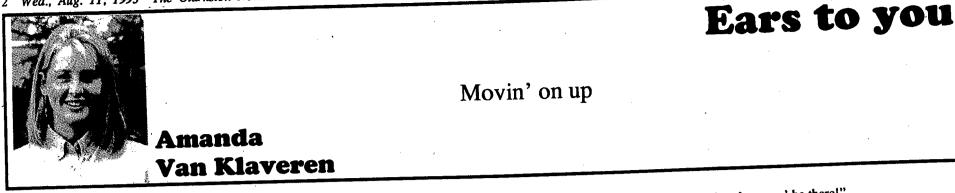

Meg agreed. "I hate lace. I hate flowers. They're too feminine. It reminds me of 'Little House on the Prairie."

Instead, Meg said she prefers "plain dressing, nothing extravagant It's just school."

She usually wears jeans (straight-legged) and solidcolor T-shirts because they're comfortable, and, well, "you don't have to worry if it matches or goes together,"

This upcoming school year, 1993-94, the ninthgraders from Sashabaw and Clarkston junior high schools are moving to the high school.

I interviewed three students who are making the move, and they all had their own feelings on the situation.

One student, Mick Kamischke, 14, said, "It's really no big deal. It won't be much different, except that everyone will be bigger."

The advertise was shown a second a second second

I asked him if he'd be nervous or scared, and he just said, "The only reason why I'd have to be nervous is because now I have to be smart."

Another student, Margaret Seitz, 14, said, "Thank

Eating right not a priority at college

Party-hopping, pulling all-nighters and studying for final are all popular college activities. Eating right, however, is not.

Busy college students often eat on the run. Early classes; late classes or inconvenient cafeteria hours can prevent them from getting well-balanced meals. Sometimes, candy and other high-fat foods with little nutritional value replace nourishing meals.

Knowing this, what's a parent to do?

1 e

You can take action to help ensure your children's health even while they're away.

Preventive health care is key. Make sure your children visit the doctor regularly, and help them form healthy eating habits at home. Serve wholesome meals, and provide healthy snacks. College students who are used to eating right at home will likely be more health-conscious at school.

Realistically, though, children will not eat everything their parents want them to while they're living away from home. Keep this in mind as you send care packages. Instead of brownies or cookies, consider including fruit and other healthy snacks.

Something else to consider for a care package are dietary supplements, especially if you have a daughter. Studies show, for example, that three our of four women don't get even half the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance of 1,000 mg of calcium from their diets. A lack of calcium early in life increases a woman's risk of developing osteoporosis, a bone-crippling disease.

Although you can't go to school with your children, you can help see to it that they get the calcium and other nutrients they need by offering advice on nutrition and sending regular health-conscious care packages.

God my sister's gonna' be there!"

Laura, 10, will be a senior this year. When I asked Margaret if she were scared, she replied, "I'm scared because I don't want to lose my old friends when I meet new ones."

Margaret plans to play basketball and maybe softball or track.

The last student I talked to is Chris Evans, 14. Chris said going straight from eighth grade to the high school is not a problem.

"It'll be pretty cool," he said.

He said he's anxious to meet other kids, although he's going to miss being "king of the school in junior high.'

Chris plans to join some clubs in high school, such as Peer Listening and Interact. He wants to meet new people. Chris said the only thing he's worried about is that he might get lost. (That will be hard for everyone considering all the new changes.)

Chris also plans to play football and maybe track in the spring.

I remember when I was going into the sixth grade. We were moved into the junior high that year, so I sympathize with you. I never was able to be the "king of the playground," but all the great times I had in junior high made up for it.

I wish all the upcoming ninth-graders good luck in the high school. You'll have the time of your life!

Amanda Van Klaveren of Independence Township is a senior at Clarkston High School.

Choosing a school for your child?

Consider child's perspective, age

Public? Private? Alternative? Specialist? Considering a different school this back-to-school season?

As a parent, you do have a choice among schools. The options depend on your child, as well as different enrollment policies adopted by various school districts.

Your child is a product of his or her environment, and relationships formed with teachers and peers will matter more than even the most extensive curriculum or elaborate learning facility.

No school's local reputation is to be relied upon, since both overall atmosphere and academic performance can change rapidly in respond to changes in faculty or student enrollment. Here is a list of guidelines for parents in search of the perfect school:

See every prospective school for yourself during a working school day. Don't base your decision just upon a guided tour of the school's newest facilities. Visit classrooms, gyms, cafeterias; try to see children working. playing, talking and eating. The attitude of the faculty toward school and pupils is especially iniportant.

Talk to other parents and students. Get them to describe the school's strengths and weaknesses, even though they may not want the same thing as you from the school.

Discuss with your child what he or she wants from school. A younger child, of course, may not grasp the seriousness or importance of such matters, but an older child will usually feel stronger about special points ---faculty, classmates, facilities.

Make your next visit armed with questions for the principal. He or she should be equipped to advise you on anything you want to know. Ask questions that extract specific and factual answers rather than meaningless generalities.

To avoid confusion, sometimes it's helpful to write down pros and cons to all your researches, especially if considering several schools.

she said. While she also prefers bare feet to shoes, she wears dark brown boots to school — or penny loafers or sandals. Christina and Gabrielle also wear boots.

"They're really comfortable," said Gabrielle. "I've had mine a year."

And they're practical, said Christina. "They're good if you're going walking in the woods or stuff like that." Parents may want to capitalize on the trend. In past years at CHS, teens wore sneakers, in rain, sleet or snow, with wet feet one of the consequences. That won't happen with hiking boots.

Comfort is the top of the list for Gabrielle's clothing choices.

"I usually wear flannels and anything that's comfortable. ... Occasionally, I may dress up," she said, adding, "We don't go to impress anybody."

Christina likes to experiment a little. "I wear just about everything, from Spandex shorts to jeans, halter tops and body suits. Anything that's funky or abnoxious, if it fits the occasion," she said.

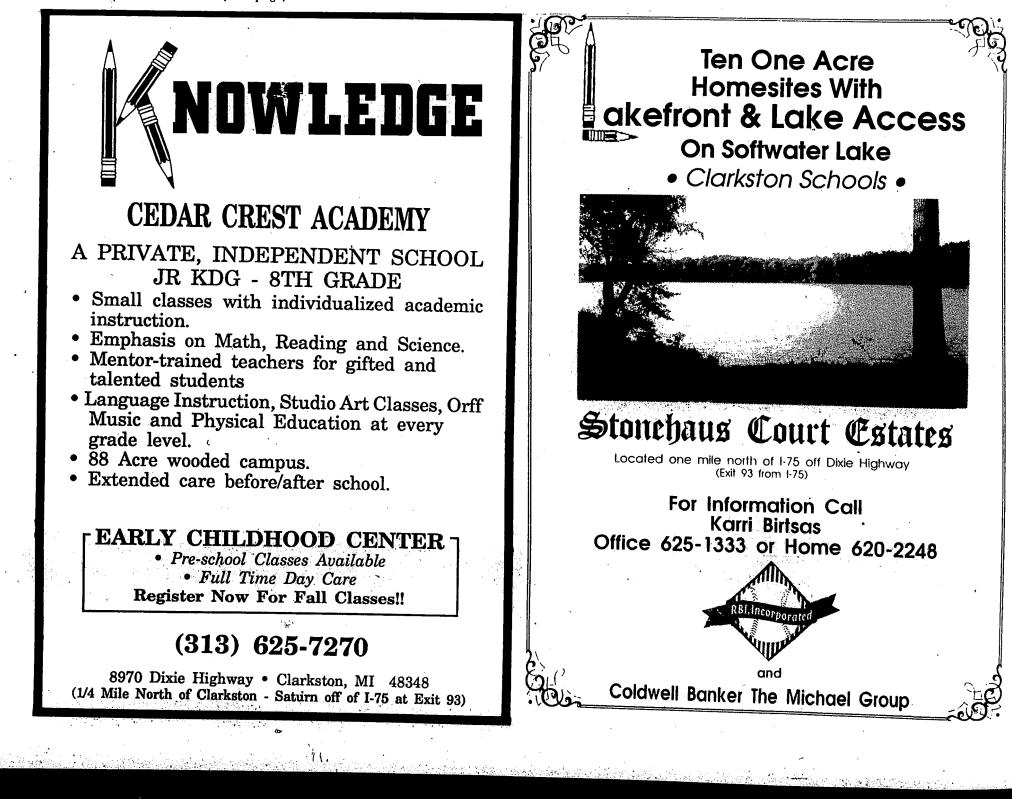

Nick also prefers the basics. However, he said, "I'm not really a fashion person."

On a typical school day, Nick can be found wearing Girbaud jeans and a T-shirt or button-up shirt from a store such as Structure. He also wears tennis shoes or Dockers (See ACCESSORIES, next page)

FRESHMAN and sophomores new to the high school don't have to worry about fashion, according to (from left) Meg Bliesath, Gabrielle Bielak and Christina Gilleland.

Though it's normal to feel a little unsure about what to wear as ninth- and 10th-graders, kids usually find that clothing and hair styles don't matter too much, they said.

"It's a comfortable, casual look," he said. "I'm not into the fads and stuff."

Nick also had some advice for the new ninth- and 10th-graders at Clarkston High. He said locker shelves available in area stores are an easy way to customize and organize a school locker.

"They're easy to get and pretty cool," he said. In addition, students may want to decorate the inside of their lockers with pictures from magazines. For instance, Nick's locker last year contained Sports Illustrated photographs.

Girls, he said, may want to consider a mirror.

As far as fashion goes, though, he said, "Just don't be worried. It's not that big a thing."

And while the high school may seem large at first, "a week, one-and-half weeks maybe, they'll feel comfortable," Nick said.

The girls also advised underclassmen not to worry. "In 10th grade, you're more intimidated by others and what they wear," Gabrielle said.

"So you try to follow them," said Christina. But Gabrielle and Christina have found that they no longer follow some of the old styles of just two or three years ago. For instance, as sophomores, they pinned the cuffs to their jeans, so they were snug around their ankles. And in junior high school, high, hair-sprayed bangs were in fashion --- not anymore.

Christina said her hair has always been straight. "In junior high, I had it more ratted out. Not it's parting more in the middle."

Gabrielle, who cut her naturally curly hair once in junior high but didn't like it, now wears it long and swept back in a pony tail at times.

CUSTOMIZED jewelry is in style, such as Christina Gilleland's silver elephant charm (top) and Gabrielle Bielak's bead necklace (bottom).

Gabrielle's adorned with unusual beads.

One other trend at the high school: multiple piercings - in the ear, nose, naval - even nipple.

Christina, Gabrielle and Meg, however, haven't taken up that particular trend, they said --- and neither has Nick.

As for accessories, Nick said a backpack or athletic bag is a good way to carry books between school and home.

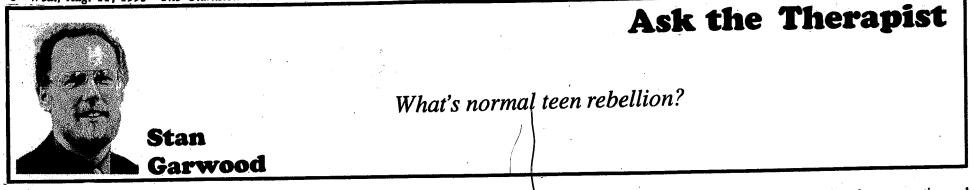

Christina and Gabrielle also recommended a big bag. Christina's canvas and leather bag has lasted her since 10th grade, she said.

Gabrielle said she uses hers for everything, including her keys and wallet. She doesn't carry a purse

Jewelry also is simple and basic, according to the teens.

Dear Mr. Garwood:

Everyone warned me about the "teen-age years," but you never realize how difficult they are until you go through them personally. My daughter and I used to have a very close relationship, but for the last three years (ages 15-18), our relationship has deteriorated. I realize that a certain amount of rebellion is normal during this time, but how do you determine when misbehavior is "normal rebellion" or an indication of more severe problems, perhaps requiring therapy? My daughter has had bouts of depression, times when she adamantly refused to cooperate, swore at me, and is generally a very selfish person at this time. How do I handle these situations? Perplexed

Keep kids fit throughout school year

Now that summer's over, how do kids stay fit throughout the school year? The responsibility, experts say, lies with schools and parents.

"To motivate children and teens to stay in shape, physical education curricula should promote and reward health-related fitness items, such as muscle strength and endurance, aerobic capacity and body composition (percentage of lean to fat)," says Charles Sterling, Ed.D., executive director of the Cooper Institute for Aerobics Research in Dallas. "These are areas where all kids can succeed, regardless of athletic ability."

But schools can't do it alone. According to a report published in the American journal of Diseases of Children, "Family members, especially parents, exert powerful influences on (their) children's physical activity." One of the biggest contributions a parent can make, says the report, is providing or arranging transportation to playgrounds and other after-school activities. Parents also determine how much time children spend outdoors, a factor that strongly impacts kids' fitness levels, the report says

The Journal of Pediatrics takes parental influence even further. According to a study reported earlier this year, children of physically active mothers are twice as likely to be active as those of inactive mothers; kids with fit fathers are 3.5 times more active, and those with both parents physically active are 5.8 time more likely to be active, and hence, physically fit, themselves.

lives, they are more into themselves, less cooperative, and exhibit varying degrees of mood swings. This is a developmental stage marked by power struggles, which you have described when saying she refuses "to cooperate and swore at me." Be careful not to engage in power struggles if possible and not misinterpret her pulling away as "rejection."

To answer your question, how do you determine when misbehavior is "normal rebellion," you would have to examine its severity. In other words, how destructive is it to your daughter and the family? Will her acting out behavior cause irreconcilable problems for her at that time or in the future? Will this disrupt the family integrity beyond the point of no return and where all communication breaks down to the extent that continued problemsolving and guidance are impossible?

If, in your estimation, your daughter's acting out is this severe, professional help is indicated. On the other hand, if she is proceeding through normal teen-age years and, since earlier you two had a "very close relationship," you can look forward to saneness returning.

Sandbox bullies, even as young as ages 4 and 5, are likely to suffer long-term peer rejection and carry undeserved reputations as troublemakers if parents and teachers fail to act quickly. According to a University of Michigan study, the critical window for reversing anti-social behavior occurs during the first few months of preschool. "When children first enter preschool, it is normal for them to show some signs of emotional distress, such as acting out," explains Sheryl L. Olson, U-M assistant professor of psychology. "However, if a teacher reports continuing problems with peers after the first month or so, these signs should be taken seriously."

In the past, Olson notes, the problems of the young children were minimized or dismissed as "transient phases they would outgrow." "But recent research, including my own, has shown that this is not true, especially in the case of impulsive and aggressive behavior," she says.

Studies show that 50 percent of children labeled tively into adolescence and adulthood, often leading to failure in school, criminal behavior and substance abuse. In a study to appear in the Journal of Abnormal

Psychology, Olson videotaped 60 4- and 5-year-olds at play at the beginning, middle and end of their first

She then rated each interaction between children on preschool year. a continuum from social conversation ("Can I play with your spaceship?") and cooperative play (sharing toys) to verbal and physical aggression (insults, taunts, shoving, and least liked to play. Children identified as aggressive and rejected at the outset of school, Olson found, were highly likely to carry the same reputation at the end of the year - even if the and were often unfairly perceived as more disruptive than they actually were. "At first," Olson explains, "these children caused their own problems by initiating difficult interactions with their classmates, who were likely to just pull away." "But as time passed, the other children began to actively victimize the disrupters, and most of the aggression on the part of the victims became reactive in nature, setting off a stable pattern of abuse and rejection."

Olson advises parents of preschoolers to stay in close contact with their child's teacher in the first months of school, asking specifically how well he or she is getting along with classmates. If possible, parents should arrange to observe their child at play from behind a one-way as cooperation, sharing and compromising — is the most effective tool that parents and teachers can use to reverse anti-social behavior. However, Olson discourages responding with counteraggression, such as verbal put downs or spanking, "which only reinforces the use of aggression to solve social problems."
