Parents of elementary students will get a chance to examine redistricting up close at town hall meetings this month.

At these meetings, a representative from Clarkston Community Schools will display a rough draft of the administration's redistricting map and discuss the reasoning behind it. Mike LaBay, deputy superintendent of instruction, will serve as the district's spokesman.

At each site, he'll discuss enrollment history and projections at the elementary level, as well as the impact of the new school. LaBay said the town hall meeting will give parents the opportunity to question him on redistricting, as well as offer comments and criticisms.

"I think it's important that the parents of this community come and see our proposed plans," LaBay said. "Not only are we looking to solicit comments from the public, but we're hoping to answer some questions as well.'

Informative packets are to be passed out at all five town hall meetings. At this point, according to the proposed redistricting map, the new elementary school will take in students from parts of northwestern Independence and northeastern Springfield townships.

However, this map is only in the rough draft stage, meaning it can change any time prior to board approval.

The town hall meeting schedule is as follows: North Sashabaw El., 7 p.m. Monday, Nov. 15

- Andersonville El., 7 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 16
- Clarkston El., 7 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 17
- Bailey Lake El., 7 p.m. Monday, Nov. 22
- Pine Knob El., 7 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 23

For more information on redistricting or any of the town hall meetings, call the board office at 625-4402.

Officials ponder new school name

BY CURT MCALLISTER Clarkston News Associate Editor

Next month, the Clarkston Board of Education begins sifting through the names suggested for the new elementary school.

However, a name probably won't be chosen until after the New Year.

The trustees have put this item on the Dec. 13 agenda for discussion. The district has received several suggestions from the public so far, said committee chairman and North Sashabaw Principal George White.

White read a list of the proposals Nov. 8. Suggestions ranged from names with historical reasoning to others based on geography.

So far, the list includes: Miller Elementary, Springfield Elementary, Conrad J. Bruce Elementary, Maybee Elementary, Ellis Creek Elementary, Holbridge Elementary and Springfield Plains Elementary.

White said the suggestion of Holbridge Elementary resulted in a person combining the road names of the new school, at the corner of Holcomb and Bridge Lake roads. The Conrad J. Bruce Elementary proposal refers to a the late Conrad Brude, a former district employee, who served for 26 years. The Maybee Elementary suggestion was made in jest.

'The reasoning behind this one was to further confuse UPS (United Parcel Service)," White said, laughing. Joking-aside, White said he was impressed by the nominations.

"I've been pleased by the responses I've received in the mail and on the street," he said. "A lot of good consideration has gone into these proposals."

Anyone interested in submitting a school name suggestion can mail a proposal, along with the reasoning behind it, to: George White, Clarkston Schools, 6389 Clarkston Road, P.O. Box 1050, Clarkston, MI, 48347-1050.

New districtwide council to link Clarkston's PTAs

BY CURT MCALLISTER Clarkston News Associate Editor

A new districtwide parent-teacher council has recently formed, with the hope of fostering cooperation

"We just want to keep Clarkston working together as Clarkston, and we feel that this type of organization is just one of the ways the community can come together in support of its schools."

Sherry Regiani

among Clarkston's school buildings.

This organization was the brainchild of Sherry Regiani, president of the Clarkston Elementary PTO and the new districtwide council.

"When I took over at Clarkston Elementary about a year and a half ago, I thought the schools would be better served if they shared the burden as well as supplies, instead of doing everything as individual parent-teacher associations," she said. "So I got together with the presidents of the other elementary schools and we started formulating a plan."

That plan eventually led to the formation of the districtwide council on Oct. 6.

So far, it primarily consists of the schools' parentteacher presidents, who are busy drawing up bylaws for their fledgling council. However, Regiani foresees the council eventually opening up to anyone in the district, regardless of whether or not they have a child in school. Already, Regiani said, the new council is discussing three points of concern deemed important to the district. They include: re-districting of the elementary schools, the state's school finance reform plan and bringing parity to the district's schools through shared ideas and projects. Regiani said the council is also pondering a fistful of projects for the future. Proposals such as enacting a districtwide "Reflections" program, which focuses on creative talents of students, holding a used musical instrument sale for the district's bands and sponsoring a ski and skate swap.

Regiani said these types of ideas are the main premise behind the council, whose creation revolves around unity and parity.

We just want to keep Clarkston working together as Clarkston," Regiani said, "and we feel that this type of organization is just one of the ways the community can come together in support of its schools."

The Clarkston (MI) News ELAND TON. MICHIGAN Sell-out dinner, auction, car raffle net $18,00

CLARKSTON High School Marching Band members perform at a holiday parade. Soon the band will be part of the Lord Mayor of Westminster's New Year's Parade in London, England, thanks to the support of the community and Band Boosters.

A dinner-auction and car raffle last weekend netted about $18,000 for Clarkston High School Band Boosters.

The group organized the event to raise money for the CHS Marching Band's December trip to London, where the band was invited to perform at the Lord Mayor of Westminster's New Year's Parade.

The auction itself netted $9,000, with a sell-out dinner at Spring Lake Country Club, according to Marla McKee, who helped Chairwoman Mary Ann Emick organize the affair.

The car raffle, organized by Tom Brown, also made about $9,000 after expenses.

Car raffle money goes to the general trip fund to help pay for travel expenses of 171 students making the trip. Ninety adults plan to accompany the musicians.

Auction proceeds go either toward the students' travel expenses or in their individual "band accounts," which can be used for band-related expenses throughout their Clarkston musical career.

The car - a Chevrolet Camaro - was won by Scott Wilfong of Northville. His photo is to appear in next week's Clarkston News. Tom Bollman of the Clarkston area sold him the $20 ticket.

So far, the Band Boosters have raised about $85,000 overall for the London trip.

Subscription deadline nears for Boosters

If you'd like to help the Clarkston High School Marching Band go to London over the holidays, there's still time.

Clarkston Band Boosters are selling Clarkston News subscriptions and renewals as a fund-raiser --- they keep half the proceeds, the maximum allowable by law.

The deadline to order your Clarkston News or renew through the Band Boosters is Monday, Dec. 13. Talk to any band student or band booster, or call Marla McKee at 625-7067.

Children begin fifth clothing drive for needy kids

While shopping for your family and friends this holiday season, you may want to buy an extra gift for a child in need.

Derek and Danielle Weddle of Independence Township are collecting hats, mittens, socks and money for children at Children's Village and for gifts from Lighthouse North.

This is the fifth year that Derek has collected clothing donations. He asks for monetary donations this year for Children's Village to buy models for the children to put together.

Derek and Danielle have received awards from the Clarkston Are Youth Assistance for this project. They have also been recognized by senators Donald Riegle and Carl Levin for their work. The pair also received letters from President Clinton and Vice-President Gore regarding their work for the needy.

Clothing can be donated in infant to teen sizes. Drop-off boxes are at Clarkston Elementary School on Waldon Road and Kieft Engineering on M-15, Independence Township.

Businesses and individuals who want to make a taxexempt cash donation can send checks to the Clarkston Rotary Club (Children's Village Project) P.O. Box 43, Clarkston, MI 48347. Deadline for donations is Dec. 18.

Man's cable-TV protest results in new state law

BY DEBORAH DZIEWIT Clarkston News Special Writer

Perseverance and a strong belief in the right to free air waves could pay off for a Springfield Township man.

Edward Washburn of Springfield Estates Mobile Home Park soon may see the end of a three-year battle to ensure that all Michigan residents who live in licensed mobile home parks can view television without paying for cable service.

The retired General Motors worker may be in Lansing as early as next week to see Gov. John Engler sign into law a bill that he authored and state Rep. Tom Middleton sponsored.

The bill before Engler states that mobile home parks cannot ban outside antennas if no central tower is provided, according to Middleton.

However, not all parks allow external antennas to be attached to mobile homes.

"Many parks don't allow antennas because of appearances' sake," said Laurie Rancour, president of Mobilehomes Owners Legislative Association of Michigan, Inc., who works to protect and educate the rights of residents who live in licensed mobile home parks.

"This law will give owners one of two options, with residents having the right of free air waves," she said.

Washburn, who has lived in the park since 1985, has followed the process of legislation every step of the way.

"I've sat in on both the committees," he said. "I was there when the Senate committee passed the bill and sent it to the Senate floor."

Washburn's protest began three years ago when park owners sold the cable rights to Grand Blanc Cable without notifying park residents. The cable rights were later sold to North Oakland Cablevision.

Before the sale, residents had access to a power TV antenna, which provided access to Detroit-area channels such as 2, 4, 7, 20 and 50, Washburn said. "Just because you happen to live in a mobile home park does not mean there should be a law against the right to use free air waves — that is what I call discrimination."

Edward Washburn

Because of a Springfield ordinance and a park policy that prohibited outside antennas in mobile home parks, residents were left without any option except to hook up to cable if they wanted good reception.

"Rabbit ears do not usually work in mobile homes because of all the metal," he said. "The power antenna gave us the basic channels."

With the help of the Springfield Mobile Homes Owners Association that he helped form in October 1990, Washburn said that the township agreed to delete the language from the ordinance that prohibited attaching external antennas to a mobile home.

In November 1991, park owners gave residents permission to attach antennas that go no higher than 18 inches above the roof line.

"We would not have achieved this without the association," said Washburn, who is president of the association. "Associations work, and every park should have one." Cablevision company president Michael Turner said if the bill passes, it will not have a noticeable impact on his company.

"If we compare the ability of mobile home residents with ability of homeowners to put up antennas, we will still see 50 to 60 percent of residents still take cable," he said. "It's the same penetration rate whether antennas are allowed or not."

Washburn said he wanted everyone to have a choice — whether it's to use cable or antenna — because no choice is discrimination.

"There is nothing wrong with cable if you want it, but just because you happen to live in a mobile home park does not mean there should be a law against the right to use free air waves — that is what I call discrimination."

Senior citizens who live in parks could also benefit. "Sometimes television is their only entertainment ...

is their only friend, and to make those who live on fixed incomes pay for cable as the only way to watch television is not right," Rancour said. "They cannot afford it."

Board OK's $148,000 for waste treatment

The Clarkston school board unanimously approved a bid for a waste water treatment system at the new elementary school.

On Nov. 8, the board granted the project to Earthwork Engineering, Inc., for $148,200. Earthwork represented the lowest bid of five applicants.

The bid came in nearly $90,000 less than the $237,181 budgeted for the project.

Give Supervisor Dale Stuart credit for responding to last week's Clarkston News editorial about the difficulty of obtaining official police reports about the Haunted Forest accident in Independence Township

He makes good points in his editorial — but the fact remains: We still haven't seen the police reports. ***

The Independence Township Board deserves credit in another area --- its "official" bid policy. The board adopted a more stringent policy than required by the state, setting $10,000 as the minimum purchase that requires bids.

Bids can be a pain for township department heads and employees — it takes more time and paperwork and can be seen as more bureaucracy. But it's one small step to ensure that public money is spent as prudently as possible.

That's always important, but it's even more so in a growing township with growing needs (i.e. a new fire hall) and with unknown revenue from the state in the future.

The Springfield Township Board is to address salaries for full-time elected officials before the year is over. The item should appear on the agenda for 7 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 11, or for 7 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 9.

If you recall, elected officials took a pay freeze last year because the budget was tight. Other township employees received 3 percent raises. This year, a 6 percent raise is recommended for those who took a pay freeze last year. ***

Speaking of money, it seems that the City of the Village of Clarkston and Independence Township have operated library services with only a verbal agreement for more than a year.

The two governmental units are trying to iron out a written contract, though some of the people on the board or council have changed since last year's verbal agreement. We'll let you know how it turns out.

If you'd rather find out for yourselves about any of these issues, all of these governmental bodies welcome public comment at their meetings.

Guest editorial

News' editorial inaccurate, insensitive

BY DALE A. STUART

On Nov. 3, The Clarkston News "staff" wrote an editorial entitled "Haunted forest incident shows better crisis management needed.'

The editorial then complains that The News was denied access to police and fire reports. Nowhere in the editorial does The News cite any aspect of the crisis that was mismanaged or any procedure that was done incorrectly or not done.

The fact is that within one minute of the time we discovered the injury, emergency medical technicians were attending the young man. Incidentally, no one from The News asked me anything about how the situation was handled. Also, no one from The News or any other media asked me for a copy of the police or fire reports. There is also an insinuation that I delayed providing The News information. The fact is that I responded to The News request for information the first day it was requested.

Crisis management does not include a duty to spoon feed the media. If there had been a danger to staff, volunteers or visitors to the Haunted Forest, the township would have alerted everyone --- including the media.

The insinuation that we hid information due to our concerns for liability is an insult and a lie. The only concerns that I had as township supervisor from the moment I heard about the incident was the condition of the young man, the safety of the participants and guests, and for the staff that had to deal emotionally with the event.

The public has a right to know everything its government is doing or not doing. Since I have been in office, I have attempted to keep the public fully informed about every aspect of what this township is doing. The Clarkston News is not the public --- neither is it the appointed watchdog of this community. The Clarkston News has no more "right" to receive information than any citizen

The fact is that we don't know precisely how the accident happened. We may never know because no one saw the accident happen.

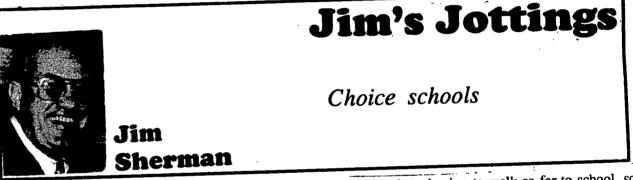

Instead of reporting how The News was treated and leaving doubt, The News might have reported that due to the efficient and rapid response of the township staff operating under its established crisis management, the young man is home and doing well.

Every act I took in this "crisis" was to be sensitive to the needs of the young man, his family, the township staff and the citizens in general.

Finally, all of the issues that The News says are unknown were fully reported by other media based principally on conversations that they had with me.

Clarkston News - your editorial was inaccurate, insensitive and unprofessional. The "real" public has a right to know that the park staff, fire department and sheriff's department acted quickly, efficiently and properly. I am proud of every one of them for their exemplary professional conduct.

Dale A. Stuart is supervisor of Independence Township.

I asked a retired superintendent of schools recently if schools-of-choice would aid education.

He said parents would continue to keep their children in their present district because it was convenient for the parent.

I asked, "What do you think of state Rep Tom Middleton's idea of paying the school district 90 percent of their state aid and holding 10 percent to see what happened to the graduating seniors a year after being graduated?"

"That might work," he responded. "It should get superintendents' attention."

I didn't get around to asking about our governor's idea of allowing churches, colleges, etc. to set up charter schools.

I've got my own ideas about them. I'd let the school districts buy back all the one-room schools

About staff editorials

We at The Clarkston News realize that an important duty of a newspaper is to provide more than just the facts found in news stories.

Since we're out there uncovering the news, we get an inside look at the issues. In our staff editorials, we will give our opinions on those issues, just as other writing on this page - letters and columns - also offers opinions.

We leave the editorials unsigned because we've written them as a staff. Every week, we talk about the issues and take notes on everyone's opinions. Then one of us writes it and the rest of us change it until we're all satisfied.

While our opinions aren't always unanimous, our editorials reflect the majority views of the staff. If the staff splits evenly on an issue, we'll write two editorials on the subject.

Support O'Neill

I was shocked to read that former Democratic state Sen. Kerry Kammer was considering running as a Republican for U.S. Congress against Megan O'Neill in the 9th District.

We already have a new Democrat in the White House, and he has proven that we have enough new Democrats around already.

Megan O'Neill definitely has a very large support of the "grass roots" people throughout the district. Megan came very close to defeating Dale Kildee last time, and with our undivided support, she will be our next congresswoman for the 9th District.

So please join us in getting behind Megan O'Neill for U.S. Congress in 1994.

MEA is truly a teachers' union

The Michigan Education Association is sending petitions to all its members and retirees to get signatures in order to put property taxes back on to support schools the way it was.

Think about it. The local union can strike against the local taxpayer. If the bulk of the money is from the state, the local union loses this power.

Before you sign one of these petitions, you should realize that you are signing to support the local teachers' union and not for a better way to support the schools.

With completion of the new elementary school less than a year away, the Clarkston school district finds itself wrestling with what to name it.

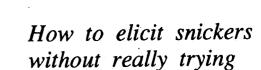

So far, community suggestions have ranged from Springfield Elementary to Ellis Creek Elementary to Maybee Elementary. The latter does seem to make sense, considering how the district's existing elementary names seemingly have nothing to do with their respective locations.

just leave this one alone, thank you.

The district could also consider naming the school after an area business. I don't know about you, but when I think about Springfield Township, the Whoopee Bowl immediately jumps to mind.

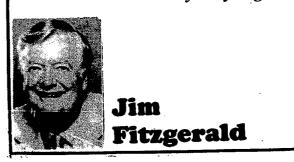

And just think, if it were named Whoopee Elementary, their mascots could be the Cushions. The Whoopee Cushions, get it?

Speaking of mascots, history tells us that Clark-High School earned its moniker due to the numerous packs of Wolves that once inhabited this area in the 19th century. Well, in keeping with the times, I can think of a few things the area has become known for of late. How about the gypsy moths as a nickname? Or the Vampires? Better yet, why not the 'Dozers? This name seems most appropriate, considering the amount of development that's occurred in the area over the past decade. But the mascot issue may be out of our hands. I remember growing up as a kid, the naming of a mascot was usually put before the students in a schoolwide election. I was involved in two of these elections where the students came up with "Warriors" and "Wildcats" as their namesakes.

'If it Fitz .

The newspaper quoted Linda Evangelista on being addicted to dying her hair: "I spent all my free time coloring my hair. When I started streaking it again recently, I realized I missed the chemicals and the burn of your scalp. It's such a nice thing to go through."

Is there a Betty Ford-type clinic for hair-dye addicts? A Dyers Unanimous Helpers, or DUH?

After a wild night of dyeing, does an addict wake up in the morning needing a scalp burn before she can stop her hands from shaking long enough to comb her hair?

On lost weekends, do addicts retrieve bottles of dye they previously hid from their family in the glass shade over a ceiling light in memory of Ray Milland?

Who is Linda Evangelista?

That last question is the most important in the context of today's column, which is about how I hate to feel dumb. The newspaper didn't otherwise identify the model because it took it for granted that all intelligent readers certainly knew who she was. But I don't have the slightest idea. So I feel dumb.

The second-to-last question is how I get even with young whippersnappers who assume everyone except old poops knows who singer Belinda Carlisle is. They don't have the slightest idea who Ray Milland is or what he has to do with empty bottles, and I hope they feel dumb.

At Charley's Crab I ordered whitefish and the waitress asked how I wanted it done. I was confused. I'm used to being asked how I want my beef done, but not my fish. But I know I don't like raw fish, so I took a chance and ordered my whitefish well done.

The waitress snickered, "I mean do you want it broiled, baked or sauteed," she said.

My devoted wife snickered.

And I felt dumb.

So I was careful at a Big Boy a few days later when I wanted to make sure my waffles weren't mushy in the center. I told the waitress to "make them crisp, you know, crunchy, sort of hard."

"You mean well done," the waitress said.

And my devoted wife snickered again.

On the way home we had to stop at a Target store so she could "just run in" and get a birthday present for a grandchild. It was the same Target that, a few weeks earlier, lost all electric power for several hours because of a windstorm. My wife was in the area at the time, she knew it was dark inside, but she went in and spent money any way, by feel.

When I later said I couldn't understand why even the most addicted shopper would voluntarily endure such difficult conditions, she explained: "It was the challenge."

I hate shopping, because it makes me feel dumb. But on this Target trip, while my wife ran in place in the children's department for an hour, I followed her instructions to go buy the best-priced videotape. I was proud to return with two packages containing five cassettes each that were a better bargain than three packages containing four cassettes each.

You'd swear these names were assigned just to confuse us.

Arguments are also being made for Miller Elementary, referring to the family who settled the Springfield-based property, and Conrad J. Bruce, who was an employee of the school district for nearly 26 years.

Well, I just couldn't let this issue pass without tossing in a few suggestions of my own. If you want to name the school after someone ---- the area does have a number of dignitaries to choose from. How about Tim McCormick, Joe Falls or Steve Howe elementaries? Hey, why not Bob Seger Elementary? He used to live in Springfield Township, you know.

Or my favorite — Valerie Bertinelli Elementary. She's a former student of the school district, who's gone on to bigger and better things.

Mass murderer Leslie Allen Williams was apprehended in Springfield Township, but I think I'll

But that was 15 and 20 years ago. I'm sure today's students can come up with something a little more imaginative and politically correct.

So I guess that rules out the possibility of either the Beavises or the Buttheads.

At home, I magnanimously opened both packages, even though they were glued-for-life inside stupid cellophane that, when it finally quit sticking to the packages, wouldn't quit sticking to me and drove me nuts.

The next day, my wife showed me a Target ad saying the tapes I bought for $11.60 per package were now on sale for $7.99 per package.

"If you hadn't opened them so quick, I could take them back and save $8," she said.

I said Target wouldn't possibly allow anyone to take advantage of a sale price by exchanging something bought before the sale began. She said all you have to do is make two transactions: return the item for credit and then buy it again cheaper.

I felt so dumb I was reminded why I don't keep a gun in the house.

State lawmakers would have to go on public record as accepting or rejecting future pay raises under two measures approved last week by the Michigan House. Rep. Tom Middleton co-sponsored the legislation.

The Ortonville Republican said House Joint Resolution Q and House Bill 4830 change the constitutional provisions that now allow salary increases to take effect automatically unless specifically rejected by two-thirds of the Legislature.

This legislation also prohibits Michigan legislators from voting for a midterm pay raise. All votes regarding Former state Sen. Kerry Kammer, a Clarkston-area Republican, is forming an exploratory committee to test support for a bid for U.S. Congress in the 9th Congressional District.

The Ninth District includes southern Genesee and Lapeer counties and northern Oakland County.

"I am sick to heart with the current representation we have in Washington and tired of special interests controlling what happens in Congress. I want to know if there is any support for the kind of leadership I practiced in the eight years I served in the Michigan Senate," said Kammer.

Kammer, 45, was one of the youngest state senators ever elected at age 26. His district covered north Oakland and north Livingston counties. As part of a group of young reformers, Kammer held leadership positions within his caucus and chaired the appropriations sub-committees on education and natural resources.

Kammer was Pontiac city clerk and a Democratic state senator from 1974 to 1982. He ran for governor in the primary in 1982 but was defeated. Kammer served on the Michigan Natural Resources Commission from 1986 to 1990.

He said that although he was a Democrat when he served in the state Senate, he has been Republican for many years because his views have more closely paralleled those of the Republican Party.

"I'm concerned about reducing the deficit - by cutting spending and not raising taxes. ... And I'm concerned about a strong, incentive-based economy that creates jobs and promotes productivity," he said.

Kammer would face Republican candidate Megan O'Neill in the primary, and the winner would challenge incumbent Dale Kildee, a Democrat, of Flint.

Under the proposed legislation, the House and Senate must accept or refuse the commission's suggestion by April 1. If approved, increases would not take effect until the next legislative session. Because these measures call for constitutional changes, voters would have to back last week's action.

Equestrian team rides to seventh at finals

BY CURT MCALLISTER Clarkston News Associate Editor

After nearly a decade, the Clarkston High Equestrian Team recently made a return visit to the state finals where it grabbed seventh place in Class C.

The Wolves fielded a team of four riders this season, which earned them a Class C designation. Over the past 20 years, Clarkston's classification --- which is based on the total number of riders ----has bounced between A and C. The last team to qualify for the state finals was in 1982, when the Wolves won the Class A state championship.

This year's squad consisted of a quartet of area girls, whose residency allows them to ride for CHS. They included: Denise Caston, a junior at Bloomfield Hills Roeper; Jessica Dennig, a junior at Clarkston High; Kiersten Deegan, a sophomore at Clarkston; and Carly Kade, a senior at CHS.

For Kade, this was her second fall endeavor. She was also a member of the Clarkston varsity girls' tennis team.

ship in Milford. Competing against 12 other Class C squads, Clarkston racked up the most points over the course of three regular meets to take the title.

The team was awarded its district trophy at the Oct. 22-24 finals, held at the State Fairgrounds, Detroit. First-year coach Donna Caston said her riders were thrilled to have vied for the championship.

"They were very happy," she said. "Making it to the state championships, in any sport, is a big deal."

Imlay City High School was the eventual Class C champion, while the Wolves had to settle for seventh out of eight teams. Individually, Clarkston's finishes included:

Caston — a second in hunt seat equitation over fences, a sixth in hunt seat and a fourth in the two-person relay race.

Kade --- a third in western seat showmanship and a fourth in hunt seat equitation.

Dennig — a fourth in hunt seat equitation over fences, a fourth in the twoperson relay race and an eighth in hunt seat bareback.

Deegan --- third in hunt seat equitation over fences.

Coach Caston said she was proud of her team's performances and the way they rode all year long.

"These kids rode almost every day," equitation, a fifth in hunt seat bareback she said. "They're very dedicated to the sport.'

With district trophy in hand, Caston said her riders' seventh place finish surprised even her this season.

"I knew we'd have a strong team this year, but I didn't think we'd get a trophy for it. They rode just beautifully," she said. "Hopefully, this type of finish will encourage other prospective riders to come out next year and give it a try."

11. Take frequent mini-breaks to change positions or stand up.

Back pain is the leading cause of disability in people under age 45, with 70 percent of adults experiencing lower back pain for longer than two weeks at least once in their lives.

In the United States, the cost of treatment has been estimated at $23,000 per second.

Robert M. Kowalick Jr., president of Rochester Knee and Sports Therapy in Rochester Hills, says that altering behavior and making lifestyle changes will lead to a healthier back. He says the best approach to treating back pain is to improve alignment and body mechanics and to strengthen and retrain muscles with a properly designed exercise program.

healthier back:

WHEN LIFTING OR MOVING OBJECTS

1. Bend your knees and keep your back from rounding.

2. Keep the trunk of your body close to a vertical position and avoid twisting or turning at the waist.

3. Push rather than pull.

4. Carry objects in front of you close to your body without placing the weight of the object on only one side of your body.

5. Get help with lifting or moving heavy or bulky objects. Make sure the weight is balanced.

WHEN STANDING

stand for long periods of time in one asymmetrical posture (with weight on only one foot). Keep your weight evenly distributed on both feet.

WHEN SLEEPING

7. Avoid sagging mattresses or propping your head up too high.

8. Avoid sleeping in the fetal position (curled up) all night.

WHEN STITTING

9. Maintain the inward curve of your lower back. Avoid letting your head fall in front of your shoulders; keep your head over your shoulders.

10. Slide back all the way in the seat.

According to Kowalick, generally back problems and injuries are a result of improper body mechanics during activity as well as general inactivity. Most back problems are preventable.

In addition to the simple lifestyle and behavior changes, Kowalick recommends a comprehensively designed exercise program including strengthening, mobility conditioning, flexibility, general postural correction exercise and proper education in how to take care of the back.

Wolves snap losing skid against Orion

After four consecutive league losses, the Clarkston varsity girls' basketball team resumed its winning ways with a 47-38 victory over Lake Orion Nov. 4.

That night, the usually quick-starting Wolves trailed after one quarter, 15-9, but went on an impressive 15-2 run in the second period. The third quarter was much of the same as Clarkston outgunned their hosts 14-9 on the way to an easy win.

The Wolves (10-8, 3-6 in league) were paced by Anne Brueck and Kerry Kelly with 17 points apiece. Teammate Leah Howard also chipped in with four points.

The Dragons (3-15, 0-9 in GOAL) were led by Amy Bailey with 14 points. Clarkston travels to Pontiac Central Thursday, Nov. 11.

CHS draws Lapeer East in districts

The luck of the draw wasn't with the Clarkston varsity girls' basketball team last week.

At the pre-district meeting of athletic directors, the Wolves were paired up with host Lapeer East in the first round. The Eagles have lost only one game this year, enroute to yet another Metro League title.

East is led by all-state and Ms. Basketball candidate Amanda Behrenbrinker, who almost single-handedly knocked the Wolves from the district title game last year. The 6-2 center averages about 18 points a game for Lapeer.

The Eagles and Wolves are scheduled to play at 8 p.m. Monday, Nov. 15. The winner of this contest plays against Holly on Wednesday, Nov. 17.

All tickets are available at the entrance of Lapeer East High School.

Harrier takes 66th

In her first-ever state meet, Clarkston sophomore Anna Vandermeer placed 66th last Saturday.

She was the lone CHS representative to perform at the Class A cross country finals in Grand Rapids. Her official time was 21 minutes.

Vandermeer, the reigning GOAL champion, qualified for the state finals by taking 15th place at regionals Oct. 30. She was awarded a medal for her performance in Swartz Creek. Vandermeer was also named Clarkston's female runner of the year at a team banquet last week. Matt Warner received top honors for the boys' squad that same evening.

Most-improved awards were also presented to Staci Iezzi and Torben Ernst for their respective teams.

Both squads finished in third place in the conference this season with identical 3-2 records.

Dance champions

THE CLARKSTON Chiefs Freshman Cheerleaders took first place at the 1993 Super Cheer competition Oct. 31 for their pom pon/ dance routine. Dressed in poodle skirts from the '50s, the team performed the routine "Grease Lightning" from the movie Grease. In the event at Waterford Kettering High School, the Chiefs topped teams from Brandon, Lake Orion, Pontiac, Waterford, Rochester and Lapeer. Team members include (bottom row, from left): Jackquie Davis, Lindsay Walker, Kelly Robinson (mascot), Courtney Robinson, Amber Kareus (mascot), Becca Kullis, Megan Gaines, Lindsay Whitehead, Sarah Haffner, Kim Wilson, Kendra Harlow, Lauren Bendes, Lindey Hawley, Danielle Webb, Nicole Kareus, Kathi Wiegand (top). The team is coached by Belinda Wiegand, Sandy Chenet and Terri Bendes. The Chiefs' cheerleading director is Pam Wilson.

Road to professional sports a narrow one

While most American boys dream of one day playing professional basketball or football, statistics indicate that a person's chances rival that of winning a national lottery.

According to figures from the National Federation of State High School Associations, there are approximately 516,000 high school students playing interscholastic basketball each year. This means there are 148,000 seniors playing basketball.

The number of collegiate basketball players each year, from NCAA figures, is 13,000. Apportioning the number by known percentages reveals that there are about 4,000 freshman positions each year for the 148,000 high school seniors to fill, and about 2,600 college seniors to fill about 64 positions won by rookies each year in professional basketball.

Based on these approximations, 2.7 percent (or less than one in 30) of high school seniors will go on to play college basketball. About half that number will receive basketball scholarships. Fewer than three in 100 college seniors (2.5 percent) will make it for at least one year in pro basketball. National Federation statistics show 919,000 high school football players each year, which works out to about 263,000 seniors. There are about 50,000 NCAA football players in the country, which means there are roughly 17,500 new freshman positions available each year. There are also about 9,500 college seniors to fill the 215 positions won by rookies in the NFL.

These figures indicate that 6.7 percent (or one in 15) of all high school senior football players will go on to play college football. Again, about one half of these, or one in 30 will receive football scholarships.

Based on these figures, the odds of a high school student-athlete making a professional team are much smaller than generally believed. An individual would be well advised to concentrate at least as much on academics, using athletics as a vehicle to get a college education rather than depending on college as a route to a professional sports career.

Even those who do become professional athletes have an average career span of only three to four years, and then they have to return to the "real world."

Six named all-GOAL

Six members of the Clarkston varsity soccer team were tapped as all-league selections by a panel of conference coaches. The first team included a trio of Wolves, while three made up the second team.

The first team consisted of Nick Bielak, Ray Torrence and J.R. Kirk, who scored a team-high 20 goals this year. The second team is composed of Brian Bovee, Matt Little and Derrick Spires.

The Wolves finished the season with a record of 13-6-1, enroute to the school's first-ever league title.

Special assessment district receives go-ahead

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE Clarkston News Staff Writer

and development of a light industrial zone. In a 5-2 vote, the Independence Township Board approved the special assessment district with an amended resolution. Supervisor Dale Stuart and Trustee Mel Vaara

Last spring, school representatives from three of your local schools - Clarkston Elementary, Andersonville Elementary, and the Oakland Technical Center ---proudly accepted notification that their schools had been accepted as members in the North Central Association. Dr. Elaine Middlekauff (CE), Dr. Sharon Devereaux (AE), and Dan Manthei (OTC), met with other educators in Chicago who were becoming members of NCA for the first time.

Gary

Haner

Just what does accreditation mean? Essentially, accreditation by the NCA means that the school has met standards set for membership. These standards signify that the school has the resources, personnel and leadership necessary for effective education. The accreditation is accompanied by an outcomes-based assessment in which target goals are measured by student success.

And now the real work begins. Each of our three schools will begin an extensive five-year plan to earn accreditation. School committees will analyze what they are doing to help their students and what they want to concentrate on to improve learning. Realistically, the buildings will set 3-5 target area goals.

Research and data analysis will help to set these target goals. Strategies will be developed into action plans focused on improving student learning. As student outcomes are measured, goals are evaluated. Meeting accreditation requirements in each buildings will require a joint effort by the community and the staff members to make sure that the potential for quality education remains constant.

Why does your district care about North Central accreditation? Because North Central membership assures the community that the school has met those standards which good schools in the NCA region consider imperative for effective education to take place. Since we began our school improvement process several years ago, one of our goals was to have each and every Clarkston school fully accredited on a timely basis. As you know, Clarkston Senior High is already accredited, and our remaining schools will be joining the ranks by 1996.

What is north Central?

The North Central Association, the nation's largest regional accrediting association, is a voluntary coalition of over 7,000 schools and over 1,000 colleges and universities in the 19-state region of the central United States. The Association works with schools to improve the quality of education through a continuous process of accreditation and evaluation.

What is accreditation?

To become a member of NCA, schools must first demonstrate that they meet or exceed the input and process standards established for all NCA accredited schools. That's accreditation - meeting or exceeding standards established by an external organization. Accreditation is extended one year at a time and is based upon the school continuing to meet the association's standards.

The accreditation status of every member school is reviewed annually, first by the elected state committee, then by a central review committee convened each year at NCA's annual meeting in Chicago. Based upon this committee's review, a school can either be accredited, accredited but warned of deficiencies, or dropped.

Is outcomes accreditation (OA) difficult?

OA is very demanding. It demands a significant commitment from the professional staff, building- and district-level administration, and the board of education. It requires that the school's improvement agenda be established jointly by the board, administration and faculty.

It necessitates that the school's improvement agenda be established jointly by the board, administration, and faculty. It necessitates a commitment to equity and accountability. It expects that the school or district will devote most of its professional development energy to the goals identified by the process. Finally, it anticipates that teachers and administrators will be afforded a significant amount of time to establish and implement school improvement plans.

Gary Haner is superintendent of Clarkston Community Schools.

voted against the motion. Clerk Joan McCrary, Treasurer John Lutz and trustees Bruce Mercado, Jeffrey McGee and Daniel Travis voted in favor of the motion.

Bow Pointe Road is east of Sashabaw Road and south of Waldon. Four property owners along the road have parcels zoned light industrial. Two have residences on their property. The rest of the land is owned by Detroit Edison and a developer.

A special assessment district — a tax roll made up of the property owners - will pay for the road to be paved.

Problems arose when the township and those involved tried to divide payments between property owners.

An amended resolution allotted 1 percent of the cost to Daniel Kell, 23 percent to Al Jones and 75 percent to Detroit Edison and the developer.

The Independence Township Board first adopted a resolution regarding the road on July 7, 1992. In October 1992 Kell objected to the special assessment district, saying that the amount he was to pay was unfair. The board tabled the SAD until a fair percentage of payment could be determined.

The board discussed the SAD Oct. 5 and 19, 1993, with no decisions made.

At the Nov. 2 meeting, Stuart said there was still no written resolution about the assessment district.

"We have worked diligently, and we're still not to a resolution. I feel we should call an end (to the discussion) and leave it to the parties," he said.

Vaara agreed. "I'm in a position to drop it," he said.

Irving Keene, an attorney representing the developer, said he and his client have worked with the township to develop the property to the zoning specifications. The road improvement is needed to continue his development. "We have worked diligently and at great expense to get to this point. We are willing to go ahead," Keene said. Jones said he had opposed the SAD from the beginning, but he was now undecided. Kell said he didn't want to pay for the road, and he would not benefit from the improvements. "I can't sell my house. I'm sitting on zero," he said.

McCrary said she thought the SAD should continue. "I am in favor of going on. It's such an important (road) to the township," she said. McGee said he sympathized with Kell but pointed out that the SAD was needed.

What's clear is that nobody envies the Kells. Unfortunately, the bottom line is it's not a residential zoning anymore. We have to look at what we have master planned for there. It is clear that a road has to go there. I believe that in all fairness to all concerned we have to move forward," he said.

EARNEST MONEY accom panies the offer. It shows that the buyer is a serious bidder for a home. ************

QUESTION: An offer to buy a home is usually accompanied by funds called "earnest money". How is it handled?

ANSWER: The sum proves to the seller that you mean business. The deposit is usually placed with the broker who keeps it in a special trust, or escrow account, separate from his or her own funds. If your offer is rejected, the agent returns your money immediately.

This earnest money, of course, counts toward the sum you'll need at closing. Your full deposit is credited toward the down payment and settlement costs. The contract should clearly state how and when it will be returned.

Bidding policy OK'd

A tougher policy on bidding for goods and services is now in place in Independence Township.

The township board voted unanimously Nov. 2 to approve a resolution requiring the board to call for sealed bids for all contracts over $10,000.

The requirement for bids doesn't apply to intergovernmental contracts and contracts for professional services such as legal and engineering services. The board also reserved the right to waive the requirement when members deem it would be in the best interest of the township. The resolution is more stringent than required by the state. According to Public Acts 167 and 168 of 1993, sealed and competitive bidding for contracts of $20,000 or more are required. The state resolutions make waivers for professional services, intergovernmental contract and emergency repairs.

A policy must be formally adopted by governmental bodies, according to the public acts. Without a policy, the governmental unit would not be eligible for income tax and single business tax revenue-sharing payments.

ETS is associated with approximately 3000 lung cancer deaths per year in nonsmokers. Nonsmokers with chronic heavy exposure to ETS are 30% more likely to die of lung cancer or heart disease. Between 40-50% of children under five years live in homes where they are exposed to ETS. Exposure of children to ETS by parental smoking is causally associated with worsening of asthma in an asthmatic child, increased prevalence of middle ear effusion, pneumonia, bronchitis, and bronchiolitis. ETS exposure increases the number of new cases of asthma in children who have not previously exhibited symptoms by 8000 to 26,000 cases of asthma per year.

'Day dreamers' may suffer with ADD

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE Clarkston News Staff Writer

Six years ago, Margaret Purves of Springfield Township heard a doctor from another state on the radio describing her son.

Purves' son, Steven, was 18 at the time, and she had known something was wrong since he started school. She took her son to New York to see Dr. Harold Levenson, who had been on the radio, and discovered that Steven has Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD).

A definition of ADD

ADD, also known as attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD), is a treatable disorder that affects about 3 percent to 5 percent of the population. Some common characteristics include inattentiveness, impulsiveness and, often times, hyperactivity.

To explain ADD, Purves uses a theory in the book "A.D.D.: A Different Perception" by Thomas Hartmann.

Purves said that in the beginning of time, there were two kinds of people --- hunters and farmers. Hunters went out, killed the food, came back and ate it. The farmers planned their gardens, planted them, tended the gardens, then harvested --- and began to plan again.

Children with ADD need a lot of structure in their lives. Most ADD children have problems when they go to middle school because they change teachers and classes all day.

Purves said our society has become a farmer's society --- with a lot of future planning and desk jobs. This leaves the hunters --- who are observant but don't have the disposition to plan and be focused for a long time --- at a disadvantage.

Children with ADD

Children with ADD are sometimes labeled as lazy, mentally impaired or day dreamers.

Purves said her son had trouble in school that no one could pinpoint. She knew her son wasn't mentally slow, since he read about six years older than his age, and he was difficulty following instructions, often losing things, often engaging in dangerous activities.

A child doesn't have to be hyperactive to have ADD. Up to 30 percent of the children with ADD are not hyperactive at all, but still have trouble focusing their attention.

ADD and adults

There has been a growing realization that children with ADD do not grow out of it — it persists into adulthood for many people.

"There's really a need to recognize this in adults," said Purves.

ADD is a hidden disorder in adults, since they have learned to cope with the problems it causes. Adults with ADD, such as Purves' son, usually have problems keeping organized. They buy impulsively and can't hold a steady job.

Purves said adults with ADD sometimes will buy things --- including cars and boats --- impulsively without thinking that they have bills to pay later in the month. "Some of it sounds crazy, but it's real typical of this disorder," said Purves. Most adults grew up in a time where doctors, educators and parents knew little if anything about ADD and its treatment, said Purves. Many have gone undiagnosed. Some problems the adult may face include forgetfulness, chronic lateness, relationship problems, employment problems and chronic boredom.

when he was age 18. Now she's part of an Oxford group that helps families with ADD.

A support group also is offered for families. "We're trying to help people to deal with this. It's awfully frustrating. It's not easy, but there is help. There is a light at the end of the tunnel," said Purves.

CHADD meets 7-9 p.m. the second Monday of the month during the school year at the Oxford Public Library, at 20 W. Burdick St. For more information, call Joanne at 391-0113.

Is your child easily distracted?

Attention Deficit Disorders affects about 3 percent to 5 percent of the population. Here are a few symptoms in people with ADD:

Excessively fidgets or squirms

Difficulty remaining seated mechanically inclined.

She gave an example of how ADD effected Steven's schooling.

When he was in junior high, she quizzed him the night before a social studies test, and he knew all the answers cold. The next day he flunked the test.

"He got about three right out of 20," she said.

Purves explained that ADD kids can't focus on paper tests for a long period of time. Oral testing is best for them. Purves also noted that ADD children can't handle a lot of repetitive work — they lose interest and don't finish.

"These kids really do want to succeed," said Purves.

She said children with ADD need a lot of structure in their lives. Most ADD children have problems when they go to middle school because they change teachers and classes all day.

Purves said that ADD children sometimes take assignment books back and forth to school, so they won't forget assignments.

Boys with ADD tend to outnumber girls three to one, although it is thought that ADD in girls is underidentified. In children, ADD has 14 common symptoms. They include excessive fidgeting, difficulty in remaining seated,

Support for those with ADD

Purves joined a support group for those with ADD and their families a year ago.

"It has been a real eye-opener for me," she said. Children and Adults with Attention Deficit Disorders (CHADD) is a national organization that strives to inform the public and families about ADD. They provide packets of information to doctors, teachers and parents. "I think a lot of people are in the dark (about ADD).

We're just trying to get the word out to people that this is a problem, but there is help," said Purves.

CHADD invites experts discuss medicines and treatments for the child or adult with ADD. "Some of it is still a mystery. We're learning more about it all the time," Purves said.

Easily distracted D Difficulty awaiting turn in games Blurts out answers to questions Difficulty following instructions Difficulty sustaining attention Shifts from one activity to another Difficulty playing quietly Often talks excessively Often interrupts Often doesn't listen to what is said Often loses things Often engages in dangerous activities. The above list was compiled from "Medical Management of Children with Attention Deficit Disorders - Commonly Asked Questions." It appeared in the fall 1991 newsletter "Chadder" for Children and Adults with Attention Deficit Disorders (CHADD). How to react when a friend is ill

One of life's more difficult moments is when you find yourself talking to a friend who informs you that he or she is seriously, or even terminally ill.

When you find yourself in this situation, it's common to be overwhelmed with self-consciousness. You don't know what to say or how to respond. The fear of not knowing can prevent you from giving the love and support that your friend needs most.

Here are some suggestions that may help you, taken from the comments of terminally ill people.

Be honest with me. I can tell when your feelings or actions are insincere. Your body language gives you away.

Laugh with me; cry with me. Allow me to express intense emotions. It makes me feel so much better to let my feelings show.

Don't feel sorry for me. Your understanding helps preserve my dignity and pride.

Touch me. I want to be accepted despite the way I may look. Inside, I'm still the same person you always knew.

Let me talk about my illness if I want to. Talking helps me work through my feelings, so I can cope with what's happening to me.

an and the second s

Let me be silent if I want to. Sometimes I don't have much energy, and I may just want your silent companionship. Your presence alone can be comforting.

Space your visits and calls. Consistent support is more helpful than overwhelming me at the beginning.

Offer to babysit. The children need a break from my illness, and private times with my spouse are treasured. Offer to go shopping for me. Seeing my family surprised with gifts gives me satisfaction.

Support my family. I may be very sick, but they, too, are suffering. Let them express their grief.

Most importantly, continue to be my friend. Don't let my illness overshadow all the good times we've shared together. We're friends, and it's OK to say that it's hard for you too.

Take a walk; it could save your life

We all know that exercise is good for us. It lowers blood pressure, reduces cholesterol and helps relieve anxiety, aggression and stress.

But finding the time and the energy for a strenuous workout can be difficult. Now, however the Centers for Disease Control suggests that even simple, everyday activity can provide a useful level of exercise.

Just 30 minutes a day of mild activity such as gardening, raking leaves, taking short walks or climbing the stairs is all you need. You don't even have to do it all at one time. Instead, you can scatter your workout throughout the day. Take a 15-minute walk at lunch, spend 10 minutes raking leaves and 5 minutes vacuuming.

Even seniors can profit from a variety of exercises. A recent Tufts University study found that regular exercise helped people age 90 and older move more comfortably and perform daily activities more easily, even when they are coping with chronic illness or are wheelchair bound.

With America searching for ways to cut soaring health care costs, this news couldn't have come at a better time. Nearly a quarter million deaths each year can be attributed to physical inactivity. Those who don't exercise are at risk for stroke, heart disease, hypertension, gout and gallbladder disease. Smokers put themselves additionally at risk. These problems add significantly to our health care bill and diminish quality of life.

We can help save millions of dollars and lives by taking a few preventive measures. So next time you reach for your car keys, think about walking instead. Exercise and quit smoking.

Children and the flu

As cold weather brings young children indoors, their exposure to the flu virus is increased.

One of the most dangerous aspects of flu for children is diarrhea that often accompanies high fever and body

In young children, the frequently watery stools of aches. diarrhea can cause the loss of body fluids and electrolytes such as sodium, potassium and chloride, leading to dehydration.

Not all clear liquids are adequate to manage electrolyte losses in children. Juices, broths, soft drinks, sports beverages and teas can contain either too much or too little of certain electrolytes.

Many parents find it a good idea to keep their pantry stocked with a pediatrician-recommended product such as Pedialyte Oral Electrolyte Maintenance Solution. It now comes in bubble gum flavor, unflavored and fruit.

If diarrhea or any other childhood health problem persists or worsens at any time, see your doctor.

Eye exams help fight glaucoma

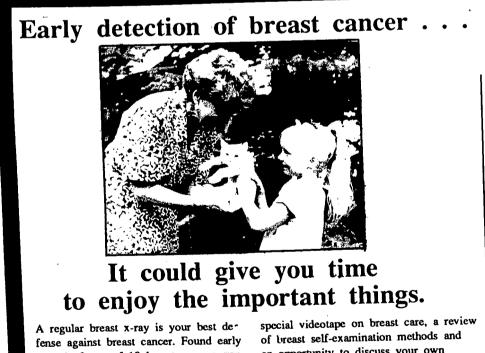

Over 50 million American at risk for glaucoma can save their vision with regular eye exams.

High-risk individuals include everyone over age 60, African Americans over age 40 and anyone with diabetes or a family history of glaucoma.

Glaucoma is a chronic eye disease in which fluid pressure increases within the eyes. It can result in blindness. Regular testing can help doctors prescribe medications or treatments before too much vision is lost.

"If glaucoma is detected early enough it can be controlled before serious vision loss occurs," says Kim Robbins, M.D., a Connecticut-based ophthalmologist and member of the Better Vision Institute Advisory Council. "That's why it's essential to see your eye care professional on a regular basis."

Water: Healthiest beverage

Americans drink oceans of pop, milk, beer, juice, coffee and tea each year, but the nations' healthiest beverage is water.

Public tap water contains no calories, fat, cholesterol or artificial sweeteners. Its quality is strictly controlled by the Safe Drinking Water Act, and the price is right.

Americans pay only fractions of a penny per glass for a quality product delivered directly to their homes 24 hours a day.

Water lubricates the organs, joints and lungs. It carries food and oxygen to cells, cleans up waste product through sweat and urine. And it keeps us cool.

Yet millions are falling short of the daily recommended water intake, risking borderline dehydration — a common culprit of headaches and fatigue.

Particularly prone to dehydration are infants, the elderly and nursing mothers, who need to replace fluids lost through breast-feeding. Pregnant women should drink up to 10 glasses of water a day to help cleanse their bodies of extra waste.

Public water supplies are safe throughout the country, according to the National Rural Water Association, because they must meet stringent quality standards mandated by SDWA, and SDWA must notify the public if the water does not meet those standards.

It's not just tap water — it's healthy, inexpensive and readily available.

Sleepy tales

For years, stories and fairy tales have been told about sleep, how much and when we should sleep.

There are two common myths about sleep.

Myth: You can learn to get by on less sleep. Fact: Sleep needs are innate — they can't be changed. Most people — about 90 percent of the population need 7-9 hours of sleep each night. Some people need as many as 12 or as little as 4 hours, but it's extremely uncommon.

Sleep needs also vary with age. Infants sleep about 16 hours a day. Sleep needs decrease with age, and level off in adulthood. Around age 65, the ability to maintain sleep decreases, so the elderly often need to sleep more than once in a 24-hour period to meet their sleep needs.

Americans are unprepared for emergencies

How would you react in a medical emergency? If you feel less prepared than you should be, you're not alone.

A national poll of more than 1,000 Americans showed that many are confused about what to do in a medical emergency and which emergency response number to call.

Nearly half of the people surveyed — 46 percent — had difficulty identifying the national 9-1-1 emergency hotline number, which is considered one of the pillars of the country's emergency response system.

According to Charlotte Yeh, vice president of the American College of Emergency Physicians, "In a medical emergency, the ability to make the right call is critically important. In many cases, getting a victim skilled medical attention as quickly as possible can literally mean the difference between life and death."

The survey, conducted by Yankelovich Partners, was commissioned by the American College of Emergency Physicians (ACEP) and The Upjohn Company.

Preventing tragedy

According to ACEP, accidental injury is the number one killer of Americans age 45 and younger and the fourth-ranked cause of death overall. Accidents claim an estimated 100,000 lives annually.

Many of these deaths could have been prevented if people knew how to recognize an emergency and respond to it calmly and clearly. ACEP advises individuals to keep their emergency hotline number posted near the telephone, and to answer all of the emergency dispatcher's questions completely and calmly.

The survey also revealed that:

Few people discuss medical emergency preparation with their regular physician, an important step in preparing for an emergency.

■ Most people know the warning signs of a heart attack, but few can identify the warning signs of a stroke (speech difficulty, numbness, paralysis, confusion, stumbling and impaired vision).

■ Most people surveyed agreed that an ambulance is the best way to get to the hospital in an emergency. However, 75 percent of those who needed emergency care in the last year were driven by a friend or relative to the emergency room — losing the advantage of receiving on-site treatment.

In response to these survey results, ACEP and Upjohn have launched a public education campaign — "We're Ready, Are You?" — including a free brochure, "What You Should Know About Emergency Care." For the free brochure and an emergency tips refrigerator magnet, sent a self-addressed stamped, No. 10 envelope to Emergency Care Brochure, Dept. NU, 307 West 36th St. Eighth Floor, New York, NY 10018.

Be prepared to call 9-1-1

The American College of Emergency Physicians urges you to call an ambulance when:

The victim's condition is life-threatening.

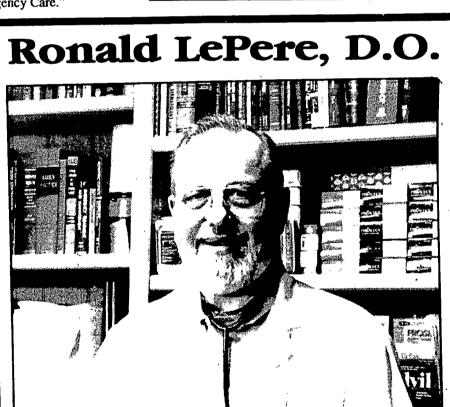

The victim's condition could become worse on the way to the hospital and become life-threatening.

Moving the victim could cause further injury.
 The skills or equipment of paramedics or emergency medical technicians are needed.

 Distance or traffic could delay getting the victim to a hospital.

Remember, keep your emergency hotline number — 911 — near the phone.

Vaccine protects against three strains of flu

and the second second

and the second second

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE Clarkston News Staff Writer

Resident lined up early to get flu shots in October. The program at the Independence Township Senior Center was sponsored by the Oakland County Health Departments Service to the Aging.

The demand for the low-cost shots is increasing. "People are more aware of the importance of being vaccinated," said registered nurse Helen McCredie. McCredie and two other nurses vaccinated 50 people at the senior center.

The flu vaccine for fall and winter of 1993-1994 offers protection against three flu strains circulating worldwide. These include the Texas, Beijing and Panama-like strains.

The health department recommends everyone over age 9 receive a flu shot every year. Children under age 9 should also get the vaccine but are required to get two doses of the vaccine four or more weeks apart.

Flu vaccinations offered

Pneumococcal pneumonia, combined with the flu, is the sixth-leading cause of death among older adults in the U.S. and the leading cause of pneumonia-related hospitalization.

In 1993, it is expected to result in the deaths of 40,000 Americans; 10,000 will die from the flu. Senior citizens across the country can get vaccinations and educational materials at participating hospitals through a national campaign known as "Pneumonia Pnockout."

The program runs through Nov. 19 and is sponsored by Voluntary Hospitals of America, the nation's largest alliance of not-for-profit hospitals with support from Merck and Co. and AT&T.

To find out where vaccinations are offered, call 1-800-213-1133.

People with chronic health problems such as diabetes; heart, lung or kidney disease; severe chronic anemia; or who have conditions or take medications that lower the body's resistance to infection and these people's caregivers should all have flu shots. Children with asthma or who are using long-term aspirin therapy are at risk for flu complications. Also, healthy adults over age 65 have an increased risk for complications of flu infections.

People with allergies to eggs, who have a fever at the time of the vaccination, who are pregnant, are under 6 months old or who have a past history of Guillain-Barre's syndrome should check with their doctors before having a flu shot.

Contact your doctor or the county health department at 858-1280 for more information about flu vaccinations for the 1993-94 flu season.

Cancer answers

How do chronic and acute leukemia differ?

What is chronic leukemia? It is different from acute leukemia?

Cancers are most often named for the cells of origin or for what cells look like when they are examined under a microscope. Leukemias are divided into two major categories depending on the cell type of origin: acute and chronic. More specific cell types exist within these broad categories. Acute and chronic myeloid leukemias can develop from the myeloid series of cells, while acute and chronic lymphocytic leukemias also can develop from the lymphoid series of cells.

Acute leukemias result in complications related to inefficient or high white blood counts, anemia or low platelet counts. Symptoms of these conditions may appear as infections and bleeding over a short period of time, usually measured in a few days to weeks.

Chronic myelogenous, as well as chronic lymphocytic leukemias, may persist for months without any major symptoms.

Chronic lymphocytic leukemia is the most common form of leukemia in the western hemisphere. This disease is common in patients who are 60 years of age or older, although 10 percent of the patients are 40 years of age or younger. In recent years, a diagnosis of chronic lymphocytic leukemia is often made as a result of an incidental finding during a routine examination in which a blood count is performed and persistent increases in the number of lymphocytes is discovered.

Consult your physician if your are experiencing any unusual symptoms or any of the following:

Tire easily.

Bruise easily because not enough of the clotforming cells are present in the blood.

Experience recurrent infections because of the disturbed white cell and immune functions.

While these are symptoms of chronic lymphocytic leukemia, they can be symptoms of other ailments as well.

Many patients diagnosed with chronic lymphocytic leukemia do well for four to six years without medical therapy (i.e., chemotherapy). When therapy is indicated, symptoms generally can be controlled for years. A small number of complete remission is achieved, although the disease recurs in a significant number of patients.

Different therapeutic regimens and treatment studies are under way to improve patient response to initial therapy and to maintain the good responses that are achieved by the primary therapy.

I am surviving breast cancer. Recently a friend told me about a new program that offers cancer patients a free make-over. She felt this would life my spirits, although she cannot recall the program's name. Can you tell me more about this program and what is National Cosmetology Association. The groups jointly sponsor make-over sessions for cancer patients in order to help them feel better about their appearance.

With the holidays approaching, your friend has given you an excellent suggestion for brightening your spirits, as well as your appearance. "Look Good ... Feel Better" was created to help patients who were coping with physical side effects of their treatment.

Some therapies can cause patients to lose their hair, eyebrows and eyelashes; it may cause their nails to become brittle, and it may cause discoloration of the nails and skin. "Look Good ... Feel Better" techniques teach patients to camouflage these changes in their appearance and help make patients feel good about themselves. It also provides an opportunity for patients to meet others who are experiencing similar changes in appearance. During the session they also realize they are not alone in coping with side-effects of treatment.

A certified cosmetologist offers advice on applying makeup quickly and easily and on the care of dry skin and brittle nails. Cosmetologists must complete a day-long session to be certified in this program. They are given accurate advice on cosmetics and skin-care products that are safe to recommend for cancer patients.

For more information on a "Look Good ... Feel Better: program in your area, contact your local American Cancer Society.

During the past year I have undergone surgery and radiation treatments for lung cancer. I am not looking forward to the holidays. Do you have any suggestions on how I can get through the next few months?

The holidays are a difficult time not only for seriously ill people, but for many people who are feeling depressed or down during this period. The festivities and traditions may be quite different for you now because of all you have been through this past year. Perhaps this may be a time to reflect and start considering some new traditions in addition to or in place of those that have made the holidays a special part of your life.

Suggestions for coping with the holidays include:

In order to endure, and even enjoy this holiday season, set realistic expectations for yourself. Holiday pressures affect everyone. Reconsider which activities are truly meaningful and enjoyable to you. Reduce some of the holiday pressure by reassigning and delegating projects.

BUILDER, INC.

changed next year; you can move to something new, or back to the old way. Don't worry about all the other holidays to come in years ahead. You will be in a different place in your life then.

Plan ahead and accept your limitations. Consider, ahead of time, what may be expected of you both socially and emotionally. You may need to lower your expectations in order to accommodate your current needs.

Trim down to essentials. Limit social and family commitments to suit your available energy. Shop early or use catalogue sales. Re-evaluate priorities and forgo unnecessary activities and obligations.

Ask for and accept help. Accept offers for assistance with holiday shopping, decorating, cleaning, cooking, etc. Allow those who care about you to offer their support in concrete ways.

Build in flexibility and give yourself permission "to be." Learn to play it by ear. Allow breathing space and expect fluctuations in mood and perspective.

My sister has been treated for breast cancer. Although she has done quite well, she seems to have a hard time dealing with holidays and celebrations. What can I do to help her enjoy what used to be happy celebrations?

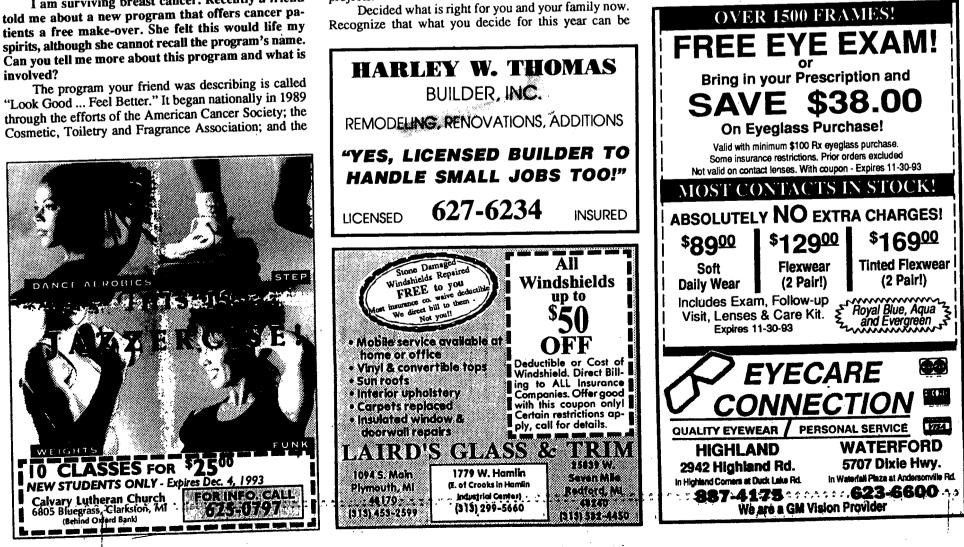

Many people who have suffered losses in their lives discover that holidays have become a source of depression instead of happiness. Holidays are a reminder of the happy times before the illness, and thus a reminder of all losses and changes that have followed. People who have recovered from cancer and are physically doing well are affected by this, as their battle has included losses as well as victories.

The usual advice, which is not helpful, goes something like this, "You're OK now; why are you sad?" It is a great burden for people to try to pretend a happiness that isn't there.

The best thing you can do for your sister is to listen. It is helpful to be able to talk to someone who will simply listen and understand, without giving advice.

Allow her to talk openly about her feelings. This can reduce the negative effects and allow her to enjoy at least parts of the holiday. You also can encourage your sister to join you when you go out shopping or celebrating, but honor her wish if she declines.

Vitamin reduces muscle damage

Don't spoil the holidays by trying an exercise that stresses some muscles more than normal.

Usually, the blame for sore muscles is placed on individual cells that tear apart as they lengthen under the force of exercising.

A new study suggests that a second kind of cell damage may also contribute to the soreness. It's caused by oxygen free radicals that are generated by the body during a workout.

Oxygen free radicals damage fats in muscle cell membranes; they destroy the cells' integrity, says Mohsen Meydani, a nutritionist at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging at Tufts University in Boston.

But he found that Vitamin E makes a difference. Boosting the body's Vitamin E reserves before beginning an exercise program reduces the tissue-damaging oxygen radicals, he says.

That extra Vitamin E also appears to reduce inflammation of damaged tissue, says Simin N. Meydani, a nutritional immunologist at the Boston center, which is part of USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

Vitamin E's benefits were found in comparing the effects of getting 800 I.U. of the vitamin daily vs. a placebo for several weeks before doing muscle-damaging exercise. Men in their 20s and another group age 55 to 74 were studied.

Mohsen Meydani says the group that received the vitamin, which included both young and older men, had less damage due to oxygen radicals. And the data suggest that "the older men were better protected," he adds.

He says he wanted to compare the effect of Vitamin E — an antioxidant — in young and older men because body levels of antioxidant enzymes reportedly diminish as people age. Simin Meydani earlier found that Vitamin E blunts two chemical messengers in the immune system, which act together to trigger muscle inflammation from exer-

"It appears that Vitamin E is controlling the magnicise. tude of the inflammatory response," she says, and that may reduce muscle damage as a result.

Epilepsy in elderly common

Twenty-five million American now alive will have at least one seizure during their lifetimes. Most will not develop epilepsy.

Among the more than 2 million who do develop epilepsy, many are older adults who may have thought that epilepsy happens only to children.

According to the Epilepsy Center of Michigan, recent studies show that newly diagnosed epilepsy occurs most frequently in children under age 2 and in the elderly over age 65.

The disorder affects about 300,000 in this older group, a population almost equal to the number of school children who have the condition. Some medical professionals have been surprised by these findings, as doctors have themselves traditionally considered epilepsy a health problem mostly associated with childhood.

The chance of developing epilepsy, the Center said, is 1.4 in 100 up to age 31. After age 31, the chances increase further to 3.3 in 100 by the time a person reaches age 80.

"As people live longer and the over 60 population expands," said Arlene Gorelick, executive director of the Center, "epilepsy in the elderly can be expected to increase. We are concerned that some people might go undiagnosed or even, perhaps, be misdiagnosed. Not all seizures are convulsions. The subtle ones can easily be confused with other conditions."

The cause is unknown in about half of the cases," Gorelick said. "But anything that can harm the brain can also result in epilepsy."

"Effective treatment is available in most cases, and some people find seizures somewhat easier to cope with when they happen to older people. This is because the adult personality is established and the episodes don't interfere with learning and development as they may in children.'

Epilepsy affects over 90,000 people in Michigan. It is a common neurological disorder marked by sudden, brief changes in brain function that result in seizures of various types. Most people with this condition are otherwise normal and healthy. With regular use of medication, many can live completely free of seizures.

For more information about epilepsy and the elderly, contact the Epilepsy Center of Michigan at (313) 351-7979.

Ask your pharmacist what you should know

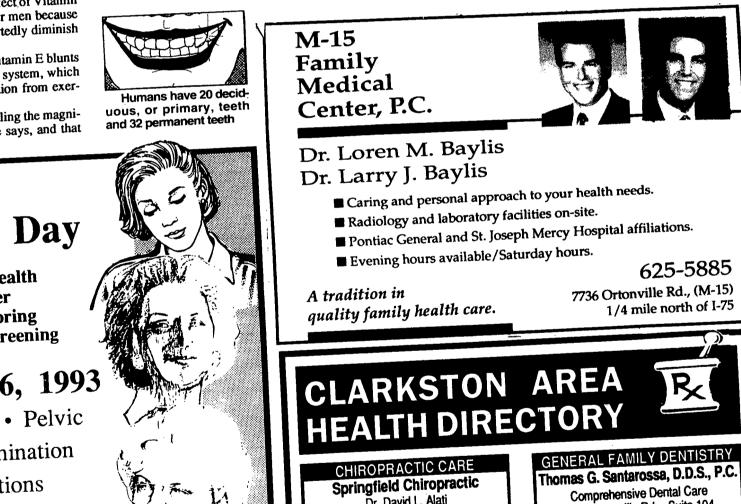

Next time you get a prescription filled, ask your pharmacist certain questions, recommends the American Pharmaceutical Association, the national organization for pharmacists.

Here are some questions to ask:

■ When and how do I take this? With food? At a certain time of day?

- How long should I take it?
- What side effects should I watch for?
- What if I miss a dose?
- How shall I store it?

Your pharmacist can answer these and any other questions you may have about the medicines you take prescription or not.

Three Clarkston-area residents are among the 127 new medical students entering the Michigan State University College of Osteopathic Medicine this fall in East Lansing.

Gretchen C. (Spiece) Goltz, daughter of Sara L. Spiece of Clarkston and wife of Grant P. Goltz, received the bachelor of arts degree in biology from Hope College, Holland, in 1992. She is a 1988 graduate of Clarkston High School.

David Paul Meeker, son of Paul and Patsy Meeker of Clarkston and husband of Michele, received an associate's degree in liberal arts from Oakland Community College in 1992 and a bachelor of arts degree in general studies from St. Mary's College, Orchard Lake, in 1993. He is a 1977 graduate of Clarkston High School. Meeker has one daughter, Danielle, 10, and one son, Jeremiah, 3.

Scott Weeks, son of Bill Weeks of Clarkston and Diane Weeks of Dallas, Texas, received a bachelor of science degree in physiology from Lyman Briggs School of Michigan State University, East Lansing, in 1993. He is a 1989 graduate of Clarkston High School.

The osteopathic medical students will take six semesters of basic science, behavioral science and clinical studies on campus. They will then begin 60 weeks of clinical clerkships, including ambulatory and in-patient care, in community hospitals, clinics and health care agencies.

Upon completion of medical school, the students will receive the doctor of osteopathy degree, and after examination may be licensed in any state to provide the full spectrum of health care.

Annual Halloween Hoedown benefit a bash

BY CINDY "ZIP-LOCK" BEACH

The Clarkston Socialites were out in rare form Saturday, Oct. 30, for the annual Halloween Hoedown Benefit for Homeless Contractors at Lowrie's Landscape.

This exclusive invitation-only event took place in a cavernous, concrete-floored pole barn, which was lightly scented with diesel fuel and superbly decorated with weedmat, hay bales and pumpkin leaf bags. Those fortunate enough to obtain

Those fortunate chough to obtain invitations braved both the elements and a walk through the "No-Good Employee" graveyard to be whisked into the comfort and warmth of the un-insulated barn. Once inside, guests were awed by the "Bags of Ice" sculpture gracing the beverage tank.

With mouths still agape, they were led to the extravagant buffet, where they filled their plates with such delicacies as husband Bernie. Uncle Fester and Cousin It never looked better in their basic black and more-hair creations by Jim and Sandy Jordan. Looking positively prehistoric were don and Kay Brown in the latest from the Flinstonesque After-Hours collection, which didn't contain a bit of Rubble.

Society news

Mrs. Carolynn Bailey was stunningly draped in this year's hottest "I-wanna-bea-gypsy" number artfully set off by 3-inch blood-red fingernails. The Grim Reaper again showed how a little black dress can carry through from season to season as it so beautifully did on the 9-foot-tall Mark Smith, who was accompanied by Mrs. Smith in the ever-popular "Granny-getyour-sensible-shoes-on" ensemble.

Entertainment was provided by the ever-rousing Jumpin' John Korwin. Mr. Korwin had the crowd whipped into an absolute frenzy as he marched them through dosie-doe's, right AND left-hand stars, the impossibly intricate Achy-Breaky Heart line dance and the wildly exciting Funky Chicken.

Aged Log of Sausage, Imported Swedish Meatballs, assorted cheeses intricately carved into cubes — and, for dessert, guests were treated to milk chocolate stuffed with a peanut and covered in a beautiful candy coating so as to graciously melt in their mouths and not in their hands.

Attire for the evening was most definitely haute couture. Leading off with the Vineyard Collection were Fred and Sheila Ritter and MIke and Linda Rooney, whose blue-tinged face nicely complemented the grapes they spent so many creative hours inflating.

Dr. and Mrs. Bruce Harlton dealt quite a hand with the Gambler and Lady Luck ensemble. The next generation was presented by Dr. David and Sherri Regiani in absolutely out-of-this-world coordinating Star Trek outfits.

As guests were gasping for air and letting their heart rates slow a bit, they were treated to an appearance by the fabulous "Miss Delicious." Miss Delicious (a.k.a. Rick Handley) is the world-renowned 6'6", 280-pound belly dancer who astounds and mesmerizes with her breathtakingly brief and beautiful costumes and wildly provocative gyrations. Her crowning naval jewel, the 2-inch, ruby-red light of Christmas, delighted and amazed all. It was truly an indescribable highlight to the evening.

The evening's festivities were presided over by Al Joslon and his Mamie (a.k.a. Ted and Whoopie Lowrie).

The benefit raised 32 cents, up from 20 cents the previous year.

Cindy "Zip-Lock" Beach resides in the Clarkston area and keeps up on social activities in the area.

AL JOLSON (alias Tom Lowrie) hosts the party with his wife, Mamie.

Chef Cryderman heats up airwaves on cable-TV

CHEF Chris Cryderman cooks up a storm for his cable-TV audience. His show, "Dining with Christopher," airs 8:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Fridays on Independence-Clarkston Channel 65.

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE Clarkston News Staff Writer

Move over Cajun Chef, Yan and Julia Child --- Chef Christopher Cryderman has hit the airwaves at TCI Cable, Independence Township.

Cryderman, a Ferndale resident, owns Good Food Express and ETC Catering on Dixie Highway in Waterford. His show "Dining with Christopher" has aired on the public access channel in Independence Township for three months.

His idea for his own show followed a guest appearance on "Prescription for Health" three years ago.

He found out about public access cable-TV while at a grocery store in Royal Oak. He said he noticed a TCI Cable crew filming a public service announcement and asked about creating his own cooking show. One thing led to another, and Cryderman taped 12 shows in the Troy studio

"I think we produced a lot of good shows down there," he said.

While he enjoyed creating the shows, he said he found the studio limiting. He stopped taping after he opened his new restaurant.

He resumed taping the shows when Independence Township's cable crew agreed to film on location at his Amy LaValley, director of TCI Cable of Independence, said Cryderman is very good and natural in front of the camera.

"He's the one-take wonder," she said.

Cryderman explained, "I luck out in the sense that we don't have to do re-takes."

He said he enjoys creating the shows because they force him to try new things. He has taped shows on Mexican food, Italian cooking and floral design. One show featured cooking with children and included his 7vear-old son.

Cryderman studied cooking at a vocational school in high school and also at the Culinary Institute in New York. He has worked in restaurants in three states.

His Waterford restaurant opened this summer and features a healthy menu of vegetarian, low-fat and no-fat foods.

He said his location is good for his business because there is little competition.

"I liked the fact that there wasn't a lot of healthy food out here," he said.

His restaurant also offers entertainment during the week, including poetry reading on Tuesdays, drummers on Wednesdays, comedian would-be's on Thursdays and a singer on Friday nights.

'Dining with Christopher" airs at 8:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Fridays on Independence-Clarkston Channel 65. New shows are aired now, and episodes taped in Troy soon will be rebroadcast.

Some diseases genetically linked

BY VIRGINIA BLOCK

With great sadness we learned of the passing of our friend Elizabeth Hebb, known and loved by many who had turned to her for help in seeking membership in so many of the numerous patriotic societies.

Through her sister-in-law in Leonard, Elizabeth had recently written to me with a lengthy, detailed letter telling of her tracing the genetic connection to her health problems. Her courage in light of the care, and suffering, involved was typical of her willingness to share, that others could benefit and in today's chaotic scheme of living is a rare commodity.

We will miss her greatly and offer our condolences to her family, and know they will benefit from the medical knowledge gained through Elizabeth's insight.

"Families at Risk" is a book dedicated to the helping any person develop a family health picture that can be called into focus when questions arise that concern genetic connection.

The article in a recent Woman's Day magazine regarding genetically connected diseases, and heredity, provided information on the Alliance of Genetic Support Groups. Reference by this "800" number to research being done currently in Wisconsin led us to "dig in" for how to help our adoptees find answers for their medical records from birth parents.

In Wisconsin, records are open, and a genetic research project there is providing help nationally to help parents, counselors, and social workers with better ways to do their work in raising families, or serving us in other arcas

In the journey back to our ancestoral beginnings, all of us need to keep track of "where we came from," aside from geographic origination.

We followed up on the location of someone in Michigan that is a part of the Wisconsin project, and found it is happening in Grand Rapids at Butterworth Hospital. Those of you having knowledge of the fine genealogical library in that city know already that the interchange of family records will benefit all.

The legacy that Elizabeth Hebb leaves in relating the illness that caused her death to be documented for others to learn from will serve future generations that could benefit relatives of us all. Thank you, dear friend, for all the happier times, and your gift of caring about others.

For readers interested in working on a medical family chart, we will be happy to offer our help. Preventive measures taken now may serve you well in the future. Happy Hunting.

Phillips and her ex-husband have owned a tailoring store in Southfield and a tailoring and tuxedo rental store in the Oakland Mall. She has been tailoring for 15 years. She apprenticed with her ex-husband ,who learned to tailor and create custom-made suits and shirts when he lived in his native Greece.

Craft shows provide outlet for her creativity

BY DEBORAH DZIEWIT Clarkston News Special Writer

Seven years ago, she made gifts for family and friends.

Today, Nancy Sommers makes hundreds of "gifts" for others to buy.

The Springfield Township woman --- mother of four, wife to Bruce, and a full-time machine operator ----

Santa's Workshop Saturday, Nov. 13

If you're looking for unique Christmas gifts, you're sure to find one-of-a-kind items at this weekend's craft show.

Santa's Workshop Craft Show and Sale features handmade items from about 100 crafters. It takes place 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 13, at Clarkston High School.

Sponsored by the Clarkston Area Jaycees, the show admission is $1. The school is off Waldon Road, Independence Township.

usually works two hours a day to make enough of her "critters" to take to the three craft shows a year that she attends.

That includes a stop at Santa's Workshop Craft Show and Sale 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 13, at Clarkston High School.

Sommers said it all began when she gave gifts that she had made herself. Her family and friends thought they were so good that she ought to try to sell her creations at craft shows.

She said she was scared and nervous at first but soon realized how much she loved meeting people.

"I tried one show and had so much fun, with talking to other people and sharing ideas, I knew I had to do more shows," she said.

She specializes in a variety of dolls and what she calls her "critters" --- which are animals or figures whose insides begin with a block of wood. Typically, her figures start with a pattern, and she adds her own special touches. Or she designs them from scratch.

Her holiday line includes a Mr. and Mrs. Raccoon or Fox decked out in red and white and a pair of reindeer all dressed up in their holiday finest.

Parents looking for a special gift for a child can find Sommer's hobby horse collection, which comes in three sizes

Her prices range from $1.50 chalkboard magnets to $45 for pairs of her critters.

HOMEMADE gifts are fun to make, according to Nancy Sommers of Springfield Township. She also finds that friends and relatives love to receive them.

She's specialized in flowers for 22 years

BY CURT MCALLISTER Clarkston News Associate Editor

It's safe to say that not too many people know more about silk and dried flowers than Yvonne Lampela.

This 17-year resident of Independence Township has specialized in these natural and not-so-natural creations for the past 22 years. Lampela took up this particular craft while living in the Berkley area.

She said it served as a form of therapy because she was always homebound with her daughter, who is physically and mentally impaired.

In a short time, Lampela's creations improved to the point where they became marketable.

"My husband, Robert, jokes that I was probably the first person in the state, 22 years ago, to sell these types of items at a craft show," Lampela said.

Over the years, she has sold myriad arrangements of all types and colors. Most of her flowers and natural s come from suppliers in California and Wash-in order to survive, when you consider the number of layoffs that are occurring everywhere. It's been a nice little sideline for a lot of people."

Lampela said the most enjoyable aspect of flower

"It's really satisfying to have someone pay you for something that you've made with your own hands, knowing that they'll eventually hang in their home."

ington. She said these two states are known for their eucalyptus, which she uses a lot in her arrangements. Lampela said silk and dried flower arrangements are extremely popular in Michigan because of the seasonal changes. This popularity is also enhanced by the fact that a majority of all spouses work, reducing the time available for someone to pick up a freshly cut bouquet from the florist, she said.

Looking back over the past decade, Lampela said men have increasingly become more involved in this previously female-dominated field.

"I've noticed over the past five or six years that these types of arrangements aren't being done by just women anymore," she said. "Entire families are getting involved arranging is her patrons.

'I really like making people happy with my creations," she said. "It's really satisfying to have someone pay you for something that you've made with your own hands, knowing that they'll eventually hang in their home.

"This fact alone makes it all worthwhile," Lampela added.
