Gift from Lansing: was it worth the wait? Tax plan makes locals wonder

BY Don Rush
Assistant To The Publisher

Just how the compromise on school funding reached by Michigan's legislature will effect this area is unclear.

After marathon sessions in Lansing, on Dec. 24 both houses agreed on two ways to fund public education in Michigan. Proposal one will be voted on by state residents in March. Should that fail, proposal two will go in effect.

If approved, the ballot proposal, in part, will raise the state sales tax from four to six percent, reduce income tax from 4.6 percent to 4.4 percent, and place a 6 mill school tax on residential property. Additionally, an 18 mill tax would go on commercial property. The state cigarette tax would rise from 25 cents per pack to 75 cents. A Keno Lottery game would also be introduced to raise $100 million for schools.

Should the proposal fail, income tax will rise to 6 percent, single business tax would rise from 2.35 percent to 2.75 percent. School property taxes would be set at 12 mills. Cigarettes would go up 15 cents per pack and non-cigarette tobacco products would be taxed 16 percent.

State Rep. Tom Middleton (R, Ortonville), believes the plans are more fair than funding schools mostly from local property taxes.

"At times I would have thrown the whole plan out . . . but I think there are some tremendous gains here," he said. "I don't think this will be a tax increase."

While Middleton may be satisfied, out-going president of the Clarkston School Board, Dr. Joseph Helpem, isn't.

"My reaction to this whole thing is when you have a collection of clowns, you're bound to have a circus," Helpem said. "Reform has fallen by the wayside. The only possible redeeming aspect is that some schools on the lower end will be brought up — I hope."

The Clarkston School Board and Independence Township (who collects school taxes) are taking a wait and see attitude.

"The information we have now is very general," said Steve Lenar, Clarkston schools' deputy superintendent of business and operations. "We need more

Clarkston High School will host an information session on college financial aid for parents of seniors.

The program begins at 7 p.m., Jan. 11, in the high school theater and will focus on completing financial aid forms and financial aid programs for college. The speaker for the night is Cliff Levitt from Baker College's Financial Aid office.

Building permit fees increase

Fee schedules for building permits were increased by the township board Dec. 21.

In a 7-0 vote the board adjusted the fees with a focus on new construction and development.

Beverly McElmeel, director of the building and planning department, said the last adjustment to the fees was three years ago. She noted that Independence Township had one of the lowest permit fees in the area.

There are also new fees for a pre-fire survey drawing.

For a comprehensive list of the fees contact the building department.

information."

That is the same response of Independence Township treasurer John Lutz, who added the biggest impact of the proposals will be on the Downtown Development Authority.

"They're taking something that was really successful and eliminating it," he said.

Both boards will discuss the tax plan in the future. Lutz hoped State Senator David Honigman will attend a township meeting. Lenar said the school board will have a special meeting Jan. 17, to discuss school financing for 1994-95

Nothing safe in their wake

Teens go on binge of destruction

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Five teens allegedly caused damage at 11 homes on Neal and Ormond roads in Springfield Township.

The boys are from Holly, Springfield Township and Auburn Hills, and range in age from 14 to 16.

Police were called to a Neal Road home the evening of Dec. 30 when a resident saw five teens damaging mailboxes. Police followed foot prints and used dogs to track the teens to a home on Neal Road.

According to the report, the boys told police they damaged mailboxes, cars and broke into a home. Eight mailboxes on Neal Road and one on Ormond Road were damaged.

Three trash cans were destroyed, an electric house meter was broken, and an exterior door window was broken and the door dented.

Two cars were damaged at a construction site in the 13900 block of Neal Road.

Rear and side windows of a 1985 Buick were broken out. The dashboard and windshield wipers were also damaged.

The windshield of a 1980 Ford van was cracked, side mirrors were broken, the dashboard was damaged and the radio was ripped out.

An unoccupied home on Neal Road was broken into and the contents were thrown around.

The boys will be referred to juvenile court for malicious damage of property.

Holiday road report: not bad

Independence and Springfield township residents fared well during the holidays when it came to drinking and driving.

According to police reports there were two alcohol related accidents, both with minor injuries, in Independence Township and one driving under the influence in Springfield Township during the holiday weekend.

For those who did not want to attempt the drive home, Statewide Towing & Recovery Inc. of Independence Township was able to help.

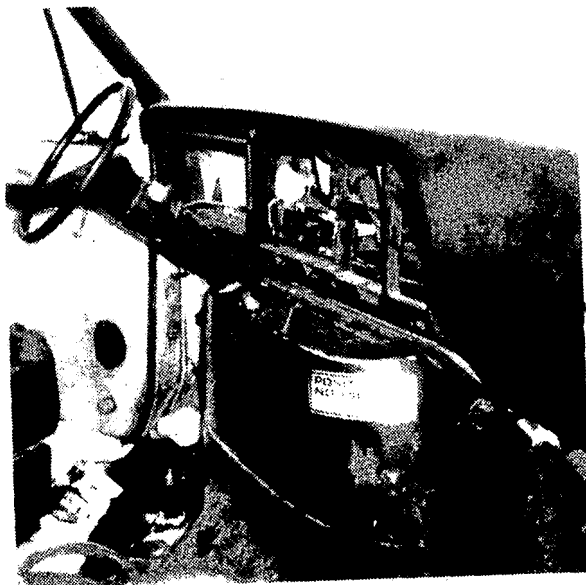

According to driver Ed Grogan the service picked up 21 vehicle and their occupants between Christmas Eve and New Year's Day.

He said most calls were from the Independence Township/Clarkston area, but they did help a couple of bars in Waterford and Orion townships.

Statewide participated in T.O.W.E.D. (Towing Operators Working to Eliminate Drunk Driving) this year. This national program began a couple years ago with an estimated 80,000 pick-up recorded to date.

Grogan said response was terrific to the program and they plan to do the program again next year.

Arbor Day Foundations trees

Ten trees will be given to each person who joins the National Arbor Day Foundation during January 1994.

The trees are part of the nonprofit Foundation's Trees for America campaign.

The ten trees are Sugar Maple, White Flowering Dogwood, Pin Oak, White Pine, Red Maple, Birch, American Redbud, Silver Maple, Red Oak and Colorado Blue Spruce.

"These trees were selected to provide benefits every season of the year: lovely spring flowers, cool summer shade, spectacular autumn colors, and winter berries and nesting sites for songbirds," John Rosenow, the Foundation's executive director, said.

Trees will be shipped postpaid at the right time for planting between Feb. 1 and May 31 with enclosed planting instructions. The six- to 12-inch trees are guaranteed to grow or they will be replaced free of charge.

Members also receive a subscription to the Foundation's "Arbor Day" news magazine, The Tree Book with information about tree planting and care, and a membership card.

To become a member and receive the trees, send a $10 membership contribution to Ten Free Trees, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Ave., Nebraska City, NE 68410, by Jan. 31.

Lay down and reach

Watch your step, look for thin ice

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

How thick is thick enough? Is there an air pocket under ice to help you breath? How long can you survive in icy water?

With 46 lakes and numerous swamps, ponds and streams in Independence and Springfield townships, ice safety during the winter is a big concern.

Deputy Doug Edgar of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department's Marine Division, offered some helpful hints to bring you safely through the winter.

The OCSD recommends ice be a clear, solid 5-inches before you go on it for any reason. Edgar said that others recommend a lower thickness, but that 5-inches should be the minimum for skating, fishing and snowmobiling.

To check the thickness, cut a hole, first at the shore and then where you are going to be using the ice. He noted that deep or running water freezes last.

Edgar said if you are falling through the ice, fan out your body so to catch the edge with your body. He also said if the ice begins to crack, lay down and roll to safety. Laying down distributes your body weight more evenly.

"The thing to remember is, you have roughly five minutes in the cold water," said Edgar.

After the five minutes victims become unresponsive and are more difficult to rescue.

If you see someone go through the ice, call for assistance first. Edgar said that the Marine Division rescue mode is 90 minutes from the time the person enters the water. If you wait to call for help, it cuts down on the time they have to rescue the person.

If you rescue a person from icy water, they may not seem to be breathing. He said that usually the heart is beating, but extremely slow. To check for a pulse, find a main artery on the neck or inner leg and feel for longer than a few seconds.

Edgar said there are three main myths associated with ice accidents.

Despite what you see in the movies, there is no air pocket under the ice. He said the ice and water touch and any air bubble quickly dissipates.

He also said if you rescue a person, don't rub their skin to warm them up. This actually damages the skin. He also said not to give them alcohol because it makes a person colder. Victims should be given warm liquids, but not caffeinated drinks.

Edgar urges citizens to call the OCSD as soon as there is a potential problem. He said it is less aggravating to have a run called off than to be half hour into the rescue time before being notified.

My education at good ol' Clarkston High School, I think, was excellent. Not only was I taught all the stuff I needed to know to get me ready for graduation, teachers there taught critical thinking.

They may not have known they were doing this, but they did. I hope they still are. I hope the kids coming out of school question numbers, statements made by others, especially politicians and media-types (that includes me). I hope they take nothing as it is presented.

I don't and that's why this whole Michigan property tax deal has got me scratching my head.

Call me kooky, but I seem to recall last July a $6.5 billion property tax whacking. Those tax dollars would have gone to finance Michigan schools. I seem to remember that axing by the powers in Lansing caused quite a stir among the Michigan Education Association.

By golly, the state, the MEA said, the state had better replace every gol-darned penny they took away.

That was July. By fall, the MEA stand hadn't changed, but now it would take some $9.5 billion in new taxes to replace the original cut of $6.5 billion. By Christmas morning, the MEA stand hadn't changed, but our friends in the Michigan legislature had come together with two plans to finance schools — two $10.2 billion plus tax plans.

Excuse me, didn't we just get hood-winked here. I know I wasn't a math whiz in Ms. Pamela J. Kneeland's Clarkston High School math classes, but I don't get the equation Lansing has come up with.

Something isn't equal. A isn't A. Six billion ain't (sorry Fredda Meyland, but "ain't" is now in the dictionary) 10 billion. I understand the 6 billion figure replaces local millages and the 9 billion figure represents the rest of the taxes we paid to the state for schools. But, we're still talking over a half billion dollar increase in taxes.

Lansing wasted an opportunity to do some good. Nothing but a tax increase is on the horizon. In March the voters either vote for a tax increase they don't like or Lansing will give us a tax increase we like less.

Thanks, folks. May I have another?

About 14 years ago, US Government teacher Marle once told his pupils: in the legislature to get along you have to go along.

Boy, was he right! Give yourself a gold star, Marle. What started as a joke in July has turned into the biggest tax shift/increase in the state's history.

Who's laughing now?

That's the bad news. Here's the good (?). On Dec. 17, the Gov. sent us media types this Michigan info:

* Unemployment is at its lowest level in 15 years.

* Roughly 100,000 new jobs have been added to private payrolls in 1993.

* Michigan leads the nation in new business growth, according to US News & World Report magazine (prediction: this will change with Michigan's upcoming tax increase — businesses are getting slam-dunked; if they get slam-dunked, so do the consumers; Mexico's looking better all the time.)

Letters to the Editor

Responsible government, economics

I am reacting to the article by Catherine Passmore in the Dec 29 edition, regarding the contract with the Oakland County Sheriff's Department and Independence Township.

It would appear to me that we have some members on the township board that do not believe in sound fiscal and responsible government.

It is not a matter of how good the contract is, or how good of a job they do, or even how bad we might need or want something, if you can't afford something and don't have the money to pay for it, don't buy it.

I believe the reason for the large federal deficit is irresponsible spending of taxpayer money. Let's set an example at this level of government. Live within your budget.

Biology alone doesn't make a parent

The other night I got sucked in by what I call bad television — shows that base their stories on sensational news events such as Waco, Texas or emotional crises such as the return of Baby Jessica to her biological parents.

I normally refuse to watch something that is so overblown and overdone that reality becomes overshadowed by created drama. But, last Sunday as I flicked through the channels I actually stopped for a network movie.

In a broad sense, the movie touched upon parents' (biological and adoptive) rights when it comes to which set of parents can best take care of a child.

We've all heard a lot about this subject this past year. Baby Jessica, the teen-age girls from Grand Rapids and from Florida — to name a few headlines.

Questions were raised: What are the best interests of the child? Of the biological parents? Of the adoptive parents?

In the movie, a homeless couple gave a well-to-do couple their "little angel" — a young two-year-old blonde haired girl. Allegedly, the couple did so because they could not provide for her.

The childless couple welcomed her — head lice, anemic and developmentally below average and all — and loved her.

Soon however, the homeless couple began to blackmail the couple for money, using the couple's love for the child as the pawn.

We were given the sharp image that the child now had her own real bed to sleep in, nice clean clothes and regular baths. More importantly the child was given a stable home with stable parents.

However, despite all of what they could give the child, the biological parents had the ultimate say so as to the welfare of their child and who ultimately was to raise her.

But what about the child? Should the child be returned to a couple who only had children to sell. It was found that the couple had given up other children in the same way in other states.

Could the child be returned to a couple who lived in the street, who often picked through the garbage for food? According to a social worker, yes she could be returned to that couple, no matter what dirt the childless couple found.

I know it was only television, and while it attempted to deal with a serious current issue, it was also done to rip at the heart strings.

However, the problem exists in the real world.

All too often we hear stories about children removed from parents who could not care for them or worse yet horribly abused, only to be returned.

I have to wonder why. In some cases, the court seems to consider the biological parent's interest first — whatever their financial or emotional well-being is at the time. Yet hovering in the shadow, the question lingers: What is the best interest of the child?

The courts in Baby Jessica's case decided she belonged with her biological parents. In the cases involving the older girls, they were able to stay with the people that raised them — but they are the ones who fought to stay with the parents they knew.

But what happens to a younger child who cannot yet voice wants and fears such as Baby Jessica.

In the movie, it was the adults deciding the fate of the child. In the movie, the well-to-do couple deserved to raise the girl, not the biological parents who seemed only to care who could give them the most cash.

I know the situation is only television and not 'real.' However, if we took the basic story elements and applied it to our standards of the day, what would happen to that child?

More than likely, if the biological parents wanted her back, they would get her back. Even if they were living on the street or in cheap motels, they could within the lawful waiting period get their child back.

It is the way it should be always done...right? I don't know if it should be the rule.

Giving birth does not automatically give one the right to the designation of parent. It is only biology until your heart gets involved.

Today, many children need protection from the biology of birth making one the rightful parent. Children do not always belong with biological parents. Not always should these children be returned from a loving foster or pre-adoptive family only to be returned to the hell they just left.

As the case of the movie, I came to believe the child truly belonged with the couple who could provide for her future financially, but also give her love... unconditional love. Something the biological parents could not give on both counts.

Something ought to change with the laws governing adoptions. Something should change which would allow the courts to truly look at the best interest of children — first, not second to parents.

Biology does not necessarily rule.

When local control means control by locals

BY ROBERT J. WITTMANN

The Michigan Education Association, the state's largest teachers' union, claims to support "more local control of our public schools" and greater utilization of "site-based management." At the very same time, the union opposes new proposals for charter public schools and other forms of school choice.

The reality is that the union, through its surrogate "local" affiliates, is the main impediment to genuine local control of public education. In most school districts in Michigan, the MEA has the power to set the terms of employment and working conditions for teachers and other employees. According to State Superintendent Robert Schiller, all of the state's regulations combined interfere less with local control than do employee contracts negotiated for the most part by local MEA affiliates.

For example, most MEA-negotiated contracts require that school administrators review all teaching assignments with local union leaders and follow a seniority system. In other words, local MEA affiliates exercise veto power over most personnel decisions in school districts.

MEA officials argue in response that employee contracts are the domain of both local school officials and local employee representatives. But the reality is that any serious attempt by school administrators or school board members to change major contract provisions such as seniority are likely to be met with prolonged (and illegal) strikes. Furthermore, local union affiliates are under enormous pressure to negotiate to terms set by the state MEA and regional MEA affiliates.

Nowhere was this fact better illustrated recently than in Troy, where the Troy Education Association negotiated a contract which provided for reasonable annual salary increases. Troy teacher union officials were bitterly attacked by the Wayne Regional MEA and local MEA affiliates in neighboring school districts for not extracting hefty raises.

Genuine local control and site-based management should allow teachers a fair amount of professional autonomy. Yet this is not how the MEA defines it at all.

The union's ability to interfere with the professional aspirations of individual teachers was highlighted recently in Saginaw. Louise Harrison, a finalist for Michigan Teacher of the Year in 1989-90 and Creative Writing Teacher of the Year in Michigan in 1992, requested a transfer to a different school in the Saginaw School District where a vacancy had occurred. The administration approved her request but the local MEA affiliate blocked the move on the grounds that it violated seniority rules.

Ruth Braun, a school board member, noted with disgust that the schools in Saginaw "can't override the union and put our best teachers in positions that are in the best interests of students."

Ms. Harrison, a veteran teacher of 19 years, was outraged by the union's decision. In a letter to the superintendent, she wrote: "I am (also) struck by the irony of policy that uses the single criterion of longevity to supersede those criteria of performance, productivity and professionalism."

The union's power to veto assignment requests of individual teachers and school administrators essentially prevents genuine local control and site-based management in public education. School principals or district administrators cannot adjust their staff to the needs of schoolchildren as best they see fit nor can teachers choose the school where they want to teach unless they are the most senior in the district.

After a fright, the joy of Christmas

Jim
Fitzgerald

On the day before 3-year-old Adam suffered a high-fever seizure and was rushed to the hospital, barely breathing, I took him and his two big sisters to Cheesy Chuck's. It was an early Christmas present. For me.

You don't have to tell me that Chuck E. Cheese is the correct name for the chain of noisy establishments that feature games, rides, entertainment and pizza for kids and jumpy nerves for adults. Seven-year-old Tricia corrects me, sputtering magnificently, every time I imply that Chuck, her favorite clown, is cheesy. Her indignation is marvelous to behold, which, of course, is why I continue to malign Chuck in her presence.

You also don't have to tell me that grandpas are often not nearly as funny as they think they are.

I was momentarily encouraged the other day when Tricia said she'd "shared" one of my stories with her second-grade classmates and "when I was done talking, they all came up and patted me on the back." I was anxious to know which of my witty anecdotes earned Tricia such praise.

She said it was the one about me and Dave Coulier being on the same TV show together. When you say it real quick, it sounds like I appeared on ABC-TV's "Full House." When you say it real honest, it sounds like native Detroit Dave and I appeared on a local talk show the same day, but in different segments, many years before he became a national sitcom star. We passed each other in a hallway.

Tricia said it real quick, and her friends congratulated her for knowing someone who actually knew a real TV actor; it had nothing whatsoever to do with her grandpa being a funny columnist. Now that's cheesy.

Anyway, despite the riotous environment, I always enjoy going to Cheesy Chuck's because it reminds me that most youngsters are loved very much by the adults in their lives.

I mean, you read the papers and watch the news and you get the feeling that kids don't have a chance. A father beats his baby to death for crying. A mother prefers drugs to paying attention to her 11-year-old son, and he's arrested for murder. A wealthy couple leave their kids home alone and fly south for a week. Social Service workers sometimes act like their job is protecting statistics that can't feel pain and despair, instead of children who can. It makes me want to scream.

Or go to Cheesy Chuck's to see happy families celebrate fifth birthdays, to watch parents and grandparents laugh and act goofy with children and hug them. It helps me realize and appreciate that most adults are exactly like me, and would rather die than hurt a child.

Our latest adventure at Cheesy Chuck's was the usual success, even if Adam was the only kid in the place not content to merely roll around in the bin full of plastic balls. He had to throw the balls all over the place, so athletic Grandpa could fall down chasing them.

On the drive home, there was an hilarious argument over whether Adam, Tricia or Emily -- or Grandpa! -- had let a pootzy (you can figure it out), and Adam couldn't stop laughing. I thought all that exertion might account for the slight fever his mother detected the minute we got home.

But no. The fever soared and in a few hours, for the second time in his three years, Adam was on an emergency room table and doctors and nurses were fighting to get him breathing again. When he finally let out a terrible scream, it was the best sound I ever heard.

Adam's eyes were closed and he didn't appear to be conscious. But I nuzzled his ear and whispered anyway: "Grandpa's here. Do you want to go back to Cheesy Chuck's?"

And Adam said, "Yeah."

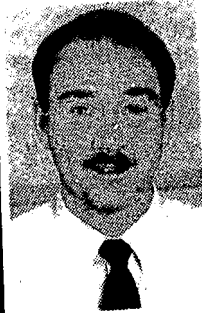

Oh, my.

Adam is now home and breathing normally again. Me too. Deck the halls!

I hope it was also a merry Christmas for you and the children in your life. Especially the children, and never forget it.

Fast track

A southern Christmas

Curt
McAllister

During the holidays, I had the great fortune to spend my time in sunny Florida.

As an adult, it was the first time I've spent the Christmas season in a state besides Michigan and it was quite an eye opener. Other than being devoid of snow, Floridians acknowledge Christmas in more of a commercial fashion.

At least that was my view of the Pompano Beach area, a community comprised of mostly senior citizens.

In Michigan, it's common for nearly every business, besides gas stations and party stores, to be closed on Christmas Day. That wasn't the case in my travels.

I was shocked to see nearly every store and fast food restaurant operating as if it were just a normal weekday. And even more amazing was that a local flea market appeared to be the "happening place," with cars lined up just to park.

Apparently, merchants wanted to soak in as much of the tourist trade as they could, so they decided to give up their Dec. 25 to cater to the masses. This was the philosophy at nearly every movie theater, strip mall and golf course we passed on the road.

Speaking of golf courses, Florida has them. It seems like anybody that has more than 50 acres to spare has converted it into some sort of range or practice green. My father-in-law and his father-in-law were also with us on our family vacation and there wasn't a day that passed where they weren't playing at one of area's many courses.

They even played on the course where the movie "Caddyshack" was filmed. Now, I'm not an avid golfer by any means, but that definitely would have been a neat course to visit.

The best golf course story I have during my vacation was when I was waiting in line to get change at a pro shop. It was about noon on New Year's Eve and some poor sap had phoned the golf pro to see if he could get a tee-time.

The golf pro just laughed. "You'd have a better chance of seeing God," he told the man. I hope he didn't take him seriously and travel to the nearest mountain top.

Personally, my wife and I just left the links to other men folk in our party. We settled for poolside, which was always vacant, due to its proximity in the middle of a subdivision for seniors.

Yep, we had a ball, but I couldn't help but think of Michigan during my stay. But any thoughts of an early return soon disappeared with a glance of the national weather report.

Twenty-three degrees and flurries. Brrr. Could you pass me the suntan lotion, dear?

Grapplers take ninth at Goodrich tourney

BY CURT MCALLISTER
Clarkston News Associate Editor

The Clarkston varsity wrestling team concluded its third consecutive week of ultra-tough competition by taking ninth place at the Goodrich Invitational.

This 18-team tournament featured 10 state ranked teams from Classes A, B and C. New Lothrop (C) eventually captured top honors, followed by Eaton Rapids (B) and Temperance-Bedford (A). Howell and host Goodrich tied for fourth place.

CHS Coach Mike DeGain was a little disappointed at the Wolves' final standing.

"It was kind of a letdown, coming off our recent win at the Oakland County Meet," he said. "The kids weren't quite as sharp as they should have been, but we've had a lot of tough matches of late."

DeGain said his team went into the Dec. 30 tournament at less than full-strength, with some of his starters either sick or on vacation. The result was three voids.

"That really put us at a disadvantage," DeGain said, "and with the caliber of wrestlers at this meet, I wasn't about to fill those spots with freshmen."

DeGain said the Goodrich Invitational is probably the toughest team tournament this side of the state finals, as evidenced by a 13th place finish from Bay City Western, who was ranked No. 1 in Class A prior to the meet.

"The only thing that could possibly be tougher than this tournament would be the state finals," he said. "It's definitely tougher than regionals."

The Wolves had four grapplers earn medals that day. They included: P.J. Vandermeer (160 pounds), second; Joe DeGain (171), third; Armin Michelson (152), fourth; and Ryan Mick (103), fourth.

Vandermeer just barely missed taking first, DeGain said. The junior lost to Heath Dankert, the defending Class C champ, 12-11, in the finals.

Prior to the Goodrich Invitational, the Wolves competed in a quad-meet Dec. 22 at Howell High.

Clarkston rolled against their first opponent, Davison, losing just three matches. However, the tables were drastically turned in their next contest against Howell.

The host Highlanders, ranked No. 9 in Class A, won all but three matches against seventh-ranked Clarkston. CHS' wins came on pins by Corey Grant (130), Joe Roy (135) and Michelson (152).

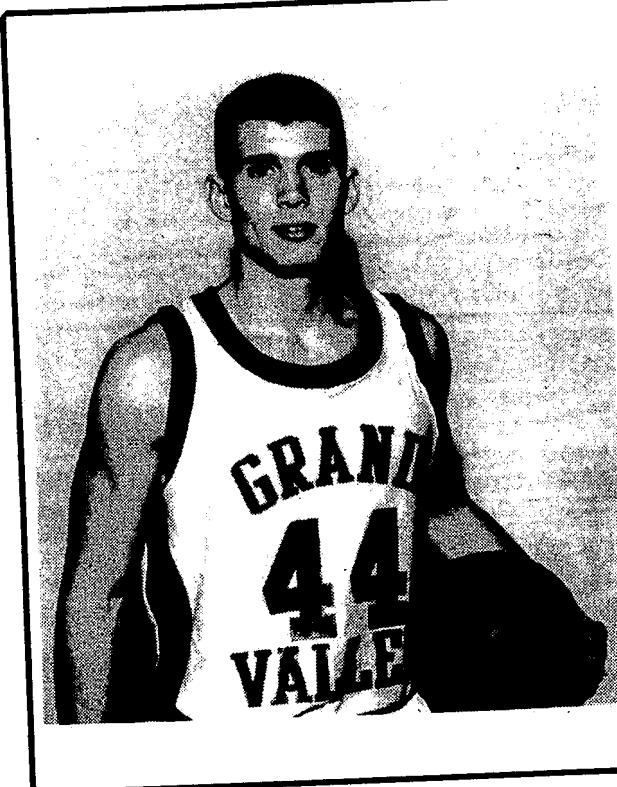

According to Coach DeGain, the Wolves became handicapped when they lost Joe DeGain (189) to a concussion against Davison. This injury forced the elder DeGain to move Vandermeer up to 171 pounds and Brett Rhebb up to 189 from 171 pounds. Both grapplers ultimately lost.

"I don't know how smart of a move it was on my part, but Howell was just plain tough," he said. "We probably would have had a hard time beating them with Joe wrestling and everyone in their proper weight classes."

Proving itself no fluke, Howell went on to spank No. 2 Warren Lincoln by a similar margin, later that afternoon.

The Wolves' next contest is Thursday, Jan. 6, at Pontiac Northern.

Local talent

CLARKSTON High grad Luke Fedlo is playing basketball at Grand Valley State University this season. The 6-foot-3 sophomore guard transferred to GVSU from Clarke College in Dubuque, Iowa. Fedlo has played in five games this season but has failed to score.

Cougars top Clarkston

The Sashabaw Middle School eighth-grade basketball team raised its record to 6-0 by pounding Clarkston Middle School, 63-35, Dec. 20.

The Cougars' win pushed the team's unbeaten streak to 18, which includes a undefeated seventh-grade campaign.

Sashabaw was paced by Dane Fife with 26 points and Mike Maitrott with 11. Teammates Daniel Neubeck and Ryan Kulka also chipped in with seven points apiece.

In all, nine SMS players scored in their showdown with the Wolverines. So far, this season, the Cougars have been scoring about 58 points per game, while holding their opponents to 30 per game.

Offensively, Fife has led the way by averaging 22 points per game in only two quarters of action per contest. Among his many highlights so far has been a slam dunk in a recent contest against Mason Junior High.

Guns require thorough cleaning after use

Has your shooting been off lately? Is your gun jamming or otherwise failing you when it shouldn't? Are you missing too many easy targets?

If so, don't assume that your firearm or your shooting skills are to blame. You gun might just be in need of a thorough cleaning.

Simply put, a gun that's allowed to stay dirty won't perform up to its potential. A fouled rifle bore, for instance, fires shot-groups that are only half as tight as those fired from a clean bore.

Accumulated deposits of carbon, lead, copper and shotgun-wad plastic — not to mention soiling from the elements — will corrode and permanently damage a firearm over time if not removed. And because dirt can jam safety catches and clog gas ports, a fouled gun simply isn't safe to shoot.

That's why you should clean your rifle or shotgun after every use. The experts at Remington, America's oldest gunmaker, recommend cleaning the bore every 15 to 20 shots. Even brand new guns should be cleaned before they're used for the first time.

Before you clean any firearm, however, follow these general practices:

- Always make sure the chamber is empty before you begin cleaning.

- Follow the manufacturer's instructions for disassembly. If the manufacturer provides special cleaning instructions, follow those also.

- Make sure you have all the gun cleaning equipment you need, such as cleaning rods, patches, brushes, and cleaning fluids designed specifically for firearms.

- Use only high quality gun care products. Inferior products may fail to clean properly, and can even damage you firearms.

- To clean a rifle or shotgun bore, use a cleaning rod with a bore brush of the proper gauge or caliber. Use a cotton patch to apply cleaning fluid and oil.

- When cleaning a shotgun, clean the breech, choke tube, receiver, barrel, and gas ports, and use hinge grease on break-open hinges. Cleaning rifles is not much different; the breech, receiver, and stock all need attention, as well as the bolt of a bolt-action rifle. After using either a rifle or a shotgun heavily, be sure to clean the action.

After cleaning, wipe off the metal parts with a firearm oil such as Remington RemOil, and spray wooden gun stocks with a treatment fluid designed especially for stocks. This will remove fingerprints as well as provide a shield against moisture damage.

Firearms, like cars, need routine maintenance by a professional. Have your firearms checked periodically by a gunsmith recommended by the manufacturer, who can replace worn or damaged parts before they malfunction.

To give you a proper start on gun cleaning, Remington offers complete kits that include everything you need to clean you firearms and keep them in excellent condition.

Lock your skis

Now that winter is definitely here, skiing has taken its place in the sports arena.

For all you skiers, the Oakland County Sheriff's Department would remind you care for and be aware of your property.

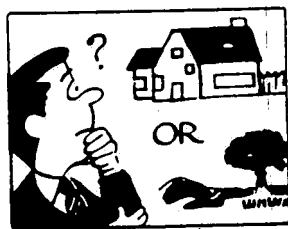

Sgt. Joseph Duke said OCSD responds to about 10 to 12 stolen skies calls at Pine Knob Ski Resort each week. He warns that if you're not wearing your skies, lock them up.

A spokeswoman for Pine Knob suggests that patrons use the ski corral. It is free and the lodge is responsible for those skies.

She also suggested that when you buy your skies write the serial numbers and where you bought them down and keep the information in a safe place.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

HOUSE OR LAND INVESTMENT?

A SINGLE FAMILY home, rather than raw land, would be a better choice for the beginning investor.

Ron Rodda
Sales Manager
Career in Real Estate!
"ASK RON"

QUESTION: Which is the better investment for the beginning real estate investor, raw land or a single-family dwelling?

ANSWER: While raw land might seem the better buy because of large profits, small investors should be cautioned against the risks involved. Large profits on land sale usually depend on major development or rezoning for commercial use. Holding the land can eat up mortgage payments and taxes.

An existing dwelling, however, can be put to use as your home or to earn rental income. You can re-sell a single family unit faster than raw land if you have to get your money out.

SKUTTLE SELF ADJUSTING MAKE-UP AIR CONTROL MODEL 216

Today's well-built homes are heavily insulated and have well-sealed storm windows and doors. It is difficult to replace the air used by your furnace, hot water heater, fireplace and ventilating fans. These appliances attempt to pull unfiltered outside air through cracks around doors and windows, causing uncomfortable drafts.

The Make-Up Air Control eliminates these drafts by slightly pressurizing your home. It eliminates drafty, unfiltered air by passing outside air through your furnace filters before it is distributed through the home. You enjoy fresh, clean outside air.

MEA's the problem

The MEA's vigorous opposition to charter public schools makes a mockery of its support for "local control." Charter schools would permit teachers, principals and parents in existing public schools to exercise genuine site-based authority in all major areas of school operation -- including staff assignments, salary and benefit structure, curriculum, school support service providers, and most other details of school operation. Charter schools would have nearly complete control over school-level budgeting because state funds would flow directly to the school based on enrollment rather than to district-level administrators.

Furthermore, under Governor Engler's charter school plan, teachers would be free to organize their own school-level collective representation, whether as a traditional union affiliate or as a workers cooperative or even professional association. How much more local control could a professional educator have?

Yet the MEA vigorously opposes charter public schools precisely because they provide teachers and other school employees the power to opt out of the union's present control over the terms of employment and working conditions and to make these decisions for themselves.

Apparently, what the MEA means by "local control" is control by its locals.

Tough Love gives hope, support

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Little Johnny has skipped school, stayed out all night and been ticketed for drinking and driving.

Being strict hasn't worked, being permissive hasn't worked. What is a parent to do?

Tough Love, a support group for the parents, may be a start.

The group supports parents of troubled children. They offer suggestions on how to handle situations and give struggling parents hope.

A new chapter begins meeting 7 p.m. Jan. 10 at the Carriage House in Clintonwood Park. It is open to the public and is free.

"The idea behind Tough Love is to make your child responsible for his or her own behavior," said Denise Fox of Ortonville who has been attending meetings since July.

She says parents are used to taking responsibility for their children's actions. They pay fines, talk to teachers and when needed, pay bail.

Gaye Hott of Independence Township has been going to Tough Love meetings for a year and she agrees that children need to be responsible for their actions.

Hott's young daughter had a habit of slamming doors when she was angry. Hott and her husband sat

"The idea behind Tough Love is to make you child responsible for his or her own behavior."

Denise Fox

down and told the girl if she slammed the door again it would come off for a period of time.

"That would be her fault—her responsibility (if the door came down)," said Hott.

Tough Love was stated in the 1970s by Phyllis and David York of Pennsylvania. They are family

What Tough Love is and isn't

Tough Love Parent Support Group is for parents of troubled children. They give support to each other during periods of family crises and use the periods of non-crises to learn.

Here are some more ideas of what Tough Love is and isn't:

■ They are a support group — not a therapy group.

■ They deal in behavior, not in emotions, although emotions are quite evident and must be considered and respected.

■ They don't act as professional counselors.

DENISE FOX of Ortonville has been going to Tough Love meetings for six months. She is part of beginning a new support group in Independence Township.

therapists who gained acclaim as experts in their fields while their children were out of control.

After their daughter was arrested for armed robbery, they took a stand and decided they would not tolerate a criminal in their home. They had supportive adults visit their daughter, decided when she would get clothes, cigarettes and money.

The Yorks let their daughter know she had to complete rehabilitation before she could come home.

Their plan worked and their daughter began to change. They began a support group with their clients which became Tough Love.

Fox is quick to note that Tough Love does not advocate kicking your children out of the house.

She said in some groups, children go to live with other families for a break. These support families can sometimes represent the parents in court or visit the child in jail when it is too difficult for a parent.

Members also call each other during the week to listen and give encouragement.

Hott said that having people to talk to who are experiencing the same problems or who have gone through them is a comfort.

"It gives me the support I need. I talk to family and friends. They care but they haven't gone through it," she said.

religious group.

■ They can't give you immediate answers to your problems.

■ They show you that you're not alone, that you have rights and worth, and you deserve to be treated with respect.

■ They offer a process for change. They offer supported confrontation and selective support to help you make changes — first for yourself and your well being — and then for your teenager.

■ They give no guarantees. They can give suggestions, hope and sharing.

In the meetings other parents give suggestions about how to react to outbursts and defiance.

Hott said children know their parents extremely well, and know which buttons to push for reactions.

"Tough Love is not about changing your children's behavior, but changing how you react."

Gaye Hott

When a parent reacts differently it changes the situation.

"Tough Love is not about changing your children's behavior, but changing how you react. It's hard to change you behavior," said Hott.

Both women say that the group doesn't put blame on anyone for the problems at home.

"Tough Love doesn't want to blame the parents, kids, teachers or the community. There's no solution in blaming," said Fox. She said all these people must work together to find a solution.

"A lot of people blame themselves. They're ashamed, they think they've failed (as parents). We try to, with our support, help them not feel like that," said Hott.

Fox said that Independence Township was chosen for the new group because it was central to the two existing groups in Flint and Downriver.

"I've talked to people from work and a lot of people need help. There isn't any place close (to get help)," said Hott.

Everyone is invited to come to the meetings. The information talked about is confidential and new comers don't have to participate if they don't want to. For more information about the Jan. 10 meeting call 627-6075.

Tough love facts

1. Family problems have roots and supports in the culture.
2. Parents are people too.
3. Parents' material and emotional resources are limited.
4. Parents and kids are not equal.
5. Blaming keeps people helpless.
6. Kids behavior affects parents — parents behavior affects kids.
7. Taking a stand precipitates a crises.
8. From controlled crises comes positive change.
9. Families need to give and get support in their community in order to make change.
10. The essence of family life is cooperation, not togetherness.

Nominations sought for historic preservations

BY DEBORAH DZIEWIT
Clarkston News Special Writer

Those who have worked to preserve Michigan's history are being sought by the Michigan Historic Preservation Network for recognition of outstanding achievement.

The nonprofit citizens group which began 12 years ago will recognize work under five categories at the Network's annual meeting in May, said Jennifer Radcliff, Network president and Clarkston resident. Individuals, organizations and communities will be recognized for preserving historic structures, street-scapes and neighborhoods.

"Nominees or nominated projects should represent a positive effort for or impact on historic preservation at the local, regional or statewide level that has been a successful example for others to emulate," Radcliff said.

The Network expanded its award program this year to include a citizen's award for individual contributions of historic preservation; a community award for collective planning or implementation of a preservation project on a community or neighborhood level; and a government award for agency-related actions contributions to positive changes in the historic preservation climate and activity in the state.

"All over local people are quietly going about preserving our cultural resources," Radcliff said. "We want those recognized to take heart from example and be folded into the historical preservation of this state."

Nominations are due no later than 5 p.m. Monday Feb. 28 and should be sent to Awards Committee Chairman Ron Springer, Historic Preservation Office, City of East Lansing, 410 Abbott Road, East Lansing, MI 48823.

A list of criteria for nominations, references and documentation forms are available from the East Lansing office. For more information, contact Springer or Radcliff at P.O. Box 398, Clarkston, MI 48347 or call 810 625-8181.

Collecting toys

The real 'Teddy'

Everyone recognized the jovial face of Santa Claus pictured in the last article. To answer the question, Santa remained upright via a weight or ballast in the bottom of the toy.

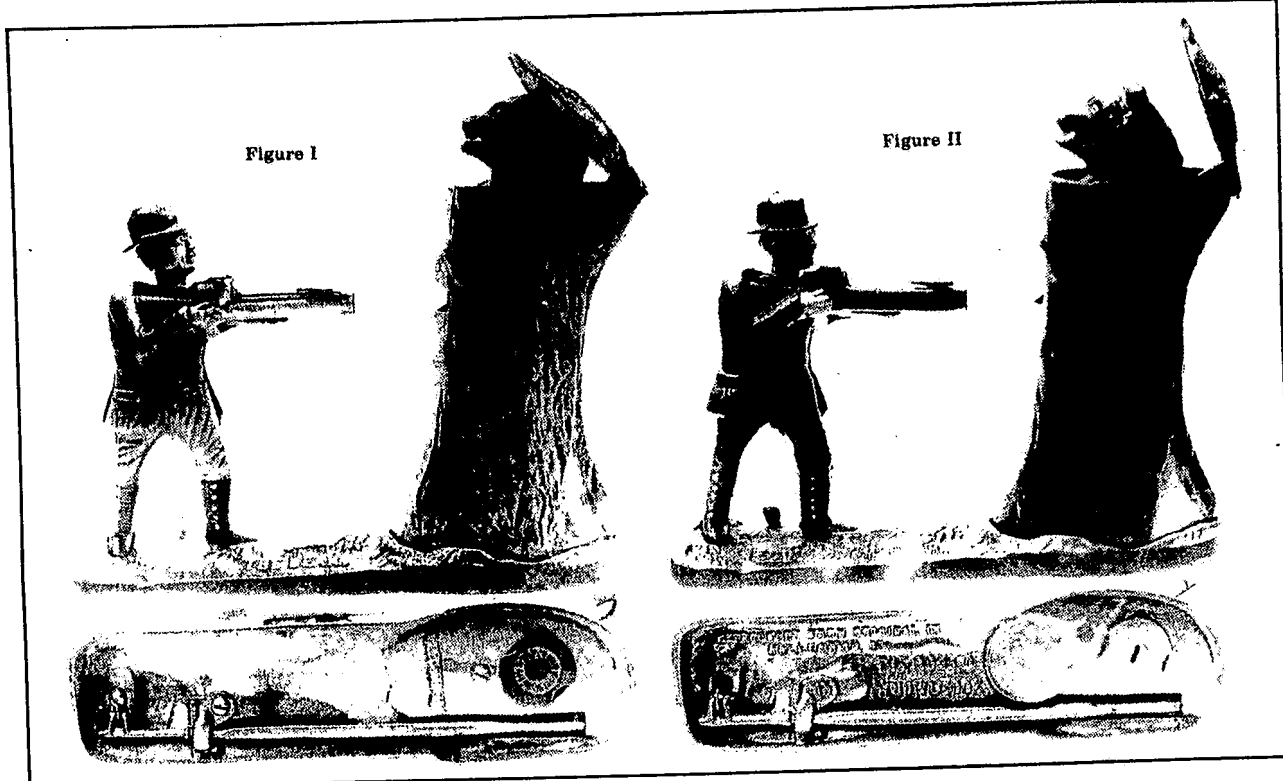

Several early toys (before 1918) were made from papier-mache. The Santa pictured was molded in two pieces. A third mold was used to cast a lead weight. The lead weight or ballast filled the bottom half of the toy and was secured by rabbit hide glue.

When this process was completed, the toy was painted. From this construction process and the materials used, a "Handle with Care" label should have been placed on every one of these Santas!

Today's question is going to be more difficult. Which "Teddy and The Bear" mechanical bank (photo) is original, and, which is a reproduction?

Specifically, the original bank circa 1907 was manufactured by the J. & E. Stephens Company of Cromwell, Connecticut. In contrast, the reproduced bank was produced in the 1950s/1960s.

Write your reasons for "original versus reproduction" and determine Figure I or Figure II. Keep the answer until the next time.

CAN you guess which of these is the original "Teddy and The Bear" mechanical bank? The original was manufactured in 1907 and the reproduction was produced in the 1950s.

Elegant, delicious

Those who like to cook and who appreciate elegant desserts will like to try their hands at this chocolate dessert.

The recipe -- created by Sandra Lee-Chapman of California -- won first prize in a recent "Cooking with DOVE Chocolate Recipe Contest" and looks as fancy as it tastes.

CHOCOLATE HAWAIIAN TORTE

Serves 8; preparation time: 4 hours

Phase 1

- 1 1/2 cups (7 ounces) salted macadamia nuts
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 1/2 cup melted butter
- 3 tablespoons all-purpose flour

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Heat nuts and sugar in 10-inch saute pan, stirring frequently, until sugar melts and turns light golden brown. Pour onto buttered parchment paper to cool.

Place brittle into food processor container with metal blade; pulse to coarsely chop mixture. Add butter and flour to processor; pulse lightly to combine.

Line bottom and sides of 9x9x2-inch cake pan with parchment paper; turn mixture into pan and pat down lightly. Place in freezer for 5 minutes. Bake in preheated oven for 10 to 15 minutes. Let cool and place in freezer.

Phase 2

- 6 bars (1.3 ounces each) DOVE dark chocolate, broken into pieces
- 1/2 cup heavy cream
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons granulated sugar

Place chocolate in mixing bowl; set aside. In small saucepan, bring heavy cream, butter and sugar to a boil. Pour over the chocolate. Stir until completely melted. Pout this mixture over the macadamia nut bottom. Return to freezer.

Phase 3

- 1 1/4 cups heavy cream, divided
- 1 tablespoon coffee liqueur OR strong brewed coffee
- 1 teaspoon unflavored gelatin
- 1/4 cup milk
- 3 bars (1.3 ounces each) DOVE milk chocolate, broken into pieces
- 1 large egg yolk
- 2 tablespoons granulated sugar

Using chilled bowl and beaters, whip 1 cup heavy cream to soft peaks, add coffee liqueur and whip to medium peaks. Set aside in refrigerator.

Place milk in a small mixing bowl. Sprinkle gelatin over milk; let stand 5 minutes to soften. Set mixing bowl into a pan containing hot water. Stir mixture until gelatin dissolves.

In double boiler, melt chocolate with 1/4 cup heavy cream. In a separate bowl, combine egg yolk and sugar. Add a small amount of the chocolate mixture to the egg yolk mixture. Pour this mixture into the remaining chocolate mixture; add gelatin mixture and blend well. Fold into the chilled whipped cream and pour over the second layer of torte. Return to freezer until firm.

To serve, lift torte out of pan while still frozen; cut into desired shapes. To garnish, drizzle with melted chocolate, if desired.

Jim Douglas Auto Sales

Family Owned & Operated Since 1974

For many years, automobile dealers considered "used cars" as a sideline to the business of selling new models. Things have changed in the last 19 years, and one of the big reasons is the kind of business operated by Jim Douglas Auto Sales. They believe that the used car buyer is just as important as the new car buyer and are determined to give each customer the finest quality and the best possible price. Jim Douglas thanks the many General Motors executives who supplied him with 98% of the quality pre-owned cars he sold last year. By being the largest pre-owned automobile wholesaler in the area, he is able to provide a large selection of fine pre-owned autos to individual consumers as well as to other dealers. Jim Douglas ended 1993 with the most successful year in company history—over 3,200 cars sold!

The smart way to buy a used car is to purchase it from Jim Douglas Auto Sales, located in Pontiac at 1153 Baldwin Avenue, phone 332-8326, where each and every car is checked by an expert mechanic before it is put on the lot. You can feel assured that all of the cars they sell are in excellent condition and have many miles of driving left in them. Financing can also be arranged for your convenience.

Jim Douglas Auto Sales has a large "family" of customers who return because they know that integrity, service and assurance of quality are passwords here. If you're in the market for a good buy on a clean, reconditioned previously owned car, van, truck or 4X4, stop in soon. They are sure to have just what you're looking for.

Clean up with salt

Here's a notion to shake — that salt is just for adding flavor to food.

Fact is, table salt is a great help for handling many household chores, especially for holiday clean-ups, say the experts at Morton Salt.

■ After holiday parties and through the new year clean-ups can be easier with table salt. To remove wine stains from cotton fabric immediately, pour enough salt directly on the stain to sock up the liquid. Immerse fabric for a half hour in cold water. Launder as usual.

■ To remove ketchup stains from nylon plush carpeting, immediately sprinkle with enough salt to soak up the stain, wipe away excess with a paper towel and vacuum. Use a dampened sponge to remove any residual stain.

■ Remove rust from tools by making a paste using two tablespoons salt and one tablespoon lemon juice. Apply the paste to rust with a dry cloth and rub.

Also, another insight into your negative feelings would be your stagnation at the angry stage in the process of resolving grief.

How long ago was your loss? If your friends died three or four years ago, you may consider grief counseling and/or a grief support group. By the way, your "whirlwind cleaning, organizing, etc." is perhaps your attempt to regain control of yourself and your moods during this time period.

Tips to help make these anniversaries less stressful are the following:

1. When your thoughts seem confused, sort them out by writing them down.
2. Talk it out, employing as much time as necessary, to a friend or relative.
3. Acknowledge and accept your own feelings: the anger, loneliness, melancholy, etc. are normal reactions.
4. Explore your faith. If you believe in God, this is a very appropriate time for his support.
5. Visit the graves and take the time to do or say what comes naturally to you.

Ask the therapist

'I get very cranky'

Stan Garwood

Dear Mr. Garwood:

Every year around the anniversary of my friends' deaths, I get very cranky. They died suddenly on the same day.

I also don't sleep well and I go through my house and office like a whirlwind cleaning, organizing and throwing away mounds of things.

I'm pretty easy going and happy, but for a week or so every year, I get angry easily and I feel as if I've lost all control of my surroundings.

I know that being a little upset is normal, but are there any tips for making this time of the year a little less stressful for me and those around me?

Signed,
Still Hurting

Dear Still Hurting:

Death anniversaries are troublesome times for most people who have suffered a loss of a loved one. In your case, based on your letter, your friends suffered an accidental death.

Anniversaries remind us of the person and what he/she meant to us. We reflect on the shared activities, the mutual support and exactly how their loss translates into our lives now. Usually, we believe things would be better if their presence was felt. Thus, we experience a sense of loss.

Accidental deaths precipitate in us greater feelings of anger and resentment than those due to natural causes. This would explain the "week or so every year" of intensified and increased hostility, which

SUNSHINE and near zero temps must have been a good mix as several visitors show up on the Mill Pond. Shovelers cleared away the snow to make an ice skating rink and several ice fishermen dropped fish lines to try their luck.

A day on Mill Pond

Clarkston's Mill Pond became the center of activity Friday despite the dipping thermometer. Sunshine streamed down as ice fishermen, dressed for the weather, braved the cold as they dipped their lines through small holes chipped through the two-inch ice hoping to get a bite. Ice skaters, small and big, twirled and fell on a the small rink near Washington Street. Narrow shoveled paths crisscrossed the pond allowing skaters to go from one of the pond to the other.

JAY BOB STUMP (upper left) watches his lines that he baited with maggots and dropped through the two inch ice. The former Clarkston resident caught six pan fish. Several ice skaters (above) also took advantage of the frozen Mill Pond to practice their spins and falls.
