His grandmother and a woman who considered him, along with her son, as "one of my boys" testified against Danny Gray in court Tuesday.

The 15-year-old boy, who police say slit the throat of a three-year-old he lived with, has been bound over to Circuit Court by District Judge Gerald McNally.

Jose Fanego, Gray's court appointed attorney, had asked McNally to reduce the assault with intent to commit murder charge to assault with intent to do great bodily harm less than murder.

Fanego told reporters Gray "truly thought he was God (at the time of the crime)." Gray had said at his arraignment "I am God. I have the power."

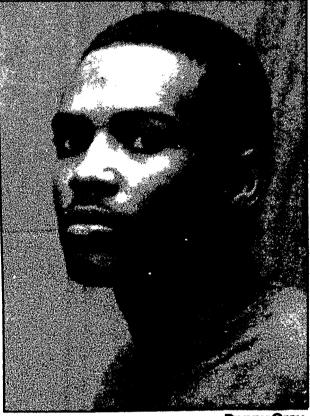

At the time of the crime, Gray was under the delusion he was Jesus Christ, according to Fanego. "That certainly tells me something is wrong with this boy's state of mind," he said.

Forensic experts haven't determined if Gray is criminally responsible for his actions. He has been deemed competent to help in his defense.

Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Lisa Asadoorian reminded reporters defendents are "presumed to be sane unless determined by the experts."

'You have a little toddler who loved Danny Gray by all accounts and he was taken advantage of. Danny Gray is clearly the criminal," said Asadoorian.

Gray can be found guilty, guilty but mentally ill (which carries the same sentence), or not guilty by reason of insanity. If the later is used by the jury, Gray will be given over to state custody until experts

Danny Gray believe he is no longer a threat to himself and the community. No forensic experts were called by either lawyer during the preliminary exam.

Gray's grandmother, Dorothy Young, was the first witness to testify for the prosecution.

She recounted that on the night of Jan. 29 when she went to take a bath, Zachery Thomas, the victim, was in his mother's room in bed with her.

When Young came out of the bathroom, about 10 minutes later, she noticed Zachery was gone. She awoke Zachery's mother, Gloria Thomas, and then went looking for the toddler.

Young began calling for the little boy and heard noises coming from the bathroom in the front of the apartment, where Gray had told her he was going to take a bath.

She called out for Zachery again and testified, "He began to call out to me, 'Mother,' 'Mother." Mother is the name he called Young. She said the little boy's voice was faint and weak.

Gray "was telling Zach to be quiet to shut up. The more he said that the more I called for Danny to open the door," testified Young.

She said she was joined by Thomas at that time and the two women tried to open the locked door. Young went to the kitchen to get a utensil to help and was met in the hallway by Thomas who was carrying hermoaning son and saying, "What has he done to my baby?"

Thomas testified she was able to pry the door open with a can opener and found Gray holding her son's head in a tub of water with both hands on his shoulders.

"I told him to get the hell away from my son," said Thomas.

She said the water was a pale color with blood. She pushed Gray aside and kicked him and breathed life back into her son. She went out of the room and found Young.

Proposal affects only non-homesteads

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY Clarkston News Editor

Clarkston schools will ask the voters for 18 mills on non-homestead properties in the June 13 school election.

The school board is expected to approve wording for the ballot proposal at its April 11 meeting. The ballot wording, as prepared by the board's financial attomeys, asks, "Shall the limitation on the amount of taxes which may be assessed against all property, excepting therefrom homestead property as defined by law ... be increased by 18 mills on state equalized valuation for a period of two years . . ."

The district estimates that the proposal is worth $1,839,326 to the district. A mill is equal to $1 on every $1,000 of state-equalized property value. A homestead includes all commercial property.

The 18 mills on non-homestead property is in addition to the six mills levied on all property, both homestead and non-homestead.

Clarkston will be one of the first school districts to test Proposal A and the mood of the voters under the new system. Already, there seem to be at least two different opinions circulating on what the effect would be should the millage question be defeated.

"We have heard that in order to get that six mills (the 'foundation mills,' as they are called) we may have to get that 18 mills passed," LaBay said.

Steven Lenar, Clarkston's deputy superintendent for business and operations, agrees. "We need to raise $1.8 million locally in order to get $31 million from the state," he said.

The news in brief

Woman assaulted at home

An Amy Road resident was assaulted at her home after she tried to run a group of males off her property.

According to the report by the Oakland County Sheriff's Department, the assault happened the night of March 31.

The woman said she heard her brother telling people to get out of their yard and ran outside to help. She said a man grabbed her and held her on the ground sitting on top of her. Another man in the group and a woman who was with them told the man to get off of the victim.

The suspects fled the scene when the woman's father came out of the house. She suffered a bruise on her head. The case is still open.

Teens damage car

Two 16-year-old girls allegedly damaged a car after getting frustrated in traffic March 24.

According to the report by the Oakland County Sheriff's Department, an Independence Township woman was followed into a parking lot on Dixie Highway by a Firebird car. She was suspicious and watched from the store as a girl got out of the car and keyed the woman's car.

The victim was able to get the suspect's license plate number and called the police. The girls said the woman had cut them off in traffic. The incident is still under investigation.

Thankful thieves

A Clarkston Road resident out for an evening of fun came home to find his home had been broken into and a thank-you had been left.

The home had been ransacked and a kitchen knife was stuck in the dining room table where the words "Thanks" were carved.

According to the police report, the incident happened March 28 while the resident was at a concert in Canada with tickets he had received in the mail from an unknown source.

There were tracks of two cars in the yard and the phone line to the home had been cut. A VCR, computer, two TVs, tools, a gun and two guitars were taken from the home. Police are investigating the crime.

Free vision screening

Ten thousand children with inadquate vision will enter Michigan schools next fall. Will your child be one of them?

The Oakland County Health Division will offer free vision screening for children who will enter kindergarten in the fall. Vision screening is required for kindergarten enrollment.

Screening will be held June 20, 5-7 p.m. and June 21, 22, and 23, 9-11 a.m. at the OCHD's Pontiac office. No appointments will be given; screening is on a walk-in basis. For more information call 424-7070.

What parents should know about gangs

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE Clarkston News Staff Writer

In Oakland County many refuse to admit gangs are coming and may already be a problem in some areas. But according to the Oakland County Sheriff's Department, they're here, and more are on the way unless the public becomes informed and parents put a stop to it.

School and government officials, parents and the public are invited to an informational meeting regarding gangs on May 3 at 7:30 p.m. in Kirchgessner Auditorium at Clarkston High School. Members of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department and other groups who work with teens will be presenting the meeting.

"We want as many people as we can get to be informed, to see this presentation and go from there," said Detective Chuck Young of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department.

The Oakland County Sheriff's Department will host a meeting for parents about gangs on Tuesday, May 3 at 7:30 p.m. at Clarkston High School.

The meeting isn't meant to start a panic or to sensationalize gang activity in the area Young said. It is to inform the people who spend time around children what they should look for so gangs won't get out of hand.

"Everything (gang members) do means something," said Young. Signs such as clothing styles and colors, hand signals, symbols and secret alphabets will be described so adults can be aware.

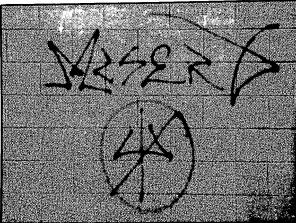

Teresa Blundell of Clarkston Area Youth Assistance said parents shouldn't make hasty decisions about their children based on one thing, such as wearing sports team jackets.

She said concern should start when they notice several warning signs. Then they should get help right away.

Young agreed. "As long as (parents) are aware of (the signs), they can go get counseling and other help."

A symbol for The Folks was found painted on an area business. The Folks were started in a prison in Indiana when the gangs weren't allowed to wear their specific colors. Detective Chuck Young said most gangs identify with The Folks or their rivals, The People.

A pitchfork crossed out is a symbol against the gang The Folks. The writing on the wall isn't just scribbles, it is possibly something in a secret alphabet. This graffiti was also found on an area business. Detective Chuck Young said that although most gangs identify with The Folks or their rivals, The People, each specific gang has its own leader who answers to no one. Oakland County is about two years behind Detroit and the Downriver area in gang activity according to Young. Gangs are moving into southern Oakland County and then into the northern region.

"It's working its way into the community slowly," he said.

About three or four dozen gangs have been identified in Oakland County and specific gangs have been recognized in the Clarkston/ Waterford area for at least one year Blundell said.

A mistake people may have about gangs is that they are truant or disruptive in school. Rather, school is a turf and the gang can not hold onto its turf if they are skipping or suspended.

She said she spoke to a police officer in another community who had dealt with a gang where the lowest grade point average a member had was 3.6.

"These are intelligent kids," said Blundell. Kids who join gangs do so because of the structure and rules of a gang.

"It's tough for young people to be out there with no structure," she said.

Blundell said the rules and hierarchy of a gang gives the members security and comfort. She said it also allows them to know their limitations and the consequences of stepping over the line.

In some families well meaning parents give the kids more freedom than they are ready for. In other families, children live by different rules depending on which parent is in charge at that time and it can be confusing.

In contrast, rules in a gang are very detailed and are the same for everyone.

Some early signs of gang activities or wanna be's have been graffiti found on area buildings. Young said the writing is like a newspaper for gang members with each letter and symbol meaning something specific.

He said the quicker graffiti is cleaned up the less likely it is to come back.

The meeting will explain gang symbols used in graffiti. It will explain clothing or colors they usually use and demonstrate hand signals and some secret alphabet uses.

"Ignorance is not bliss in this instance," said Blundell. "If we don't recognize the signs now and prevent it, we can't expect it to go away."

Young added some hope. "Maybe we can nip these things before they get out of hand."

Dogs ordered destroyed; owner to appeal

BY DEBORAH DZIEWIT Clarkston News Staff Writer

A district court judge ordered two bull mastiffs destroyed last week after they had attacked two calves, with one calf having to be euthanatized because of its injuries.

"I would not want to move next door to animals like that," said Judge Gerald McNally of the 52-3 District Court.

McNally ordered the dogs picked up and held for 21 days by Oakland County Animal Control.

New owner Louise Baird of Pontiac said she was not told of the court proceedings and intends to appeal McNally's decision. "I honestly don't agree that the dogs should be put down. There's ways around that," she said.

Larry Marlowe of Springfield Township put the dogs up for sale after the March 22 attack. He told the judge that Baird would give him one half of the money from the dogs' first litter.

Springfield resident Jackie Speagle, owner of the calves, witnessed what she told the judge was "a vicious attack" March 22 by the male and female mastiffs owned by nearby neighbor Marlowe.

The mother of four said she was worried about the safety of her younger children.

"Would they next go after my son as he walked home from the bus?" she said. "I want them put down before they attack a pet."

Her son Michael testified that he saw both dogs in the calves' pen. One calf was already down, while the dogs were attacking the other.

"One dog had a hold of an ear and the other had a hold of the jaw," he told the judge. "I didn't get out of my truck for a few minutes because I didn't know what they would do to me."

When he did get out of the car, he threw rocks and that eventually chased them off.

Marlowe did not deny the attack and has paid the calves' veterinarian bills. But he did not want the dogs destroyed.

He testified that the dogs would not attack humans. He said bull mastiffs were bred in the 1800s by the English to herd and hunt animals.

State asks for spring burning ban

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY Clarkston News Editor

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources has issued a no burn order from April 16 to May 15 out of a fear of spring wildfires.

However Independence Township Fire Chief Gar Wilson said the order does not apply to Oakland County. Rather, local burning ordinances are still in effect.

"Personally, it wouldn't be spring or fall if I didn't smell burning leaves," Wilson said. His department issues about 2,000 burning permits a year, he said. The permits are good for one calendar year.

Burning is only allowed on the first and third Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday of each month.

"If I say no burn, the problem is what are you going to do with it," Wilson said. "If you were to ban burning all together I feel the township would have to provide some alternative."

The township allows burning of leaves, brush, paper and wood scraps only. Conditions of the burn are listed on a one-page permit application. If you violate the provisions you are subject to a $10 fine.

In the City of the Village of Clarkston, only brush may be burned.

"There's no leaf burning," said city manager Art Pappas. City residents must call him to say they are burning. Any violations are handled by the police department.

Wilson said residents have become more and more aware of the problems of burning, including neighbor problems, in the last few years.

"We were getting more complaints with people who hac a problem with burning versus the problem of burning (itself)," he said. In some more densely populated areas, sometimes a haze of smoke would hover in the air because of burning. People with breathing problems would complain.

"It's hard to come up with a set pattern of days (for burning)," Wilson said. "This way, if you have a problem with breathing or didn't like it (burning), on certain weekends plan to do something else ... We felt people could get what they needed done in eight days (per month)."

Wilson suggested composting as an alternative to burning. And if you plan to burn but the weather is bad, he suggested covering your pile of leaves with a tarp until the next burning day.

If you burn, consider basic safety rules. You must use an approved container. Fires must always be attended and some means of extinguishing, such as a garden hose, must be readily available. No flammable liquids may be used. Stay at least 50 feet away from any structure.

Even if all rules are met, the fire department has the right to cancel burning days due to atmospheric conditions.

The DNR says spring is the most critical time for wildfires. Over 40 percent of all wildfires occur in the last two weeks of April and the first two weeks of May. During that time, 37 percent of the wildfires responded to were caused by outdoor burning of yard and household debris.

Independence Township Fire Marshal Neil Ashley said the state's order should not be confused with a state of emergency, which is a total burning ban and is issued only under extremely dry conditions.

"When the state comes out and bans fires, they ban everything but cooking fires," he said.

Though the DNR ruling does not apply to local burning ordinances, the agency is asking all units of government not to issue burning permits during the moratorium.

Dogs to die

former employee of the Whoopee Bowl which Marlowe manages, said that the dogs had attacked a cat. It died hours later from its injuries.

Defense attorney Michael Bailey argued that since Marlowe had already sold the dogs since the attack, the judge could not order the dogs destroyed.

McNally said selling the dogs while a suit was filed would be considered fraudulent and the transaction therefore null and void.

"I am not anti-dog," McNally said. "They have demonstrated an ability to escape. The risk is enormous. They can do so much damage. The cost to the community far outweighs the benefit to the owner."

The dogs have been taken away, but Baird said an appeal will be filed to try and stop the dogs from being destroyed.

"I do agree there needs to be attention taken to control the dogs. I've got a nice big yard, a brand new fence and a big back yard ... these dogs are very obedient with me.

"I'm going to fight it till the end. Now that I'm attached to them, I'm not going to let them go."

Principal candidates to go to board

Chris Turner of Clarkston is expected to be appointed the new principal of Bailey Lake Elementary School at the April 11 school-board meeting.

The recommendation of school superintendent Gary Haner must still be approved by the board of education, but Turner emerged as the leading candidate after a principal search committee and interviews with Haner.

Turner is currently the principal of Jefferson Elementary School in Ferndale, a post he's held since 1991. He has MA and Ed. Specialist degrees from Oakland University and has also taught at Detroit Country Day School.

Also at the April 11 meeting, Mary Kaye Aukee will be recommended as the next assistant principal at the Oakland Technical Center Northwest.

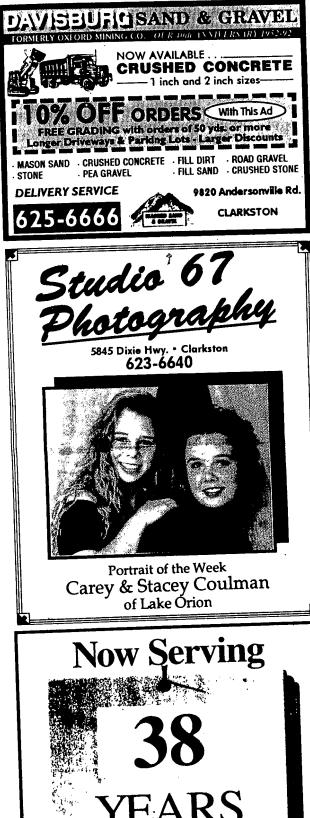

Aukee, of West Bloomfield, is currently coordinator of the visual communications department at the Crockett Career Technical Center of Detroit Public Schools. She holds BA and MA degrees from Wayne State University.

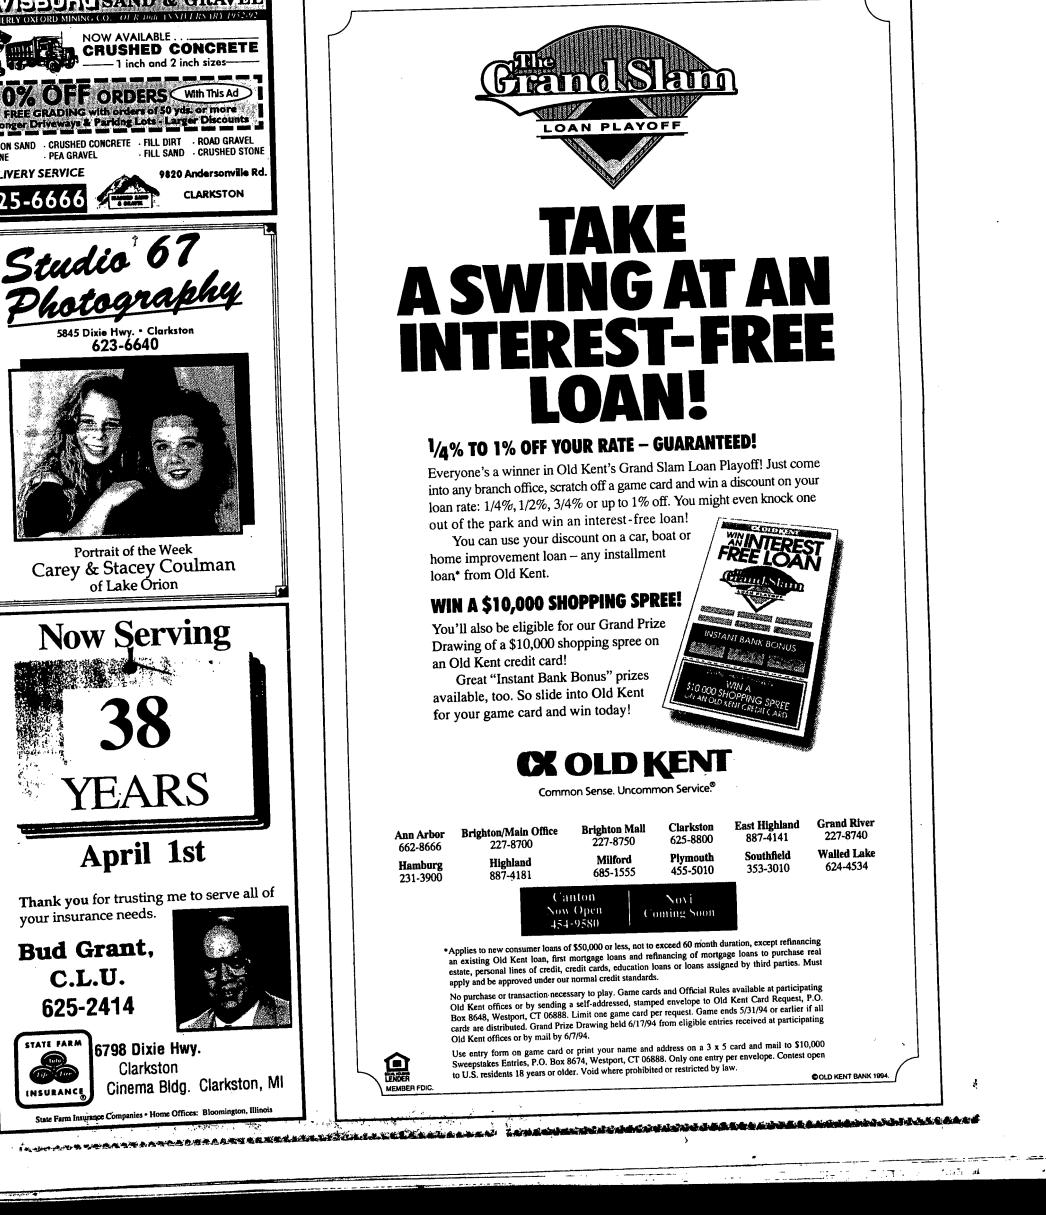

Clarkston administrators were not available for comment due to the Easter vacation. But Penny Shanks, a parent who was a member of the principal search committee for Bailey Lake, said she was pleased with Turner's selection.

"He was a very child-oriented-type principal," she said. "Children weren't just bodies housed in his building."

Due to reassignments and the opening of a new elementary school next fall, Sashabaw Middle School assistant principal Mike Dillon will be promoted to principal at Pine Knob Elementary. This action does not require the approval of the school board, according to Haner.

Dillon, of Rochester, has been assistant principal at SMS since September, 1991.

In Focus by Annette Kingsbury Queen Martha rules the domestic roost

Will all the real Martha Stewart fans please stand up?

Not those of you who have a serious case of . Martha envy, who've been complaining that she's ruining your life because you don't have her antique farmhouse or her staff of gardeners.

Only those of you who enjoy learning how to make yourhouse and garden more beautiful and more fun qualify as FOMs—Friends of Martha.

Our friend Martha has been taking a lot of shots in the media lately. There was even an entire Oprah Winfrey show dedicated to women who hate Martha because they don't have everything she has.

Actually, these women complained that they don't have the time to do all the wonderful things Martha does, and they resent the fact that she can do them all. Well!

I am indeed a Martha fan. I read her magazine; I tape her TV show (it's on too early); I buy her books. I even stood in line at the opening of a new K-mart to get her autograph on my books.

Now I will admit that she appeals to a certain audience. That became abundantly clear as I stood in that line and looked at those in front of and behind me. We were all white, female, of Martha age, and middle class.

What we all had in common beyond that, though, was a willingness to stretch ourselves when it comes to the domestic front. We don't bake party cakes from boxes. We're not afraid to try decorating a pastry or a room.

We're all trying to make the best of our surroundings at a price we can afford. If it takes a little more work, we're willing to try, if only because we can't afford to hire someone else to do it.

So I look at the complainers with a healthy dose of skepticism. Stop whining, please. If you're not interested in the Martha way of life, quit reading her stuff!

_etters to the editor

All kids must be encouraged

To the Editor:

Thank you to Annette Kingsbury for her recent editorial (March 23) regarding the AAUW reports about how girls are treated in school.

Recognition of gender prejudice in schools is the first step to eradicating unfair treatment. Many of the tough problems we face today, such as domestic violence and teenage pregnancy, are the result of girls being taught to practice acceptance and passivity, a lesson that is sometimes reinforced by not being encouraged to volunteer information or ask questions in the classroom.

We must remember that every time a child is discouraged from speaking up to give an answer or ask a question, it is that much harder for the child to try the next time. We must encourage all children, girls as well as boys, to be assertive and inquisitive, even if this means facing our gender stereotypes and taking extra care to put them behind us.

Thanks for support

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank the community for its outstanding support of the Oakland Livingston

Human Service Agency's (OLHSA) Walk for Warmth program,

The Clarkston News

On Saturday, Feb. 19, over 265 people turned out to take part in the three-mile walk at the Phoenix Center in Pontiac, and as a result, many families will be able to keep warm safely this winter. We are now finalizing the collection of pledges and donations, and at this time the agency has surpassed its goal, raising over $25,000 to help raise funds for local residents in need of heating assistance.

This event was a success because OLHSA had support and commitment from various churches, civic organizations, youth groups, businesses, and local government. This year we also had many teams of walkers. The largest teams came from TCF Bank and Consumers Power.

As a human service agency, we are committed to helping the elderly, the low-income and disabled persons to become more self-sufficient. We hope that the community will continue to support our efforts in helping the citizens of Oakland and Livingston counties through donations, participation in events, and doing volunteer work for OLHSA. Thank you again for your support.

It's wonderful

As I sit here at the computer at home, I can look out the window and watch birds congregate at the little bird feeder we hung on the pear tree.

And, I have a hard time concentrating on writing. I'd just as soon sit and listen to the birds. Which is one reason I like the time change. Every morning we wake up to the birds all around our house. We hear the finches, the cardinals, the morning doves coo, and even that pesky woodpecker. It makes getting up early that much easier. Living in this area is a blessing.

From our little hilltop home we can watch the seasons change -- particularly at the miniature mountain that sits behind the lake about a quarter of a mile away. turn off the television and get entertained. The goodness in just sitting on your front porch with a book and the bugs buzzing around is something I look forward to all winter.

Our lives can be so interrupted by work, keeping up with the Jones that it can't be good for our souls. That happens to me, too. Luckily, every spring I'm slapped back into reality.

Rush, don't take yourself so seriously. Don't let the fact that some people actually tell the boss you should be fired bother you. The sun always, always comes up the next day. Relax.

This spring thing lasts me about a year -- to about February of the following year. Thank goodness for home -- and being able to come home to it, Desiree and the things that really mean the most to me.

And anyway, when you see Martha close up, she really doesn't look much like a domestic goddess or a multi-million dollar corporation (which she is). On the day I saw her, her hair looked—well, unwashed, her skin less than perfect. It didn't have that airbrushed glow we seen on magazine covers. She looked like—well, the rest of us in line.

Recently I saw a list of Martha's top 10 all-time gripes. They include dirty windows, junk mail, destruction of nature for the entertainment of man, toll booths (a waste of gas and time), parents who care inadequately for their children, mistreatment of pets, wastefulness in the home, products made for planned obsolescence, kitchen sloppiness that leads to appliance breakdown, and cigarette butts.

I can't quarrel with any of those. Martha, you're my kind of girl.

Right now the waters are a dark blue -- cold looking. The trees are all brown and I can see some of the homes built on it. Quite often Des and I smile and thank the Somebody upstairs we can watch nature. The fall is beautiful from atop our hill. Even the first couple of snow falls make us stop and look out the window.

While our home is situated where we have no neighbors cramped right next to us, we have a good neighborhood. Children play and ride their bikes on the winding dirt road. You can hear a lot of their laughter.

It makes me think and then thank. Life is a wonderful thing. It is really easy to get caught up in everything that is happening around us -- so caught up that we can skip right over the most basic and simple things. A thunderstorm is time to

Ask and you receive

In your Jim's Jottings recently about driving to Florida, you mentioned the names of two corporations and wondered what they did.

By some coincidence, I work for Takata Inc., and my father was formerly employed by Copeland Corp., of Sidney, Ohio. (I also worked for your newspaper as a volunteer apprentice several years ago.)

The enclosed brochure should answer any questions you have about Takata. Essentially, Takata is an integrated safety systems supplier to auto manufacturers around the world.

Sincerely yours, Greg Hamman

This is my fourth serious attempt to kick the habit.

To hop off Joe Camel's back.

To finally luckily strike out.

Yes, I've come a long way down the addiction trail of cigarettes.

Many were surprised when I admitted I smoked. I work out. I just started running --- again. But no more.

As of Saturday, my husband and I stuck on our arms a large flesh-colored patch. It supplies us with what we cigarette addicts crave - nicotine. Meanwhile, we are supposed to work on the psychological addictive qualities of smoking.

Experts say the physical withdrawal symptoms, for the most part, disappear within three days. The psychological withdrawals prove more difficult to conquer, and oftentimes, those are what send the smoker back to lighting up a cigarette.

It's what sent me back — three times.

cigarettes. And yet I continued to smoke — not happily or with pleasure — but I smoked. Often times as I ran downstairs from work to catch a few puffs, I would sit low in my truck not wanting anybody to see me as I lit up.

The first two times I quit, I cut back the number I smoked and then quit. But something would trigger that dreadful urge and I would stop at he nearest store and buy that pack --- not able to withstand my powerful addiction.

The third time, my husband and I joined a sixweek American Lung Association group. We followed most of the program's guidelines and even quit two days early - we were tired of counting cigarettes. The first day, my husband spent huddled under the covers in the bedroom. I spent the day running the shower out of hot water.

But we managed to stop for almost 16 months. an Lung Here we were again. As the Amen Association says, "Never stop quitting."

What's the dumbest job you ever had?

My dumbest was looking for holes in the brass at the Mueller Brass Co. in Port Huron. That was in 1948 and I hadn't thought about it in years. But then I made my first visit to Old Christ Episcopal Church and a stranger grabbed me by the arm.

Whenever a stranger confronts me in public, I immediately tell myself he or she is a reader who wants to compliment me on the brilliant column I wrote yesterday. In the winter I always carry a pencil inside my right mitten, for signing autographs.

It is true that it's not easy to recognize me from the dinky little picture that stingy editors usually run with the column. In fact, no one ever has recognized me from those pictures except my mother, once, but that was on Christmas and she knew her son was coming for dinner anyway.

I find it makes it easier for my fans if I wear a name tag, preferably one that lights up in the dark. That's why I like to attend the Michigan Press Association convention every January. Every delegate is given a name tag encased in plastic. These tags hold up well and will remain serviceable through the following summer if you give them proper care and don't wear them around the house - where most everyone knows your name anyway.

I was wearing a name tag at Old Christ Church, so I was prepared to be humble and gracious when that woman jerked my sleeve. I expected her to ask if I was the Jim Fitzgerald who writes the marvelous columns.

"Are you the Jim Fitzgerald who knows Jake Jacobson?" she asked. "I know him, too."

Jake Jacobson? Geez.

I admitted I once worked alongside Jake. There then followed considerable conversation about what a great and talented fellow Jake is. The woman, whose name is Sally Heberlein, used to live next door to Jake in Saginaw. She thought it was marvelous to run into someone who used to work with him. She didn't seem to know I am a famous columnist, even though that information was clearly embossed on the streamer hanging from my name tag My wife listened with interest and later she asked what newspaper Jake and I had worked on together. I told her it wasn't a newspaper, it was the inspection line at the Mueller Brass Co. And now you know why I am thinking of the dumbest job I ever had.

I worked nights, searching for unwanted holes in various pieces of brass tubing. I did this by applying the water test, an incredible process, the memory of which still makes my socks squish.

I was stationed in front of a tank of water which had a weird air-blowing contraption suspended over it. The idea was to fit the hunk of brass into the contraption so that all authorized holes were covered tightly with rubber cups. Then I dipped the contraption down into the water and pulled a handle which sent a fearful burst of air into the brass.

If there were any unauthorized holes in the brass, I it quickly. It was monsoon time. I got sopping wet.

With the patch system, I have three months to work on ridding myself of the psychological addiction while the patch trickles nicotine in smaller and smaller doses into my body. I am to modify my behavior which triggers the urge to smoke. I don't linger over the dinner table. I move around while I talk on the phone. I tap my fingers to the music while I drive. I take a shower first thing in the morning. Our dog Harry will be happy because our evening walks will resume.

I have not been a happy smoker for several years. My children have not made the experience at all pleasant. How can I punish one of my daughters when she says I stink? How can I yell back at them when they scream in unison, "Put that cigarette out." How could I ever discipline them for hiding them, poking holes in them or throwing them in the garbage. I have heard all about the effects of second-hand smoke. Yes, I have read about the effects of the tars that now coat my lungs. I knew my clothes smelled. I didn't get close to

So as of day three, I can proudly say I have not had one cigarette. It's not to say that I have not wanted one --- oh I have. But I'm armed with the knowledge of what to expect and what to do.

I have my crunchy carrots, my crispy apples. I will never be without a pack of sugarless gum. I will carry with me at all times a bottle of water. And I will walk. I will run. I will lift weights. I will take deep breaths. I will say no and no again to that little voice that says "One won't hurt."

And as a new/old non-smoker --- I applaud the efforts of groups that are beating down the doors of cigarette manufacturers.

Higher taxes. Yes. Public buildings entirely smoke free. Yes. More campaigns to keep the young from ever taking that first inhalation. Yes.

I am no longer holding my head down in shame. Instead, I am holding it up with pride.

After all, I'd rather fight than smoke.

Working at the water tank next to me was a beefy redhead named Jacobson. He looked like a professional wrestler who had lost every match. But, incredibly, he was forever reciting Shakespeare. He said he was going to be an actor.

Actually, it is a shame Jake didn't make a career of the water test. He was an artist at the job. He would saunter over to the drill press department and drill strategic holes into his brass pieces. Then he'd return to his water tank to wage wet war against management. When the foreman peered over his shoulder, Jake would slyly slip a drilled piece of brass into his machine. He would dip and pull, and the foreman would get soaked in the face.

"By golly," Jake would say, "it's a good thing I found that hole.'

"Nice, glub-blub, work," the foreman would say, wiping his face and hurrying on to the next tank to wake me ud.

"Out, damn spot," Jake would say, evoking visions

A 8 Wed., April 6, 1994 The Clarkston (MI) News Helpern speaks his mind

Departing school trustee talks about what he's learned

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY Clarkston News Editor

A self-proclaimed "zealot" about education who said he was sometimes "too blunt," Joe Helpern departs from the Clarkston Board of Education with a few regrets.

A new elementary school is opening in the fall. Proposal A is just about to go into effect. Clarkston schools must ask for a millage. There's a general distrust of schools in the community.

But Helpern won't be able to address those issues any more. He, his wife Mary and three children will be moving to New York this summer. He's resigned his seat on the board so someone else can be elected in June.

"I am a zealot when it comes to supporting education," Helpern said last week. "I'm even altruistic enough to believe education is the solution to most of the problems in the world."

A Massachusetts native, Helpern earned a PhD in medical physics at Oakland University and works as the director of nuclear magnetic resonance research at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit. His work may eventually make it easier to diagnose diseases of the brain.

Helpern confessed he doesn't know what the perfect solution for funding schools is. He fears the public will be confused about the district's millage request in June. Nevertheless, he feels the school board, as a rule, has the best interests of the kids and the community at heart, and deserves to be trusted.

'This is a Norman Rockwell village . . . a really special place to raise children.'

Joe Helpern

"We have so much more constant, long-term exposure to the problems," he said. "It's very easy for someone to come in from outside and see simplistic solutions . . .

I've had many people come in and say, 'You've got to cut the budget.' And I open up the books and say, 'Show me where to cut."

Even at that, very few people pay attention to the workings of their school board. "It's really hard to sit on the board," Helpern said. "We really try to get input from the public. But you can lead a horse to water. You can't make it drink."

haven't come about.

"The thing that has hurt me the most is the presumption of malice," he said. "You have a group of people really trying on the board, for the most part. .. It's really a shame that it's gotten to that."

Here are some of the issues Helpern discussed in a wide-ranging interview:

School millage: "The millage hasn't changed since I've been on the board. we've subsisted on our natural growth."

Labor costs: "Are we spending too much on labor? I don't know. That's a good question. I believe teachers have made good process over the years in society in terms of equity in what they get paid. (But) the teachers are not going to be treated as true professionals as long as they negotiate through a labor union."

Communications with the public: "One of the problems I noticed was coordination of communications. Everyone was doing their best but communications were lousy. So I introduced a concept I use in my own work."

He suggested a formal proposal be drawn up to present to the public on the last bond issue. That way, whenever questions arose, the document would always be around as a reference. He hopes such a device will be used in future tax questions.

Board salaries: He tried to get pay for trustees abolished. After succeeding in getting it reduced but not completely eliminated, he decided to donate his to school causes.

Proposal A: "I don't know what's going to happen with Michigan . . . The school system will survive in some form . . . Maybe the local board should be abolished. It goes back to the one-room schoolhouse. It's the last bastion of individual input."

On credibility of public officials: "Credibility is the hardest thing to deal with ... I wish we could get rid of this real detrimental attitude (toward) officials.

Be guarded; don't swallow everything that's said. But once in awhile, have some trust. It's very hard to lead when you don't have the trust of your followers."

On core curriculum: "I think there is nothing wrong with saying there are certain skills our kids must have before graduating high school. In today's world, to think a student could graduate without rudimentary technical experience, literature (etc.) is criminal.

"Should it be that hard for us to agree on the basic skills our kids should graduate with? I don't think it is."

What he'd like for Clarkston schools: "I would really like to see a fine arts curriculum in the elementary schools, which commonly gets referred to as 'fluff."

On public service: "I don't want to discourage anyone from getting involved in it. It's a lot of hard work. (But) there's a very strong feeling of having an effect on something, and that's a good feeling."

Helpern, who said earlier he and his family had planned to stay in Clarkston for many years to come, said he will miss the small-town atmosphere.

"My wife Mary has been particularly active," he said. "This is a Norman Rockwell village. I hope people in the community understand that. This is really a special place to raise children."

Reschke honored by his peers

David Reschke, Clarkston schools' assistant superintendent for curriculum and staff development, has been named administrator of the year for the Oakland County region by the Michigan Association of Middle School Educators.

Reschke, who formerly worked at Sashabaw Middle School, was nominated for the honor by John Matthews, a teacher at SMS.

"MAMSE is the leading organization in the state for talking about concepts in middle-school education," Matthews said. "They're very instrumental in spreading the word. They're advocates of education at the middle-school level."

Matthews said he nominated Reschke for state honors because of "his dedication to the middle school and his timeless efforts to bring the middleschool concept to Clarkston." Reschke was a finalist for state administrator of the year. He could not be reached for comment.

Shanty owner sought by DNR

BY DEBORAH DZIEWIT Clarkston News Staff Writer

Michigan's Department of Natural Resources officials are looking for the people responsible for leaving an ice shanty on Deer Lake.

"We would like to find out who put it out there," Sue Rose, DNR conservation officer, said. "We want to find them and educate them."

She believes two men, approximately 18 years old, driving an early 1990s small white pick up are the owners of a shanty.

"We have a report that they were seen driving up with the lumber and they built it right out there on the ice," Rose said.

If found, the pair could be fined $50 plus removal fees.

Jerry and Robert Namowicz pulled the shanty from Deer Lake last week.

"It was way down from the beach," Jerry said.

"My son and I hooked on to it and brought it in close to shore. Robert dismantled it and now its laying on the shore. It was quite the job."

Jerry, who has been a Clarkston resident for 25 years, said the the shanty was not well-made.

"It looked like an outhouse," he said. "It had no identification on it and it should have.

It should have two-inch letters with name and address on all four sides."

Next year, the costs of abandoning ice shanties goes up. If left out on the ice after March 1, a fine of $100 to $500 will be charged plus removal fees.

If the shanty goes out on the ice without identification next year, which means name, telephone number and address printed on all four sides, the shanty will be pulled from the ice.

"We will attack in Janurary," Rose said. "Then they will not be able to use the shanty at all."

Anybody with clues to the identity of the two men can call Rose at 666-9343 or Chief of Police Robert DeVore at 625-0088.

Summer jobs available

Summer jobs are now available in the Clarkston area through the federal Job Training Partnership Act for 14- to 21-year-olds who meet guidelines based on low income, disability or handicap.

Those interested in the work opportunities through Clarkston Schools or Independence Township should apply quickly, since positions are limited and are likely to fill up quickly.

The jobs pay $4.25 an hour, begin June 20 and continue for about eight weeks. Schedules are between 20 and 40 hours per week.

Positions available include clerical, library, maintenance and parks and recreation aides, as well as SCAMP workers.

A new feature this year is a special weekly workshop designed to enhance academic abilities through the use of a custom computer program.

Each candidate will be interviewed to determine whether he or she is eligible for the program, and an effort will be made to match jobs with interests.

For more information or to apply, visit the Clarkston Community Education center at 5275 Maybee Rd. or call 674-4791 between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. weekdays.

"So it (the election) is critical to us," he added. "It's just a matter of getting enough information out there."

However, state Rep. Tom Middleton (R, Ortonville) disagrees with the interpretation of the new law, and he says Governor John Engler agrees with him. "That's not the way we've been interpreting it up there (in Lansing)," he said.

Middleton said that interpretation would mean voters could not choose a lower millage levy; that they'd have to back 18 mills or put their district out of business. "That wasn't the intent," he said.

However, he admitted that provision of Proposal A could be challenged in court after the first round of millage elections are completed. "But the House didn't interpret it that way. We do not want to tinker with it any more."

Meanwhile, Clarkston officials are concerned voters will be confused and be hesitant to vote yes, even though homestead property taxes will not go up. "Technically it's and increase, because we don't have authority to levy since December," Lenar said. (But) it has no effect on the homeowner. Even with a total of 24 mills on business property, you were paying 38.8 before. So there's still a positive there."

The Clarkston News

Clarkston's track athletes sprint to the finish during last week's practice.

Athletic office reorganizes

BY DEBORAH DZIEWIT Clarkston News Staff Writer

Paul Tungate's face should be familiar to all those involved in Clarkston sports.

As athletic director for the past 16 years, Tungate has been closely involved with all of Clarkston's athletic activities.

In his 28 years at Clarkston, Tungate has seen a lot of changes.

"There are more girls athletics" he said. "Not only girls but with all athletics there has been an increase."

When he first took over in 1978 as athletic director, Clarkston had 29 sports between the middle schools and high schools. Today Clarkston athletes participate in 54 sports.

But he is ready for change.

"It got to the point that I wanted to get rid of the nights," he said. "I went to 99 percent of all the night events."

Tungate proposed that the athletic department be restructured. He would retire from the current position, since he now qualifies for retirement and the district's retirement incentive. He would be re-hired part-time five hours per day for 187 days. His salary as an advisor would be one-third of his current salary. "Considering the self benefits that will not be paid under this arrangement that were paid under the old arrangement, it's about a $27,000 savings," Gary Haner, Clarkston's superintendent of schools, said.

"We'll have an increase in the total number of hours spent in that process," Haner said. "Paul will work earlier in the morning that he has been; the new guy will come in the afternoon. Basically between the two of them, they'll cover what Paul has been covering."

The school board agreed with the proposal March 14, and the new athletic manager is expected to be announced at the next board meeting April 12.

Next year Tungate's responsibilities as athletic advisor will include the following:

Odevelop athletic schedule for grades seven through 12 programs.

• maintain records of contests, letter winners and other pertinent data

Oarrange transportation

Oversee budget and purchasing

Odirect sale of tickets and deposits

Oversee eligibility according to the Michigan High School Athletic Association

•Evaluate coaches

Print and distribute schedules

•Work with maintenance department in utiliz-

Are you concerned that your child is too small for his or her age? Does your child suffer needlessly by thoughtless comments about his small stature? Don't despair. If your child is a victim of a growth hormone dificiency, help is available.

On April 20 from 1 to 5 p.m. a Growth Screening Cinic will be held at the Clarkston Medical Group offices, 5885 M-15, Clarkston.

Dr. Nasir Hacque, M.D., a pediatric endocrinologist and growth specialist, will evaluate children for possible growth hormone deficiency and counsel parents if a deficiency is suspected.

There is no charge for this service, but appointments must be made in advance. Register by calling 625-3621 during normal business hours. Questions about the screening or growth hormone diciency may be addressed to Dr. Hacque's office at 335-1144.

Benefit golf outing

The third-annual golf outing to benefit Northwest Oakland Community Services has been scheduled for May 7 at Heather Highlands Golf Course.

Price for the four-person scramble is $60 per person which includes 18 holes of golf, gas cart, pop on the course, a steak dinner and door prizes.

The shotgun start is at 7:30 a.m. with registration beginning at 6:30. Coffee and doughnuts will be served. The course is located near Holly at East Holly Road.

Northwest Oakland Community Services is a non-profit service organization established in 1986. All profits from the outing go to further their projects, including recreational activities for residents of group homes and senior citizens, a quilting club and a soapbox derby club for families.

Reservations for the golf outing are due by April 15. There is a limit of 144 golfers. To reserve your spot, mail a check to NWOCS, in care of Craig Aleo, to 661 Broadway, P.O. Box 22, Davisburg, Mi 48350.

Golf coupon book

The Arthritis Foundation is offering a Golf Coupon Book, which provides 500 free rounds of golf, for only $25. The book provides an opportunity to enjoy the exciting events that take place during the golf season, not only throughout Michigan, but also in northwest Onio and southwest Ontario.

Additionally, the book provides invaluable information - such as holes, par, yards, USGA rating, green fees, cart rates, special discounts, etc. - about 700 public golf courses. A directory of major golf associations and regional travel associations is also included.

Books can be purchased by calling (810) 350-3030. They make excellent birthday and graduation gifts and provide an opportunity to support a good cause while having fun.

"It gives him (Tungate) the opportunity too continue to work half-time for us and pursue new career opportunities. We expect about a three-year phase out."

Just because Tungate is going part-time, don't expect him to fade from the Clarkston sports scene. He has been involved with the athletics for all of his 28 years at Clarkston. He's coached JV football, basketball and baseball. He was varsity baseball coach for 12 years.

"I will chose the game I want to attend and I won't miss the big ones," he said.

COURT, continued from page 1A

Young said she took Zachery from his mother and wrapped him in a comforter while Thomas went to get help.

"Danny came in and put his hand on my shoulder and ... nudged me out of the way. He said 'Mother, leave him alone, I'm the only one who can save him," said Young.

Young told the court she talked to Gray once on the phone in February when she was visiting his sister in St. Louis, MO.

"He said, 'Mother, I'm sorry. I just wanted to go home.' I told him you can't do something like you done and just say you're sorry. Something is wrong

'You have a little toddler who loved Danny Gray by all accounts and he was taken advantage of. Danny Gray is clearly the criminal.'

> Lisa Asadoorian Assistant Prosecuting Attorney

Young said the week before the incident Gray had been asking "weird" questions about religion.

"He wanted to go to the other side or go to the light," recounted Young. "He talked a lot about baptism and asked is it true if you aren't baptized does that mean you can't enter the kingdom of Heaven."

Young said they hadn't found a church yet in the area since they were new, but Gray had attended church and religion was not foreign to him. She answered his questions and she said he seemed to understand.

Thomas testified she had noticed a change in Gray saying he was more demanding and boisterous.

Both women described the boys' relationship as good. "I never thought he'd be able to cut his throat and drown him," said Thomas.

Zachery suffered a seven- to eight-centimeter cut on his throat, according to Dr. Young Lee, the pediatric surgeon who worked on the boy at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital. Lee said the deepest cut was in the middle of the neck and some muscles and tissue had been cut. Zachery was in surgery for an hour.

"The only thing that spared (Zachery's) life was that (Gray) didn't cut through the airway," Lee said.

Gray will be arraigned in front of Judge Steven Andrews April 20 at 1 p.m. If found guilty of assault with intent to commit murder, Gray could spend the rest of his life in prison. He is still at the Oakland County Jail unable to post the $900,000 cash bound.

Still haven't filed?

Thousands of homeowners risk missing out on new tax break

About 23,000 Oakland County taxpayers still had not filed Homestead Property Tax Exemption affidavits as of March 31, according to L. Brooks Patterson, Oakland County Executive.

Patterson held a news conference last week to remind residents they have until May 1 to file the affidavits.

"Several million dollars in property-tax savings have gone unclaimed by Oakland County homeowners who have not as yet filed their Homestead Property Tax Exemption forms," Patterson said. "Money still left on the table after the May 1 filing deadline will revert to the State of Michigan's general fund."

Under Proposal A, which was approved by the voters last month, residents may claim their principal residence as their homestead. Homesteads will be taxed at six mills for school operating expenses. All non-homestead properties will be taxed at 24 mills. The taxation rates will be the same for all other types of property tax, such as for county, township or city use.

Before the election, the deadline for filing the affidavits was March 1. However the legislature later extended it to May 1.

FRIDAY, APRIL 1: Police found a black "Trek" mens bicycle near Depot Park. It can be claimed at the Clarkston Police Station on Depot.

Man charged with molesting

An Independence Township man was arraigned Friday for allegedly forcing a child to perform oral sex on him.

John W. Schmidt, 45, is charged with two counts of first degree criminal sexual conduct (penetration).

According to Detective Chuck Young of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department, the crimes took place in the spring of 1992. He said the child knew Schmidt but is not related to him.

Since the incident, the little girl has been adopted by "a family she loves dearly," said Young.

The adoptive mother called Protective Services

March 11 to report the incidents. The OCSD was called and investigated the crime.

Schmidt is out of jail on a combined personal bond of $50,000. His preliminary exam is April 14 at 2 p.m. in 52nd District Court in front of Judge Gerald McNally.

If you need an extension . .

If you don't think you'll have the time to complete your federal income tax return by April 15, the Michigan Association of CPAs points out that you can easily obtain an extension.

What's more, if you're subject to a retroactive tax increase as a result of the Omnibus Budget and Reconciliation Act of 1993, you can pay part of your 1993 tax liability after April 15.

Automatic extensions: You can obtain an automatic four-month extension on your return by filing Form 4868 by April 15. You are not required to provide a reason for requesting the extension.

Additional extensions: If you reach the end of the four-month automatic extension and still need more time, you can request an additional two months by filing Form 2688. However, now you must provide the IRS with a reason for the request. Acceptable reasons might include the fact that you have not received necessary documents, or that you have been seriously ill. Keep in mind that the IRS will only grant the additional extension if you had previously filed Form 4868.

Late payment penalties: Obtaining a filing extension does not excuse you from paying your 1993 taxes on time. You must estimate your liability and send the balance of taxes due by April 15. Failure to pay your taxes on time could result in a penalty of one-half of one percent of the tax not paid for each month (or part of a month) it remains unpaid. You may also be hit with a penalty if the unpaid tax is more than 10 percent of your total tax liability. Additionally, you will have to pay interest on any taxes due from April 15 until the date your payment is received ## by IRS.

Payment extensions: What if you simply cannot pay your taxes when you file for an extension? In such cases you must submit Form 1127. This form requires you to document the details of any extraordinary hardship preventing you from paying your taxes on time. The IRS will review your case to determine if a late payment is acceptable. There are also procedures for requesting an installment payment agreement when you file your return.

Taxpayers who are liable for additional 1993 taxes soley by reason of the rate increase may elect to pay the additional taxes in three equal installments. You must make this election on your 1993 return by filing Form 8841. The first payment is due April 15, with the second and third installments due on April 15 of each succeeding year.

Doing your taxes this weekend? Read this page, then sharpen your pencil.

Don't be an April fool

Some sobering tax tales

To help you better understand the limits of the tax law and prevent you from becoming an April fool this tax season, the Michigan Association of CPAs provides the following true tax tales:

Minor children cannot escape taxes: If your child has any income, including self-employment income, you may be required to file a tax return on the child's behalf.

One family found this out the hard way when they failed to report the income their 13-year-old had earned from professional modeling. The result: Because the parents had failed to file a return for the child, she was hit with negilgence penalties. She also owed penalties for her parents' failure to file estimated taxes on her behalf.

Amicable separations may compromise tax deductions: One couple called their marriage quits and sought divorce action, but continued to live in the same house together. The husband paid all household expenses, except for food and his wife's personal expenses. When he tried to claim an alimony deduction for these expenses, the IRS disallowed it. Although the husband argued that he and his wife were estranged and living separate lives, this did not entitle him to a tax deduction. Tax law requires that a husband and wife be separated and living apart at the time alimony payments are made in order for them to be deductible.

Don't wait any longer, IRS says

If you are one of about two million Michigan taxpayers who still have to file a federal income-tax return, the IRS has some advice for you.

"Why wait six to eight weeks for your refund, when you can have it in two or three weeks," said IRS district director John Hummel. "By filing electronically and electing to have your refund directly deposited into a savings or checking account, you'll have your money in about two weeks."

The cost of bouncing checks is yours alone: Don't expect Uncle Sam to alleviate some of the costs associated with overdrawing your business accounts. In a recent case, a taxpayer was denied a deduction when he tried to claim bank overdraft charges as a business expense. The Court of Appeals ruled that it does not consider bouncing checks a normal and customary business practice. Excuses, excuses: If you let personal problems get in the way of filing a timely tax return, you risk being hit with late-filing penalties. One taxpayer argued that his health problems and those of his wife, his marital difficulties and his need to work three jobs to make ends meet provided reasonable cause for his late filing. The tax court disagreed. Illness and personal problems constitute reasonable cause only if they result in an indivdual becoming incapable of managing his or her affairs. Since the taxpayer was capable of working three jobs, the court felt he was also capable of completing a timely tax return.

It's getting near crunch time.

The deadline for filing individual income-tax returns for 1993 is fast approaching. Some of you have already filed and received a refund. The procrastinators among you are just starting to think of excuses to put this project off until tomorrow.

Well, sooner or later, the returns have to be filed. Here are some practical tips to help you survive this annual ordeal:

• Get organized! This is particularly important if you have a CPA or other expert prepare your return. If you walk into your preparer's office with a shoe box filled with unopened statements, handwritten notes on scraps of paper, every check you've written in the last 12 months and that envelope filled with grocery coupons you misplaced in July, get ready for the "mother of all tax-preparation bills."

Consider what your accountant is charging. Wouldn't you rather have that time spent actually preparing the return, rather than just organizing your information?

• Beware the IRS "matching program." Tax rules require that banks, brokerages, mutual funds, insurance companies and a variety of others file various "informational returns." The most popular of these are various types of Form 1099.

The IRS records in their computer the name, social security number, payor and dollar amount of each of the one billion informational returns it receives. The IRS then searches each return to make sure the income they have matches what you put on your return.

It is critically important to review each W-2, 1099 and other informational returns to make sure they are correct. Also, when you fill out your return, report the information exactly as it appears on the 1099.

• Start with last year's return. Your previous year's return will provide you with an excellent checklist to make sure you've received all the information you required. Beware, however, that things do change from year to year. If you sold all your IBM in 1992, you won't be getting a dividend from them in 1993.

• If you run out of time, extend. Filing Form 4868 on or before April 15 buys you an automatic extension for filing your return until August 15. An addi-

But these are not extensions on paying taxes owed. You must compute (using your best estimate) your tax liability and send any balance due along with the extension form. Send all tax forms to the IRS via certified mail.

Keep your records. The normal statute of limitations on tax returns (other than fraud) is three years following the filing deadline or the return filing date, whichever is later. For example, the statute of limitations on 1993 returns filed by April 15, 1994 expires on April 15, 1997. At a minimum, keep records at least this long. A six-year period may be more prudent in the event you are audited.
Start planning your 1994 tax bill now! Tax time is a good time to review your financial plans to determine if you are on track toward your goals and taking the maximum advantage of the tax law.

Post Office special hours The Clarkston Post Office will collect mail all night April 15-16 to give last-minute income-tax filers a chance to meet the IRS deadline.

Regular services will be maintained between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. However, from 5 p.m. till midnight, the Post Office will collect mail hourly and guarantee an April 15 postmark, according to Beverly Jemison, supervisor of customer service.

The lobby will be open until midnight for drop-offs of mail only. Mail will also be collected at the outside mailboxes in the Post Office parking lot.

Missing Ohio woman turns up on Dixie Highway

A 32-year-old Ohio woman who had been reported involuntarily missing was discovered at a gas station on Dixie Highway, Independence Township, Thursday night.

The woman told deputies at the Oakland County Sheriff's Department she had been kidnaped by three men in Ohio and brought to Michigan along with her car.

Lakehead

According to the police reports, she said she was put in a van, bound and gagged and taken a very long way from home. She said the men took her to a room in a house that had a pentagram painted on the wall and candles burning in the room. She said she was tied naked to an alter and her head was shaved.

The woman, who admitted being part of a Satantic cult when she lived in Texas, said the men performed rituals to transfer the spirits of a sick man into her body. She told the men that she had become a Christian and since she was filled with God she couldn't host the other spirits.

She said the ritual stopped, two of the men raped her and said they were going to sacrifice her. She said she told the men that if they killed her she would go to Heaven. They decided to release her. She was given the keys to her car and she started driving.

The woman was crying so hard when the police found her she couldn't talk and had no idea where she was. She said she didn't know how long she had been driving, but had seen a Nine Mile Road sign. She couldn't identify her alleged kidnapers or rapers.

She told police that she had recently been receiving threats from members of the cult she had been associated with.

The woman was treated at Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital and her family came to get her. Since the crimes didn't happen in the township, the case has been turned over to special investigators at the OCSD.

Clarkston Clinic offers complete health care

When physician Ronald LePere opened his family practice in Clarkston 35 years ago, medicine was just as he knew it would be.

It was full of opportunities to help people and required long hours of work, which included house calls and hospital rounds.

Medicine today has changed, some for the better and some for the worse, he said.

"It has changed from an old-type practice where you didn't have to worry about lawsuits, third-party pay and socialized medicine," Dr. LePere said. "However, technology has improved so much that you can make diagnoses much more easily now."

Procedures such as scope surgery mean less hospitalization. Patients with serious diseases today may live longer than they would have years ago.

Patients, however, have remained the same, the doctor said.

"I've certainly enjoyed talking with people and helping people as much as before," he said. "One of the most rewarding aspects is seeing kids you delivered having kids of their own and watching them grow up. You've been part of their life for 30 years. Challenges continue to crop up for the doctors and the nurse practitioner on staff. "Ten to 15 years ago, it was learning that you couldn't cure everybody, accepting the fact that you couldn't do that," he said. "Lately, there's more challenges in the social changes in medicine --- socialized medicine, which no one will like it when it gets here. It will bankrupt the country." Business takes more and more time, with forms to fill out for government and insurance companies. "It's challenging to keep cognizant of the healthcare changes and potential reforms that are ongoing in the industry today," Dr. LePere said. The Clarkston Clinic offers complete family care, including X-ray, EKG and other modalities, and urgent and walk-in care. After hours, the Clarkston Ambulatory Care Center uses his office for patients in need of after hours and urgent care. So 24-hour care is always available at 5904 S. Main. Also on hand is the Pine Know Pharmacy where prescriptions can be filled.

LePere also offers his patients an on-site blood and culture lab which allows less waiting time for test results.

Dr. LePere's associates, Dr. Carroll Knauss, Dr. Dennis Lynch and Pamela Lynch, nurse practitioner, also see patients at the clinic — all of them are affiliated with Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital.

Dr. Knauss sees patients for general surgery needs. Not only does he perform the surgery, he does before and after care of the patient at the clinic.

With the improvements in surgical techniques, patients no longer face long hospital stays.

"Patients are geared for out-patient surgery," Dr. Knauss said. "Because of the changes in health care, only the more ill stay in the hospital."

Dr. Dennis Lynch, a certified osteopathic physician and internal medicine specialist, consult and see patients in the clinic.

The field of internal medicine specializes in the care of adults and geriatrics. Primary types of health cares issues include, but are not limited to heart disease, diabetes, thyroid disorders, problems of the stomach and bowel and hypertension. "My goal is to keep patients out of the hospital," Dr. Lynch said. "My second goal is to keep patients, especially the elder, health and living independently as long as possible." He completed his medical education post graduate studies in 1965 and has been in the Pontiac area since then. illnesses.

"I love working with patients," she said. "I like keeping them health and making those who are sick feel better."

As the Clarkston area has grown, so has Dr. LePere's practice. To keep his office running smoothly so that patients receive the best, his staff is the best.

"We have excellent support staff, not only nursing and X-ray, but business and reception" LePere said.

They include:Carol Odorizzi, Pomula Cottrell, Karen Antaya, Dina McConnell, Carole Campbell, Alyce Griggs-Bramble, Lori Warchuck, Jennifer Hardy, Abigail Mrozinski, Marsha Peters, Reta McKinney, Rosemary Schimizzi, Patsey Magnan and Laura Colon.

Dr. LePere and his associates all give to their patients — after all, that is what doctoring is all about — a lesson he learned from his father.

"My most important philosophical concept is something I learned from my father, who was in general practice for over 50 years. That is: treating patients as you would like your own family or yourself to be treated. "He advised me many times to treat patients to the best of my ability but that the most important thing was to do no harm. Therefore, I treat a large majority of my patients completely in the office setting. However, I have excellent specialists and consultants in the area for practically all the problems that I feel need specialized care — all of whom I would not hesitate to see myself."

Pamela Lynch, who is married to Dennis, assists in the medical care of patients at the clinic.

As a certified nurse practitioner, Pamela focuses on adult primary care, which includes pelvic and breast exams for women.

With her 10 years experience of working in intensive care, she is concerned with preventative health-care measures and taking care of simple common

Dirty hands? No problem for girls in shop

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE Clarkston News Staff Writer

Becky says she has a natural talent. Dana wants a leg up on the competition. So these girls have become part of what is usually a male class machine technology.

The Independence Township students are two of a dozen girls who have graced the class taught by Bill Holmes at Oakland Technical Center for 22 years.

Holmes said a hands-on education is something every student should experience whether they're going to college or not.

"The things I stress go beyond running machines. They need math and thinking skills in this field."

Holmes said the hands-on experience of a technical school may give that manufacturing manager the "one feather that gets the job for them. You're much more valuable with extra skills."

This year, he has two girls who have come to him for those extra skills.

"Becky and Dana are always working. Every girl I've (taught) has had no problem getting a job if they want one," said Holmes.

Holmes said the girls in his classes are usually more patient and exact than the boys, although sometimes they are timid about using the machines the first time.

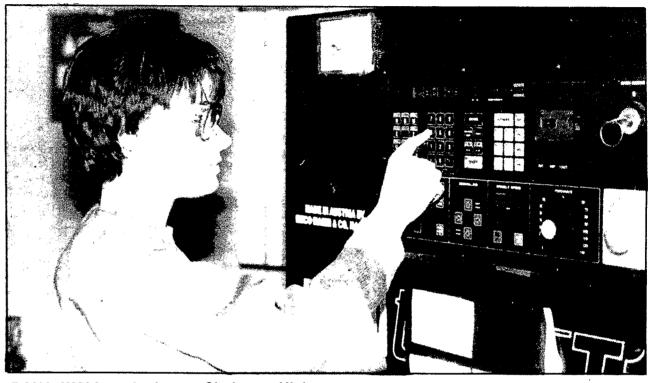

'They say (employers) are not just looking at college. They want hands-on experience ... This will put me further ahead than the other students."

Dana Wall

There is a need for women in the manufacturing field. "I'm always getting calls asking, 'Do you have any ladies?" said Holmes.

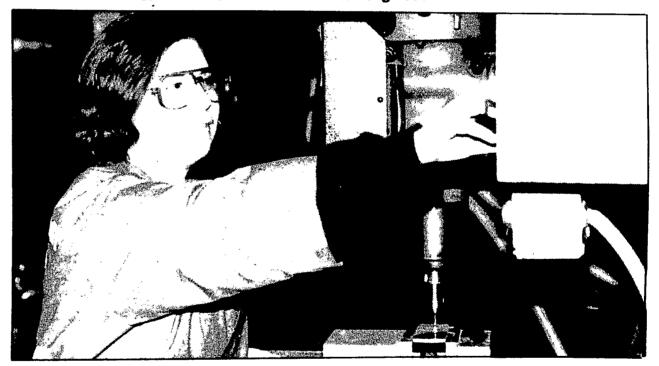

This year he can give them a choice of two. Dana Wall, 16, is a junior at Clarkston High School and this is her first year at OTC-NW.

Wall wants to be a mechanical engineer and said earning to run the machines will help her career.

DANA WALL, a junior at Clarkston High School, has just begun her training in machine technology. Wall hopes the hands

"They say (employers) are not just looking at college. They want hands-on experience."

Wall plans to attend college when she graduates. "This will put me further ahead than the other students."

She said being one of two girls in the class isn't difficult at all.

"They guys are a lot of help. You don't get harassed. They're very polite."

Wall said her parents and family wer very supportive of her decision to pursue classes at the vocational center. She did get some teasing from friends, but that quickly faded away.

"I've got more guts than they do. I'm doing what I want to do."

She said her friends thought working at the center would be a "blow off," but Wall said it is harder. The students are allowed fewer absences before they loose credit, and have to stay in one area OT CIASS ses at the Oakland Technical Center --- Northwest. She would like to pursue a for three hours instead of the usual one hour per class.

Wall has given presentations about her work at OTC-NW and being a girl in a predominantly male area to middle school children throughout the area so other girls can realize the opportunities available to them.

Becky Whetstone, 18, is the other half of the female population in the class. This is Whetstone's second year in the program and she has taken summer classes.

"When I was little I would get on my dad's saw and make animal shapes. My dad thought I had a talent for this. I tried it and I liked it."

Whetstone hopes to work in the tool-and-die profession and obtain her journeyman's card.

Experience in the hands-on field will help Whetstone when she graduates from Clarkston High journeyman's card. Whetstone with graduate from CHS in June.

School this year.

"You're always learning in this field. I'll come (into a job) higher than others because I have the experience."

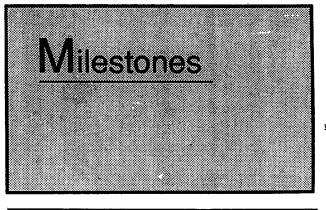

She was the only girl in her first year at OTC-NW. "I kind of felt out of place. But as I got to know the guys they were really nice."

Whetstone credits her parents and sisters for her success in the program.

"My family really supports me. They think I have a lot of creativity in this field."

Both girls say there are times the work is difficult and confusing, but they are determined workers and know they will succeed

"No matter who you are or what sex you are, if you're willing to strive for your dream you can do anything you want to," said Whetstone, B 2 Wed., April 6, 1994 The Clarkston (MI) News

New arrival

Brendon Charles Kelly was born to Lorie Messing and Shane Kelly of Independence Township on April 2, 1994.

Brendon was born at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, Pontiac. He weighed 11 pounds and three ounces and measured 21 1/2-inches-long.

Grandparents are Jerry and Jean Messing of Independence Township and Patrick and Becky Kelly of Independence Township.

Great-grandmothers are Marion Smith of Attica, Mich. and Rowena Hancock of Clarkston.

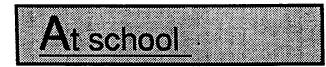

• Jeffrey Farrand, a freshman at the University of Michigan, Flint, was named a William J. Branstrom Award winner for the fall 1993 semester. The honor is given to freshmen in the top five percent of their class.

• Christine A. Lisle was named a James B. Angell Scholar at the University of Michigan, Flint, for six consecutive semesters of all A's.

 Jacqueline S. Patrick was named a James B. Angell Scholar at the University of Michigan, Flint, for two consecutive semesters of all A's.

• Heather Flor, a senior at Michigan Technological University, Houghton, was named to the dean's list for the winter quarter. She is majoring in civil engineering.

• Joshua Surre, a student at Central Michigan University, Mt. Pleasant, was involved in the school's production of the musical "Guys and Doll."

 Marine Pvt. Tony Jeans, son of Judith Edwards of Independence Township, recently completed his recruit training in Parrie Island, SC. The 1992 graduate of Clarkston High School joined the Marine Corps in November 1993.

Students honored in essay contest

Three Sashabaw Middle School students finished first, second and third in the local level of the 25th annual "America and Me" essay contest sponsored by Farm Bureau Insurance.

Nicole Nelles placed first in the contest, open only to eighth-graders. Lynda Gronlund placed second and Nicole Buck took third. All three are students of honors English teacher Jim Banes.

Nicole Nelles said she was inspired to write her essay after seeing "And the Band Played On," a movie about the early days of the AIDS crisis.

"It opened my eyes to problems in America," she said. Her essay goes on to suggest that people can strengthen America by protecting the environment, volunteerism and setting a good example.

Lynda wrote about "how everyone in America needs to do their part and everybody else needs to do theirs," she said.

Nicole Buck wrote about "how there are a bunch of problems in our world and what we can do to solve them in our community, our world, our country," she said.

As the first-place winner, Nicole Nelles' essay will advance to the state level of competition and her name will be engraved on a plaque for permanent display at SMS. All three girls received certificates.

The top ten essays in Michigan will be announced in May. The authors will receive U.S. savings bonds and be honored at a banquet in Lansing.

Started in 1968, the contest encourages Michigan youngsters to explore their role in America's future. This year's theme was "My Roots in America and How I can Nourish Them." Nicole Nelles' firstplace essay follows.

My roots in America and how I can nourish them

By Nicole Nelles

One of the most moving films I've ever seen was the HBO commentary "And The Band Played On." It was the story of the AIDS epidemic; how it got here and how it spread. Seeing this movie really opened my eyes to this and other problems in our country. It made me think about how I need to help my country, how I need to 'strengthen my roots.'

My roots in America run in many directions. Things like going to school, recycling, even being part of a family, nourish my roots in America.

Attending school is very important. We can't strengthen our roots without a good education. It sometimes seems so insignificant as kids to go to school, but it really is very meaningful to our society. When we have good educations we will grow and have important roles in nourishing our country. We will get jobs and become great leaders.

Keeping our country clean is another way of keeping America intact. Right now, our country is in pretty bad shape environmentally. Recycling and cleaning up are great ways to help the problem. You may feel like you're not doing too much by yourself, but you are. Every little bit helps to protect and preserve the Earth for ourselves and for future generations. Local community service is another way I can strengthen my roots. Volunteering to help out at a local nursing home or hospital is one example of helping out. Going to keep someone company for an hour a week can make their day and make you feel great! Being a member of a family also nourishes my roots to America. There's strength and love in numbers. Having a good relationship with my family sometimes sets a good example for other families to be the same way, and when our country has strong families we have strong values. Making our country a better place will take time but it will get done. How can you help? Next time you get the opportunity to help in any of the ways I've mentioned, do it! Every little bit helps.

Kimble re-elected United Way head

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY Clarkston News Editor

Tom Kimble sits on the boards of directors of 10 national organizations. He holds down a big job at General Motors. He has two children, one grown, one age 14.

Kimble, of Clarkston, was recently re-elected president of the board of directors of United Way of Oakland County. He has served the United Way as a volunteer for 12 years.

So what makes Tom run? Basically, it's a commitment to youth.

"If we don't do something to bring about fundamental change with our youth, I'm afraid we'll lose an entire generation to crack," he said.

Speaking at the United Way's annual meeting this month, Kimble challenged the 200 volunteers in attendance to "make kids count this year."

"There are many things you can do to help the children of our community," he said. "You can be a Scout leader, Big Brother or Sister. You can read to students in elementary schools or take a youngster to work with you to see how people behave in the workplace."

As president of the United Way of Oakland County, Kimble said his job is to "develop strategic plans for the needs of the county," then develop plans to carry them out.

'If we don't do something to bring about fundamental change with our youth, I'm afraid we'll lose an entire generation to crack.'

Tom Kimble

One of the ideas the county board has come up with is an "assignment board." It's part of a national program called "Day of Caring" in which volunteers offer one day to participate on a project of their choice.

"The intent is to get more people involved in what they want to do," Kimble said.

Despite an image problem at the national level, the United Way in Oakland County has seen its fund raising grow over two percent in the past year,

Tom Kimble

Kimble said. Over $1 million has been allocated for children's programs this year. Contributions exceeded $5.3 million last year.

"We had more people participate and raised more funds than ever in the history of our organization," he said. He credits the volunteers who identify their community's needs, and then deliver services based on those needs.

"We have a great group of volunteers who come up with programs," he said.

Kimble is the manager of General Motors' North American Operations finance staff. "GM is a good corporate citizen, one of the best," he said. "They're behind what I do 100 percent."

He's lived in Clarkston since November 1992. "Ilove it; it's the best thing I ever did," he said. "I have great neighbors."

Meanwhile, he'll keep traveling the country, doing what he can to make it a better place for kids.

"You have to believe it's better to give to others than to receive," he said.

BY VIRGINIA BLOCK

In the process of "sorting" material for better locating and filing it by subject, we saw the need to stop searching on our elusive ancestor (missing still, since 1972) and take a look at what we've gathered, to maybe be needed "someday."

The error of our ways, early on, is plainly found, upon discovery of two zeroxed pages, reprinted from the Ontario Register, entitled, "Orphan Prisoners of the War of 1812." The information given lists the guardian for children of 50 men who died in the War of 1812. Guardians names possibly indicate a family relationship and is valuable for the information that says the author took his records from a "broadside" preserved in the Nelles Papers, of the Ontario Archives.

The author is very thorough in citing his sources, even to stating that the list appeared in the Kingston Gazette, dated Oct 1, 1817. Guess what?

We failed to cite which quarterly of the Ontario Register we found this great material in - to furnish you with reference directions. Please folks, on the back of anything you copy, put down the place (library, clerk's office, etc.), date, book, page, call number and even the name of the person you found the info on, at the time you copy anything whether it's hand-copied or a zerox of a whole article.

A research log is available to be kept in your notebook, and saves time in case of publication.

The fact that the orphans' records are classed with military records is pertinent to an upcoming workshop on military record searching on May 28, offered by Pontiac Area Historical and Genealogical Society.

Many folks believe, mistakenly, that the Society's name indicates "Pontiac area" research only. The name was chosen in 1980 to include all communities served by the court house, located in the county seat of the City of Pontiac, County of Oakland.

Douglas Casamer, director of veterans affairs of Macomb County, will offer his expertise as a genealogyhistory (of the military and wars) and guidance. His own family has been traced to the Mayflower, but his own career in the military makes him an authority on both counts.

Preregistration information will be given next time.

The 40-page handout given by Mr. Casamer includes forms for obtaining military records for all wars, as well as a question and answer session dealing with current military problems.

This will be a must, before setting out on summer researching/vacations. Lots of new surnames are being filed in our library - and if you send us a 5-generation chart, yours can be added, at no cost.

We thank you for your patience in getting answers, but we are a staff of one.

Happy Hunting.

NOTICE OF WETLAND INVENTORY MAP

"Under the provisions of Act 203 of the Public Acts of 1979, as amended, the Charter Township of Independence is required to notify each record owner of property on the property tax roll that the Township has enacted an ordinance regulating wetlands, and that the Township must prepare a wetlands inventory map. The Township Board has tentatively adopted a wetlands inventory map which is available for inspection during regular business hours in the office of the Township, 90 N. Main Street, Clarkston, Michigan 48327. Until April 15, 1994, the Township will receive your comment prior to finalizing the inventory map. Act 203 also requires the Township to advise all owners of property in the Township that their property may be designated as wetland on the inventory map, and that the inventory map does not necessarily include all of the wetlands within the Township that may be subject to the Wetlands Ordinance. Finally, please be advised that the inventory map does not create any legally enforceable presumptions regarding whether property that is or is not included in the inventory map is or is not in fact a wetland."

house to look for which will offer the best buy for the least cost?

ANSWER: Style may be less important than location and price. According to building experts, the two-story house is the least expensive to build per square foot when measured as the cost of living area. It gives double the space of a ranch unit, for example, for the same amount of land. It is also less expensive to add a second story than to build a floor and foundation to extend the living area. The same space that costs $100 per square foot in a two-story house would cost about $125 in a ranch or $120 in a split level.

tasty lesson

Adam Kretz had sugar on his face and a pile of food on his desk. He seemed to be having a good time. The fourth-graders in Natalie Hewko's class at Clarkston Elementary School got a lesson in international foods March 23, and by the time it was over, you could tell which foods were popular, which were not.

Adam's mother had sent in a box of Polish "angel wings," a powdered-sugar-covered pastry that appeared to be a big hit. However a Russian-Jewish dish called kugel was dismissed by many of the students.. It ended up assembled on Adam's desk, even though one adult helper pronounced it "delicious." Students also got to sample Norwegian krumkaker and waffles, Swedish nut bread, Belgian chocolate truffles and Costa Rican and Mexican rice dishes.

Hewko said her students learn about foreign countries and sample their food each year in conjunction with social studies.

"The people who gave presentations were all from the community and they talked about their heritage," she said. For the food tasting, students brought in dishes reflecting their own ethnic heritage. Adam was proudly handing out the angle wings and enjoying the reception they were getting. He must have been sampling too because it wasn't long before he had the tell-tale signs of powdered sugar on his face.

And how were they? "Pretty good," according to Denny Muha.

STRIVE-ing to learn wood carving

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE Clarkston News Staff Writer

A flock of blue herons and love birds invaded the classes of Betsy Travis and Billie Pambid last week. Students in their art and ecology classes were introduced to the art of wood carving by Don Hindman as part of an eight-week block focusing on ducks.

"It's fun," said sophomore Tia Stites. "It's really relaxing. If you're mad you chip a piece off here and a piece off there."

Jeremiah Wade, a junior, agreed, "It was something different than you did every day. It's not as hard as I though it would be. Once I got started it wasn't too bad at all."

The wood carving class was part of an eightweek interdisciplinary block which combined ecology and art.

Travis, an art teacher, said the idea for concentrating on ducks came from a duck stamp design contest sponsored by the Department of the Interior Fish and Wildlife Service.

Along with carving, the students made pictures of ducks and fantasy birds, wrote reports, visited the Drayton Plains Nature Center and created nests and eggs for various birds.

"They've wanted to work more strongly than before. I've heard them talking in the hall about ducks in a way they haven't before," said Travis.

"They've learned something in depth, instead of a cursory look. They've learned to look at something from many different vantage points instead of in onemensional thinking."

STRIVE student consentrates on her A carving.

Students weren't the only ones learning. "I learned a lot from Mrs. Pambid's unit and I think she profited from doing the art unit," said

Travis. "I tried all the art projects," said Pambid. She said this fact may have made the kids in her ecology class more excited about art. "I guess if they could beat me (they) were OK," she said with a smile. "I (also) learned a lot about ducks. Being a science teacher doesn't mean you know everything about ducks." Pambid said the interdisciplinary approach to education is a better way to learn and the students benefit from combined classes.

"I liked seeing students working together who don't usually even talk together," she said. Travis also saw the benefit in the different approach to learning. "They ended up learning more in an interdisciplinary class than in two separate classes." Hindman, who has taught wood carving for eleven years, said he was extremely proud of the A room full of heron was a sight to behold at STRIVE alternative education.

accomplishments of the students.

They've really done a nice job. That's were (my) gratification is. I tell them to get the "T" out of "can't" and they can do it," said Hindman.

"The kids accomplished it. I think they enjoyed it. I think they're as proud as punch about what they did. I'm just super proud of them."

Greek revival home highlights SCAMP tour

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE Clarkston News Staff Writer

The house standing behind a picket fence at 8 E. Washington almost didn't make it.

"Some business people in town thought it would be great to tear this house down and make a parking lot," said owner Bill Basinger.

But with a lot of time, love, nails and paint the house has become something every town can be proud of — a home.

Built in 1842 by Herashero Foster, the original one-and-a half-story home is Greek revival. Sue Basinger said the home is one of the oldest in the village and the style is one of the first used in Clarkston.

The original home had two front rooms, two upstairs bedrooms and possibly a lean-to for a kitchen.

"It was a very crude early house," she said. Around 1880 the dining room, West Room and a bay window were added to the home. A domed ceiling is the special feature of the dining room.

"That's a fairly grand idea for such a crude house," said Sue.

She has found out that there are five such domed ceilings in Clarkston, and architectural historians are amazed that they exist in such a small town.

Eventually a kitchen and attic were constructed and in the 1970s the Basingers added a bathroom and extra bedroom on the main floor.

Although a Foster was the original owner, "This was always called the Yeager house," said Sue.

Frank Yeager, a blacksmith in Clarkston, bought the home around 1850. The Basingers have found many remnants of Frank Yeager and his shop throughout their yard. There is even a horse shoe on their front step Bill's parents, Lysle and Ruth, bought the home from the Yeager family in 1963.

"When my folks bought it, it was in pretty bad shape," said Bill.

The home had no central heat - only a space heater in the dining room. The wiring was old and there was a hand pump for water in the kitchen.

Bill's parents began to work and when Bill and "I like color," said Sue."You can never have enough color."

While Sue is the professional decorator, Bill has become the quintessential do-it-yourselfer.

Sue moved to Clarkston in 1970, he continued the project.

Surprises abounded during Bill's remodeling. When he broke through to the attic he found the original singles still existed above the dining room with another roof simply built above it.

While installing a fireplace in the dining room, he discovered a covered up wall of book shelves.

During the remodeling, the Basingers have taken great care to retain the historical nature of the home.

"We've tried to keep as much of the original (woodworking and spaces) as much as what is practical," said Sue.

Sue is part of the Historical District Committee in Clarkston that has influenced what they keep and what goes in their home.

"We encourage anyone with original material to handle them sensitively," she said.

"We've done mostly what Susan thinks is a good design," said Bill.

"Whatever appeals to us. Whatever we like and stumbles our way. We make no illusions that this house harks to any time period," Sue said with a laugh.

The Basingers have a home filled with stories, from the picture Ruth found of a child in Piccadilly Square to the deer head in the West Room that is actually an ink well.

"I just like the combination, so I put them together," said Sue.

The Basingers have brought accessories --- including a table --- home with them from their trips to England.

"I feel like we've robbed half of England," Bill said, laughing.

"I do everything by reading books," he said.

He has worked with the heating, electricity, plumbing and remodeling. He installed the fire places throughout the home and braced the bay window and soft pine floors. He built an addition to the home, has created shelves and display cabinets for the home and even re-upholsters furniture.

Bill also built the gazebo gracing the back yard. Even the it has a story.

Built before gazebos were in vogue and when wooden shingles were out of style, the Basingers designed it and built it themselves. Since it has a rounded top, the Basingers had to use some Yankee ingenuity to make them fit.

Look at nature when planning your landscape

BY DEBORAH DZIEWIT Clarkston News Staff Writer

As spring slowly arrives, many of you are itching to work on your yards after being cooped up all winter.

Plant a flowering crab here. Place a juniper there. Add a boulder or two. Maybe a perennial bed next to the fence.

Voila — your yard is landscaped.

But before you take a shovel in hand or that trip to the nursery to buy your first plant, here are some suggestions that might help.

First, study. There are books and magazines in libraries, bookstores and for that matter in the checkout lane at your favorite grocery store that can help guide you down the landscape lane.

"The Clarkston library (Independence Township Library) has lots of books," said Brad Meehle, a Michigan certified nurseryman and designer at Bordine's. "The 10,000 Most Asked Gardening Questions" is chock full of information."

Research the plant material you would like to see in your yard. Books can help and nurseries have qualified staff that are more than willing to help you with the proper care and maintenance of the plant material you choose to buy.

Take stock of what you already have in your yard.

"They should look at what plant material is existing. What are the hard structures on site? Barns, patios, decks?" Meehle said. "Where are the children's play areas and equipment?"

Make up a plan before stepping between the aisles of a nursery. Know about the future size of the plant material you are about to buy. Ask how tall and how wide the plant will grow, and plant accordinally.

Find out the required maintenance the plant material needs. Will it need pruning, thinning and weeding? If you are not much into yard work, find plants that are more maintenance free.

Many self-landscapers tend to plant too close to buildings. After a few years the plants don't have enough room to reach their full potential.

Consider the usage of the areas you intend to landscape. Don't plant expensive ornamentals near a children's play area — they might not survive.

"Before you garden or landscape think of styles or themes," said Keith Schmaltz, vice president of Oakhill Farms Landscape Co., a division of Environmental Designs, LTD.

"Certain plants create atmosphere," Keith said. See LANDSCAPE, page 12

Work with nature for a successful lawn

A preventive health care program for your lawn is very similar to one you would use to maintain your won health.

The idea is to prevent problems from occurring so you don't have to treat them. A healthy lawn can withstand most stresses such as weeds, insect attacks and other diseases.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency recommends the program below as a general guide to growing an healthy lawn:

• Develop healthy soil: To grow well, your lawn needs soil with good texture, some key nutrients and the right pH balance. Most lawns need to be fertilized every year because they need more nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium.

• Choose a grass that thrives in your climate: The right type of grass will always give better results.

• Mow high, often and with sharp blades: Keeping your lawn a bit long will produce stronger, healthier grass with fewer pest problems. The rule of thumb is to mow often enough that you never cut

Those three numbers

How nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium help your lawn

NITROGEN: Helps grass make chlorophyll that gives grass it's green color.

PHOSPHORUS: Promotes strong root growth and winter hardiness. Helps grass withstand stress, thereby warding off disease.

POTASSIUM: Reduces transpiration (water loss through blades). Strengthens leaf blades to better handle heavy traffic and stress.

more than one-third of the height of the grass blades.

• Water deeply but not too often: It's best to water only when the lawn really needs it, and then to water slowly and deeply.

• Correct thatch build-up: All grass forms a layer of dead plant material, known as thatch, between the blades and the soil. When it gets too thick it prevents water and nutrients from penetrating the soil and grass roots. Reduce thatch by raking the lawn or using a machine that slices through thatch to break it up. Sprinkling a thin layer of topsoil or compost over the lawn will also help.

• Set realistic goals: Even a healthy lawn is likely to have some weeds or insect pests. But it will also have beneficial insects and other organisms that help keep pests under control..

Art is for the birds--and collectors

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY Clarkston News Editor

In the last couple of years, birdhouses have become one of the hottest trends in American decorating. They adorn both the interior and exterior design of countless homes. They occupy center stage in decorating magazines month after month. Books about them abound.

All of which had very little to do with why Al Grant, of Waterford, took up birdhouse making as a hobby. That it's become a lucrative side job is purely a happy accident which, frankly, has left him somewhat awestruck.

Grant's birdhouses, sold under the label "Grant House Folk Art," are available exclusively in Michigan at Calcote Country on Main Street in Clarkston. Grant is store owner Leda Calcote's son-in-law.

He was recovering from back surgery, getting sick and tired of lying around, when his physical therapist suggested he "build something."

"Things were really starting to get boring, I mean life itself," he says. His therapist, Lori Sumptner, "started convincing me. 'You've got this time on your hands, you like to work with your hands, build something."

AI Grant stands with some of his latest work. The birds in the branches he calls

"I guess it could have been anything. Looking at country magazines, I noticed a lot of people decorate with birdhouses."

And so it began. Already a do-it-yourselfer, Grant began making small birdhouses, then gradually larger and larger ones. Now some big prices are commanded by his multi-dimensional, multi-story bird condominiums, which have turned a few heads along Main Street. He's never had one not sell.

Grant has a workshop in his home, and makes each birdhouse in one sitting, right down to giving it a name. One large one currently for sale is named after a Goodrich woman who bought his first house and has become an avid collecter.

"As soon as I'm finished with it a name just pops into my head," he says. "I can never stray from that #### very first thought."

The materials Grant uses for his houses are recycled. If the wood isn't distressed enough, he distresses it more. Metal roofs and barbed wire come from a metal scrap yard. It's labor intensive, but gives each house its unique look.

The line has been so successful he's expanded into other wood folk art. Colorful birds, dubbed "war birds" by Grant's son Bryan, perch in tree branches. Barbed-wire fencing, painted gold, is twisted into Christmas trees. Trios of big wooden stars are highly distressed and painted country colors.

A friend encouraged Grant to show his wares at a show for wholesalers this winter in Valley Forge, Pa. Though he has no plans to make this a full-time

Twister threat increases with warmer weather

Last year was a very quiet year for severe weather in Michigan. Although there were a total of 11 tornadoes reported here in 1993, no one was killed as a result. Those tornadoes, however, destroyed or damaged property valued at approximately $1 million.

Northern lower Michigan was hit the most by tornadoes in 1993, according to information released by the National Weather Service recently. However, every county in the state has experienced at least one tornado since 1950.

Tornadoes generally develop from severe thunderstorms. Although not all severe thunderstorms spawn tornadoes, twisters are more likely to occur when there is unseasonably warm and humid air at the earth's surface and cold air at the middle atmospheric levels, with strong upper-level jet stream winds. In Michigan, this clash of air masses is more likely to occur in the spring and in the southern lower part of the state, according to officials from the National Weather Service.

Annually, Michigan experiences an average of 16 tornadoes. Since 1950, 237 persons have been killed by twisters here. Tornadoes can hit any time of the day or night in almost any month of the year. Most, however, occur in April, May, June and July, during the late afternoon and evening hours, generally between 3 and 7 p.m.

Tornadoes develop and move rapidly, often with little notice or forewarning. When a tornado watch is announced, residents should gather a first aid kit, flashlight and portable radio. They should stay tuned to local radio and television stations and be ready or prepared to take shelter. A watch means that conditions are right for development of a tornado.

A tornado warning means that a tornado has been sighted nearby and everyone in the area should take action. Go immediately to the basement, taking cover under something sturdy. If there isn't a basement, move to the lowest floor possible, in a small

Tornado facts

What is a tornado?

It is a column of violently rotating winds extending down from a thunderstorm cloud and touching the surface of the earth.

How fast do tornadoes travel?

Tornadoes generally travel from the southwest and at an average speed of 30 miles per hour. However, some tornadoes have very erratic paths, with speeds approaching 70 mph.

• How fast are the winds inside a tornado? Tornadoes general rotate counter-clockwise.

Typical Michigan tornadoes produce winds of 75-125 mph. However, the Flint tornado of 1953, for example, had winds over 200 mph.

• When are tornadoes the most intense?

room or closet. Again, stay low and, if possible, under a heavy object. Stay away from windows.

At work or school, if a basement is not available, move to an interior hallway on the lowest floor possible. Avoid rooms iwth a large, free-span roof, like gymnasiums. If caught in the open during a tornado warning, seek shelter in a ditch, ravine or other place below ground level and stay as low as possible.

Property owners can also be prepared by ensuring that they have adequate coverage for their home and personal belongings under their homeowners insurance policies. Tornadoes are considered "windstorms" and covered by virtually all homeowners policies, according to the coalition's insurance industry representatives. However, certain limits and requirements may apply.

job, he decided to give it a try. He was amazed at the response.

"I got enough orders to last me till November," he says, sounding like he still can't quite believe it. From what the dealers are telling him, the merchandize is just flying out their doors.

Why are birdhouses so popular? "First, the people are just bird lovers, period," Calcote says. "And of course they're a great piece of folk art."

Tornadoes which develop from thunderstorms that occur early in the season have a tendency to be the most severe.

• How far do tornadoes travel once they touch the ground?

The average Michigan tornado is on the ground for less than 10 minutes and travels a distance of about five miles. However, they do not always follow the norm and have been known to stay on the ground for more than an hour and travel more than 100 miles.

How do tornadoes do so much damage? Tomadoes do their destructive work through the combined action of strong rotary winds, flying debris and the partial vacuum in their center.

> TH: THE BEST PLACE TO BE DURING A TORNADO IS IN THE SOUTHWEST CORNER OF A BUILDING.

FACT: The southwest corner is no safer than any other part of the building. The safest place to be is in a basement under something sturdy, like a workbench. If there is no basement, seek shelter in a small interior room in the middle of the building, like a closet or a bathroom. Always stay away from outside walls and windows.

"They're just neat to have around your house," Grant says. "You get to watch the birds as they bring food to their babies. It's fun to watch." However he adds that he believes most of his creations are remaining indoors.

Despite the success, Grant has no plans to quit his day job with General Motors, where he has over 20 years seniority.

"If I have to do this for a living the fun is gone," he says. "I would never let it become obsessive. I don't look at this as work. This is a pleasure, a hobby."

Screening creates a summer living room

When school is out for the summer, the home can suddenly grow too small for all the family hubbub, and air-conditioning bills will soar.

The answer to these problems often lies, overlooked, just outside the front door. A little-used porch can become a breezy, private oasis with the simple addition of screening.

After decades of neglect, screened porches are enjoying a massive revival, says Peter Miranda of the Insect Screening Weavers. Not only are families replacing old tom screens, but they are moving to enclose formerly open porches as well.

Spurring the comeback are the savings generated by using Mother Nature's air cooling instead of the utility company's, and the need to find more living space when larger homes are unaffordable. Another incentive is the do-it-yourself convenience of modern materials that stand up to year-round weathering.

Multi-Purpose Space

One pleasure rediscovered on the screened porch is outdoor dining, rescued from the insectbesieged patio. Families are realizing screening provides the subtle psychological privacy that makes for a relaxing retreat.

Screen walls define a space within which one can use plants, rugs, wicker and other pieces to make a room that is enclosed and apart from street and neighbors, yet still open to the beauty of the outdoors.

Carefree Coverage

Do-it-yourselfers have several screening options to choose from today. The first is woven fiberglass screening, which offers several advantages. Fiberglass will not curl or stretch while you work with it, nor will the tough, vinyl-coated mesh dent, corrode or rust. The most popular colors are silver gray and charcoal.

Aluminum screening is resilient and rustproof and comes in three colors - bright (natural) aluminum, charcoal and black. In the past, bright aluminum was the preferred screening, but charcoal and black are becoming increasingly popular.

Charcoal offers good outward visibility while black provides the best possible view to the outside. It actually seems to disappear into the background when you look through it.

Fiberglass and aluminum screening products are available in many widths to accommodate various porch panel sizes.

Screening Methods

Durability is a very important factor for the doit-yourselfer because most often, screening is installed for permanent, long-time use. On a roofed, open porch with corner pillars, it is only necessary to insert 2 x 4 wood strips along the floor and ceiling, then 2 x 4 vertical supports at intervals and, finally, a horizontal rail at chair-back height.

Screening is then unrolled vertically and stapled into place, and wooden strips are nailed on to cover the staples around edges and at the chair-rail bar. Even when a porch has a waist-high brick or wood railing, often it is easier to screen with new framework outside the existing railing.

When porch floors are masonry, a carbidetipped masonry drill bit and non-rusting screws in lead sleeves are needed to affix the wood base strip; otehrwise, the procedure is the same.

In all screening jobs, vertical studs should be placed to allow installations of standard-size screen doors.

Removable Screening

Building removable screens takes more time and carpentry, but is well within the skill of the amateur woodworker.

With careful measurements in hand, a home handyman can construct frames and screen them. And of course, replacing wom-out screens is also very simple.

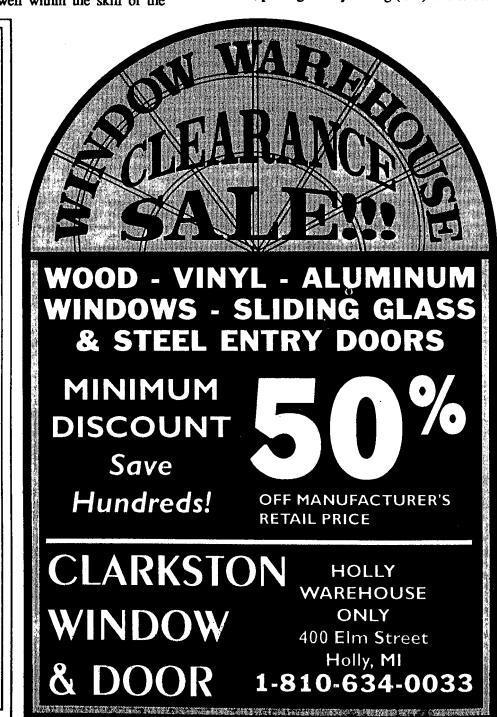

For more information on screening projects, a booklet is available free of charge by mailing a postcard to: The Insect Screening Weavers Association, P.O. Box 2636, Pittsburgh, PA 15230.

Here's how to buy casual furniture

The furniture that fills today's decks - and lanais, pool aprons, patios, sunrooms, breezeways, porches, gazebos and even living rooms - is a far cry from the lawn furniture of yesteryear. This new generation of furniture is beautiful, stylish, and made to last - outdoors.

Casual furniture falls into a half-dozen categories, based on frame material: aluminium, resin, steel, wicker/rattan, wood, and the wrought and cast metals.

Aluminum is by far the most popular material. It doesn't rust, it's easy to move. It's durable and comes in a broad range of prices. It requires little care. And it's available in a wide variety of styles.

Both aluminum and steel furniture are usually "powder-coated" (sealed in a plastic finish that is thick, glossy and durable) instead of painted. Steel furniture has been popular since the 1940s. It is heavy, extremely durable, less expensive than many other frame materials. But if not properly prepared and coated by the manufacturer, and maintained by the owner, it is guaranteed to rust.

Reputable manufacturers have spent small fortunes developing finishes that inhibit rust. All you have to do is be meticulous about following their care instructions.

Resin furniture is the darling of outdoor furniture in Europe, where it commands upward of 90 percent of the casual furniture market. Resin is actually polypropylene - plastic to which chemicals have been added to enhance strength, whiteness, resistance to dirt and to the sun.

Resin can sell for $5.99 per chair or $2,000 for a set. The difference is not discernible to the naked eye. Better resin furniture uses more raw material (it's heavier) with superior weather-fighting chemicals, and has a glossier finish.

Wicker is not a material; it's a method of weaving. Anything from sea grass to reed to synthetic materials can be woven into patterns called wicker. Weather-resistant wicker is a special category that is tremendously popular today. It has been treated to allow constant outdoor use, and is sun-proof, rain-is actually steel that is hammered and bent (literally "wrought") to form graceful curves. Newer is wrought aluminum, duplicating the grace and style of wrought iron, but lighter and easier to maintain.

Cast iron and cast aluminum are formed when molten metal is poured into molds. Cast pieces usually feature intricate, traditional designs that reflect 18th-century styling.

Wood furniture is available in pine, white oak, redwood, cypress, teak, mahogany, cedar, maple, birch and beech, as well as an array of exotic African hardwoods with names such as bubinga and ovengkol. Because the exotic woods, including teak, are often harvested from tropical rain forests, look for a seal of approval from Friends of the Earth, or certification that the wood was plantation harvested.

10 tips for tasty tomatoes

When tossing your next garden salad, remember this . . . for extra color and flavor, nothing beats homegrown tomatoes. Backyard varieties of just about any tomato are healthier and tastier than their supermarket counterparts because they can be picked at the peak of freshness and grown without harmful pesticides and chemicals.

If you'd like to grow your own tomatoes, try following these ten helpful hints from the experts at The Scotts Company, manufacturers of Peters Professional Tomato Food:

 Purchase only high-quality seeds; avoid lowyielding "bargain specials."

• Start seeds indoors in trays of loose welldrained soil about eight weeks before transplanting them outdoors.

• Keep the temperature of the seedling mixture around 80-85 degrees until sprouts are up; then turn heat down to about 65-70 degrees.

Give seedlings at least 12 hours of bright light daily.

Move grown transplants outdoors when air and soil are warm, and there's no sign of frost.

 Plant roots deeply, straight down or "trench" style, covering as much stem as possible to promote additional sprouting.

Feed tomatoes with Peters Professional Tomato Food every seven to 14 days depending on plants need different amounts of food, so follow package instructions for recommended doses.

Apply an organic mulch of straw or leaves to warm (or cool) soil, prevent weed growth and help retain moisture.

Use five foot wire cages or stake-and-weave tresllises to support the growing plants.

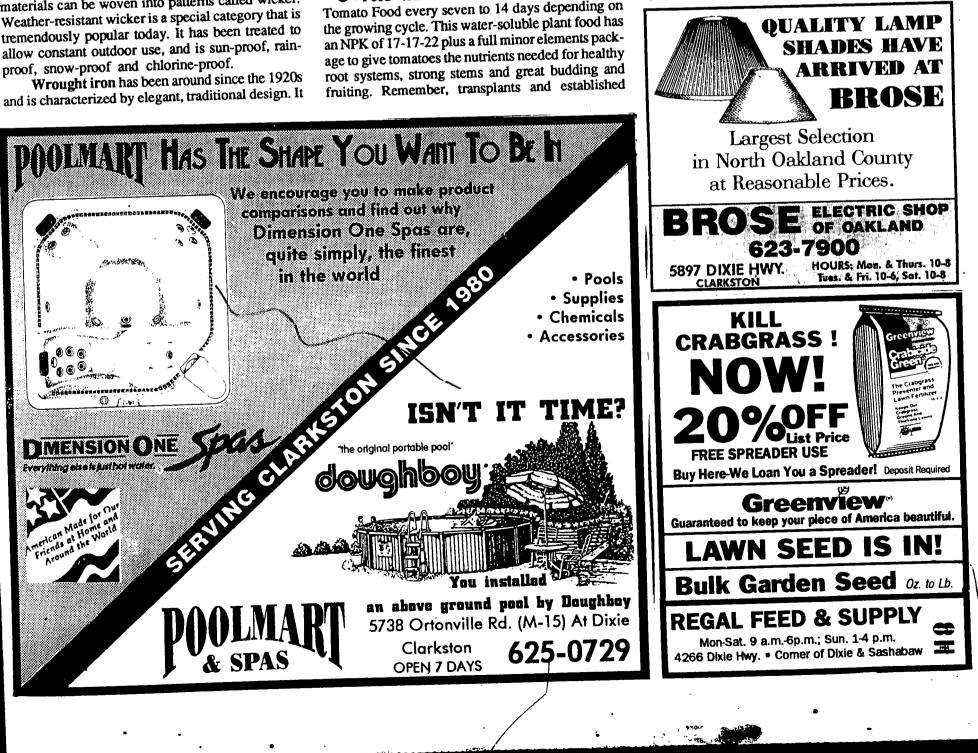

• To encourage fruiting higher up on the trellis, prune plants once, removing all branches below the first flower cluster.

Independence Oaks spring line -up

• Explore ancient spring traditions at "May Day Magic" Saturday, April 30. Children ages 6-8 can enjoy songs, games and crafts with a spring theme. Time is 1-3:30 p.m. Cost is i$10 per child and preregistration is required.

• Discover the spring habits of frogs, toads, salamanders and other amphibians at "Amphibian Amble" on Saturday, April 16 at the Independence Oaks Nature Center.

The 7:30 p.m. class will include a walk; participants are asked to dress accordingly.

Good soil: gardening's essential ingredient

Good cooks know there's no skimping on a recipe's essential ingredients. Otherwise, both food and family suffer. Successful gardening is no different: good soil makes beautiful plants. Without healthy soil, every gardening effort is in vain.

Plants and lawns alike long for that elusive mixture known as loam. Full of organic material, neutral, and with the capacity for good drainage, loam makes everything grow better.

Unfortunately, most soil in North America isn't born this way. It must be made. It's not really as daunting as it sounds. Begin by taking a critical look at your plot of earth to determine its characteristics.

Texture

Determine your soil's texture by scooping some of it up and studying it. If it runs through your fingers, then it's too sandy. Water, along with nutrients, will drain too quickly to benefit plants.

If it's thick and lumpy and clings together in a ball, then you have heavy soil, most likely with a high clay content. Plant roots will have a hard time penetrating such soil and they will starve due to lack of air and water.

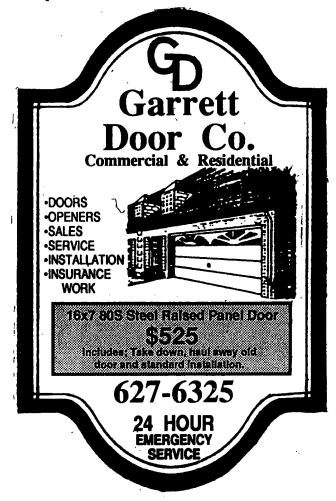

Adding a large quantity of organic material improves the texture of all soils. Grass clippings, straw, hay, wood shavings, chopped up leaves, and dehydrated manure are all suitable for building healthy soil. Sphagnum peat moss offers fast results. An all-natural, safe, and odor-free organic material, peat is available in bales at nurseries and garden centers.

Work a layer of about two inches into the top six inches of your soil. Peat will let clay soil breathe and help sandy soil retain moisture. For year-round soil conditioning, add it to your garden before planting in the spring and after harvesting in the fall. Soil pH

If your soil is well balanced, fertilizers will work correctly and plants will thrive. You can't judge your soil's chemical composition by just looking at it. You need to know its pH.

A soil's "pH" describes its alkalinity or acidity, as measured on a scale of 1 to 14, with pH 7 representing neutral. Numbers above 7 represent levels of alkalinity; numbers below 7 represent levels of acidity. Lawns, vegetables, and most flowers perfer a neutral or slightly acid soil, such as pH 6.3.

You can test your soil at home with a kit sold at garden centers or through mail order seed catalogs. For a modest fee, your local county extension service can provide a detailed soil analysis which includes a reading of such trace elements as magnesium, boron and zinc.

A healthy garden starts from the ground up. Unfortunatley, most soils aren't born perfect. They have to be made.

Acid soil occurs where there's high humidity and conditions that leach out calcium and magnesium. The Northeast is notorious for acid soil. Ground limestone is the antidote. It should be added in varying amounts, depending upon the size of your garden and the composition of your soil.

Alkaline soil is more common in the Southwest where rains don't rob soil of alkalizing chemicals. Agricultural sulfur will increase acidity.

Important Nutrients

A balance of three major plant nutrients - nitrogen (N), phosphorous (P), and potassium or potash (K) - is necessary for good soil. When you shop for fertilizer, you'll see that the bags are labeled with three-number formulas, such as 5-10-10 or 10-10-10. This is how the percentage of the three major elements within a given fertilizer mix is indicated. If you have limed or added sulfur to your garden the previous fall, assume your soil pH is close to neutral, and buy 5-10-10 or 10-10-10 fertilizer.

Nitrogen encourages the growth of plant tissue. It is always listed first. Stunted plant growth, a slowdown in development, and yellowing leaves signal a nitrogen deficiency. To boost the nitrogen content, condition your soil with a mixture of organic material which includes aged manure.

Phosphorous stimulates cell development, fruiting, and disease resistance. It is the middle number. To add phosphorous, rake bone meal into soil.

Potassium aids plants in forming starches and sugars, and helps them to resist disease and drought. It is the third major element in the fertilizer formula. Wood ashes are a good source of potassium for your soil.

Mulch

A thick layer of organic material applied around developing plants helps reduce the need to water and weed. Bark or ground-up garden refuse mixed with Canadian Peat both make good mulches.

Compost

Compost, or decomposed organic matter, is terrific for all-around additional soil boosting. Mixed with peat, it makes an excellent nutrient. Because it's composed of organic matter, the mix also goes a long way toward improving soil texture. Vegetable peelings, lawn and garden debris, and coffee grounds all make good compost.

Few soils are born perfect. But being a soil detective helps you create the proper foundation. Beautiful results await you.

THE gazebo, a garden and brick path adorn the back and side yard of the Basingers' home at 8 E. Washington. Bill and Sue had to boil the wooden shingles so they would be pliable enough for the rounded roof.

"We called the Red Cedar and Shake in Oregon and they told up to boil the shingles," said Bill.

So he built a pit in the yard and Sue boiled the shingles in a big kettle for Bill to mold to the top of the gazebo. It took two weeks to finish the roof.

The garden at the side of the house is something the couple has worked on since Bill was in law school.

"I started working on it for something to do. I knew nothing about gardening when I started. This is all trial and error," said Sue.

"The only original things in the yard are the trees and lilacs," added Bill.

Along with the garden and gazebo there is a raised patio and a brick path, which Bill has moved a couple times, that leads through their yard next door.

There aren't problems with the connected yards since the Basingers' son, Bill, lives next door with his wife, Bobbi Jo, and their 7-month-old daughter, Heather.

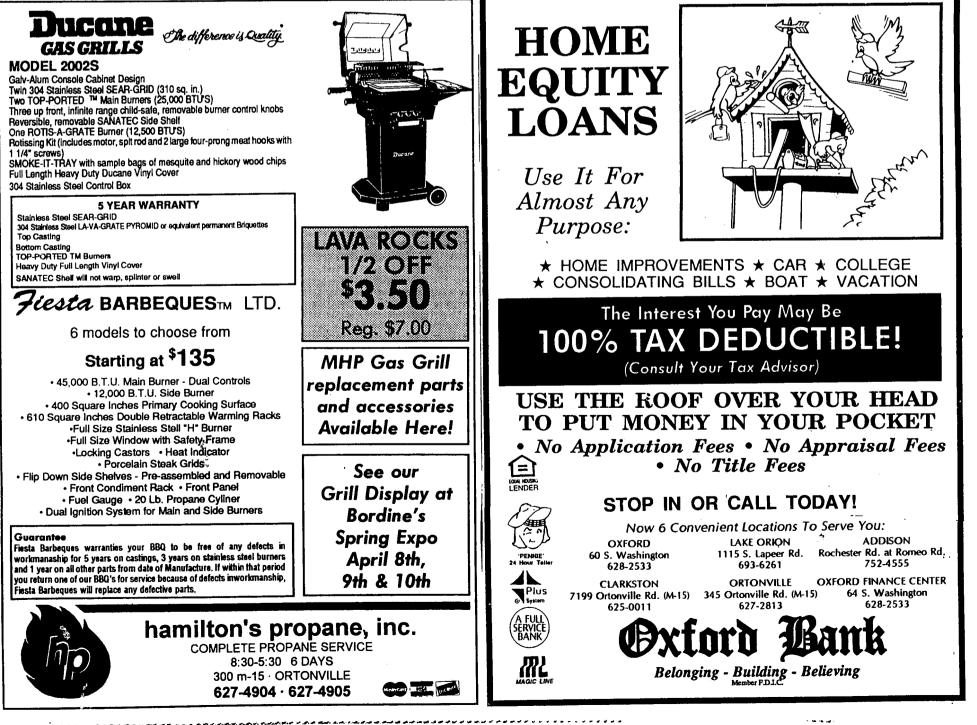

The Basinger home will be part of the SCAMP Home Tour this year. Their garden was part of the tour a few years ago.

They have been asked a couple times to be on the tour and picked this year to do it. "We thought we were remodeled enough this time," said Bill.

The Basingers aren't finished with their home yet, though. They are planning to expand the kitchen and add a garage, but for this couple it isn't a chore. "This is our hobby and we love it," said Sue.

A painting of a little girl is displayed in one of the front rooms in the home. Bill's mother, Ruth, bought the painting in Piccadilly Square in England and later discovered the child's name was Ruth too. Many of the decorations around the house were bought in England.

Nature is the best landscaper

Your interests and usage should determine how you landscape."

Know what areas of the house receive sun and how much and when. Some plants prefer shade while others prefer full sun.

Many landscape architects will consider five basic thoughts when designing a landscape for your yard:

*Canopy or ceiling: What is the existing plant material and what are its effects on the house and yard.

*Understory: These are the small trees and larger shrubs under other trees which bring your eyes downward. Often they are the natives such as Dogwood, Service berry and Honeysuckle.

*Accents or specialty plants: These are the "highlighters" which draw the eye, such as to the entrance way of your home or the corner or edge of the house.

"This is the view of what your friends or those who might pass by will see," Meehle said.

*Transition: Like the name, these elements are those that are the in-between one element and another, such as from a bed line to the understory. Many types of shrubs, flowering shrubs, evergreens and perennials fall into this category. Many times these are planted in clusters, often times this is done in odd numbers. In addition, fences, boulders and wood walls could be considered to make the flow from one line to another.

*Ground cover and accents: Much like you would decide the color of your house carpet, so can you decide the color of your outdoor carpet. Choosing green you might consider using low-lying junipers, myrtle, ivy and pachysandra. With a brown carpet, wood chips or stone might be used.

Formal or informal garden. Color. Contrast. Tall or short. When you're ready to begin, "Think of it as painting with plants," Meehle said. If you get stuck, look at nature; it's the best landscaper in the world.
