Brainstorming session reveals what residents want for Clarkston schools

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

A new high school with a swimming pool, smaller class sizes, arts in the elementaries, staff planning time.

Those are just some ideas on the wish list of over 60 items drawn up at a "Community Forum for Input on Education" Monday night at Clarkston High School.

The forum, offered by the board of education, was attended by about 60 parents, teachers, administrators and other interested residents.

"The proposal tonight is very clear and that's to get your input, whether you're a parent, an empty nester or senior citizen," said school board trustee Bill Craig. "We need input."

The intent of the meeting was to amass ideas, not prioritize or assign costs. The list of ideas presented should be available by the end of the week for public inspection.

"We will take that information and use it as a tool," Craig said.

So just what do people want for Clarkston schools, if price is no object? More staffing was high on the list, reflected in requests for smaller class sizes, more counselors, technology specialists, elementary arts education, more foreign languages, broader class selection and substance abuse coordinators.

A few suggestions had no cost, such as getting the speed limit lowered outside the new Sashabaw Plains Elementary School. But for the most part, it soon became evident that the wish list would be expensive.

About an hour and a half into the discussion, trustee Janet Thomas ventured to point out the obvious.

"Everything they've mentioned is nice," she said. "But what are suggestions of where we can cut?"

"Either you have to have additional revenues or make better use of what you have," Craig said. "But I don't want to have a goal of eliminating anything."

Superintendent Gary Haner said under Proposal A, local districts may only ask for enhancement millages of up to three mills for up to three years. Clarkston will not ask for enhancement millage on its June ballot.

"What we have on this list, every one of them is going to cost the district something," said trustee Joe Helpem. "I would like to hear from this community what programs they want to get rid of."

That prompted a suggestion from the audience that the board open its budgeting process to public input, using a similar brainstorming method.

"It's hard for us to say at this time what to cut when we don't know where the numbers lie," one man said. "We can't say tonight this is what we want to cut. So establish the process."

The process continues next Monday, at 7 p.m. in the high school auditorium. It will conclude May 9 at the regular board meeting, when a list of top priorities will be presented to the board for implementation.

Liquor license transfer sought for Clarkston Cafe

BY DEBORAH DZIEWIT
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Rumors have been flying around the city for months — the Clarkston Cafe was going to be sold.

And months ago the rumors were denied by both the present owners, Lee and Patrick McNew and her father Don Hayes, and the potential buyers, Sign of the Beefcarver, Inc.

"Nothing was even signed back then," said Lee McNew, who has owned the Cafe for 18 years.

The sale is not close to completion; however, according to the owners, it could happen.

"We have agreed to a purchase price, but there are a number of conditions that have to be met before it's a done deal."

Beefcarver Inc. was the former owner of Chuck Daly's Great Northern in West Bloomfield. They currently operate the Wagon Wheel in Troy and the Old Woodward Grill in Birmingham.

Word of a possible sale became public after last night's city council meeting let part of the cat out of the bag.

Kildee makes district visits

U.S. Rep. Dale Kildee (D., Flint) has announced district office hours during late May and June. He will be at the Waterford school offices, 5020 Pontiac Lake Rd., on Wednesday, June 1 from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Constituents who would like one-on-one sessions with Kildee there should call Pat at 666-4000, ext. 337.

Russian to visit

Sergei Stankevich, a member of the Russian Parliament, will meet with the business community of southeast Michigan to discuss trade opportunities and economic development in the former Soviet Union. Chamber of Commerce members are invited to meet with Stankevich on Monday, April 25 at 4 p.m. at One Detroit Center, 500 Woodward Ave., Detroit. For more information call (313) 284-6000.

Fife appointed athletic manager

Dan Fife is the new part-time athletic manager of Clarkston schools.

Fife was appointed to the new post, created by the retirement of athletic director Paul Tungate, Monday night. Tungate will remain in a part-time capacity, sharing the job with Fife. The arrangement will save the district about one-third what it was previously spending, superintendent Gary Haner said.

Fife has been varsity basketball coach in Clarkston since 1978. He holds a BS in education from the University of Michigan, where he coached basketball. He also played professional baseball. He is also part-owner of Spring Lake Country Club.

Fife said the appointment will not interfere with his duties as varsity basketball coach.

Foyteck to run as write-in

After learning she would have to sue to get her name on the ballot, Karen Foyteck has decided to run a write-in campaign for school-board trustee.

Foyteck's petition was declared invalid after voters from the City of Clarkston and Independence Township all signed the same petition.

"I really felt it was better to put my energies and resources into campaigning" rather than suing, Foyteck said.

"If there's anything positive that came out of this, it's that we're all very aware. Another candidate will not get caught."

Growing in a shrinking economy

Clarkston company makes list of fastest growing private firms

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

Flotronics owner/founder Lloyd Schmaltz, called Lloyd by his employees, can find a lost file. He can pick out carpeting for redecoration. He can sell product.

And he knows how to build a company. Started with just himself and a part-time employee in 1986, Flotronics has just made its third straight appearance on the Private 100, a ranking of the top privately held companies in Michigan based on growth.

The ranking is compiled by Roney and Co. and Durocher/Dixon/Werba, Inc., a public relations firm, based on compound annual revenue growth in the last five years. Flotronics came in at number 97 in the rankings this year.

Flotronics specializes in pneumatics (dealing with the mechanical properties of air, such as pressure or density, according to Webster's). Some products they assemble, some they sell for manufacturers, including German and Japanese companies.

Schmaltz, a mechanical engineer, is a GMI graduate and Navy veteran who worked for someone else for 20 years.

"I always had the idea of having my own business," he said. "I believed that new technology merging electronics to air was going to happen."

So he began representing cutting-edge companies who didn't already have representation in the Detroit area. Almost immediately there became evident a need for assembling specialized products out of the components he sold. The ability to adapt and provide those custom products produced a profitable first year, and the company grew from there.

Schmaltz compares his company to a hardware store, a place customers can go when they need a variety of products made by different manufacturers.

"We're a distributor, not a manufacturer's rep," he said. "Some products go out just as they come in, but a lot doesn't. We're the marketing arm for the manufacturers."

During a tour of Flotronics' facility on M-15, Schmaltz explained that a lot of custom pieces the company builds go into robotics. A working display set up in the assembly area of the building shows some of the parts at work.

The display was put together by Tom Tucker, one of Schmaltz' longtime employees. Tucker started with Flotronics as an eighth-grader, sweeping floors. Now he attends Oakland Community College, studying engineering and still working for Schmaltz.

Tucker is typical of a lot of Flotronics' employees. With 19 employees now, the company has very low turnover, Schmaltz said.

"All of our people are pretty much local. I guess I've always been kind of proud we can take people from here with no special skills but good work ethics

Tom Tucker started with Flotronics as an eighth-grader sweeping floors. Now he's in college studying engineering still working for Flotronics' owner Lloyd Schmaltz.

... "Our interest is in growth for our suppliers, but not only (that). We provide a stable place for people to work. We try to be profitable while paying proper benefits and salaries."

Schmaltz attributes his company's success to "just hard work. We have good products, I have real good people and it makes it easy to get the job done. We have products that are innovative, on the advanced edge of the industry."

But at least one of his customers attributes his success to Schmaltz personally and the tone he sets for his company.

"They're easy to get along with," said Don Mazur, a mechanical designer for Fanuc Robotics, a big Flotronics customer. "Lloyd Schmaltz is a very easy person to work with. There are other people here that will tell you the same thing."

Fanuc receptionist Terry Adams agreed. "They're one of the most pleasant companies that comes in," she said.

That kind of rapport is something Schmaltz seems to have with his employees as well. Linda Payment, Flotronics' oldest employee, said, "It's a family-owned business and we're treated as family in many cases. Family is important to Lloyd. We know that by working here, we're not slighting our family. If it's important to us, it's important to everybody."

Payment started as a part-time worker while her kids were young. Now she's full time, occupying the prime corner office with a great view.

"I have been able to learn on the job," she said. "I never dreamed I would be able to do as much as I did."

"We didn't try to force a round peg in a square hole," Schmaltz said. "We try to use individual talents as much as we can." He admits that managing people is a part of his job that takes up increasing amounts of time as the company grows.

"I can't be out selling valves and cylinders; I'd like to. I have to manage people," he said. "The big breakthrough was when I could have people I have trained do the training. That's a major change... That really allows us to grow."

"I give all our employees a lot of authority and respect. I try to remember what it was made me work 60-80 hours a week. We have to work as a team."

Remembering his first building, which was across

According to the Detroit News, which sponsored the Private 100 list, the companies contributed almost $1.4 billion to Michigan's economy last year, four times what they produced in 1989 and 60 percent better than revenues produced by last year's Private 100. They also created around 7,000 jobs last year.

the street from the current building, as "a real dump," he said, "They (employees) started out without benefits, with low wages and no assurance I was going to be around in six months."

Nevertheless they stuck around. Now the company has an attractive site, a comfortable, carpeted meeting room where employees celebrate milestones, both personal and professional, and a the biggest demand for their products ever in what Schmaltz said will be a record-breaking month.

"They really had the same spirit I had," he said. "They were willing to take risks and do a job. Now they are an integral part of the company."

Archaeologists dig outhouses--literally

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

The call came in from Jim Bickford of North Main Street.

"There are some people digging in my backyard," he began. Archaeologists, he said. From Rochester.

And that's just exactly what Tony Panepucci and his girlfriend, Brenda Spencer are. A meat cutter and a baker by trade, they spend their free time digging into backyards in old neighborhoods. Specifically, they dig into former outhouses.

Panepucci's business card calls him a "privy historian" and "accomplished outhouse excavator." It seems a little weird at first, but once he gets to explaining, it all makes sense.

Panepucci calls himself a "serious blown glass collector" and that's what he's searching for on his digs. He looks at old plat maps, then drives into a town and looks for the oldest houses, judging them by their architectural style. Then he knocks on doors.

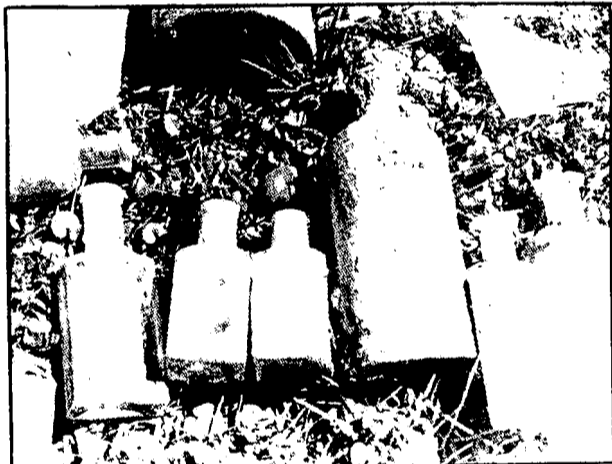

"We just came to Clarkston today and this is the first house we've been at," he said last week during a break from digging in Bickford's yard.

He's already dug extensively in Romeo and Rochester. His findings have been put on display and he's given talks to local historical societies. He has the clippings to prove it.

He's hoping to find pre-1850s glass, but usually finds bottles, inkwells and china dating from the 1880s and onward. In Bickford's yard, he found two identical drug-store bottles, one from G. Bower and Son, one from Urgh and Smith, both from Clarkston. He said they are a very common bottle, with his collection numbering over 300 from different drug stores.

"By the name on the bottle you can pretty much date the hole," he said. "And they changed the glass." Most of it isn't valuable, but the property owner gets half, if interested.

Why outhouses? "It's where they threw all kinds of stuff," he said. The wealthier the family, the better the stuff he'll find. He especially collects ink wells and cologne bottles, "but I collect everything," he admitted. "I'm always looking for a place to display and always looking for a place to dig."

Panepucci got his start digging at a relative's house. But it's not every girlfriend who will go along with such a hobby. Spencer gets right in and digs, complaining only in jest when a boot gets full of dirt.

"We've been together for six years," Panepucci said. "She's my girl. She'll crawl right in there with me. She's got her own little collection. She really goes for little doll heads."

"It's backbreaking but it's really rewarding," Spencer said, showing off two pieces of doll heads she found in Bickford's yard. "It's an incredible amount of fun, especially when you're in a real old hole, pulling out pieces of history. You can tell a lot about people who lived in the house."

Spencer's collection is evolving into a new hobby, scents and aromatherapy. The bottles she digs up can be tumbled and cleaned and made to look new. Some day they may be filled with custom-made scents.

Panepucci hopes to make lamps out of the broken shards of glass he finds. Nothing gets thrown away.

"It's like treasure hunting," Spencer said. "I suppose while I'm young and I can do this I'll do it. Then I'll start knitting. Because it's really back-breaking work. All you want to do is take a shower and fall into bed."

Coveted Clarkston land remains available

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

In a split decision, the Independence Township Board decided not to take a piece of land off the market for the Independence Land Conservancy.

The Conservancy is in the process of applying for a grant from the state to purchase property on the corner of Waldon Road and Main Street in Clarkston. They asked the board to take the land off the market for six months until they received an answer concerning the grant application. They also asked that the board be held to the assessment of the property done by the Department of Natural Resources as part of the grant.

"We will certainly evaluate and be open to that amount (assessed by the DNR), but we're going to have an idea about what we want for the property," said Supervisor Dale Stuart.

Trustee Mel Vaara suggested they take the property off the market until the DNR makes an assessment.

Other offers have already been made to the township for the property. According to Fire Chief Gar Wilson there has been one written offer on the land and a second potential purchaser was at the meeting to voice his desire for the property.

"I'm totally in support of the Land Conservancy," said Trustee Jeffrey McGee. "In the same token, I think our responsibility is to maximize the profit of that land and generate those funds for the fire fund and to be used in our new fire facility."

The land had been in the running for the new township fire station.

Treasurer John Lutz agreed with McGee. "I'd hate to take it off the market. I'd hate to discourage potential purchasers and then go another 40 years with the property of no use to us," he said.

Vaara made the motion to take the land off the market until it was assessed by the Department of Natural Resources. Clerk Joan McCrary and Trustee Daniel Travis voted with Vaara's motion.

"I think if there's a way we can support the Land Conservancy, we should do it," said Travis.

Trustee Bruce Mercado, Stuart, McGee and Lutz voted against the motion to take the land off the market. There was not another motion.

The Conservancy acquires pieces of land and keeps them in their natural state. In the past 18 years they have come to own 200 acres.

In Other Action:

● Supervisor Dale Stuart announced that Holcomb and Clintonville roads will be graded, graveled and chlorided this summer by the county.

"They came up with some extra money somewhere and decided, out of the goodness of their hearts, to give us added road gravel," he said.

● The board unanimously voted to give Common Ground $350 this year. Common Ground is a multi-service agency which provides crisis intervention through counseling, a legal clinic and referrals for people in need. The township usually gives $500 to the organization, but has cut charitable giving this year.

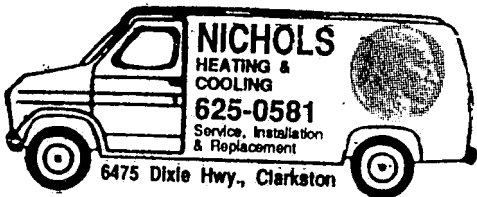

● A 19.07 acre parcel on the west side of Sashabaw Road, north of Maybee Road was rezoned from multiple family to office service in a unanimous vote.

In Focus

by Annette Kingsbury

Choosing up sides

The fur has really been flying since last week's passage of a bill changing the way schools and teachers will bargain.

Taking advantage of a Republican majority in the house and even dragging state senator Dave Honigman from his sick bed, the bill raced through both houses in Lansing. It will make teacher strikes punishable by mandatory fines, prevent teachers from bargaining for what insurance carrier they want, and allow school boards to implement an offer that was not approved by the union, among other things.

The FAX lines were hot all weekend as both sides in the decidedly partisan battle attempted to get their side of the story out.

The Michigan Education Association, the target of the legislation, called Engler a Hitler and protested with posters bearing swastikas. They sent out a FAX claiming Engler passed up a campaign stop out of fear of protesting teachers.

Not so, cried the Engler campaign team. They say he kept to his schedule, and sent along photocopies of the MEA protesters displaying their Nazi references. Engler's people called the references to the Holocaust "repulsive." The MEA countered that the slogans were "symbolic of how deeply our members feel."

Well!

How you feel about this may depend on your political affiliation, your feelings on unions, your children's experiences in school and your feelings about taxes in general.

But I have a little trouble understanding how teachers went from being role models to goats virtually overnight.

Maybe it's because I feel I benefited tremendously from a good public school education. Coming from a large family, I know my parents' property taxes probably didn't pay for all our schooling. Someone else, either a senior citizen or someone without kids, helped pay our way.

Today that's still true. I don't have kids myself, but I still have a stake in our country's future. The education of younger generations is crucial to that future.

So I take with a grain of salt the governor's efforts to make someone the bad guy because property taxes had gotten out of control.

A quote in last week's Detroit Free Press summed it up nicely. It was from a teacher who noted that when she was a young teacher making $8,000 she was called dedicated. Now that she has years of experience, two masters degrees and makes $45,000 (or whatever) she's called greedy.

We can't have it both ways. Either we want the best possible professional teachers for our children or

Dance out of control

Guns, drugs and violence. It isn't just life in Detroit any more.

Any parent who allowed their child to attend the dance Friday night at Clarkston High School, allowed their child to be exposed to the same things. And this was a dance for 7- to 14-year-olds.

What are we doing?

No more!!!

If organizers of the dance can't control things, then these dances should be discontinued and the organization re-evaluated.

As parents we need to wake up to what's happening with our kids. Love them. Get involved with them. Listen to them. They are crying out to us.

For my children's sake
Please withhold my name

Appreciates service

I would like to thank Tony Moellig and the staff at the Kroger pharmacy.

When I needed a prescription that was not available locally, they began calling to locate it. Not only did he find the prescription, he drove to pick it up and arranged for the supplier to ship any future orders to him.

Because my own business is service oriented, I am very sensitive to the level of service I receive from others. Theirs was terrific!

Thanks again.

Sincerely,
Denise Felker

Appreciate teachers

To the Editor:

Many educational leaders suggest that the best way to improve education in this country is to give teachers the status, support and recognition they genuinely deserve. The Clarkston Middle School PTA agrees.

We are joining the National PTA to focus attention on the outstanding work of our public school teachers. Their dedication and expertise is the backbone of our nation's educational system. Without the hard work of teachers, the scientists, artists and political and community leaders in this country it would not be among the best in the world.

The Clarkston Middle School PTA is planning special activities during Teacher Appreciation Week, May 2-6. We encourage everyone to join us by finding a personal way to recognize those teachers that have made a difference in your child's life. Too often we don't take the time to thank someone for a job well done.

Sincerely,
Members of the PTA Board

Jim's Jottings

Notes to Arizona

By Jim Sherman

Hazel and I spend the first two weeks of April in Arizona every year. 1994 was no exception. I'm warning you now this column will be idle, useless notes on those days.

First, the weather. If weather doesn't lead most news reports, it certainly comes close. This April the temperature in Arizona rarely touched the 80s, except enroute. It went from the high 70s to the high 90s quickly.

99 degrees sounds hot and it is. Forget the 'but it's a dry heat.' Seems like everyone carries bottled water to stave off dehydration.

Home building is booming in every direction around Phoenix-Scottsdale. Condominium development seems very slow. Land developers must believe everyone has $150,000 for a new home.

The Buffalo Chip Saloon in Cave Creek boasts in their sign, "Genuine Authentic Western Saloon." Tied to the hitching post out back is a speed boat. Sorta spoils the scene, don't it?

Golfers, if you're ever out there get a tee time at The Legend in Glendale. It's an Arnold Palmer design. It's manicured, scenic, trapped, ponded and a real pleasure to play. Just don't judge the course by the reception. The bag boys ignore you and the pro shop gal was unfriendly to the point of rudeness.

The heat brought cactus blossoms out a little early. The prickly pear and hedgehog in their yellow and pink certainly got our attention. So did the yellow and orange wild flowers along the roadsides and on the hillsides.

We were told a saguaro cactus can go 7 years without water. They get moisture out of the air. That's what we were told.

In April of 1993 we saw almost no rabbits or gambol quail, the state bird. Other birds were also scarce. This year rabbits were everywhere, quails were numerous and we saw four coyotes.

Hazel boils a half cup of sugar in a cup of water for our hummingbird feeder. They flock to it, especially at sundown. They're hypnotic. They have such a wide variety of florescent colors around the head and neck . . . copper, red, green. It's hard to stop clicking my camera at them.

Like our own state, Arizona is having to cut state spending and finding it difficult to keep highway building and improvements up to need. East of Scottsdale and northwest of Phoenix several bridges have been built with no roads leading to them.

Also like Michigan, unfortunately, Arizona has many murders, gang problems, car jackings, conflict of interest charges in government and stadium building proposals.

A big difference between Phoenix and Detroit is their approach to pro football this season. Billboards, bus stop benches and newspapers shout, "Get ready for Buddy ball." Buddy Ryan is The Phoenix Cardinals' head coach. No one is shouting "Get ready for Wayne ball," in Detroit.

A look back

15 Years Ago (1979)

Firefighters received $1,380 in back wages from a raise the Independence Township Board made retro-active.

A blinking red and amber light was approved for M-15 and Waldon Road.

Judy Norton, the executive secretary for the township for nine years, retired and moved to Tennessee to run a family-owned grocery store.

25 Years Ago (1969)

Independence Township Board approved the leasing of the township annex to Oakland County District Court for $4,840 a year.

The Davisburg Rotary Club and Jaycees planned a clean-up in the area.

The Sashabaw United Presbyterian Church youth group sponsored a community smorgasbord to help support a 10-year-old Korean orphan.

50 Years Ago (1944)

Clarkston set up Waste Paper Day when citizens can turn in paper for the war effort. Paper was the greatest war material shortage. It was used for ammunition casings, helmet linings, bomb bands and food and plasma containers.

George Perry of Clarkston took out an ad looking for old, live horses for his fox farm.

Second Lieutenant William Cobb of Clarkston was commission at Blackland Air Force Base in Waco, Texas.

60 Years Ago (1934)

Bettie Jane Morgan, 10, was hit by a car and killed. She was on her way to a neighbor's home on Main Street when she was struck and dragged 150 feet.

Senior chemistry students attempted a new experiment in laboratory class, making a loud noise and depositing several compounds on the ceiling.

The new motto for the Secret Alliance Against School Girls (a tongue-in-cheek group of boys at Clarkston High School) was "Girls may come and girls may go, but we go on forever." A sophomore was found in violation of the club's rules when he was spotted talking to a group of girls.

COLUMN

we want a part-time staff who must do something else to support their families.

On the other hand, one wonders if teachers are being well-served by a union which takes such an adversarial stance and so freely spends their money lobbying in Lansing.

Departing Clarkston school board trustee Joe Helpem said recently that teachers will never be considered "professionals," like doctors and lawyers, as long as they continue to be represented by a union. He may be right.

Perhaps there's a compromise somewhere in the middle. Perhaps the union can behave more professionally, and so can the governor. Meanwhile, our legislature can work to solve our fiscal problems, instead of just looking for scapegoats.

Not!

P.S.: If you haven't see "The Paper" I recommend the movie highly.

A bunch of us reporters from Sherman Publications saw the flick together last week, and we all loved it. Though we operate on a much smaller scale, the issues raised were all relevant to our daily work.

And it was mighty entertaining. Just the fight scene between Glenn Close and Michael Keaton and Keaton yelling "Stop the presses" was worth the price of admission.

Four stars.

Don't Rush Me

By Don Rush

The Nerd Squad revisited

We pulled out of our little Independence Township home and onto I-75 about 1 p.m. Our destination, Virginia, for the wedding of friends.

Tying the knot was longtime chum Mark Reene and Virginia native Kathy Taves. At the rehearsal dinner I got to get Mark aside from family, old and new.

"We've come a long way, baby," I commented.

Pretty much in a state of shock Mark replied, "Yeah." And smiled.

Mark lived about a half mile behind my house and a little to the east. Separating our two homes was a pine tree grove and a big open field.

Sometimes I had the misfortune of heading back home from Mark's after dark. (This usually took place whenever we played ping pong too long in his basement.)

I hated this trek home. I had a great imagination back then and that field and pine tree grove were not lighted. No matter how I may train nowadays, I could never recapture the speed my body moved when it moved across the ground between the Reene and Rush households.

I was the guy who had to wear the husky jeans, Mark was all legs and arms -- he still is, and unfortunately, I still match my childhood description.

Mark was the intellectual of our group. The head nerd, you might say. I was the ungroomed, comedic nerd. (Sorry to label you a nerd Mark, but let's face it, we were.)

We had a bowling team throughout high school. Me, Mark, Scott Ferguson and Ed McInnis.

We were such nerds, as a matter of fact, that prior to our first game we came up with our team name, then found a theme song.

We named our team the Bronx Bombers. Our theme song was the theme from the movie, "The Magnificent Seven." It sounded rugged, the way we pictured ourselves.

We taped the song, then played it to make our entrance onto our alley.

You should have seen the photo and story about us that then Clarkston News sports writer Al Zawaki did.

I can sum it up real easy for you in two words. Geek city.

I'm sure we didn't think we were geeks or nerds. We actually thought we were pretty cool. At least our hair was past our ears.

I remember in Mr. Swarthout's 9th grade English class we had to write a limerick. Mark was having a little problem, so I "helped" him.

We came up with something that went like this:

*There once was a girl named Farah
Who really had the hair-a.
Why, she's so good looking
She doesn't even use mascara.*

Mr. Swarthout wasn't enthralled with Farah Fawcett like his pubescent pupils. Needless to say Mark's grade wasn't flattering. I don't think he let me help him again.

Mark got over it, went to law school and is now a prosecuting attorney in Tuscola County. Heck, he even got married like the rest of us nerds.

Congratulations to Mark, his folks Don and Bonnie, Kathy and her mom, Alice.

If it Fitz

By Jim Fitzgerald

Ignorance sounds like bliss, but not always

In church, in a whisper, I told Tricia it was nice that, according to the program, the choir was scheduled to sing about selling basketball shoes.

Tricia, 8, supplied the first part of the reaction I was angling for: "Grandpaaaa, don't be silly."

So I showed her printed proof that the anthem that Sunday was "Roll, Jordan, Roll."

And Tricia's further response made the lousy joke eminently worthwhile. She didn't say a word. She gave me what our family has come to call the look. It is a slight twisting of the nose and mouth, accompanied by a deadly blank stare that says the recipient is truly the most disgustingly ignorant person on Earth.

Today's subject is ignorance, which, as you may have heard, is bliss, which is happiness. My ignorance isn't always feigned, in quest of the bliss so often available from children. Sometimes it is sincere, and not so blissful.

For instance, stick with the church program. One Sunday I read in it that an old acquaintance had "entered the Church Triumphant." I told my wife that was nice, figuring he'd attained some laity honor greater than elder or deacon.

"That means he died," my wife said.

Moving right along, there was a recent Friday night of music in Detroit. It began with Kris Lynn singing and playing at the Rhinoceros piano bar, and ended with chanteuse Kate Patterson and pianist Johnny Allen at the top of the Whitney. They were in fine form, and, as a lifelong connoisseur of pop/jazz saloon-type entertainment, I knew without question that I was hearing the best. Knowledge was bliss.

But in between saloons, I was at Orchestra Hall for a concert of opera music performed by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Neeme Jarvi, and the huge Choral Union of the University Musical Society.

I came late in life to classical music, 18 years ago when we moved to Detroit and my wife persuaded me it was possible to enjoy musical talent without having one foot on a bar rail.

All I know is I usually like symphony concerts, but sometimes not so much, and I'm too ignorant to know exactly why. And too lazy to study the question.

So I approached that Friday's concert warily. I know absolutely nothing about opera music, and the classical critics for both Detroit newspapers had written that the DSO performance was OK, but the Choral Union was pretty awful.

I felt bad, because a couple of choral members, from the Ann Arbor area, have told me how hard they practice for the honor of performing under the direction of such a splendid, internationally respected conductor as Jarvi. I was prepared to keep a stiff upper lip for the singers, and politely applaud no matter how sour they might be.

Instead, I whooped and jumped and clapped from the shoulders, just like when the Tigers won the World Series in 1984. I thought the singers were totally grand. So did most everyone else in the crowded hall. Unlike the professional, experienced reviewers, we didn't know enough to spot the errors beneath the wonderful sound.

Ignorance was bliss.

Finally, it should be noted that I felt a little guilty about that wonderful night of music. Because that was the night of the day the world learned U.S. warplanes had accidentally killed 26 people in Iraq. Our friendly fire allowed them to enter the Church Triumphant.

Talk about ignorance not always being bliss.

No way can I understand how it can be so important to be so prepared to kill the right people that it must be accepted -- expected! -- that once in a while we'll kill the wrong people.

Whoops!

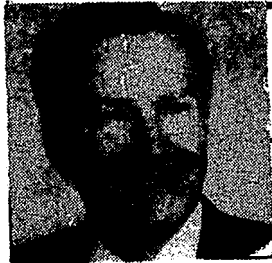

Young lives are ended and families shattered because we can't learn there are no people that it is right to kill. Why can't we learn that?

In my unblissful, pacific ignorance, I don't know what to do about it. Sit back and enjoy the music blissfully while I can, I guess.

Hug Tricia.

Clarkston school superintendent Gary Haner

Developmentally Appropriate Practices (DAP) is concluding its first year of activation in our kindergarten program. Next year it will flow into first grade, and thereafter will follow all K-2 elementary students through the end of second grade. DAP replaces our old program which offered both developmental kindergarten and regular kindergarten. The switch has demanded months of preparation on the part of our kindergarten and first-grade teachers.

DAP is different because the ability of each student governs the teacher's decisions about how she (or he) will teach that child. This calls for a dynamic, constantly changing approach to each child, not a static curriculum that forces every student into the same mold. As you might imagine, the individual approach requires incredible flexibility from the teacher and, thus, classroom aides are a necessity.

David Reschke, assistant superintendent-curriculum and staff development, commented that "DAP stretches the string of learning so all kids are at the right spot at the right time . . . it's a stretched kind of curriculum, not a confining one, and that's why it's so hard to do. This approach accepts the fact that kids learn at different ages and none of them are on the same page at the same time."

Years of research and study of child development support the DAP approach. Kids who emerge from a K-2 DAP program have better self-concepts, better social adjustment and healthier attitudes toward school. As kids move through upper elementary, gaps in development narrow for most of them.

DAP theories further the knowledge that children learn best by doing. Instead of relying on only pencil and paper activities, we bring "hands-on" learning into our programs. For example, instead of filling in the blanks on a math workbook or ditto sheet, youngsters manipulate building blocks to construct, add, subtract, make patterns, and learn math concepts.

Learning centers enliven the classroom. For example, a writing learning center might have desk, chair, stamps, envelopes, a variety of papers and bookmaking supplies. This "active" learning center involves the child totally.

Our kindergarten teachers have been positive in their comments about the DAP approach as the initial year draws to a close. Sharon Thomas (Bailey Lake) says what we are doing is right for the children. She feels we accept the children more as individuals and are meeting the challenge of their separate needs.

Geri Allison and Mary Ann Dedrick (Clarkston Elementary) also support the changes they have made to make their classrooms more developmentally appropriate. They both feel that the best interests of the child are being served using this activity-based package.

Comments DAP Coordinator Cindy Omans, "As our teachers continue to grow and learn, our curriculum and its implementation improves for all the children of Clarkston."

Russia wants pen pals

One hundred thousand Americans are being sought who would like to be pen pals with someone from the former Soviet Union.

The organization SAPE, formerly the Soviet American Penfriend Exchange, is spearheading the effort. They are looking for people between the ages of 10 and 40 to be linked with a Russian on the basis of age, gender and common language.

According to SAPE, the majority of young Russians remain avid fans of American culture, especially music, TV and film. In the Baltic nations, residents are often able to pick up TV broadcasts from Scandinavia of popular American programs, and MTV is broadcast in Russia.

Individuals, classes, scout troops or religious youth groups who would like to participate in this program should send a self-addressed stamped envelope to SAPE—Dept. N, 1400 Midvale Ave., #408, Los Angeles, Ca. 90024-5498.

Senioritis

Spring is here! Softball, track and baseball are begging and so is slacking off at school.

Spring has so much going on. Graduation and summer vacation are near. How can they expect us not to slack off?

Teachers preach to us all the time that we've been screwing around this marking period. Can you blame us? Our life is beginning in a month and they expect us to study for tests, pay attention and even come to class.

I give the teachers a lot of credit for hanging in there with us without losing it. It can be so stressful trying to teach teenagers who do not want to be there or even listen.

It's really difficult to do the best you can in the classroom with tons of things going on outside. All of our attitudes are, "Who cares? We're gone in a month. What does it matter?" I try to study for a test and do homework. But I'm so distracted by the gorgeous weather and the thought of prom and graduation and no more high school.

During the springtime not only do your grades slip but so does your attendance. Who wants to be in school when it's 70 degrees out and the sun is shining? But I guess that happens to everybody, not just students.

Whether you're a senior or not you can't wait till summer vacation. We all have senioritis and the only cure for this is a diploma available on June 8.

Renee Kolenda is a senior at Clarkston High School.

If Friday's fashion show at the Oakland Technical Center Northwest is any indication, prom fashions this fall will be glitzy and modern for boys and girls alike.

Students in the marketing program at OTCNW put on their annual fashion show Friday in the school's Northwest Inn. Guests were served lunch by students while other students modeled the latest fashions.

Dark colors and a little razzle-dazzle, including hair pieces and other floral arrangements made by some OTCNW students, were the order of the day. Short skirts and plunging backs were featured in the dresses. In tuxedos, a contrasting white collar stood out as a truly different look. Marketing teacher Maria Foster introduced the program. # Problem solvers tackle space

A team from Clarkston High School finished sixth in last weekend's Michigan Future Problem Solving State Bowl at the University of Michigan.

The team of Anthony Knakal, John Klender, Jennifer Wrobel, Nick McPherson and Andy Boissonneau, all freshmen coached by CHS math teacher Marilyn Kettler, finished sixth out of 63 teams in the intermediate division (grades 7-9).

"They did quite well," Kettler said. "They made the semi-final round."

To make the state finals, the CHS team had to finish in the top 30 percent of teams from around the state. More than 14,000 students participated this year at the local level.

During the school year, teams worked on problems in the topics of robotics, Antarctica and the extinction of animals.

"While teams know the general topic of this year's bowl—space law—they will not know the specific nature of the problem they will attempt to solve until the bowl begins," Kettler said last week. "They've been doing research on space."

During the two-day state finals, students were given the scenario, then time to write a presentation on Saturday for presentation in skit form on Sunday. They had to define 20 problems associated with the scenario, then define the main problem and come up with the best solution out of a list of 20.

The scenario they were presented with was this: A colony has been established on the moon with people from a number of different countries on Earth. Laws governing the colony are made on Earth. It's too costly to ship personal possessions to the colony, so people on the moon are growing more and more discontented.

Kettler said her team came up with the idea of making the moon colony a corporation, with inhabitants as stockholders. They could use their stock to either act in a governmental position, with some authority, or to bring possessions back from Earth.

"The state bowl is the culmination of a year-long program where students are taught to creatively seek, attack, and solve problems related to projections into the future," Kettler said. The work is all extra-curricular, and all the team members intend to come back next year, when as sophomores they'll compete in the senior division (grades 10-12).

Transfer sought for Clarkston Cafe's liquor license

The council received a resolution from the state's Liquor Control Commission, asking for an approval for a liquor license transfer from the Cafe to the Beefcarver.

But council members tabled passing the resolution after some council members questioned the city's responsibilities.

"The fire department should check all walls and the building inspector should check for any code violations before we do anything," Steve Secatch, council member, said.

Secatch said he felt it was the job of the city to request that information before the city could go ahead and approve the transfer.

However, Mayor Sharron Catalo said that she believed the responsibility lies with the liquor control commission.

"Isn't that what the control in liquor control commission means?" she said after the meeting. "I feel there was no reason not to expedite this matter and not have it sitting around for another two weeks of waiting."

Officials from the LCC's licensing and enforcement division said their office asks local law enforcement officials to complete a background check on the potential owners of the license.

If the police warrant an investigation of the local building and fire codes, then an investigation would take place, said Sharon Martin, secretary to the director of licensing and enforcement.

No such violations were found by Chief of Police Robert DeVore, nor did he find other problems in the background check of the potential owners, Randy Lincoln and Dennis Brinker. He has filed his report with the liquor commission.

Along with the police report, the liquor commission will need a city resolution. In addition, their investigator's report will have to be completed before the commission will review the transfer request, Martin said.

According to Lincoln, the investigators completed their report last week.

Lincoln said he expects the delay imposed by the city to be "only a little set back, but not a terrible one."

Once the resolution is turned in, along with the investigator's and police report, Lincoln said he expects everything to go smoothly.

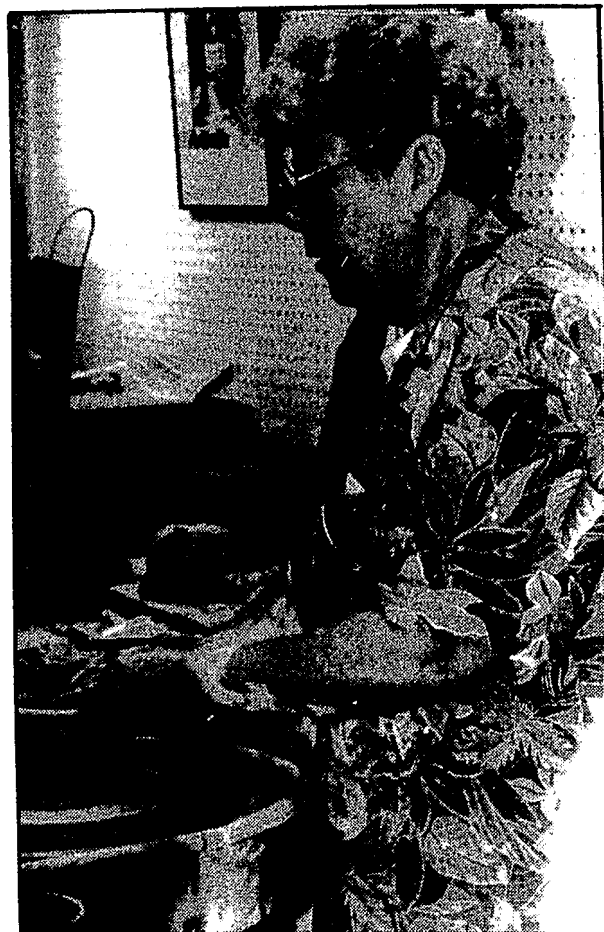

But, as Lee McNew said, "Nothing is a done deal. I'm not counting on it. We will continue to run the restaurant as if we were going to be here forever."

Take the 'A' train

Artrain, that is

Artrain rolled into Waterford last week and some Clarkston schoolchildren got to see the museum on rails. The topic was transportation and the art included the traditional, like sketches and oils, and the not-so-traditional, such as sculpture from car parts and a street sign. Here, ceramist Jane Matthews works in the last car showing students how clay is molded.

Lady Wolves chew up opponents

Varsity softball team wins five games of seven

BY DEBORAH DZIEWIT
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Up until Monday, the Clarkston Wolves softball team racked up victory after victory no matter who the opponent.

But they collided with Kettering and lost 12-6.

"We just did not have enough in us after the long weekend. We made too many errors," Coach Al Land said.

In a typical GOAL game, teams who score six runs usually win, but not this time.

By the fifth inning, the Wolves scored to bring the score to 7-5. With two innings to go, it looked as if the team had a chance to overcome the deficit and win.

With an overthrow in the sixth, the door opened and Kettering scored five more runs.

The Wolves' bats sung with Stephanie Girous hitting two triples and Amanda Jenkinson ripping a homer driving in two runs.

"It tore the cover off the ball," Land said.

Crystal Lemke hit a triple and Kiley Maitrott hit a double.

"Our runs were legitimate," he said. "We gave the game to them."

Land attributes the big victory at Saturday's tournament for the loss.

"There was a let down for the girls. I talked to them before the game and said we cannot let down," he said.

The weekend games gave the ladies a co-champion title to their list of recent accomplishments after they competed in the state's largest softball tournament in Oakland County.

At the end of the two-day tourney held in Rochester Hills with over 32 teams competing, the Wolves won four game and shared championship honors with top-rated Brandon.

Saturday morning found the Wolves playing Warren Woods — they shut the team down and won 14-0.

"We did everything correctly," Land said.

Part of the team's success he attributes to the arm of Erin Patterson.

"She pitched excellently," he said. "I've never seen her play better."

Patterson did not pitch with her usual first inning jitters.

"She had no problems. She has a lot more confidence and she kept her walks down."

The senior pitcher held Warren Woods hitless.

In almost a repeat of the first game, the Wolves shut out Goodrich in the second game 9-0. Again, Patterson's relentless pitching was a key.

Offensively, the team could do no wrong either, with the Wolves scoring 23 runs in two games.

Against Flint Kersley, the number-two rated team in the state, the Wolves again remained unbeaten.

"We really wanted to win our first two in order to set us up to play a team like Kersley to see where we are fit," Land said.

He wasn't disappointed when the Wolves beat Kersley 4-2.

Patterson again hurled her fast balls and changeups and did not give up the two Kersley runs until late in the fifth inning.

By the end of the day's play, the girls were on top

Pitching gives Wolves edge, lose by errors

BY DEBORAH DZIEWIT

The Wolves' hurlers are helping the team turn the tables on their opponents.

In the past week, Clarkston's varsity baseball team has racked up five wins out of seven games played.

"We're playing very good so far," Coach Roy Warner said. "I think it's due to the excellent pitching . . . actually it's on the verge of phenomenal, especially so early in the season."

However, against Kettering Monday night, nothing worked for the Wolves as they lost 9-1.

"We made too many mistakes," Warner said of his players' performance.

Varsity kickers tie 1, lose 1

Carrie Millen scored the only Clarkston goal against Mott Monday night.

"It was an even game but we lost," Coach Dan Fitzgerald said of the 4-1 loss.

The Wolves kicked nine shots at goal while Mott kicked 10.

It boiled down to who scored.

"We pushed the team forward to try to score, but we ended up giving up three goals," he said.

Goalie Michelle Schroeder did not play in Monday's game. She broke two fingers in the game against Lake Orion. Karen Kirk moved up from the JV team to play the position.

In the April 20 match against Lake Orion, the Wolves came up with a tie, 1-1.

Millen again scored the only goal. Lake Orion had 12 shots on goal and Clarkston had 10.

"We're just not scoring goals," Fitzgerald said. The Wolves record now stands at 1-4-1.

Wolves' racquets smash Panthers

The Clarkston Wolves' varsity tennis team got a big boost in confidence when each of the players defeated Lapeer West in a 7-0 match April 21.

Pat Wall allowed no mercy and defeated Mason Camburn 6-0, 6-0.

Freshman Mike Aulgur defeated Lapeer's number-three player Brian Brynes 6-4, 6-1.

Mike Kopec played Mike Millikan and won in straight sets, 6-1, 6-3.

Paul Wolven, playing his second game in a week, had to play catch up and did, defeating Matt Hotchkiss 1-6, 6-4, 6-1.

"It was an outstanding match," Coach Dick Swartout said. "He's playing great and his back is not troubling him right now. It's good to have him back."

While Swartout says his doubles partners are not set in stone, one combination might be coming together. Kyle Stout and Kevin Kopec worked together and defeated John Lane and Dan Miller 6-1, 4-6, 7-6.

Zac Sanger and Rob Goeckel defeated Jeff Hdanna and Yuho Mummela in straight sets, 6-3, 6-0.

Having to break a tie in the first set, Elliot

Romig and Chas Claus defeated Jason Kurzer and Geoff Kassarian 7-5, 6-3.

Varsity's victories don't come easy

Against Pontiac Northern April 21, the Wolves struggled in the first game of the home double header.

Sophomore Chuck Nolen pitched 5 2/3 innings. He hurled 10 strikeouts and no earned runs. Jeff Mull came in for relief and threw two strikeouts.

Bundridge was two for three in the game. Second baseman Blue drove in the winning run with his single in the bottom of the seventh.

The bats swung with a little more force in the second game with Clarkston winning 13-3. Chris Barnett's pitching kept the Pontiac team to three runs, of which two were earned.

Covert hit a triple and was two for two. Bundridge kept his hitting attack going during two times at the plate, earning the senior two singles. Barnett, who also plays behind home plate, hit two for four.

Despite the winning numbers, the game wasn't easy for the Wolves.

"It was a struggle for three innings," Warner said. "We were winning ugly and it was hard to get the offense going and getting momentum."

Plan your summer vacations

Tim McCormick's 10th annual summer basketball camp will again be back for Clarkston's third-through eighth-graders.

The camp will run July 18 through July 22. Brochures will be sent home from all the elementary and middle schools in early May.

Family man to play OCC golf

BY DEBORAH DZIEWIT
Clarkston News Staff Writer

No longer does it seem unusual to see older students walking the college campus today.

However, it could be considered unusual when one of those students tries out for a college sports team and makes the team.

John Briceland, of Independence Township, fits the picture to a "tee."

He's finishing up a two-year degree in robotics at Oakland Community College in Auburn Hills and he made the cut on the OCC men's golf team.

Up until two years ago, the 42-year-old was a long way from entering college, let alone becoming a member of the golf team.

The General Motors machine repair man was working a lot of overtime — totaling up to 50 to 60 hours a week — but then he heard the word lay-off filter through his plant.

The 1970 Garden City graduate was offered the chance to go to college instead of a lay-off through a program offered by the automaker.

Before school began, he participated in a volunteer service program arranged by GM and UAW's Job Banks — something he was happy to do.

"I'd rather be doing something, rather than being idle," Briceland said. "I worked at the senior citizen center at Clintonville. I handled the sports programs — the co-ed softball league, and I was the liaison with the men's golf league."

He also helped with junior golf league and other sports. He helped house-bound seniors by going out in the Meals on Wheels trucks.

But the idea to go to school after all these years was a treat for Briceland.

"When I was younger, going to college wasn't all that important. Making money and establishing myself was important."

"In the seventies, jobs were a dime a dozen and places were always hiring. And working on an assembly line, I was making more than teachers. So college seemed not all that important," Briceland said.

Now the all A-student sees college as a way to enhance his life.

"I see this as my chance to further my world. And my going to school sets a good example for my boys. They see that it's a natural step after high school . . . it's not if they go, but where will they go will be the question."

The father of three boys, Ryan, Adam and David, and husband to Kathie, Briceland said he has always had an interest in sports but he never dreamed that he would be playing on a college team.

"On the first day of class the teacher mentioned something about golf but I didn't hear all of what he said. Then a couple of weeks later he brought it up again," he said.

Briceland talked to the teacher after class and decided there was no harm in trying out. He ended up making the team in the fall of 1992.

"I played on a league but I wasn't a golfer. I started playing when I was 29," he said.

Golf became his sport after he tired of sitting on the bench during softball games.

"I played on a team and found that I was making four swings a game. With all the time I spent in practice, at games, four swings in a game isn't much. As our team got better, I wasn't getting the play time," he said.

He joined the golf league after a friend suggested that he'd get more play time if he played golf.

But Briceland said he wouldn't be playing if his grades weren't up to his high standards — and they are. Since he began school, he has carried above a 3.9 grade point average.

And like his grade point average, Briceland would like to see his golf average improve.

At a recent OCC tournament in Three Rivers, Briceland led his team with an 87 and 85, during the two days of competition.

"I would like my average to be in the mid-80s," said Briceland, who carries an 8 handicap and a 91.3 average.

He practices at the Pontiac Country Club but he also swings his clubs at home. He built a 170-yard driving range in his yard where he practices with his iron and his chip shots.

"I try to swing and hit balls every day," he said. "In the winter I go to the Willow Creek dome to practice."

His plans for the future include more schooling. He intends to transfer to a four-year university and major in business.

But he could be called back to work anytime which would be ok with him.

"I would be back at GM working with robotics, but now I really know robotics," he said. "I was taking care of them, but now I really know how they work."

Coaching could also be in the future for the golfer.

"I think I've been a positive role model for my teammates. And I've enjoyed their company — so much so that I want to go into coaching," Briceland said.

Freshman girls softball team lose four in a row

In a slug fest, the Clarkston freshman girls softball team lost to Oxford 31-22 in the final inning April 13.

Tracy Harmon pitched and hit three singles and one triple. Stephanie Vogler was five for five and stole five bases. Heather Unsworth was good for three singles and one double. Becky Lynady hit two singles and one double. Jennifer Crawford came in with two singles and a triple.

Against Lapeer East April 19 in a double header, the Wolves lost 14-3, 10-8. Harmon pitched the first game and Allison Prudhomme and Harmon pitched the second. Vogler hit two singles in the second game.

In the April 13 game against Rochester, the Wolves lost 19-8. Prudhomme pitched and hit two doubles. Harmon, who came in for relief, hit a single and a double.

Parvo means heartbreak for dogs, owners

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

The Dobrowskis know first-hand about warm weather diseases that are concerns for veterinarians.

Their puppy, who had had all its shots, contracted the parvovirus while on vacation.

"It was terrible," said Katie Dobrowski. The dog threw up blood and went into shock.

"Dr. Cornwell worked on her all day and the staff was great." But the doctor couldn't help the Dobrowski dog which later died.

Parvovirus is caught by dogs through contact with the stool of an infected dog or a contaminated environment, according to Dr. Bryan Cornwell of the Independence Animal Hospital on Sashabaw Road.

"This is an extremely strong virus," said Cornwell. "It can survive (on a surface) for three or four months.

Puppies are most susceptible to the virus. Infected animals rapidly dehydrate with severe bloody vomiting and diarrhea. In severe cases the virus causes shock and death. Fatalities occur mostly in puppies less than 12 weeks old.

"The only treatment for it is supportive care," said Cornwell.

Early fluid therapy is the most important factor in treating the infection. Intravenous fluids rehydrate and nourish the sick dog. Drugs are given to prevent secondary infections and to control the vomiting and diarrhea.

Occasionally parvovirus attacks the heart muscle of puppies and can cause sudden death. A vaccine is available for prevention of canine parvovirus infection and all dogs should be vaccinated annually according to Cornwell.

He said that a sign that your dog is sick is that it is depressed acting. "But the hallmark signs are vomiting or diarrhea or both."

The parvovirus is more prevalent in the spring and summer, according to Cornwell, and owners should be on the lookout for the symptoms.

Warm weather also brings out concern and testing for heartworms.

Heartworms are parasites that live in a dog's heart and may result in heart failure and/or serious disease of the liver and kidneys. Untreated heartworm disease is usually fatal.

According to Cornwell, the disease is passed from an infected dog to another dog by mosquitoes. The mosquito takes up immature worms in the blood of the infected dog and can transfer them to another dog up to two weeks later.

It takes at least 190 days from the time the dog is bit by the mosquito until dog becomes a new source of infection.

Cornwell recommends that dogs be tested each spring "We like to make sure they don't have it," he said.

If a dog tests negative for heart worms it is put on preventative medicine from May until December. It must be tested again from year to year.

A dog with heartworms may be tired acting, it may cough and find it hard to run as far or fast as it once did, according to Cornwell.

The treatment for heartworm includes four shots of an arsenic compound. "The treatment is tough for the dogs," said Cornwell. Some dogs can't handle it and die from the cure.

The worms die and slowly are absorbed into the dog's body. If the dog isn't confined, pieces of the worms may come off causing blood clots.

Cornwell said that Oakland County has a high heartworm rate, probably because of the large population of dogs in a small area and the amount of water.

He treated five heartworm cases last year and only lost one dog. "We can treat most of them. The whole key is to prevent this disease in the first place," said Cornwell.

Warm weather diseases aren't the only problems facing pets in the spring and summer. Cornwell reminded owners to never leave a pet in their car during the warm weather. He also said dogs shouldn't go jogging with their owners since they are susceptible to heat stroke.

in their pool and had reason to celebrate.

"It was strange — it was a turning point for us; the girls were like they had won the World Series," Land said.

Sunday's match-up pitted Clarkston against the number -three rated team ,Harper Woods Regina.

The Wolves won again 3-1.

If Mother Nature had cooperated, the Wolves would have played Brandon for the championship. Instead, the final game was called because of rain, thunder and lightning and co-championships were named.

Coach Land said he saw everyone contribute to the week-end victories.

Batters got on base. Once on, they moved — whether by stealing or running once the ball was in play.

"Once that kind of play begins, it forces the other team's defense to make errors," Land said.

The Wolves' defense proved equally as strong.

"We made nice plays. If we got into a little trouble, somebody would make the big out or make the big play ... it would get us out of trouble," he said.

Last week's wins against Pontiac Northern April 21 and Lasher April 20 kept the team rolling down the victory path.

Against Pontiac, it wasn't who hit but how many hits and how many runs.

Lemke lead the team with five hits and six RBIs. Laura Seitz slammed in six runs. Jenkinson and Giroux had four against the Pontiac team.

By the end of the double hitter, the Wolves had crossed the plate 40 times.

Patterson struck out 17 in the two games, with the first game called after five innings and the second after four.

The team's game against Lasher started the Wolves week on a positive note with a Clarkston win, 12-3.

Patterson allowed three hits and struck out 11. Anne Bruck was two for three and crossed home twice.

"Each of the games were decided in the second inning," Land said.

BASEBALL, continued from page 14

Jeff Mull pitched five innings, gave up six hits and struck out seven. Mike Turk came in and pitched the final two innings, gave up two hits and struck out three.

Mull hit three for three. Bobbie Blue drove in the only Clarkston run with his single.

Warner wouldn't say much about the game, except that the number of Clarkston errors and the type of hitting cost the team the game.

"We hit at 'em balls," Warner said. Almost every crack at the bat went into Kettering's mitts.

On Saturday's road trip to Kimball, the Wolves fared a little better with the team splitting a double header. They lost the first 9-5 despite the good pitching efforts of rookie Scott Hill who ended up with the loss.

"It wasn't his fault," said Warner of Hill, who was brought up from JV to pitch in the game. "We did not keep guys off the bases. We would get two guys on base before we could get one out."

Brad Ryerse and Blake Farah came in for relief, but that didn't stop Kimball from scoring nine runs.

"There was always pressure on the defense and we just couldn't pull out," Warner said.

Brent Bundridge was two for two and scored two runs. Sophomore Jeff Mull came up for two hits for two tries at the plate; Jamie Churchill, a junior, hit one for one. Seniors Sean Craven scored two runs and Matt Humphreys crossed the plate once.

The second game proved to be a better game for the Wolves; they defeated Kimball 6-4.

"It was a different story," Warner said. "We got our offense going. Everybody got a hit."

Of the 10 hits, Bundridge was two for three, Mull two for four. Craven hit a double for a one for three record at the plate.

Kevin Covert pitched the entire seven innings and all four Kimball runs were unearned.

Covert earns win, beat Lasher

Covert got the win for the Wolves' game against Lasher April 20. Mull was credited with the save. Neither gave up an earned run in the game which had the Wolves on the winning end, 7-2.

Covert was two for three with a triple and was the only multiple hitter for the afternoon.

Against Lakeland, a makeup game, the Wolves thrashed the team 11-1. Nine of the runs were made by the first inning and the game ended in five.

A woman trying to fix a messed up order at McDonald's was allegedly assaulted by another customer who was late for a funeral.

The incident took place April 21 at 6 p.m. at the McDonald's on Sashabaw Road.

According to the police report the 33-year-old victim was at the second window of the drive-thru trying to correct a mistake in her order when a woman from the car behind her approached her.

The victim said the woman walked to the window and asked for her food and the victim told her to wait her turn and put her arm out to stop her.

The 24-year-old woman from the second car allegedly twisted the victim's arm and scratched her hand according to the police report. The victim stated the woman grabbed her by both arms, pulled her part way out of the vehicle and slapped her. The alleged assailant then threw a drink at the woman, got in her own vehicle and left.

The woman police say attacked the customer said she had waited a long time in line and was late for a funeral. When she saw her food in the window she got out of the car to get it. She said the victim slapped her and told her wait her turn and then she "pushed" the victim. She said she grabbed her food and the victim grabbed her arm causing her to spill a shake on the victim.

The ultimate summer job

BY LEE DRYDEN
Special to The Clarkston News

While many residents who have gone away to college return during the summer months, one student spent last summer chasing his career goals at Walt Disney World.

Greg Gilreath, a 1991 graduate of Clarkston High School and a junior at Michigan State University, lived in Orlando, Fla. from early June to late August of last year working as an attraction host at a Disney animation studio.

"It was the experience of a lifetime. I would highly recommend spending a summer at Disney for any college student," Gilreath said.

Gilreath became interested in going to Disney World after hearing about a similar trip that the daughter of a friend of his mother's made. He applied, was interviewed by a Disney official, and was accepted just three weeks later. "I was ecstatic," he said.

While Gilreath was one of 2,000 summer college employees at Disney World, he was one of only six working in animation. As an attraction host, Gilreath was responsible for giving tours of an animation studio.

"I had to know many facts about Disney animation and if I didn't know the answer to a guest's particular question, I was sure to find somebody who did," he said.

The experience dealing with animation was very beneficial for Gilreath, who majors in graphic design at MSU.

"I made a lot of contacts in the field," he said. He hopes these contacts can help him one day realize his dream job of becoming a Disney cartoonist.

While in Orlando, Gilreath lived in an apartment complex which was specifically for Disney college students. Residents of these apartments included students who worked in all areas of Disney, including international students.

"I made good friends from all over the country and all over the world," he said.

Gilreath describes one of his more memorable experiences of the summer as celebrating the French holiday, Bastille Day, with the delegation of French students.

"I spent the entire day partying with 150 jubilant French people with the French flag painted on my face," he said.

Gilreath received many benefits for being an employee of Disney. He was paid hourly for his work, with a small portion taken out for housing expenses. He also received free transportation and free admission to the park whenever he was off duty.

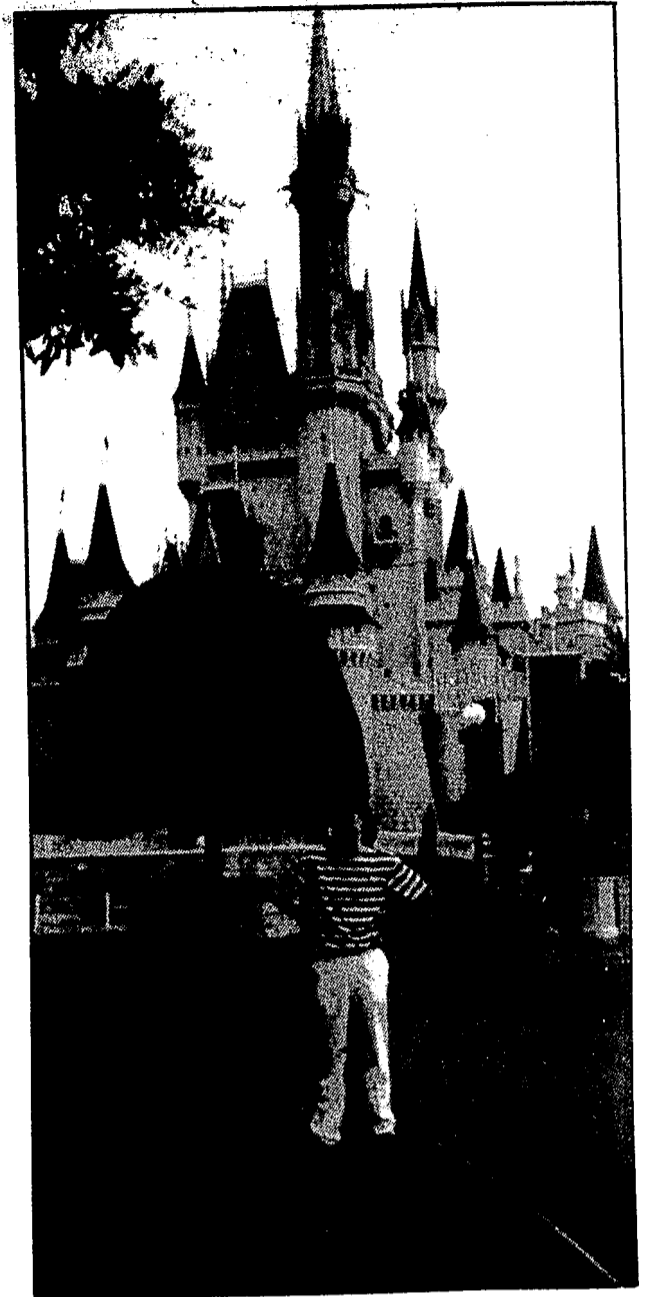

"I went to all parts of Disney World whenever I wanted. It was incredible," he said.

He also had an opportunity to have family members visit when he was given two free family passes on the Fourth of July. This gave his family a chance to see the benefits of his experience.

"It was a great experience for Greg. It will benefit him in the future and it was something special he'll probably never have a chance to do again," said Annette Gilreath, Greg's mother.

Along with the needed career experience, Gilreath considers his summer at Disney World to be educational in many other ways.

"It was a learning experience of other cultures, meeting new people and working for the top entertainment company in the world," he said.

Greg Gilreath spent his summer college break working at Disney World. That's the Magic Kingdom in the background.

St. Dan's turns 25

St. Daniel's Catholic Church kicked off a celebration of its 25th anniversary with a mass tree planting April 17.

Parishoners were invited to pick up a white spruce seedling to take home and plant in their yards and another to plant in designated spots on the church grounds. The "25th Anniversary Grove" will be recorded so future church-goers will be able to see who planted the trees.

"We wanted a sort of living memento," said church member Conrad Clayton.

The festivities will come to a peak on June 25, the actual date of the founding of the church in 1969. Most Reverend Kevin Britt, regional bishop for the Detroit Archdiocese, will come to celebrate mass at St. Dan's at 5 p.m., followed by a reception. The next day there will be a parish picnic, to which all 1,400 of the parish's families have been invited.

Area artist captures Old West in watercolors

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Cowboys and Indians come to life under Ronald Weaver's paint brushes.

"I've always had an interest in the West," the professional commercial artist said.

It is an interest which led him to learn all he could about the Old West and incorporate that love and learning into paintings.

"It's his first love," said his wife of 40 years, Mona. "He's painted these since we've been married."

Weaver began his career in the professional art world in 1949 by doing errands at a commercial art business owned by a friend of his father.

He progressed in the business as an illustrator and photographic retoucher at a time when work from well-known artists was used in advertising.

"I got to work with some of the top illustrators and that excites you to do even better than before," he said.

He continues working in the commercial art business while pursuing a new career in the fine arts.

Weaver's interest in the Old West began years before his first job.

ONE of Ronald Weaver's newest works is this painting of Geronimo. Since the face was of the Indian as an old man, Weaver incorporated the war party he led as a younger man.

RONALD and Mona Weaver of Independence Township pose in their home with one of Ronald's water color paintings. The subject in this work is a mission the couple visited.

"I've always been around (Western stories)," he said.

His uncles were ranch hands and cowboys during the Depression years and he heard many tales about their adventures while growing up.

Weaver's father-in-law, James Robert Barnes, was part Choctaw Indian and was born in 1880 in the Pocola Indian Territory before Oklahoma became a state.

"I got a double prize (when he married Mona). I knew all these things he talked about. He was real. I used to love to listen to all his stories," Weaver said.

Weaver began painting watercolors for friends and family in 1970. His subjects include people, animals and landscapes in Western settings.

A friend at work asked Weaver to do a watercolor for his home in the Western motif. The art was later used as a promotional poster for the agency.

"It was so well received we decided to sell it," said Mona.

Weaver said he has to be historically correct when he paints because "so many people know (the subject) so well, they can see flaws."

He uses books and historical photographs for ideas. "You just see things that excite you," he said. "It just kind of develops in your mind."

The artist usually has a reason to sit down and paint a watercolor. "I either have a place to put it or someone asks me for one," he said.

Weaver's work has been displayed in the General Motors Building in Detroit at the request of the Campbell Ewald agency. In 1990 his painting "Indian Woman" was juried from a field of 480 entries by the Michigan Watercolor Society to be part of an exhibit at the Kresge Museum in Lansing.

On July 15, 16 and 17 he will be the featured artist at Native West in Plymouth.

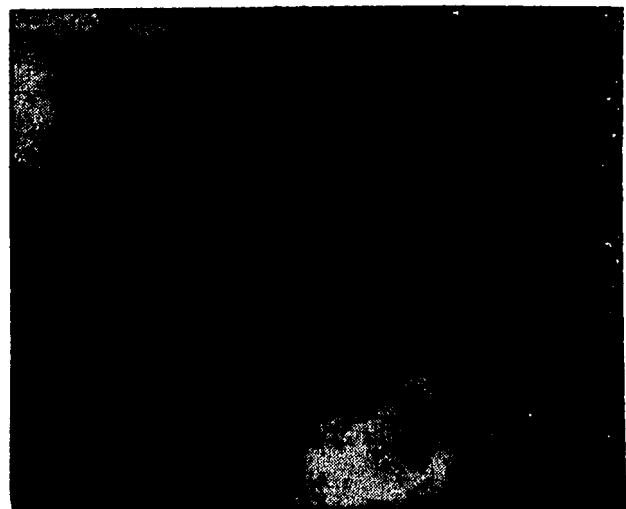

His watercolors have sold throughout the United States, including the Gene Autry Heritage Museum in Calif.

"We're just getting started. It's real easy to sell him," said Mona who takes care of the marketing of her modest husband. "He loves what he does."

"One of the secrets is having a subject that interests people," added Ronald.

"I'm very proud of him as an artist," said Mona. "He has a talent that many people wish they had."

The couple said they would like to go West and pursue his art career. "I'd love to have a studio to do this all the time. In commercial art you do what the client wants, with this you do it for yourself," Ronald said.

An Indian woman.

Space man and stars visit former Clarkstonite's home

BY CATHERINE PASSMORE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

When Jim Lovell came to the Roeslers' door and asked if anyone knew him the answer was a resounding, "of course."

Cindy (Dobleske) Roesler, a former Springfield Township resident, and her family knew they had bought the former astronaut's house in Taylor Lake, Texas.

The subdivision where the Roeslers now reside was where all the early astronauts and their families lived during the beginning of the space program. And the Roeslers' home may be used in a new movie produced by Universal Studios about Lovell.

Lovell was one of the early space pioneers. In December 1965, he established a space endurance record by spending 14 days in earth orbit.

He was the commander of the Apollo 8 mission where he and two other men orbited the moon ten times in seven days in December 1968. They were the first people to ever circle the moon.

Lovell commanded the Apollo 13 space flight that was to have landed on the moon in April 1970. About 56 hours into the flight, an oxygen tank exploded causing the cancellation of the landing.

He and the other astronauts piloted their crippled ship back to earth about three days later.

Lovell has written a book called Lost Moon about the aborted Apollo 13 mission and the rights to the book were bought by Universal Studios.

"He said not to make a big deal about it, but could he bring some people by to see the house," said Cindy.

Cindy and her husband, Gary, both work and didn't know if they'd be available. Finally, Cindy said she'd take the afternoon off to be at the home.

The Roeslers were told Tom Hanks had been cast in the part of Lovell for the movie. "The more I thought about it, the more I thought (Tom Hanks) was going to show up," Cindy continued.

"When (Lovell) left I said, 'All right everybody freeze and clean the house,'" she said.

Her mom, Shirley Dobleske, said she talked to Cindy's husband the day Universal Studios visited and he couldn't even find the bread.

The next day when the navy blue van pulled up to the Roeslers' home Tom Hanks got out. "He was video taping me and I said, 'I should be taking pictures of you.'" said Cindy.

CINDY ROESLER, a former Springfield Township resident, poses in her home with former astronaut Jim Lovell, actor Tom Hanks and director Ron Howard. Roesler's home may be part of a movie about Lovell and the space program.

Hanks brought along Universal Studio executives and the film's director, Ron Howard.

"I had to keep pinching myself," she recalled laughing.

"I wasn't going to ask them for their autographs because they told me they'd been mobbed that morning," said Cindy. But she left a newspaper article and picture of Ron Howard on the table — just in case.

"Someone said, 'Ron, you need to sign this for Cindy' and he wrote, 'Cindy, thanks for putting up with us. Ron Howard.'"

Lovell signed a picture the family had in the home of him. "Tom Hanks looked through a People magazine and asked, 'Where's my picture?'" Cindy said. He ended up writing "T. Hanks not pictured" on

"Tom went through the whole house. He was really witty. Ron Howard was friendly, but very quiet," said Cindy.

Lovell took the group on a tour of the home. "It was so neat to hear the history of the house," she said.

Cindy said she was on the phone all night calling family and friends to tell them about her experience.

The people from Universal Studios had planned to use pictures of the outside of the house and mocked-up insides for the movie. Cindy said they may use the home as it is.

"They told us they were fixing to be back at 4:30 in the morning to move me and my family out of the house. We're sitting on pins and needles waiting to see if they do come back," she said.

Seniors, drugs and doctors

While senior citizens make up 12 percent of the population in Oakland County, they utilize 30 percent of all prescription drugs. They also make more visits to the doctor per capita.

To help seniors get the most out of their doctor visits the Independence Township Library, in cooperation with the Oakland County Health Division's Seniors Project, will present "Talk to Your Doctor" in the library's Community Meeting Room Wednesday, May 4 from 2 to 3 p.m.

The Mythbeggotten Players' live comic antics will show how to and how not to keep your doctor's attention, new ways to get your money's worth from doctor visits, and generally how to put "patient power" to work for you. Sal Scafidi, D.C., will also be present to answer questions.

To register for this free program, call the library at 625-2212. The library is located at 6495 Clarkston Road.

Clarkston woman wins sales award

Joyce Nelson-Keech of Clarkston has been named a winner in the Sales and Marketing Executives Sales Success Recognition Program for 1994.

Nelson-Keech is a senior account executive with Ameritech. She was one of 14 winners of the award, five of whom work for Ameritech. Awards were presented at the Ritz-Carlton in Dearborn April 11.

Winners were nominated by their employers and selected based on sales. Nelson-Keech has worked for Ameritech for 15 years and sells advertising for the Yellow Pages. She and her husband Ken Keech and daughter Jenni, 16, live in Independence Township.

"I've always been in sales," she said. "Either you can sell or you can't. It's something that comes from within."

Nelson-Keech said receiving the award was exciting because at the same ceremony, Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer and Chrysler Chairman Robert Lutz were also honored. However it's not the first time she's been rewarded for her sales ability. She's won company trips, including this year's to Hawaii.

"It's always nice but it's not the only thing," she said. "The main thing is to make sure the customer is happy with the advertising... It's like the frosting on the cake when you're recognized."

Nelson-Keech works out of Ameritech's Ann Arbor office and also covers part of western Oakland County. A Clarkston resident since 1977, she said she doesn't mind the commute.

"I love Clarkston; I really love the community," she said. "So no, I haven't even thought of moving."

Local cleaning business honored by county

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

It takes a lot of hard work to run your own business. To expand it takes more than work—it takes money.

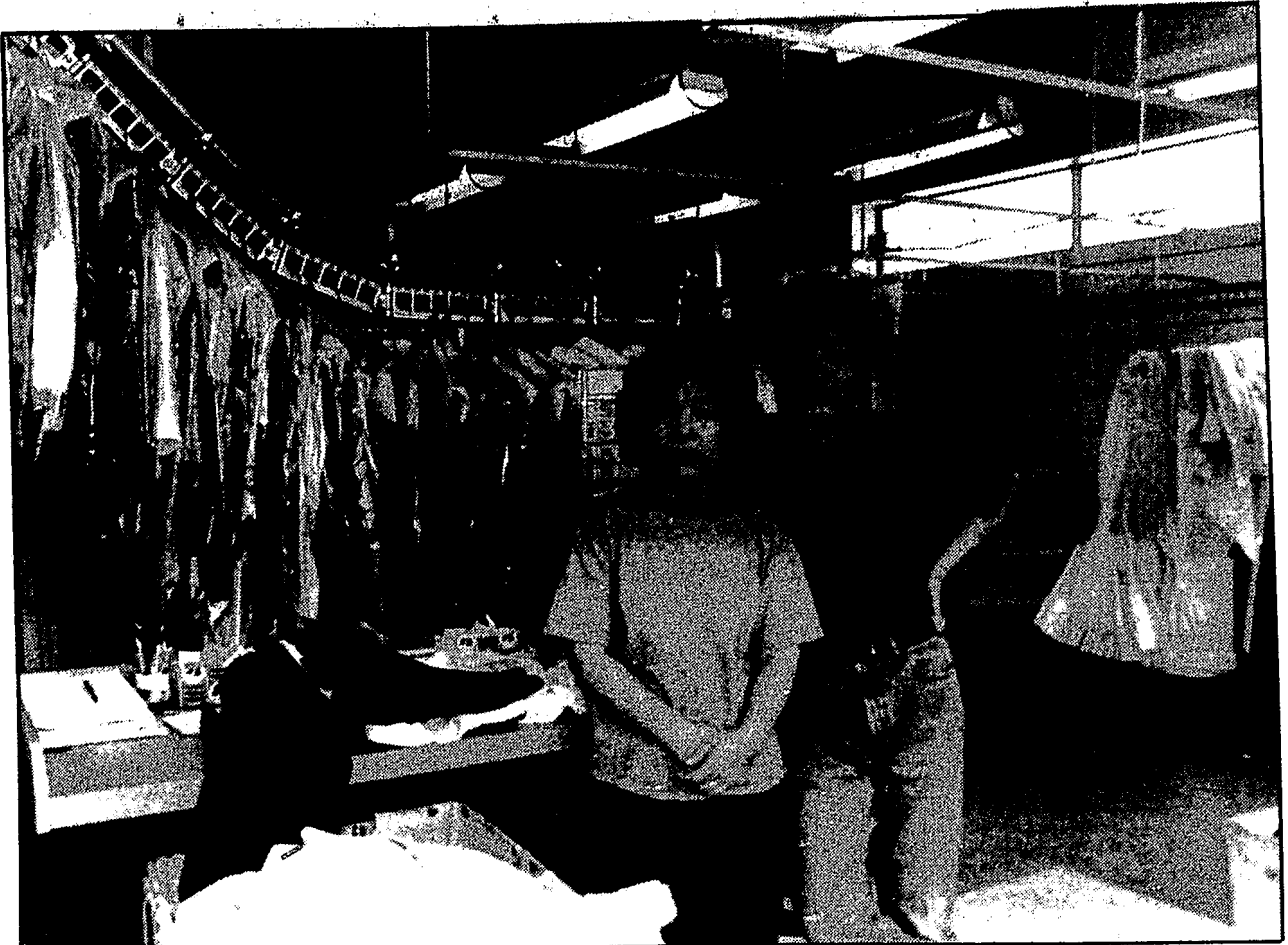

Sang Jin and Soon Ok Lee, owners of Lee Dry Cleaning and Laundry on Sashabaw Rd., know that first-hand. After immigrating from Korea 13 years ago and working for years in Pontiac, they applied to the U.S. Small Business Administration for a loan to start their own business.

After receiving their loan, they built a gleaming new laundry center and moved their business to Independence four years ago. The business is open seven days a week and the husband and wife team both work at it while raising two children, 14 and 16.

For their efforts, the couple was honored by the Oakland County Development and Planning Division for a Job Creation award. The plaque they received from the county attests to job creation and retention.

The SBA's 504 loan program is available to businesses by way of loan guarantees. Local banks make the loans, and the SBA guarantees them up to 70 percent.

According to Crain's Detroit Business, Michigan is low on the lending totem pole. Many banks don't want to get involved in the program because it is "asset based," rather than based on the profitability of a business.

However some local banks are making the loans. A Waterford company, SAC Industries, received the largest such loan last year, $1.3 million, to acquire inventory for their ski equipment distributorship, according to Crain's.

The Lee Dry Cleaning loan was more modest—$300,000 to build their plant. The company now employs two people in addition to the owners.

"We both work hard," said Sang Jin. "We are every year going up, going up."

Oakland County says such companies have contributed to the economic vitality of the county. The county's Development and Planning Division offers assistance in applying for an SBA loan.

Heritage Hunt II

Adoptees and health problems

BY VIRGINIA BLOCK

Search for Tomorrow, Inc., whose motto "Your heritage is your birthright," was introduced to us in 1982, as a group in Indiana leading the way for adoptees to gather needed records and information for resolution of health problems, establish identity and help find birth parents willing to be found.

We do not know much about the group at this date but it raises the question of what you have done to ensure that Michigan vital records will not become closed to us, with the state legislation committee letting it die without coming up for a vote in this session.

Contact Representative John Jamien (West Bloomfield) with a request for his support and questions of the current status of House Bill 378 regarding keeping the records OPEN. It's your heritage.

Incidentally, an article in Better Homes and Gardens, August 1981, asked the question "Who has access to your medical records?" If it were a concern then, think about today's computerized method of being the keeper of your personal information that anyone can tap for a dozen reasons besides your purpose of regaining one's health and well being.

Much new information on searching German church records was forthcoming at the recent Grand Blanc L.D.S. workshop April 23.

The expense of doing research outside the U.S.A. prohibits many of us from going beyond local resources. Certainly the holdings at the State Library offer opportunities to research at your leisure at a minimal of cost, compared to paying someone to research for you.

Regardless of where you are in your research, check this:

Five basic questions outlined by the teacher of the Family History Center class in the recent L.D.S. workshop can be a good starting point for anyone to begin a family medical record.

An article found in an August 1981 issue of Better Homes and Gardens mentioned before indicated that answers in medical records apply to all other areas of "your need to know," for whatever reason:

1. What do I know about my family?
2. What do I want to learn about my family?
3. What records are available? Where?
4. How do I obtain the records?
5. What do I do next?

Answering these five questions can serve as a foundation for really getting started more effectively. Organization of material already on hand is clearly the first step. We have a research "checklist" that is obtainable in the P.A.H.A.G.S. library that will serve well in directing your course of action. Come see us any Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., at 60 E. Pike St., lower level, Pontiac Public Library.

Happy Hunting!
