House burns after drug bust; arson is suspected

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY Clarkston News Editor

It was a bad week for Larry James

On August 16, agents from the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency raided his home in Independence Township and one he rented in Waterford, seizing what they said was a sophisticated indoor marijuana growing operation and $400,000 in plants.

Two days later Hatcher's home on Harding burned during the night, causing an estimated $40,000 in damage. The Oakland County Fire Investigation Unit and the Independence Township Fire Department are investigating.

DEA spokesman Robert Baggs said two search warrants were served simultaneously after agents observed what they thought was the sale of marijuana by Hatcher, who was under sur-

"We knew of him" through tips, Baggs said, but he had no previous criminal record. "Our portion of the investigation began with surveillance Tuesday."

Sgt. Carl Solden of the Waterford Township Police Dept. said his department had no previous experience with Hatcher either.

"We had learned awhile back there was a grow house in that vicinity, but we didn't have enough evidence," Solden said. "The DEA came up with some information and what they got helped. . I have to give them credit for this."

What both agencies found when they raided the Williams Lake Rd. house Hatcher rented was a hydroponic growing system complete with lights, pumps and temperature controls—a sizable investment—as well as hundreds of marijuana plants.

Hatcher was arraigned in U.S. See DRUGS, page 12A

Township cuts funding for DARE drug officer

BY LEE DRYDEN Clarkston News Staff Writer

The Clarkston schools will mostly likely be without the services of a DARE officer this fall. Though members of the Independence Township Board spoke highly of the program, they felt forced to make the cut due to a recent failed police millage.

DARE, which stands for Drug Abuse Resistance Education, is a program that involves an Oakland County Sheriff's Deputy spending a great deal of time educating Clarkston fifth-graders on drug prevention.

The township voted 5-2 on August 16 to follow the recommendation of Lt. Doug Hummel, commander of the Independence Township substation, and cut the DARE officer and the weighmaster. The other option given to the board was to cut two uniformed patrol officers.

The problem with cutting the uniformed officers, according to Hummel, is that the midnight patrol would have to be decreased to two officers.

Therefore, if one of those officers were to call in sick or get detained making an arrest, the township could be left with one officer on patrol for nearly 26,000 residents.

"That would be very unsafe for the er on patrol, not to mention the residents. The DARE program is very important, but we can't jeopardize the safety of the community," said Hum-

Although board members seemed disturbed about having to cut the DARE officer, most agreed with Hummel's decision.

"It was not a choice we wanted to make. Drug education is very important, but we cannot leave an officer by himself," said John Lutz, treasurer.

Supervisor Dale Stuart disagreed, saying that although the township has paid for the entire program in the past. the Clarkston school district offered to pay half of the cost this year to try and save the program.

The news in brief

Road repair begins in city

Road work was scheduled to begin Tuesday on Miller Rd. in the city of Clarkston.

On Monda; y night, city council approved hiring contractor Larry Bond to patch some of the city's streets. A motion passed to spend up to $4,000 for major and $2,000 for local road repair, although only $3,000 will initially be spent "for a start," City Manager Art Pappas said. The council also has cash reserves for street maintenance because nothing has been done for several years.

Road work will continue on East and West Washington, East Church, Buffalo, Waldon, Madison, Sumen, Robertson, Middle Lake and Robertson, city officials said.

Gypsy moth money sought

A resolution requesting funding of the suppression of gypsy moths has been sent to Oakland County officials by the Independence Township Board of Trustees.

The county will make egg counts in area communities in the fall to decide which ones will receive funding to suppress the moths.

"It's a serious problem, but the township doesn't have the capacity to fund a spraying," said Dan Travis, trustee.

The resolution was approved by a 7-0 vote.

Early deadlines

Some advertising deadlines for the Clarkston News and Pennystretcher have been moved up to accomodate the Labor Day weekend.

Display advertising for the Sept. 7 paper will be due by Thursday at 5 p.m. Semi-display classi-«fieds are due by Friday at 5 p.m. Classified cancellations must be reported by noon on Friday.

Editorial submissions, including letters to the editor, are due by noon on Friday. The Clarkston News office will be closed on Monday, Sept.

Pretrial set in break-ins

Scott Edward Stafford of Pontiac was still in the Oakland County Jail last week, unable to post $25,000 cash bond as he awaits trial in several break-ins in Independence Township. On Aug. 18 Stafford was arraigned before Judge David Breck, who set a pre-trial for Aug 24. Stafford was apprehended while driving a car stolen in Orion Township that was full of belongings stolen in Independence Township. Those are just two of a string of robberies he is suspected of taking part in.

Man arraigned in domestic assault

Mark Allen Biel, 40, of Clarkston, was arraigned in 52-2 District Court Aug. 19 on a charge of domestic violence after he allegedly assaulted his wife at their home Aug. 3. According to a report filed by the Oakland County Sheriff's Independence Substation, the victim suffered a bruised eye and arm and a swollen cheek, finger and shoulder. Biel was released on a $3,000 bond (cash 10 percent) and faces a pretrial Sept 15 on the misdemeanor charge.

Former chef faces the challenge of middle school

BY EILEEN OXLEY Clarkston News Staff Writer

Mike Krystyniak may not be able to hang up his pots and pans - just yet.

The newly-hired assistant principal at Sashabaw Middle School, who came from Oakland Technical Center where he served as a chef and culinary arts instructor for five years, says he's already been "snagged by one of the teachers" for faculty Breakfast Club contests.

"I guess they thought that was a major coup," laughed Krystyniak, sitting at his new desk Friday.

He's been readying that office all summer long - for the first day the bell rings and calls kids to classes on August 30.

On the walls are pictures of endangered animals that his 12-year-old daughter Carmen helped him hang. And in the background atop a bookcase stand photos of Carmen's and his son Paul's baseball teams which he has coached for the past two years. A little part of his home in Detroit—where he lives with his wife Jean, Carmen and Paul, 10,—that he carries into his new office in Clarkston.

The decision was made to hire Krystyniak about two or three days before school was out in June. Former assistant principal Mike Dillon had left to become the new principal at Pine Knob Elementary.

A committee, composed of teachers, administrators, central office staff and SMS principal Jean Lang, interviewed eight candidates chosen from 60 people who applied for the job. After narrowing the candidates down to three, the Board of Education made the final decision.

"The things that stuck out for me [about]

'Sometimes you feel like the heavy and you have to remind yourself that your goal is to get this student to change his or her behavior.'

Mike Krystyniak

Krystyniak] were his professional preparation, his willingness to go back to school and get a master's in administration," Clarkston Schools superintendent Gary Haner said.

"Then there was his background. Prior to coming here, he took a floundering [culinary arts] program at the Tech Center and turned it into an exemplary one — He had his students competing at the national

But most of all, Haner said, it was "just Mike's personal and professional skills and perceived ability to work with both children and parents.

"He has a great sense of humor and a great ability to be tough when he needs to be tough — but empathetic at the same time."

Krystyniak perceives his new role to be a great challenge. One of his biggest tasks will be to tackle behavior problems, though he feels Clarkston doesn't have much trouble.

NEW SASHABAW MIDDLE SCHOOL assistant principal Mike Krystyniak waits for school to begin August 30. Registration was held for sixth- through eighth-graders Mon-

"Our (middle school) philosophy is not to punish them, but to get them to change their behavior. Sometimes you feel like the heavy and you have to remind yourself that your goal is to get this student to change his or her behavior," he said.

Krystyniak says this year the middle school will try out an in-school suspension program where students who misbehave will not be sent home, but rather kept in school. They will be separated and be "working all day." Also, Teacher Advisory Groups (TAGS) will give each student a teacher and small group of students he or she can have contact with all day long - including being scheduled for the same lunch period.

"It'll be an anchor for kids," he said.

One of the best moves the school district has made, he feels, is placing sixth-through eighthgraders together, because kids in this age group are experiencing the same changes.

"I think this is a more formative age and also a more difficult age. They're going through so many changes, emotional, hormonal, physical ...

"The trend now is the change from junior high to middle school. In middle school it's the development of students as a person — we're trying to blend the whole educational experience. The educational aspect deals with sixth-through eighth-graders who are more similar in their characteristics. The thought is these kids should be separated. At this level, kids are more participatory than competitive.

"For example, we have intramural basketball and you have 100 kids who can all play. They then develop a healthy attitude."

Krystyniak paused to smile.

"This period is going to be unique. They're going to be experimenting behaviorally — that's normal. But when it reaches the outer limits, that's when they'll have to see me," he laughed.

Krystyniak praised the school community of teachers, administrators and parents for their help with health and reproductive programs and their willingness to be persistent with drug education.

"People who have been here say they haven't seen a serious drug problem. That's because this community has been real diligent on this."

But he admits that "even a 'wholesome community' such as Clarkston has problems going

Othermissions the new assistant principal hopes to accomplish are supporting the teaching staff and new academic programs at the middle school which include Challenger English ("in past times it was called Honors English," he says) and revamped science, math and social studies curriculums.

Though Krystyniak says he will miss the classes and cooking, staff and students, at the Technical Center, he looks forward to his new experience at the middle school. And, in a way, his work with budding teenagers won't stop there. Waiting at home will be two continuing challenges — Paul and Carmen.

"In some ways you're dealing with this all day then you have to go home and face it all over

"At least I'll be focused on one age group all the time," he laughed.

Robber caught after agging about crime

He may have committed the perfect crime. But then he had to go and brag about it.

When a man walked into Bianca's II party store on Andersonville Rd. August 1, a T-shirt he had pulled over his head totally obscured his face and hair, preventing the store clerk from identifying him.

However, after he robbed the store at gunpoint, a 32-year-old Highland Township man with no prior criminal record just couldn't resist talking about it. And that proved to be his undoing.

Peter Matthew Babin was arraigned in 52-2 District Court Friday after confessing to Det. Chuck Young of the Oakland County Sheriff's Dept. Independence Substation.

Young called Babin after receiving a tip that he had bragged about the heist in front of three people. then took one of them by the party store while police were still there. The acquaintance said he then dropped Babin off at a motel in Waterford.

Babin was arraigned before Magistrate Dana Fortinberry and held in lieu of $10,000 cash bond. He is scheduled for a preliminary exam Aug. 25.

Young said Babin allegedly spent the hours after the robbery doing cocaine at the motel. He was reported to have gotten away with $800 and some cigarettes in the robbery.

On August 12, after getting a message Young wanted to talk to him, Babin called the sheriff's dispatch and said he wanted to turn himself in. the many control of the traction of the tracks are the souther than the southers the southers are the southers the southers are the southers that the southers are the southe

Township agrees to sell property

BY LEE DRYDEN Clarkston News Staff Writer

After months of negotiations and delays, a purchase offer for property located at the corner of Waldon and M-15 was accepted by the Independence Township board August 16.

The board voted 6-1 last week to accept the purchase offer of Robert and Deanna Olsen of Planned Financial Services, Inc. in Clarkston. Board members have confirmed that the Olsens are planning to build an office building on the site.

The offer was discussed at several meetings this summer and had been tabled and put off to other meetings before the board took action last week. The property is currently owned partly by the city of Clarkston and partly by Independence Township.

The purchase price was $130,000; the Olsens have one year to investigate whether the land is suitable for their uses before the deal becomes official. During that time the board has the right to accept a better offer if one comes along.

After asking township attorneys to review the details of the Olsens' offer so they could give it final approval, board members were forced to make a decision when a second offer was recently received.

A group from the Continuing Care Corporation, led by Horace D'Angelo and Gregory Burcz, proposed building a care center for senior citizens on the property. The facility would offer assistance to the residents but would not be considered a nursing home. On August 9 the Clarkston city council formed a committee to study that offer, but the committee later decided the proposal was not feasible for a variety of reasons.

"The bottom line is it's a very worthwhile project but not in the right location," councilman Bill Basinger said at Monday night's city council meeting:

The township decided to accept the Olsens' offer because they felt it would be a more realistic plan for

"It is important to care for the elderly, but this land needs to be sold to the most viable prospective purchaser and that is the Olsens," said Jeff McGee, township trustee.

· "The Olsens' proposal, if completed, will give us a strong tax base without increasing the population and creating a traffic problem," said John Lutz, township treasurer.

Another reason the Olsens' offer was accepted was the committment they have shown to developing the property, according to township clerk Joan McCrary.

"Since this offer was originally received by the township, the Olsens have agreed to all provisions and changes we have asked for. There is no reason to delay them any longer," she said.

Township supervisor Dale Stuart disagreed and voted for the senior citizen project because he felt the project has a better chance of being accomplished.

"I think we would have learned sooner if the property could be used for its intended project if we accepted the D'Angelo offer. Their project had a better chance of getting started and finally getting the property off our hands. Also, their offer was $10,000 higher than the Olsens' was," he said.

There is another obstacle the Olsens will face before any construction can begin. Although the township owns most of the property, frontage on M-15 is located in the city of Clarkston. Therefore, the city controls the zoning. The land is zoned residential so, for the Olsens to construct an office building, they would have to get the land rezoned. That process could take time, according to Art Pappas, Clarkston city manager.

"It would have to go through the city planning commission and the zoning board of appeals. It's not a simple process," he said.

The Olsens could not be reached for comment.

In other township action:

 The board approved the hiring of WCI Contractors of Fraser to construct two pavilions and a gazebo at Bay Court Park. WCI was the low bidder for the contact at a cost of $39,641.80.

The board approved by a 7-0 vote.

A request for a speed limit reduction on Stickney Roadeast of Sashabaw was approved by the board. The township has sent a letter to the road commission requesting the decrease from 55 to 25 MPH.

The request was approved by a 7-0 vote.

 Board members agreed, 7-0, to allow the Lake Orion School District to borrow the township voting machines for a special election they are hold-

 A resolution for a library grant was approved by board members by a 7-0 vote.

 Renewing of the township's membership in WOLF, a network of libraries located in Wayne and Oakland counties was approved 7-0.

 The board held a closed session on the topic of labor negotiations.

 Board members voted to ratify the township fire union contract by a 7-0 vote.

Council ponders city office addition

BY EILEEN OXLEY Clarkston News Staff Writer

Police and public-works concerns nearly filled up a two-hour Clarkston city council meeting August

Council members Karen Sanderson and Douglas Roeser were absent, and Councilman James Schultz joined the meeting during the last hour.

First, Clarkston Police Chief Robert DeVore thanked council for purchasing the new $15,459 Ford Crown Victoria which was delivered this week. After presenting members with a list of accessories needed to turn it into a full-fledged police car, council approved an amount not to exceed $1,000 to purchase those items.

Councilman Steve Arkwright will work with DeVore to obtain an electronic-release gun rack, a prisoner screen, a light bar and newly designed lettering "that will make us look more professional," DeVore said.

But the main topic that both DeVore and DPW supervisor Bob Pursley addressed to council-with careful tact — was the need for more space.

"I hope somewhere down the road, we can put a wing on this building. It's hard on everybody, not just us," DeVore said, adding that cramped office and parking space made it difficult for officers and DPW workers to maneuver inside and out.

The increasing flow of people who come into the city office and police department is perhaps the Pursley agreed. "We need another bay in the garage ... And the roof has to be replaced. It would be cheaper to do all of it at once ... including the painting of the building."

Councilman William Basinger got the ball rolling by stating matter-of-factly, "Maybe it's time to start looking at this thing logically and ask for donations."

By the time council finished discussing De-Vore's and Pursley's proposal, they had also agreed it might be worthy to think about building a separate building for the garage. Basinger mentioned council members and resident volunteers would probably save money by doing the construction themselves. He cited the Bay Court and Depot Park playgrounds as recent examples.

Councilmen Basinger, Arkwright and Stephen Secatch formed a committee to investigate the possibility of the project.

Another mutual matter and sore spot -the city office bathrooms — was discussed, although no one seemed to be able to flush the troubles away.

With the completion of the new Depot Park playground, there has been increased usage of the building's restrooms, resulting in a multitude of problems, including locking up the building when no one is in the office.

"People are knocking on the door to use the bathrooms all the time," Pursley said.

Another problem is the inability of the residentially designed bathrooms to handle "the load," Pursley

"It won't accommodate commercial use," DeVore added.

Though discussion also included the possibility of building a public restroom in Depot Park, Mayor Sharron Catallo said problems of unsupervised children who might "mess up" the bathrooms and the responsibility of locking it up for the night would be the same.

City Manager Art Pappas said he would ask the city's housekeeper to perhaps step up bathroom cleaning to twice a week, which might control the increased usage problem.

As far as the neverending headache of keeping the city's restrooms open to the public, Mayor Sharron Catallo said, "I have no problem as long as there's someone in the building."

In other council action:

 DPW Supervisor Bob Pursley says the city needs to look at the need for a new dump truck. The present one needs frequent repair and Pursley is worried the city may have snow removal and salting problems once winter winds hit. He will look into the cost of a new truck.

● The Depot Park playground will be sodded and picnic tables put in next week, Pursley said.

 A lack of dumping facilities for Rudy's Market was addressed by council members. Pappas said a letter will be written to manager Robert Esshaki, asking him to come up with a solution within 30 days. City manager Art Pappas says there is no room for a dumpster behind the store "because it backs up to the lot line" in the alley.

Council approved the hiring of Independence Township resident Brian Snyder to do parttime plumbing and heating inspection. Snyder also services other municipalities.

The Clarkston News

Last March, while The Dennis and I were vacationing in Ft. Myers Beach, Florida, a boat containing several Cubans made it safely ashore during the night. The next day, having seen the headlines and TV news coverage, it nevertheless seemed practically unbelieveable that such a thing had happened just a short distance from where we slept. As we drove along the waterfront, where the fishing boats come in and modest mobile homes are parked close together, the very idea seemed just plain unreal. But further south, the scenario is becoming all too real these days. If you've ever been to Key West, you know how often you are reminded, as you travel the tiny island, that Cuba is only 90 miles away.

As you stand on the water's edge at the southernmost point (which is right near the southernmost house and the southermost beauty parlor), there's a sign that says "Cuba—90 miles." You can't help but gaze out over the water, realizing that—literally this is as far away from whatever you're running from as you can go.

Each night, natives and visitors alike gather at one particular pier to pay homage to the Key West lifestyle. There's music and street theater and then, as the sun sinks below the horizon, there is a smattering of applause before everyone disappears into the night.

According to recent news reports, just 90 miles away a similar scene is being played out on Cuba's northernmost beach. Residents gather of an evening, not to pay homage to the sunset, but to try to escape to freedom.

I doubt if there's a sign that says "Freedom—90 miles," but hundreds assemble on the beach and gaze across the Straits of Florida, watching as friends, neighbors and family members get into tiny boats for the dangerous crossing. The travellers are bid God speed, then watched as they sail into the dark, sharkinfested waters.

Those left behind, according to a report pub lished last week, may stick around all night, hoping a passing boat will pick them up and take them to freedom.

After reading that report, I couldn't help but conjure up a scene in my mind of these two groups of humanity, separated by only 90 miles of water but an ocean of politics. One group gathers in fun, one in desperation; one celebrates their unique lifestyle, the * other prays for a chance to join in.

Who knows why Cuban leader-for-life Fidel Castro has chosen to allow his people to leave at this

But somehow, you have to pull for them. Despite all the problems our country faces today from crime, unemployment, hunger-you name it-it's still better than what these people are leaving behind.

Facing 90 miles on the open sea and, possibly, death, the Cubans are undeterred in their quest for freedom. Call me crazy, but it makes me feel good to be an American. For all our faults, we're still the best. Sometimes it's good to be reminded.

Hazel, where did you put that key?

In yet another attempt at humor, John Patrell will interrupt just about any conversation by confessing,

"I'm hooked on phonics!" Obviously, he's heard far too many commercials on the subject. Considering there are so many advertisements these days for memory courses, I suppose John will be calling soon to tell me how good his recall

I've come to believe through my growing-old years that age is universally accepted as an excuse for not remembering names, faces, places, events and zipping up . . . or down. Memory training course pushers would have us believe otherwise. Of course, we have to buy their tape, video or book to prove them right or wrong.

Naturally, the sellers of these wares have found a professor to give credence to their claims. Curt Sandman, Ph.D., co-director of the Memory Disorders Clinic (I can't remember why they have such a thing) at the University of California at Irvine is quoted in Good Housekeeping, Sept 1994: "Over the last 10 years we've learned that even in advancing age, the brain can continue to grow and adapt."

The key, researchers say, is to think of the brain as any other muscle, which needs regular 'workouts' to keep from getting out of shape.

I never thought about it until now, but all the time in my youth when people called me a 'musclehead' they were right. Just as my father was right when he called me by the nickname, "Molasses," for being so

I understand, however, that certain people need memory help. These are the people who pay hundreds of dollars for fish finders. Heck, everyone knows they are right there on the other side of the lake.

I don't plan on enrolling in any improve-yourmemory courses. First of all, I have done and said a great many things I'd really rather continue to forget. You know what I mean! These are the things your spouse will never forget.

Secondly, how would I fill the time I'd be saving by being able to quickly locate my keys, post hole digger, car push-button radio station-setter procedure, Christmas light replacement bulbs or the footprints hospitals gave us when our kids were born?

Thirdly, that's what I've got wife Hazel for. My memory is so rotten and short I can't even remember why, after re-reading this column, I put in that 'thirdly,' but I'm sure Hazel will not forget that I

Each week this summer, we have found more and more of you with "ties" that "cross," yet the dirty four-letter word "TIME" has been the culprit in getting us all together.

Mary Jane Copeman Glezon paid us a hasty visit last week, before returning to her home in Florida. While researching the "Taylor" link to her family, she shared copies of the Civil War letters written by Arthur E. Collins to his sweetheart, Minnie A. Green.

Mary Jane descends from John Q. Taylor and Mary Axford Taylor, whose daughter, Jane Taylor, married Nelson Copeman. From this marriage, Eber N., son of Henry Baldwin Copeman, married first Nellie Ethel Vasta (daughter of Arthur E. Collins and Mary Green).

Mary Jane Copeman (Patterson) Glezon tells us that the Lloyd Copeman (of Hadley) who invented a stove that was a forerunner of the microwave, was a son of John Westly Copeman. (Sounds confusing but looks better on the chart.) This same family lineage is of Gay Herman, of Sylvania, Ohio.

The William Nathan Terry surname shows that the Terry lines of Bernice Hudson, Frances Peterson's Waugh lines, Maxine French's Waugh and Terry lines, as well as her Hardenburg line all crisscross, with the resulting spousal lines bringing in dozens of others. There must be something to the Mormon belief that in 10 generations, we are all related. We hope to gather help for Bob Nelson, whose grandfather David Nelson of Owen Sound in Canada, includes the Blank line of Cheboygan area that links to the family of another searcher of the LePla line of Canada.

The Canadian family of Lloyd Howard is bound to tie in with the early "Talbot" settlers that included Thomas Howard in 1819. The large collection of Canadian Atlases reprinted by Cummings Publishers about 15 or so years ago are among the library holdings in our possession and should prove valuable to many of you, if you are seeking an elusive ancestor.

Superintendent Carl Brablec announces that enrollment of students will begin at 9 a.m. Wednesday, Sept. 6, in the Clarkston Public Schools. Only one former instructor, Ralph Thayer, will be on the 1944-45 high school teaching staff.

The Clarkston 4-H Canning Club will demonstrate the canning of peaches in the school home economics room Aug. 31 at 2 p.m. This is a demonstration the club will present at the state show in East Lansing on Sept. 8. Mothers and all interested are invited to attend.

Oakland County farmers who will be planting wheat this fall are advised to sow it after Sept. 16 to avoid damage from Hessian flies. This date is based on information from entomologists that there is a period in which wheat can still be sown before winter. County agricultural agent Karl Bailey says during this time adult Hessian flies do not have time to lay eggs. He advises farmers to plant as soon after the flyfree date as possible.

Negotiators for the Clarkston Board of Education and the Clarkston Education Association have scheduled two all-day sessions this week and three next week, five days before Labor Day. So far tentative agreement has been reached on 18 of the 24 articles in the contract. Those still open include teachers' salary schedules, teaching conditions and fringe benefits.

A ban on alcoholic beverages in Clarkston Village Park is slated, as requested by Independence Township Director of Police Services Charles Kimbel. Though park rules state alcohol is prohibited without village council approval, there is no law against it. The village attorney is writing a formal agreement to be voted on by council when finished.

Civilized executions are clean, efficient

Ironically, although I'm opposed to capital punishment, a triple execution reminded me that we are not a completely barbaric civilization.

I plead the usual reasons for being against a government killing even the most vile criminal: There's no proof that it deters crime; there's always the chance the wrong person will be executed, a mistake that can't be corrected, and thou shalt not kill under any circumstances except self-defense, or thou are allowing the criminal to drag thee down toward his level.

Whenever I preach that cliche sermon, I hear from eye-for-an-eye advocates who insist if a murderer is murdered he'll be deterred from ever murdering again, by damn, and what do I have to say about that, huh?

I say you get the same result from life in prison with no parole. If you're seeking revenge, you should realize that for many people, including me, this would be worse punishment than death. And the long imprisonment wouldn't cost taxpayers any more than fighting the delayforever legal appeals filed by death-row inmates and antiexecution activists.

With no capital punishment allowed, a murderer with no money has a better chance of receiving the same sort of lifesaving justice that can be bought by a wealthy murderer with a platoon of high-priced lawyers.

Finally, there would be plenty of for-life cell space for murderers if our justice system would wise up and stop mandating unreasonably long sentences for nonviolent lawbreakers, such as two-bit drug users and dealers.

OK, end of boring sermon. Now let's get more inter-

Last Wednesday in Arkansas, three men convicted of the same murder were executed, one after the other, in sort of a bargain-basement festival of punishment. Officials said the multiple executions reduced overtime and stress on employees.

"Nobody wants to get up in the morning and go kill somebody," a Correction Department spokesman explained. This way the executioners would have to get up only once to kill three people.

There were the usual protests and appeals, of course. "This scheduled mass execution, by reducing human beings to hogs at the slaughter, will exponentially increase the level of fear, uncertainty and psychological stress that someone condemned normally experiences in the usual course of death," it said in the three murderers' rejected appeal.

Referring to the order in which the three men would be killed, the appeal also claimed it was unconstitutional for the state to "assess who they think is worthy of another hour or two of life."

According to the Associated Press, there were "45 to 60 minutes between executions -- enough time to carry the body out in a bag, wipe down the gurney and change the needle before the next man was brought in."

Change the needle? Yes. And that's where I noted an encouragingly humanistic break in the barbarity.

The three men were punctured with a lethal dose of drugs. And if the same needle were used for all three injections, it could have been contaminated and spread AIDS or some other contagious disease.

The State of Arkansas compassionately spared one or two of the doomed men from the risk of being unnecessarily sick for 45 to 60 minutes.

I have only one question. Each of the men was wheeled into the death room on the same gurney. Every step possible should have been taken to ensure a safe trip.

Between executions, why in the name of God weren't those gurney wheels checked for proper alignment?

Don't Rush Me

Some health care numbers

Don't you just love it. "It" being the way politicians and Bill Clinton label anyone who disagrees with them "unpatriotic." It is this "dissenters will be chastised, bullied or otherwise shot" mentality that really makes the hairs on the back of my neck stand at attention.

This is America, Bub. Land of the free. Freespeech and all. Here's a quote from a book written by John D. MacDonald, in 1965. It has to do with

"But the other vitality is still there, that rancorous, sardonic, wonderful insistence on the right to dissent, to question, to object, to raise holy hell and in direst extremity, to laugh the self-appointed squad leaders off the face of the earth with great whoops of dirty disdainful glee. Suppress friction and a machine runs fine. Suppress friction, and a society runs down."

Why is it that anytime anyone disagrees with Bill Clinton he calls them unpatriotic, or prays for them at church? Americans are supposed to disagree. We are supposed to kick and scream. We are not to be led like sheep.

And that is why I get the willies when it comes to what is happening in Washington, D.C.

Am I unpatriotic to question Bill Clinton's numbers on health care? Am I mean spirited to say we have the best health care system in the world that shouldn't be scrapped? Whenever I say this I always also say, "but I believe we need to work on the health care system, not scrap it."

People always forget I say that. I believe all Americans should have access to health care (and they do, currently). I also believe we need some work to be done on the financing of health care . . . but for goodness sake, don't socialize our medicine.

So I question. I try not to work on emotion. I look for answers. Why do the Clintons want immediate action on their 1,342 page health care plan?

I read Congressman Joe Knollengberg's "A Curable Condition: The Problems and Opportunities of Health Care Reform." I found interesting facts.

The number out is that 37 million Americans have no health insurance (roughly 15 percent of us). My question is: what's the break down of these Knollenberg answers that question this way: "More than half (of the 37 million people) will regain coverage in less than four months. "Nearly three-fouths will be insured in less than

"More than 10 million have annual incomes of $30,000 or more.

"3.5 million uninsured have a bachelor's degree.

or higher.

'In reality, the 37 million figure is merely a snapshot in time. The population of 'chronically and involuntarily uninsured' is closer to 2.5 percent of the entire population, much lower than the frequent claims of 15 percent. Does this problem deserve our full attention? Yes. Does it justify the socialization of oneseventh our economy? Hardly."

I concur.

Here's some more from Knollenberg: "Under the Clinton plan, every American would have to rely on the government for health care. The government will tell you what you can get, where you can get it, from whom you can get it, and how much you can spend for it."

Sound like the kind of America you want? Not me. And since this is the case, I'll exercise my right to dissent. My American right to disagree. We fought to become a free state 200 years ago because the government had too much control. I believe we need to fight right now to become a free state because government has too much control of our lives and is grabbing for more.

Don't you think so?

Question: I have observed that elementary school and junior high school students, even high schoolers, tend to admire teachers who are more strict. Is this your experience as well?

Dr. Dobson: Yes, teachers who maintain order are often the most respected members of the faculty, provided they aren't mean or grouchy. A teacher who can control a class without being oppressive is almost always loved by his or her students. One reason is that there is safety and order. When a class is out of control, particularly at the elementary school level, the children are afraid of each other.

If the teacher can't make the class behave, how can she prevent a bully from doing his thing? How can she keep the students from ridiculing one of their less able members? Children are not very fair and understanding with each other, and they feel good about having a strong teacher who is.

Second, children love justice. When someone has violated a rule, they want immediate retribution. They admire the teacher who can enforce an equitable system, and they find great comfort in reasonable social rules. By contrast, the teacher who does not control her class inevitably allows crime to pay, violating something basic in the value system of children.

Third, children admire strict teachers because chaos is nerve-racking. Screaming, hitting and wiggling are fun for about 10 minutes; then the confusion begins to get tiresome and irritating.

I have smiled in amusement many times as second- and third-grade children astutely evaluated the relative disciplinary skills of their teachers. They know how a class should be conducted. I only wish all of their teachers were equally aware of this important attribute.

Americans Over 40 Think Fitness Is Harder Than It Has To Be (NAPS)—If you're over 40 and you still think that it's necessary to exercise a minimum of 30 minutes at a time to get the full health benefits, you're not alone. Half of those surveyed in a new study thought the same.

In contrast, the most recent health recommendation by leading national groups advises that even moderate activity in short spurts can increase longevity and improve health. This inconsistency between our perception of fitness and the reality may explain why so many people still haven't developed the exercise habit, a fact confirmed in the Advil Fitness Over 40 Survey, which polled 500 Americans ages 40 and up.

The survey also revealed that lack of motivation is one of the biggest barriers to fitness. In addition, this group says the older you are, the harder it is to start. The survey was the first to

Dare officer funding cut

"The DARE program is too important to jeapordize. After the action that the school board took, it was very inappropriate for the board to cut the program," he said.

Elaine Middlekauff, principal of Clarkston Elementary, has seen first-hand the benefits of the DARE program and is disappointed some children will miss out on its benefits.

'Speaking on behalf of the kids, we are all disappointed. Deputy Dave Hernandez did a wonderful job of teaching kids to say 'no'. It also helped the kids learn to look at police officers in a positive light," she said.

There is still a possibility that something could be accomplished to save the program. The millage request will be placed back on the November ballot and, in the meantime, township and school officials will study their options and see what can be accom-

"We will try to work with the school board and try to restore some type of a program, but nothing is definite," said Lutz.

The changes in the department will take place as of Sept. 1. Officers with the lowest seniority could get moved to other substations or have their positions changed, according to Hummel.

"We have to wait and see what happens," he

If the millage does pass in November, Hummel said how soon the DARE officer could be restored is up to the board.

"It depends how quickly they want to eliminate our deficit. The DARE officer was on the 'fat' part of our budget; we don't have the luxury of those funds anymore. Even if the millage does pass, the DARE program may not be restored until sometime in 1995 when we are in better financial condition," he said.

House burns after drug bust

District Court in Detroit Aug. 17. He was released on personal bond and awaits a preliminary exam Sept. 6.

Then, in the early hours of Thursday morning, two of Hatcher's neighbors called 911 to report his house was on fire.

Hatcher was not at home at the time.

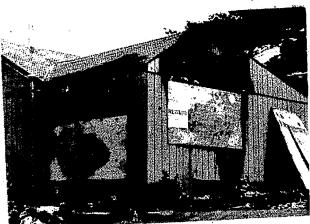

When police arrived, flames could be seen coming out the front and side windows. A deputy also reported an open door at the back of the house and heavy black smoke rolling out. According to fire department investigator Bob Pursley, fire, smoke and heat damage was evident throughout the house.

Law enforcement officials working on the case would not speculate what relationship the fire might have to the drug bust. Hatcher is not the property owner of record on the house, according to township records. But according to Det. Dave Row of the OCSD Fire Investigation Unit, Hatcher was purchasing the house on land contract from an uncle.

"At this point I believe it's intentionally set," Row said. He said the fire was set with "combustibles on the site." He discounted the theory that Hatcher may have set the fire himself.

"Personally I have some questions about whether he set it himself. He had nothing to gain.

"There's a lot of speculation. I don't like to engage in speculation." Hatcher could not be reached for comment.

Meanwhile, officers working on the drug case expressed shock about the fire.

"I was really surprised to hear that," Solden said. "But then again, I wasn't. I've learned after 28 years that anything can happen."

The OCSD has posted a reward sign on the burned-out house. Anyone with information on the fire should call 858-TIPS or 858-5453.

"I'm hoping maybe somebody will call and tell me who set it," Row said.

Board battles over ballot language

Voters will be asked to approve a police millage increase once again in November, but, this time, there will only be one choice.

The Independence Township Board voted 5-2 to place the millage on the ballot under one proposal. In the August election, voters approved renewing the current 2.3032 mills, but voted down a .4468 increase.

The proposal to be placed on the November ballot, if approved, will restore the 2.5 mills that were granted by voters before the Headlee override and add a .25 mill increase.

It was stressed by board members that the increase is necessary to maintain the current level of police service, because of a deficit in the police fund.

Treasurer John Lutz said he voted to place the millage under one proposal, because he fears, if given a choice, voters will only approve the first part again.

"Approving part of the millage will not resolve our problems. I think if we give the public one choice they will understand the seriousness of the proposal and approve it," he said.

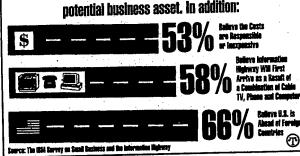

Supervisor Dale Stuart and trustee Jeff McGee disagreed and voted to split up the proposal.

"It is very unwise to put it all under one proposal, because we could end up with nothing. If that happens, we would be in very serious financial shape," said Stuart.

Lt. Hummel agreed with the seriousness of such a situation, but said that educating the voters is the factor everyone should be focused on.

"We need to get out and make sure the voters understand what they are voting for. We are only trying to maintain out present level of service. If the millage does not pass, further cuts will have to be made," he said.

Livestock auction is where kids say goodbye to animals

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY Clarkston News Editor

Fall's annual Oakland County 4-H Fair is an opportunity for young people, who have spent an entire year raising livestock of all kinds, to meet the competition.

Kids from all over the county bring their animals to the fair to be judged and, ultimately, to be sold. After it's all over, they go home and start on next year's projects.

The winning animals are purchased by local families and businesses which support 4-H.

"This year some of our big buyers were new," said 4-H spokesperson Linda Strilecky. They included major grocery stores like Kroger and Meijer and meat maker Kowalski, who decided to attend the auction after "many phone calls," she said.

Often buyers are local companies who buy the meat to sell or give to employees. "Sometimes employers will buy them and then they'll sell them to their employees, or give them as Christmas presents," Strilecky said.

These companies and many individuals pay a price that's "higher than the market rate," Strilecky said. "The meat is excellent. They have been raised by 4-H'ers in a home environment."

After the animals are auctioned, they are loaded up for the trip to the meat packers. Buyers can get as much or as little help as they need from 4-H in choosing a packer and getting the meat home.

"We arrange for trucking for them depending on the packing house," Strilecky said.

Strilecky, who said her daughter raises two swine every year, said the experience of parting with the animals after the fair can be tough, especially on newer exhibitors.

"The first year my daughter did fine," she said. "I made the mistake of going back in the barn while they were loading them. It upset both of us. So we don't go back (in the barn) any more."

Mary Middleton of Lake Orion (center) raised the Grand Champion pen of hogs. They were purchased by Clarkston Kroger, represented by Dennis Grund and Jack Ochodnicky.

PTA Council puts the children first

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY Clarkston News Editor

The one-year-old Clarkston PTA Council has some lofty goals for the coming year, all of which center on making the school experience the best it can be for local children.

According to council president Susan Wagner, the Council was formed to help unify the district and provide one strong voice for parents as advocates for all children.

"It's a real exciting time right now in this district, with a new school opening and everybody moving," Wagner said. "I think people are excited (but) I don't know if the stresses are gone yet...

"The PTA presidents got together. We felt it was very important to coordinate the activities. We felt it was important to have one strong voice for the children." Wagner heads a board which includes first vice president Joy Piedmont, second vice president Cheryl McGinnis, treasurer Anne Chesley and secretary Joanie Catanese. "We tried to get representation from all schools," Wagner said. The board meets monthly, with the full PTO Council meeting every other month, beginning October 4 at Clarkston High School.

McGinnis was already a fixture at school board meetings and well-known to administration for speaking her mind. She was cochairperson of the last successful bond issue campaign. She sees her job as part public relations.

"I accepted because I wanted to have some direct input as to the real direction parent groups in this

"This community has been led by people not concerned about what's best for our kids for so many years," the mother of three said. "I'm kind of the watchdog for everybody ... As long as I live here and I've got strength to fight, I will continue to fight for what's best for our community, not just what I think."

The goals the PTA Council has set for the coming year include: Putting children first in all decision-making. "Any issues that come up, that's what we're going to look at first," Wagner said.

Unification of the district. "We want to pull the district together so we have a strong voice," she said.

 Child advocacy. The Council hopes to present and research programs with an eye toward lower class sizes, arts instruction and safety concerns. They are already planning a presentation on playground safety.

 Improved communication with administration. "We would like to be the organization to disseminate information to the community, to parents in the schools. There's a lot of information that comes down that people don't understand." The Council hopes to offer a monthly newsletter that would eventually go to parents as well as service organizations and churches.

● A study of parent involvement. "Every study that comes out shows how important it is," Wagner said.

Dr. Mike LaBay, Clarkston Schools Deputy Superintendent for Instruction, worked with a PTO Council in his previous district (Birmingham). Based on the positive experience he had there, he is now working with the new Council in Clarkston.

"They not only coordinate activities on a district-wide basis, but they also report to the Council major things the Council needs to know about," LaBay said. "It's a sharing of information."

In his experience, PTO Council can serve as a leadership training ground of a sort, LaBay said.

"Members of the Council are very involved in school activities beyond their school level. In Birmingham that led to board appointments. It turned out to be a training ground for future board candidates."

So far, Wagner is pleased with the reception the council has received from the administration and school board.

"They seem very open," she said. "The fact they were very excited about the playground presentation—that was a real positive step."

The council is not expected to replace individual building PTAs or PTOs. "I think they (parents) are still going to their individual buildings, and that's fine. The presidents will bring it (the parents' concerns) here.

Wife, baby are homeless after assault

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY Clarkston News Editor

Editor's note: The names of the family at the center of this story have been changed at their Jane Smith was so angry when she left 52-2 District Court last week she had to tell her story to someone.

The tiny mother of a one-year-old boy, who looks much younger than her 23 years and speaks in a voice so quiet it's nearly a whisper, had been the victim of domestic violence, but with an unusual

When she left her home after being hit by her 27year-old husband, he changed the locks and refused to let her reclaim her belongings or move back in. When the court issued an order that he stay away from her, he had possession of their marital home. And she couldn't get it back because only his name is on the

"I can't believe this," Smith said after leaving the court room of Judge Gerald McNally. "I have a little baby and I'm homeless."

McNally ordered Smith's husband, a self-employed carpenter from Holly, to stand trial for assaulting her. But he ruled that evicting the man from his apartment went beyond the legal remedies available for assault.

Assistant Oakland County Prosecutor Susan Chrzanowski said the ruling didn't surprise her.

"At some point she did leave and he changed the locks," Chrzanowski, who is prosecuting the assault case, said. "Probably you've heard an old expression—possession is nine-tenths of the law. The judge viewed this as beyond the scope of the case.

"I will say it's an unusual situation because usually the defendent leaves the residence . . . She has no recourse . . . I certainly argued beyond that. I was concerned with the stability of the child."

Hedy Nuriel, director of HAVEN, a shelter for abused women, said the situation is really not at all uncommon.

"Usually, they change the locks and they sell everything inside," she said. "I wish I could say that's very unusual but it's not. When she does return, usually everything is gone."

'I can't believe this; I have a little baby and I'm homeless.'

Nuriel recommended Smith contact HAVEN, even if she doesn't want to move in to the shelter. HAVEN can help her when she goes to court, and can offer a weekly support group for women who are not living in the shelter.

'There she's with people who understand the problem and she'll get some help with it," Nuriel said. "It sounds like she really needs to talk to people who understand."

Chrzanowski agreed. "The assault was a slap in the face," she said. "There are problems. She will need help with counseling."

Smith has been referred to shelters but doesn't want to stay there. She doesn't want a divorce, and says her husband doesn't either.

Meanwhile, she sometimes stays with her parents, but says her father is an alcoholic and the situation is difficult. Sometimes she stays with friends, but it's tough because the baby's crib and high chair are locked in her husband's apartment. She has no job, but is hopeful after a recent interview. Her husband has said he will give her money for another apartment, but she's still waiting. Social Services is helping out in the interim.

"I would have liked possession of the apartment back since he's the one that violated me by hitting me," she said. "The baby and I should have someplace to stay."

City keeps county as its assessor

Despite a 10 percent increase in the cost, the Clarkston city couincil voted Monday night to continue to use Oakland County as the city property assessor.

The cost for 1995 will be $5,009, up from $4,383 in 1994. The county blamed the cost increase on inflation and the additional workload of Proposal A.

Taco Bell coming in November

Construction of a Clarkston Taco Bell, to be located on Dixie Hwy off Maybee Road, will begin in September with the opening expected in November.

"We chose this particular location because we felt Clarkston was an area where the demand for a Taco Bell wasn't being met," said Lashelle Chambers, real estate manager for Taco Bell.

A nail through a wire is thought to have caused a minor house fire on Tappon Street Monday morning. The homeowner, who was in the process of remodeling the house, said he just discovered the wiring when he tore down some slding. Fire officials said the 220-volt line had probably been there for 10 years and served a dryer. There were no injuries in the blaze, which was confined to the outside of the house.

Individuality rules for back to school

Clarkston COO

BY EILEEN OXLEY Clarkston News Staff Writer

What's hot?
And what's not?

That's the question teens face before they assemble their wardrobes each fall. But lucky for them, this year's looks are relaxed, casual — and individual.

According to Tena Salmons, national fashion director for men's and children's wear at K-Mart Corp. in Troy, there are a variety of styles teens can imitate and innovate.

"There's still the look of the exaggerated — over-sized knits, jeans and a lot of texture happening. It's a cleaned-up look, with clean lines and not a lot of detailing from a 'good earth' trend. It has a lot to do with people's interest in nature," she said. "You're going to see very rich dark, classic colors like forest green and wine."

Bridgette Deaton, manager of The Limited at the Summit Mall, says teens are going for those wines, plums and greens as well as navy, brown and other earth tones at her store in Waterford.

"Anything real deep — nothing pastel or light."

A new look that teen-age girls fancy this year is "that real schoolgirl kind of look." Deaton said.

"Like a lot of white blouses and jumpers — almost that private or parochial school kind of look. They're also buying a lot of the kilts, worn with over-the-knee socks that leave a little leg showing. We're probably selling about 25 pairs of those knee socks a day ... And denim, although we just have blue jeans or stone-washed denim. It's not like colored denim last year. Last year we had every color you could imagine."

Salmons and Deaton both agree that this year teen-age fashions are flexible. Many kids will be able to create their own combinations — with a little imagination.

"You have the vintage thrift-shop look—and kids can be very creative with it. Like you could have a crocheted sweater worn with a tiered multi-patterned skirt of plaid or floral designs and layers. There's what I call the 'surplus-store look' with work boots or trail boots. A lot of that focus comes from the outdoor ethnic trend.

"T-shirts are popular and there's the team or individual sports look. And the 'rescuewear' look where clothes are functional, water-proof and athletic, like camouflage and military wear.

"The handcrafted look includes baby-doll dresses, pinafores and apron dresses with open crocheted work. It comes back to '60s influence with this second thing of Woodstock happening... It's almost like the teen market goes the opposite, like it did with 'grunge.'"

SISTER AND BROTHER Erin (seated) and Michael (standing) Snyder of Clarkston share similar tastes in fashion, although they sometimes disagree with how they put themselves together. Here, they both are comfortable in jeans, white tops and plaid shirts, although Erin prefers tighter, tucked-in attire and Michael opts for what he calls "the baggy look."

Dave Chiappelli, owner and comanager of Clarkston Hair Design on Main, agrees.

"From our generation we got this Woodstock look 20 years ago. Modern mothers thought their sons were always going to wear long hair. Now, the father says, 'My son can wear his hair as long as he wants it'— and they've gone just the opposite," Chiappelli chuckled. "It's an expression of rebellion and individuality the way it's always been."

For girls, he says, hair styles are simple. Bobs are classic and always in and a new "feather-shag" gives hair more fullness and "poof." Long hair will always be classic, both straight as a stick and body-waved in loose, flowing curls.

"I think it's been around since Moses," he said, referring to body

"'Mall bangs' (where girls' bangs are teased and stick straight up) are dropping—we're getting back into beautiful hair," he said, as he "buzzed" middle-schooler Jason Hughes' head.

Jason, who will be an eighthgrader at Sashabaw Middle School this fall, came in for a haircut Thursday.

"Give him a buzz but don't shave See Cool, 7B

CLARKSTON HAIR DESIGN'S Dave Chiapelli buzzes eighth-grader Jason Hughes for a new back-to-school look. Chiapelli says this year guy's styles are longer, but still high and tight.

Milestones

Marking 50 years

John G. and Dorothy (Staber) Hyde of Clarkston celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary at an outdoor reception held August 20, 1994 at the home of their son Gregory (Kathy) Hyde in Lapeer. Guests included the couple's other son Lawrence (Kathy) Hyde; six grandchildren, Maren, Elyse, Eathan, Adam, Andrew and Aaron; and relatives and friends from as far away as Arizona. The Hydes were married in Minnesota August 26, 1944 during World War II while John served as a pilot in the U.S. Navy. Dorothy is a former "Doublemint" [Gum] twin who modeled with her late sister Doris since the pair were teenagers. John, known as "The Clarkston Carver," creates finely-crafted bird decoys for area arts and crafts festivals, including the Ann Arbor and Clarkston art fairs.

ShyLynn Jones and Kevin Cook

A note from the president

ShyLynn Jones of Clarkston and Kevin Cook of Lake Orion recently were surprised to receive letters from President Clinton congratulating them for their volunteerism.

The two youngsters both work at VA hospitals and other activities through the American Legion Chief Pontiac Post 377. They met through their grandparents.

ShyLynn is 16 and attends Clarkston High School.
She is the daughter of Cecil and Darlene Jones and the granddaughter of Lee and Leona Puckett, all of Clarkston. Kevin is the grandson of Earl and Ivy Lee Reinhardt of Lake Orion.

ShyLynn said she had no idea anyone had written to the president about her. "I was shocked," she said, of receiving the letter.

In his letter, President Clinton said, in part, "Community service is not only noble, but also necessary. We must all focus on improving our country, and volunteering within the community can help to bring about needed change . . . Together, we can change America."

Flea market scenes

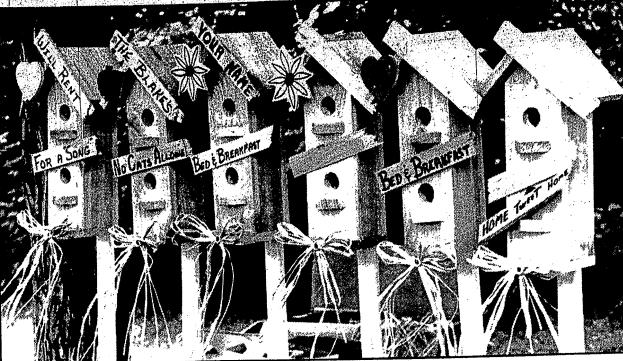

The Independence Township Senior Citizen Center sponsored a flea market and bake sale last weekend at Clintonwood Park. The weather was hot and sunny and the shopping—well, you could find just about anything.

From an ancient Polaroid camera and old hit records (anyone remember Leif Garret?) to arts, crafts and baked goods, the seniors offered it all. The worst part had to be standing around in the sun, tending tables, with no shade. The best part? We can attest to some very tasty chocolate cupcakes, a real bargain at 25 cents apiece.

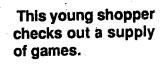

Let's hope they come back next year. AK

VERGIE MACMILLAN tended the bake sale table.

Chiapelli smiled knowingly. He knew just what to do.

"This is Dave's special high-and-tight Saudi (from the shaved military cuts given during the Persian Gulf War). Lots of times Jason gets it shaved, but since he has school pictures, He's getting it buzzed, not razor-shaved," explained Chiapelli.

"The guys are more into creative design on top. The basic thing is they all wear it graduated — and high and tight from the ear to the crown."

Chiapelli demonstrated how he buzzes most boys' hair using #3 or #4 razor blades (buzzed hair is worn longer this year), leaving a few layered locks on top.

Jason was pleased with his back-to-school look, but after scrutinizing his parted bangs in the mirror, he admitted he liked them better "straight down."

Chiapelli said typical short cuts include the "Princeton" with hair combed over in the front and the "Harvard" with sideburns cut short around a line cut. For long-hair guys, "lion cuts" are in and feature bobbed locks around the face that can be pulled back into ponytails. Out are total buzz-head cuts (the "skinhead look"), the "bowl-look," "hair-carving," except for special occasions, and the "Luke Perry"

But, where Erin likes her shirts tucked in and more form-fitting jeans, Michael opts for the "baggy look" with denims 10 sizes larger than his own in the 30's and leaves his shirt hanging out.

"She likes butt-huggers," teased Michael, 14, who will be a freshman at Clarkston High this fall. "I want baggy jeans, baggy clothes, period. I don't want butt-huggers. I hate tight pants."

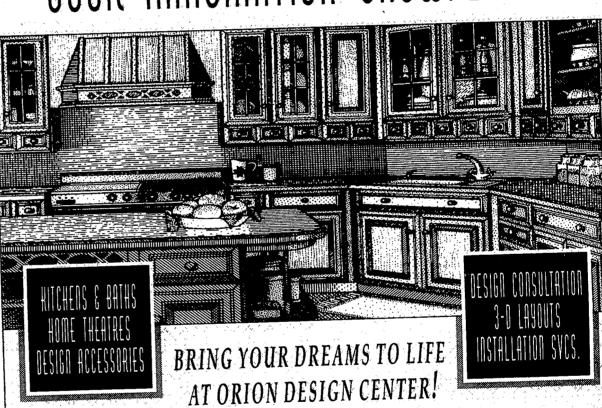

Michael, who presently wears his peroxided hair in a high-and-tight do, hopes to let it grow into a longer style below the ears. He says his clothing changes whenever he plays sports. Favorites include baseball, football, karate, skateboards and scooters.

"If you're skate-boarding you wear big pants and shirts, but with sports like baseball and football they're not as baggy," he explained.

The thrill isn't gone for B.B. King

BY EILEEN OXLEY Clarkston News Staff Writer

For blues legend B.B. King, the excitement of performing is still there — even though he has been playing his melancholy music for decades.

Since the 1950's he has released over 50 albums, almost one for each year he has reigned as "King of the Blues."

Bom Riley B. King on a Mississippoi cotton plantation in 1925, he started his music career by playing on the corner of Church and Second Streets for dimes.

Later, with $2.50 in his pocket, he and his guitar hitched a ride to Memphis where every serious Southern musician eventually migrated. There, he learned to play the blues from his cousin Bukka White, one of the most reknown rural blues performers of his

But it was during a stint in the army where King first heard the style that hooked him.

"I heard an electric guitar that wasn't playing spiritual," recalls King. "It was T-Bone Walker doing 'Stormy Monday' and that was the prettiest sound I think I ever heard in my life. That's what really started me to play the blues."

His first big break came in 1948 when he performed on Sonny Boy Williamson's radio show out of West Memphis. Later he had a ten-minute spot on the black-staffed and -managed radio station WDIA. He needed a catchy radio name and started out with Blues Boy King which eventually became shortened to B.B. King.

The story of how every one of his guitars is named "Lucille" comes from a tale during the '50s. Two men got into a fight inside a bar where King was playing and knocked over a kerosene lamp which started a fire. King realized he had left his $30 guitar inside and ran back to retrieve it, narrowly escaping death. The fight had been over a woman named Lucille. Thus, every guitar King has since owned has been dubbed the feminine appellation.

King has won everything from Grammys to Honorary Doctorates to Humanitarian Awards. He has been installed into both the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame (1987) and the Blues Foundation Hall of Fame (1980).

As one of the most revered artists of the twentieth century he is adulated and emulated by, not only his peers, but musicians a generation younger.

Those who have been subject to his influence include Eric Clapton, Jimi Hendrix, Otis Rush, Mike Bloomfield, Albert Collins, Buddy Guy,

B.B. King with his guitar Lucille

Freddie King, Johnny Winter, George Harrison, Jeff Beck and Bonnie Raitt. He was chosen by the Rolling Stones to open 18 of their American concerts in 1969.

His unique sound blends traditional blues, jazz swing, mainstream pop and jump, and his voice and guitar are richly melodic.

King feels everyone, regardless of his station in life, has a right to "sing the blues."

"I'm trying to get people to see that we are our brother's keeper. I still work on it. Red, white, black, brown, yellow, rich, poor — we all have these blues."

Based on the years of experience he acquired while walking down the road to success, King offers words of wisdom to the young and hopeful:

"From my own experience, I would say to all people — but maybe to young people, especially black and white or whatever color - follow your own feelings and trust them. Find out what you want to do and do it. And then practice it every day of your life and keep becoming what you are, despite any hardships and obstacles you meet."

And his blunt appraisal of himself? "I'm me," King told "Time Magazine" in 1969.

Blues is what I do best.

"If Frank Sinatra can be best in his field, Nat King Cole in his, Bach and Beethoven in theirs, why can't I be great — and known for it in blues?"

B.B. King headlines "Blues Festival'94" at Pine Knob Music Theatre Tuesday, August 30, at 6 p.m. The show includes special guests Little Feat, Dr. John and a tribute to Muddy Waters featuring Pinetop Perkins, Luther "Guitar Junior" Johnson, Jerry Portnoy, Bob Margolin, Willie Smith and Calvin Jones. At presstime pavilion and lawn were both available. Call The Palace at 377-0100 for more information.

Labor Day could cap safest summer

Michigan could achieve one of its safest summer holiday seasons on record if traffic fatalities during Labor Day weekend follow the pattern set on Memorial Day and July Fourth, according to AAA Michigan.

"Preliminary numbers show a total of 23 highway fatalities for the combined 1994 Memorial Day (10) and July Fourth (13) holiday weekends, which is the lowest in 32 years," said AAA Michigan Community Safety Services Manager Jerry Basch. "If the trend continues through Labor Day, Michigan can claim one of its best-ever traffic safety records for the summer holidays."

Basch said the sharp decline in summer holiday traffic fatalities actually began last Labor Day weekend.

"Although long-term trends show that the highest number of summer holiday traffic deaths usually occur during Labor Day weekend, 1993 was the exception," he said. "Last year, seven persons were killed in seven crashes on state roads, down from 19 in 1992 and the lowest number recorded for any Labor Day holiday since 1957," he said. Alcohol was a factor in three of last year's Labor Day crashes and five of the seven victims were not wearing safety belts.

More safety conscious motorists and stricter safety belt laws are factors that have contributed to the decline in holiday traffic deaths. Improved vehicle safety features also share in the credit.

"Features such as air bags, anti-lock braking systems, good outward visibility and easy-to-use safety belts have dramatically improved traffic safety during holiday weekends and overall," Basch said.

Motorists are expected to log an estimated 990 million miles on state roads this Labor Day weekend, up from 975 million miles last year.

The Michigan Department of Transportation will suspend most road work during the holiday weekend; however, holiday slowdowns usually occur at the intersection of I-75, US-23 and I-69 in Flint; I-75 and US-10 near Bay City; I-75 and US-27 near Grayling, and M-115, US-27 and US-10 near Clare.

Creating the right atmosphere at home, school

Michigan's teacher of the Year speaks from long experience

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY Clarkston News Editor

Preparing children for a successful school year isn't that difficult, according to Michigan's Teacher of the Year.

"The most successful atmosphere for students involves a supportive family and a supportive school," said Robert Van Camp, a Springfield Township resident who teaches in the Utica school district. "When you only have half of that, it makes it less likely for the student to succeed."

Van Camp said teachers can tell which students come from a home where parents are not involved in their children's lives.

"When I hear a kid say, 'My parents don't care where I go,' I know that's a breeding ground for disaster," Van Camp said. "Not just academics, but behavior problems . . . It doesn't mean just showing up at crisis time, it means showing up for activities."

Van Camp's experience as a teacher is wideranging. After earning a BA at Central Michigan University and an MA in teaching English as a foreign language from the American University in Cairo, Egypt, he taught English at the Simul International Interpreting School in Japan. He knew no Japanese when he arrived. He's now taught in the Utica schools for 11 years, and will make the leap into administration this fall. He has also coached debate and forensics.

During his career he was instrumental instarting up an East Asian Studies program at Henry Ford II High School. Students take a mixture of Japanese language and Asian social studies courses, and now have the opportunity to study in Japan at a sister school in Shinga, Michigan's sister state.

'As a teacher I can tell when there isn't a supportive family.'

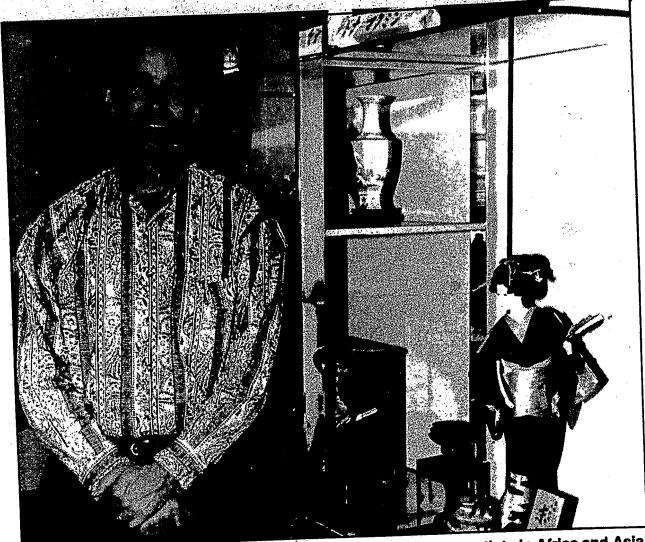

Robert Van Camp Michigan Teacher of the Year

"That's gone very well," Van Camp said. "One of the two students we have going this year is the quarterback of the football team. He so much wanted to go he gave that (football) up."

To hear Van Camptalk, developing the program was just a matter of commitment—by the school board and by teachers—to offering students a global education.

"Certainly none of our kids are going to be interpreters. But they show a knowledge level. We never guarantee a job." Some graduates have gone on to study international law and work for companies locally who trade with Japan. One former football player was offered a job selling NFL equipment in Japan.

Robert Van Camp stands with some of the memorabilia of his stints in Africa and Asia.

"Historically the Midwest is an isolated area . . even from an educational standpoint," Van Camp said. "I think it's important for our kids to know about the world. The slogan I use is to open their minds to the world and to the opportunities. They need that to be global competitors, to be good citizens."

Van Camp said no other language classes were cut to make room for Japanese. In fact, the idea to add sian studies came from the school board president and was heartily endorsed by the district's then superintendent, Don Bemis, who later went on to become state superintendent of schools.

"I think they recognized the importance of our kids knowing the world around them," Van Camp said. "The American kid is now competing with the kid from Seoul, Tokyo, Dusseldorf . . . If our school districts aren't able to produce students who have the required skills and knowledge for those employers, those employers are going to suffer."

While acknowledging that his school district has not suffered a loss in a millage request 30 years, Van Camp said Clarkston could have Japanese too-if the district decides it really wants it.

"For any program to be successful there has to be sufficient teacher interest as well," he said.

Acknowledging that his style isn't for everybody, Van Camp said he feels awkward about being chosen Teacher of the Year.

"I know there are phenomenal teachers in every single building. I don't connect with all kids; I know there are some better (teachers) out there. But it's an honor."

The honor has allowed him some special treats, such as a trip to Space Camp at Huntsville, Alabama, where he got autographs from some astronauts, attended a debriefing and even flew a plane.

"I don't get autographs of movie stars but these guys are real heroes," he said. He will also be attending a Goals 2000 conference in Washington, D.C. with President Clinton.

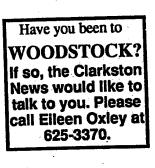

His promotion to administration is perhaps a result of his enthusiasm.

"I have a driving passion to provide the best educational atmosphere for students. I think I have something to contribute at a broader level . . .

"I certainly feel very apprehensive. I know the program will go on . . . This is a chance for me to help more students."

Nevertheless, Van Camp believes strongly that teachers, no matter how dedicated, bright and good at their jobs cannot create that perfect educational atmosphere without help from parents.

"Most important, they must provide a supportive atmosphere. That can be translated into, on a daily basis, showing an interest in what their kids are doing. That doesn't mean, 'Have you done your homework?' The more interest you show, the more likely they are to put forward their best effort."

Teach kids early about school bus safety DRIVE HOME

Riding to school on the traditional yellow bus is an exciting activity for a new student, but parents should stress safety from the beginning, says AAA Michigan.

More than 22 million pupils nationally -- including 800,000 in Michigan -- ride school buses each day, and the school bus is generally one of the safest modes of travel.

"However, in 1993, there were 1,494 motor vehicle crashes involving school buses in the state, resulting in seven deaths and 648 injuries," said AAA Michigan Community Safety Services Manager Jerry Basch.

He added that most bus crashes are minor, with casualties usually occupants of another vehicle.

"Our data strongly suggests that motorists sharing the road with school buses must be extra cautious because of frequent stops, and young children moving to and from the bus.

"As you'd expect, students are injured most often when the school bus approaches or leaves a loading area," Basch said. "Incidents usually occur when children near the bus move out of the bus driver's line of sight or dart suddenly across the street without looking. This might happen when they bend down to pick up a dropped article, or walk behind the bus.'

To ensure that the ride to and from school is as safe as possible, Basch offers these safety tips for parents of first-time school bus riders:

Make sure the student arrives at the bus stop on time.

 See that your child waits for the bus in a safe place well off the roadway. Remind him or her that horseplay can cause someone to fall or be pushed into the path of the bus or another vehicle.

Tell youngsters to remain seated while the bus is in motion.

Stress the importance of keeping aisles clear at all times. Bookbags or lunch boxes should never be left where someone might trip over them.

 Make sure your child knows the dangers of throwing things inside the stand the 10 rules of the road. They're simple to learn. Easy to follow. Re on time.

2. Never run to or from the bus. 3. Stand back from the curb. 4. Don't push or shove.

Stay in your seat.

7. Always obey the driver.

If they must cross the street, tell them to do so well in front of the bus where they can be seen by the bus driver and other drivers. Most school bus crossing procedures have students stop before crossing and continue only after the bus driver signals it is

Basch also has tips for motorists driving through school zones or on roads with school buses:

Obey posted limits in school zones.

Be alert to directions from school crossing guards.

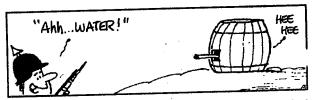

When a school bus with overhead flashing red lights is loading or unloading children, motorists must stop and remain stopped until the bus driver turns off the red overhead lights.

 Stay back at least four seconds when following a school bus.

For the 700,000 Michigan youngsters who walk or travel by personal vehicle to school, Basch advises:

Walkers should travel the safest route to school, using all available protection.

Car pools should have all occupants buckled up. Students should be able to get in and out of cars safely away from the traffic flow.

The military vehicles known as tanks are so called because during their development in World War I, their British inventors referred to them as water tanks to concal their real purpose.

One last fling

Perhaps it was the heat; perhaps it was the inevitable sensation that going back to school was just days away.

Whatever the reason, there was a big turnout for Family Night at Deer Lake Beach last week. The event, sponsored by Independence Township Parks and Recreation, featured games for the kids, lots of food and a chance to dig in the sand one more time.

Kids came in their swimsuits. They tried their hand at various games, as well as indulging in cupcakes, hot dogs and watermelon, What better way to say goodbye to the summer of 1994?

COME AND GET 'EM: A worker turns hot dogs.

DIGGING FOR BURIED TREASURE: With encouragement from parents on the sidelines, these kids dug with their bare hands into a big pile of sand, hoping for a prize.

WINNING FORM: Depending on how tall they were, kids got to try the hoops from various distances away.

THIS LUCKY WINNER in the cupcake walk makes her selection from an ocean of the frosted treats.
