School neighborhood fears dog

Rottweiler attacked once; children walking to Bailey Lake are afraid

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

There are any number of fears and apprehensions about the first day of school. Will I make new friends; will my new clothes fit in; will I like my new teacher?

But for children in one neighborhood, there is a special concern—a Rottweiler named Rudy who has already injured one neighborhood woman and her dog but who still lives in the neighborhood, just a few houses from Bailey Lake Elementary School. Area children who walk to school must walk past the dog's house unless they detour out of their way to avoid it.

Bette Opaleski was Roller Blading with her Sheltie mix C.J. last Memorial Day on Rocky's street. Rudy's owner, Jeff Stevens, was working in his yard nearby. But when Rocky saw Opaleski and C.J. coming down the street, she immediately began running toward them, despite the commands of Stevens. Neither dog was on a leash.

Jeff Stevens did not return phone calls from The Clarkston News for comment on this story. According to Opaleski, Stevens "was frantically calling the dog, so I knew we were in trouble. The dog's not even breaking stride."

With C.J. cowering in fear between her owner's feet and Opaleski on Roller Blades, they were sitting ducks. "She (Rocky) grabbed ahold of C.J., picked her up and started shaking her," Opaleski said. She herself landed face first on the pavement, injuring her face, mouth and several teeth.

After Stevens managed to kick Rocky off C.J., the Rottweiler turned his attention to Opaleski. Her fingers still bear the scars of puncture wounds, and one little finger has no feeling in it at all. Fortunately she was wearing wrist guards, which protected parts of her hands.

C.J. suffered severe injuries to her backside. She required hours of emergency surgery and frequent visits to the vet after the incident. To this day there is a bare patch on her back where hair has not grown back and the scars are clearly visible. Ironically, C.J. was already in chemotherapy for cancer when the attack took place. The injuries required a postponement of some treatments until the wounds could heal.

To this date, neither Stevens nor his insurance company have offered any compensation for Opaleski's medical or vet bills, or sympathy for their trauma, she said. A complaint was filed with Oakland County Animal Control, but the agency has so far taken no legal action.

Bette Opaleski and her Sheltie mix, C.J., are afraid to leave their yard after an attack by a neighbor's Rottweiler on Memorial Day. The fear has driven Opaleski into therapy.

"He had no control over the dog," Opaleski said. "After the attack I wondered, what if this had been a child? . . . When you live next door to an elementary school like this, there are kids all over the place . . . The dog's intent was to kill."

State law requires all dogs to be on leashes when not on their own property, said Animal Control administrator Sandy Gay. In cases where there is injury to a person, the agency can request a show cause hearing before a judge as to why the dog should not be euthanized.

"It's up to the person involved and us and the prosecutor because we have to go to the prosecutor to get the court order," Gay said. "It all depends on the circumstances. Because a dog has bitten once . . . sometimes it's tough to get them removed."

Gay said dogs are not usually euthanized for attacking another animal. "You see it all the time, unfortunately," she said. "When a dog attacks a dog that's a personal property matter (a civil suit). But when a dog attacks a person, that's another matter."

Three neighbors contacted by the Clarkston News expressed reservations about the Rottweiler in their neighborhood. Each of them signed a petition Opaleski is circulating to get the dog removed.

One neighbor, who asked that her name not be used, said she wouldn't let her kindergartner walk by the house alone. "Every time you walk by she (Rudy) lunges at the chain," she said, adding that she now escorts her daughter—carrying a golf club, just in case.

"Since the dog bite I haven't seen (the Rottweiler) outside. We're all scared of it," the neighbor said.

"I guess it's something my children have been afraid of," another neighbor said. "They've seen him barking."

Indeed, Rottweilers have become popular in recent years as guard dogs, moving ahead of German shepherds and Dobermans in popularity. Their ferocity is well documented in history. According to a recent article in the Detroit News, German butchers used to tie the proceeds from their sales to their Rottweilers' collars, where no robber would dare try to steal it.

Arkwright decides to leave city council

Confirming what had been rumor in recent weeks, incumbent Clarkston City Councilman Steve Arkwright did not file a petition for re-election by Tuesday's filing deadline.

Mayor Sharron Catallo said incumbents James Schultz and Bill Basinger filed the required signatures for one of three seats up for grabs, as did four newcomers. Arkwright's, Schultz's and Basinger's terms expire this year.

The newcomers are Ralph Savage, Walter Gamble, Kris Werner and Pamela Ford Morgan. One other resident filed a petition but it was not notarized as required by law and was thus invalid.

Though the remaining petitions were turned in on time, they are not official until the signatures are verified.

The election will be held November 7 at City Hall. Catallo said since Clarkston became a city in 1992, the ballot has been non-partisan.

COLORED INK

The news in brief

Clerk just says 'no'

A clerk at the Arbor Drugs on Sashabaw Rd. said no and then said it again when an apparently unarmed man attempted to rob her Saturday.

The man, described as a white male in his 20s, demanded the clerk open her cash register door. When she refused, he handed her a note, which was mostly unintelligible except for some swear words. When he tried to come behind the counter she again told him 'no,' at which time he fled empty-handed.

Suspicious cash

Oakland County Sheriff's deputies got a little more than they bargained for when they stopped a car for speeding on I-75 Saturday.

Neither the driver nor the passenger had any identification for themselves or the car, which they said didn't belong to them. When a deputy suggested they check the glove box, a large amount of cash was seen by the deputy.

The passenger said the cash—$7,200—was to purchase a car. Both people in the car had outstanding warrants for their arrest in other areas, but those agencies would not come and get them, so they had to be released. The driver was ticketed for traffic violations.

Kindergarten orientation

Clarkston schools have scheduled a kindergarten orientation for new registrations for Thursday, Aug. 10, 6:30-8 p.m. at Pine Knob Elementary School on Sashabaw Rd. Both parents and kindergarteners are invited to attend. Parents should bring their student's birth certificate, Social Security card, two proofs of residency and immunization records, if available.

Kroger to expand

The Kroger store on Dixie Highway in Independence Township is planning to expand.

According to Ed Nakfoor of Kroger's publicist—Marx, Layne—the store has received approval from the township planning commission to expand from 44,000 square feet to 55,000 square feet. Construction is expected to begin this fall and wrap up by early next summer.

Customers will be able to shop as usual during construction.

Nakfoor was uncertain whether any specific departments would be singled out for expansion. However, an article in last week's Detroit News/Free Press said Kroger is planning to expand its drug department in a new store in Birmingham, calling it a "combo store."

Garage shoppers search for ever-elusive find

BY PEGGY MURRAY
Oxford Leader Staff Writer

Everything old may not be made new again, but it certainly can be put to good use. And selling some of that old stuff in a garage sale can make you extra money, too.

Garage and yard sales are quite popular around the northern Oakland County area, where finds range from furniture, perfectly good baby clothes, high chairs and cribs to power tools, farm equipment, or antiques at great prices. Just check out the most recent The Oxford Leader, Clarkston News, Lake Orion Review or Ad-Vertiser and you'll find dozens of sales with all kinds of items, things you may need but prefer not to pay top dollar for new.

Mixed in with the great deals, of course, is often a lot of junk. But some junk is also known as junkie to those who can find a way put it to good use.

"It's amazing what people are going to need," said Gayle Beigler, who is staying in Addison with her in-laws. She talked her in-laws into having their first garage sale recently. "One girl bought a playpen because her friends are having babies."

Heather Shinsky of Lake Orion sat in her driveway during her sale watching ominous storm clouds. She was counting on her sale to eliminate the clutter she's accumulated.

"I was tired of having all that stuff in my house," Shinsky said. "I decided if I hadn't used it in a year — it goes."

That worked for her last year, she said. But even so she's found more things to get rid of.

"I had a sale last summer," she said, noting that one netted her $400. "It better all sell this time, because I'm not doing this again."

Shinsky joined forces with her neighbor across the street and the two placed an ad in the newspaper announcing they were having a two-family garage sale. So far, she'd done well selling clothes, jewelry, dishes.

"I always sell jewelry," Shinsky said. "I also seem to have good luck with clothes."

In addition to the obvious clutter-reducing facet of selling seldom-used items, holding a sale also is a great way to meet people who live down the road.

"You get to meet all your neighbors," Beigler said, who noted she'd made several new acquaintances. "It's a great idea to have a garage sale when you move into a new house."

Beigler, who had a driveway full of items such as sewing machines, bikes, wine carafes, shoes, clothing, drapery and furniture, had booming business, especially on Friday of her sale.

"Friday morning we were jammed non-stop from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.," she said.

But what did all those people want? Gail Montgomery of Lake Orion was just browsing.

"I just get an impulse once in a while to go garage saling — when I have things I don't want to do at home," Montgomery said. "I buy things that clutter my house. Usually old things, something unique. Once I bought a wooden foot massager with the wooden balls you run your foot over."

Evelyn Curtis of Addison Township, had all kinds of unusual, old items to sell — almost everything her late husband owned had to go so she could sell his house. Her sale was in its third week and she still had plenty more left.

Mike Moore's garage-sale draw is antiques.

As experienced shoppers know, the selection varies widely. Garage-sale proprietors try to make their ads sound as interesting as possible to draw the biggest crowds.

"Every week, I run into something different inside and bring it out," Curtis said.

A former caterer, she said her kitchen items went quickly, trays, wine sets, cast iron frying pans.

Curtis said she's got to get rid of decades worth of stuff before she can sell the house, but since she's got to be there anyway, her family has been adding to the stash.

"Some of these things are (my daughter's), some are mine," she said, her hand gesturing to the garage packed with oil paintings, Popular Science magazines, records books, men's clothing, mason jars, glassware and much more.

"Everyone's looking for antiques, knick knacks," Curtis said. "I put out a wine set and a woman walked in and bought it right away."

Other garage sale holders say the same thing. Many visitors are hoping to make "the find," get something valuable for practically nothing. And, according to some garage sale experts, that's always a possibility.

"(Some) things you consider excess junk are valuable collectibles," writes Bob Berko, author of "Holding Garage Sales for Fun and Profit."

"For instance, old comic books, Barbie dolls in good condition, and other toys, and, of course, some baseball cards . . . The problem is that unless you know or attract someone who collects the particular item, it is not valuable."

Mike Moore of Oxford knows the value of the antiques he was selling at his recent sale. His wife Sandy Moore has an antique refinishing business. Although she mostly displays her refinished pieces at the Cross-Eyed Cow in downtown Oxford, sometimes she gets an overflow and sells them from her home.

"Usually tables and chairs and beds are pretty popular," Mike Moore said. "As for the small stuff, anything unique or cute goes fast. Book cases are pretty popular too."

He said he tries to have a little something for everyone at his sales — toys and books for kids, tools and such for the men — in addition to the antiques.

Not being far from M-24 helps bring in drive-by traffic to Moore's sales, he said. But often customers come from newspaper ads, Moore said.

"We get a lot of (antique) dealers," he said.

Hints for planning a sale

Once you've decided to have a sale — garage, yard, barn or rummage — make sure you clean up furniture, wash clothing, make items presentable.

Put prices on every item, set up tables in a well-organized, friendly way, suggests Bob Berko, author of "Holding Garage Sales for Fun and Profit."

You'll also want to make sure you have enough big items to draw shoppers — for example furniture, lamps, baby items.

Advertising is imperative.

If using a newspaper, "make sure your ad tells the reader you are having a garage sale, the location, dates, opening and closing hours and any information that will make the sale sound attractive," Berko states.

Well-placed signs also draw drive-by traffic, but check with your local government office for restrictions.

Make sure to be on the lookout for thieves.

One Independence Township woman found out the hard way that some shoppers want more than just a bargain. On July 29, two women and three kids came to her sale. They asked for change, determined she had only 20-dollar bills, then bombarded her with questions to distract her. When they left she discovered her money pouch containing about $135 was gone.

Berko suggests keeping your money on your person and putting the excess in the house several times a day.

Money isn't the only thing that may turn up missing.

Keep a close eye on browsers, especially those who pick up item after item. If possible have a friend on hand to help you monitor the sale so even if you get busy, you won't get ripped off, Berko suggests.

For you shoppers, make sure you check the merchandise out. If it's electrical test it using an outlet, Berko says.

Avoid buying things you don't need or that you don't love. Otherwise you'll find you've just stocked up enough clutter that you'll have to have your own garage sale.

School board president plans to listen

Knowing he can't please everyone, Bill Craig says he'll facilitate accord

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

The new president of the Clarkston board of education looks upon his role as something of a mediator, not a power broker.

Bill Craig, who succeeded Tom Howard as president last month, said he doesn't see the job as a political move, but rather a natural progression from vice president, the role he served in last year.

"I look at the role as being somewhat of a facilitator," he said. "Seven people come together for the common good, to make the best decision for the common good."

Craig, who has served two years on his first four-year term of office, is a 30-year Clarkston resident. He was chairman of the Springfield Plains bond committee and Clarkston Elementary PTO president before being elected to the board of education. He and his wife have two children; Nick, 11, who will be attending Clarkston Middle School this fall, and Matt, 8, who attends Clarkston Elementary.

Craig cites growth as his number-one concern.

"We have to be very much prepared for the growth that's coming," he said. "We watched it happen in Rochester; we watched it happen in Farmington, and now it's here."

As board president, Craig has already been on the hot seat with parents unhappy about some partial redistricting being considered for this fall. Week after week, they appear before the board to express dissatisfaction with how the board is handling the overcrowding problem. It's Craig's job to listen and respond.

Bill Craig

With a long background in sales (he works for Ameritech), Craig has been in that role before.

"I consider myself a pretty easy-going person," he said. "People don't agree with me all the time and you can't take it personally... I think you listen to all the opinions; you listen to everybody's viewpoints... My skills allow me to listen because that's what sales is all about."

Craig has already begun to work on how the board works—that is, its method of conducting meetings and accomplishing its goals. He suggested several committees be established, some of which the board favored, some which were deemed by the other trustees to be unnecessary or unwise.

The board is also considering one or two retreats which will focus on their relationships with each other and with the administration.

"We need to do some team-building on the board," Craig said. "Part of it we need to interact back and forth."

Beyond boardsmanship, Craig is also concerned about curriculum—in his words, "the whole reason we're here." While many things have been put back that were cut a few years ago, he said, "We'll continue to look at what are we preparing students for. We have to continue to look at spending. We have adequate funding now (but) we have to make sure we get the biggest bang for our buck."

Another high priority is the new high school. Craig wants to make sure it's done right.

"Any time anybody has a $56 million building project someone has to be concerned about getting it done on time," he said.

When it opens, some three years from now, the new high school will free up some space. But in the mean time, the overcrowding situation will not go away. While the board has approved some portable classrooms and will mount a bond campaign sometime in the coming year, Craig said other options must be explored.

"We have to look at a new elementary, leasing, reuse of old buildings. We have to really review very closely—are there better ways of using existing facilities now that we have a new facility." He is also concerned about an overcommitment to new buildings.

"Whatever we do, I can guarantee it's not going to be perfect," he said. "We will continue to try to address the needs of the public."

Cherished statue missing from Conservatory

BY EILEEN OXLEY
Clarkston News Staff Writer

For years students at the Clarkston Conservatory, as well as the late Ivan Rouse's friends, enjoyed looking out the back windows at Rouse's beautiful garden. One item that graced that area, a hand-crafted statue of St. Cecilia, patron saint of musicians, watched over them.

But now the precious statue, which has sentimental as well as monetary value, is missing.

Clarkston Police Chief Paul Ormiston said he was called Sunday by Dorothy Koop, sister of Rouse. Koop was contacted by an instructor from the conservatory after Nancy Humphreys, a piano teacher, noticed the missing July 27. Humphreys was unable to contact Koop immediately because she was out of town. And, she wondered if Koop had removed the statue "for safe keeping."

Humphreys said at one time she had removed some busts of composers that were also outside because they were light and she was afraid they would be stolen.

Rouse, former owner and music instructor of the Clarkston Conservatory, died in October. Humphreys said he had kept the statue in his backyard garden for many years.

"She was quite tall, about life-size and greenish," Humphreys said, referring to the statue on Monday. "She was there during lavish string ensembles, Scott Joplin, Chopin ... like everybody else."

Humphreys did some checking and found the statue was made especially for Rouse by a friend, the renown late sculptor Gino Testaguzza, who also created the statue of St. Joseph which stands in front of St. Joseph Catholic Church in Lake Orion.

After talking to Testaguzza's daughter, Humphreys said that although Testaguzza would often do a prototype and cast copies from the original, the 5-foot, 6-inch sculpture of St. Cecilia "was designed especially for Ivan. His daughter remembers that they were dear, dear friends. She was very sad."

Humphreys recalled that Rouse, known and beloved for his "Ivanisms" and endearing eccentricity, said the sculpture was really an image of the Virgin Mary, but Rouse decided to change it, calling it St. Cecilia because of his love for music.

"It was one of Ivan's little adjustments to life," she said, fondly. She likened Ivan's home to that of Mole, a character from popular children's book "The Wind in the Willows." Like the mole's home, Humphreys said, Ivan's was also alive with "little, heavenly," one-of-a-kind pieces that are irreplaceable.

Besides the sculpture, two cement urns were reported missing. Humphreys said that Testaguzza stopped sculpting in the '70s, but when he was active his pieces were valued at "$1,000 and up."

"I am shocked and saddened. It was a cruel thing to do," Humphreys said, referring to the suspected larceny. "It was kind of a community thing. It was very precious to (Ivan). I hope somebody feels bad enough to return it — no questions asked."

A reward will be given to anyone who has information leading to the whereabouts of the statue. Those who have any information are advised to call the Clarkston Police Department at (810) 625-0088.

Year's first case of EEE detected

Michigan's first case this year of Eastern Equine Encephalitis, commonly known as sleeping sickness, has been diagnosed in a horse in Jackson County and confirmed by the Animal Health Diagnostic Laboratory at Michigan State University, according to Dr. Gordon Guyer, Director of the Michigan Department of Agriculture.

This follows a report last week of the first human case detected this year in a Kalamazoo County man who became ill in late June. He has since recovered. Five residents in Michigan's southern lower peninsula have contracted EEE since 1990.

Dr. Michael Chaddock, State Veterinarian and Director of MDA's Animal Industry Division, said, "The EEE virus is transmitted through freshwater swamp mosquitoes to horses, other equine and humans. It can cause brain inflammation in horses where the fatality rate often reaches 90 to 95 percent."

Horses and humans get the disease only from mosquitoes that feed on birds and mammals. Vaccinations are available for horses.

The Michigan Department of Public Health urges residents in the southern lower peninsula to avoid contact with mosquitoes.

"For all horse owners, I recommend discussing vaccinations and insect repellents with your veterinarian now and when warm weather returns next spring," said Chaddock. Individuals interested in knowing more about EEE infection in humans should contact their physician.

The Clarkston News

In Focus

by Annette Kingsbury

Who got rich off the taxpayers, and why doesn't anyone mind?

A recent story broadcast on "60 Minutes" really brought home to me who profited and who lost in the scandal over derivatives, or collateralized mortgage investments.

As readers may know, Independence Township has lost some $3.5 million in the value of its investment portfolio based upon these risky, mortgage-backed investments. A number of experts the township recently interviewed said there is no way to recoup that investment, that they'd better sell as soon as possible so it doesn't get any worse.

The "60 Minutes" program asked, at the very end, where all the money had gone that so many governmental and other nonprofit entities had lost. The reporter confessed that he had no idea. Well, recent information disclosed about Independence Township revealed that the two brokers involved in the transactions made $500,000 one year off those deals.

Now we all know that's how brokers make their money, but personally I was appalled that they could profit so certainly while taking non-profit entities to the cleaners.

The report showed how computer trading has literally taken over Wall Street, with investors able to put money in virtually any scheme that can be programmed. Want to gamble that the British pound will fall versus the Japanese yen, or vice versa? You can invest in that. Create your own designer investments.

In the case of the CMOs, the township bet on mortgage interest rates. Since interest rates have risen sharply in recent months, the investments have lost value dramatically. The experts are not predicting that interest rates will fall dramatically like they did early last year, allowing the township to sell the securities and recoup some of their loss.

I know everybody is out to make a buck—it's the American way. But there's something about this picture I have of these two individuals, who, according to township treasurer John Lutz sold him down the river, that is bothering me. They had no risk. They could offer the worst advice in the world and still walk away with a pocketful of change.

If your doctor gave you the wrong medicine you could sue. Ditto your lawyer giving bad legal advice. So now the township is in the arbitration process, trying to build a case that shows they were duped. Again, a funny process. They have to prove they were stupid to win the case.

In the year or so since this story first broke, there has been precious little hue and cry from the taxpayers. Maybe, like me, they were surprised at the size of the township's portfolio. Maybe, since no services have been cut and the township is moving forward with expensive projects like the police/fire hall, they figure there is nothing to worry about. Maybe since Proposal A people have stopped complaining about their property-tax bills.

But think about it; $3.5 million. That's a lot of tax dollars. Why is no one upset? Why are there no recall campaigns? Why is no one being held accountable?

Like the guy on "60 Minutes," I have no idea.

Competition's fine but let's get real

By James A. Sherman,
President of Sherman Publications, Inc

Most of us have heard the word "mega" often enough to know it means something much bigger than large.

We at Sherman Publications were slammed upside the head last week by a mega-media with mega bucks.

We thought our Oxford Leader, Lake Orion Review and Clarkston News were doing good jobs of presenting news and advertising for our readers and advertisers.

Circulation is up for all three of our papers, which is a pretty good judge of acceptance by the community. Advertising is up, which means advertisers are reasonably satisfied.

Thirteen years ago The Clarkston Reminder came out to compete with our Clarkston News. Competition is good for everybody, they said.

A few years ago the mega-media giant Cap Cities bought the Reminder newspapers and started the Oxford-Orion Reminder, going against the Lake Orion Review and Oxford Leader. Competition is good for everybody, they said.

Last week another mega-media giant, Suburban Communications, Livonia, which owns more newspapers in Michigan than any other company, started weekly newspapers against the Reminders AND our three weekly newspapers. Sub-Com president (he owns the joint) Philip Powers said, "Competition is good for everybody."

Lovely!

Each of our newspapers, The Leader, The Review and The News print more local news in each community than the Reminder and Eccentric newspapers COMBINED.

But, more local news is really only the bait, the lure... something all three of us brag about to readers, hoping to convince them to read only our paper so advertisers will spend more money with us than the other guys.

Is there anyone who thinks The Reminders, owned by the biggest communication company in the world, Disney/Cap Cities/ABC television, and Suburban Communications, owners of 27 newspapers and some shoppers in Michigan and several papers in Ohio, start newspapers to print only news?

We all publish newspapers to make money which enables us to print news. At this time our newspapers in Clarkston, Orion and Oxford have the resources to print the most news in each community.

Our two competitors want that advantage. Suburban Communications, which will soon claim having the largest circulation of any newspaper in Oakland County, will increase advertising rates to current advertisers, justifying the increase with added circulation, though the papers are given away for the most part.

Jim's Jottings

By Jim Sherman

War ended 50 years ago, August 14, 1945

With the coming of the 50th anniversary of the end of the war in the Pacific I'm prompted to write another war story. Actually, you will have had to be a very long time reader of Jottings to remember my last war story.

When our B-29 dropped THE bomb on Hiroshima August 6, 1945 I was in Saipan, a little island in the Marianas, not far from Guam. I was a seaman on AKA 86, a cargo carrying ship with a couple dozen landing craft aboard.

We had just come from Kerama Retto, a little island very close to Okinawa. We had picked up a load of ammunition in Hawaii to deliver to our forces fighting on Okinawa.

We sat in this atoll from June 24 to July 15 with our holds full of explosives, though at 19 I was too young to worry about it. Only the nights prompted concern. Nightly raids by the Japanese. Nightly smoke screens that left the decks oily. Nightly sirens and manning battle stations. My station was being a messenger for the captain, Winston Folk.

Then, July 15, 1945 we left the battle area for Saipan, still with our ammunition. We went over to Guam for a couple weeks, then returned to Saipan. Our ship was sitting out of the harbor amongst some bigger ships on that great day, August 14, 1945, when the captain announced the Japanese had surrendered.

The international dateline made it August 15 here, but to me the war ended August 14, 1945.

With the captain's announcement all hands came up on deck to cheer, shake hands, light up a cigar and look out at the fleet. We could see the cruisers' huge guns start to swing out toward the open sea, preparatory to a banging good celebration.

They didn't get swiveled all the way when another sharp announcement came... "There will be no firing of guns."

I still don't think officers know how to celebrate.

It wasn't so long after the war that I reasoned why we didn't unload our ammunition at Okinawa. Our leaders knew something no one else did. We had a weapon that could end the war and there was no reason to put these 50 mm, 3-inch, 5-inch etc shells ashore.

For me the "war" of my war story is short lived, only a few weeks. Hopefully, there will be no war stories for the current generation and for all future generations.

One aside: I called my Navy buddy Gordon Steck in Whitewater, Wisconsin to verify my facts and he also recalled one day in Great Lakes Boot Camp when we were in knot-tying school.

The instructor yelled, they never just spoke, "You can't go to sea until you learn to tie knots!"

Neither Gordon nor I learned to tie knots, and we were at sea 14 months.

A look back

15 YEARS AGO (1980)

Candidates selected at Tuesday's primary by a 25-percent turnout of the township's registered voters are Karen Herron (D) and incumbent Christopher Rose (R) who are slated to run for township clerk. In the township trustee race, the four top vote-getters on the Republican ticket are Lawrence Kozma, William Vandermark, Daniel Travis and Dale Stuart. Guy Z. Denberry is the sole Democrat, running unopposed for a trustee seat. In the race for township supervisor Floyd Tower (D) and James Smith (R) are unopposed. Vying for township treasurer, Fred Ritter (D) and Carol Balzarini (R) are also unopposed.

Three of four millage proposals are approved on the primary ballot as well. A 1-mill fire tax increase, an annual 1/2 mill for safety path construction and maintenance and a 10-year renewal of a 1-mill tax that pays for police protection are approved. Not passed is a proposed 1-mill police millage increase which would have been collected over the next 11 years.

Each day the first ride of the proposed "Wonderful World of Pine Knob" continues to operate, co-owner Joseph Locricchio receives a ticket from Independence Township. Efforts by the township to encourage Locricchio to submit a final site plan have failed, but Locricchio says he is not required to submit the plan. He says the ride is not permanently grounded. "The plan is not designed for rides that are meant to be in one exact spot." He adds that the township is harassing him by issuing the tickets. "The township can keep issuing tickets until it gets writers' cramps," he says.

25 YEARS AGO (1970)

It is announced that this year's Clarkston High School varsity football players will begin their conditioning sessions August 17. A new state ruling provides one extra week of conditioning with no pads or contact, just the use of helmets. Football camp for 60-80 men is scheduled at Dr. James O'Neil's home beginning August 24. Practice will officially begin August 31.

50 YEARS AGO (1945)

Specials at Rudy's Market this week include Lipton Noodle Soup, three packages for 29 cents; Gro-Pup dog food, a box for a quarter; Camay Soap, three bars for 19 cents; Sani Flush, a large box for 19 cents; Del Monte Coffee, 34 cents a pound; and fly swatters, two for 17 cents.

Playing at the Holly Theatre are "The Affairs of Susan," starring Joan Fontaine, George Brent, Dennis O'Keefe and Walter Abel, and "And Now Tomorrow," with Alan Ladd, Loretta Young and Susan Hayward. At the Drayton Theatre are "National Velvet," with Mickey Rooney and Jackie Jenkins and "Song To Remember," starring Merle Oberon and Paul Muni.

News from "By the Way": The summer is slipping by and it will soon be time for the schools to open. According to an article in this issue of the paper, the local school is almost in readiness ... We've all heard of "Moving Day" but this seems to be "Moving Week" on Holcomb St. the Grant Coopers of Oak Hill Rd. purchased the Larion house and moved into it on Thursday.

60 YEARS AGO (1935)

Clarkston's newly formed Van Rancelor Vliet Post No. 3323 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars plans to sponsor a good old-fashioned Homecoming August 30 and 31. Businessmen in the community are cooperating in an effort to have a homecoming that should mean much to former residents who may journey here for the celebration. Planned are midway attractions, two ball games, races, contests, games and a pet parade. Village residents are encouraged to write to friends who have moved and invite them home for the occasion.

Johnny Wohlfeil of Clarkston, driving Glen Terry's car called "Hisso Special," wins the National Championship August 4 before an estimated 6,000 people at the 1/2 mile semi-bank dirt track in Greenville, Ohio. Starting in 13th place, Wohlfeil takes the lead in lap 7 and holds it for most of the 100 laps, finishing several laps ahead of his nearest competitor. He receives a silver cup for his achievement.

Specials at Kroger's this week include Wondemut Oleo, two pounds for 29 cents; Post Bran Flakes, a large package for 15 cents; Jack Sprat hams, 29 cents a pound; Sunbrite Cleanser, three cans for 13 cents; iceberg lettuce, a nickel a head; and bananas, five pounds for a quarter.

Old neighborhood being shot up

According to a recent newspaper report out of Port Huron: "They drive by and shoot; they don't care," said Chuck Hill, who lives near the scene of one shooting on Ontario Street. "I'm afraid to go to sleep."

"I don't even let my (three) kids out of the house after dark," said Robert Main, who lives on Stanton Street. "It ain't safe."

Ontario Street? Stanton Street? In Port Huron? Stop the world. I want to get off.

My best buddy, Dick Deveraux, used to live on short Ontario Street, near where it ended on the north side of downtown, just past Stanton Street, only a few feet from my front yard. During school months, we walked two round-trips every weekday on Ontario to St. Stephen School.

This was before the invention of school cafeterias, and a one-hour lunch break was plenty of time to go home to eat, just as long as you didn't sit down, but only slowed down, to chew.

Sometimes we walked on adjacent Erie Street, when I had to stop at Hess & Son's Grocery Store to pick up food my mother had ordered earlier by phone. No money required.

At the end of every month, my father would walk into the store's dinky office, sit down at Tommy Hess's desk, pull out the records, total up his own bill, write a check and leave it where Tommy would find it. Try that today at your nearest supermarket.

My newspaper route included Stanton Street, where I often delivered papers and played such outdoor games as hide and seek after dark. I felt safer out there than at home, where I was usually in trouble for something bad a nun accused me of doing in school. In those days, if a teacher said a kid had misbehaved, that was it, case closed. Strap the kid in the electric chair.

That was in the 1930s, when our neighborhood's nastiest street crime was committed by the milk man's horse. Today, on those same streets, gang warfare "has turned quiet neighborhoods into battlefields," according to the newspaper article.

On July 8, for instance, 18-year-old Jason Wyrembelski was shot dead by a rival gang member, according to police, not far from my family home on Pine Grove Ave. And we lived next door to the mayor.

"We knew they had firearms; now we know they're willing to use them against each other," Police Capt. James Carmody said. "They've stepped up into the realm of capital crimes."

Obviously, without always-available guns and the National Rifle Association, there would be no progress in murdering. On the streets where I grew up, culturally-deprived residents would still be fretting about drive-by fistfights.

But cheer up, there's better news. Plus bitter irony. Around the same time Jason Wyrembelski was gunned down, it was announced that Hudson's will build a department store in Port Huron.

Wow. When I was little, the greatest thing a Port Huron kid could do was travel 60 miles on Gratiot to downtown Detroit to see Santa Claus at Hudson's. A nice neighbor named Clara Embury would regularly take my sisters and me to the wondrous big city.

Simply riding the crowded escalators in that huge, dazzling store was the most exciting experience imaginable. If someone had told me then that someday there would be a Hudson's in little Port Huron, I would have said liar, liar, pants on fire.

Today no one goes to downtown Detroit Hudson's because it closed 13 years ago for lack of business. Violent street crime got much of the blame. So Hudson's is coming to Port Huron, where the shooting is beginning to sound like Detroit.

Don't Rush Me

By Don Rush

Whoomph, whoomph, whoomph

As kids, the sisters and I loved to play in the rain. For most of our childhood we lived in Independence Township; our house was built on the side of a hill.

When we had the hard, summer rain storms we'd head out in our bathing suits, run as fast as our little legs would take us and then slide down the rain drenched hill.

It was a lot of fun. We had our own slip and slide before the toy manufacturer marketed their plastic version.

But that was as a kid. As an adult I reckon that playing in the rain is, well, un-adult-like. So why then did I play golf in the rain this past weekend?

A better, and more probing question is, why do I play golf at all? It surely isn't because I'm good at it. In the words of some of my college chums, I "SUCK!"

What is it about this stupid game, invented by the Scots, that keeps attracting me back to the links?

WHOOMPH, WHOOMPH, Whoomph, whoomph is the sound of my five iron swirling away from my outstretched arms -- usually straighter and farther than my golf ball.

Oh sure, I took lessons last season, but that just improved my club throwing by about 10 yards.

I can just picture the golf gods, in their little plaid kilts, sitting in the brush and laughing. "Ah laddies, did ye get a good look at that one."

They must have cast some sort of spell on me. Curse their red beards!

And yet, as much as I suck at the game, there I was whacking away at that stupid little, white dimpled ball, as the rain game down from the heavens.

Prior to the golf lessons I was what some called Kid Slice. Everything I hit careened to the right. Now, you might as well call me Captain Hook. Everything seems to go 90 degrees to the left.

Go figure.

I don't even use my woods any more. I just carry them around in my bag to look good -- those along with most of my clubs. Me, I use the five iron, the seven iron, and the putter -- and of course range balls on any course that has water.

The others in my foursome wanted to head to the clubhouse because of the rain. I, for some reason, did not. Something burned inside and told me I must stay. Stay and embarrass myself one more hole.

Let the rains fall, just one more hole. Despite another stellar performance, the great number of swings, lost balls and flying sod, I actually had a fun time. (For the record I shot a 54 -- on nine holes).

It wasn't my game, it must have been the rain. Too bad I couldn't bring myself to slide down the hill on Number Seven.

Ask the therapist by Stan Garwood, MA, MSW, DCSW

Dear Mr. Garwood,

Over the years, I've been troubled with bouts of depression. Sometimes they are your garden variety, which I am sure most everyone puts up with from time to time. However, once or twice a year I lose interest in most things, have difficulty sleeping and my concentration lapses. I have all I can do to pull myself out of it. The depressions seem to last longer each time.

I realize there are medications for this, but I would rather abstain from taking them. Does talking out your problems to a therapist really work?

Signed,

Depressed in Springfield

Dear Depressed in Springfield:

Yes it does! I can base this answer on my own observations. However, I believe you will find the following study more than confirms this.

In a six year, $10 million study involving 240 patients, short-term therapy proved just as effective as medication in relieving depression in over half these patients. This study is one of the first to provide conclusive evidence that talk therapy works.

This study was conducted by the National Institute of Mental Health utilizing two types of brief psychotherapy (16 weeks) and one anti-depressant medication. The two talk therapies used were cognitive psychotherapy and interpersonal. These two types of therapy were chosen because they are brief, very definable and both have been tested and found effective. The drug treatment group was given imipramine.

Great care, time and expense went into the design and conduct of this research study. It was "double blind," meaning that neither the therapists nor the subjects knew the important variables to be studied.

Even though the final analysis has not been completed, the results so far have established beyond doubt that talking psychotherapy works. Symptoms were eliminated in 50 to 60 percent of the patients who received one of the three treatments. Imipramine treatment produced quicker results but the talk therapy caught up in three months.

I anticipate this information will clarify for you that talk therapy does work and that you do not necessarily require medication to deal with your depression.

Good luck and let me know how it works out. Send questions to Stan Garwood, 5854 S. Main, Clarkston, MI 48346.

Heritage Hunt II by Virginia Block

The exciting reports of vacationers are providing many tales to be told in the Sept. 14 meeting of the Pontiac Area Historical and Genealogical Society.

Member Barbara Frye traveled to Greece, France and Italy and came home with 24-plus rolls of film.

Her journey was not for research, but she has documented her Monette (Monet and other variant spellings) that in addition to DAR eligibility goes back to Huguenot lineage and beyond.

Frances Peterson, having a visit to the Eby line ancestral spots in Pennsylvania, was thrilled to add a fascinating story as she visited a "6th cousin" on the Spencer connection. The story in National Geographic, Dec 1994, relates the adventures of Gen. (or Admiral, since both titles apply) Semmes, who is the ancestor of Fran's cousin. Gen. Semmes was a Confederate officer in the Civil War, and plied the seas destroying ships that were carrying supplies to aid the Yankee cause.

His compassion toward the crews resulted in their removal to Semmes' vessel before he destroyed their ship, and then the crew would be freed at the next port of embarkment. "Tis said he never took human life, only retained the "stores."

There is a recent book with this picturesque story, and a coloring book purchased for one of Fran's grandchildren carried this "hero" of Fran's family. She is a member of DAR on many Revolutionary ancestors and, if I'm not incorrect, also qualifies for membership in the Mayflower Society.

Ray Elkins, and his late wife Julia, visited England a few years ago and purchased a small tile in the town boasting the location where the Pilgrims departed in 1620 for "the colonies."

It was recently discovered by Ray that the tile, although small in size, carries the names of all the males that were on the Mayflower, giving the craft of many. Ray discovered one of the names listed included his ancestor, "William Lathrop, servant boy."

The 46 names listed may be well known to many of you, but if you would like a zerox copy of Ray's list, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and your request to my home address, and include your name, address and phone number on a note inside the letter.

My address is: Virginia Block, 2911 Olden Oak Ln #201, Auburn Hills, MI 48326-2149.

We welcome back Faye Donelson, and Josephine Harlan, who traveled to Alaska in July.

Happy Hunting.

Competition's fine but let's get real

Reminder newspapers is the primary target of Suburban Communications.

We may not be primary, but there are just so many advertising dollars out there. We will certainly feel the effect, especially if these two mega-monied companies decide to have price and give-away wars.

In the meantime, newspaper readers in north Oakland County, who have a limited amount of time to read newspapers, now have much more available news than they can consume.

In my opinion the added competition is not good for everybody. The addition of more newspapers puts more words in readers hands, but no one will read them all.

Since The Leader, Review and News have always brought their readers more local news than provided by any other source, competition for news wasn't needed... it's just someone thinks they see an opportunity to make more dollars.

We understand that part. We just wish they'd say it like it is.

People poll

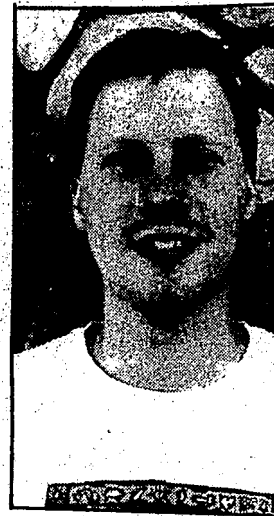

By Alison Oxley

Are you looking forward to going back to school?

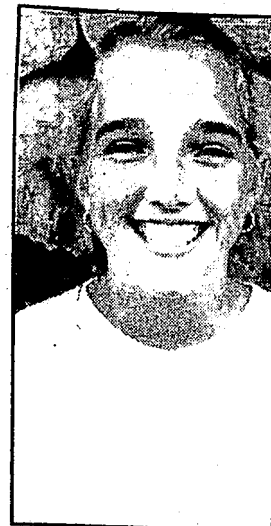

A N D R E A SIMONELLI, 10TH GRADE, CHS: I'm looking forward to it. I like seeing my friends and getting back into the old routine. In the beginning there's not a lot of work. Summer gets boring. I'm not one of those people who hates school.

SCOTT TUDOR, OAKLAND UNIVERSITY: Actually, I'm taking classes right now at OU so it won't be too bad. I'm not actually looking forward to going back 'cause I've lost my summer.

M E A G E N SCHROEDER, 10TH GRADE, CHS: Sort of, because I get to see all my friends 'cause some of them go away for the summer. In other ways, no, to do all the work ...

LEIF GRAHAM, 9TH GRADE, CHS: No. School's boring. Too easy.

The following took place at the Aug. 1 meeting of the Independence Township Board of Trustees:

● A public hearing on the special assessment roll for Clarkson Office Center's water hook-up is set for Aug. 15.

The SAD was agreed upon by developers of the office center in 1987. The contract states that as soon as community water service became available, the office center would pay for hook-up.

The Independence Township Board of Trustees approved the date for the hearing at its Aug. 1 meeting.

The cost estimate for water hook-up, already approved by the board on June 6, is about $86,200.

● The board passed a resolution in support of a state house bill that would combine and limit when elections could be held.

Township clerk Joan McCrary said this is the "first step" in helping local units of government deal with an ever-increasing number of elections. The resolution states that each unit of government could have elections on three dates, including the first Tuesday following the first Monday in May, August and November.

The bill, as proposed, includes state, county and local elections. It does not include school elections because they operate under separate state laws, although McCrary said she would hope they also follow suit.

McCrary said limiting and combining elections will reduce election costs (which average $10,000 per election) and hopefully eliminate voter confusion over precinct locations and voting dates.

● Two new members were appointed to the downtown development authority. Randy Hosler and Gary Haner will replace John Bowman and Steve Lenar.

The terms will be short-lived as the DDA will end in 1996, as required by state law.

Letters to the editor

B&B a service

Letter to the Editor,

After all the months of controversy regarding a Clarkston Bed & Breakfast, I wish to offer this testimonial.

My parents, who are in their 80s, can no longer climb stairs, therefore making it impossible to stay in our home when they visit. This past month they came for our daughter's wedding and were able to stay at the Millpond Inn. Buck and Joan made them feel like part of their family. They were so pleased with the accommodations and the day of the wedding I was glad they even had a place to have breakfast.

Over the past five years my parents have had several very unpleasant experiences at hotels at least one half-hour from Clarkston.

Thank you so very much for providing this community with a much-needed "Millpond Inn."
Jeanne Molzon

We all need nurses

I was saddened and dismayed by a report in Sunday's paper from some economic policy institute that suggested reducing the number of nurses in a hospital does not compromise quality care and indeed the patients seemed to be happier.

Sort of like a school where you get rid of all the teachers and the students are certainly not wiser but maybe temporarily happier.

I would like to set the record straight regarding excellent quality care at all levels of medicine, including the hospitals. There are no gimmicks or short cuts to something called experience, devotion, caring and clinical judgment of experienced registered and licensed nurses, x-ray and lab techs and the many people who make up the professional staff of a hospital.

I know there are many worthwhile innovations with computers and monitors and some high-tech people, but you will never replace the wisdom, experience and clinical judgment and caring of a nurse who must and does continue to monitor and make life-and-death adjustments and brings this all together whether the computers are "up" or "down" or we have a glitch, like the air controllers in Chicago recently.

Your very life and well-being are fortunately and literally in the capable hands of our devoted RNs.

I vote to reduce paper and "busy" work and the many unnecessary reports so that we all can take better care of you.

"Ninety-day replacements" are suspect and should make us all wonder are we talking "cheap" or high-quality medical care.

Sincerely,

James A. O'Neill, M.D.

Give B&B time

Dear Editor and Clarkston News readers:

My husband and I have read with interest the trials and tribulations that Buck and Joan Kopietz have endured over the long-awaited opening of their bed and breakfast in the City of the Village of Clarkston.

You may recall that some three or four years ago, we sent a letter to The Clarkston News endorsing their proposal and attempting to enlighten readers as to the obvious benefits of such a venture in Clarkston.

Now, hailing from New England, we are very aware of families opening their homes as innkeepers to offer a homestyle accommodation and supplement their income. Frankly, I could not think of a "use" more suitable for the former Goyette Funeral Home than that venture which Buck and Joan have worked so tirelessly to achieve.

Congratulations! May their new bed and breakfast be well supported and received by the local residents and their out-of-town guests. We believe that in time, the locals will grow to appreciate what an asset a B&B can be to a community in providing revenue for retail and restaurant establishments, to say nothing of there finally being somewhere with charm for a visitor to lay their weary head in Clarkston!

Victims here too

In the wake of the Oklahoma bombing, the planned execution of hundreds of federal workers and children, the words "how awful" and "those poor, innocent people" have resounded from the lips of each of us.

On April 24, 1995 Common Ground held a noon commemoration at the Oakland County Commissioners' Auditorium for victims of violent crime in honor of National Crime Victims' Rights Week. The Oakland Press, The Detroit News and Free Press, the Metro Times and the Reminder were not in attendance. The television stations who have broadcast the vivid stories of victims and stated their support were not there.

In addition to saying "how awful" or "those poor, innocent people" the next time you hear about violent crime on the television or radio, also ask yourself what you can do to help-victims of violent crime in Oakland County.

Above ground the world is bustling, hectic, unseeing. Below it is quiet, peaceful and caring. There, Catherine Chandler has found what most of us are looking for, serenity, simplicity — and love.

"Beauty and the Beast," sort of a modern-day version of the fairy tale where a beast becomes hero to a beautiful girl, was a popular series in the late '80s — so popular, in fact, that it started an international craze.

The theme, that of Catherine, a sensitive yet strong attorney who hasn't found the perfect man, is universally appealing, says Mary Arwen Bauer, a local resident and fan who is hosting the 7th Annual "Beastfeast" Saturday. Vincent, the beast, who is "faintly leonine," says Bauer, saves Catherine when she is dumped along the road after a mugging. He takes Catherine to his underground world where he nurses her back to health amid Grecian urns, pianos and soft lighting.

There, Catherine regains what is really important to her and what she can't find in the upper world — beauty, joy and peace of mind.

The two were played by Linda ("Terminator") Hamilton and Ron Perlman.

"She's rich, a social butterfly," says Bauer, speaking of Catherine. "Vincent isn't what you might call classically handsome, and he's not a Superman-type character. He's not one of your Michelob-guzzling football jocks. He's human, sensitive and tender. He's not into the Truth-Justice-And-The-American-Way kind of thing."

And a good listener. A peek into one of the videotaped episodes revealed an emotional Catherine sobbing over the death of her mother, which she has never resolved. Instead of ignoring her, poo-pooing or leaving the room, the beast stood patiently by — loyal, loving, with a saint-like tolerance.

But, Bauer adds, the real theme of the show is much more than looking for Mr. Right.

"Part of the spirit of the show wasn't romance, it was helping other people. One of the lines was to give help to those who need it and accept help when you need it. It gives a sense of community — And that's sadly lacking in today's world."

That theme evidently connected with many die-hard romantics and do-gooders and shows the lion language is universal. Bauer says "B&B" conventions and groups have popped up in not only the U.S. but in places as far away as Australia, England and New Zealand. Fanzines are also a must.

Bauer says aficionados meet at conventions and hold frequent get-togethers in their own areas. They also carry the beast's message to the world by participating in charities like the Channel 56 Telethon and doing good deeds like giving blood and donating to various organizations.

"Every week we donate money, canned goods and food to charity. My charities are either Lighthouse (Clarkston) or HAVEN," she said.

In addition, Bauer said, devotees of the show have rekindled their artistic natures and created paintings, written poetry, and been able to revel in artsy-fartsyism — besides unleashing wanton tastebuds.

"The food," gushes Bauer, rolling her eyes in ecstasy. "Double-chocolate fudge cake to die for, strawberry cheesecakes, smashing spinach dips ..."

Surprisingly, the series, which was syndicated in 119 countries at one time and beat 'I Love Lucy' and 'Star Trek' for two seasons, has attracted many men. In fact, Bauer estimates the ratio to be "60-percent male, 40-percent female."

"I think it's presented as a women's show, but when (representatives) of the show made phone calls, women would say, 'My husband watches it.'"

Indeed, one of the most romantic things she ever heard came from a man.

"I asked him why he liked the show and he said, 'Because deep inside everybody wants to be loved like that.' Most men wouldn't be that honest and show their vulnerability ... Vincent's a good role model."

The 7th Annual Beastfeast, a potluck, will be held this Saturday, August 12, beginning at 1 p.m. at 4850 Clintonville Road. Bring a dish or beverage to share and a lawn chair. In keeping with "Tunnel Tradition," cash or new/gently used underwear for women and children will go to the HAVEN Shelter in Pontiac. There will also be a "Hucksters Room." If you have any B&B magazines, art or handicrafts to sell, bring them along as well as scrapbooks, pictures, videos and art to share. Park at the church lot next door. Bauer says the purpose of the gathering is "for food, fun, conversation and sharing."

Westcap closes largest office, in Houston

Arbitration set for second claim

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

New developments continue to move ahead. Independence Township's arbitration claims against several brokers.

Westcap Securities, which the township has filed suit against, closed its largest brokerage office in Houston, the home base of the company. In a separate matter, the township's claim against PaineWebber and brokers Jeffrey Oetting and Craig Leibold is set for Oct. 24 in New York.

Shutting the doors

According to John Carter, a Houston-based attorney representing Westcap, the company's board of trustees "decided July 17 to discontinue sales at its Houston office."

"There had not been a profit showing in 1995," he said. The company still has a smaller brokerage office in New Jersey, he added.

The township has an arbitration date already set with Westcap and Leibold and Oetting for Sept. 26. The township seeks $3.5 million in damages based on its assertion its treasurer, John Lutz, was misled by Westcap and the two salesmen.

Complaints against Westcap and brokers Leibold and Oetting don't just end with Independence Township. Attorneys say a copycat syndrome took place. According to other published reports, the charges against the company come from all over:

- North Oakland Medical Centers settled with Westcap, after it filed a complaint stating a loss of around $10 million.

- A group of community colleges in Chicago filed an arbitration claim against Westcap, stating their $96 million portfolio dropped value by half.

- Odessa College in West Texas blames Westcap for the decline of its investment portfolio, originally worth $22 million, now worth half that.

- An airport in Sarasota, Florida filed a lawsuit in federal court claiming its $17 million portfolio is now worth $5 million.

According to the Wall Street Journal, these complaints hurt the Houston-based corporation right in the pocketbook. From 1993 to 1994 Westcap's revenues decreased from $106 million to $12 million.

In other news regarding the Westcap case, township treasurer John Lutz was asked by Carter to give a deposition (a pre-arbitration sworn testimony in front of attorneys). If the township denies the deposition request, Carter said that denial would be reviewed and ruled on by the National Association of Securities Dealers, who is the arbitration administrator in the Westcap case.

In a normal court case, depositions must be given upon request.

New claim date set

The township's $650,000 claim against PaineWebber and Leibold and Oetting is set for Oct. 24 in New York. The arbitrator in this claim is the American Arbitration Association.

While the National Association of Securities Dealers is affiliated with corporations, AAA is a non-profit, non-affiliated organization. According to director of publications Tony Griffin, their arbitration proceedings are similar to the NASD.

AAA, which is used exclusively in matters of arbitration and mediation, will come up with a list of individual arbitrators. Each side must then choose from that list.

Grant expands OLHSA home-safety program

The Oakland Livingston Human Service Agency (OLHSA) received a grant for $9,106 from the Area Agency on Aging to expand its Senior Home Safety program. A portion of the grant will be used to expand the program through the purchase of hundreds of hand-held shower devices.

"These devices will prevent seniors from scalding themselves in the shower and also make showering a bit easier for disabled seniors," said Pauline Kenner, coordinator of the Senior Home Safety program.

Additional devices installed by the safety workers include shower chairs, tub grab bars, tub mats, smoke detectors, electrical cords and strips and step strips. Aside from installing devices, OLHSA also distributes first aid kits and safety manuals. New items recently donated include night lights from Consumers Power and denture safety cups from Ameritech.

OLHSA's Senior Home Safety program is the largest home safety control service in the six-county area. Seniors may apply for safety device installation over the phone by calling OLHSA senior home safety coordinator at (810) 960-0580 or (810) 634-7236.

Women's suffrage remembered with events

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

The 75th anniversary of women's right to vote in the U.S. will be marked with a video series in Waterford.

The Waterford/Pontiac/Clarkston branch of American Association of University Women will host the five-part, two-hour series, which was produced by the National Women's History Project. The videos will be repeated three times on Thursday, Aug. 24 at the Waterford Public Library, 5168 Civic Center Drive. The showings are free and open to the public.

Karen O'Connor, a member of the AAUW state board and the Waterford Library staff, said AAUW wanted to do something to celebrate women's enfranchisement.

"There are a number of things going on nationally and statewide," she said. There will be a booth at the Michigan State Fair in which players will re-enact women getting the vote, and a parade in Washington, D.C., where an effort is also underway to get a statue dedicated to women's suffrage brought out of the Capitol basement.

Locally, the Women's Survival Center of Oakland County will host a speaker and luncheon Aug. 22 at noon in Bloomfield Hills featuring Judge Marilyn Kelly of the Michigan Court of Appeals and Debbie Macon of the League of Women Voters.

O'Connor said there aren't a lot of women left today who remember the big day 75 years ago. She has met one woman, now in a nursing home, who remembers her mother registering her to vote as soon as she turned 21.

"She remembered that was an important thing to do because her mother remembered it," O'Connor said. She expressed frustration that the movement is not better covered in American history books.

"There's a whole segment of history that has been totally ignored. It (suffrage) was a big push. It took over 30 years."

Though the movement's official start is marked in 1848, the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution was not signed into law until 1920. Over the intervening years, some states (including Michigan in 1875) passed laws allowing women the right to vote in some specified elections, such as schools.

In 1919 both houses of Congress passed the amendment and sent it on to the states. Tennessee became the last state to ratify it, on Aug. 18, 1920. The actual anniversary of the final enactment, Aug. 26, is now known as Women's Equality Day.

The video series will be shown at 10 a.m.-noon,

1-3 p.m. and 7-9 p.m. Aug. 24. Light refreshments will precede the 7 p.m. showing, and introductory remarks will precede all three showings. The videos are broken into five segments: 1861-1880, the Civil War, recovery and westward expansion; 1880-1920, immigration, new work and new roles; 1917-1942, cultural image and economic reality; 1942-1955, war work, housework and growing discontent; and 1955-1977, new attitudes force dramatic changes.

For more information call the library at 674-4831.

Tickets for the Women's Equality Day luncheon to benefit the Women's Survival Center, which will be held at The Village Club of Bloomfield Hills, are $45. Call 335-2685 for reservations.

State issues prescription drug credits

Over 31,000 Michigan seniors received $14 million in prescription drug credit checks last month to help offset the money they spent during 1994 for prescription drugs.

The Prescription Drug Credit program was established by the Legislature to assist low income Michigan residents over 65. The maximum credit is $600 for an individual and $1,200 for a married couple.

The average refund mailed this year is $449. Some 2,500 credits contained errors or require additional. These claims will be processed by Aug. 15.

State law limits the total prescription drug refund amount to $20 million each year. If the total credits claimed exceeds $20 million, each refund is pro-rated.

Because the total amount claimed for 1994 is less than $20 million, each qualified individual received 100 percent of the credit they claimed.

To be eligible Michigan residents must have met the following criteria:

- * Applicant must have reached his 65th birthday by Dec. 31, 1994.

- * If both husband and wife claim the credit, they both must meet the age requirement.

- * Household income for 1994 can't exceed $11,040 for single persons or $14,760 for married couples.

- * Applicant wasn't a resident of licensed health care facility for at least six consecutive months during 1994.

The Prescription Drug Credit must be applied for before June 1 of each year. Seniors who are eligible for the credit in 1995 should be prepared to submit their application for the credit between Jan. 1, 1996 and June 1, 1996.

Internet access a phone call away for schools

Students and staff of Michigan's K-12 schools, as well as those affiliated with the state's public libraries and community colleges, now have the capability to connect to the Internet toll-free from anywhere in the state.

This advance in Internet connectivity is the result of a project by Merit Network, Inc., to increase dramatically the number of dial-in sites located in local calling areas around the state. Dial-in sites house the electronic equipment needed to accept modem calls from computers and connect them to the Internet.

New dial-in sites, each typically handling four dial-in lines, are planned for over 80 local calling areas throughout Michigan, to serve schools, community colleges and libraries. The first local sites were installed in July and more will be completed month-by-month throughout the year. Two toll-free numbers have been established.

The new and existing dial-in sites will access MichNet, Merit's statewide research and education network. MichNet is the source of Internet connectivity for most of Michigan's colleges and universities, and offers full access to Internet resources.

Funding for the project comes from a $4 million grant from the Ratepayer's Fund created by the Michigan Public Service Commission in the settlement of the Michigan Bell Rebate Case. The funding provides for the expansion of dial-in infrastructure, and covers the costs for educational dial-in access to MichNet through August 1996. After that date, school districts, public libraries and community colleges will continue to use the installed infrastructure, while paying for the ongoing costs of their dial-in needs.

Merit Network, Inc., is a non-profit corporation owned by public universities in the state. It was founded over 25 years ago by Michigan State University, the University of Michigan, and Wayne State University, and now has 11 member universities and 150 affiliated organizations, primarily from the education, research, public service and government sectors in Michigan. It operates the MichNet statewide network, and is the oldest and largest provider of Internet service within Michigan.

From 1987 to 1995 Merit operated NSFNET for the National Science Foundation, in partnership with IBM, MCI, and ANS (Advanced Network and Services); NSFNET provided the national and international backbone capability that enabled the growth of the Internet.

Merit is now funded by the NSF to do what is called the Routing Arbiter project, which entails making sure all the diverse networks involved in the Internet can communicate well with each other as the Internet continues its rapid growth and evolves into a multi-provider service with extensive commercial application far beyond its original research and education roots.

Jason project brings science alive

On April 15-26, 1996 the Detroit Science Center, in cooperation with EDS, will host the JASON Project. As a Primary Interactive Network Site, the Science Center's mission for the JASON Project will be to excite and engage all students in the Detroit metropolitan area in science and technology.

JASON VII will investigate life at the edge of a moving ocean, where students will explore conditions for life and the relationships that exist there. The southern peninsula of Florida will be the focus for this study.

Several students from around the world will be selected to become "Student Argonauts."

Student Argonauts will travel to the JASON Project expedition of another designated research site to work with the research team. During JASON VII, each student will make the trip, spending between five and eight days at the site.

This trip may occur anytime between January and April 1996, depending on the nature of the scientific work being done. The JASON Foundation for Education will pay all travel and living expenses during the expedition.

If you know of a student, 14 or 15 years of age, interested in applying to become a JASON Student Argonaut representing the Detroit Science Center PINS for the Jason VII adventure to the Florida Keys, please contact Patricia L. Thornberry at EDS, 750 Tower Drive, Troy, MI 48098.

Deadline for submitting JASON Project Argonaut applications is Sept. 8, 1995.

The Detroit Science Center PIN Site JASON VII Student Argonaut program is open to all qualified student applicants within Southeastern Michigan.

Back-to-school basics put children at head of class

Preparing for back to school can be a blast as long as you do your homework.

You'll earn high marks with the kids this school year if you follow few simple tips from Mickey's Stuff for Kids. This "Disney approved" brand knows that covering the basics definitely makes back-to-school more fun for everyone.

Offer kids an option — When selecting a back-to-school outfit, it is important to let the child take part in the decision. A choice of two outfits gives parents a form of control and builds confidence and independence in the child. When selecting clothing, keep in mind that children identify with fun, familiar characters. Give kids the style they want in addition to characters they can relate to.

Respect new choices — During the school year, children may want to express themselves through their clothing — don't discourage "out-of-the-blue" choices. It's important to appreciate and observe new tastes; sometimes new choices may be attributed to clothing their friends wear to school.

Set up an a.m./p.m. system for getting dressed — Establish a ritual for getting dressed and stick to it. For example, begin a routine of picking out — and agreeing upon — school clothing prior to bedtime. This helps a child get a "jump start" on the day. It is best to begin routines a few weeks before school starts to make the transition easier.

"Pack" it up — A backpack is a back-to-school accessory that shows a child's sense of style while allowing him or her to "pack up" books and assignments. Fashion is important to kids, but make sure the backpack style they choose is suitable for heavier loads — quilted padding on the shoulder straps works best for carrying many items.

These shoes were made for walking — Shopping for shoes can be time-consuming and costly. Avoid the mad rush by hitting the stores three to four weeks before school starts. For a more accurate fit, buy shoes in the afternoon when your child's feet are naturally larger. Don't buy shoes that are too big in hopes your child will grow into them — shoes that don't fit properly can damage feet.

Postpone back-to-school shopping — While it is important for a child to have a new outfit on the first day of school, save the bulk of back-to-school shopping for later. Once children have had the chance to connect with new friends and observe seasonal fads and trends, it will be easier to determine a child's tastes. By waiting a month or so, you'll be less likely to end up with clothing they won't wear.

Send children to the head of the class this year with Mickey's Stuff for Kids. Stylish clothing, hip backpacks and fun character lunch boxes earn an A+ with parents and keep kids in style year round.

hood, is no stranger to animals. She said she grew up around horses and was even struck by one. But the attack by the Rotweiler has traumatized her.

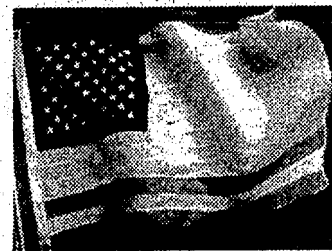

"It takes everything you have to stand there when the dog is attacking you," she said. "That dog weighs more than me and my dog put together."

But the trauma is not just from her own injuries. Rather, it is compounded by the fear that the incident will be repeated, despite her efforts to see that it isn't.

"The fear of this happening to a child is overwhelming to me... We don't want to have to fear for our children every time we go out the door."

So she plugs away, getting signatures on her petition and compiling her case for possible legal action. Then, sounding a bit resigned for the first time in the interview, she said, "When this happens to the next person, I want them to have more to go on than I had."

A real education

Though she doesn't speak any English, there's one language Kanako Watanabe now understands — the language of labor.

Watanabe, a 12-year-old exchange student from the LABO exchange program in Japan, got to be around sweaty animals, smelly barns and hard-working people the past month while her host family readied for the 4-H Fair.

The program open to Japanese families begins even before children are born, according to Sue Stapleton, program assistant for 4-H youth programs in Oakland County.

"It's an international exchange program," Stapleton explained. "In Michigan 4-H each year we get between 50-80 Japanese students, usually for a 30-day stay. The purpose of LABO is to prepare Japanese kids to eventually come to the U.S. Many times parents will start their kids when they're babies. They go to monthly or bi-monthly meetings to learn about everything in America. The purpose (of LABO) is to promote a better understanding of the world so we'll have a better future."

Though the program is in conjunction with 4-H, Stapleton says most of what the Japanese children have learned prior to coming to the U.S. has nothing to do with it.

"What they know of English consists of nursery rhymes and 'Goldilocks and the Three Bears.'"

That's why the 4-H experience is truly hands-on, she says.

Kanako's host family, the Snooks from Clarkston, thoroughly enjoyed having the Japanese adolescent for a month-long house guest. It was a special treat for the Snook girls — Erin, 14, Lori, 11, and Alex, 8. All three participated in the 4-H Fair.

Erin won fifth-place in intermediate sheep showmanship and Lori won first-place pen for her turkeys, among other awards. Lori, whose bangs were matted against her head during the sweltering humidity Thursday afternoon, admits it's a lot of work to raise the animals.

"Everyday, twice, we have to walk out there and feed them, change their water. Then we had to wash them all and get them ready for the show," Lori said with a sigh.

The youngest, Alex, isn't eligible to compete yet, but she stoddily participates in the Fair's "Pee-Wee" division for 5- to 8-year-olds and showed rabbits this year.

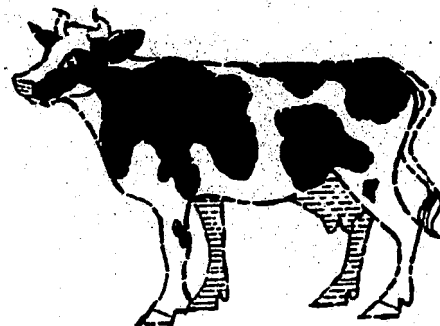

"Then when they turn 9 they can compete with adults," Barb Snook, the girls' mother, said.

Snook said Lori, who is about Kanako's age, has the option "to go there (to Japan) for the same amount of time" through 4-H.

Though the Snooks said communication was achieved through "a lot of pointing," she noted that Kanako enjoyed American food. In Japan there are McDonald's and Kentucky Fried Chicken, but the Snooks' excursion to Taco Bell proved to be a real eye-opener for the Japanese girl.

"Taco means 'kite' in Japanese. When you tell them tacos, they think you're taking them out to eat kites. Kanako had to check her soft taco before she ate it," Barb said with a laugh.

Animals still staple of 4-H fair

BY EILEEN OXLEY
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Most kids who exhibit their sheep, bunnies and pigs at the 4-H fair know they won't ever see them again.

"You have to understand these kids are goal-oriented. The end result is going to market," said Sue Stapleton, program assistant for 4-H youth programs in Oakland County.

Last week the annual 4-H fair, which has been going since the 1800's, continued to be a creative vehicle for kids around the county. Besides raising a variety of animals for both market and breeding, children enter competitions as diverse as canning, quilts, environmental concerns — even table-setting and performing arts.

"Obviously you don't have to live on a farm to learn stuff like photography," Stapleton said, gesturing around an exhibit room on the Springfield Oaks County Park grounds where the fair took place. "We have over 2,000 4-H kids in Oakland County."

The event was held July 31 through August 6, the culmination being a livestock auction on Sunday. More than 6,000 exhibits were offered including a petting zoo and pig races.

But, obviously, the animals are the real "meat" of the project.

Pat Boyd, livestock sales secretary/treasurer for Oakland County's 4-H Fair, said this year the total of auctioned animals included "two pens chickens, two pens rabbits, 35 lambs, 62 hogs, eight steers and six feeder calves. Some of those who bid are Meijer's, Atlas and other grocery stores as well as private individuals.

Most people don't realize that kids do much more than just raise prize-winning beef, pork, mutton and poultry.

"They have to keep records — vet bills, the feed bills ...," Boyd said. Most of the animals are sold at the auction, but some — breeders — go on to compete at the Michigan State Fair in the fall.

Besides the experience, raising animals brings tangible benefits to the kids. It teaches basic values and provides the feeling of accomplishment as well as lining their pocketbooks. Many of those who compete didn't grow up on farms, but are the result of the move away from the city and out to the suburbs.

"They move out to the fringes and buy a few acres ... It's an experience for (children) to raise, compete, earn the money and buy a couple of lambs next year. It's real experience — to get back to nature, plus it's real educational."

An animal can sell for several hundred dollars, she added — "more for a cow, of course, than a pig. And its above market value." Boyd said animals can bring as much as $2 to $4 a pound.

"You hope $2, you dream $4," she said.

Knob notes

By Eileen Oxley
Songs of experience

Tucked away in the small Irish town of Limerick, the cranberries' birth was a humble beginning.

The group formed with four young men in 1990 who called themselves "The Cranberry Saw Us." Soon after, the lead singer left and was replaced by Dolores O'Riordan, a quiet, intense young lady from Ireland's southwest countryside whose only experience was singing in church choirs and pubs.

But it was O'Riordan's arresting uniqueness that launched the band. Blessed with a strong, clear voice and natural songwriting abilities, she neatly completed the picture of a painfully honest group of young people who wanted to simply talk about what they were experiencing.

The foursome's first release, a cassette single demo tape entitled "Nothing Left At All," drew a vast amount of press and music industry attention, so much so that the cranberries signed with Island Records to make "Everybody Is Doing It, So Why Can't We." O'Riordan's lilting, brogue-tinged vocals lifted the young Irish quartet out of their quiet corner of the world and across the Atlantic. Two singles, "Dreams" and "Linger," were major smashes.

Undazed by instant international stardom, their level-headed attitude transcended into the next recording, "No Need to Argue."

Grown up more since the last album, the band's lyrics are riveting and a testament to the trials and tribulations of a newly discovered adult world.

"I wasn't going to let a little bit of success stop me from expressing myself," says the recently married O'Riordan. "I think these songs have a strong, confrontational feeling to them. A lot went down with the band since the first album and went down for me personally and I think that's reflected in these songs. These songs came out of a period in my life that I'd like to forget, but I don't mind singing about it."

Especially poignant and personal are O'Riordan's compositions and renditions of "Ode to My Family" and "Zombie."

A private person, O'Riordan enjoys songwriting while touring and is happy sitting in the corner with her guitar.

"Being famous and having people screaming at you doesn't make me happy, but writing a song does," she says.

Ray Sharkey, postal worker at the U.S. Post Office in Clarkston, presents a cake from his department to Dick Morgan. A procession of postal trucks down Main Street paid tribute to Morgan during his 80th birthday Thursday.

Putting mileage on memories

BY EILEEN OXLEY
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Life has been a gas for Dick Morgan.

For over 60 years he's owned Morgan's Marathon at the corner of Main and Church streets — becoming a household word not long after he started the business with only $200 stuffed in his pocket as a high school lad.

Customers have been so appreciative that they threw him a party five years ago when he turned 75. And last Thursday — after he'd put on a little more mileage — an 80th birthday celebration and open house left little vacant parking space downtown.

Bright yellow signs and balloons drew eyes to Morgan's service station where guests munched on morning doughnuts and a lunch catered by Rudy's alongside mechanics working on car lifts. Earlier in the day, a procession of mail trucks from Clarkston's post office made its way down Main Street to deliver Morgan a handmade cake.

"Happy birthday, Dick. You don't look a day over 50," said Gary West of Real Estate One who visited during the afternoon.

Others poked their heads through the front window, offering Morgan congrats, smiles and cards.

One card, featuring a grinning cowboy, read: "Roses are red, dandelions are yella, If yer wishes come true, Yer a real lucky fella!"

Morgan chuckled. "I've always had real nice customers," he said. Spiffy in a clean white shirt and trousers, he wasn't allowed to work today, said his daughter Sally Morgan who was visiting from Elk Rapids.

"We didn't want him to wear work clothes," she explained.

John Morgan said it's hard to keep his father out of them.

"He's sold the station to me now, but he still works here," John said. "Most of our friends are our customers. This is where he spent most of his life, 14 hours a day." John recalled when he was a boy and learned to pump gas. He also remembered how much fun snow days were.

"It was always fun going along in the truck and pulling people out. It seemed to be a big deal. I thought I was helping (my dad) out a lot," he said, with a laugh. He began at the station as a fifth-grader. "I could barely even reach the windshields to wash them." Later in high school he got credit through the co-op program "from working at my dad's place."

Dick Morgan said the money to lease the station was borrowed from his grandfather in 1932.

"In 1936 my dad, Sam Morgan, could see it was a good investment, so he bought the business."

Only the small front room of the station is original, with the garage added later after World War II. Morgan recalled a fire at the station, gas being rationed during the war — and also remembered when you could get "eight or nine gallons for a dollar."

"I had a Model A Ford that would only hold a dollar of gas," he said, shaking his head with a smile.

Fred Ritter, Independence Township resident and owner of Clarkston Auto Wash, said Dick Morgan was one of the three oldest business owners in Clarkston. Rudolf Schwarze, original owner of Rudy's Market, passed away several years ago, but Bob Jones, former president of Clarkston State Bank (now NBD Bank) for 41 years, had a few words to say about his pal on the corner. The two's friendship goes way back to Clarkston High.

"For about 35 years I'd come down to the bank and take my car to Dick — see if it was gassed up, needed air in my tires, an oil change ... For 35 years I never touched my car. When I retired I had a heck of a time. That was Dick — he took care of everything for ya'."

Ritter said that many folks don't know Morgan has often gone way beyond his regular service.

"Dick has done a lot for people behind the scenes — from jumping their cars and pulling them out of a ditch when they were stuck, to filling up their tanks with gas when they're unemployed."

Still looking at his cards and milling with guests in the afternoon, Morgan's eyes may have misted a little when he stopped for a moment to reflect on the day's celebration.

"I never knew how much you were appreciated — I found out today."

Midget racer takes top 10 finish at nationals

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

"Children, start your engines!"

Not exactly familiar words to race fans, unless you happen to be a parent, friend or relative of the Waterford Quarter Midget Club.

To Morgan Keil, 13, of Clarkston, those words were the beginning of a strong showing at the Eastern Grand National race, which took place from July 22-28.

Keil and many of his fellow midget racing club members got to show their racing skills in the prestigious event at the Mini Indy Speedway in Indianapolis. Over 400 cars in six race classes competed throughout the week.

But it was Keil, heading into the seventh grade at Sashabaw Middle School, who did his Clarkston home town proud in the event.

A second-place in the Senior Super Stock Class "B main" race qualified him for the Super Stock's "A main" race, which is the finals.

After starting the race in the rear of the pack, Morgan battled his way up to the fourth spot. Just as quickly, however, a three-car crash forced him to the back of the pack again. Morgan still managed to fight his way up for a ninth-place finish.

Morgan's mother, Cindy, said he began racing at the Waterford club about four years ago. He first became interested in the sport because his father Frank used to race stock cars.

Other members of the Waterford club that participated in the Eastern National race include, Brandon and Andrew Abbott of Livonia, Justin Switzer of Waterford, Chris Rhyne and Jamie Stabile of New Hudson, Krissy and Angie Kilbourn of Berkley, John Scherer of White Lake, Ryan O'Dell of Washington and Cullen Brown of Grand Blanc.

The Waterford Quarter Midget Club, affiliated with the Michigan Midget Racing Association, races at the Waterford Hills Raceway Track in Clarkston. For information on the club or to become a member, contact president Terry Abbott at 810-477-0945.

Morgan Keil, 13, (pictured) inherited his love of racing from his dad, Frank, a former stock car racer.

Cheerleaders have busy summer

Clarkston cheerleaders have been busy this summer, in preparation for the upcoming school sports season. Pictured above, the freshman, JV and varsity cheerleaders completed a 20-mile bike-a-thon to raise money for team uniforms. Pictured below, the varsity cheerleaders helped run a cheerleading camp through the Independence Township Parks and Recreation Department. About 31 girls attended the first-ever camp, according to seven-year cheer coach Debi Hool. She also said the team plans on holding cheer clinics sometime in September.

Rule changes begin with fall sports

The fall sports season will begin for players Aug 14.

Fans anxiously await the first football, girls basketball, boys soccer, cross country, boys golf and girls tennis contest to begin around the end of August.

But, like every year, there are a few rule changes for the upcoming season:

- * Basketball has the most changes, mostly influencing the end of games. Bonus free throws will continue with the seventh team foul but on the tenth team foul of a half, the opposing team will shoot two instead of a one-and-one (the same as college hoops).

No field goal try will be counted if there is 3/10ths of a second or less remaining on the clock. A tip-in off an inbounds pass would be permitted. The rule would not apply if a clock does not display tenths of a second.

No free throws will be attempted at the conclusion of regulation play if the free throws would not affect the outcome of the game.

Other new hoops rules were added to allow an airborne defender from the frontcourt to land in the backcourt; taunting rules have been expanded; leaving the bench area during a fight will result in disqualification and objectionable visible body markings will not be permitted.

- * In football, the two-minute drill has been given a boost. A new rule will allow a quarterback to spike the ball immediately after the snap from center to stop the clock.

- * A soccer team may now start a contest with seven uniformed players, rather than the old rule of 11. Once a game has started, no team can continue with less than seven players.

Another soccer change will allow players wearing casts, splints or body braces made of hard substance to play if the cast is covered with at least one-half inch of padding.

Soccer also has the only tournament changes for the fall season. A fourth class was added. Previously schools competed in Classes A, B or C-D. This year C and D will have separate tournaments. Class A also has double the number of district and regional sites.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

ADD ON OR SELL

SHOULD YOU REMODEL or buy a larger home? First get cost estimates, then compare.

27 S. Main, Clarkston
625-9300

QUESTION: My home is getting too small for my family. We need extra bedrooms, a larger kitchen and a bigger garage. Would it make more sense to put in all these improvements or sell as-is and buy another home that fits our present and future needs?

ANSWER: Get estimates from contractors (then, for safety's sake, increase the cost and time estimate by 50%). Don't forget to crank in the stress factor that goes with remodeling.

With this information in hand, compare the value of your present home with that of homes for sale which are already in move-in condition and will meet your family's needs.

Equestrian team organizing

If technical horse riding is your game, join a new equestrian team being formed.

Cathy Grain is trying to organize an equestrian squad for Clarkston High students in grades 9-12. She only has two kids on the team so far and one is her 9th-grade daughter.

Grain said the team is not for beginners, but for kids who know how to ride already, have a horse or can rent one, can provide transportation to events and attend Clarkston High.

She said interested riders must register by Aug. 28. For more information call Grain at 394-1736.

Love kept them together

Couple celebrates 70th anniversary

BY EILEEN OXLEY
Clarkston News Staff Writer

A Clarkston couple might be the best example of the wonderful institution we call marriage.

Passing their golden wedding anniversary 20 years ago, John and Vyvian Main are still together. They will celebrate their 70th anniversary Sunday (August 13) during a special gathering and luncheon at Walnut Creek Country Club in South Lyon with 50 guests. Two of the guests are their son Jack and daughter-in-law Maxine, who will perform as part of an eight-member musical group called "Special Blend."

John said he met his wife 72 years ago in Orlando, Florida.

"The population in Orlando then was 9,000," he said in a letter to The Clarkston News. "She was from Kalamazoo. I was from Washington, D.C. She was visiting a girlfriend of hers from Kalamazoo."

Like many young people then and now, John said he was there "for the beauty of Florida." It was an added bonus when he met his future wife.

"Vyvian was 20 and I was 18," he said. "I came to Kalamazoo in 1925 and (two years later) we were married there."

Thirteen years later the couple moved to Detroit, then to Pontiac in 1942. During those years John was state sales manager for Sealtest Ice Cream. He retired 25 years later and the Mains built a home in Bloomfield Hills. For the past 22 years they have lived in the Clarkston area.

John, now 90, and Vyvian, 92, have two children, eight grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

When asked to share his recipe for longevity, John's answer was simple.

"I guess the answer is 'our love and devotion for each other.' We've had a real good life together. And fine children — no problems with them in all these years."

John and Vyvian Main

Children of rage face difficult decisions

Last in a series

BY PEGGY MURRAY
Oxford Leader Reporter

Their faces mask their pain. They hide a silent suffering caused not so much by punches inflicted on them as by beatings suffered by those they love — and are helpless to protect.

They are children of rage.

They are a 7-year-old Independence boy who allegedly watched his dad throw his mom to the floor, pull hair from her head and pound her head with his fists. When police arrived, summoned by another son, age 15, both boys were too upset to talk about what they'd seen.

They are a 16-year-old Oxford girl and her 10-year-old brother who were dragged into a 'wrestling match' that left their mom with chipped teeth and bloody nose. The girl was allegedly hit when she tried to telephone police for help.

They also are two Addison Township boys — 8 and 6 — who saw their father run from their home with a knife in his back. Their mother, who was not deemed responsible for her actions by the court, then lashed out at them with another knife. The physical injuries the children sustained were minor.

Some children have experienced such violence since before they were even born.

"For many women, domestic violence begins when they're pregnant," said Kim Waldron, deputy director of HAVEN (Help Against Violent Encounters Now). "That child from day one has been abused, whether it's taking some assault that the mother is taking or the emotional abuse that's going on. Then that child is born into an environment where conflict is often resolved through physical abuse, emotional abuse and certainly power and control tactics."

An Oxford woman experienced such abuse when she was midway through her pregnancy. Her husband of one month threatened her, repeatedly banged his head against hers, then pushed on her abdomen with all his weight, reportedly causing internal injuries but not damaging the fetus.

Though it may seem shocking, there is a strange logic behind the pattern, experts indicate.

"That child becomes oftentimes a threat," Waldron said. "The focus is now not directly (on the abuser). Now this new person is taking her attention and time."

As they grow older, these children become caught up in an emotional tug-of-war — love and hate, sorrow and anger. Despite the weight of those conflicting emotions, they feel they must keep silent.

HAVEN gets help

Oakland County's only agency providing education, advocacy, counseling and shelter for victims of domestic violence has received a three-year, $708,000 grant from the Skillman Foundation to fund a major new initiative to help stop spousal abuse.

Hedy Nuriel, executive director of HAVEN, said the grant will fund Oakland Coordinated Community Approach, "a multi-faceted program in co-operation with police, judges and probation officers. When a batterer or perpetrator of domestic violence is arrested, police give HAVEN vital information so we can provide services to the victim."

The idea is to get a quick response, "hoping to get offenders through the legal system on the fast track." Once a batterer is found guilty or pleads guilty, he or she will be sent to HAVEN for counseling and re-education, Nuriel said.

The program began with a pilot project in Walled Lake and Novi. Skillman has funded it for three years with the hope it would grow throughout Oakland County.

"A child feels very torn," said Waldron. "He or she loves both parents. It's very, very crazy. They may be in their room and hear an argument. They may hear physical abuse. Those children may become involved in calling police, in calling 911. As much as people say 'My children don't know,' children know everything."

Carol Hackett Garagiola, who heads the Oakland County Prosecutor's Domestic Violence Unit, said children are rarely shielded from their parents' brutal relationships.

"In an overwhelming majority of (domestic violence) cases, the children are there," she said. "They see it. And in a number of them, they're actually physically involved in it. We have cases where sons will go get knives to defend their moms."

But children are not equipped to handle the pain and conflict that whirl through their lives, experts say.

Because dad beats mom, they hate him. And yet, they love him for all the good they know is in him. They hear him bellow that their mother is stupid and they wonder if it's true. Why else would he hit her? Why else would she stay? But they know he is wrong.

"The primary thing they're learning is conflict resolved through use of power and control," Waldron said. "They become very keen about picking up on things — 'Dad's upset. We better go to our rooms. Mom's crying again.' So they become masters about what's going on in their home. Sometimes they become barriers. They try to defend mom. Sometimes they take dad's side. Dad says 'Your mom's lazy' and the child keys in on that."

That's how the generational cycle of abuse begins. Children learn what they are taught.

"It is no surprise, it is no secret that children who witness this will grow up and engage in that behavior or become victims of it," Hackett Garagiola said. "That's what they know; that's what they came from. That's normal to them. That's what they identify with. That's how people treat each other."

As a society, we must recognize that prosecution of one domestic violence case does more than protect one victim. It affects entire families and the whole community, Hackett Garagiola said.

"Those children (of abuse victims) are damaged by it," she said. "They're damaged people. And we have to deal with that. As a community, we have to deal with the possibility that (those children) are going to perpetuate the violence, perpetuate those kinds of relationships."

While she recognizes that many such children grow up and learn to deal with their childhood traumas — often with the help of counseling — Hackett Garagiola notes others become burdens on society, criminals.

"We know our prisons are filled with people who came from homes where there was domestic violence," she said. "So it's not just this particular victim and this particular situation that is the problem. There is a ripple effect in terms of the children."

"People don't just wake up in the morning and become violent. It's learned. Where do they learn it? They learn it in their homes. Then it ends up at all of our doorsteps. So people who think that this is a matter that doesn't involve me — it involves you. It's going to affect you."

The case of convicted serial rapist and killer Leslie Allen Williams, though extreme, is an example of a child of rage growing into a societal menace. Williams abducted, raped and killed four teenage girls.

As a child, Williams often was the brunt of his psychopathic father's rage. When the boy's mother remarried, things got no better for Williams. His stepfather shot Williams' mother to death before taking his own life. All of these happened before Williams was 10.

To end the cycle of abuse, violence must be stopped before it escalates, experts say. That's where the legal system plays a key role. But it also means to protect their children, women must consider leaving and seeking counseling for themselves and their children, counselors say.

Pumping up his smile, Bobby Olsen shows off his winning contest ticket that will give him a year's supply of AMOCO gasoline.

The winner!

BY EILEEN OXLEY
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Bobby Olsen's not one of those people who tells you he's never won anything. You know, the kind of person who screams it out during a Publisher's Clearing House commercial.

Because he's been lucky before.

"I won a 10-speed bike in elementary school, also a teddy bear," he says, modestly. "And a Detroit Pistons rocking chair at the senior party."

But Bobby, 18, admitted he was flooded with surprise when he filled up his mom's car at the AMOCO station at Dixie and M-15 and pumped up some luck as well — a year's supply of gas.

The 1995 Clarkston High School grad was a winner in the AMOCO "Pump Up The Luck" contest held at the station last month. Off to a late start, he, his mom Hana and others were leaving for the Olsens' retreat in Canada and stopped to tank up July 31 — the last day of the contest. Bobby, who admits he hasn't bought any regular lottery tickets for a year, purchased a couple of "Pump Up The Luck" tickets when he paid for his gas.

His friend Holly Macy, also a 1995 CHS grad, was in the back seat and scratched off the winning ticket.

"She screamed, 'Oh, my god, you won,'" Bobby said, imitating a female voice. He then gestured with an arm/fist motion. "I was like, 'Yes!' I haven't bought a lottery ticket since I turned 18."

Already taking a couple of classes at OCC this summer to prepare him for college in the fall, Bobby owns a 91 black Jeep Wrangler to get him there and to his present job as a waiter at the Olive Garden in Pontiac. He works five days a week and it takes 10 miles to get there and back. He can certainly use the gas, he says, and did some quick mathematical calculations on the $875 worth he'll receive.

"I figured it out — it takes $15 to gas (my car) up. I'll get $16 worth a week, 52 weeks a year. So it'll probably pay for a tank a week."

Bobby was one of 42 first-place winners in the U.S. who will get the year's supply of gas. The odds of winning were one in 1,074,206 said Rob Tobin, customer representative for AMOCO Promotion Hotline in Illinois.

"I think he'll get a credit card," Tobin said, adding that he expected the value to be not $875, but $1,750.

Asked if he planned to do any extra traveling — now that he's got gas money to burn — Bobby answered, "No immediate plans ... But maybe I'll go out West sometime."

Decision reached on deer baiting issue

Following hours of public testimony and a final tally of 7,134 cards and letters submitted to the Department of Natural Resources on the question of hunting deer over bait, DNR Director Roland Harnes on July 31 announced his decision regarding baiting in the 1996 deer hunting season.

"We carefully reviewed the testimony and correspondence of those who attended citizen input meetings or wrote letters," he said. "Most people expressing opinions indicated they did not support restricting or banning baiting. I then consulted with the National Resources Commission and the experts in our Wildlife and Law Enforcement Divisions.

"After listening to various viewpoints and weighing the options, I have decided there will be no changes at this time regarding the practice of hunting deer over bait."

Harnes added, however, that he is taking action to address concerns related to territorial conflicts between hunters.

"Public testimony convinced me that the primary problems are associated with hunters occupying permanent hunting blinds on public lands," Harnes noted. "Therefore, I hereby adopt the recommendation of our Wildlife and Law Enforcement Divisions that construction and use of permanent hunting blinds on all state and federally owned public lands be prohibited as of January 1, 1996.

"This is a logical extension of the DNR's response several years ago when increasing conflicts between hunters resulted in current regulations prohibiting the use of permanent blinds in State Game or Wildlife Areas."

Harnes added that the DNR will closely monitor reports of conflicts between hunters during the next two years, and that further action may not be required if conflicts associated with hunting deer over bait decrease.

"However, if the prohibition regarding permanent hunting blinds on all public lands fails to reduce these conflicts during this two-year test period, the DNR will very likely restrict hunters to a bait pile no larger than 10 gallons, or, prohibit hunting deer over bait altogether."

Parks and rec throws carnival for kids

The bean bag toss was harder than it looked, but didn't stop any kids from enjoying Independence Township Parks and Recreation Department's Carnival Day for day care kids Aug. 4 at Sashabaw Middle School. The event featured over a dozen game stations with parks and rec employees organizing the activities.

The hoops shoot at the parks and rec's Carnival Day was a popular event among all the kids.

Renaissance Festival exists somewhere in time

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

Ladies and gents are advised to drop their inhibitions as they enter the grounds of the 16th annual Michigan Renaissance Festival, beginning this weekend in the Shire of Hollygrove (That's Holly, to us locals).

The fun begins the moment you pass through the portals and at once step into another time and place. It's a place where dragons still live and knights still joust and the king and queen still parade through the grounds on foot.

On media preview day Sunday, guests were feasted grandly and given a taste of what the fun is about. A latecomer was scolded at the gate ("You're late!" a young wench called out). A few moments later and a few feet away, three masked gentlemen commenced in "circle wooing," surrounding a lady, competing with compliments, and then asking her to choose from among them.

It's the 16th year the festival has come to the grounds off Dixie Highway one mile north of Mt. Holly, and each year there are new features added to old favorites. This year a new heir to the throne will be ushered in and there will be a mud show in the new grovel pit. Visitors can also mint their own coins.

Each weekend has a different theme, including the "Renaissance Romance" weekend Aug. 19-20, during which 104 people will get married on the grounds. Sept. 9-10 will feature a wine tasting and grape stomping.

Jousting occurs each day at 12:45, 3:30 and 5:45 p.m. Each day over 200 wonderfully costumed performers fill the village, offering fair-goers vignettes of the past or perhaps just a little tweaking—all in good fun, of course. There is also, of course, lots of good food and music.

The Michigan Renaissance Festival is open weekends beginning this Saturday through Sept. 24. Hours are 10 a.m.-7 p.m.

The fair's slogan is "The Adventure is Yours." But you have to be in a playful, open mood to appreciate all the festival has to offer. If you can do that, it's well worth the price of admission.

Tickets are $11.95 for adults at the gate, $5.95 for kids 5-12; Discount tickets ($10.50/$5) may be purchased in advance at Kroger stores and participating Total gasoline stores. From Clarkston, the festival grounds may be reached by taking Dixie Highway or by taking I-75 to the Grange Hall Rd. exit, then turning left onto Dixie.

Middle Eastern dancers shimmied and shook in their brightly colored costumes.

This lovely lady (two photos, above) was part of the Middle Eastern dance troupe, alternately playing drums and stepping in as a dancer.

The Baroness fingers a dangling stone that only moments before was attached to her nose.

Jimmy Territo belts out one of his songs at his basement piano.

Big man on campus

When it comes to performing arts, Jimmy's the one

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

One of the songs Clarkston High School junior Jimmy Territo has written alludes to the fact that he's not very tall. But when it comes to the performing arts, Territo towers over his classmates.

A familiar face in CHS's crowded halls, Territo, 16, is musician, singer, composer, comedian and actor. Last year, one of his compositions won the state level PTA Reflections fine arts contest.

His schedule is full of rehearsals, private lessons, band camp—and oh, yeah, helping his parents out around the house on occasion as well. He says he's most productive when he's most busy.

"It seems like my academics improve when I have other things to do," he said. "I kind of force myself to be creative when I have less time. When I do have a lot of time I use it to lay around and do nothing."

Territo could be the poster child for extra-curricular activities. He is a member of the madrigal choir, moving over from barbershop choir last year; he plays french horn in the band and is a member of Solid Brass, a brass quintet. He also plays piano and takes private composing classes with an Oakland University professor. And he reserves time to participate in several theatricals each year.

He credits his parents and his teachers more than his own hard work.

"My mom encourages me to do an awful lot; she doesn't know how to leave me alone," he said. "I'm the baby by 16 years. It's kind of cool though."

Territo singled out several teachers for praise, including drama coach Jeffrey Tice and band director Cliff Chapman. But he also included social studies teacher David Bihl.

"He totally changed the way I thought," Territo said. "He encouraged me to be creative . . . I attribute

'If you're not comfortable with yourself, you're not much good on stage.'

Jimmy Territo

a lot of what I do to my teachers."

Territo says that though he seemed to have a natural singing ability from an early age, that didn't help him when he turned to instrumental music.

He began taking Suzuki violin lessons at age 3 and says he was awful. He turned to piano a few years later, so by the time he was old enough for band he had a solid grounding in music theory.

"I was way ahead of the game," he said. "Still, I couldn't play a note." He describes his early years in band as "awful."

It was two middle school teachers, band director Ms. Matthews and choir director Danielle Blanchard who helped him develop. "Ms. Blanchard—she was something," he said. "I had her for one semester and

'It's not enough to go to school and breathe the air there.'

Jimmy Territo

she really brought out the musician in me."

Now at home in his chosen role at CHS, Territo says his classmates, teachers and friends have helped him be comfortable with himself.

"I feel real comfortable on the stage, just being the way I am," he said. "I think I was lucky being born with it. But again, there's an awful lot of teachers that can bring a lot out in people. I've had a lot of terrific teachers who have talked about trusting the audience and fellow performers . . . If you're not comfortable with yourself you're not much good on stage."

Though he still has two years of high school ahead of him, Territo is already college shopping. He would like to make a career of composing, something he started at age 12. He's already completed a piece for full band which he hopes the CHS band will perform this year.

"I'll probably end up getting a teaching degree because you need to eat. There's a lot of avenues for a composer. I hope I don't have to write jingles . . .

"That's one of my dreams to be a renowned composer. Even if my name isn't remembered, my songs can be."

No matter what his career ends up being, Territo is clear on the value of extra-curricular activities as part of school life, whether you're an athlete, member of the speech team or a performing artist like himself.

"Being able to be in a group of people doing the same thing as you . . . That's great. Whenever you work hard with people, you end up being really close to them. You have a lot of real intense memories and a lot of cool friends in the end . . .

"If you don't have experiences like that you don't have much to fall back on later. It's not enough to go to school and breathe the air there."

Playground debate shifts focus

Should recreation be counted as class time, one parent wonders

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

At a time when Clarkston schools are wondering how they will replace playground equipment removed last year over safety concerns, a new controversy is brewing.

Under changes in state law which require 90 extra hours of classroom time this year, Clarkston schools will begin including playground time as instructional time by bringing in certified teachers to supervise recess.

The law (enacted after Proposal A) allows playground time, as well as commuting time for special education or vocational education students, to be included as instructional time beginning this year.

According to Oakland Schools Assistant Superintendent Rick Simonson, a compromise in Lansing led to the ruling to allow up to two-and-one-half hours a week of such time to be included toward the required 990 hours of instruction in 1995-96.

"The legislature was asked to give voc. ed. and recess much more time and they said 'no,'" Simonson, an expert in legislative affairs, said. "The critical argument was time on task. The legislature believed that for a certain age, free time was a critical part."

Simonson said the law was primarily aimed at rural school districts, many of which offered fewer academics, forcing students to use up some of their time in study halls (which, by the way, are not offered in Clarkston.)

When Proposal A passed, many of these rural districts received a nice boost in their budgets. "The concern was those funds would simply be given away at the bargaining table," Simonson said.

In Oakland County, where schools are considered relatively wealthy by state standards, such skimpy offerings were not much of a problem. "Oakland County schools by and large not only were meeting but surpassing these requirements anyway," Simonson said.

All of which doesn't impress Bailey Lake parent Sue Boatman. She was alerted by some teachers to the change in their contract language calling for a certified teacher, at $21.27 per hour, to supervise the playground, rather than a paraprofessional at less than half the cost. She'd rather see the money spent on academics and the school day lengthened to meet the spirit of the new law.

"Most people I have talked to are very appalled about it, especially parents," Boatman said. "Most of the teachers do not want to do this."

"Where I'm coming from is they pay paraprofessionals $8 an hour, teachers over $20 an hour. This is like throwing money in a trash can. There is no value.

No tax dollars go to sports group

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

To some, it may be the perfect organization because it's a state association that does not require the use of taxpayer money.

Since 1924 the Michigan High School Athletic Association has operated as a non-profit corporation working with the state's school districts to provide one organizational body for high school sports.

The MHSAA has not changed with regards to what it stands for, but it has grown in its scope each and every year. John Johnson, MHSAA communications director, said the fact people need to remember is that the MHSAA does not cost taxpayers or schools anything.

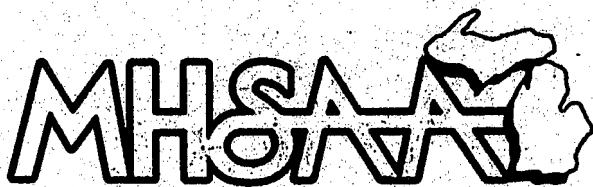

There are no membership dues, despite operating on a yearly budget of $4.5 million. About 86 percent of the MHSAA's income comes from the sale of tickets to its district, regional and final tournaments. The other 14 percent of revenue comes from the sale of official's regulations or rules books and other miscellaneous items.

In addition, the MHSAA reimburses some schools for their tournament participation expenses. In 1993-94, that figure topped $2 million.

Johnson says the MHSAA is unique across the nation because of its non-profit status and ability to work within a tight budget. He said most athletic associations have many corporate sponsors that pay the way.

"Some states have come to depend exclusively on corporate sponsorship for day-to-day operations," said Johnson. "But in Michigan we ask our corporate sponsors to fund programs the MHSAA would not normally be able to do. We don't want to profit from them but we do want to break even."

For instance, programs like Good Sports Are michigan high school athletic association

Winners!, the Scholar-Athlete Award and others are funded by just four corporations. They are True Value Hardware, Farm Bureau Insurance, Tombstone and Kellogg's.

Despite the perception, the MHSAA does not make the rules for its 1,300 member public, private and parochial senior and junior high schools. The 19-member Representative Council is the school-elected legislative body of the MHSAA. This council, which is entirely independent of any governmental agency, meets three times a year to pass and modify regulations.

There are no local school representatives on the council. But there are plenty of school superintendents, principals and athletic directors on the council. The closest area representative is Pontiac Northern athletic director Tarlton Small.

And because the schools set policy, Johnson also said it's up to them to uphold rules.

"It's the schools' job to account for themselves. Over 90 percent of the violations are reported by the school itself."

Once in a while, he admitted, the MHSAA will have to get involved in an investigation, but that is rare.

The resurgence of the MHSAA began when John "Jack" E. Roberts took over as executive director.

"I think in the last decade John has led us to a more pro-active style," Johnson said. "Prior to that we handled the most basic of issues. What we have done since then is raise the expectations and taken them to a higher level."

By raising expectations and becoming more involved, Johnson said it has also set them up for more criticism, but "It just goes with the territory." People must remember every rule on the books has come from member schools, he said.

"You'll always find pros and cons but we're responsible to the desires of the membership," said Johnson. "We think a heavy-handed organization is totally wrong."

Three long-time Clarkston High School varsity coaches think the MHSAA, as an organizational unit, does a good job for the schools.

Wrestling coach Mike DeGain is no stranger to how the MHSAA runs a tournament. Last winter he took the CHS squad to a runner-up in the Class A tournament.

"The tournaments are very well organized and we've gone through quite a bit of them," said DeGain, who also saw four of his wrestlers place in the top five at the individual tourney. "And with wrestling, there may be more involved because not only do you have team against team but you have individuals."

DeGain is interested to see how a new Representative Council-passed rule will affect wrestling in the 1996-97 school year. Beginning at the start of the wrestling season each school will be required to take a caliper fat test of each wrestler. That test will be sent to the MHSAA which will tabulate all the information and come back with a recommendation of what's a safe weight for that athlete to wrestle at.

Because it's such a large task, DeGain said he is wondering how the MHSAA will be able to handle it.

Gordie Richardson has coached CHS varsity volleyball and girls track for the past eight and ten years, respectively. He admits in all that time he's only had to deal with the MHSAA personally on a few

Cooley's cabinet

Student leaders learn from the best

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

Clarkston High School principal Brent Cooley likes to think of them as his "cabinet."

They are the student leaders for the 1995-96 school year, hand-picked by Cooley and the CHS faculty. Thirty-six of them attended a day-long leadership seminar in July at Spring Lake Country Club, and listened to a bunch of adults talk about the responsibilities of leadership.

While that might not sound like an exciting way to spend a glorious summer-vacation day, students sampled by The Clarkston News said they enjoyed the event and were honored to be considered "leaders" by their teachers.

Simone Lutz had to take a day off work at the Oakland County Courthouse to attend. "It was very worthwhile; I enjoyed it," she said of the day, which included talks by former congressional candidate Megan O'Neill and Oakland County Prosecutor Richard Thompson, both Clarkston residents.

"These are very powerful people. I appreciated them taking their time to speak to us."

Cooley has been offering the summer seminar to incoming seniors, including class officers, for the last four years. He also invited local residents, including three members of Clarkston Rotary (which sponsored the event and provided lunch) to talk about things like goal setting, community service and being a role model.

"I was impressed 36 kids would give up their day," Cooley said. "It was a beautiful day."

Cooley said he will be consulting with these student leaders biweekly in the coming year, and hopes the seminar helped them understand what is expected of them.

"I expect to enhance student awareness of the value of choices," he said, landing on one of his favorite topics. "And I use these kids to bounce ideas off. They become Cooley's Cabinet."

Josh Holst, who will lead the Bible study club this year, said he was honored to be chosen to participate in the seminar.

"I was really looking forward to it because I was looking for some training. I'm still looking for more," he said. Josh also recently attended the Michigan Freedom Academy, where he expected to pick up more leadership skills.

Josh doesn't shrink at the responsibilities that come along with the mantle of leadership.

"I enjoy that kind of responsibility," he said. "I feel I'm capable of performing. I look at it as somewhat of a challenge."

Simone was enthusiastic about the opportunity she had to talk one-on-one with adults at the seminar. She hopes some day to become a lawyer and politician, and had a lively exchange with Thompson about Dr. Jack Kevorkian.

"I do not agree with (Thompson) on certain issues," she said. "I have a certain opinion on (Kevorkian) and I shared it with him. It felt so good, being a high-school senior and talking to the prosecutor of Oakland County. There was a very pleasant air about the whole thing."

Simone also gave high marks to Cooley for considering the opinions of students. "I think that's fabulous that he takes time out to get to know us. There was a very diverse group there, different social groups. That's good."

All the students we talked to said they appreciated the opportunity to talk to an architect from Greiner & Associates, the firm which will design the new high school. The representative gave students a chance to make specific suggestions for the new school.

Student Michael Romein said some of the suggestions included a mall-style cafeteria, where students sit in the middle and can select from different food outlets.

"And we wanted something done with lockers," he added, noting current conditions have shown the halls to be too narrow. Students also suggested there be enough stairwells, since the new school will be a two-story building, and they asked for a radio station in addition to the planned TV studio.

"That was really fascinating," Michael said. "I wish I was a freshman."

Most of the students we talked to mentioned O'Neill and Thompson as their favorite speakers. Not so senior class president Peter Bertling, who preferred the three Rotary representatives.

Bertling has been active in service groups at CHS already, including Interact and Blue and Gold, and is working on his Eagle Scout status. He appreciated hearing from adults who are also involved in community service.

However, Bertling expressed some reservations about the expectations of leadership placed on him as a teenager.

"Leadership can be such a hassle," he said. "I'm a teenager. Everybody likes to have fun or goof around. Every time I goof around people say, 'You're a leader; you shouldn't be doing that.'"

Nevertheless it was his idea to run for class president. "I feel like I'd be the voice of the senior class," he said. "I have some ideas for ways we could raise funds for school..."

"You have to put back into your community what you expect to get out of it. I want more people to get involved in community service at the high school."

Weapons won't be tolerated at CHS

But state law, school policy will be reviewed by board of education

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

As the 1994-95 school year drew to a close, most students and their parents were looking forward to summer vacation.

But a few of them had a date first with the Clarkston Board of Education, which had the unenviable task of expelling some students who had been caught in school carrying knives and smoke bombs.

Under a state law which was revised last year, high-school students face automatic expulsion for a minimum of 180 days for possessing dangerous weapons on school grounds. State law defines dangerous weapons as "a firearm, dagger, dirk, stiletto, knife with a blade over three inches in length, pocket knife opened by a mechanical device, iron bar or brass knuckle."

In addition, Clarkston schools have their own guidelines which determine penalties for carrying weapons, which include incendiary devices such as smoke and stink bombs, fireworks and explosives—"any device or instrument capable of inflicting bodily injury" according to the student handbook. The two policies overlap but do not entirely agree.

That's something that bothers school board vice president Janet Thomas, the board's longest-serving member.

"A child can do as much damage with a three-and-a-half-inch knife as a four-inch knife," she said.

"We got down to discussing these things and all of us felt uncomfortable. We don't want to have to measure it."

"It's a small issue; it's not like alcohol and drugs. But it's a mindset."

Thomas said she would like to see district policy become even stricter than it is now in order to create a "weapons free" zone at the high school.

"In my mind if you have a smoke-free environment we can have a weapon-free environment," she said. "We have to say nothing that can be construed as a weapon can be at school, so we don't have to deal with these situations that nobody expects to happen, but they happen."

'Our kids have to be aware there are clear consequences. If you're caught with a weapon, you're going to be recommended for expulsion.'

CHS principal Brent Cooley

No one is saying that Clarkston High School isn't a safe place. However it is apparently not immune to some big-city problems, albeit in much smaller numbers.

"Usually some students come to an administrator and let them know they've seen a weapon," said Oakland County Sheriff's Deputy Dave Hernandez, who serves as a liaison officer between the schools and the sheriff's department.

"Very seldom is (a weapon) shown so a teacher can see it," Hernandez said. School administrators usually consult with him about how to proceed. But under recent court decisions, they have much broader powers of search and seizure than police officers do.

In 1985, the Supreme Court ruled in the case of New Jersey v. T.L.O. that student searches are not unconstitutional, as long as they are reasonable in inception and in scope.

What does that mean? According to the National School Safety Center, there must have been information developed that led to the conclusion that if a search were conducted, it would turn up evidence of a violation of the school rule or state law. And the search must be conducted in a place where the reported weapon could reasonably be found, and it must consider the age and sex of the student.

"Search and seizure in the schools is completely different for an administrator than it is for me," Hernandez said. If a weapon is found, formal criminal charges may or may not be filed, but a police report must be made.

Hernandez feels his visibility (he visits the high school every day and spends two full days a week there) and the administration's strict "zero tolerance" policy serve to let students know there will be consequences if they are caught with a weapon.

"You're always hearing the rumors, but very seldom do they ever do it," he said.

Thomas would like the atmosphere to change so that any such rumors would become inherently unbelievable. "It's an attitude of expectation and I think that needs to be conveyed," she said. "Sometimes children do things at school they would never think of doing at home. That's inappropriate."

She pointed to an example from the end of the last school year, in June. On the seniors' last day, someone threw a smoke bomb. No one in the class would reveal who did it, so there was no punishment handed out. The

CHS: zero tolerance for weapons

The following week, on the last day for underclassmen, another smoke bomb was set off.

"If it had been said, 'All right, we don't have graduation until somebody tells who set this,' then you don't have the stage set so on the last day a ninth-grader set one off," Thomas said.

CHS principal Brent Cooley is frustrated about such incidents and about how some parents react when their children are punished for such behavior.

"The families want to mitigate it," he said. He pointed out that students receive their handbooks in the fall which include specific penalties for specific education to put the weapons code on its list of key issues for the coming year. Board president Bill Craig agrees that the law is so broad when it comes to the board's role that "We have to know inside every kid's mind what they were doing when they brought it (the weapon) in. We've got to come to a more black-and-white way to interpret it."

Though Cooley and Hernandez feel the policy is working, Cooley said it never hurts to revisit it once in a while.

"I think we should follow policy until it's revised," he said. "No policy is sacred. Each case is deserving of review."

'Search and seizure in the schools is completely different than it is for me.'

OCSD Deputy Dave Hernandez

behavior. Students must sign that they have received the handbooks. Of course, no one can force them to read them.

"The law is clear on it, the handbook is explicit on (weapons)," Cooley said. "Whether they're aware of the policy or not, I think kids are aware they're not to bring weapons to school."

"Our kids have to be aware there are clear consequences. If you're caught with a weapon, you're going to be recommended for expulsion."

Thomas has asked the board of Ironically, Cooley said he thinks that if punishment were left up to students, it would be much harsher.

"Our kids like law and order. If I had them to sit in judgement over the kids, they'd shoot 'em," he said. "If I was to have a student court, these kids would never come back."

Help your child be a better test taker

The lazy days of summer are coming to an end, and kids are beginning to trade in their bathing suits for book bags.

At the same time, even though many adults find it hard to believe, many students also will be trading in their laid-back manner for a more serious and responsible attitude as they head back to school.

Although today's kids still enjoy the joys of childhood, like summer vacation, kids overall have become more serious than in previous generations. Due in part to the fact that kids are being given greater responsibilities inside the home, they are feeling greater pressure to balance home, school and extra-curricular activities.

As a result, when the school bell rings at back-to-school season, students and their parents are turning to organizational tools like student planners to help them organize their hectic schedules.

According to Dana Walker, marketing manager, Mead School and Office Products, student planners have become a staple for students during the back-to-school season.

"We have developed a variety of personal planners to help students organize their time more efficiently," says Walker. "In addition to the functional inserts like monthly calendars and organizational lists, we also believe it is important to include helpful information on everything from studying to tips on how to become a better student."

To enable parents to help relieve their children of some of the pressure they encounter prior to taking a test, Mead offers the following test-taking tips:

Before the test — The best preparation for a test is to study as you go along. Avoid cramming by starting to study for a test on the first day of class. By using good study techniques, you will learn the materials before the test is given. A positive attitude is also a must. Remember it is more important to concentrate on the information you know, rather than worrying about what you don't know. Lastly, relax before an exam. It is important for you to get plenty of rest the night before a test.

During the test — Remember to read all of the instructions before starting the test. Each question should be read completely before it is answered. Additionally, concentrate on one question at a time. If your mind goes blank, don't panic. Instead, move on to the next question. It also helps to answer the questions you know first and go back to the ones you did not answer later.

After the test — It is important to remain confident even if your first attempt was not perfect. Measure your success by how much you have improved over past performances. Don't be afraid to ask the teacher for help — most teachers are able to offer advice regarding a tutor, extra-credit work and other ways to help improve a grade.

Be positive — Creating a positive environment and attitude for yourself is the key to effective studying. It is important to create a relaxed working environment in which you can concentrate. Lastly, motivate yourself by getting involved with the subject. Learn how a subject relates to you and the things in which you are interested.

CHS orientation schedule

Clarkston High School principal Brent Cooley has announced the following schedule for orientation. For each class, hours are 9 a.m.-noon: Seniors, Aug. 21; juniors, Aug. 22, sophomores, Aug. 23, freshmen, Aug. 24.

Students will get their schedules, sign up for clubs, fill out emergency cards, and have the opportunity to buy season tickets to athletic events. In addition, seniors will be fitted for caps and gowns. Each day ends with a picnic.

Orientation "takes the edge off; it makes the first day go very smoothly," Cooley said. "It's a happening."

Give your kid a shot

School is right around the corner. But if your child isn't fully vaccinated, he or she won't be able to enroll in kindergarten.

Vaccines have virtually wiped out polio, a disease which once claimed thousands of young lives in the U.S. Unfortunately, preventable childhood diseases such as whooping cough are on the rise again, according to Henry Ford Hospital. This shows that children aren't getting timely immunizations.

Henry Ford Hospital advises parents not to wait for school to call. Take charge and help prevent harm before it happens.

MHSAA quietly does job

occasions. But he also said they have a tough job of watching over so many schools.

"In general, individual coaches don't have much to say because the MHSAA works mostly with the principals, but I don't have any problem at all with them.

"I do see a problem with having to keep an eye on so many schools and depending on the integrity of the people who are supposed to be in charge of the schools."

Richardson does say the MHSAA does a good job with its educational programs like Good Sports are Winners, health and safety programs, coaches education etc., and setting up state tournaments.

"We do need someone to do those things and I do think it would be mayhem without such an organization out there, but they don't affect me personally because I really follow the school district's direction."

Clarkston athletic manager and 13-year varsity boys hoops coach Dan Fife said the MHSAA does a good job of helping high school sports, but there could be some improvements made.

A subject that gets plenty of discussion is the question of whether public and private schools should have separate tournaments. Fife says it should be done but realizes it's a controversial subject.

"I think there is no question it's not fair to the public schools and I admit it's frustrating sometimes," said Fife. "But then I think about when we finally do get to the finals we'll be doing it with all homegrown kids—what you see is what you get—and that's something to be proud of."

The MHSAA's Johnson said separating public and private schools during tournaments came up a few years ago but there was not enough support statewide to put it up for a vote before the Representative Council.

"This always seems to be a cyclical thing," Johnson said. "Depending on how many private schools win state championships. There have been a number of schools who've brought similar proposals up and we do welcome anyone to do so."

Fife would also like to see the MHSAA and the AAU, whose youth basketball teams have grown tremendously over the past 10 years, work together so kids aren't overlapping sports.

The AAU season is a great time for basketball hopefuls to showcase their skills for college coaches throughout the nation, he said. The only problem is it begins during high school baseball and runs into the school year.

Fife said he doesn't like the idea of the AAU season cutting into a kid's chance to play school baseball.

Fife recommends AAU play be limited to start after June 1 and end before school football practice.

"I think the MHSAA does a good job and I see the strengths they offer," he said. "They are trying to keep high school sports they way it's supposed to be."

Playground debate shifts

"The other side is the state is mandating kids stay in school longer based on a belief that kids need more academic time. And they (Clarkston) are using a loophole."

Ironically, teachers will work a longer day this fall at their own request. Their new contract includes language allowing them common planning time, something teachers have wanted for a long time. However, the students' day will be the same length as last year.

Clarkston Assistant Superintendent Duane Lewis said he did not know how much the change would cost. He said the district expects to maintain the same number of building aides it employed last year, unless building aides with teaching certificates can be found.

"The reality is there aren't very many people like that," he said. If they cannot be found, existing teachers will be asked to volunteer, if no one does, they'll be drafted on a rotation basis.

Those who work recess will be giving up some of their planning time, but since the district has added more planning time for teachers, no one will have less than last year, Lewis said.

Lewis said he's had little feedback from teachers. "In one or two buildings there are some teachers who want to do it completely," he said. "In the other four buildings I think it's going to be rotational. We'd obviously like to have volunteers."

Boatman said she called seven Oakland County school districts and none said they were following Clarkston's example. Bill Craig, president of the board of education, said the board was informed many other districts are following suit. And he pointed out that under the new teacher contract, the district added days to the school year, so the kids will actually be in school longer than last year.

"We don't feel we're avoiding our responsibility," Craig said. "If you look at curriculum, we've made tremendous improvements." He also cited improvements in the district's standardized test scores as another barometer of how students are doing.

However, Craig said the board has asked Lewis to survey surrounding districts to see if they are adopting a similar policy.

"We were informed that predominantly all our surrounding districts were already doing this," Craig said. "It's a concern; are we sidestepping it if nobody else is doing it?"

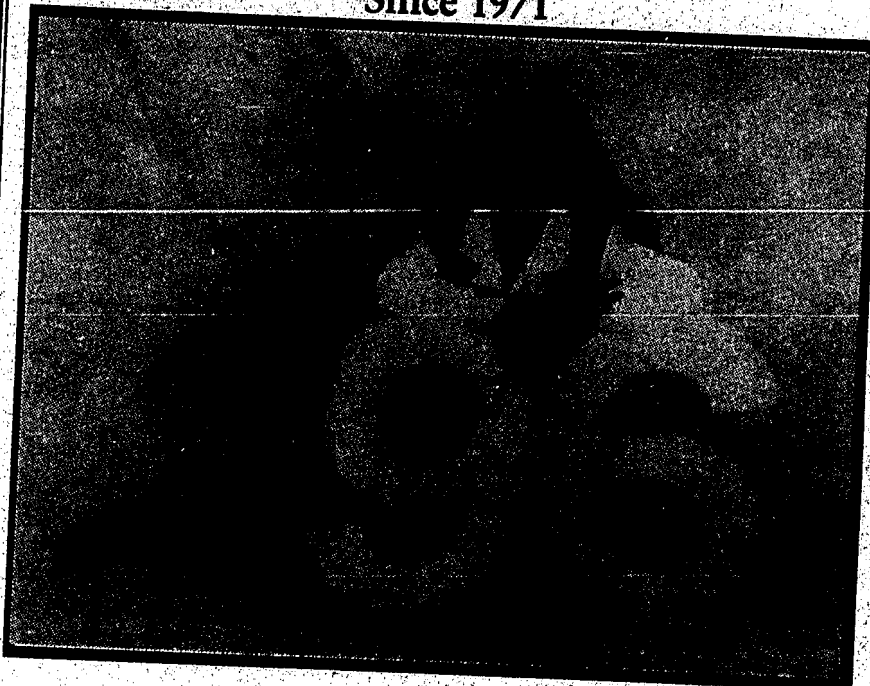

'This is like throwing money in a trash can.
There is no value.'
