Hear them roar

The Clarkston Chieftans cheerleaders send up a roar as they round the corner onto Main Street during Monday's Labor Day parade. The young ladies were one of many entries that stretched to over a half-hour under perfectly sunny skies. Parade chairman Tom McCloskey said he was pleased with the turnout, considering he only began inviting marchers in August. For more photos of the fun, see the back page.

Schools hire private firm to manage maintenance

ServiceMaster gets 5-year deal

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

ServiceMaster was awarded a contract to manage the maintenance operations of the Clarkston school district by a 6-1 vote of the board of education Aug. 30.

The move to privatize the work comes on the heels of a similar decision to turn transportation management over to National School Bus Services. In both cases, workers currently employed by the district will remain school employees, but a manager from the private companies will come on board to oversee the work.

The ServiceMaster contract comes at a time when the board and CLASP, the union representing custodians, are in negotiations over a new contract. Some employees fear that full-service privatization is right around the corner. Under a recent state law, such a move would not have to be negotiated with the union.

Custodian Jere Brewer, who is on the CLASP negotiating team, said the biggest fear of many employees is a pay cut to around $9.50 an hour.

"How can I support a family?" the father of three said. And he disputed ServiceMaster's ability to do the job better for less money. "You cannot save a dollar but putting money in a private company," he said.

However that's exactly what the company is promising. George Butler, the attorney who negotiated the five-year deal for the district, said the contract guarantees a certain level of savings compared to last year's expenditures. It also guarantees service at least equivalent to what was being done in-house. The deal takes effect Sept. 11.

"The fundamental question was can somebody do something for less than we are? And if it's not because we're not doing our job, then why?" He answered the question by pointing to ServiceMaster's ability to buy in huge quantities, savings which cannot be realized by one or even several school districts on their own, he said.

"They bring to the table certain items we could never duplicate," Butler said. "They are guaranteeing savings to a certain amount and they cannot pay themselves if we're not saving."

Trustee Barry Bomier, in voting against the contract, asked, "Do we also need, prior to approving this, to say we're adding another layer of management . . . Do we also bear some responsibility for the inability to manage this?"

Bomier suggested some pay levels may need to be adjusted since some supervisory work will now be done by a ServiceMaster employee, which will presumably relieve the district's supervisor of some responsibility.

"That process is under way," superintendent Gary Haner said.

Other trustees were more supportive. "I believe this is a good move for the district," said board treasurer Bill McGregor. "Not only will there be a dollar savings to the district, but the overall level of employees, who will be employees of the school district, will be enhanced."

"I feel very comfortable," said board president Bill Craig. "It represents an investment in the district . . . It's an investment in employees . . . I don't see any downside."

Meanwhile, assistant superintendent Duane Lewis said negotiations with CLASP are a long way from being resolved.

"We just started to put financial issues on the table," Lewis said. "My reading at this time is we have a ways to go."

Custodian Jerry Inman, who's only worked for the district for a year, said whatever contract is offered will tell him what the district's plans are. If a one-year deal is offered, "I know what will be ahead," he said, referring to full-service privatization.

Investment settlement final

Independence Township's settlement with PaineWebber was voted on publicly at the board of trustees meeting Sept. 5.

The board voted 6-0 (trustee Jeffrey McGee was absent) to pass the settlement which gave the township $310,000 and takes two derivative securities off its hands.

On Aug. 22 township supervisor Dale Stuart announced at a board meeting that the settlement was "dismissed," but no vote was taken after the announcement. Township clerk Joan McCrary confirmed that no public vote at any time had been taken by the board.

The public vote clears up the Michigan Open Meetings Act violation that requires "all decisions of a public body to be made in a meeting open to the public."

Township officials said that there was never any deliberate intention to avoid a public vote. State law does allow a public body to rectify an Open Meetings Act violation by voting on the decision in public.

At the Sept. 5 meeting Stuart said the roll call vote was taken to "help avoid and eliminate any question of the proper form of finality of the action that we took in regards to the PaineWebber settlement."

Township budget hearing

The Independence Township Board of Trustees will hold a Sept. 12 public hearing on the township's proposed 1996 budget and proposed 1995 millage rates.

The proposed property tax millage rate to be levied will be the subject of the hearing.

New facilities committee sought

The Clarkston board of education is looking for members of the community to form a new facilities committee to determine what the district's future space needs are for elementary education.

The board is hoping to find a good cross-section of the community to evaluate materials prepared for earlier bond issues with an eye toward a February ballot proposal for facilities.

Interested residents may apply at any school facility.

Work to begin on I-75 sound wall

The Michigan Department of Transportation has announced that work is expected to begin Sept. 5 on a sound wall along I-75 near M-15.

MDOT said construction on the wall, which will reduce noise to neighbors of the freeway, should not affect traffic. Construction is expected to be completed in October.

Morgan Classic moving on

Developer Mike Clark received approval to continue with Phase I but was also directed to get approval from the county drain commission to continue construction of a road through the project.

The township's board of trustees was expected to consider the addition of a 50-acre parcel to the planned residential development at its Sept. 5 meeting.

Lawyer/environmentalist guides township

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Legal opinions, lawsuits and court proceedings are part of his job, but don't represent the entire makeup of Independence Township's attorney.

Gerald Fisher is equal parts environmentalist and lawyer. He represents the township for his law firm Kohl, Secrest, Wardle, Lynch, Clark and Hampton and also lives in the township. Over the years as a municipal attorney he's worked on the front lines of environmental law, helping propose laws that help preserve natural resources.

He says the label of "environmental attorney" is accurate. "I would define that as an attorney who attempts to conserve natural resources along with allowing reasonable development."

In his 15 years representing the township, Fisher has helped in preservation efforts locally and state-wide. He's become one of the foremost legal experts in the area of land-use planning and preservation.

"I'm very serious about this," says Fisher, a Detroit Mumford High graduate who, while in college, was inspired by a professor who "had all these wild ideas about land use," and a 10-week British Land Use course taught in London. "I see the technical benefits of preservation as well as the character impact. It seems clear to me we need to conserve these assets. If we don't we'll lose them forever."

Mark Wyckoff, president of the Planning & Zoning Center in Lansing, an enterprise devoted to research, education and consultation in appropriate community planning, has worked side by side with Fisher on several environmental and land-use related issues, including lake access issues regarding non-lakefront property, growth management technique legislation and planned unit development zoning. He says there are other municipal attorneys throughout the state involved in such issues, "but where Gerry stands is at the top of the list."

"He stands out among them for plugging the issues the longest and focusing on a wide variety of causes."

Not only do Fisher's efforts benefit the state, but his own township as well. With the help and desire of several community leaders, Independence was one of the first communities, around 1973, to establish a wetlands ordinance, written of course by Fisher.

For all the work he's done in environmental law, Fisher, 49, also understands his job is to follow the orders of his client. He says township officials he's worked with over the years have also been interested in preserving the character of the community.

Without their desire for preservation his knowledge would be of no use.

"Rather than me convincing them, I've had the good fortune of being able to point out some of the issues to them and then allow them to decide for themselves on how to pursue," said the 1967 Michigan State University graduate who earned his law degree from the Detroit College of Law, and, in 1989, earned a master's degree from Wayne State University.

In Independence the focus of township officials has always been to preserve the community's character while allowing reasonable growth.

Daniel Travis, a trustee for 16 years, planning commissioner for 10 and resident for 30 years, has seen firsthand how Fisher has helped guide the township.

He points to several current movements in the township, such as a regional drainage system for the Sashabaw Corridor, keeping the north end of the township rural, and historic and rural preservation plans, where Fisher's expertise is invaluable.

"Those are very insightful, futuristic plans and they are the things we've all worked toward as a planning commission and board in this township," said Travis. "He has a great deal of sensitivity in those areas and has helped us with those ideas all along."

Travis thinks there's a reason why Fisher has become a state-wide leader in urban sprawl issues. Competitiveness. In college, Fisher was a goalie for his MSU squad, had a tryout for the 1968 Olympics, and played professionally with the Jr. Red Wings.

He says Fisher, who is married with a son, 15, and daughter, 13, is mild-mannered on the outside but his competitiveness is apparent in his dedication to his job, and on the racquetball court.

"He's been a friend and doubles partner of mine for many years and so I've seen his tenacity in competitive sport and in the courtroom. He is very competitive, although his style is to do so by gaining the most knowledge."

Fisher himself says it's not his style to push his ideas on people. Rather, he wants to provide as much information as possible and let people decide for themselves.

It's why the current national trend of lessening environmental laws — such as the current debate in Washington about redefining wetlands — has him worried.

"I'm convinced that if the current trend moves forward I would consider it a pendulum swing to the extreme. There has been overregulation (of some environmental laws) and I see this trend as a general overreaction."

"My reaction is going back to the notion that reasonable development must be available but at the same time you can't lose the vision and the need to conserve because the costs will be too great."

Fisher-guided legislation due up in Lansing

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

In the last five years Gerald Fisher has been a busy man.

Along with officials from five nearby communities, he has proposed nine separate Michigan House/Senate bills, hopefully to be passed into law.

Fisher, Independence Township's attorney, and Mark Wyckoff, president of the Lansing-based Planning and Zoning Center, were the expert consultants to the Intergovernmental Growth Management Consortium that authored a 250-page report on how to better manage growth and proposed bills which would help communities cope.

The report was issued in 1990 but Wyckoff says only now are a few of the proposed bills, mainly written by Fisher, being discussed among representatives.

Wyckoff says Fisher, a frequent lecturer on land-use regulation and planning and author of many articles on the subject, deserves much of the credit for bringing together representatives of the City of Rochester Hills, and the townships of Independence, Oakland, Waterford and West Bloomfield.

"What he's really been able to do well is work with experts as well as elected officials on these issues," said Wyckoff.

"In these areas, having an attorney on the team with his knowledge of land use and environmental law is a definite help."

The nine bills proposed by the consortium would, generally, amend or create state laws to allow municipalities more room to control growth management. The proposed legislation includes:

- Transfer of development rights. This would allow a community to designate areas for either more intense or less intense development.

- Purchase of development rights. Similar to a municipality's right to take an easement for a public purpose, a purchase of development rights would involve the acquisition of some of the development capacity on a parcel in order to achieve sound public objectives.

This would also allow local property owners to Taste of Independence returns

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

Building on the goodwill generated by community involvement in the construction of Bay Court Park, the Taste of Independence will return to the park for the second year.

The event, which debuted last September, combines the best output of local chefs and local musical talent. Proceeds benefit the continued development of the park.

This year's theme is "An Evening Under the Stars." Maureen Owens is returning as chairperson.

"We had over 200 people last year and a lot of enthusiastic people," she said. "This year we anticipate a larger crowd."

Emcee for the event, which will be held Sept. 10, will be Terry Stevenson, a local singer, pianist and guitarist. Stevenson performed at the event last year as well and is very popular locally, Owens said.

Restaurants and caterers who have signed on to date to participate this year include Mesquite Creek, Gregg's Catering, the Clarkston Cafe, the L.A. Cafe, Deer Lake Racquet Club, Rudy's, Mr. B's, Oaks Management (caterers for Oakland County parks), OPC and LB's Muffins.

The event begins at 4 p.m. with a cash bar and food service. Music begins at 5 p.m. and the evening winds up at 8 p.m.

"It's going to again this year be a collage of different kinds of music—classical, jazz, contemporary," Owens said. There will also be a large silent auction and many door prizes.

Without wanting to reveal what will be available, Owens said, "There will be some really nice, nice items that are available for bid as well as door prizes."

Also participating, as they did last year, are several local florists, including the Parsonage, Waterford Hill Florists, Keepsake Florists, Gayanne's and Carol's. Each florist is donating two arrangements to be used as door prizes.

Chef Jerry Rowan of Deer Lake Racquet Club, expects to be serving up a hot pasta dish at the second annual "Taste of Independence" Sept. 10 at Bay Court Park.

"They were absolutely beautiful last year," Owens said. There was even some horse trading, she said, by envious winners of other prizes.

Tickets are $35 per person and are completely tax-deductible. They are available at the Independence Township Parks and Recreation office inside the township hall. For more information call 625-8223.

Suit filed over clinic rent

The Clarkston Clinic and Dr. Ronald LePere have filed suit against their next-door neighbor, Clarkston Ambulatory Care and Dr. James O'Neill over some $15,000 in back rent.

The rent stems from the time when the Ambulatory Care center was housed, evenings and weekends, in LePere's offices. Last year the after-hours service moved next door to O'Neill's office. In both cases, the Ambulatory Care center shares space since it is open only when regular doctor's office hours are over.

The suit, filed in Oakland County Circuit Court June 20, says O'Neill owes LePere $14,550 from the time when the Ambulatory Care center rented space from LePere.

"The defendant has and does admit to owing said monies... but has nevertheless failed, neglected and refused to pay said obligation in spite of your plaintiff's several demands," LePere's complaint says, in part. The suit asks for the rent plus interest and attorney fees.

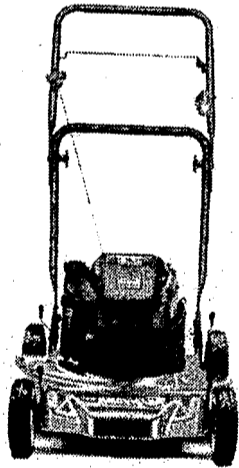

Contacted last week, O'Neill said he had no comment. "It's been resolved anyway," he added.

LePere's attorney, Neala Moore, said, "Basically we are attempting to resolve this issue at this time. The parties are in negotiations."

New safety feature installed on buses

Clarkston school children will be noticing something different about their school buses this fall. National School Bus Service, which now owns Clarkston' school buses through a contractual deal to provide management services to the district, is in the process of installing automatic crossing control arms on all buses in Clarkston and other districts where it has a contract, including Pinckney and Van Buren public schools.

Once the driver activates a switch, the arms automatically swing out any time the bus door opens. The six-foot-long arms keep children from walking too close to the buses and out of the driver's view at bus stops.

The arms, which are the same yellow as the buses, extend from the front of the bus parallel to the roadway, and basically force children to walk at least seven feet in front of the bus, where the driver can easily see them.

National says its the first major school bus contractor in the U.S. to install the safety device on its entire fleet, at a cost of approximately $600,000. Ten states now mandate the arms, but Michigan is not among them.

Why the expenditure? According to figures supplied by National, the majority of school-bus related fatalities occur when children are exiting or boarding,

Clarkston's transportation director Kevin Bickerstaff demonstrates the new automatic crossing control arm. The object is to force children to walk in front of it where they can easily be seen by the driver.

not riding, their buses. Industry statistics show that school buses equipped with the automatic crossing arms experience five times fewer accidents in the area in front of the bus that those not similarly equipped.

"We're very excited about equipping our school buses with this important safety device," said Douglas Meek, National's regional manager. "The crossing control arm will reduce the risk of student passengers getting hurt and reinforces our longstanding commitment to student safety."

In Focus

by Annette Kingsbury
From mundane to precious and back again

I guess it's human nature, but isn't it funny how sometimes something bad has to happen for you to appreciate something precious that you've come to take for granted?

Take for instance the Kingsbury cat, Boo. He has lots of faults, but we love him anyway. Mostly in his life he's been indestructible, suffering nothing worse than allergies, so I guess it's safe to say we had taken him for granted.

Now, it may be that he knows this. Every once in awhile he will disappear for a day or two for no apparent reason. Even though we treat him like a king.

He has a door so he can come and go as he pleases (we live out in the country and feel it's relatively safe). This allows him to roll around in thick fields, bask in the sun and even kill the occasional bird or mouse, which he then must bring home to proudly show off.

This summer Boo seemed to be suffering more than usual from his allergies. I mentioned this to the vet when we were in for a vaccination and as he checked him out he suddenly said "Something's not right here."

It seemed Boo had one very swollen tonsil. The other one appeared fine, leading the vet to the immediate, unequivocal conclusion that it was cancer, since an infection would surely have affected both tonsils.

The vet didn't cushion this blow at all; in fact, he was downright taken aback by it himself, or so it seemed. Imagine how we felt, though: Our Boo. Cancer. I sniffled all the way home.

The plan was to bring Boo back the following Monday for a biopsy. As it turned out the biopsy and all other tests they ran were negative; it was just an infection. But in the course of those few days, we had come to realize just how much we loved the little furball and would miss him if he left us.

I quickly changed his name from the simple, monosyllabic Boo to Precious Boo, for just then he seemed that way to me. I felt terrible guilt for not noticing the swelling, for assuming he would just have to deal with the allergies, the way many doctors tell human patients they have to "deal with" whatever is ailing them.

"I'm sure now I'll be more observant, more attentive," I thought, in making the name change. But a few weeks have passed and we're pretty much back to our normal routine.

Having put up with several weeks of medication, Boo is feeling his old self again and back to being Mr. Independent. Rather than just lying about, he's back to waking me up during the night, just because he feels like playing.

Letters to the editor

Clerk responds to protest ad

This is a response to an advertisement in last week's Clarkston News protesting the approval of Couples, a proposed restaurant in Independence Township.

Dear Pastor Allen,

Thank you for writing to express your dissatisfaction with the liquor license. As you may know, we publish the agenda in advance of each meeting. This is done so that interested parties have the opportunity to appear or write to the township board stating their approval or opposition to the issue.

No one spoke or stated any objections. I cannot say if the decision would have been any different if church or other neighborhood representatives had been present. However, at least we would have known at the time. The applicants have signed a letter stating they will abide by the township ordinance.

The application which we approved was for a resort license which may not be issued by the State Liquor Control Commission. Also, we did not approve of the entertainment portion which they originally requested. The request which we approved for the bar/restaurant has the same designation as the Deer Lake Racquet Club, Clarkston Golf Course, Pine Knob Ski Lodge, etc., which allows big screen television, music, dancing and food.

I personally agree with you that a bar is not a good idea in any neighborhood. The law does permit such establishments. If the zoning is in place and if the other requirements are met for distances from churches or schools, along with health and safety issues, we have little or no control except to meet in court if we turn it down based on personal judgments.

I appreciate the wonderful work of your church; I respect the stand you and it take, and I also understand your mission. Please express to your church family what I have explained. I am available to discuss this matter further.

Sincerely,
Joan E. McCrary
Township Clerk

Jim's Jottings

By Jim Sherman

Learn from it

I first printed this "lesson" in Jottings 25 years ago. The message is still strong.

Once, many years ago there was a great Indian chief who was renowned for his hunting prowess. The years took their toll and he could no longer take his place among the mighty hunters of the tribe. He was forced to stay in the village with the women and children.

In the hunting grounds of this particular tribe was a herd of wild horses, so wild and so cunning that the young bucks could not come even close to catching it.

Time and again the young hunters tried and failed until they reached the point where they gave up.

The old hunter volunteered his services, but the younger braves scoffed. The old hunter vowed to make them eat their words. He set off for the roaming area of the wild horse herd and started his plan. First he scattered grain over a small area and provided fodder and water. Every day for months on end he did this.

At first the wild horse herd ignored the offerings, but gradually the weaker-willed and the lazier horses in the herd started to nibble at the offerings.

After months of this the old hunter built a fence just one foot high. The herd, after a couple of days, stepped over the low fence and took the handout. Each week the old hunter would raise the fence a few inches with the horses exerting just a little more effort to get inside in order to partake of the easy food.

Finally, he reached a point in his fence-building where the final tier of logs was so high the herd could not jump out of the enclosure. He called the tribe's hunters together and showed them the results of his months of hard work and patience.

He waved off the young hunters' congratulations by saying: "Those horses kicked up quite a fuss when they saw they were trapped, but after a few hours they went back to eating the hay and grain I provided and drinking the water I gave them."

He closed with an interesting thought: "There is no animal, bird or fish on the face of the earth which I cannot trap and pen if I can just get him to depend on me for his food, water and shelter."

So it is with man,
Including you and me in some instances.

A look back

15 YEARS AGO (1980)

Preliminary enrollment tallies for Clarkston schools show an even greater loss of revenue than expected. The head count taken on Sept. 5 indicates a drop of 142 more pupils than expected. The preliminary figure is 6,622 and the enrollment was expected to be 6,765. Last year 6,844 students were enrolled in Clarkston schools. "If that stands as it is now, we'll create another $233,000 loss in state aid and that is not built into our budget cutbacks," Milford Mason, superintendent of schools, says.

Taxes will rise in December for property owners in Independence Township due to several factors. Voters recently approved additional millages for three projects: .3 mill to purchase 80 acres adjacent to Clintonwood Park and part of a proposed 480-acre gravel mining operation, .5 mill for safety paths and 1 additional mill for the fire department. In addition, the township did not levy the general fund tax last year, opting to use a portion of surplus funds instead. Therefore, the tax is back this year and 1.3122 mills will be collected for the general fund.

The Clarkston Wolves begin their 1980 football season with a phenomenal win over the Swartz Creek Dragons — 43-0. Clarkston head coach Walt Wyniemo reflects on the Wolves' biggest gridiron win in three seasons. "We just got on the board real quick and they got down." But, he adds later, "This was one game out of nine. We're all real pleased with the victory, but we've got a lot of things to work on. We've got to get better."

25 YEARS AGO (1970)

Both the Clarkston Board of Education and the Clarkston Education Association ratify the contract proposed by their negotiating teams for the 1970-71 school year. According to CEA president George White, the teachers approve the contract with 137 voting for ratification and only four dissenting. The new contract provides for a starting salary of $7,840 for teachers with bachelors' degrees and reaches a maximum in 11 equal increments of $12,490. A minimum salary of $9,250, reaching a maximum of $13,550, has been established for those with masters' degrees. Those with educational specialist degrees will receive $9,250 minimum and reach a maximum of $14,550. In addition, increases were made for longevity after 16 and 20 years of service.

Clarkston roller skaters bring home honors from the 1970 North American Roller Skating Championships in Lincoln, Nebraska. Lex Kane makes the most outstanding performance, placing in five separate events. He places first in junior boys' figures, second in "A" boy's speed skating and third in junior boys' singles.

50 YEARS AGO (1945)

News from "By the Way": Wasn't it a grand gesture on the part of the Clarkston Rotarians to plan and sponsor a parade on our first post-war holiday ... Many of the classes in the Clarkston schools are crowded this year, according to reports. We hope to have more school news next week when the teachers and students will be better acquainted and the programs will be organized ... Last Saturday night the Clarkston State Bank staff helped Mrs. Richard Bullen celebrate her birthday. They had a good time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George King ... If you are the driver of a car you are reminded to drive carefully. Accidents usually mean grief for someone so all should help to avoid them.

Stock up on autumn and winter needs at Carol's 5 cent to $1.00 store: six-inch stove pipe, a quarter, boys' coat sweaters, $2.89; children's one-piece snowsuits, $6.49; men's work socks, a pair for 19 cents; ladies' cotton stockings, a pair for 29 cents; and lawn rakes, 59 cents each.

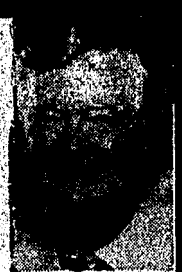

60 YEARS AGO (1935)

The two-day homecoming sponsored by the Van Rancelor Post of the VFW and local businessmen is a huge success. Among the most enjoyable and humorous attractions is the Kangaroo Court. "Cops" include Joe Skinner, Bradley Miller, Howard Huttenlocher and "Chief" Ed Fuller. Some of the prohibition advocates are charged with excessive drinking. Some who won blankets are charged with theft and practically all are found "guilty" and fined 25 cents. The receipt for the fine is a ticket toward winning a refrigerator or radio. Other attractions include a pet parade, a donkey ball game, a midway and refreshments. Youngster Billy O'Roark also wins a Shetland Pony.

Coming to the Holly Theatre within the next two weeks are "China Seas," starring Clark Gable, Jean Harlow and Wallace Beery, "Strangers All," with May Robson and Preston Foster, and "Werewolf of London," starring Henry Hull and Warner Oland.

Award victory outweighs aversion to making speeches

When it was suggested I accept a nomination for a humanist award, I initially misunderstood. I thought the man said humorist. Hey!

Many years ago, I received a letter from a woman who said I wrote something so funny she almost died laughing. The return address was a hospital room. I immediately phoned to say thanks and perhaps take her mind off whatever put her in the hospital.

Too late. She'd died.

It wasn't my fault. A family member said she'd been terminal for several months and, in fact, my column had indeed made her final days a little more bearable.

I never felt more worthwhile. Being funny is certainly more rewarding than ponderously pondering the plight of peons besieged by political potentates, especially when my noblest motive was alliteration.

So, despite my well-documented aversion to accepting awards that require a thank-you speech in return, maybe it would be OK to go for a humorist honor.

No, the man said, humanist, not humorist. To be presented by the American Humanist Association at its national conference.

In a typical display of my worldly sophistication, I excused myself to go look up "humanist" in the dictionary. The part I liked best said a humanist "is concerned with human beings, their achievements and interests, rather than with the abstract beings and problems of theology."

When I was a teenage chaplain's assistant during World War II, I criticized the chaplain for officiating at segregated worship services. He quickly had me transferred to an infantry company where, like it or not, I became concerned with human beings who were interested in achieving the same humane goal as mine: a one-way ticket out of the Army.

Ever since, my worshipping has been so unsegregated as to accommodate every human being everywhere, to each his own, and all that unholy jazz. So OK, I was flattered by the humanist award nomination, and I didn't have to worry about winning it and having to make a speech.

Because this was a national competition, and past winners included Kurt Vonnegut and Ted Turner. Lordy, without Vonnegut there would be no Slaughterhouse Five, and Turner is married to Jane Fonda. There was no doubt I'd be outclassed by the other nominees, a sure also-ran.

It wasn't until after my victory that I learned, through earnest questioning, that Vonnegut and Turner had won top Humanist of the Year honors, while I'd competed in a deservedly lesser media-award category. I didn't ask any more questions, preferring to just suspect I was the only nominee.

I'm reminded it was only a couple of years ago that I wrote about refusing to accept a similar award, even though it would have put me on stage with a famous athlete, simply because I hate making speeches. So what's different this time?

Neil Rubin, another wise-guy Free Press columnist, gave the answer when he wrote that honorees at the American Humanist Association conference in Dearborn would "include noted suicide doctor Jack Kevorkian and beloved character assassin Jim Fitzgerald."

I appreciate the juxtaposition. Kevorkian wants to end the suffering of people who badly want it ended, and never mind the pious protestations of those who insist God will be displeased.

I don't believe that because my God is a humanist. And I really didn't have to make an acceptance speech. I simply read the banquet audience Sunday's column. Onward and Upward, whenever humanly possible.

Columnist Jim Fitzgerald has retired from his writing at the Detroit Free Press. He will appear in The Oxford Leader through the end of the year.

Don't Rush Me

By Don Rush

Bits & Pieces from the weekend

In my household this past weekend was being billed as Slugfest '95: a time (three days) to lay around, read, watch TV -- to do whatever as long as whatever didn't resemble work.

I was looking forward to Slugfest '95. Visions of cool breezes, pina colodas and straw hats swirled around in my mind.

That's why I was surprised when we did all the laundry, dusted, vacuumed, cleaned out the closet, went through and tossed some stuff, cut the lawn, canned salsa and extracted honey from honey comb.

Why does it always work out that way? (And, why does that word -- work -- always seem to pop up?)

I seem to be getting a mixed message.

I find it amazing (and ironic) that the Uniglobal Conference on Women (or whatever it's called) is being hosted by China. This conference is billed as being big on women's issues as well as topics on family values.

China is not a woman, or child friendly country. China, for goodness sake, is the land where the government allows you to have one child. How's that for reproductive rights? The land where many times if that child is not male it's killed. China denies this happens, but investigative report after investigative report says it does happen.

This does not sound like the place where you would hold an international convention and women's and family topics. I wouldn't want to be a woman in China. That's why I'm getting a mixed message.

Or, maybe I'm just reading it wrong.

Heard an interesting tale about the builder and first owner of the Rush Domicile. The story teller remembered hearing about the time the utility companies wanted to put a telephone pole on what would later become our property. This would be in the 1940s or 50s.

Seems the home owner had already built his garage on the spot where the pole was supposed to go.

They must have told him to take down the garage, and that they'd be out to make sure he did. When they showed up they found him sitting in a chair, shotgun across his lap.

Needless to say the garage stayed and they put the pole in a few feet from it.

Shotgun justice in Independence Township -- now that's an interesting column topic.

CHSUE

By D'Anne Witkowski

Who me? A senior?

Summer went by in such an action-packed blur that I'm starting to wonder if it really happened at all. It seems like I was at school just a few weeks ago as a junior and now here I am again as a ... wait a minute, that couldn't be right, could it? I'm a senior?

OK, so I'm fully aware that I am a senior and this is my last year of high school and, really and truly, I can accept that. I have to, otherwise I would be in denial and being in denial is NOT HEALTHY, according to my therapist. OK, so I don't have a therapist. I'm not holding my breath until graduation, either. As of right now I am not excited to graduate, nor am I dreading it. To me it's just a natural turn of events, like death (though not quite so final).

It seems like this year, more than any other, I should really be doing something and enjoying every second of this. I should be filled with an enormous sense of accomplishment, growth and self-fulfillment ... but right now, I'm not. Sure, you can say, it's early in the year, but already I am one stressed-out high-school student. Already I can tell that between marching band, yearbook, drama club, writers' group, AP English and my own writing, this is going to be one busy year.

This is not to say that I don't like school, however. Fact is, I love school. It seems like a waste of time not to enjoy such a large (and required by law) part of my life. My dream job is to be a great English teacher like all of the ones I've had since the eighth grade. (OK, so my dream job is actually writing whatever I want and getting paid for it, but I think I should set realistic goals). I love learning and I love all of the great people I get to work with that I would never meet otherwise. It blows my mind that I get all of this education for free and wish now more than ever that college was like that too.

However, as much as I love school there are days when I really would rather be someplace else. After all, I'm only human. These days are few and far between, however, and usually my reason for wishing I could transport myself to another planet has nothing to do with school at all.

Say for instance, that I had a really bad rash all over my body which, though not contagious, itched terribly. Or that I had broken both of my legs in some kind of freak accident involving a street sweeper and a mail box. Then I would probably not want to be at school or anyplace else for that matter, save the doctor's office or the hospital, which are definitely places that rank far lower than school in my book.

I also am not a fan of the crowded hallways (where at times one can be thrust up against a total stranger face to face or, in some of my worst experiences, face to armpit); the lack of heat in the winter (I've never been able to figure out why cold air comes out of those vents in the winter and no air at all in the summer); or the stress (though I doubt I would be able to function as 100 percent stress-free). I will definitely not miss these aspects of high school.

At least I don't think I will, though I think this is a good marketing idea for those high-school nostalgia trip companies. Perhaps for next year's seniors they can offer a beach towel imprinted with the names of everyone you ever accidentally tangoed with in the hallway, or a heater for the college dorm that makes hot days hotter and cold days colder. I smell money here.

Heritage Hunt II by Virginia Block

Organizing one's material may be the next step taken before you look for one more thing. Despite all the clues gathered over the years, and the many trips, seminars, and "memberships," putting it all together first is a priority.

We spent an entire day recently with Janice McKay of Grand Rapids and were amazed at all she has gathered without being able to locate "Corydon (Gordon) Buchanan." He was found in the Michigan state census of 1845 in Milford, and still in the 1860 federal census at the same place, as a widower. Shortly thereafter, he reportedly married Julia and moved to Newaygo County.

First wife Lucy Ann? was deceased Sept. 15, 1854, and is buried in White Lake Cemetery. At Corydon's (Gordon's) decease, he was buried in the same place, in 1888. We could not find records in Oakland County for documenting any of the early data, but up to date, Jan has neither looked for or found a will in Newaygo County for "Gordon."

Clues overlooked until now will lead us to Mecosta County to the very town where our family ancestry is found. The name Losinger, Butler, Herbert (or Hubbard) and many other collateral lines need further research as well. Anyone searching these?

Since the president James Buchanan is reportedly a part of the Pennsylvania Buchanan (with all its variant spellings) family, one might look to Pennsylvania a little more closely since ("Gordon") Corydon is noted as being born in either New York or Pennsylvania in 1808.

As we puzzle over Jan's bits and pieces over her family, she also included a pedigree chart for her husband's family. Mary (Mamie) McQuiston (McCuiston) is the daughter of Julius H. McQuiston and Ellen (Ella) M. Burch. Alansin Burch married 1st, Amantia M. Hayes, 2nd Sarah Van Sickle, and later, Robert McQ. married Isabel Wallace, whose parents are thought to be John Wallace and Rachel Crooks.

Wow! You surely can find a connection somewhere in all these lines, if you try.

Jan has completed a Mallory line as well, that goes back many generations.

As we stated in the beginning, the organization of what we've gathered may save lots of time and effort in the future by simply keeping a research log and chronology chart on the person we seek. We repeat the need to study the basic "begin at home, with yourself, and talk ASAP with the oldest living relative you have.

Going on the information you have will lead you to what needs to be found more easily.

Happy Hunting.

The Insider

Too true

CHS principal Brent Cooley was behind the microphone before, during and after Clarkston's Labor Day parade Monday, keeping up a continuous banter of civic pride.

Cooley, whose school is way over capacity as he awaits construction of a new building, repeatedly pointed out how many people live here, then said, "If you're not part of Clarkston pride, consider moving here. We have room for two more."

People's Poll

By Elton Gray

How do you think the Lions will do this season?

DANNY CARR, CHESTERFIELD TOWNSHIP: I think they'll do pretty good. I hope they'll win.

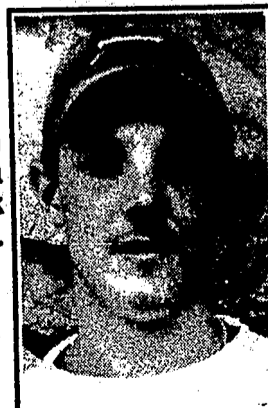

COOKIE OKROS, CLARKSTON: My husband's the big Lions fan; he has season tickets. He says they're going to do good—Of course, every year he thinks they're going to do good. He's very positive.

HERB FISHEL, CLARKSTON: They'll probably do the same as last year, because I don't think they're willing to step up and make the changes they need to go all the way to be in the Super Bowl. Look at last year and how Barry Sanders was helped in negative yardage. That's lack of good coaching.

BARBARA TIAHT, CLARKSTON: I think they'll do over 500 ... but that's probably it. They'll win a little more than they lose.

ERIK LESSEL, CLARKSTON: They should do all right. They didn't do too bad last season. I'm not a big fan, but I think they'll do pretty good. I have hope.

Bee sting nearly claims resident

BY STEVEN ASHLEY
Special to The Clarkston News

I would like to take this opportunity to give a very much heartfelt thank you to several people who all helped to save my life Aug. 23.

I had just given a close friend, Larry Newberry, a ride home to Plum St. & Almond Lane around 5 p.m. As I was visiting for a minute with him and his wife I took a sip from a cold beverage can they had just offered me. A yellow-jacket bee had gotten inside the can in less than a minute. When I took a sip, it stung me inside my mouth.

I had been stung many, many times in my life and nothing ever had happened. This time, however, was very different. In less than a minute, I got sick, got the chills and very dizzy and nauseated. In less than two minutes I was lying unconscious on Larry's garage floor.

Larry and his wife, Becky, caught me, immediately called 911 and undid all my clothing. In just two minutes the rescue truck got there from Independence Township fire station #2. They instantly went to work giving me oxygen, IVs, tourniquets and shots. They did everything. The Oakland County Sheriff's Department came and then a Fleet ambulance.

As I laid on that garage floor I heard a rescue worker say, "I just completely lost his pulse." A second worker said he had no pulse, either. A third said, "His blood pressure dropped to zero."

As I laid there I thought, "That is me they are talking about. I'm only 43 years old and I am going to die right here."

I can't begin to tell you all the things and thoughts going through my mind. "My wife, Kathy, will she get here in time to say good-bye?" My children, parents, etc. I knew this was it. I was yelling, "I'm having multiple heart attacks" until I lost my voice because my throat had swelled shut.

They later said I had gone into anaphylactic shock. I have since learned it is one of the least common, but most serious, reactions you can have to a bee sting.

Next thing I knew I heard Larry say, "His wife,

'This time . . . was very different. In less than a minute I got sick . . . In less than two minutes I was lying unconscious on Larry's garage floor.'

Steven Ashley
Victim of bee sting

Kathy, just got here." They said, "Keep her at the road and don't let her up here." I thought I must really be in bad shape.

Right after that I opened my eyes and was inside the back of an ambulance going down I-75 quickly heading toward North Oakland Medical Centers. Two or three people worked on me all the way, telling me to "Hang in there" and "Don't leave" them. They were on the phone all the way with the hospital. I prayed to God to please give me a second chance at life. And he did. All these wonderful people did.

One of the guys working on me in the ambulance later introduced himself at the hospital emergency room. He was our neighbor Jack Bailey, an Independence Township fireman. I want to say, "It is real nice meeting you Jack and thank you, thank you, thank you." Thanks to all the women and men there that night.

My temperature had dropped to under 95 degrees and I was in emergency for two hours but I am just fine now. I now have a bee sting kit I must carry everywhere from now on, but that is fine with me.

I would like to share something I learned that night at the hospital as a doctor came in and told me I had really scared a lot of people that night (including me).

He said from the time you are a small child and get stung for the first time by a bee, the venom never, ever leaves your body. It builds and accumulates all your life until, sooner or later, almost everyone reaches their limit and one sting pushes them over the edge like me.

So, please, don't anyone ever take any single bee sting lightly. Stay near a phone for help a few minutes to make sure you're OK. It very well could be your last as almost was the case with me.

I now look at life very differently and am very thankful to be here. It's very frightening to see how fast (in less than two minutes) everything can be over for you.

Thanks once again to all of you that night for giving me another chance.

Antal and Marlene Bencze of Fairfield, CT and Robert and Rosemary Jenks of Tampa, FL, formerly of Clarkston, announce the engagement of their children, Ilona Victoria Bencze and Lowell Alan Jenks, both of Boca Raton, FL. The bride-to-be graduated from Roger Ludlow High School in Fairfield and from the University of Rhode Island with a degree in political science. She is currently employed with John W. Henry & Co, Inc. as an executive assistant. The prospective groom graduated from Clarkston High School and from Western Michigan University with a degree in public law. He presently works at Cristensen Co. as a personal assistant. An October 1995 wedding is planned in Redding, CT.

Smith earns dance scholarship

Sarah Smith is realizing her dream sooner than expected.

The 1995 Clarkston High graduate first learned she earned a dance scholarship to Oklahoma City University earlier this year. And while she was excited to go, her dream was to earn a chance to train at one of a few prestigious dance studios in Los Angeles.

A few weeks ago, Smith got her wish.

The Edge Dance Studio in LA offered her a one-year scholarship after she auditioned against 70 other hopefuls. Only 17 were chosen to train, take classes, singing lessons and study for one year.

Smith says that along the way she hopes other opportunities come along, such as modeling, dancing opportunities or commercials. Being exposed to the LA scene for one year will give Smith a better chance of being noticed.

The studio scholarship began Sept. 5 and will end in August 1996.

First-ever PTA scholarships

James Oakley and Crystal Smith, 1995 Clarkston High grads, are the first winners of the Clarkston PTA District Council scholarship, given for excellence in high school achievement.

The two were chosen by the district council, representatives of each school's PTA, based on community service and the ability to improve academically each year. The scholarships are for $500 each and were raised from the road rally held earlier this year in Clarkston.

Oakley will be attending Central Michigan University this fall and Smith is headed to Michigan State University.

Letters to the editor

One person can make a difference

Dear Editor,

Over the summer, I have read some of the articles written by parents who were saddened by the fact that their 12th grade students were not able to graduate with their class. I wanted to write this letter because I sympathize with those parents.

My daughter was on the verge of being one of those students. But, thanks to the help of one determined and persistent faculty member, she was able to attend her graduation ceremonies. Neither my daughter, nor myself, will ever forget what Mr. Larry Sherrill did for us.

A couple of years ago, prior to Mr. Sherrill moving over from the middle school to the high school, I had requested help for my daughter, who was enduring verbal abuse from some of the other students. I had talked to about four other faculty members about this problem. Unfortunately, none of them did anything to help my daughter.

I believe their lack of concern in this situation attributed to my daughter becoming withdrawn and depressed. Until Mr. Sherrill arrived, she had no one to turn to for help. I had a difficult time understanding why a parent's personal request was ignored. When I had talked to each of them, they all acted concerned but then failed to do anything.

But, rather than dwell on the bad at Clarkston High School, I really wanted to write this article to express my appreciation to the one man who, even with his busy schedule, cared enough to always be there for my daughter. And, although he was not my daughter's assigned counselor, he still made himself available for her. I only wish there was an award entitled "Counselor of the Year" like there is for "Teacher of the Year." Mr. Larry Sherrill would be an excellent candidate. He should be recognized for his kindness, concern, compassion and caring for students.

Both my daughter and I are fortunate to have had Mr. Sherrill touch our lives. We can't thank him enough, or forget all that he has done to help. He played an important role in my daughter's life. Without him, she may not have graduated. We will both be eternally grateful.

I'm sure there are other parents and students who could attest to the fact that Mr. Sherrill is one of the most kind, gentle and sincere people you'd ever want to meet. For the sake of the students, more faculty members should possess some of the same qualities as Mr. Sherrill. He really cares about the students, each and every one of them. He is a very special person, and he definitely has my vote for "Counselor of the Year."

Synchronicity is key for drum majors

The Clarkston (MI) News Wed., September 6, 1995 13 A

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

In today's world it might seem a little odd to have a drum major—a guy in a funny, tall hat—leading fifes and drums onto the battlefield.

But that's exactly how the institution got its start, at least as far back as the 1590s, according to writings of the day. Today, the military tradition has been taken over by civilian marching bands at the college and high-school level. It just wouldn't be football season without a drum major and a marching band.

Leading this year's Clarkston High School marching band, some 200 strong, are senior Sarah Treder and junior Kit Cischke as drum majors. They are the ones who will be leading the band in parades and directing from atop high podiums during half time at football games and during marching competitions nearly every weekend this fall.

Both were chosen for their strong musical skills as well as their leadership, according to Mike Lewis, CHS' new assistant director and himself a former high-school and college drum major.

"Leadership is the big one," Lewis said. "They've got to have the personality that when they give a direction, (band members) trust they're giving the correct instructions . . . (And) they've got to have a pretty good musical background to be able to follow the score."

During the marching season, Sarah and Kit will divide conducting duties between them. On the field, when one is the lead conductor, the other will be positioned to be visible to those who might not be able to see the lead director due to marching maneuvers.

During a rehearsal in a hot, steamy band room after the second day of school, Sarah took the podium about 6:30 p.m. Kit stood next to her, but at floor level, his eyes on her hands as she began to run through a piece.

Every once in awhile, band director Cliff Chapman would interrupt when he heard something he didn't like. As the band played, Sarah kept glancing at him, perhaps hearing something herself and wondering if he'd want to stop. But the whole time, Sarah's and Kit's directing, with elbows high, never lost its synchronicity. That's top priority, Kit said.

"If you're not the main person (conducting) the song you're copying so the people who can't see can get the beat," he said. "If you're off, they're off and it can be a major catastrophe."

Keeping 200 musicians together is a big enough feat in itself. But when they're moving in different directions on the field, sometimes with their backs to each other, anything can happen.

Sarah said that puts a lot of pressure on the drum majors. She and Kit had their first assignment, the Fourth of July parade, only a couple of weeks after winning the job.

"That was pretty scary," she said. During intense rehearsals over the course of the summer, "a couple of times I almost marked time off the podium," she said. "I kind of feel a lot of stress when I'm up there . . . It's a hard job."

Nevertheless, Sarah said she welcomes the leadership status the job carries with it. A senior, she knows a lot of students in the band and carries a lot of weight. For that reason, she said, being a girl in charge hasn't caused any problems.

As a junior, Kit said, things are a bit different for him.

"I guess I feel like I have something to prove to a certain extent. I'm only a junior and I have to give orders and directions to seniors. I come off a bit more forceful than I am."

Kit said he and Sarah have different personalities and run in different circles. Her friends are "cool," his are "brainers." She knows a lot of seniors; he doesn't.

"Mr. Chapman has picked drum majors quite a bit different from each other," he said. "She's older and I'm a little more laid back." But both agree they are pretty much equal when it comes to the responsibilities of drum majoring. If one rises above the other over the course of the season, it will be based on ability.

Sarah Treder marches backwards in Monday's Labor Day parade.

Both students said they sometimes miss being out on the field, playing their instruments—that esprit de corps that exists only on the line. Sarah plays trumpet; Kit, tenor sax. But both said the job of drum major keeps them too busy to spend much time dwelling on that fact.

The job requires them to be, in effect, model students. "I feel a lot more pressure to be at every rehearsal and be there earlier," Kit said. "There is a lot more pressure to be accurate, be friendly and be on time."

However the added responsibility doesn't always transfer into status.

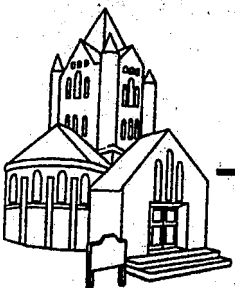

"One thing I found out is the drum majors don't get told anything before everyone else," he said. "That kind of surprised me."

petition for the establishment of a special assessment district.

- Urban and general services district. Would allow a community to designate areas where urban services may be provided. Urban services include paved roads, sewer and water service, street lighting, etc. in areas with the highest concentration of people and/or business.

- Concurrency of services and facilities. Allows a local government with a capital improvement plan to require that new developments also provide services and facilities for the development. As communities continue to grow, the need for facilities and services also grows, and this would help alleviate the problem.

- Official maps. This bill would authorize a public agency (road commission, park commission, etc.) to display its map in the municipality to show where future facilities (roads, parks, playgrounds, etc.) are planned. Official mapping would allow better coordination between and among public bodies.

- Regional impact coordination act. The intent of this bill is to promote coordination between communities where capital facilities or developments may have an impact beyond the borders of the community approving the development.

This bill presents an entirely new concept of land use. The bill attempts to avoid gridlock between communities.

- Development agreements. This bill would allow governments and developers to negotiate a voluntary agreement of give and take. For instance, a community could agree that a certain ordinance would not be changed for five years. In exchange, the developer would commit to certain undertakings, such as the installation or finance of infrastructure.

- Special assessment district reform. This bill would change a Michigan Supreme Court ruling that says SADs must be limited to those properties which would receive a market value increase as a result of the improvement. This new bill would allow a SAD if there is a market value increase, the property is relieved from an existing burden, or would create a special adaptability for use of the property.

- Impact fees. This bill has been debated for several years. It would require new developments to pay money for improvements that are related to new developments, and that provide a material benefit to the new development.

This extensive bill was also worked on by the county road commission and state department of transportation.

Wyckoff says the two bills that are receiving the most consideration in the legislature right now are the transfer of development rights and the purchase of development rights.

Part of M-59 reopens

If you've been avoiding the east side because of construction on M-59 there is some good news.

The Michigan Department of Transportation has announced that a 3.5 mile portion of the road, from Hayes to Delco Blvd., are now open, completing work all the way from Romeo Plank to Delco. Construction will continue over the next two years on M-59 from

The D'Anne & Don Review

The Joan Baez concert

By Don Downey

Sixties folk singer Joan Baez rode her peace train into Meadowbrook for an 80-minute concert Saturday. When I first heard about the concert, I was surprised she was still alive. I always assumed she fried herself away in the late '70s. So when my friend got 14 free tickets, I had to go to satisfy my curiosity.

This woman was at Woodstock—and it showed. I was instantly impressed by the beauty of her voice and the ease with which she played her guitar. I must admit, I was expecting her to be hoarse and lethargic from 40 years of pot. Her music was simple and mellow. Ex-hippies couldn't help but sway as Baez showed the audience she still had her touch. Then, halfway through "Blowin' in the Wind," Baez stopped, looked into the crowd, thought for a few seconds, then said, "Help me out, people." Luckily, everyone else at the concert remembered the words (thanks to the Forest Gump soundtrack) and was able to jump-start her memory.

The concert was enjoyable, if not particularly exciting. It was nice to have some live vibes to listen to as we stretched out on the grass. Many people in the audience, for some reason or another, seemed to want to fall asleep. But I thought it was worthwhile. If Baez ever comes back to this area, and it's on a night I'm not doing anything else, AND the tickets are free, I just might go see her again.

Editor's note: Due to his age, Don Downey missed the '60s and doesn't know Baez was noted more for her anti-war activism than drug use.

Industry to host Habitat kickoff

Before they get down to the serious business of making someone's housing dreams come true, the folks at the newly formed Habitat for Humanity of North Oakland will throw a little party.

Actually, the volunteer kickoff is required by Habitat policy for all new affiliates. The North Oakland branch, founded in Clarkston, will do the kickoff in style with an evening at Industry, the high-tech nightclub in downtown Pontiac.

The club will be closed to the public that night so Habitat can set up information booths and potential volunteers can mingle and ask questions. Hors d'oeuvres have been donated by restaurants in downtown Pontiac and Industry has donated its facility for the evening.

Habitat for Humanity is a non-profit organization which builds houses for low-income families who don't otherwise qualify for a mortgage. The homes are built with as much donated materials, land and labor as possible, and the homeowner is required to contribute "sweat equity." House payments, at below-market rates, are made directly to Habitat and help fund future projects.

"Lots of people want to volunteer but are unsure how and where," said Carol Eberhardt, chairperson of the North Oakland affiliate. "They think they're unskilled... Lots of times you want to do it but you don't know who to ask."

Guests at the volunteer kickoff will be able to learn about various parts of the Habitat for Humanity process, from selecting families to receive Habitat homes to construction.

Letters have gone out to the Clarkston community about the after-work event. Anyone interested in learning more about Habitat should attend; there will be no obligation to sign up.

For more information call 623-2154.

Later school opening proposed

Two Michigan state representatives said last week they will introduce legislation requiring all public schools to open after Labor Day.

Rep. Pat Gagliardi (D., Drummond Island) and Beverly Bodem (R., Alpena) said Michigan weather is consistently warmer and drier in late August and early September than in late May and early June.

"Since many families have to plan their vacations around the opening of school, or legislation would allow them to enjoy those last days of sunshine before the Labor Day weekend," Gagliardi said. "The results would be good for both families and tourism, our second-largest industry. When it is an average of 10 degrees warmer at the end of summer, it only makes sense to help families schedule their vacations then."

Vintage fashions benefit Lighthouse

Gowns from Civil War to flappers to be shown at Deer Lake luncheon

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News

Some of Clarkston's tiniest women gathered at the Deer Park Trail home of Kari Cook on a hot, steamy July afternoon to see whether they were small enough to fit into a private collection of exquisite antique gowns.

The dresses will be modeled as part of a luncheon fund-raiser for Lighthouse Clarkston to be held Sept. 23 at Deer Lake Racquet Club. They all belong to Grace Haag, a former Clarkston resident who now lives in South Lyon and owns a business called "Antiques by Grace."

Some 30 pieces from her collection of gowns dating from the 1830s to the 1920s will be shown during "Somewhere In Time," the first of what is hoped will become an annual event to raise funds for Lighthouse Clarkston.

During the fitting session, the models came to understand why women fainted a lot in the 1800s and why they needed ladies in waiting. Many of the women, who wear a size 5 in today's market, found the dresses wouldn't button around their waists. One elaborate wedding dress had no takers because of its ultra-tiny waist.

Haag said she has occasionally worn some of the older dresses and wears the comfortable, loose-fitting flapper dresses for special nights out.

"I costume a lot of people who go up to Mackinac Island for the Victorian festival," she said. Whenever possible she tries to buy in sizes 7 to 12 because "my customers want to wear them. Unfortunately, most are 20-22 inch waist and we don't remove ladies' ribs any more to make them fit . . ."

"Aside from something very special, I don't suggest people wear them on a regular basis. You're dealing with fabric that is 100-plus years old."

Haag said she started out in the antique business, then began amassing a personal collection of vintage clothing.

"It started out as a hobby almost 10 years ago," she said. "I started with a personal collection. It sort of got bigger than it should have."

Haag also collects and sells accessories for the dresses, such as fans and hats. She sells her wares strictly through shows, she said. Some of the gowns being modeled will be for sale.

"Some are my personal collection; the majority are for sale," she said. "My absolute favorite is the Civil War but I buy anything 1920s and back. It has to be spectacular if it's past the flapper era."

Her sources are mostly other dealers, who know of her interest, "or sometimes I'll just come across them at a show or a market," she said. When she thinned out her collection a couple of years ago, she didn't have to hire an auctioneer. Her customers bought it all.

The older, pre-flapper gowns really show the effects wearing corsets must have had. Most have tiny waists and big skirts that require bustles or hoops. Dating before the era of zippers, many have layer upon layer of hooks and eyes.

"No wonder these ladies had maids in waiting," one spectator said at the fitting. Another remarked, "That's why they had fainting couches."

Perhaps the most spectacular gown is a black silk beaded one dating to the turn of the century. It was made by Jean Philip Worth, son of a French couturier to royalty, Haag said.

Despite the fact it's completely black, Haag said it wasn't meant for mourning but was probably a ball gown.

"That gown is far too fancy to have been a mourning gown," she said.

Clockwise, from above left, Rebekah Foreman wears an 1890's blue winter walking suit; Laura Genovese models the Mermaid Dress, so called for its distinctive train (circa 1875); Amy Morris shows the back of a hand-made Battenburg lace opera coat; Cindy Williams fits into the most impressive gown in the show--a black silk and lace gown that is hand-beaded and hand-sequined. "It's hot and heavy and beautiful--so beautiful," she said.

"Somewhere in Time" will begin at 11:30 a.m. with a boutique of custom-made hats. Lunch will be served at 12:30 p.m. and the fashion show will follow at 1:30. There will also be a raffle and an auction of two children's "dress-up" trunks. Tickets are $35 and $50 and are available by calling Catherine Howie at Lighthouse Clarkston at 673-4949.

Kickers take two tourney losses

Lake Orion beats Wolves, then wins Oxford Inv.

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

It was not the start Clarkston soccer coach Dan Fitzgerald expected.

Coming into the season, the Wolves have their sights set high, but a 0-2 start doesn't bode well. Clarkston lost two games in the Oxford Invitational last week, but surely did not play up to its potential, according to Fitzgerald.

On Aug. 31 the Wolves lost to Lake Orion in a shootout, 4-2, after a 0-0 score in regulation and overtime. Next up was Brandon, which earlier lost 4-3 to Oxford in a shootout. The Wolves struggled early and lost 3-2 in the consolation game.

Lake Orion went on to win the tourney with a 5-2 victory over the Oxford Wildcats.

Fitzgerald said if his team would have capitalized on its chances, it could just as easily gone 2-0. "It was the first games of the season for us and with a few breaks it could have been different.

"Both of the teams we played were real physical and that was hard for us to match up with. In the Lake Orion game, I think both teams played well but against Brandon I was disappointed."

The Orion loss was a heartbreaker for the Wolves. Although Fitzgerald was pleased to see the defense come through, especially sophomore goalkeeper Rean Turner, he expected the offense to be more efficient.

"Both teams had four or five chances to score in regulation," he said. "It was really a well played game but we just didn't come through when we had to."

The game against Brandon was not a good effort, according to Fitzgerald. "We played awful in that game and gave up three real bad goals that hurt us

Brandon scored two quick goals, including one that was tipped in by a Clarkston player. The coach said it was hard to come back from that deficit, although his squad did score two goals on penalty kicks.

As expected, Fitzgerald said he'll juggle the lineup somewhat to find some better combinations, especially on the offensive side. "We have to come together better so we'll look at moving some players around. We just didn't have some guys step up to the challenge like they needed to."

Besides Turner's play against Lake Orion, where he made 10 saves, Fitzgerald said sophomore Shawn Verindin also played well on defense.

Hot shooting (53 %) leads girls to opening win

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

A 21-3 first-quarter lead got the Clarkston girls basketball season off to a strong start.

The Wolves easily defeated Davison 57-26 in a non-division game Aug. 29.

Coach Larry Mahrle was impressed with his team's quick start, but mostly with how well they played after that. "We got that early lead and never looked back. But the kids kept pressuring and never let up."

Mahrle's squad utilized speed and tenacity to disrupt the Davison offense. The full-court press worked to perfection as Clarkston guards pressured the ball all over the court, led by junior Sue Naboychik's constant pressure on the point guard.

While the coach expected his team to be strong defensively, it was on offense that they were most impressive, thanks to a stellar shooting performance from senior guard Leah Howard.

The co-captain was 10-of-13 from the floor, scoring 22 points, and handed off six assists.

While everyone played and contributed, Carin Kirk scored 10 and had six rebounds, Allison Richards had 9 points and 7 rebounds and Nickie Winn scored nine to go along with six rebounds.

As a team, Clarkston shot 24-of-45 (53 percent) and rebounded the ball well, two areas that Mahrle said his players need to improve in.

"Everyone did a good job for us and if we can continue to shoot close to that all year, we'll be on our way," said Mahrle.

Wolves can't top defending state football champs

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Kurt Richardson won't make any excuses for his team's 37-15 loss to defending Class AA state football champion Troy Sept. 1.

"It was pretty much all them," he said. "They were just a better team and there's nothing wrong with admitting that."

Early on the Wolves stayed with Troy, a new rival found last season when the Colts gave Clarkston its only two losses of the season, but constant Troy defensive pressure put the game out of reach in the third quarter.

At halftime the score was 10-0, thanks to some miscues on Troy's part, including throwing an interception to Clarkston's Bill Goforth in the end zone. But Clarkston wasn't able to generate any offense of its own and the score quickly became 23-0 before senior Tim Wasilk, whom Richardson credited with a strong game, ran back a kickoff 80 yards for a score.

After the two-point conversion, the Wolves were within two touchdowns, but Troy, ranked #1 in Class AA this season, once again pulled away. Senior Jeff Bemis ended the scoring for Clarkston with a spectacular 25-yard catch in the end zone from Dane Fife.

with a home game against state

"We couldn't run early and had to pass more but they came at us and we didn't give Dane any time back there," Richardson said. "We made some mistakes execution wise but they were in our face so soon there was nothing we could do most of the time."

Richardson said he was pleased with the fact his team played hard, had only one turnover and two penalties. With only a few experienced players from last season, the coach said he expects his team needs some time to gel.

"The key now for us is to play the game like we know how. Hopefully we have all the confusion and hesitancy gone."

The Clarkston-Troy matchup was one of the few league games played on opening day. Richardson said both schools want the game changed because it's not fair to either school to have a division game the first contest of the season.

Clarkston's schedule doesn't get any easier in the next few weeks. On Sept. 8 they host Pontiac Central, Class A's 10th-ranked team, and then play at Pontiac Northern Sept. 15.

Netters breeze in early-season victory

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Nothing exciting, just another non-division win for the Clarkston girls tennis team last week.

The Wolves easily beat Lapeer West 7-1 Aug. 30 to run their record to 2-0 in dual matches. But the wins aren't coming as a surprise to coach Dick Swartout. He wanted his team to gain experience and confidence in the early season because the Oakland Activities Association is a tough division.

So far, that strategy is working and Swartout likes what he sees.

"There are still some unforced errors we're making but the encouraging thing is that the doubles players are starting to perform on instinct and getting to the right spots," he said. "You have to be able to get comfortable with your partner and the teams are starting to do that."

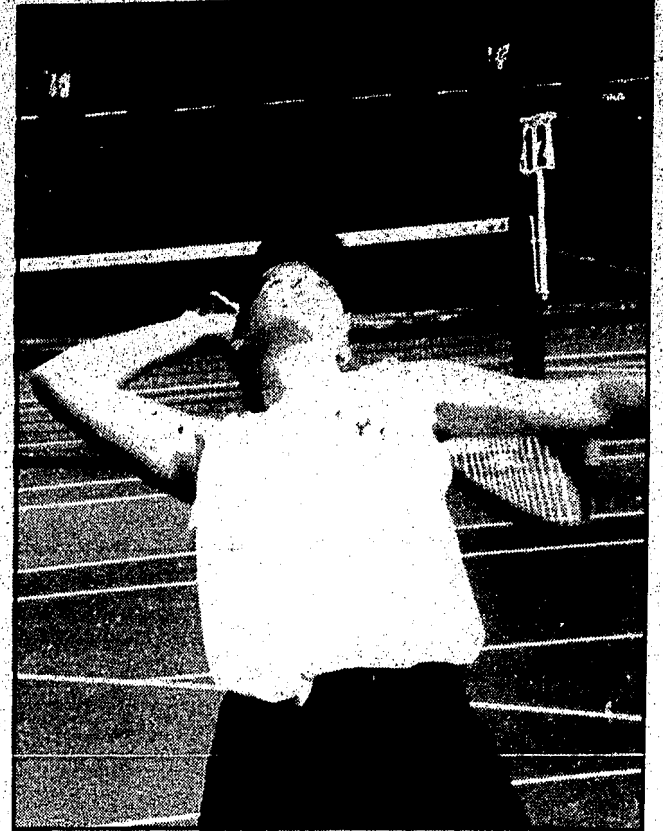

While the singles players are also winning and playing well, Swartout said he'll have challenge matches for those spots this week because the players are so equal in ability.

"We're pretty strong at one (Mary Schmidt) and two (Sam Schubering) but the competition is good for everyone," Swartout said.

Winning against West were Schmidt at #1 singles, Schubering at #2, Renee Van Klavern at #3 and Kristy Cade at #4. The doubles teams of Becky Olsen and Jocelyn Stock, Loren Bogart and Alaina Dodds, and Jenna Benson and Chris Maynard also won for the Wolves.

Sam Schubering (top) charges the net Aug. 30 in her #2 singles win while Katie Atkinson (right) serves it up during her doubles play.

Clarkston next battles division foe Lake Orion at home Sept. 6, followed by a Sept. 8 match against Milford.

● Junior Becky Olsen just returned from the prestigious week-long Nick Bolletieri Tennis Academy in Bradenton, Florida.

Olsen and junior Mike Aulgur, from the boys tennis team, received partial scholarships to attend the camp, headed by former Andre Agassi coach Mary Pierce and staffed by coaches from all over the world.

Basketball

Clarkston's JV girls basketball team began the season in good fashion on Aug. 29, posting a 48-34 win over Davison.

The Wolves took control early, allowing Davison only seven points in each of the first three quarters, taking a 37-21 lead. Cathy Eby led the Wolves with 13 points while Kristi Tippin added 11 and Amiee Giroux six. Tippen and Eby also led the team with eight and four rebounds each.

"We really played good defense," said coach Brian Ray. "We let up a little in the fourth quarter and they outscored us 13-9, but overall it was a good start to the season."

The Wolves next game is Sept. 7 at Lapeer West.

Football

Since Troy's varsity team is ranked #1 in the state, one would expect the JV team to be equally impressive. Unfortunately for Clarkston, they were. The Wolves put up a tough fight but lost 21-12.

Dan Neubeck caught a touchdown pass from Kevin Mason and Ron Grinold ran one in to account for the Wolves scoring.

"The kids played a tough, hard game," said defensive coordinator Tony Miller. "We were outmanned by bigger and quicker guys, but our kids did a heck of a job."

The Wolves take on Pontiac Central Sept. 7

Soccer

The JV soccer team opened their season by splitting games in the Oxford Invitational last week.

On Aug. 31, the Wolves lost 5-1 to Lake Orion. Eric Eaton scored the lone goal for his team.

On Sept. 2, Clarkston registered a 2-1 victory over Brandon, thanks to two goals from Eric Klem. That win gave the JV squad a third-place finish in the Oxford Invitational.

Clarkston's next game is Sept. 7 at Rochester, followed by a Sept. 9 match against Detroit Country Day.

The team was undefeated in its bracket and won the title game 15-3.

Richmond runs OK with injury at Crim

Marathoner Dave Richmond wasn't quite up to par in the recent Crim running race in Flint, but he still didn't do too bad.

Richmond, the Independence Township Parks and Recreation programmer and 1996 Boston Marathon qualifier, finished the Crim's 10k race in 60 minutes, 43 seconds.

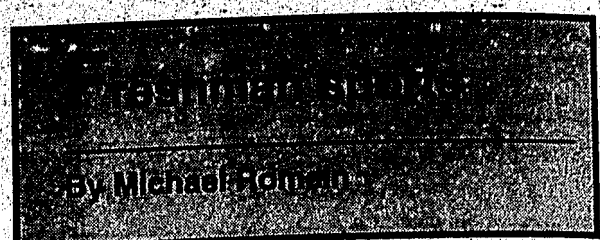

Richmond, featured in The Clarkston News Aug. 16, was about three minutes off his regular pace because of a leg injury he suffered about a week before the Aug. 26 race.

"I think I did OK," he said. "This was really a good gauge to see how the leg would be and I think I'll be ready for the Free Press Marathon."

The annual Detroit Free Press Marathon is scheduled for Oct. 16. Richmond says he hopes his leg is 100 percent by then.

* Another area runner who knows something about the sport also ran the Crim. Clarkston High School Cross Country coach Mike Taylor, as well as many runners from the boys and girls teams, ran the race.

Taylor finished in 61 minutes, 16 seconds.

Football

The freshman football team began the season at Troy Aug. 31 and lost 14-6 thanks in large part to eight turnovers.

"We had the capabilities to win that game," said freshman coach Dave Whitehead. "But when you turn the ball over that many times against a quality team, you're not going to win."

The lone Clarkston score was on an Eric Jenks to Chris Himburg touchdown pass. Ryan Kinkle led the team on defense.

This week's honorary captain is John Naboychik. The Wolves play at West Bloomfield Sept. 14.

What's new in business

New furniture store opens

BY EILEEN OXLEY
Clarkston News Staff Writer

She can't decide.

Diane Knas sits clutching two large swatches of plaid fabric, one in green and one in navy. "Can I see it in this navy one?" she asks. In no time at all a computerized image of the chair she wants fills with bright color and Knas has been able to preview both fabrics. Though the Clarkston resident may need a few more days to hone her decision, much of the guesswork is taken away.

Sound too good to be true? It is true — at Thomasville Home Furnishings of Clarkston, a new furniture store that held its grand opening over Labor Day Weekend. Continuing a 90-year-old tradition of beautiful and finely crafted furniture, Thomasville offers styles from the elegant classic to upbeat contemporary, displayed in artfully decorated, fully accessorized room settings. About 15,000 square feet of the 20,000 square foot building is devoted to showroom space, much of it arranged in those room settings.

For example, in addition to that lovely dining room set the customer wants, are plants and framed paintings that complete the color-coordinated scene. The prospective buyer can get a taste of what the set might look like in his own home. And, he'll get some free accent tips.

Owner David Orlando, a Clarkston resident along with wife Brenda and two small daughters, thought the community needed such a store. He formerly worked for statewide company Art Van in Flint. The store featured national furniture manufacturer Thomasville in one of its galleries.

"That's when I got introduced to Thomasville. I thought we could use something like that here. Clarkston had nothing like it." When he saw the opportunity, Orlando added, "I took it."

The project — to open a store within the Clarkston vicinity — actually became one of community involvement.

"We got as many people involved in the building as we could — from architect to drywall people," Orlando said. Ideally he wanted the location closer to the I-75/Dixie exit, but there was a rezoning problem. However, the new store, just north of White Lake Road, is within the fast-growing Dixie corridor from Clarkston to Springfield Township.

Orlando says there were several reasons for his wanting to work for Thomasville: "The quality of the furniture and it was a good value for what it was ... in the middle to upper price range. As far as Art Van was concerned, it was their top of the line."

The new store is one of two in Michigan. Orlando estimates there are about 90 across the country. Although some folks might think it more costly, Thomasville furniture is made to last longer by building it the old-fashioned way.

Orlando also likes the way Thomasville does business. If someone wants a couch, for instance, he can see the basic design in the showroom and then, with the salesperson's help, pick the frame and design via computer. The finished product — exactly what the customer wants — is built and shipped from the warehouse headquarters in Thomasville, North Carolina in about two months or less. There are 1,080 fabrics from which to choose, so a customer can have his heart's desire.

Besides a Clarkston connection, there's a family connection for Orlando. A couple of his brothers and dad Ralph, who once partnered with Art Van Elslander, are involved at the Clarkston store.

"Mark is a salesperson and my other brother Larry puts together the ads," he said.

"I just help out," Ralph Orlando said.

David Orlando is happy to be so close by. He's only a few minutes away from his home. He thinks Clarkston is the perfect community and points out the fact that architect Jerry Carter, who also designed the stunning front of Wint's Funeral Home, put a bit of old Clarkston into the Thomasville plans.

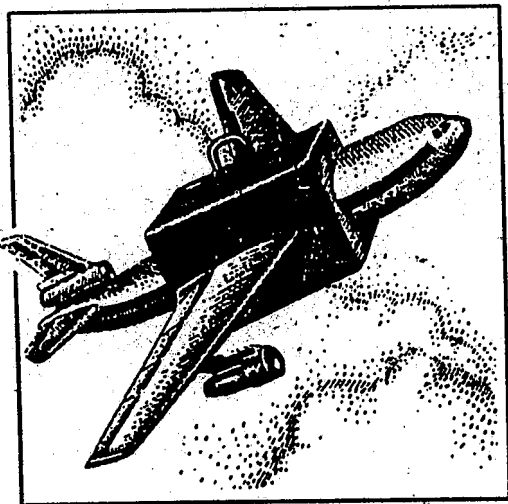

"What he did was interesting. He took the basic shape of the buildings in downtown Clarkston, on the east side of Main St.," said Orlando, tracing with his finger a rough drawing of the streetscape against the sky.

"And that's where he got his basic design from."

Thomasville Home Furnishings of Clarkston is located at 7550 Dixie Highway, just north of White Lake Rd. Store hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and noon to 5 p.m., Sundays. The phone number is (810) 620-3344. Currently there is a $5,000 furniture give-away contest. You may register at the store.

Obituary

Former township attorney John Bell

John Wright Bell's love of the law spanned almost five decades. As a lawyer who handled everything from insurance to divorce cases and specialized in lawsuits involving ski apparatus, he was also the first attorney for both Independence and Waterford townships. But he loved his family most of all, say sons Dawson and Zachary.

Mr. Bell lived in Clarkston for 10 years on a farm that later became the Deerwood subdivision. "His kids, including me, grew up there," Dawson said.

A portion of a passage written about Mr. Bell says, "His deepest attachments were, of course, for family .. for his aunts Margaret and Alice to whom he was so close as a boy and in whose home at Christmas time he could play 'All night bingo.' His most important relationships .. were with his seven children and his wife, Suzanne. He valued the uniqueness of each, and emphasized the education of his children as a way of developing it."

Mr. Bell, 70, of Waterford, formerly of Pontiac, died August 22, 1995.

He was born in Pontiac and served as a lieutenant in the U.S. Navy during World War II. He graduated from the University of Michigan law school in 1949 and went on to practice law for 46 years, spending most of them as a partner at Bell & Hertler, P.C. in Pontiac. He was a member of the American, Michigan and Oakland County bar associations, Young Republicans' Club, Who's Who in American Law and Sigma Phi fraternity. During his career he took special pride in serving on the Oakland County Mediation Panel.

Mr. Bell was the first entrepreneur in Michigan to open up a trampoline center, which was very popular back in the mid-'60s, Dawson said.

Mr. Bell loved his alma mater and held season tickets to U of M football games for 45 years. He loved to travel and trips became special occasions where he could nurture his many interests which included history, jazz, skiing and sailing.

He is survived by his wife, Suzanne; three sons, Dawson (Connie) Bell of Mason, Zachary ("Crinker") Bell of Clarkston and Nicholas (Theresa) Bell of Burma; four daughters, Leslie (Kurt) Maslowski of Milwaukee, WI, Hilary (David) White of Toledo, OH and Kimberly and Elizabeth Bell, both of Waterford; and 10 grandchildren.

Funeral services were held August 25 at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in Waterford Township.

Registration for all fall classes continues at the Clarkston Community Education Center. Those interested in the high school completion program should call the center, 674-0993 or 674-3141, for an appointment with an academic advisor. The center is located at 5275 Maybee Road. Should I go into Real Estate?
"ASK RON"

QUESTION: When reading real estate documents, I always get confused over the words grantor, grantee and grant. Please clarify in plain English?

ANSWER: Here's a simple explanation. A grant is the transfer by a written contract. A grantor is a person who transfers real estate by deed. In other words, the grantor is the seller. A grantee is a person who receives real estate by deed. You guessed it - he's the buyer.

I always use the words "buyers" and "sellers" in my column because readers understand that and that's what's important.

Youngsters learn from 'field experience'

BY EILEEN OXLEY
Clarkston News Staff Writer

When folks stop to buy corn from Martin Puroll and his boys they get an earful.

Puroll tells people there may be corn borers near the tips and shows them how to break the ends off. He adds that no pesticides or herbicides are used. And, he tells them, all the money goes toward the boys' college education.

For Clarkstonites Puroll and his wife Judy, Nicholas, 8, and Steven, 7, are the second crop of kids they've raised. The two older children, Michael and Jackie, go to Clarkston High School. They'll be going to college in the very near future and Puroll knows he's got to start saving for the younger two.

Puroll hopes to give Nick and Steven an education in hard work as well as to invest in the boys' academic future. Selling corn may raise only a few dollars every year, but it instills some basic values.

The three do everything from start to finish. They get the ground ready, plant, thin, weed, harvest — and sell, at $2 a dozen. They also raise pumpkins and raspberries at their home on Eston Road. And — unlike the Little Red Hen's selfish friends — Steven and Nicholas get to reap the benefits, besides eating.

"Picking's not bad. They know they're instantly going to come down and see the rewards," Puroll says. "It gives them the incentive to go to college. And they make change, so selling the corn is a lesson in math." The experience, he feels, gives them a hands-on lesson in hard work.

Their dad should know. He went to school nights for 12 years in order to get a better job at his place of employment. When he obtained his BS in mechanical engineering, he rose to the position of electrical engineer for Chrysler. Night school was hard, he admits,

Martin Puroll teaches his sons Nick and Steven the value of a hard-earned dollar. The boys raise a corn crop from start to finish each year and use the profits toward their college educations.

because he didn't get to spend much time with Michael and Jackie.

"I was never there when they were growing up. I say these two are mine and the older ones are Judy's," Puroll chuckles. The corn venture is one way Puroll establishes togetherness with his two younger children. What you sow, you reap seems especially appropriate in this case because the boys enjoy the experience.

The only bad part, Nick says, is that the sun's hot sometimes and Steven admits, "There are a lot of weeds." But their smiles are as sunny as the golden ears of corn they pick each day and sell from atop their dad's pickup. Puroll says the best time to sell is at evening rush hour when people are on their way home to dinner. The boys wave gaily to each passer-by.

Puroll describes the project, which he has accomplished with his children for the past seven years, as more means-than-end-oriented. "By the time I pay for the seed and all I'm lucky if I break even ... But it's a humbling lesson in hard work."

Safety is job 1 for crossing guard

Retiree is Clarkston's only adult on the job

BY EILEEN OXLEY
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Alan Hale sits quietly in his Chevy truck parked in a driveway at the corner of Middle Lake and M-15. Next to him are a box of Kleenex, his Bible and a few worn crossword puzzle books — all he needs for the next hour-and-a-half.

Soon a trio of elementary-age girls appears and Hale hears their laughter. He bounds out of the truck and greets them gaily, a tall, slender man with white hair and mustache.

"There's all kinds of strange girls this year!" he comments. The girls giggle and Hale walks with them to the corner. He pauses, looks both ways, and crosses them safely to the other side.

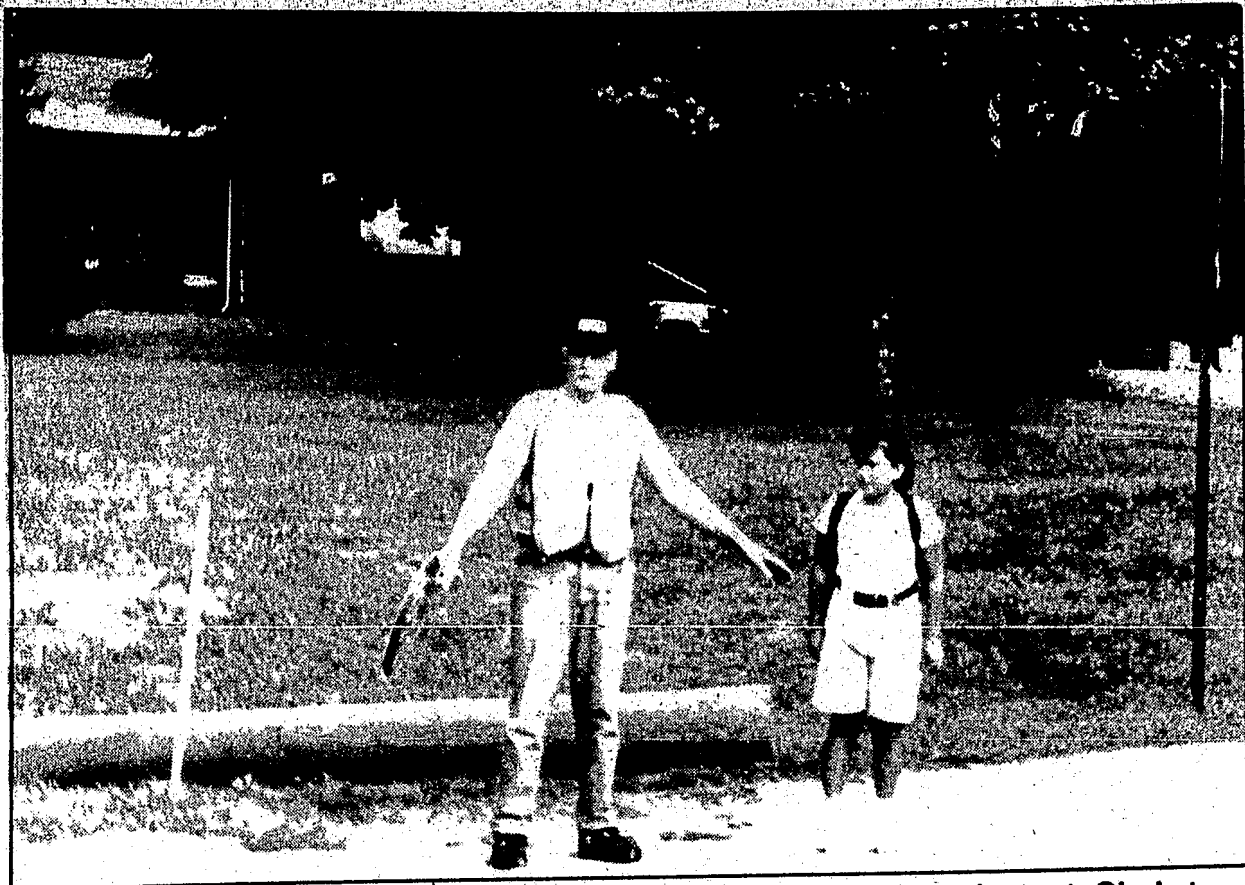

Never fear, Al is here. Parents don't have to worry about the busy stretch of M-15 between the downtown area and Dixie anymore. For three hours each day, 15 hours a week, Hale works two shifts, as an adult crossing guard for the Clarkston school system. He arrives first at about 7:15 a.m. and crosses children until 8:45 or so. Then, traditionally, he follows some friends to the Big Boy where he has breakfast. At 2 or 2:15, he returns and parks, waiting to cross children until 4 p.m.

The corner of Middle Lake and M-15 is the only place in the city where an adult guard is placed.

"Middle Lake there ... that's kind of dangerous for them to cross," says Art Pappas, city manager. "We've had an adult there for about 15 years. This is the third year we've had Al." Pappas says the adult guard is hired by Clarkston schools, but "the school pays half and we (the city) pay the other half." Hale gets $6.75 an hour for his work.

In Michigan, there are two distinct school safety protection programs, says AAA Michigan Community Safety Services Manager Jerry Basch. "Both are effective at reducing the risk of serious injury or death for young children."

The first program employs upper elementary and middle school children who volunteer as School Safety

Alan Hale, the only adult crossing guard in Clarkston, prepares a path for Alexis Roberts, a safety guard and student at Clarkston Elementary.

Patrols. The other program is a paid activity involving adults who are selected, trained and supervised by local law enforcement.

When former adult crossing guard Jim Watson decided to resign from the post, Hale said he was interested and the city hired him.

"Mr. Watson recommended him and he's worked out great," Pappas said.

When asked why he does it, Hale, 69, replies, "Kids ... I love kids. And it gives me gas money so I don't have to touch into my retirement."

This year, Hale and other adult crossing guards around Michigan have a particular reason to celebrate. Recognizing the valuable contributions they and student crossing guards have made to communities during the last 75 years, the Michigan Legislature and Governor Engler have proclaimed September as "School Safety Patrol Month." Neither rain, sleet nor snow keeps them from their posts where they protect schoolchildren from being injured in traffic.

"Patrol members view their roles as protective and educational," says Basch. "In addition to supervising behavior, they serve as safety instructors and models of good conduct."

In fact, information supplied by AAA Michigan states that since the School Safety Patrol movement began 75 years ago, the number of traffic-related child and adolescent deaths has decreased. The patrol program is credited for playing a major part in those statistics.

"The drop in the death rate among our youngest pedestrians is all the more remarkable," Basch continues, "when you consider that in 1935 there were less than 27 million cars, trucks and buses on the road. By 1993, that number had jumped to nearly 193 million. Without this program, the opportunity for tragedy would be all too real."

Hale is one of those people who helps make the difference. To him, the experience is challenging every day. He even gets an education himself.

"I learned a lesson too. I had to learn that you can't stop traffic both ways." Hale crosses the kids who live on Middle Lake and Overlook twice a day, to and from Clarkston Elementary, Middle and High schools but, "if they want to take the bike path down to Waldon Road they can cross at the light down there."

Sometimes, when it's raining or the pavement's slippery, he even drives them home, as he knows most of the kids and parents pretty well by now.

"They've got a way of going to school and coming home — the same every day," he says with a nod. Always careful, Hale says there is definitely a need for a crossing guard here and gets mad when cars

"I've had them so close I could read their speedometers."

Crossing guard Alan Hale

don't slow down.

"I've had 'em come so close I could read their speedometers. I swung my (stop) sign and almost hit 'em." He adds that the Clarkston Police Department has been a great help.

"(Former police officer) Harold Rossman used to come along and set. He clocked some of the cars going 55 miles an hour out of town. Sometimes the Chief (Paul Ormiston) watches the cars. The police department has compensated."

To the busy senior, who is widowed, the safety guard position was another activity he was eager to get involved in. In addition to his crossing job, Hale bowls, plays volleyball and softball, goes to church three times a week and steps out with a lady friend occasionally. He even works for Clarkston's Department of Public Works part-time, trimming the grass in Depot Park among other tasks.

"I usually get home in time to go to bed at night," he says.

He mentions again that he loves kids. All of his children went to Clarkston schools, he led a Boy Scout troop and he has 16 grandkids.

He pauses and turns his head as if his ears are radio antennae. One last straggler appears at the sunlit corner a block away. It's a young girl, and from the orange vest that covers her school clothes, she can easily be identified as a school safety guard.

"Hi!" says Alexis Roberts, a fifth-grader from Clarkston Elementary. She wears a tired smile. From classes to crossing, it's been a long day.

"Now I know why you're a little late," Hale grins.

The older crossing guard and the young safety guard make a cute picture as they pass the cars that have stopped. Alexis says she enjoys her job too.

"It's fun because I like to help people. It just kind of came with my life, I guess."

Facts about Safety Patrol

- It was during the 1919-1920 school year at Alger Elementary School in Detroit that the School Safety Patrol program began. The first safety patrol was a joint effort between Detroit Public Schools, the Detroit Police Department and the Detroit Automobile Club, forerunner of AAAMichigan.

- School Safety Patrol members come from elementary and middle school children who volunteer to guide and protect their classmates against traffic accidents. In Michigan, more than 36,000 students are active patrollers.

- Former school safety patrol members include former Michigan Governors James Blanchard and William Milliken, former Detroit Tiger Al Kaline, "Detroit Free Press" Publisher Neal Shine and former U.S. President Jimmy Carter.

- The symbol of the AAA School Safety Patrol program is the fluorescent orange belt and shoulder strap worn by patrol members. A metal badge bearing the AAA emblem is copied from a belt worn by police officers and conveys the need for caution to motorists and pedestrians.

- Michigan's pedestrian death rate per 100,000 children ages 5-14 has dropped from 6.53 in 1954 to 1.4 in 1994. Children in this age group once had the second highest fatality rate of any age group; today they have the lowest. School Safety Patrol programs are credited for much of this improvement.

Changing places: Assistant principals find new job, old job at high school, middle school

BY EILEEN OXLEY
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Suddenly, it's the end of summer. And how many of us turn our heads as we drive fast past school parking lots, trying not to notice all the cars lining up.

For new assistant principals Ginny Farmer and Melissa Kentner White, those cars have been steadily filing into the parking areas at their respective schools over the past month. Farmer, at Clarkston Middle School, and White, at Clarkston High School, have been involved in a flurry of activities — greeting the parents of new and prospective students, taking care of drops and adds and just generally trying to get things in order before classes begin this week.

For each of them, it's a position with new, challenging duties. Former CHS assistant principal Farmer steps into a change-of-pace role with younger kids at the middle school. White, who taught Spanish and French at both middle and high school levels, forsoes greater challenges with an increased student population at CHS. And both of them are rising to the occasion. Here's a look at the two A.P.'s.

Ginny Farmer

When asked to describe the role of an assistant principal, Ginny Farmer answered very succinctly — "to assist the principal." Like a vice president or a Girl Friday, the assistant principal takes much of the burden off the chief administrator's shoulders. Farmer says duties involve student attendance and discipline and providing order in school.

"It is the principal's responsibility for the overall operation of the school. The assistant is there to assist in that operation," she said.

Farmer, assistant principal at CHS for the past six years, is replacing CMS assistant principal Jan Gabier who retired last year.

"When the vacancy came up, I felt it was the right time to apply."

She'll be working alongside CMS principal Vince Licata. But, whereas at CHS she would oversee 1,800 kids, the enrollment at CMS will be about one-third of that number — "650 is a ball-park figure," Farmer says, predicting combined student numbers for sixth through eighth grades at the middle school this year.

A former Grand Rapids school teacher at Creston High who taught a variety of subjects, among them business and psychology, Farmer especially enjoyed teaching math to Vietnamese refugees. Before going to Grand Rapids she taught alternative and adult education in Clarkston.

Her background includes a BS in communications from Western Michigan University, with a minor in business, and a master of arts in educational administration from Eastern Michigan University. She has also done post-graduate work at Oakland University.

Her "points of pride" list at CHS includes the development of an At Risk Program, which was nominated for Program of Excellence in Oakland County, and the development of Teacher Assistance Teams to screen At Risk students. In addition, she was a sponsor for Blue & Gold and a liaison to the Parent Teacher Student Association (PTSA).

Farmer, a Waterford resident who is married and has three grown step-children, is looking forward to the age jump from high school to middle school.

"Basically it's a change in the maturity level and energy level. It's just a different kind of energy," she said, smiling. "It's a different age because they're trying to figure out where they fit in. The image of self-concept is more formable at that age."

That presents a strong challenge to the petite blond. But it's not only the children she's talking about. It's a learning experience for her as well.

"It keeps me fresh to change schools every so often. It's good for the students and it's good for me."

Melissa Kentner White

With student enrollment climbing from 1,700 last year to an estimated 1,825 students this year, Melissa Kentner White's "class size" will be a lot larger than the 30-or-so French and Spanish students she had each period.

"We have a very large freshman class this year," White said.

Though she's had to put callers on hold as the frenzy of the new year begins and parents pop in for interviews, White seems to be handling it. Trim and smiling, she's the kind of person you'd like to meet first as you step inside the high school doors.

"I've been talking to parents, holding orientations, registering new students for the district, preparing for the school year and hiring new teachers," she says, apologizing for a slight delay before an interview with the Clarkston News reporter. She had just finished meeting with the parents of a prospective high-schooler.

White, who taught the two languages, first at SMS for six years and then at CHS for the last two, will be one of three assistant principals helping out high school principal Brent Cooley. All have individual roles. Where Bob Camaiani does master schedules, counseling and directs specific needs for students as well as dealing with ninth-graders and Ron Santavica has other duties and works with the twelfth-grade class, White will handle the "middle child" group. Her duties will involve attendance and discipline for tenth- and eleventh-graders.

Where most parents have one or several children to discipline, try multiplying that by several hundred for White.

"I'm not worried about it. I'm sure the first year will be very interesting," she said with a laugh. "It will be very much a learning year ... We have great kids in Clarkston, nice families, very supportive parents for the most part."

A graduate of Ohio State, White received her BS in Spanish and French education. Then she went on to receive her master's in educational administration for grades K-12 from Michigan State University. She's been married for two-and-a-half years.

Responsible for disciplinary measures — when necessary — White would like to avoid that situation that makes teenage hearts beat a little faster — the dreaded trip to the assistant principal's or principal's office.

"I really would like to, rather than punish behavior, figure out what's the best way to work with each child. Each one is different ... It depends on the situation. Though every child is different, we do have a policy and we do try to follow that policy as closely as possible. Most of our discipline is handled in the classroom. The teachers do a great job."

Stepping up to a position that involves older students than those she taught at SMS, White feels growing up is half the battle.

"I love working with the high school age — They're great. They're more mature, they know what's expected with them, it doesn't need to be spelled out for them. They take responsibility for the most part."

And she's especially excited about the new high school that's coming. She expects those doors will open in 1998.

"The seniors are helping us so much in planning it." She was glad to witness the kind of comments a teacher loves to hear.

"A couple said they'd like to come back and teach."

Last gasp of summer

The last glorious burst of summer brought out a big crowd for Clarkston's Labor Day parade Monday. As people staked out a spot with their lawn chairs along Main St., Clarkston High School principal Brent Cooley kept up a running commentary on the weather, the crowds, and just anybody he knew who happened to walk by.

The parade, which is sponsored by Clarkston Rotary, was chaired this year by Rotarian Tom McCloskey. Grand marshal was Bob Jones.

The parade lasted over a half-hour.

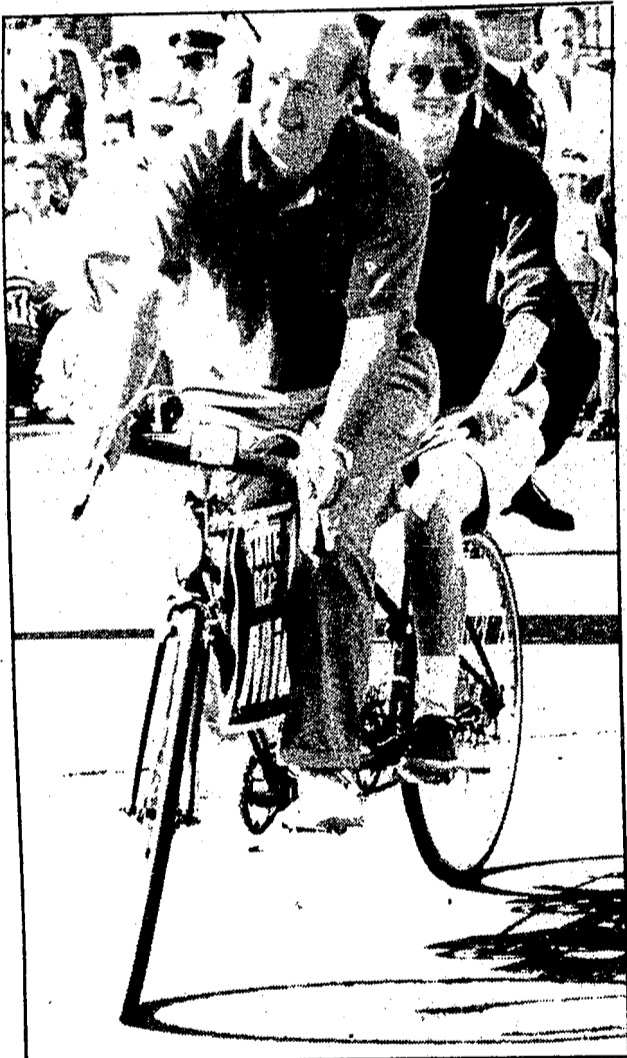

I enjoyed it immensely," McCloskey said. "We had a great deal of fun. I'm very pleased with the way it turned out; I'm very pleased with the way everybody showed up and understood our short notice."

McCloskey invited residents to contact him regarding what they would like to see in the parade next year or what they would like to see different. Write him at 3983 Ortonville Rd., Clarkston, MI 48348.

"I've always started planning for next year's parade. I've already lined up the Marine Corps... Wait till next year."

Boot camp inmates show their precision drills.

Tom and Kathy Middleton entered the parade on their bicycle built for two.

Main Street was crowded under sunny skies.

Bob Jones was the parade grand marshal.

This clown was happy to pose for the camera.

Many brought their pets, including this ferret.
