School's out for Haner in June

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

Reading from a prepared statement, Clarkston school superintendent Gary Haner announced Monday night that he is retiring from public education at the end of the school year.

Haner, who has been superintendent in Clarkston since 1988, will receive a two-percent pay hike for his last year on the job, based on a 5-2 vote by the board of education Monday night.

Haner said he is planning to collect his pension, as allowed by Michigan law, and move into another career. He said he hasn't made up his mind yet what that will be, though he is interested in politics.

"I'm undecided and that's by design," he said after the meeting. "I really wanted to make the decision to do a career transition independent of what that would be."

When asked if he was interested in working in state government, Haner said, "Those are certainly points of interest to me."

Haner began his education career in Clarkston. After earning a BS from Central Michigan University in 1966, he student taught at the old Sashabaw Elementary School and Pine Knob. He later earned an MS in school administration from Michigan State and was first named a superintendent for Martin Public Schools. He came to Clarkston in July, 1988.

"I'm very proud of all we have done here in Clarkston since 1988," Haner said in his prepared statement. "I leave with a sense of pride in where this district is going."

After accepting his retirement, the board voted Monday night to approve a severance agreement that will give Haner a $25,000 lump sum for retiring early. The same settlement has been offered to teachers the last few years.

His tenure here has been marked by controversy over his style. Few people are ambivalent about him. Several supporters spoke in his behalf Monday night.

"I think we can see the district has moved forward," said school-board trustee Sheila Hughes. "It wasn't always easy. There were a lot of hard times for all of us. But I think Gary has put that behind him."

Tom Brown, a teacher and president of the teachers' union, credited Haner with bringing in a better bargaining system for contract negotiations.

"We have disagreed and we have agreed," Brown said. "We think that process (of negotiating) has brought a lot of understanding between the administration and teachers. Thank you, Gary."

But the discussion ended with the obvious divisions that have plagued the board when it comes to Haner. The vote on a two percent raise to his $104,639 salary was not without disagreement. Trustee Barry Bomier said it was inconsistent with what the district has offered other employees this year and raises the stakes when it comes to hiring the next superintendent.

"I think we're on the upper tier (of superintendent pay) and I think we need to move cautiously," he said. Haner pointed out that his administrators have received far greater pay increases than he has in the last three years.

In the end there was no roll-call vote, but it sounded like two "no" votes were recorded against the raise, which is retroactive to July 1, 1995.

The board now begins the arduous task of finding a new superintendent. Special meetings have already been set for Jan. 29-30 to begin learning about the process. It's likely the board will decide to work with a search firm.

Haner said he was making his announcement now, rather than later, to give the board a head start in finding the best possible candidates.

"I believe it is better for a new superintendent to join the district in 1996 as new construction begins on Clarkston High School, rather than waiting until 1997 when my current contract expires," he said in his prepared statement. "Second, announcing these plans in January will give the school board an early start in their search for a replacement."

No raises for township officials

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

For the second straight year, Independence Township's top three elected officials will not receive a raise.

The recommendation came from supervisor Dale Stuart and the board of trustees gave its approval Jan. 9. At that meeting, the issue was not discussed by the board, but township officials confirmed in December of last year that raises weren't given in 1995 because of the tangle of investment problems the township was in.

The same holds true for 1996, officials confirmed this week.

Stuart said, "With regard to the elected officials, I did not feel comfortable with recommending a change in those salaries."

Lutz, treasurer for 11 years who will run for his fourth term in November, said receiving no raise is nothing new. "The salary was set when I was elected four years ago, so I never expect a raise. It's happened before several times since I've been in office."

Clerk Joan McCrary confirmed that raises aren't given to elected officials automatically each year, but she did say this time it's not fair.

The news in brief

House's deck struck by car

A 39-year-old Grand Blanc man was cited for reckless driving after Oakland County Sheriff's deputies found him wandering on Rattalee Lake Rd. in Independence Township Jan. 9.

Deputies believe the man was involved in a hit-and-run accident on I-75. While fleeing the accident he hit a tree, drove down an embankment and landed on the deck of a house on Ellis Rd. He was found walking about a mile from the house. A witness said the car had been traveling in excess of 80 MPH without headlights on M-15.

Tougher status sought for seat belt law

A bill has been introduced in the Michigan House that would allow police officers to pull over and ticket people just for not wearing seatbelts.

Seat belts in Michigan currently have secondary enforcement status, meaning you can only be ticketed for not wearing one if you're pulled over for another offense. According to Betty Mercer, executive director of the Office of Highway Safety Planning, seat-belt usage would rise 10-15 percent by changing the enforcement status alone.

"Experience shows that just based on publicity, you get 10-15 percent better compliance without writing more citations," she said.

The most recent state survey shows motorists use seat belts 66.8 percent of the time, up only slightly from 1994. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration estimates Michigan could save 100 lives and prevent 3,000 serious injuries annually with a 15 percent increase in seat-belt usage.

IRS cuts help

The Internal Revenue Service said it will no longer help taxpayers on a walk-in basis at its Pontiac office due to "the current efforts to downsize and reorganize the federal government."

In a press release this week, the IRS said only offices in Detroit, Grand Rapids, Saginaw and Marquette will offer walk-in service, publications and tax forms. Anyone not going into those offices will have to call for assistance.

For forms and publications, call 1-800-829-3676. For automated refund information call 1-800-829-4477 (after March 1). For all other questions, call 1-800-829-1040.

New string program expands musical options

Waterford starts Suzuki program through it's new Community Talent Education

BY EILEEN OXLEY
Clarkston News Staff Writer

The fifth-grade students at Schoolcraft Elementary stand poised and ready with their instruments. Violins and violas held high, their bows are positioned as Maggie Jarvis offers a gentle-but-firm reminder.

"Remember what I told you — point your bows to that corner of the room."

A few reposition themselves, not breaking their concentration one bit as Jarvis leads them in a unified rendition of "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star."

"They've only been playing since October," she explains, proudly. Already, they're looking forward to the next piece with great enthusiasm which Jarvis announces will be "Lightly Row."

When class is over the students gleefully return to chatter, amid the thumps of instrument cases being closed for the day. Jarvis puts away her instrument also and swings several bags over her shoulder. "You can always tell who's the music teacher 'cause they have the most stuff," she jokes, trudging down the hall with heavily burdened steps.

At 22 this is her first teaching job since she graduated from New York's Ithaca College last year with a bachelor's in music. The job literally "fell into my lap. This is more than I could have dreamed of just coming out of college."

For her it's the culmination of a serious music education begun at the age of six with Suzuki violin lessons.

Dr. Andrew Dabczynski, head of Waterford Schools' Fine Arts Department, was looking for someone with Jarvis' background. Because of a growing need for string instrument instruction in the area, Dabczynski had two goals: to reinstate the string program for Waterford's fifth-graders "after the absence of a generation" and to introduce an extra-curricular Suzuki-style string program open to all.

"I saw a Suzuki program waiting to happen," Dabczynski says. Through the new Waterford Community Talent Education, he hoped to instill the Suzuki method of teaching which is geared toward early childhood.

Founded by famed Japanese music instructor Shin'chi Suzuki, the method begins by instructing small children, as young as 3 years old, in a playing-by-ear approach. Through rote, in mimicking their teachers, children are taught in much the same way as they learn their own culture's language.

"It's based on the notion that children can learn best by ear in a playful manner, much as they learn their mother tongue," Dabczynski says. Through a teamwork effort, student, teacher and parent are involved in the process. Later, after a firm foundation is established, children are introduced to reading music. That's because initially they have to concentrate eyes and ears on their instruments, says Jarvis.

Based at the Stepanski Early Childhood Center, Dabczynski says he hopes that by the time the young musicians grow up "the string program will be quite healthy. I can see all kinds of things happening (like) beginning orchestras."

But instruction is not limited to pre-schoolers.

"While the Suzuki instrumental program really is primarily orthodoxly intended for getting students at the early childhood level, it is also a mode of instruction that is appropriate for any age student. We even have some adults sign up for it."

Suzuki string instructor Maggie Jarvis leads a group of fifth-graders.

Instruction in violin, viola and beginning cello is given on a both a private and semi-private (two to five students at a time) basis.

Dabczynski says his string program is the only one like it in North Oakland County. He stresses "a tremendous need for extra-curricular instruction in this community, in this area, particularly in strings." Though the program is intended for Waterford residents, Clarkston students may register "if space allows." Already several young students from Clarkston and Walled Lake have enrolled for lessons, which began Jan. 22.

One such student is Springfield Plains Elementary fourth-grader Anne Marie Curtis.

"She's starting on the viola. She's had three or four lessons from Mrs. Jarvis," says Anne Marie's mom Susan. "Anne Marie wanted to play different instruments than her brother and sister. The only option was band instruments." Susan already knew Dabczynski, a fellow Clarkston resident and parent. "He said, 'I've got the most wonderful teacher.'"

Susan Curtis, who played cello in high school, and her husband, who played trombone professionally in a symphony, said they were elated when Dabczynski told them of his goal.

"He said, 'I've been working to get this program together. Just be patient and we'll see if something happens.'" When it did, Susan said she told him, "Please, don't tell anybody. You're going to be overwhelmed ... I'm just so excited. I've been waiting for this opportunity." She's also pleased that Dabczynski has helped them with a more cost-effective way of renting Anne Marie's viola. If she stays with her playing, they'll eventually upgrade her instrument.

It's too early to tell if the same thing will happen in Clarkston, says Cliff Chapman, director of bands for Clarkston High School and district music coordinator.

"The potential is strong for a string program to be within Clarkston schools. We've had individuals in the district who are taking violin and cello. We are hopeful one day we will be able to offer that."

A music colleague, Chapman said he knew Dabczynski's string program was coming.

"I knew he was working on something of that nature and that's great." Chapman pointed to the new art education program that began in Clarkston elementary schools and the future high school building. He said it takes awhile before faculty members and district administrators are able to get any new program in place.

"It's kind of like one thing at a time. Get the foundation established ... We just haven't gone that step yet," he said.

For additional information on Waterford Community Talent Education's string program, call Dr. Dabczynski at (810) 666-4000.

Speech team takes fifth in first match of the year

The Clarkston High School speech team attended its first tournament of the year Saturday, taking fifth place at Henry Ford II High School in Sterling Heights.

"They did great," said team sponsor Deborah O'Dell. "It was our first tournament of the year so it was a great showing for our first tournament."

Eighteen teams competed in the large-school division of the competition. Individual students finishing in the top 12 move on to the semi-finals. CHS students who made the cut include Steve Hyer, who finished second in sales; Shannon Smallwood, who finished fifth in impromptu; and Kyle Stout, who was sixth in extemporaneous. Also qualifying for the semi-finals were Tracy Hund, Chaz Claus, Erika Breitbart, Erin Fomey and Kit Cischke.

New school will come in on budget

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

Cutting six classrooms will shave over $600,000 off the cost of the new Clarkston High School, architect Chuck Olson told the board of education Monday night.

Olson said square footage is the biggest single concern when it comes to pricing the new building, and costs are currently pegged at $95 a square foot. Cutting the classrooms would cut 6,500 square feet off the building.

Olson was making his regular monthly update on the project to the board, and responding to questions raised last month when he first hinted publicly that the plan on the drawing boards may be too costly.

Olson explained that cutting classrooms doesn't do away with any programming options; rather, it means classrooms will be in use more hours per day.

"We can find room for 2,200 (students) in the new building," he said. "It's going to create some scheduling problems . . . Of course, the core building is designed for 2,500."

In a conversation Friday with The Clarkston News, Olson said architects start with a benchmark of 85 percent occupancy for classrooms. In this case, removing six would mean upping occupancy to 90-92 percent. It would also mean each teacher wouldn't have his or her own classroom, something the faculty was hoping to achieve.

"Our budget is our budget and we will not spend a nickel over that," he said. "The trick is to be able to make the best possible project for the money that's available . . . I'm going to find some way to bring the project in under budget and meet the needs that are in the (bond) proposal."

Olson blamed the cost problem on escalating construction costs. When the board began planning how much money to ask the voters for, it considered construction costs at that time, plus inflation and regional adjustments in the labor market. Olson said Monday night costs have gone up more than anticipated, based on an early estimate by A. J. Etkin, the construction manager.

"It appears construction costs have gone up significantly in the past year," perhaps as much as $6-$10 a square foot, he said.

In addition to classrooms, some other concessions are in Olson's contingency plan. They include not developing some athletic fields and taking some space away from the kitchen, lockers and mechanical rooms.

School board vice president Janet Thomas said the issues of space and budget have generated a lot of concern in the community.

"I cannot think of any issue I've heard more discussion about than those two items," she said. "What it's led to is much discussion of our priorities."

She suggested the board must decide whether it can live without the six classrooms before much more time elapses, "or else explain to the community."

Olson said his biggest fear is construction delays if they get too far along and then find out they're over budget.

"I'd rather reduce the extras we put in now, and if we can add them in later then we will." He added that since the plans already call for a future addition, the six classrooms could be added on later with no problems.

Board president Bill Craig said no reductions should be made to core facilities such as the cafeteria and gym. "If we reduce them, that's what we're going to live with. You can't add on."

"I don't think any of us are saying anything different," Thomas said. "We don't want to make some critical mistake now."

Heather Smith named assistant principal at Springfield Plains

Springfield Plains teacher Heather Smith was named assistant principal for the school Monday night.

Smith will spend her mornings teaching fourth-grade language arts and her afternoons assisting principal Dr. Sharon Devereaux. She was one of 12 applicants for the job, and the only applicant from within the district.

The position was added when the school's population exceeded 700, according to district policy. Smith has a BA in elementary education from Michigan State University and a master's in education in curriculum, instruction and leadership. In addition, she has state certification in elementary administration. She has taught in Clarkston since 1992 and started at Pine Knob El.

"Heather has been a vital part of the teaching staff," said superintendent Gary Haner after reading a partial list of her accomplishments. Since it was an internal promotion, the move did not require school board approval.

"I really look forward to extending my work in Clarkston schools," Smith said. "It's a great opportunity."

Expand, don't build, committee says

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

Building additions to existing elementary schools should solve Clarkston schools' housing problem for the foreseeable future, the district's facilities committee said Monday night.

Speaking for the committee, Mike Dougherty said the committee recommends the district buy portable classrooms to hold the expected increased enrollment while additions are being built onto all elementaries, including Springfield Plains. The committee also recommended that rooms be dedicated for art, music, science and special education; that hallway lockers be installed; that all schools be equipped with a cafeteria; and that significant maintenance problems be addressed.

"It was pretty clear from the outset there is a capacity issue, particularly at the elementary level," said Dougherty, the father of three schoolchildren.

While capacity at the middle and high schools is expected to be solved by the construction of the new high school, Dougherty said there are still some equity problems to be addressed at the middle-school level.

The committee also recommended in its report that the district retain ownership of the community education building and the present Clarkston Middle School for future flexibility. They also recommended keeping the current grade configuration, although they said they could accept "short-term" alterations until the building additions are completed.

The board of education received the report Monday night and set a special meeting for Monday, Feb. 5 at 7 p.m. to go over it in detail with the committee.

The other side of the capacity coin is redistricting. School board president Bill Craig asked Monday night that anyone interested in sitting on a committee to discuss redistricting for next year let the administration know. He is especially interested in those who recently formulated a redistricting policy for the board so that the matter can move forward quickly.

Superintendent Gary Haner asked the board to consider two issues: What to do about "pockets" of students reassigned away from their neighborhood schools due to overcrowding; and which comes first, redistricting or construction. He also asked that they refrain from any temporary or "trial" redistricting next year.

No raises for township officials

Non-union employees get 3 %

"Besides the last two years, a few years back none of the salary people in the township received a raise because we were having some problems," she said. "But this time I feel Dale and I are being punished because of John's actions. We're being put through this because of John and it's really not fair."

The investment problems mentioned resulted in the township having to go into two arbitration hearings, regarding six illegal — according to the state treasurer's office — investments made by Lutz in 1993 and 1994. One arbitration was settled out of court with PaineWebber. But, in a second claim, the township was awarded only $100,000 of a $5 million claim filed against Westcap Securities.

When no raises were given to elected officials for 1995, township officials said later it was done across the board because only denying Lutz a raise would have damaged the township's litigation cases.

McCrary voted to support the recent salary recommendations from the supervisor and said she wouldn't argue about not receiving a raise but, "Everyone likes to be rewarded, so it would have been nice."

The supervisor, treasurer and clerk are the only township employees who did not receive a raise in 1995 and 1996.

When contacted before the Jan. 9 meeting, several board trustees said they did not plan on bringing up the elected officials' salaries, and would follow the recommendation of Stuart. The consensus was that a discussion of "exactly who deserves what" would not be good for anyone.

In Focus

Restaurant central--and it's about time

Have you ever noticed that the more restaurants there are, the busier they all seem to be?

Last week three new restaurants opened that I know of, one in Clarkston (the Clarkston Union), another in Orion (King's Court Castle at Canterbury Village), the other in Oxford (Red Knapp's American Grill). The Union, it appeared, was doing steady business all week with its unique decor and menu. Friday night the searchlights and TV cameras were at King's Court Castle and the parking lot looked full. Over at Red Knapp's, they actually had to close down for the weekend because they were so busy they didn't have the staff to handle it.

All of which leads me to the conclusion that there is a pent-up demand for restaurants—big time—in north Oakland County. Witness the crowds at Mr. B's on Dixie Highway too, and long waits for a table in Rochester. Everywhere you go, restaurants are booming.

The Dennis and I have been experiencing serious restaurant frustration lately because our favorite place, the Lakeview Grill, burned down. Since then we haven't found a new fave. Many of the other places we like don't take reservations, and the wait to get in on a Friday night is a couple of hours, at least. By then we're so hungry we'll eat anything.

Such booming business makes me wonder why more of the big companies haven't discovered North Oakland yet. No one seems to think there are enough people out here to support their ventures, but we locals know better. We're just as busy, eat out just as often and spend just as much money as our counterparts in south Oakland.

I'm still waiting for a coffeehouse to come to downtown Lake Orion (at least in Clarkston we have the L. A. Cafe). Why don't entrepreneurs realize we don't always have the time or inclination to drive to another town for a cup of java? If you build it here, we will come.

Meanwhile, I'm excited about the Clarkston Union. Co-owner Curt Catallo was kind enough to invite the news staff to attend a preview night so we got to sample the menu. I can recommend the macaroni and cheese and the eggplant sandwich, and applaud the partners for making the place vegetarian friendly.

It's also just plain friendly, period. The pews are comfortable and beer lovers will be thrilled by what's on tap. I foresee it becoming a favorite hangout for many Clarkstonites.

Meanwhile, rumors have been floating for some time that Outback Steakhouse is interested in Clarkston, so there may be more coming. And Alexander's has remodeled, making a much more appealing storefront.

And of course Clarkston is great when it comes to take out. So many chicken places to choose from, as well as gourmet pizzas and great Chinese.

Now if a few of them would just come to my town

Supports McNally

Dear readers,

I feel compelled to come out and respond to the January 11, 1996 story about the District Court race.

As a local attorney and prior sheriff's deputy, I have appeared in front of Judge McNally for the past 21 years on a regular basis. Having been both a police officer and defense attorney I have seen it from both sides. Judge McNally is one of the fairest judges I have been in front of (and I have been in front of all of them).

Judge McNally has certainly earned re-election.

He is not only the right choice for 52-2 District Court, he is the only choice we should consider. While his inexperienced opponent could most likely be trained to do the job, why fix it if it isn't broken? There is no reason to replace Judge McNally. He has been doing an excellent job for over 25 years and not once has there been an effort or reason to remove him from the bench.

While the election news article showed his opponent slinging mud and criticizing the judge, it did not show the judge saying anything bad in return. This shows what kind of person Judge McNally truly is and you have to respect him for that.

Judge McNally is now running for his last term of office before his retirement and we owe it to him to give him our strong showing of support. Just as we expect the judge to act fairly and competently on the bench, we must do likewise when it's time to vote.

Let's show our appreciation and support for the fine job Judge McNally has done for us and back him in his re-election. We must remember, it's the candidate who has proven dedication and ability to judge fairly and competently that we should elect, not the one who puts up the most signs or spends the most money on the election.

Loved Theatre-A-Thon

The Drama Department at CHS, headed by teacher Jeff Tice, gets a big round of applause for their recent Theatre-A-Thon performance.

These skits and one-acts were performed by the many "actors" and "actresses" who attend CHS. A lot of rehearsals, planning and just plain stamina were needed before the actual show went on, and then nine hours of performing took place on the stage Friday night.

All the students did a superb job, and a special "high-five" goes to Laura and D'Anne Witkowski and Alesha Dowdle, the directors of it all.

Jim's Jottings

By Jim Sherman

Writers should show their faces

We spent New Years Eve week in Carefree, Arizona. We didn't see a cloud for eight days. We watched glorious sunsets over Black Mountain. The golf courses were green, etc.

But, that's not my topic this week. No, today I'm suggesting (encouraging) all editors to put pictures of writers with their articles.

I'd like to see what the people look like who write things that run against what normal people know is the norm. In some cases, like the one I read in "World Traveler" magazine on a Northwest flight, the picture should be full-body shot.

The article, under health and wellness, is "7 ways to beat the holiday slump." The writer is John B. Thomas. John is either skinny as a toothpick with no personality and lots of cynicism, or obese or been told to write something, anything on holiday intakes.

John probably doesn't believe anything he's written because he fills the article with quotes. Like: Susan Kalish, executive director of the American Running and Fitness Association . . . 'After a big meal try establishing a new tradition, such as going for a long walk, raking leaves, ice skating or playing touch football.'

Susan obviously doesn't read 'cause of death' in obituaries.

Edith Howard Hogan, registered dietitian, . . . 'Hogan's favorite morning fare is dry fruit, hot cereal or oatmeal, or stuffing pita bread with ricotta cheese, raisins and cinnamon. Wash it down with Vitamin C-rich fruit juice.'

No one can start a day with a happy face with that kind of a beginning.

Jeanne Goldberg, PhD, director of the Nutrition Communications Center at the School of Nutrition, Science and Policy at Tufts University. (With a title like that I'd work for nothing.) . . . 'Dinner party givers should provide plenty of raw vegetables, low-fat dips and desserts such as sorbet and fruit.'

Servings like that assure very small attendance at your next dinner party.

Back to Edith Howard Hogan, spokesperson for the American Dietetic Association, . . . 'When shopping for long hours carry apples or dried fruit in your car along with mini bagels, low-fat cubed or string cheese or fresh fruit. Do the same on business trips.'

Maybe instead of editors printing pictures of writers they should show us what those quoted look like.

Can there be any lasting happiness in people who always eat veggies, dried stuff and weird tasting, low-fat anything that is also cubed or stringy?

Gimme the old Alka Seltzer commercial guy who is suffering badly while saying, "I can't believe I ate the whole thing." He's about to relieve his suffering, and had a great, enjoyable eating time while getting in that condition.

A look back

15 YEARS AGO (1981)

A grim picture is painted for Clarkston Schools Monday night. At the school board meeting, superintendent Milford Mason places figures on a blackboard which reveal that, even if all extracurricular activities were removed, cuts in staff totaling over one-half million dollars would have to be made to balance the 1981-82 budget.

Commuters can now breathe a sigh of relief. Michigan's Department of Transportation plans to construct park-and-ride lots at both the intersections of Dixie Highway and I-75, and Sashabaw Rd. and I-75 with 40 and 100 lots respectively, says William J. Schram, coordinator of the statewide car pool parking lot program. "Commuters park along expressway interchanges and that's the easiest way for us to spot a need for car-pool lots. On any day you can see two dozen cars near the Sashabaw, I-75 interchange," he says.

Sashabaw Junior High School eighth-grader Art Binard writes about his experience visiting the inauguration of 40th U.S. President Ronald Reagan. He does his writing project for both the school and The Clarkston News.

25 YEARS AGO (1971)

A state aid cutback will cause serious financial difficulties in Clarkston Community Schools, says school superintendent L.F. Greene. Gov. William Milliken, in a formula to prevent a $108 million state budget deficit, proposes a $27 million cutback in state aid to schools. He is asking for a two-percent cutback to each district amounting to an estimated $15 million. This would cost the Clarkston district between $30,000 and $57,000, depending how the allocation is interpreted.

Clarkston wrestlers roll past an undefeated Brighton (7-0) in the final match of a very important league meet. Happy coach Dick Moscovic says, "I knew they could do it." The matmen are now 2-2 in conference competition with a clean shot at the title if they stay sharp. With three league clashes to go, Kettering is next on the list in a home meet on Thursday, Jan. 21.

50 YEARS AGO (1946)

Adrienne Volberding of Clarkston, a freshman at the University of Michigan, is a member of the University Girls Figure Skating Club. Those in Clarkston who have seen Adrienne dance can probably visualize her talent on ice as well. She is one of 12 selected from a large group of skaters to entertain hockey fans before Michigan games.

Showing at the Holly Theatre, "The Friendly Playhouse," are Dale Evans and Brad Taylor in "Hitch-Hike to Happiness" and Robert Montgomery, John Wayne and Donna Reed in "They Were Expendable." Featured at the Drayton Theatre are Dennis Morgan and Barbara Stanwyck in "Christmas in Connecticut" and Alan Ladd and Veronica Lake in "This Gun For Hire."

Specials at Rudy's Market include Heinz Tomato Soup, three cans for 31 cents; Ritz Crackers, a large box for 22 cents; tamales, a large can for a quarter; Grape Nuts Flakes, two packages for 25 cents; Kraft Malted Milk, a large jar for 32 cents; apple butter, a large can for 19 cents; drinking cups, 100 for 30 cents; kosher-style pickles, a quart for 32 cents; Kupic All Purpose Soap, a large box for 26 cents; and Del Monte Coffee, a pound for 36 cents.

60 YEARS AGO (1936)

Once again the time has come when it is necessary for the motoring public to make application for relicensing of their vehicles. It is probably well-known throughout Michigan that Orville E. Atwood, Secretary of State, has issued an extension of time on the 1935 plates until Feb. 1, 1936. No doubt, the majority of the motorists in the state will take advantage of this month's grace period. A reminder: drivers must show their current licenses in order to obtain 1936 auto plates.

Blue and White Flash (Clarkston School News): The Clarkston boys basketball team is defeated by Farmington Friday 21-19 by the first team and 16-9 by the second team. Though our boys are beaten, they play one of the best games of the season with the score tied up until the last minute. Bill Parker is high scorer of the evening, sinking five baskets.

Movies at the Holly Theatre include Jean Harlow and Spencer Tracy in "Riffraff," Paul Muni and Ann Dvorak in "Dr. Socrates" and Edward Everett Horton in "Your Uncle Dudley." Coming soon is Shirley Temple starring in "The Littlest Rebel."

Heritage Hunt II by Virginia Block

"Smarty pants" and "chatterbox" were terms used as terms of endearment, or, if accompanied with a stern look of disapproval and the use of "Virginia Marie," meant parenting was at work!

Today we are introducing a "teaching aid" for use by parents, teachers, doting grandparents or friends, recommending it as the gift of the year for anyone.

"Chatterbox for Kids" asks "When did you have fun with your grandfather?" "Do you believe in guardian angels?" "Describe how you feel when you wake up to snow?" "How have you helped make something better?" "Describe your favorite aunt or uncle," or "Tell of an experience you had in kindergarten or preschool."

This set of questions are part of 175 questions contained in the "Chatterbox" game. For parents, it provides insight into your child's feelings about family and its place in the family circle.

For teachers seeking a way to know the child with emotional or physical needs better, or the person interviewing for information for genealogical research, there are no limits to the genuine guarantee that everyone gains, and wins big, with this one.

(We personally liked "When did you write a letter to a new friend," "When were you afraid in the dark," and "To what time in history would you like to return?")

As you can see this could be fun for kids of ANY age, even those of us in our second childhood. For $10, its inexpensive therapy, and we'll be happy to supply you.

January 27th, 1996 we will begin our $5.00 classes again at the Pontiac Public Library with emphasis on introduction to family history not found via computer, or "Putting the meat on the bones."

All are welcome, regardless of what you need help with, or where you are at in your quest for pursuing your own "family circle."

Call me at 810-373-2629 for registration in the 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. class, or more information.

Happy Hunting.

Are you planning a Valentine's Day engagement? If you'd like your announcement to appear in The Clarkston News on Valentine's Day, send your photo and accompanying information to us no later than Friday, Feb. 9, 1996. Be sure to let us know you want it to appear that week.

MATT McCARTY, CLARKSTON: No. I like snow but not that much. I don't like to shovel it.

JIMMY McCARTY, CLARKSTON: Yes. I like to play in the snow.

PAUL MAAS, CLARKSTON: Not at all. I don't care for the snow. It's just cold, that's all.

Die-t hard with a vengeance

*Do not go gentle into that good night ...
Rage, rage against the dying of the light.*

--Dylan Thomas

As an English major and lover of good literature, I've always loved poems and stories about courage and meeting danger head on, such as "Prospice" by Robert Browning or "Crossing the Bar" by Alfred Lord Tennyson. Of course, all three selections, including "Do Not Go Gentle," pertain to death, something I hope to avoid for a few more years.

So for the umpteenth time as I hit, like Jack Benny, 29 and holding, I've been trying to make some positive changes because I don't necessarily want to go through the rest of my life gently. I plan to go with gusto.

As with past New Year's resolutions, the first week in January finds me at the grocery store, feverishly filling bags with raw veggies and looking for fat-free versions of my favorite dairy products. And I've also put one hand over my eyes while guiltily dumping the rest of the Christmas cookies into the trash. "Waste not, want not," I can hear my late mother say. Sorry, Mom. I need to waste a little.

I usually find the short navy dress I bought over 10 years ago hanging in the closet, collecting dust. I smile smugly, knowing it will glide smoothly over my hips by March.

Every January it has been the same. I don't know what's happened over the past 15 years or so because it's just not a piece of cake to lose weight anymore. It's a crumb.

I used to do a few sit-ups and jog a half-mile in my designer shorts, come back, eat a few chips to stave off the hunger that sometimes comes with exercising, and check my make-up and hair to make sure I still looked like Jaclyn Smith. No problem, I was still 125 and A-OK.

But this time, I know it will work. Already! The first week, no less. I can tell because I didn't have to lie on the bed to zip up my jeans yesterday. I've even lost a couple of pounds — but I know it will come back if I so much as glance at the cheesecake in Rudy's.

Or, in the words of the late, very quotable comedienne Gilda Radner, "I don't know why I even bother to eat this cheese. I may as well just tape it to my thigh."

I have used my Vic Tanny membership, just like I promised I would do in my last column. Walking the treadmill is boring and I either have to have something to read or something to listen to. Lately, I've found music works better for me than a book — and it's definitely more motivating.

Currently I have two tapes I am using in my Walkman — "Tom Petty's Greatest Hits" and the new Smashing Pumpkins double-angst album, "Mellon Collie and the Infinite Sadness," which my 14-year-old son taped for me from his Christmas present CD stash.

For those who also enjoy these tapes, I can recommend the best tracks to train to. I'll leave you with a few personal choices.

● "I Need to Know," Petty. Yeah, Tom, you heard right. I'm going solo on my Stair Master. There's only room for one.

● "Refugee," Petty. Definitely. It's a little slower than some of Tom's rockers so it's probably better for going around the track or using the progressive-resistance machines. And you feel like a rebel, so your work-outs are mean and deliberate.

● "Learning to Fly," Petty. Also good for walking. Be careful or you'll too find out that comin' down is the hardest thing. Remember to cool down after any exercise.

● "Runnin' Down a Dream," the ultimate hit-the-road and travel song. You'll have to increase your treadmill speed for this one but if you race too fast you may get sucked under the belt. Or you just might break into dance, trying fancy backward steps while earnestly lip-synching like the crazy person who was treading next to me and fell off.

● "Bullet With Butterfly Wings," Smashing Pumpkins. You can't go wrong with lyrics like, "Despite all my rage, I am still just a rat in a cage." Hey, who says angst isn't a motivator?

● Ditto for "Zero," Smashing Pumpkins. "Intoxicated with madness, I'm in love with my sadness" might not sound like lyrics to lunge to, but the wild, spacey music will get you out of the house and into the gym. Play it just before you leave.

They say you can't teach an old dog new tricks. Well, I'm out to prove them wrong. With perseverance I hope to not wimp out by February.

Pass the fat-free pretzels, please. And no, you can't have the dress. A few weeks from now it'll fit me like a glove.

Financial Focus

By Bob Upton of Edward D. Jones

Don't put off investing 'til tomorrow

John Smith plans to begin investing after he saves up a bunch of cash and when conditions are "just right."

Jane Doe, on the other hand, invests $50 every month in a mutual fund that meets her objectives for safety and growth.

Who has a better chance of building up a large nest egg?

Investing does not require expert timing or big sums of cash. Too often, individuals put off beginning an investment program, thinking they need to accumulate a large initial deposit and invest it at just the right time. On the contrary, systematically investing small sums of money on a regular basis through all financial conditions often provides better results than a large, one-time investment.

To illustrate the long-term benefits of systematic investing, let's assume an individual invested $2,000 in the Standard & Poor's 500 Index on his birthday every year from 1964 to 1994. These 30 systematic annual deposits, totaling $60,000, grew to $470,461 — nearly eight times the amount invested.

Although past results do not guarantee future performance, illustrations like this focus not only on the value of systematic investing, but also on the benefits of a long-term approach. During the 30-year period in our example, many events occurred to discourage investing: civil rights issues, Vietnam, trade deficits, oil crises, Watergate, a falling dollar, skyrocketing inflation and interest rates, and a stock market crash. There were roughly 8,000 investing days in that period, yet the market made most of its gains in only 90 days. Knowing which 90 days to be in the market, though, would have been virtually impossible. Long-term investors who stayed in the market through all conditions would have been rewarded.

Yet another example reinforces the value of long-term investing. A study by Ibbotson Associates, a firm well-respected for its statistical data on the securities market, showed that during the 69-year period from year-end 1925 through 1994, larger company stocks averaged annual returns of 10.2 percent, and smaller companies averaged 12.2 percent. While short-term returns were probably a lot lower during certain periods of those years, overall, stocks provided attractive returns for investors who stuck with them for the long term.

Trying to save up for one big investment, and attempting to predict the perfect time to invest for the short term, can be extremely difficult. On the other hand, starting now with smaller amounts is not only easier, it can be much more rewarding.

Building snowmen, staying warm

Building snowmen is always a favorite winter activity for children. Kindergarteners enrolled in Clarkston's Kids Connection program got a chance to do that last week — inside, where they were safe from the biting temperatures.

Children in both the morning and afternoon sessions made mini snow people out of white socks, Styrofoam balls and trims. Vonda Ruth, who heads the program for three of Clarkston's six elementary schools at Clarkston Community Education, said she got the idea from others who run Kids Connection at Bailey Lake Elementary. "Everybody shares ideas," she said.

Sewage disposal agreement has new guidelines

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Independence Township will benefit from new language added to the current sewage disposal agreement.

A resolution added to the Clinton-Oakland Sewage Disposal System contract was passed by the township board of trustees Jan. 9. The new language could net the township's sewer fund more money, if past trends continue.

The major change in the agreement sets up a penalty and reward scale for community sewer systems hooked up to the Clinton-Oakland system.

Township DPW director George Anderson said if communities use over their purchased capacity, they will be charged a penalty, whereas in years past no penalties were imposed. Those extra monies would then be spread out amongst the communities that don't go over their purchased capacity.

"I think this is good for us because Independence Township has never gone over capacity in the 23 years I've been here," said Anderson. "We're not going to make a huge amount of money from this but it will be good for us and maybe encourage communities who are going over to fix their systems up."

Other communities hooked up to the Clinton-Oakland sewage system include Rochester, Rochester Hills, Pontiac Township, Orion Township and Waterford.

"In the past the big abusers of going over capacity have been Waterford and West Bloomfield," said

Anderson. "We've been meeting on this subject for over two years now and we finally have an agreement that says a penalty must be paid if you go over your purchased capacity."

In other board action:

● A $54,000 vehicle exhaust system for the new township fire station, to be located on Citation Drive, was approved by the board.

The system's cost was already included in the station's original estimate. But fire chief Gar Wilson said rather than let the contractor go out for bids on the system, it saved the township money to have him search out prices.

Contractors normally charge 15 percent of the cost when they have to bid out certain projects, according to Wilson.

The system was first installed in Fire Station #2 to determine how effective it is, before Wilson decided to purchase it.

For the system to work, hoses can be hooked up to as many as three fire trucks in the station so the dangerous fumes are taken outside.

● Special assessment bonds for the Cranberry Lake sewer project will be going out for sale. The bonds will total $950,000.

● Property at 5897 Clarkston Road received rezoning approval from R-1R to R-1B, which will allow six residential lots to be built. The board approved the first reading of the rezoning, which is located on 5.85 acres of land near similar zonings and has already received planning commission approval.

● The next township board meeting is scheduled for Monday, Jan. 22. Normally board meetings are held on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month, but the one-time change was made because some township officials will be at the annual Michigan Townships Association conference.

Collector has a passion for old dolls

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

As you walk through Geri Gentile's lovely old Clarkston home, pairs of eyes watch you from every corner.

They are the eyes of antique dolls—French, German, Italian, some American. All different shapes and sizes, this house full of silent children must have great stories to tell, if only they could.

For 25 years Gentile has collected the dolls, which will be for sale at the Clarkston Toy and Advertising Show this Saturday. All the dolls are from 1940 or before. Gentile, the mother of three girls, got started when she purchased a large collection—two truckloads full—and has turned a hobby into a successful, full-time business.

"About 25 years ago I saw a reproduction of an antique doll in a catalogue," she explained. "And I thought 'Well isn't that charming and different.'" She began doing some reading at the local library. "I discovered this whole antique doll thing I never heard of," she said. "There's such a thing as doll shows, doll magazines."

Now she and her husband travel coast to coast to those very shows and operate a thriving mail-order business as well. A past president of the National Antique Doll Association, she's learned how to spot original clothes and hairline fractures that greatly affect the value of a doll. And she's kept a small collection of her own, about 25 pieces, that she doesn't sell—unless something better comes along.

Gentile started out with over 300 dolls and their accompanying accessories when she purchased a collection from the Flint area. "Of course I didn't want them all . . . so there the selling business started," she said.

Over the years Gentile has come to prefer French bisque dolls because of their beauty, but she also appreciates German bisque dolls for their realism. American cloth dolls are also in her collection; they have a much more primitive look and are appealing in a different way.

"The French dolls are earlier and the most sought after," she said. "And they have a stylized look. There's not a real attempt to look like a child."

One of the most pleasing aspects of doll collecting, she said, is the occasional discovery of notes and other mementoes when unpacking a new purchase. Called a "provenance," such items make a doll more valuable.

Geri Gentile and an American cloth doll she has available for sale.

"Very often dolls were handed down," she said. "It's fairly common even today to find little notes when you're unpacking a doll, because very often they were packed away at some time; they went out of fashion."

Serious doll collectors, like other antique lovers, seek out specific pieces primarily for historical reasons, Gentile said.

"People that like antiques are kind of a different breed. They're not necessarily interested in the look of a doll, or in recapturing their youth. There really is a strong historical bond when you collect anything antique."

Nevertheless, the dolls which fill so much of Gentile's house have a tremendous appeal all on their own, even when you don't know when or where they were made. Perhaps it's because they look so very different from modern dolls. There is nothing even resembling a Barbie here.

"What I've always tried to do is buy what I love to sell," Gentile said. "It's hard to part with them at first . . . It's hard to imagine children playing with them."

Toy show Saturday

The Clarkston Toy and Advertising Show, organized by Clarkston resident Jim Carlson, will be held at the K of C Hall, 5660 Maybee Rd., on Saturday, Jan. 20 from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Over 40 dealers will participate.

Transportation toys will be strongly represented, Carlson said, including cast iron automotive and horse-drawn toys. Also on exhibit will be early board games, mechanical and still banks, TV character toys from the early 1960s, early tin and wind-up toys, farm toys, reference books on the subject and price guides.

Geri Gentile, who will be showing and selling dolls from 1940 and back, said of the Clarkston show, "It's really kind of a fun show . . . There are some very good toy dealers that come to it." Though she specializes in dolls, she also enjoys antique toys and horse-related items, so she'll use the show to shop as well as sell.

Admission is $3. And, as Carlson said, "you must put on your childhood memories and forget the issues and problems of the day."

Clarkston kids tops in state quiz bowl

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

On the heels of its second year in a row with 100 percent passing a state MEAP test, Clarkston Elementary School had something else to get excited about last week.

The school learned that a team of seven fifth-graders had been named state champs in the Thinking Cap Quiz Bowl. The seven scored the highest in the state among fifth-graders (and in fact, the seventh-highest among sixth-graders) in the national competition started by an Iowa teacher.

That feat, along with the MEAP score, was celebrated at the school last week with an assembly and the appropriate goodies. Rep. Tom Middleton (R., Ortonville) was snowed in in Maryland, but his stand-in presented the school with a citation signed by Governor Engler applauding the accomplishment.

Fifth-grade teacher Lisa Crawford, who coordinated the Quiz Bowl, said it was the second year the school had participated in the event, which is done by computer. Students work in teams to determine the correct answer to 100 multiple-choice questions on a disk purchased by the school, then one team member enters the answer on the computer. Fields covered include math, science, reading and social studies.

"It's a contest similar to Jeopardy," Crawford said, naming a popular TV show. Up to seven students may comprise a team.

Shirley Kimble of Urbandale, Iowa, said her husband Harvey invented the Quiz Bowl for his own students at Urbandale High School, where he teaches gifted and talented students.

"He used to do computer quiz bowls with his kids," Shirley Kimble said. After discovering that no comparable games were available for younger students, he expanded his work to lower grades, but just in Iowa at first "as a fund-raiser," she said.

The Quiz Bowl is now in its seventh year, and is available for grades five, six, seven and eight. In Michigan, all fifth- and sixth-graders take it on the same day, and all seventh- and eighth-graders take it on the same day. Each school receives the test disk about a week before the date, and the questions are all new each year.

Harvey Kimble still teaches, and now his wife and a small staff run the business that has sprung up from the idea. Cost to the schools is only $28 for the computer disk, which the Kimbles allow to be copied.

The Quiz Bowl is an optional activity at Clarkston El., but the entire fifth-grade opted to participate this year. In addition, some students from other schools took part because they come to Clarkston El. for the CAT (Clarkston Academically Talented) program, which is housed there.

"We said any fifth-grader who is in our building on that day has the opportunity to participate," Crawford said. "We thought that was a neat opportunity."

The test was taken all across Michigan on Nov. 28, but the kids had been practicing for weeks before that.

"The students practiced on disks from last year," Crawford said. "Last year we had no disks to practice on because we hadn't done this before, so we chose Jeopardy questions . . ."

"This year we practiced in the media center where there are 16 computers. They also practiced during recess. The kids took time off. We really didn't take time off class."

Making up the winning team, which scored 1,246 points (or 98 percent) were B. J. Cooper, of North Sashabaw Elementary, Adam Richard of Pine Knob and Casey Bolton, Peter Boissonneau, Lauren Trager, Melanie Lauer and Jeremy Zito, all of Clarkston El. Of the seven, B. J., Adam, Casey, Peter and Lauren are all CAT students.

In all, the school fielded five regulation teams and one large team made up of all the rest of the fifth grade.

Casey Bolton, of the winning team, said her job during the quiz was to read the question out loud. "We all voted on an answer. We would do it as quickly as we could . . . Sometimes it was like a tie with what vote we wanted. We had to think about it."

Lindsey Miller and Zach Crane, who worked together on another team, said their team made sure everyone had a role to play. The two of them split reading the 100 questions, 50 apiece. Another student was chosen to run the keyboard.

"They were pretty good at it and we already knew that even when we were practicing," Zach said. "We were practicing during library time and computer time . . . The quicker you answered, the better the score."

Lindsey said the team never ran out of time, "but it could happen." Everyone agreed the questions were so wide-ranging, some were easy and some were hard. Sometimes, on hard questions, a comical answer would be thrown in. For example, on the question "Who pulled the sword out of the stone?" the choices included King Arthur and King Kong.

"I didn't really think it was that hard," Lindsey said. "There was a mix of different people. Mostly the boys knew about sports."

And what did the girls know best? "Dance," they all agreed.

They all thought it was a good experience and hope to do it again next year. What Crawford hopes is they'll remember the teamwork skills they learned. Zach nodded his head on that one.

"It's kind of hard," he admitted, "but you have to get used to it."

Caution urged when walking or fishing on ice

The Clarkson (MI) News Wed., January 17, 1996 15 A

Due to unseasonably cold weather in Michigan during the past few weeks, many bodies of water are now covered with ice, but this ice may not be thick enough to support a person's weight. Those planning to go out on the ice are advised to use caution.

The unusually cold November and early December weather was accompanied by heavy snowfall in many areas of the state, creating ice-covered bodies of water with slushy snow on top. Heavy snow cover insulates ice and prevents it from freezing as evenly and as quickly as it would without the snow cover. Snow cover is also deceptive and makes it difficult to evaluate the ice.

Specific bodies of water can also pose special safety considerations. In Saginaw Bay, for example, pressure cracks in the ice have been reported in recent weeks. Pressure cracks are common hazards on ice cover along the bays of the Great Lakes. Wind and wave action in the open waters far offshore cause movement of the ice which results in large cracks, some of which run for miles across the ice. Combined with windy conditions, pressure cracks can set large "sheets" of ice adrift, along with any anglers who may be on them. In addition, ships moving through Saginaw Bay break the surrounding ice and create areas of open water, making adjacent ice sheets unstable.

Many ice anglers ask the question, "How thick is the ice?" when evaluating whether or not to venture out. Relying simply on the thickness of the ice is dangerous, because the quality of ice varies greatly from one body of water to another. Recent weather conditions can affect how solidly the ice freezes, or whether it has been weakened by repeated thawing and freezing. The size of the body of water is also important; ice will form far more rapidly on a small, shallow farm pond than it will on a river, deep inland lake or bay of the Great Lakes.

Here are some useful tips and safety guidelines for walking or fishing on ice:

- Before venturing out onto the ice, check with local sources such as bait and tackle shops for the most up-to-date information on ice conditions.
- Don't go out alone! Let someone know where your group will be and when you plan to return.
- Be especially cautious early and late in the winter season when ice thickness is unpredictable due to temperature fluctuations.
- Be especially wary of river ice, as it can be highly variable in thickness due to the erosive action of the underlying river current. Also avoid ice formed over flowing water near shore, around inlets and outlets of streams, or on lakes with springs.
- Avoid aeration devices, such as warmwater bubblers used near marinas.

Players take a 'Wrong Turn at Lungfish'

Third stop is a long, hard look at the meaning of life

BY EILEEN OXLEY
Clarkston News Staff Writer

He's book smart. She's street smart.

But both learn from each other during "Wrong Turn at Lungfish," a Clarkston Village Players production currently playing at the Depot Theatre.

Verne Vackaro is well-cast as Peter Ravenswood, a cynical former university dean who's been stricken with a terminal illness. He's spending his last days in the hospital, blind, afraid and searching for the meaning of life before it's snuffed out for good.

Enter Anita Merendino, a gum-snapping, wise-cracking Laverne-type character who's profound in her simplicity. (A believable characterization since Penny "Laverne & Shirley" Marshall's brother Garry co-wrote the play.) She's a volunteer with an ulterior motive. Do the good-will thing, take their money and run. It's sort of her profession, you might say. Played by Rikki Schwartz, as seasoned and skillful a performer as Vackaro, Anita spends time reading to the dying dean.

The selection of books is varied — Keats, T.S. Eliot and a selection only found in adult book stores that profiles a hooker who graduated "erotica cum laude."

The ailing Peter seems destined to complain — all a part of his I-have-to-do-this-curmudgeon-thing act. He even gripes about being read to, correcting Anita's grammar and pointing out other imperfections. When she suggests tapes might be more suitable, he deadpans, "I'm afraid I can't abide Keats read to me by Ed McMahon."

Playing against each other, Vackaro and Schwartz are excellent in their timing and contrast. Though he's irascible, Vackaro manages to bring that rare quality to his character that makes us love him. Schwartz, along with her dim-wittedness, provides that occasional touch of brilliance we see in the commonest of characters.

In addition to the couple, there are only two more characters that make up the whole of the production — and both shine. Melissa Breckenridge doesn't upstage the stars, executing her role as nurse with downplayed delivery. But she does have some of the best lines. Early on, she gripes about the loudness of another patient. "He woke up two patient with comas!" She also apologizes for a low-staff day, taking a wry jab at the medical profession. Two of the missing nurses are "testifying" at malpractice suits."

And Chuck Diamond, as Anita's

Rikki Schwartz and Verne Vackaro are opposites who attract in the Clarkston Village Players' "Wrong Turn at Lungfish."

scummy and abusive boyfriend Dominic, has the Tony Danza speech and swagger down cold.

Gordon Bardell, who directed this production, makes a definite statement with the set and the way he allows a few bit-players into it. Though all the scenes take place in Peter's hospital room, we witness various visitors through a window that allows a glance into the hall: two women step into a room carrying balloons, a janitor passes with a broom, a man looks perplexed, searching for a patient with wrapped floral arrangement in hand.

It's a nifty touch that lets us know the rest of the world is going on even though we're privileged to witness this little scene.

That's the premise of "Wrong Turn at Lungfish," of course. Life goes on and death is a part of the process. Though we're focused on our own existence, as Peter is, we have to look at the bigger picture and ponder the meaning of it all.

Wrong turn at Lungfish

Did God take a wrong turn when he created man? Or was it fate when fish developed their own lungs so they could survive on land, eventually evolving into the human race?

Both Anita and Peter take a stab at that argument. Bardell plays Beethoven's Ninth Symphony throughout the play and the deaf genius is a frequent target for discussion.

Anita's musing about angels and her child-like belief that a friend truly did have a near-death experience makes Peter wonder if maybe all the worldly education he has accumulated over the years is useless.

"You would argue that God made him (Beethoven) deaf so he would hear the angels," he retorts — a little less loudly and self-assuredly than before.

"Wrong Turn at Lungfish," a dramatic comedy by Garry Marshall and Lowell Ganz, continues at the Depot Theatre in Clarkston with performances Jan. 18, 19, 20, 25, 26 and 27. The production is produced by Don Foster. For more information call (810) 625-8811.

Pom pon teams among best with title

Varsity first, JV second at Palace competition

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Hard work, confidence and heart are critical for any team to be successful. And it's no different for the Clarkston varsity and JV pom pon squads.

Their dedication is paying off this season as both teams have dominated tournaments. Most recently, the varsity team took first place at the 30-team Palace Pom Pon Competition, while the JV squad took second among 18 teams at the same competition.

And while both teams are going to relax by avoiding any major competitions for now, they will perform at home basketball games as usual. The teams did anything but relax earlier this season. In fact, both teams have established themselves as pom pon powers.

Varsity pom pon

Before winning at the Jan. 6 Palace Competition, the squad also took first at the Swartz Creek Competition in November. In the summer, the squad qualified for two national competitions at two summer camps.

"The Palace Competition is considered the biggest for teams in Michigan so right now I think the girls just want to relax and have some fun," said coach Gina Cox-Shore. "It's a real long season for us because we

Skiers of the Week

Clarkston's Skiers of the Week are junior Kyle Russell and freshman Kristen Atkinson.

Russell took 6th against Waterford Kettering Jan. 9, but came back strong against Waterford Mott Jan. 10, finishing in a tie for first with Paul Rumph.

"It was good to see Kyle finish first," said coach Thom Halsey. "He's got tons of potential and knows he can finish first but it will be tough to beat Paul this season."

Atkinson has the ability to dominate this season, coach Halsey said. She easily took first against Mott, finishing ahead of everyone by almost two seconds.

"She'll be real good for us for years to come because she likes to compete," said Halsey. "She does need some work on slalom but she has loads of potential."

Kettering, Mott no match for dominant ski teams

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

It was a perfect sweep for Clarkston's boys and girls ski teams last week.

The boys team won its two races, 10-34 against Waterford Kettering Jan. 9, and 11-32 against Waterford Mott Jan. 10, while the girls defeated Kettering 10-34.

Coach Thom Halsey said he wasn't surprised by the teams' wins but was pleased that several individuals raced real well.

Boys team

In the giant slalom race against Kettering, the Wolves swept the first six places, led by senior Paul Rumph in first. Junior Jason Callahan was second, junior Chris Evans third, junior Gary Pochmara fourth, junior B.J. Rumph fifth and junior Kyle Russell sixth.

"That was a real nice finish for us," said Halsey. "Any one of those kids could have finished higher because the difference separating second from sixth was .32 of a second."

In a slalom race against Mott, the Wolves won with almost exactly the same results. Paul Rumph tied for first with Russell in exactly 42.49 seconds, Callahan was third, junior Dave Brown fifth and Pochmara sixth.

The boys team is currently ranked #6 in Class A by the Ski Coaches Association.

Girls team

The girls, ranked #7 in Class A, were just as dominating against Kettering, sweeping the top six spots.

Coach Halsey said the time differential between Kettering's first-place finisher and Clarkston's sixth-place finisher was six seconds.

Jan. 4 JV race

In a multi-team meet Jan. 4, the JV boys and girls teams dominated.

For the boys, freshman Russell Parrott took first place, junior Steve Zerba second and sophomore Dave Whipp third.

Junior Natalie Vaughn took first for the girls team, followed by junior Kelly Banks in second and freshman Lissa Lukens in third.

Comeback win takes Wolves to 5-2 record

Wasilk's two steals, layup and free throws seal 55-52 win

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Offensively, the Wolves' top scoring threats weren't much of a threat against Rochester Jan. 12.

But on defense — which matters most in coach Dan Fife's system — Dane Fife, Tim Wasilk and Ryan Schapman came up big, just as their teammates did.

In a come-from-behind 55-52 win over Oakland Activities Association Division I opponent Rochester, the Clarkston basketball team proved that defense does win games.

The three combined to shoot just 20-for-60 from the field, accounting for all but three of Clarkston's points, but in crunch time all three made something happen, especially Wasilk.

CHS, which trailed by as many as 13 points, finally took its first lead of the game, 43-42, on a 3-pointer from Wasilk with 6:25 left in the fourth quarter.

From then on the game would go back and forth. After a Rochester 3-pointer, Schapman, who was working hard on the offensive glass, was fouled on a follow-up attempt and made one free throw. With 4:25 left, Wasilk again hit a crucial 3-pointer for a 47-47 tie.

Rochester continued to withstand Clarkston's pressure and hit another 3-pointer, just before senior center Scott Hill fouled out with 3:59 left.

The Wolves continued to pick it up on defense, with Dane Fife getting a big blocked shot, grabbing the deflection, leading the break and then feeding Schapman for a layup with 3:10 left.

After trading possessions, Dane Fife again rebounded and took the ball the length of the court, this time scoring a layup himself, giving CHS a 51-50 lead with 1:25 left.

Rochester scored with 1:10 left and took a 52-51 lead. Both teams then played tough defense for the next 40 seconds. With 31.9 seconds left Rochester got the ball after a Wolves turnover.

The Wolves pressed on the out-of-bounds play and Wasilk reached in for a steal, got control of the ball and took it in for a layup and a 53-52 Wolves lead with 22 seconds left.

After Dane Fife forced a jump ball, Rochester again took it out of bounds with 16 seconds left. Rochester brought the ball up court as the Wolves pressured the ball the whole time.

Schapman, playing tight defense, forced his man to dribble near the right baseline, where Wasilk was waiting to steal the ball from behind. Wasilk took the ball up court and was fouled with nine seconds left. Clarkston inbounded the ball and Wasilk was fouled with 6.9 seconds left.

He calmly hit both free throws for a 55-52 lead, and a Wolves win.

Coach Fife said he wasn't too happy with his team's start, where they gave up 20 points in the first quarter, but in the end they played hard enough to win. "Defensively, in the first half we didn't play as hard as we need," said coach Fife. "We are going to struggle sometimes on offense, but I always preach to the kids that we have to win with our defense.

"I may have been upset early but a lot of kids couldn't have come back and won the way we did. These kids are used to winning and playing in those kinds of games and so when it comes down to crunch time they know what to do."

Although coach Fife said he's not worried about his team's field goal shooting, he said their free-throw shooting does have to improve.

Leading the way against Rochester were Dane Fife's 22 points, Wasilk's 19 points and Schapman's 11 points.

CHS, 5-2 overall and 2-0 in the OAA, had a much easier time against West Bloomfield on Jan. 9, winning 55-40. Dane Fife and Schapman scored 20 points each, while Wasilk added nine points.

Wolves wrestlers third, but led going into final round

State's best finish 1-2-3 at DCC tourney

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Three of the best wrestling teams in the state's Division I didn't disappoint at the Detroit Catholic Central Invitational Jan. 13.

Holt (rated #4 by the Michigan Wrestling Assoc. and #1 in the Michigan Wrestling News' pre-season poll), Temperance-Bedford (rated #6 by the MWA and #4 by the MWN) and Clarkston (rated #3 by the MWA and #6 by the MWN) are all expected to be contenders for a state championship, and finished 1-2-3 at the tough DCC invitational, followed by Division II power Warren Lincoln in 4th (rated #2 by the MWA).

The Wolves, who had the most individual finalists with four, led the tournament by one point — ahead of Bedford and Holt — going into the championship round. But only one CHS wrestler won, pushing the Wolves to third place.

Youth wrestling club set to host invitational, see page B8

Assistant coach Frank Lafferty said while his team wanted to win, they still feel confident after coming so close.

"We'd like to have won, but those are some tough teams," he said. "Holt is tough and they even had two voids. But we were not far from first and still feel as if we are as good as any team in the state."

Clarkston received another championship performance from senior Joe DeGain in the 189-pound division. He beat Howell's Ryan Arnold, a state qualifier last season, in the finals 8-3, to remain undefeated on the season.

Taking runner-up finishes for the Wolves were junior Ryan Mick (125 pounds), senior Chad Auten (140) and senior Jeremy Lafferty (160).

Coach Lafferty said all four finalists came up big and wrestled well.

Four other wrestlers placed for Clarkston. Freshman A.J. Grant (103), junior Jason Tiefenback (130) and senior Joe Roy (145) finished fourth, while junior Gordie Golec (215) was 5th and junior Dave Ziemann (119) was 6th.

Dual domination

The Wolves made it six straight dual meet wins with convincing victories Jan. 10 over Troy, 56-12, and Pontiac Central, 80-0.

Clarkston's only dual loss came in the first meet of the season to Millington, rated #3 in Division III by

After loss, team comes back with intensity Lessons learned for VB coach and players

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

There was plenty enough blame to go around last week when the Clarkston volleyball team lost to division foe West Bloomfield.

And Wolves coach Gordie Richardson took his share of responsibility in CHS' 12-15, 7-15 loss on Jan. 8.

He said the team wasn't aggressive or prepared, even after taking an 8-1 lead in the first game. Nothing went well for the Wolves in that match.

"I don't think I had us prepared for that match," said Richardson. "After we took that lead we were outscored 29-11 and you could see us just falling apart."

But this determined group of players and head coach wouldn't be held down for long. They spent the next three days working on the skills that failed them against West Bloomfield, like serving and serve receptions.

"We spent one practice just on those two things," said Richardson. "The next few days we also did some fun things that also challenged the kids. But they are all bright kids and they all knew the areas we needed work on."

Clarkston came back in a Jan. 11 tri-match against division foe Royal Oak Kimball and Holly on a mission to be victorious. They crushed both teams, beating Kimball 15-5, 15-7 and Holly 15-3, 15-6.

And while the stats were much improved, compared to the West Bloomfield match, Richardson said the difference was his players were aggressive and focused. They served only about 75 percent against Kammy Powell puts this ball in play vs. Holly.

West Bloomfield and only had 18 total attacks in that second game.

Against Kimball, the team served 35-for-38, was 35-for-39 in attacks with 14 kills and was 14-for-18 in serve receptions. Against Holly they were 24-for-30 in attacks, 19-of-21 in serve receptions and had 16 aces serving.

"When we play hard and are quick on our feet, we are much more successful," said Richardson. "I just told the kids before the match to go out and play like you know how. We just played real well. We served to spots, moved the ball around and really played as a team."

Against Kimball, Clarkston, 13-4 overall and 1-1 in the OAA Division I, was led by senior Lisa Herron with 13-of-14 attacks and seven kills; senior Nickie Winn was 21-of-22 passing with nine assists; senior Stephanie Giroux was 13-of-13 serving with three aces while Winn was 12-of-13 with three aces; Herron was 6-of-7 in serve receptions and senior Nicki Hard was 5-of-7; and, Giroux and Hard each had seven digs, while Winn had five and Herron four.

Against Holly, Herron was 9-of-9 attacking with six kills, while Giroux was 4-of-4 with two kills; Winn had 11 assists; Giroux was 10-of-10 serving with six aces while senior Kristi Millard was 9-of-9 with three aces and senior Suzanne Schmidt was 8-of-8 with three aces; Herron was 5-of-5 in serve receptions while Giroux was 4-of-5; and, Herron had four digs.

Because of that OAA-opening loss, Richardson said his team has to focus on winning the rest of its division matches in order to be division champs.

"I told the team West Bloomfield probably won't lose two matches this season so we have to focus and play to win every time out," he said. "There is no margin of error for us now."

The Wolves' next division match is scheduled for Jan. 18 at Troy. They will be at the Grand Blanc Invitational Jan. 20, with several of the state's top teams, including Port Huron Northern and Portage Northern.

go from June to March and practice all week for two and one half hours each day. These kids have put the time and dedication into it."

Cox-Shore, in her first year of varsity coaching after two years as JV coach, took over for her mother, Mary Jean "Coxy" Cox, a nine-year varsity coach.

Cox-Shore said the team expected to do well at the Palace, but she was surprised they took first.

"I was confident we'd be in the top five teams and the girls planned on winning," said the coach. "They were ready mentally and I was really pushing them in practice and on their case the week before."

But it wasn't easy for the team to win. The night before the competition, one girl pulled her hamstring, so they had to re-do the routine.

"I really think that pulled us closer together," she said. "It seems like whatever happens we come through it on top."

"One of the things we get comments on is that people say it looks like the girls are really having fun when they perform. That's 50 percent of performing. They know how to have fun."

Cox-Shore said the 16 members of the team have been great to work with and have helped to establish a growing tradition for pom pons at Clarkston.

JV pom pon

The JV squad, coached by Shalae Montney, a former varsity pom pon girl, also has established a winning tradition. While they finished second at the Palace competition, they won at Swartz Creek in November and also qualified for the nationals during a summer camp.

"The kids were kind of disappointed by taking second at the Palace, but we thought they were first," said Cox-Shore.

The JV team won the Palace competition last year.

Support from everywhere

Cox-Shore said while both the varsity and JV teams put in time, effort and heart to become champions, they were all grateful for the Clarkston Athletic Booster's financial support, "Coxy's" moral support and Clarkston's fanatic student cheering crew, known as "The Jungle."

"It was real neat for the girls to see The Jungle out at the competition," said Cox-Shore. "They were there cheering for us and even stayed to watch us at halftime of the (Detroit) Pistons game. We really appreciated the support."

the MWA.

But Troy and Central were no match for the powerful Wolves squad. Troy, considered one of the top returning Division I teams coming into this season after being a state quarter-finalist the past three seasons, also provided little competition.

Mick and Ziemann both had big wins early on, beating two of Troy's best wrestlers. Mick decisioned Scott Lemay 7-3, and Ziemann, still working back into shape after an early-season injury, decisioned Troy Barney 12-10.

The Wolves' lone upset of the night came when Troy's Brian Kretschmer, a state qualifier last season, decisioned Jeremy Lafferty 11-10. Lafferty only had two losses going into the meet.

In all, the Wolves had seven pins and one technical fall against Troy.

Against Central, Clarkston won with six voids, four pins, one technical fall, one disqualification, one injury default and one decision.

DeGain and sophomore Adam Hott had pins in both dual meets.

The next scheduled competition for the Wolves is the Adrian Invitational, Jan 20. The "B" team's next competition will be the Lake Fenton Invitational, also on Jan. 20.

● A special 30-day Canada goose season for Jan. 6-Feb. 4 has been initiated by the DNR to control local goose populations. The area open to hunting includes public and private lands south of a line from Port Huron to Grand Rapids, excluding the Allegan County Goose Management Unit. The bag limit is two per day. In a survey conducted Dec. 11-15, about 55,000 Canada geese were found within the area open to the hunt.

It did not look good for the Wolves. After letting a huge lead slip through their hands in the second half, they found themselves down by six to Rochester with 90 seconds to go in overtime. That is when Mark Venegoni stepped up, and came through with some big baskets, including an off-balance three-point shot at the buzzer to give Clarkston a two-point victory, 59-57, on January 12.

The Wolves played very well in the first half, heading to the locker room with a 31-18 lead. But in the second half, Rochester started making their shots, and every call went Rochester's way.

So it went into the overtime, and Clarkston came up big, overcoming Rochester's emotion with their own desire and skill. Venegoni scored eight points in the extra period, and finished the game with 19 points. Jeff Loveless also scored 19. Mark Mazur pulled down 12 rebounds before eventually fouling out. Venegoni also had five big steals.

The Wolves also won their game with West Bloomfield on January 9, 44-37. They played very well defensively, and had enough offensive punch to win. Again, Venegoni and Loveless led Clarkston on the scoreboard with 17 and 14 points respectively. Mazur had nine boards.

"Any time you win two games in a row away from home, it's special," said Coach Tim Kaul.

Clarkston plays twice at home this week, against Davison and Troy. They are now 5-1, and looking very impressive.

The platter box had a devoted following of 375 members who in 1982 held a 15-year reunion with over 300 original members in attendance. A 30-year reunion was in the planning stages for early 1997.

A World War II veteran of the Air Force, Mr. Garlak retired after 35 years at Durako Paint Co. in Detroit. He also worked at the General Motors Proving Grounds during the mid-1980s.

Also surviving are two sisters-in-law, Mary Ann Garlak of Royal Oak and Barbara Jones of Redland, CA; one brother-in-law, Jess (Barbara) Jones of Warren and several nieces and nephews.

On Memorial Day weekend, 1996 a tree-planting ceremony including a 21-gun salute and music provided by the Garlak children and grandchildren will take place at the home of Mr. Garlak's daughter Karrie in Freesoil. Anyone wishing to send donations toward the living tree or wanting to attend the service is asked to contact John W. Garlak, 55 Highland Blvd., Highland, MI 48357.

Freshman Volleyball

It was a rough week for the Freshman Volleyball team. Once again this year, the team was at a big disadvantage. In the recent Clarkston Invitational, the Wolves were the only first-year team. All of the other schools had teams in seventh and eighth grade. Although Clarkston finally implemented a volleyball team in the middle school, it is too late for this year's club. Still, they have played very well all year, considering that they are at a two-year disadvantage against every opponent they face.

They continued to improve this week. On January 8, they dropped a decision to West Bloomfield, 5-15, 8-15. Defensively, they played strong, but their serving was not good enough to win. They served 69 percent in the first game, and 70 percent in the second game. Jenny Claus and Alaina Dodds both had three serving aces, and Mandy Harrison and Ingrid Zimmerman both had one.

On January 11, they lost a tough match to Royal Oak Kimball 5-15, 14-16. They played very well. Their serving improved a great deal, as they served 77 percent in game one and 89 percent in game two. Michelle Klotz and Courtney Cooley came through with a strong match defensively.

On January 13, the Wolves hosted the Clarkston Invitational. Redford Thurston came out in first, and Lake Orion finished in second. The Wolves put forth a great effort, but the other teams' experience showed. They beat Hazel Park in the first game 15-6, 7-15. They lost to Troy, Ferndale, and Clio to finish the tournament. Klotz, Jenny Gifford, Courtney Cooley and Beth Anderson played well for the Wolves.

"The team did very well for being in their first year," said Coach Rebecca Kosek. "It was good experience for us, and the girls had a lot of fun out there, even though we lost."

Clarkston has one game this week, at Troy.

Does someone on your team consistently hit home runs, score lots of goals or pile up lots of serving aces? We'd like to know at The Clarkston News. 625-3370

Wrestling club

Two wrestlers from the Clarkston Youth Wrestling Club placed in tournaments Jan. 14.

At the Bendle Wrestling Tournament, Tony LaJoie was first in the 9-10 age group's 71-pound weight class, while Eric Petty finished second in the 11-12 age group's 100-pound weight class at the Chesaning Novice Tournament.

The Clarkston Wrestling Club will host a novice tournament Jan. 21 at the high school, with over 350 wrestlers aged 6-14 expected to participate.

Novice tournaments are restricted to those wrestlers who are relatively inexperienced. Once a wrestler has achieved a specified number of placements in tournaments, he is required to move up to regular tournaments, which are open to all wrestlers.

Clarkston is one of 60 member clubs in the Mid-Michigan Wrestling Association. Coaches Larry LaJoie and Steve Bryan have around 65 kids on the Clarkston squad, with about two-thirds being first-year wrestlers.

Parents and children interested in seeing what the Clarkston Youth Wrestling Club is all about can come out to the novice tournament, which begins at 10 a.m. and will end around 3 p.m.

All out effort for the sake of theatre

Derek Bannasch gave a hilarious monologue about meat—lots of it. Others sang, or took part in skits. A team of three performed "The Reduced Shakespeare," billed as the complete works of the Bard, in 45 minutes.

They were all part of the Clarkston High School drama club's annual Theatre-A-Thon, a major fundraiser for the spring musical. Starting right after school and finally winding down around midnight, it's a tour de force of what the drama department has to offer.

And it's fun, admission is free and you can win lots of door prizes by entering a very cheap raffle. What better way to spend a cold, dreary Friday night?

Laura Witkowski, who along with sister D'Anne and their classmate Alesha Dowdle directed the event, said it all came off very well. As vice president of the drama club, Laura knew early on it would be her job to direct.

"I knew I would never be able to do the whole thing myself," she said. Fortunately, D'Anne and Alesha agreed to help. The last week before the big night "was pretty much Theatre-A-Thon, from Monday through Friday."

The job included scheduling, collecting pledges, getting door prizes donated, and making sure everyone was prepared. Oh yeah, and participating in a few numbers herself. "It was hard to find time when I was actually on stage," Laura said.

Laura said she would advise next year's director to get an early start. "Start planning from the day you find out it's going to be your job. That's what I did . . . and it paid off big time . . . I've heard nothing but positive things about Theatre-A-Thon."

Clockwise from top: Laura Witkowski and Jimmy Territo converse in the dressing room. "Are you stating to relax yet?" he asks the co-director. Jason Combs and Sarah Turnblom on stage during "Jumping," a drama about a man who wants to end it all and a woman who thinks he should join the Sierra Club instead. Charles Graham (left) and Eric Kerney practice a song in the band room before going on stage. Derek Bannasch delivers his monologue about real men and raw meat. Adrienne Trager is the sister who torments her brother in "Driver's Test."
