Search for new school superintendent begins

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

The Clarkston board of education began the arduous task of finding its next superintendent Monday night. And it appears the board is headed toward a national search to find just the right person for the job.

Tuesday night the board was expected to appoint an outside entity, possibly the Michigan Association of School Boards, to lead the search. A representative of MASB, Kara Funk, met with the board in a special meeting Monday night to discuss the process. The board was expected to meet with two more firms, T.D. McLennant Associates of Dearborn and T.D. and Associates of Ann Arbor Tuesday night.

In interviews over the past week, several trustees have said they would support a national search for the next superintendent.

"I don't feel we can afford to exclude anybody," said vice president Janet Thomas, who was board president when outgoing superintendent Gary Haner was hired.

Thomas expressed surprise that rumors are circulating in the district that Haner is attempting to control the process of finding his successor.

"I'm amazed that's even filtering down already," she said. "I hope we don't run into any difficulties like you're suggesting because it's self-defeating."

Thomas said the board's toughest task will be to develop a profile of who the desirable superintendent should be.

"I believe our biggest challenge is going to be to develop that profile. No one can do everything," she said. "What you come down to is you're looking at several candidates with excellent backgrounds. What you're trying to find is... someone with an excellent background and a community fit. What you hope you get down to is a meeting of the minds."

Trustee Barry Bomier agreed. "This is a critical time, especially with the new high school," he said. "I think we need to look at every available candidate. Does that mean the best person for the job might exist here in Michigan? Yeah; they might."

Bomier expressed concern that the district isn't setting its sights high enough when it comes to leadership. He wants a superintendent who will think globally and act locally.

"I think we have to look deep at the qualities, the character" of the applicants, he said. "I think the high school, the district we've got need to be world class. And to get that person we need to go to an open search."

"I do think it's important for Clarkston to make sure we consider all the options available," said treasurer William McGregor. However, speaking before this week's meetings with the consultants, he said, "I'm not so sure a national search would be necessary. A lot of things come from the state and it should be someone who is well-versed."

"I hope as a board we're able to come to an agreement about what we're looking for."

At Monday's meeting with Funk, director of superintendent search services for MASB, the board heard from an outsider how important it will be for them to work in unison to get the best possible candidate. If they act as seven individuals instead of one board, they could have "the search from hell," she said.

Funk recommended the board select fewer than 10 candidates to interview. Then, when they've narrowed that list to the top few, she said they should plan to visit each candidate's district, then hold a second interview in Clarkston. All interviews must be conducted in public, according to the state's Open Meetings Act.

Funk also suggested the board involve district staff in the process as well as the public, and that they not leave contract negotiations to lawyers.

"You're going to invest a number of months selecting an individual," she said. "We don't want it to get off on the wrong foot."

Funk said it would be up to the board to determine what role, if any, Haner would play in the process. He was not present at Monday's meeting.

"It (the search) is the one thing the board does without the guidance of the superintendent," she said.

Some good news

Year's crime report shows city's a safe place to live

BY EILEEN OXLEY
Clarkston News Staff Writer

While criminal acts are on the rise in some communities, Clarkston's 1995 police report shows the city's crime problems haven't grown.

Statistical data supplied by the Oakland County Sheriff's Department and released by Clarkston Police Chief Paul Ormiston last week reflects about the same number of crimes committed during 1993, 1994 and 1995.

Clarkston, with a current population of 1,005 people, suffered no homicides, criminal sexual conduct, robberies or aggravated assaults during those years.

The number of reported burglaries (break-ins) was two in 1995, four in 1994 and three in 1993. In addition, one attempted burglary was reported in 1995, but none during the two years prior.

There were, however, more larcenies (the taking of personal property) but those totals also remained fairly constant with 19 last year, 16 the year before and 20 in 1993. Reported auto thefts were two in 1995, three in 1994 and one in 1993.

In summarizing the three years' accumulation of reports and comparing Clarkston to other municipalities, Ormiston said, "The general conclusion is that this is a safe community in which to live."

The news in brief

Township sets hearing on Block Grant funds

Independence Township will hold a public hearing on February 6 at 7:30 p.m. to discuss the reprogramming of 1993 Block Grant funds. Generally, Block Grant money can only be used for low-to middle-income projects, as well as planning activities. The meeting will take place at the township annex, 90 N. Main St.

Man charged with third drunk-driving offense

A Chesterfield Township man received his third ticket for drunk driving after he was stopped by Clarkston Police Jan. 25.

Chad Valead, 27, was spotted driving erratically on N. Main near Miller around midnight, said Clarkston Police Chief Paul Ormiston. He was arrested for his third drunk driving offense which is a felony. Valead was also cited for driving with a suspended driver's license, his second fine for that offense. "This was his fourth arrest for drunk driving. He is currently on probation for drunk driving," Ormiston said.

Valead was taken to Oakland County Jail and appeared before a 52-2 District Court magistrate Thursday morning. He was charged with drunk driving, third offense with bond set at $20,000 cash (no 10 percent). He was relogged at Oakland County Jail pending a hearing scheduled before 52-2 District Court Judge Gerald McNally Feb. 2 at 10 a.m.

If convicted Valead could face one to five years in prison and/or a $500-$5,000 fine.

Township considers computer upgrade

The Independence Township Board of Trustees (treasurer John Lutz was absent) listened to a presentation Jan. 22 about how the township offices need to incorporate a master plan for computer operations in order to better prepare for the future.

The proposal, which was not acted upon by the board, would link all township offices together with more modern equipment and provide better efficiency in running day-to-day operations.

Independence Township Board of Trustees actions

At its regular meeting Jan. 22, the Independence Township board of trustees took the following actions:

- Goldfinch Woods, consisting of three lots which will be built upon by the Clarkston school's Building and Trades Program, received final preliminary plat approval.

- Concerns from the Oakland County Health Department have been resolved so the township board gave final preliminary plat approval to the Mellema Subdivision, a two-lot proposal located off Clarkston Road, east of Pine Knob Road.

- Final approval was given to a resident who wants to rezone 5.8 acres of land on Clarkston Road from R-1R (rural residential) to R-1B (suburban farm residential). The purpose and intended use are for six residential homes.

Teacher takes her work behind prison walls

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

Each day when Clarkston teacher Judy Miracle reports for work, she must enter through a locked gate under a fierce-looking arc of barbed wire.

Inside the walls of Camp Gilman, a state prison for Technical Rule Violators in White Lake Township, her students are segregated, men from the women. They are being taught a lesson, on several levels.

They're inside Camp Gilman because they've committed some infraction of their parole or community placement. But while they're there, rather than just have them sit, warden Gerald Brown is offering them an education—at least a brief one.

The students, in cooperation with Clarkston schools, are taking classes in preparation for the GED exam. The classes are optional, and are offered to students two-and-a-half hours per day, five days a week for a total of 30 hours. At the end of each inmate's 12-week incarceration, they are returned to their former placement.

"We're a no-frills outfit," said parole agent Mary Robes. "No television, no gym." There is a small library, and inmates can do some work, such as on a work crew, but that's about it. Though the campus is small, colorful and well-lit by the sun during the day, the barbed wire and uniformed guards allow no mistake about it—it's not a camp; it's a prison.

As Robes tells it, Camp Gilman used to be a state women's prison. But in May, 1995 it was changed over to a TRV facility for both men and women. In its previous role teachers were provided by the state. But that ceased when the prison's use changed, and Brown approached Clarkston schools about providing a teacher, at state expense.

"There was a need to give sanction and structure to parole violators," Robes said. "The department (of corrections) is serious about zero tolerance. Any person is expected to follow the rules."

Those who don't, who have already been placed in either parole or community placement, are sent to a place like Camp Gilman (there are two other such facilities in the state but Camp Gilman is the only one open to women) for 12 weeks of thinking about what they've done. The facility can hold up to 120 inmates, but the population varies.

After two weeks at Camp Gilman, all inmates must take a substance abuse course. "Whether they have a substance abuse history or charge (or not), they are required to go," Robes said. After 30 days, they are eligible for work crews. They may attend two series of Miracle's classes during their stay.

"I probably see two-thirds to three-fourths of the women and half or a little more of the men," Miracle said from her windowed classroom. Like many other rooms in more typical schools, it contains a blackboard, a globe, a bulletin board and bookshelves. There are no computers, however; every student gets a pencil, paper and book—that's it.

Miracle hadn't been teaching very long before winning the job. She received a BS in elementary and middle school education a year and a half ago from the University of Michigan-Flint and had substitute taught since then. She also tutored high-risk students through Oakland Community College, where she was an instructional aide.

"It's very similar to this population here," she said. "So I had been familiar with that, how they need to be encouraged, their attention span, what to expect from them. You need to be somewhat structured... They need much encouragement."

Judy Monroe, placement supervisor for Clarkston schools and Miracle's supervisor, said it was Miracle's combination of life experience and education that made her right for the job.

"She's raised her own kids and been through the teenage years with most of them," Monroe said. "Just based on her experience and what the warden told us the mental age of most of the inmates would be."

'The one thing that will stand out in my mind about your class is that every time we came to class, you always had a welcome smile for us. In such a negative atmosphere as this it's needed.'

Camp Gilmore inmate on Judy Miracle

Miracle was selected. "She's self-confident," Monroe said. "She relates well to her students... She's pretty much on her own."

An Ortonville resident, Miracle is the mother of seven children and also teaches religious education at Our Lady of the Lakes in Waterford. She went back to school when her youngest child was 2, and it took her seven years to get her college degree. Now, her kids love to talk about their mom who teaches at a prison.

"I think they're proud of it," she said. "It's kind of a neat topic of interest. They want to know what goes on here. I tell them they're people you'd probably see next door. They just goofed up a couple of times and now they're paying for it."

Most of her pupils, who range in age from 21 on up, haven't been in a classroom in a long time. Many of them were unsuccessful in school; some have learning problems, such as dyslexia or attention deficit disorder. A few have even been to college.

Miracle administers a test on the first day to see where each student places initially, then administers the same test at the end to see if they've moved forward.

In between, she tries to make the classes meaningful to her students' lives. One day she had them fill out income tax returns, something many had never done. Another day, when she discovered many didn't even know how to use a ruler, she gave them a lesson in measuring the furniture.

"That may not be on a GED test, but it's life skills," she said. She also makes sure she covers the five areas basic to the GED test—reading, writing, social studies, math and science. Her goal is to raise her students' proficiency level. She gives them homework every night and says they're remarkably good about getting it done; after all, they don't have the distractions of most students.

But they do have problems not experienced by most students. "These people here are real willing to ridicule each other," Miracle said. "We work on that the first few days... There's no wrong answers here; we're all learning."

When the school year started, no one knew whether students would want to take the classes or not. "We didn't know how it would go; if we would have a constant flow of inmates, but it's worked out real well," Monroe said.

"I know a lot of them initially sign up because they want to get out of their rooms more," Miracle said. "But I have had some good feedback."

Perhaps drawing from her own experience, Miracle said she hopes "to instill an attitude, that it's never too late to get an education. No matter what you've done to your brain with drugs or whatever. And there is some benefit to that, even if it's just improved self-esteem."

"I always ask 'When do you leave? What are your plans?' You can't just walk out there and expect it all to work out. You've got to have a plan."

Nearing the end of her first semester on the job, Miracle said she has learned as much from her students as they have from her, both in class and in their writings.

"Most of them write on prison situations or their life plans. May of them take this opportunity to make plans for the future."

"I feel it's good to think about that. That's part of why they're here; to get it down on paper. You're more committed..."

"They school me every day. We laugh a lot. I have kind of an informal type atmosphere but they're very respectful of me."

Some of that shows through in the post-class critiques Miracle asks her students to write.

"I am so proud of my determination and truly amazed at the excitement I'm feeling," said one woman.

"I wish I could sign up a third time for your class," one man wrote after taking the course a second time.

One woman, whom Miracle described as a "hard case," wrote, "I plan to go back to college and need to have confidence in my teachability... The one thing that will stand out in my mind about your class is that every time we came to class, you always had a welcome smile for us. In such a negative atmosphere as this it's needed."

"I never expected to do this," Miracle said. "I knew I'd either love it or hate it. And it has been very rewarding."

Seniors have a new ride

Last year, comedian and Detroit native Tim Allen donated a van to Lighthouse in Pontiac. Now, indirectly, that generosity will be helping Clarkston-area senior citizens.

Lighthouse Clarkston has received the old van the new van replaced and will use it to drive local senior citizens to doctor appointments that are outside the local area. As Wendy Halsey, Lighthouse Clarkston branch manager explained it, the van will be scheduled in conjunction with senior vans in Springfield and Independence townships. Those vans can only be used with in their townships, so the Lighthouse van will fill in when seniors need to visit the doctor further away.

"The nice thing is the scheduling will be done by Anne Conklin at (Independence) parks and rec," Halsey said. "It'll provide maximum flexibility . . . so it's really making the best use of all of them. It's going to work extremely well."

There's one hitch—the Lighthouse van needs drivers. Volunteers will man the service and are currently being sought.

"That's the biggest need right now," said Halsey, who added that operating expenses also need to be addressed. "We're looking for volunteer drivers to run it. And then we'll use it as often as we have drivers."

Any senior citizen in Lighthouse's service area—which includes Holly, Davisburg, Lake Orion and Oxford as well as Clarkston—is eligible to use the van. You don't have to be a Lighthouse client.

To volunteer to drive the van, call Lighthouse Clarkston at 673-4949.

State history on the Internet

The Michigan Historical Center may be too far to drive for most area residents. But now, thanks to the Internet, it is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Secretary of State Candice Miller, the state's chief historian, announced this week that the historical center can be accessed via the World Wide Web. The address is www.sos.state.mi.us/history/history.html. You can also access MHC's Web page through a link in the Department of State home page at <http://www.sos.state.mi.us/> the MHC's page offers five selections: Michigan History Magazine, Michigan Historical Museum System, State Historic Preservation Office, Office of the State Archeologist and State Archives of Michigan. Each section can be accessed directly or through five routes: Explore, This Season, New Stuff, Kids' Stuff and Teachers' Stuff.

School crossing continues to be dangerous

As city looks for answers, suit filed in Christmas accident

BY EILEEN OXLEY
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Despite the relocation of a school crossing for Clarkston Elementary children, pedestrian safety hasn't changed much, said Clarkston Police Chief Paul Ormiston.

The city and the school district, who share responsibility for the path across M-15, moved it from Middle Lake Rd. to Waldon Rd. Dec. 18, five days after 13-year-old Derek Weddle was hit by a car and seriously injured. Derek suffered a broken leg and pelvis and is awaiting plastic surgery which will treat the gashes he received on the right side of his face, said his mother, Beverly Weddle. A metal rod inserted into his leg following the accident was recently removed.

The incident was the impetus to the relocation of the crossing, Ormiston said. After he talked with school superintendent Gary Haner, they agreed to the move. However Ormiston said that city crossing guard Elwin Hale reports motorists are still disregarding traffic signs—even though there is a light at the corner of M-15 and Waldon, and Hale's parked truck features a flashing yellow light.

"The crossing guard has indicated to me he is having difficulty with people going through the red light. He still has to be very watchful and careful. We're stepping up (police) enforcement at that intersection," Ormiston said. Ironically, Ormiston had just finished writing up a ticket for someone who ran the red light.

Hale has seen as many as 15 people pass through the red light during his two 40-minute crossing guard shifts each school day. "When there's no traffic on Waldon Road they shoot right on through — They don't stop," he said.

The crossing is there because of the elementary school, Ormiston said. Clarkston El. Principal Dr. Elaine Middlekauf said Ormiston hand-delivered notices of the relocation to every one of the families of the 12 children who cross there. "We also sent one note home with everyone in the student population so friends walking home with (those who use the crossing) would know the appropriate path. We sort of educated everyone," she said.

Beverly Weddle recently filed a lawsuit against the driver, a 52-year-old woman from Waterford, who struck her son. She says she has been talking to everyone to try to find ways to increase safety in the area. One idea is to install an over-the-road walkway across M-15, but she was told it would be costly and require intense study.

"My theory (about the crosswalk) is it's not only

'We've moved this thing for the safety of the children. However, we continue to have adult drivers run the light.'

Police chief Paul Ormiston

our subdivision that uses it. It's pedestrians in general that use it," Beverly Weddle said. She has also talked to State Rep. Tom Middleton (R-Ortonville) about the possibility of changing the speed limit at the south end of town close to where Derek was hit. She would like it lowered until motorists pass through the downtown area. Currently the speed limit is 30 mph from Robertson Ct. to Waldon Rd. It then changes to 40 mph on both ends of town.

"It would make people slow down," she said. "Nobody goes (that slowly) through town anyway. There's so much traffic that people just crawl through there."

Ormiston said the city will add crosswalk markings across M-15 at Waldon as soon as the weather permits and relocate the signs that were formerly at Middle Lake Rd. Meanwhile, he is talking to state and county officials and city residents to gather more input about what can be done. Ormiston said after he started as city police chief in July, he wrote a letter to Michigan Department of Transportation, requesting that speed be reduced at the north end of town where the city limits begin. He also asked that traffic be reduced to 25 through the business district. So far he has received no response.

But although "Walk" and "Don't walk" lights have been discussed for the M-15-Waldon intersection, it might make the crossing more dangerous, Ormiston said. For example, school children and other pedestrians might tend to follow the signal without looking to see if a driver was rounding the corner.

Ormiston said police officers can give tickets to drivers who even run yellow lights, according to their judgment of safety. "That's a 3-pointer," he said. "Under state law a yellow light means stop if you can safely—not try to make the light." The citation carries an $80 fine, the same as for running a red light.

The point is, Ormiston added, "We've moved this thing for the safety of the children. However, we continue to have adult drivers run the light."

In Focus

by Annette Kingsbury

A few plugs

If you're looking for some intelligent fun with a local twist, be sure to get your tickets for the Friends of the Library's murder mystery dinner, scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 17.

Written by librarian Patience Beer, the script, called "Murder in C Sharp," is sure to set a few tongues wagging in these here parts. There's a music conservatory; a funeral home that wants to be a bed and breakfast. And of course there's a murder, and several assorted weird characters, like faded rock star Iggy Rock.

The way it will work is the guests will sit down to dinner and the role-players will come to them at their tables. Each player will visit each table over the course of the evening, and it will be the guests' job to figure out whodunit. It sounds like a blast.

According to library director Mollie Lynch, the Friends have put on such a dinner before and it's been very successful. Their format sounds like one that will work. Best of all, everyone should make some money on the deal.

The Legion will benefit from the cash bar, a caterer has been hired for the dinner, and the Friends will reap the profits above and beyond the cost of dinner. That portion is also tax deductible for you and me.

I can't wait to see how the plot unfolds. Will the funeral home owner go after the mayor or city council? Will a bar go into a church?

The details: Tickets are $20 per person, $14 of which is tax-deductible. They may be purchased at the library; call 625-2212 for more information.

In other news: The board of education was expected to vote Tuesday night on hiring an outside consultant to organize the search for a new superintendent.

While I applaud the board for going outside, you have to wonder about some things. At Monday night's special meeting, board members (all but president Bill Craig were present) expressed confusion about who had scheduled several consulting firms to come and talk with them. Two were scheduled to come to town Tuesday night, and no one present Monday seemed to know how that had been arranged.

Now this may have been because Craig wasn't there; he might have been able to answer the question. But the cynics might think it sounds like someone is pulling strings behind the scenes, trying to direct the search in a certain direction. That would be troublesome.

The very day after Gary Haner announced he would retire, rumors were already flying that he was trying to select the search firm, and even his own successor. Such rumors may be inevitable, but they are troubling just the same. To me they speak volumes about the confidence level in this community in its leadership.

Here's hoping the board acts in a totally independent way in selecting its new superintendent. I agree with those who say it's the most important job the board will ever do. They will have to live with their selection for years to come, and he or she will set the tone for the entire district, just as Haner has done.

Editorial

Why the silence on raises?

The three full-time Independence Township elected officials are foregoing a raise once again this year.

It's the second year in a row your treasurer, clerk and supervisor won't receive raises, based on a recommendation from supervisor Dale Stuart, but given final unanimous approval from the board of trustees.

While we agree that elected officials shouldn't automatically receive raises, in this case it's probably not fair that all three have been denied a raise.

We agree wholeheartedly treasurer John Lutz doesn't deserve a raise for putting this township in shaky investment situations, which have been documented at length by this newspaper. But if this has been Lutz's problem from the beginning why are Stuart and McCrary being denied raises as well?

Supervisor Dale Stuart won't get specific as to why he made the recommendation across-the-board, but he has in the past stated he had no power to oversee investments and didn't know what Lutz was investing in.

McCrary, the township's chief financial officer (according to state law all township clerks hold that title), said it's not fair she and Stuart are being punished for Lutz's mistakes.

So what's the real deal then? If Stuart and McCrary are not to blame in this investment debacle — as they are saying — why has Stuart recommended none of them get raises? We're not quite sure.

It doesn't make sense and neither does the unanimous approval from the township board. We sincerely hope they have been asking the same questions, although many have said deciding who deserves what kind of raise would only cause more problems.

Our view is that since the four trustees are elected as part-time officials, they should be asking the questions their constituents want to. How could they just casually approve the recommendation with no discussion?

We're sure that it's because no one wants to stir the pot, but we also believe that's a copout.

We think the trustees need to step up to the task of asking tough questions, and if they know something the public doesn't they should have told us by now. DWC

Jim's Jottings

By Jim Sherman

Crackling sound a soggy feeling

Why do cold cereal makers, like Kellogg, Post, Nabisco and General Mills, push crispness?

My guess is it's one of three things: The CEO's wife likes the sound. A survey of Antarcicans proved crisp was liked best. They don't know how to package sog.

That's the way I like my shredded wheat and corn flakes . . . soaked until it's soggy. Usually I have 1-minute oatmeal for breakfast. Cholesterol, not taste or sound, has made this my cereal of choice.

But when I waiver, it's not to eggs and bacon, it's to bran flakes (you guess the reason) or shredded wheat.

Flake makers are putting all their advertising emphasis on the importance of each flake remaining crisp to the last. Close viewers of these wheat/corn/oat seed bakers' commercials see that there isn't enough milk poured on the partially filled bowls to give the suckers a soaking.

And, it's no wonder the eater/actress is skinny, there isn't enough nutrition in the bowl to get one through the morning shower.

There are probably a lot of people like me who don't even want to hear a flake break in the early morning. Silence is often golden, but it's especially golden before 8 a.m.

I say any breakfast cereal, hot or cold, worth eating is best when totally submerged in milk. On the tube clear glass bowls have to be used so the milk can be seen through the bottom.

You never see milk drop from the chin of the eater, let alone from the spoon. You know a bowl is properly filled with cereal when there are crumbs on the counter. And, a spoon full of cereal from a bowl properly filled with milk will drip onto the eater's chin and necktie or blouse. It's the law.

Another thing about the tv cereal picture . . . and the colorful box it comes in . . . they show strawberries atop the flakes.

It's pretty, but is the real message here that fresh fruit is needed to make a flake palatable?

Besides, everyone but the Madison Avenue ad agency-types know strawberries are extremely seasonal and often unaffordable.

Therefore, strawberries depicted atop cereal is a gimmick, a hoax, a fraud, a conspiracy between the fruit and grain people purposely designed to get bigger government subsidies.

Whatever, these people do not need subsidies. I looked at a box of corn flakes recently just for the price. My Mastercard credit wouldn't cover it.

But I did reach a conclusion on why cold cereal is promoted for dry crispness . . . the makers have already soaked us at the check-out counter.

A look back

15 YEARS AGO (1981)

Hundreds of Independence Township and Clarkston Village residents are waiting to see if the state's Department of Natural Resources calls for an environmental impact statement on the Edward C. Levy Co's proposed 400-acre mining operation. If the call for an EIS goes out, chances are the permit needed to create a lake by mining will be approved, says Jeffrey King of the DNR's Land Resource Division Pontiac office. Over 200 people jam the township hall during a public hearing, voicing strong opposition to the proposed operation.

Clarkston's village council drops the Kieft Engineering firm after 24 years of service and hires a new company that deals solely with municipalities. The quest began in November when concerns over conflict of interest were raised by trustee Ruth Basinger. Knowing that Kieft is supportive of widening M-15 outside the city limits, Trustee James Schultz points out that is his reason for wanting to hire a new engineer. The new firm, effective March 1, is Mosher-Kapleczak of Independence Township.

25 YEARS AGO (1971)

The Clarkston Area Jaycees announce they will present their first annual winter carnival Sunday, Feb. 21. It will be held at the Village Parking Lot and on the Mill Pond from 1 to 5 p.m. Among the events are skating races, an ice or snow sculpturing contest and a dog sledding exhibition.

The Clarkston Village Players prepare their tenth anniversary performance, "Dirty Work at the Crossroad," a family-type show and melodrama. The play was the first presented by the Players when they came to the Depot Theater in 1964. Many of the original cast will recreate their roles.

The Clarkston midget wrestling program is reported off to a successful beginning. An enthusiastic group of 50 boys between the ages of 7 and 12 has been participating in the Clarkston High School gym every Saturday morning to learn about wrestling.

50 YEARS AGO (1946)

Girl Scouts in Troop 7 meet in the English room at the school and hike to the Mill Pond where they enjoy a skating party. Games are played on the ice but the "Clean Up the Town" campaign is postponed because of the cold, wet weather. While on the ice the scouts form their "Good Night Circle" and sing their closing song.

Playing at the Holly Theatre are Sir Aubrey Smith in "Scotland Yard Investigator," Franchot Tone and Susanna Foster in "That Night With You" and Paul Muni and Marguerite Chapman in "Counter Attack." Featured at the Drayton Theatre are Claudette Colbert and Don Ameche in "Guest Wife," John Wayne and Philip Ahn in "Back to Bataan," Burgess Meredith in "G.I. Joe" and Phyllis Thaxter and Edmund Gwenn in "Bewitched."

Specials at Terry's Market include bulk lard, 2 pounds for 35 cents; fresh ground beef, 28 cents a pound; beef short ribs, 17 cents a pound; corned beef hash, 25 cents a pound; Duff's Waffle Mix, 22 cents a package; Smuckers Apple Butter, 22 cents a jar; and Oliv-ilo Soap, three bars for 17 cents.

60 YEARS AGO (1936)

Clarkston World War veterans are rejoicing in the enactment of the bonus bill which Congress passed last week over the presidential veto. The bill calls for the immediate payment of the adjustment compensation certificates otherwise due in 1945. The amount each veteran will receive depends upon whether he served at home or overseas and upon whether he has borrowed upon his certificate. The full value of a certificate is approximately $1,000 but it is estimated that about half of the veterans have borrowed 50 percent of their share. Hence, the amount each will now receive is about $500.

The Holly Theatre is showing the following movies over the next few weeks: "Little Big Shot," starring Sybil Jason, Robert Armstrong and Glenda Farrell; Zane Grey's "Thunder Mountain," starring George O'Brien; "Mutiny on the Bounty," featuring Clark Gable, Charles Laughton and Franchot Tone; and "Metropolitan," with Lawrence Tibbett, Virginia Bruce and Cesar Romero. Admission is 10 to 15 cents.

Specials at the Rudolf Schwarze market this week include pork steak, 21 cents a pound; beef roast, 15 cents a pound; short ribs, 12 cents a pound; oleo, 25 cents a pound; Peerless Salad Dressing, 22 cents a quart; Brown Beauty Coffee, 17 cents a pound; and Heinz Baby Food, three jars for 23 cents.

Don't Rush Me

Some words for the NFL

I wonder if the actual amount of people who watched Super Bowl XXX was less than watched Super Bowl XXIX.

I have come to an unscientific conclusion that the number had to be down.

Maybe it's just a case of sour grapes on the folks around here that I've talk to, but we were all in agreement: we didn't give a hoot about the game. This was for one reason and one reason only: we hate America's team. Who cares about watching Dallas play another Super Bowl? The nickname going around was Toiletbowl XXX.

Ho, hum. Go Pittsburgh.

Since I'm on the subject of the Super Bowl, why do they keep on moving kickoff to a later and later time? Don't the gagillionaire owners realize that us working stiffs have to work the next day?

I'd bet a buck that productivity on Super Bowl Monday is way down. It has to be. Workers schedule that day off, some come in late, tired or with the brown bottle flu.

I guess it is time to start a grass-roots campaign to get the NFL to move the Super Bowl to Saturday. It's an issue of great significance to the economic well-being of our country. It is a matter of national interest.

Of course, I can foresee the owners protesting this movement on such silly grounds as "tradition." I say, the heck with tradition. It's almost the year 2000.

If "tradition" is such a motivating factor the question of the Browns leaving Cleveland would never have reared its ugly head.

If tradition is a factor to the owners, then all teams would still be playing in open-air stadiums and on natural grass.

I'm sure folks in the old league didn't like the idea of having to switch from leather helmets to plastic, or letting an entirely different league into their domain.

But they did.

Let's move on this. Write your favorite football franchise. Call your representatives and senators in Washington.

Go team! Rah!

Super Bowl Saturday or bust!

And another thing...

Bring back the instant replay. I don't know how many games were won or lost this past season because of the wrong call, but it was a lot.

I'm positive the great minds of the NFL, members of the press and television media-folks can come up with a new and improved instant replay. Something that doesn't take too much time.

Hey, give me a break, at least I'm thinking.

People Poll

How has the cold and flu season affected you?

KATHY TARRINGTON, ORTONVILLE: It's had no affect at all. My husband and I have been very healthy. I'm probably speaking too soon but this is the first year I haven't had a flu shot.

KATHLEEN BETHELL, ROCHESTER HILLS: I'm very healthy and it hasn't affected my family at all.

GEORGE MATTESON, CLARKSTON: I haven't been sick. I have a chronic sinus condition but other than that I've been doing great.

PHIL PRZYBYLA, STERLING HEIGHTS: It didn't affect me. I have sinus problems so I can't tell the difference between sinus problems and flu season.

EUGENE ENGLISH, CLARKSTON: I was sick as a dog for several days. Basic flu symptoms, nausea and all that good stuff.

Come as you are

When I was hired at The Clarkston News over a year and a half ago, I had to get acquainted with the town and all its characters. Soon, many of them became as familiar as the historic buildings.

Now I expect to take a peek out the window and catch Village Grill owner Don Bomgesser brush by, wearing only an apron over his clothes even though it's the dead of winter. I guess he's in such a hurry to get back and please his customers that he can't wait to put on a coat.

Or I'll see Buck Kopietz make the daily walk between his two businesses at the north and south ends of town, Tierra Jewelers and Millpond Inn.

It's not uncommon to step outside the door and see Rudy's co-owner Chris Thomas rapping with some guys outside his store or almost bump into City Manager Art Pappas who's rushing to mail a letter. I've even caught a few snatches of unexpected but delightful conversation with Clarkston Auto Wash owner Fred Ritter in passing through the Clarkston Cafe.

Some of us in the editorial department even joked around Christmas about how we could set up our own miniature "Dickens Village" featuring the cast of Clarkston. There are just some people you see every day, even if you only work here. That's what makes this town so unique. I suppose all small communities have the same perspective.

Of course, I surprisingly run into people outside the City of the Village boundaries as well. Last summer, while working at a Meadowbrook outdoor concert, who should be coming down my aisle but Curt Catallo, partner with the new Clarkston Union Bar and Grill. (I think the concert was Soul Asylum? Correct me if I'm wrong, Curt.)

And last year my co-staff writers and I experienced a sort of deja vu at Detroit's Motor City Music Awards. Who was that familiar looking person—but in a leather jacket? Naw! Couldn't be. But it was Independence Township Assessor Dave Kramer.

Funny that I ran into Curt and Dave at music events. I think sometimes it surprises us when we find folks out of their familiar "uniforms" and in their street clothes. We forget city officers, business owners and teachers are ordinary people with ordinary lives when they leave work — just like us.

Disney was right. It is a small world after all. I've been a resident of Clarkston for four months and already I've encountered local celebs at Food Town. Former village president Carol Eberhardt yelled to me from dairy when I was on my way to the coffee aisle. "Pour" Mary Linseman passed me with a Betty Boop birthday cake for her daughter and business partner Susan Gahan, formerly with Olde Apothecary Antiques. Heck, she even invited me to stop by the new store and party. Todd von Gunten, assistant pastor at Calvary Lutheran Church, laughed and chatted with me in the produce department (He's a veggie-lover too).

And a few stores away, in Hollywood Video, I blinked my eyes and recognized Kurt Karlstrom, candidate for Independence Township treasurer. He turned around and looked surprised for a moment, then recognized me also. Kurt was just as warm and friendly as he is when we're in professional surroundings.

It's nice to see people out in their jeans, to get away from the workplace role, the professional repartee we reporters have to engage in during our interviews. There's a little distancing and it's nice to come back down to earth. Damn it! It's even nice to greet folks in their workout clothes!

I wasn't even embarrassed when I ran into Wint Funeral Home Director Bill Wint at the Waterford Vic Tanny recently. I didn't look to see which one of us was more bathed in sweat or if he was wearing fancy workout duds. I just heard "Hi, Eileen" and turned around to see a friendly face that genuinely seemed glad to see me.

Now if I could just be sure that was Clarkston High School Principal Brent Cooley running around the track ...

CHS life

By Don Downey

Lost at sea

"My life has been too simple and stern to embarrass any."

--Emily Dickenson

In English we've been studying existentialism. I'm not going to get into a big paragraph defining the finer points of philosophy, I'm just going to say I am not existential. Many of you are probably thinking "so what" and I don't blame you. When it comes to the issue of labels I myself often say "so what."

Often, but not always. Lately, prompted by our study of existentialism, I have evaluated my life and come to the following conclusions: I am not entirely existential because I have a bright red greedy streak across my mind. I am not entirely Christian because my sense of humor is not very nice sometimes. I am not entirely Buddhist because I am impatient with how slowly most things happen. I am nothing that I have ever researched.

Many people would be insulted if they were not given one of the previous labels or something similar. As a result, many people change their lives or lie about their behavior to fit into one of those categories. I don't. I will officially categorize myself only when I read about a group of people who are exactly like me and won't require me to change to fit their purposes, but so far I've yet to find the "fundamentally lazy yet still somehow overachieving Scouts of America" (and I'm still looking for someone in Clarkston besides myself who saw and liked Showgirls).

I like the quote at the top of this article. I've always felt I could relate to quotes, no matter how contradictory they are among themselves. I don't think my life has been simple and stern; rather, if I had to use Emily Dickenson's wording to describe myself it would be "My life has been too normal and unfocused to captivate any."

I don't think I'm a dud; I just think that I've exhausted my resources here and am ready to move on, but with no predrawn philosophy or blueprint in hand. Just me and, as someone I know likes to say, "my strange little brain." Which means, of course, college.

I've decided to apply to a college in France. I don't speak French, I have no money, and my parents aren't too keen on the idea, but that doesn't stop me. France is what I want so France is what I'm shooting for.

I think that if I went somewhere else I wouldn't be happy, and I'd feel lost in the ocean of National Merit Scholars and student activity committees. I would rather go somewhere that I know no one and start anew. Most people don't understand this, but, as my Donosophy decrees, it's not my job to explain it to them. I just hope one or two people in the younger grades will get the message and apply to places they really want to go.

Just ask the drivers

Want to know what's really going on in a school district? Ask the bus drivers and custodians.

Kara Funk, director of superintendent searches for the Michigan Association of School Boards, was in town Jan. 29 to talk to the board of education about finding a successor to Gary Haner, who is retiring.

Funk told the board that she always visits the bus garage and also talks to custodians during the process.

"Who has credibility? Custodians and bus drivers have no reason to lie. The rest of you do, I guess. You'd be amazed at what I get when I visit the bus garage."

Maybe not. Board vice president Janet Thomas, referring to earlier disputes between Haner and drivers and custodians, told Funk "We won't surprise you here, or disappoint."

Heritage Hunt II

By Virginia Block

One never knows where you'll find the "missing link," but a new look at how Frankenmuth's Bavarian Inn Lodge uses Family History as a drawing card certainly gladdens our heart.

At least 350 family surnames and a family history with photos, etc., are to be found in each room. We have been furnished a list of the names and the room numbers where "your family" is honored. BLOCK is in room 233, so you can bet that come good weather, we'll visit.

The hardy souls that came out to our classes at the Pontiac Library on the 27th of January were enlightened of how to find "family" in unexpected places. Many times we overlook the obvious, in not re-reading old letters, or contacting the writers, if possible, even after being told we don't connect.

Our growing "Family Circle" of ancestor's pedigrees and group sheets will be even greater help to those new to our classes. These "classmates" of January found many possible links among a surname exchange and the sharing is the best part of it all. Seldom do we find the person who doesn't learn something new, regardless of how seasoned a researcher they are.

We urge all readers to look at family death records more carefully for recognizable family-genetic diseases with emphasis naturally on diabetes, cancer, heart and high-blood pressure as causes of death in a parent, grandparent or as far back as you've been able to find mention of cause.

With today's advanced technologies in research diagnosis, prevention and treatment "old age" or "senility" could take on a whole new meaning to you and yours.

Come fall, P.B.S. has announced a 10-part series to be offered via television on Genealogy, and gives an assist to adding interest to non-enthusiasts, much the way Alex Haley's Roots affected the public. The computer age will offer vastly different approaches to research that Haley never dreamed of.

As we attempt to help you, we find the challenge to stay informed a big help to filling in the missing pieces in our own "puzzles."

We will endeavor to continue our classes on a monthly basis and are greatly pleased by the cooperation of the Pontiac Public Library to furnish us the space and time to hold our gatherings. Won't you plan to attend the February session? We'll welcome hearing from you with queries.

Happy Hunting.

How to cool soup safely this winter

Winter winds and whirling snowflakes may inspire you to cook up a large pot of homemade soup. But improper cooling can be a potential source of food poisoning, according to Sylvia Treitman, home economist with the Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service.

An old wives' tale that has been passed on from one generation to another has made many people believe it isn't good to put hot food in the refrigerator until it's thoroughly cooled, for fear of turning it "sour," Treitman says that's a real no-no.

"We get lots of calls from distressed cooks who have accidentally fallen asleep and left their large pot of cooked food sitting out all night because they were afraid to put it into the refrigerator too soon," she says.

Treitman suggests allowing a large pan of hot food to sit 10 minutes while stirring frequently. Then, set it in a sink or large pan of ice water to hasten cooling. Divide the contents into smaller containers and refrigerate, allowing plenty of space for air circulation.

For more food-safety questions, call the food and nutrition hotline at 858-0904.

Clarkston kids work to help the needy this winter

Members of the Clarkston High School chapter of the National Honor Society will be among those participating in the Walk for Warmth, the sixth annual fund-raiser sponsored by the Oakland Livingston Human Services Agency.

The walk will be held Saturday, Feb. 24 and raises money for local residents who are unable to pay their utility bills during the cold winter months.

In addition to the CHS delegation, Clarkston will be well-represented by the local Rotary and Optimist clubs and delegations from Clarkston United Methodist Church and NBD Bank. Honorary marshal is Detroit Lion Lomas Brown; co-chairmen are Oakland County Executive L. Brooks Patterson and Robert Davis, president of North Oakland Medical Centers.

"We're happy about the participation we get from Clarkston," said OLHSA spokesperson Michelle Spielman. "They know poverty exists and they're trying to get involved."

Spielman said the walk has grown and last year raised $32,000 by going after teams from service clubs and businesses. NBD Bank is expected to have one of the largest business contingents, she said.

According to OLHSA, weatherization funding is scheduled to be reduced from $14 million to $7 million statewide beginning April 1. In addition, recent decisions by the Michigan Public Service Commission, which regulates the state's utilities, have allowed utility companies to stop providing low-income energy assistance that used to be required. And at the federal level, the low-income heating assistance program is under fire.

"The cuts to the weatherization program will take away the funds used to make permanent improvements to a furnace, hot water heater, thermostat or insulation," said Payson Tilden of OLHSA. "The potential cut in funding means 'Walk for Warmth' funds are more important now than ever before."

Walk for Warmth funds are raised in the form of pledges by the walkers. They are distributed to low-income, elderly and disabled residents. Payments are made directly to utility companies.

The Oakland County walk will take place at the Phoenix Center in downtown Pontiac. The three-mile event begins at 9:30 a.m. To learn more about participating or sponsoring a walker, call OLHSA at 858-5172.

File your 1040 EZ completely by phone

This year, some Michigan taxpayers will be able to pick up the telephone and in one simple call file their 1995 federal income tax returns.

A touch-tone phone is all that is needed to file the federal 1040 EZ, according to IRS District Director Arlene Kay.

"And this year, TeleFile is completely paperless," she said. "Taxpayers end their call with a personal identification number that substitutes for the signature required on paper returns."

After the taxpayer provides requested information, TeleFile will compute the tax and give the amount of the refund or amount due. Refunds will follow in about three weeks, Kay said. If there is a balance due, you have until April 15 to pay.

To be eligible, you must use the special 1040-

TEL Tax booklet, be single with no dependents, have taxable income of less than $50,000 and be at the same address as last year.

Need help with tax return?

The Michigan Association of Certified Public Accountants will once again offer its free Ask-A-CPA Day for the metro Detroit area.

On Saturday, March 2, anyone may call (810) 855-2288 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Limit is two questions per call. At least 25 CPAs will be available to take questions.

"We hope to reach those who complete their own returns but have tax-related questions ranging from new tax laws to IRAs and estate planning," said Phyllis Kramer, chairperson for the event.

CHS senior selected for U. S. Army band

BY EILEEN OXLEY
Clarkston News Staff Writer

At five-foot-one and 97 pounds, Brianna Williams is hardly your typical, rugged army recruit.

But the Clarkston High School senior decided to "Be all that you can be" — and more — by enlisting in the U.S. Army last week. After being called by a local army recruiter who contacts every soon-to-graduate senior at CHS, Brianna decided to check out the Waterford recruiting office and talked to a female sergeant about her special interests. When she spoke of her love for music, the sergeant suggested she audition for the U.S. Army Band.

Brianna, who plays flute in CHS's Symphonic Wind Ensemble, auditioned for the Army's band recruiter recently, when he passed through Lansing. She was the only one who showed up out of the seven high school music students who were supposed to be there. Her playing was so good that she made it, even though she and her recruiter, Sgt. Phillip Molangi, didn't know she had to have a piece prepared.

Brianna played a selection she remembered and had memorized from band for band recruiter Sgt. Kevin Edwards, who has played for the Tonight Show Band and with Herb (Tijuana Brass) Alpert and Ray Charles. The rest of the audition was a breeze. "He made me play scales and things like that. And he asked me theory stuff, about sharps and flats," she said.

After she graduates from Clarkston High in June, Brianna will start basic training at Ft. Jackson,

Brianna Williams

SC in September, Molangi said. After the three months are completed she'll study music at the U.S. Armed Forces School of Music in Norfolk, VA for six months.

"It's 18 months of schooling condensed into six months, so she gets 18 months worth of college credits," Molangi said. "Once she graduates from that, she can audition for special bands. Some play for the President, dignitaries..." Right away, Brianna will see over $200 more on her paycheck with her immediate E-3 (ensign, band) ranking rather than the E-1 rank she would begin with as a regular private. If she makes it into a special band she would be ranked E-6.

"That's a rank it takes most people nine or 10 years to attain," Molangi said. Brianna will receive nearly $15,000 through the Army's GI Bill to help pay for her education. "Three years later they walk out with a bachelor's degree and they didn't even pay," Molangi said.

Before she was contacted by her recruiter, Brianna had never considered joining the Army. Now she feels it was a wise decision.

"It sounded very interesting, how you can get money for college, like if I want to go into teaching." Brianna says her first choice would be to teach music. "And I think it would be really cool once I got out of it to play in a symphony somewhere."

Her parents, Ken and Sue, said they let their daughter make her own decision.

Sue Williams said she was surprised because Brianna isn't athletic. But, she said, "it was her choice. We tried to give her the pros and cons. If she went to college she would have to make her own choices too. I have a real hard time letting her go but you have to," she added with a smile.

Ironically, Ken Williams planned to try out for the U.S. Navy Band back in the '60s. "I was supposed to audition for the band with my clarinet but I got sick

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

CAN YOU JUSTIFY PRICE?

QUESTION: How can you help me to price my home correctly?

ANSWER: Pricing is the most vital element in the selling process. An experienced agency like ours knows what's going on. We KNOW what sellers are really getting for homes like yours.

Pulling an abnormally high price out of a hat may be one thing, but that price has to be justified. We can prepare a comparative market analysis to convince any doubtful prospect that your home is worth what you are asking. We can cite similar homes that have gone for this price - or more. That's why you'll get the best possible price by selling through our agency.

Appoint committee to look at raises

Dear Editor:

Several years ago, Independence Township, led by then-supervisor Ronk, decided that we should have a chartered township form of government. While there may have been some benefit to that change of form, one of the detriments has now become apparent.

Under the old system, citizens met once a year in an annual meeting to determine, among other things, the salaries of the officers and the trustees. Under this charter form of government, we no longer have that direct control.

Now, for the second straight year, we have failed to raise the supervisor's pay. According to the township clerk, this is caused by the township's inappropriate, losing investments. However, those investments were made before the current supervisor even came into office.

Now I suppose an argument could be made that the treasurer who made those investments should not receive a raise. There are folks who say that the township clerk, who is the chief financial officer and was in office, bears some responsibility in not reporting these investments to the township board.

And many people have said that these township trustees who were on the board at the time of these investments were obligated to inquire about the nature of the township's investments, even when they were not reported.

But a distinction must be drawn, both when these officials stand for re-election later this year and when we determine what their salaries ought to be.

Independence Township is one of the fastest growing communities in Oakland County. We need to be able to attract and retain the best among us to carefully watch over this growth and our tax money.

For these reasons, I propose that the township board appoint a committee of knowledgeable and concerned citizens to study the compensation issue and make recommendations. To overcome any reluctance to compensate officials who have any form of responsibility for the controversial investments, this committee should consider recommending salary increases that would go into effect only after the next election.

I urge all who read this proposal not to sit idly by, but rather to call or write to the township hall supporting this kind of independent evaluation, so that once again the citizens have some meaningful input on this important issue.

Very truly yours,
Neil E. Wallace

and was discharged."

Currently at "minimum women" weight level, Brianna cannot fall below the 96 pounds at the bottom of her weight and frame category. She plans to gain more by eating a lot of army food and indulging in her favorite Mexican fare at the Taco Bell near Ft. Jackson. She also says she plans to whip her petite frame into better shape to prepare her for the rigorous obstacle courses and other physical challenges basic training provides.

By nature and habit, "I'm a couch potato," she admits.

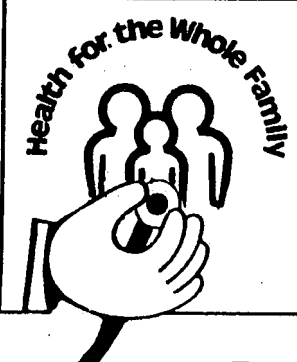

However, she knows her real job will be to play in the Army's band. She's very excited about that.

"It seems like a lot of playing but I'm getting paid for it," she said with a laugh. "I like music so much."

Facilities report well-received by board

Adding on to elementaries rather than build makes sense, trustees say

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

When the latest facilities committee recommended that Clarkston schools not build a new elementary school but rather add on to existing ones, some people were surprised.

But upon reflection, members of the board of education said they are happy with the report and feel it makes a lot of sense.

"I was surprised," board treasurer William McGregor said. But, he added, the concept of adding onto existing buildings to bring them up to some kind of parity would solve a lot of problems.

"I think given the fact we can only really plan for five years or so, and the issues that came up around Springfield Plains (the newest school, now in its second year) versus the rest of the buildings, I think it's important we keep parity among the elementary schools."

However, McGregor is concerned about the limitations of such an undertaking—age of the buildings, layout, size of individual classrooms, etc.

"I think it's important you get an understanding of each building," he said. "If you want a cafeteria at each building and the layout doesn't work for that, there may be issues. But I think it's important we get something in place soon."

The board is facing pressures at nearly all of its elementary buildings. Most are over their planned capacity, and even Springfield Plains has had to turn specialty classrooms over to regular classes due to growth, which is rapid and continuing.

The facilities committee, in a report presented to the board Jan. 15, said elementary growth is expected to continue for the next few years, then taper off. After that, the mini baby boom will make its way up into the higher grades, causing a ripple effect there, the committee said.

The committee is expected to go into greater detail about its report at a special meeting with the board of education Feb. 5 at 7:30 p.m. at the board office.

Trustee Barry Bomier said he found the report "very consistent" with the goals established back when voters were asked to approve money to build Springfield Plains. At that time, voters were told the new building was just one of three phases planned to bring all students equity in their facilities and their education.

Excerpts from the facilities report

Cafeterias: "The committee believes that cafeterias will provide each elementary school with adequate space from lunch while freeing up the multi-purpose room for physical education. Our present multi-purpose rooms cannot handle the scheduling load that is required. . . . In some buildings existing classrooms could be reconfigured into cafeterias."

Classrooms for music, art and science: "All elementary schools in Clarkston should have a designated classroom for science, art and music. The committee felt strongly that our curriculum was important and that we should provide space for the implementation of this curriculum. The sharing of space was found to be unacceptable."

Hallway lockers: "Hallway lockers will provide students with appropriate space to store their outerwear, etc. and, at the same time, allow additional storage and desk space within present classrooms."

Additional classrooms: "There is currently a shortfall of 13 general education classrooms and five special services classrooms. The projections for the next several years indicate additional growth at the elementary level . . .

"Additionally, the fourth wing should be constructed at Springfield Plains Elementary School."

"Why I agreed to Springfield Plains as the first step was to give some kind of relief in classrooms at Bailey Lake," Bomier said. He still has problems with the lack of cafeterias at some buildings.

"Kids walk from one end of the building to the other at Bailey Lake with their hot lunches," he said. In inclement weather when lunchtime recess is cancelled, they can't use the gym because other students are eating there.

"I can't speak for the rest of the board but I totally support the facilities committee," he said.

Board vice president Janet Thomas agrees. "I think maybe before this committee there was a feeling we needed a new school," she said. "To me this report made a lot of sense . . . The committee was not all that large but the people on it were relatively consistent and didn't seem to have a private agenda."

Thomas said she appreciated the board's concern about overbuilding. "It would be better to create the space to equalize the buildings rather than overbuild," she said.

And she said she looks forward to hearing from the committee members in greater detail Feb. 5. "They have strong feelings too," she said.

Diehard Steeler fans

Their beloved Pittsburgh Steelers may have lost, but Cindy Story and 5-year-old Jamie Story, are still loyal fans. Cindy, who grew up in the Pittsburgh area and now lives in Independence Township, says her heart will always be with the Steelers and during Super Bowl week she decorated herself and the outside of her home with Steeler memorabilia. "It's just pure pride being a Steeler fan. When you're from that area you're a fan forever."

Reflections art contest winners announced

Some of Clarkston's best young writers, artists and musicians and their families packed the gym at Pine Knob Elementary Monday night for the annual presentation of the district-wide Reflections contest winners.

The contest, sponsored nationally by the PTA and locally by the Clarkston PTA Council, recognizes entries in visual arts, literature, photography and music by students in grades K-12.

Last year, two Clarkston composers, Patrick Heber and Jimmy Territo, were winners at the state level. Both entered again this year.

Monday night, ribbons and certificates were awarded. The PTA Council makes sure every entry receives recognition. All the composers were invited to perform their pieces live.

"The celebration tonight is for all the kids who took the time and effort and risk to express themselves," said Penny Shanks, a member of the organizing committee. "Imagine what they would be like without art, without music, without literature."

This year's theme was "Open your Eyes and See" and entries ranged from comical to serious. Middle-schooler Ali Eghbalian entered a photograph of a dog sitting up and looking at the camera and called it "Open your Eyes and See Me Hangin' Around." Another middle-school, Laren Hosnet, submitted a collage in the visual arts category entitled "Open your Eyes and See the Wonders of Technology." It featured various images of computers and related subjects. Even the youngest students wrote essays and entered photographs and drawings. All were displayed in the gym during the presentation.

"The risks they take—I'm sure you're going to be flabbergasted when you see what they've done," Shanks told the assembled crowd. Indeed, two of her own sons entered in several categories.

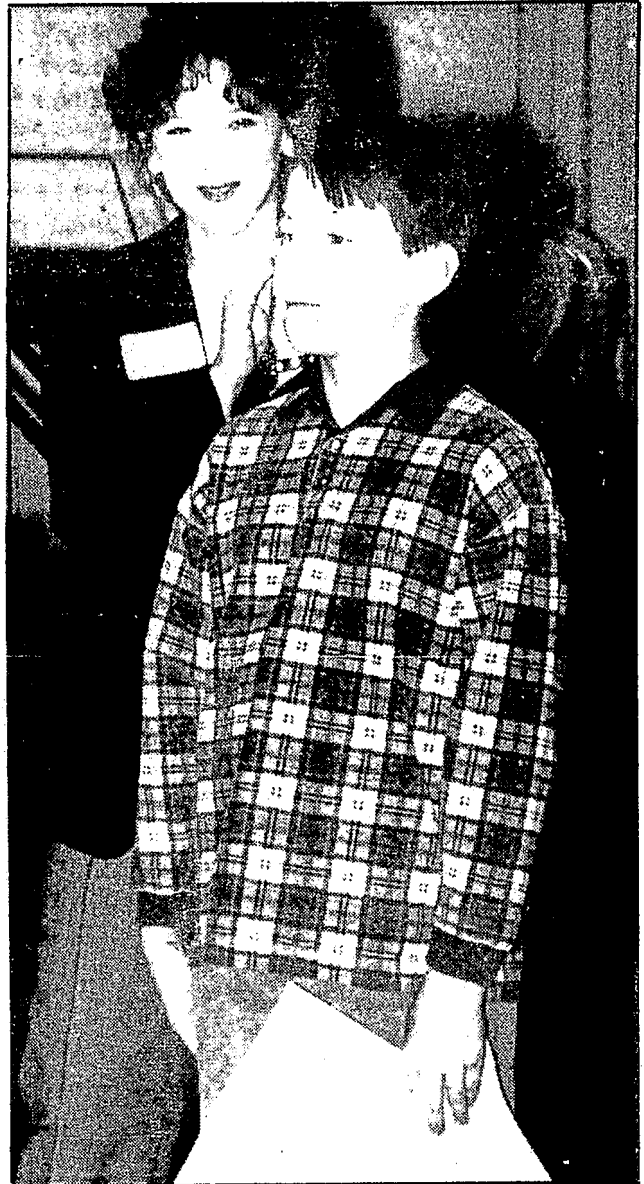

The winners of the district level contest now move on to the state finals. Judging will be held in Rochester and awards given in Grand Rapids May 4 at the state PTA convention. National competition is June 24 in Washington, D. C.

Laura Mazzeo plays her composition, "Just Open your eyes and See," on clarinet.

Victoria Lauzun played and sang "All Alone."

Jim Shanks won both first and second place for photography in grades 3-5.

Academic achiever

NAME: Julie Lloyd
GPA: 4.0

PARENTS: Robert and Dorothy Lloyd of Davisburg

PLANS: "Attend Michigan Tech. in the fall and major in engineering (probably civil or mechanical). I love numbers and I thoroughly enjoy my physics class this year."

She spent a week at Tech. last summer through the Women in Engineering program learning about different jobs in the field and really enjoyed it. Her ideal job? "I thought I'd like to work somewhere with groups of people where I could consult."

FAVORITE EXTRA-CURRICULAR ACTIVITY: Marching band, where she plays clarinet. "It's a challenge but thoroughly enjoyable—physical, intellectual."

"Marching band was the basis for the beginnings of many of my close friends. Now there are other things that we share. However, marching band was the way we got to know each other and spent lots of time together."

HONORS, SCHOLARSHIPS, AWARDS: Full tuition scholarship to Michigan Tech; Top 10 student; second chair in the symphonic wind ensemble.

FAVORITE CLASS: "It's either physics or calculus; everything is so logical and it makes sense. I enjoy working with numbers and formulas, and in general learning all of the fascinating things one can do with them."

"I think everyone can be logical, but some people come to it more naturally so they don't have to work at it so hard."

FAVORITE MUSICAL ACT: Doesn't have one; listens to classical radio.

A GOOD BOOK SHE'S READ: "Maybe,

Maybe Not," by Robert Fulghum.

PETS: A dog named Peter, a cat, Mittens, a bird, P. J., a rabbit, Benjamin, a mouse, Mortimer. She's also pet-sitting for friends who are moving; they're pets are Scooter the ferret and Pur-Pur the cat.

CHURCH: Waterford Community Church.

MOST EMBARRASSING MOMENT: "In state competition, the most important marching band event, I lost track of how long we'd been marking time in place and I began the next move a measure too early. The rest of the line soon caught up, but I was very embarrassed." She's since seen a videotape of the event and says it doesn't look quite as bad as it seemed.

LIFE ACCOMPLISHMENT SHE'S PROUDEST OF: "Learning how to work hard at doing whatever I attempt. This has enabled me to achieve the grades that I do. Also, in other things such as summer mission trips, musical ensembles and other projects this accomplishment has helped me to be successful."

FAVORITE SCHOOL MEMORY: "Marching band state championships: fun with friends at rehearsals, getting a lot accomplished and still being able to have fun; warm-up in the cold garage, later in a crowded locker room; our last performance of the season, my last performance with the CHS marching band; tearful bus-ride home from the Silverdome."

SOMETHING MOST PEOPLE DON'T KNOW ABOUT HER: "In sixth grade I wasn't going to be in band, then a friend convinced me it would be fun so I switched to band from gym three weeks before the Christmas concert. Surprisingly I was first chair for that concert."

IN A SENTENCE MR. COOLEY IS: "interested in making CHS the best environment for learning that it can possibly be."

Netters tied for first in OAA

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

The Clarkston girls volleyball team continues to play well and that has led to four straight division wins and a first place tie.

The Wolves beat Rochester Adams 13-15, 15-4, 15-3 Jan. 26 and then handled Rochester 15-10, 15-6 Jan. 29. West Bloomfield was one game ahead of the Wolves, but lost to Adams Jan. 29. Clarkston and West Bloomfield are tied for first at 4-1 and Adams and Royal Oak Kimball are in second at 3-2.

The Wolves and West Bloomfield have a showdown Feb. 1 at Clarkston. West Bloomfield beat Clarkston in the first OAA game of the season.

Coach Gordie Richardson, whose team is 19-7 overall, said they've been successful because of hard work, focus and steady contributions from everyone on the team.

In the team's big win over Rochester, Richardson said seniors Lisa Herron and Nickie Winn had solid performances but, "Most of the kids played strong and all of them played."

"We took care of business."

The team served only 87 percent, but excelled in other areas like passing and serve receptions.

Against Adams, Clarkston took an early 7-3 lead in the first game, but eventually lost, mainly due to errors. The Wolves came out in the second game ready to win and took a 7-0 lead, thanks to aggressive net play and solid passing.

Adams never threatened in the third game either, as Clarkston was ahead 11-0 before Adams scored its first point.

Against Adams, senior Stephanie Giroux had nine kills, served 11-for-13, was 10-for-11 serve receiving and had seven digs; Herron had eight kills, was 10-for-11 serving, had six digs and was 13-for-14 serve receiving; Winn was 13-for-15 serving, 49-for-50 setting and had eight digs; junior Megan Bjurman had eight kills, two blocks and two aces; senior Nicki Hard had two kills, was 7-for-8 serving, 12-for-13 serve receiving and had five digs; senior Kristi Millard had one block, served 3-for-3 and had five digs.

Senior Nickie Winn displays perfect set form (as teammate Nicki Hard watches) in her team's win over Rochester Adams Jan. 25. She was 49-for-50 setting against Adams.

Richardson said one key to his team's four-game OAA Division I win streak has been the team's strong passing and good defense.

"When we play good defense we usually win, and that's what sets up our offense."

First-year gymnasts win first competition

Perna, Simko shine

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

They may not be world-beaters, but the Clarkston girls gymnastics team won its first meet this week.

The Wolves beat Birmingham Groves Jan. 29, marking a strong improvement from earlier in the season. "We've moved up about 10 or 11 points as a team since we began the season," said proud assistant coach Denise Perna.

While team wins haven't been too common, Clarkston seniors Kelli Simko and Courtney Perna have excelled.

Against Groves, Perna had scores of 8.6 on the beam, 7.3 on the bars, 8.3 on the floor exercise, and 8.15 on the vault. Simko was also strong, scoring an 8.3 on the beam, 7.25 on bars, 8.3 on the floor, and 8.0 on the vault.

The team also performed well at a Berkley tournament Jan. 25, finishing with 113 points, just behind first place Troy Athens' 125 points, Walled Lake's 117, and Berkley's 116.

Perna and Simko once again excelled.

Perna took second in the vault with an 8.35, third in the bars with a 7.7, first in the beam with an 8.55 and second in the floor with an 8.75, while Simko was third in the vault.

"As a team we've improved every single meet," said Denise Perna, Courtney's mom. "We're having a real good time and all the teams have been real nice to all of us."

"These kids have far exceeded our expectations."

The state of sportsmanship

Clarkston coaches make behavior a focus

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

While most people involved in sports believe sportsmanship is taking a turn for the worse, Clarkston athletes — led by their respective coaches — are breaking that stereotype.

Most experts also agree that the only way to stop the trend of poor sportsmanship is to have an administration and coaching staff that strictly enforce the rules. In Clarkston the evidence of that is all around, especially in the sports most often criticized.

Sportsmanship isn't as much of an issue in sports like tennis — where the players themselves keep track of the score and are their own line judges — or golf or even baseball and softball.

Wrestling, boys basketball and soccer are where the issue of sportsmanship is a major concern. Basketball may be the worst for various acts of unsports-manlike conduct, while wrestling — considering the intensity of the one-on-one matchup — is one sport where enforcement is working.

Clarkston coaches seem to follow the notion that the best way to control behavior is strictly enforce it themselves. Clarkston Athletic Advisor Paul Tungate, who has worked in Clarkston schools for over 30 years, has had a hand in establishing that strong tradition at CHS. He says there are a lot of factors that contribute to the athletes handling themselves with class on and off the court or field.

"I think we have the highest percentage of on-staff coaches (10 of 16 work in the district), but for the most part I think it's the best group of coaches we've ever had here as far as stressing sportsmanship," said Tungate.

At Clarkston the emphasis on sportsmanship begins in the interview process. "We ask the coaches how they would deal with certain situations. For us that may carry more weight than their knowledge of the game."

Tungate said he is a firm believer in the idea that the coach must still take responsibility for the players on the court.

Everyone acknowledges there are problems with unsportsmanlike conduct. Starting this year, the Oakland Activities Association is doing something to combat the problem. Tungate is a member of a five-person OAA Sportsmanship Committee. He said

Wrestlers dominate OAA Div. I dual meet

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

When Clarkston's Joe DeGain and Lake Orion's Mike Calcaterra took to the mat, the Orion gymnasium erupted in cheers.

For over two hours before that, the Wolves wrestling team routinely beat up on both Orion and Hazel Park, by scores of 56-6 and 45-22, respectively, Jan. 24. It's a sight CHS fans and parents have seen before.

The excitement in the air rose considerably when 189-pounders DeGain, ranked #1 in the state in his weight class, and Calcaterra, last season's Class A state champion, came out to do battle. DeGain is still undefeated on the season, while Calcaterra has struggled and isn't rated among the state's top five at 189 pounds.

So with little excitement to that point, spectators and teammates went wild.

DeGain ended up winning 4-1, but the score didn't show how much the University of Michigan-bound senior controlled the match. He started out with a 2-0 lead after a quick takedown of Calcaterra.

After the second period, DeGain still led 2-0 as Calcaterra was unable to score. He extended the lead to 4-0 in the third and continued to control the defending state champ until the final buzzer.

CHS, now 12-1 on the season and 4-0 in Oakland Activities Association Division I dual meets, hasn't received much competition from its OAA opponents. They've beat opposing Division I teams by an average of almost 30 points in dual meets. The Wolves took to the mat against Hazel Park first and were never challenged, taking a 33-7 lead.

Freshman A.J. Grant (103 pounds) and junior Dave Ziemann (119) started off with decisions, junior Ryan Mick (125) earned a technical fall, junior Jason Tiefenback (130) and sophomore Aaron Sailor (135) had decisions, seniors Chad Auten (140) and Joe Roy (145) earned pins, senior Jeremy Lafferty (160) had a decision, while senior Joe DeGain (189) and junior Gordie Golec (215) both had pins.

Clarkston's win over Orion came a little easier because Orion had three of their top wrestlers injured, helping give the Wolves four voids in the match. While the showcase match was DeGain vs. Calcaterra, several other CHS wrestlers put in good performances against tough competition, including Ziemann, Mick and Golec.

* Ziemann battled Mike Owens in a tough match right up to the end, finally winning 8-6 in overtime.

* Mick matched up against 1995 state qualifier

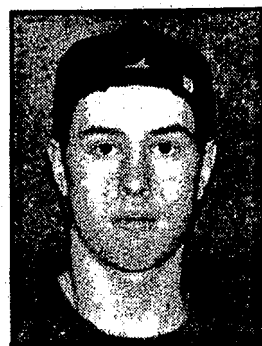

Joe DeGain, top, positions himself for a pin against this Hazel Park opponent Jan. 25. The senior moved his record to 30-0 on the season after that win and a decision against Orion's Mike Calcaterra. The Wolves are 12-1 overall and lead the OAA Division I at 4-0.

Brian Thomas and was down 2-0 right away after a Thomas takedown. But from that point on Mick took over and controlled the match, finally winning 6-2.

* Golec moved up to the heavyweight slot normally occupied by junior Tim Rebb to battle 1995 state qualifier Dan Geppart. Going into the match, Orion still had not scored a point and Golec, despite being outweighed by over 60 pounds, was determined to shut out Lake Orion. Golec was down 5-2 after the first period and 7-3 after the second but battled all the way. He was finally pinned in the third.

Other dominating CHS performances came from Grant, Tiefenback, Auten and Lafferty, all of whom had pins. Winning by decision were Sailor and Rebb, while sophomore Chris Gomez (112), Roy, sophomore Josh Lafferty (152) and senior Scott LaBrie (171) each won by void.

Wrestlers of the Week

Seniors Joe DeGain and Jeremy Lafferty are Clarkston's Wrestlers of the Week for solid performances against Hazel Park and Lake Orion last week.

DeGain, 30-0 and ranked #1 in the state at 189-pounds, controlled the match against defending state champion Mike Calcaterra of Lake Orion and won 4-1. The win kept DeGain undefeated on the season, but his coach and father said he is focused on much more than just one match.

"Joe knows he has a lot more to do this season," said Mike DeGain. "He's been around and competed at the national level and knows how to stay focused."

Most amazing is that Joe hasn't been scored on this year except for escape points.

He pinned his Hazel Park opponent in the first period.

Jeremy Lafferty also continued his winning ways this season as he easily beat Hazel Park's Chris Payne 7-0 and then dominated Orion's Chris Kalisz 17-1.

Lafferty, rated among the state's top wrestlers at 160 pounds and reigning Oakland County champion, has lost only four matches all season. One loss came to the state's #1 ranked 160-pounder, two losses came to the #2 ranked 160-pounder and another came to a state qualifier.

Offense, defense coming together

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

The Clarkston boys basketball team has been showing what coach Dan Fife knew it had all along: an explosive offense.

Early on this season the team's defense carried the Wolves when the offense struggled. But lately both offense and defense have been clicking and Clarkston hasn't had a tight game in several weeks.

Last week the Wolves easily defeated Berkley and Southfield, to improve to 9-2 overall and 4-0 and first place in the Oakland Activities Association Division I.

"Those first few games we played were just real tough games to start with," said coach Fife, pointing to the losses to Ferndale and state-ranked Detroit Cass Tech.

Coach Fife said in the last month the team has also had several players step up and play better. Junior Brad Conley and senior Jeff Mull are both playing well off the bench, coming around after early-season injuries.

In beating Southfield 79-43 Jan. 26, the Wolves played great defense in the first half and took a 40-20 lead. Along with that great defense Clarkston got some balanced scoring, led by sophomore Dane Fife's 31 points and senior Ryan Schapman's 21, including three 3-pointers. Senior Tim Wasilk added 10 points.

Coach Fife said his team will have a good test this week with games against rival Pontiac Northern and Rochester Adams.

Focus needed as skiers move on

BY DARREL W. COLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

With divisionals set for Feb. 1, Clarkston ski coach Thom Halsey hopes his skiers can overcome some late-season inconsistencies.

While the girls ski team defeated Lake Orion 12-24 Jan. 24 and Rochester Adams 11-25 Jan. 29, the boys team barely got past Orion 17-19 and then lost 19-17 to Adams.

"The boys were sloppy and weren't as focused as they needed to be," said Halsey. "We have to get better at the mental preparation. It may be a toll of what's been a long ski season already."

Not helping matters during the week were falls and disqualifications from several racers on both the girls and boys teams.

"Gravity has been our biggest enemy," said Halsey. "The kids are fast and I guess because of that there is a trade-off."

Girls team

The conditions at Pine Knob Jan. 29 weren't the best for any of the teams. The ski hill was closed down, high winds were causing problems, there were power outages and the hill was icy.

But through it all the girls team prevailed against Adams, despite a lot of falls by both teams. Taking first overall was Jennifer Trepte, second was Katie Atkinson, third was Gretchen Pitser and fifth was Kelly Banks. Heather Unsworth and Kristen Atkinson were both disqualified.

Against Orion, the Wolves once again had two disqualifications. But Kristen Atkinson took first overall, Unsworth was second, Pitser fourth and Katie Atkinson fifth.

Boys team

The Wolves were down early in the loss to Adams because their first three racers fell. It forced Clarkston to count a fall in the team score.

Taking second overall was Jason Callahan, fourth was Chris Evans, fifth was Dave Whipp and eight was Paul Rumph, despite a fall in his first run.

Against Orion, Clarkston had more falls. This time two racers fell in the first run and one in the second.

Kyle Russell was second overall, Paul Rumph was third, Dave Brown fourth and Jason Callahan was eighth, despite a fall.

JV team wins Cup

The Clarkston JV racers showed their depth and dominance at the Don Thomas Cup, held Jan. 26 at Mt. Brighton.

The JV boys team competed two squads, called Clarkston Pride and Clarkston Respect. The Pride team consisted mostly of last season's Don Thomas champions, while the Respect squad is comprised mostly of newcomers.

The Respect squad won the meet and the Pride team finished third, among 40 other JV teams.

In addition, the girls team finished third overall, among 20 other squads.

"Both teams did great," said a proud coach Halsey. "The girls team was pumped up going in and could have done better but they had two disqualifications and we had to count one fall in the team score."

The boys were dominating among the 230 other racers. Freshman Russell Parrott took first overall for his Respect squad, sophomore Brad Villiere was second for the Pride, freshman Rob Allyn was third for Respect, junior Brian Carnes was sixth for Pride, junior Steve Zerba was 11th for Pride and freshman Jeremy Parrott was 25th for Respect.

Zerba had the fastest first run of all the racers.

The girls were just as impressive, led by junior Natalie Vaughn's second-place finish among over 110 racers. The next-highest finishers for the Wolves were freshman Lissa Lukens in 21st, sophomore Sara McKechnie in 32nd and sophomore Joanna Bertling in 60th.

McKechnie had the fastest time in the first run.

Skiers of the week

JV racers Russell Parrott, a freshman, and Natalie Vaughn, a junior, are Clarkston's Skiers of the Week.

Parrott was the best among over 230 racers at the Don Thomas Cup Jan. 26, while Vaughn came in second in the girls race, among over 110 other racers.

Parrott led his Clarkston Respect team to the team title, while Vaughn's girls team finished a close third in the standings.

In the 9-10 age group, Elliot May was first at 55 pounds, Steve McGartland was second at 67 pounds, Palmer Schoening was third at 75 pounds, Mike Carrico was first at 63 pounds, Josh Hendrix third at 67 pounds, Brenton Place first at 85 pounds, Matt McCallum second at 100 pounds, and Joe Wood third at Heavyweight.

Also placing in the 11-12 age group were Nathan May, third at 80 pounds, Eric Petty, first at 100 pounds, and Cliff Persful, third at 112 pounds.

At the Jan. 26 Davison Tournament, Paul Gibbs was third in the 9-10 age group's 59-pound weight class.

Freshman Volleyball

The freshman volleyball team was defeated in their only match of the week, 2-15, 6-15 by Rochester Adams.

In the first game, the Wolves served 86% and were 63% on serve receptions. They were 78% for defense. In the second game, they served 78% and were 61% on serve receptions. They were 72% on defense.

Michelle Klotz and Beth Anderson both stood out, registering team highs on defense and serve receptions. Mandy Harrison had two aces, and Jenny Claus was 4-4.

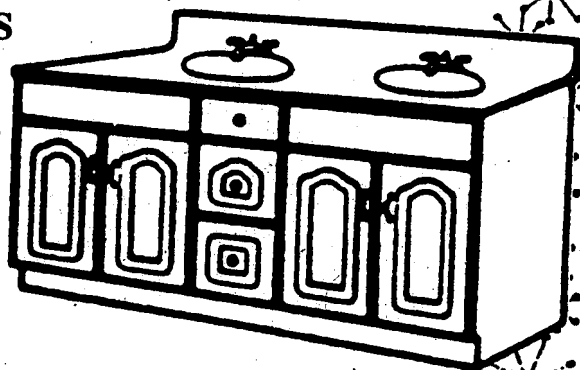

This week, the Wolves play home twice, against Rochester and West Bloomfield.

Basketball, wrestling coaches say tradition

the committee, which is in place for all four OAA divisions and all sports, hasn't had to look over any complaints of unsportsmanlike conduct as of yet.

In Clarkston's case, whatever the sport may be, the focus is on competing with class. All the coaches have strict rules they enforce.

Larry Mahrle, 18-year coach for the girls basketball team, said he has certain rules that every player must follow when it comes to sportsmanship.

"We try to emphasize to them that they shouldn't do anything that would reflect badly on them or the team," he said. "The kids know if they get a technical foul they'd be sitting down. We discuss those things because we don't want it to carry over into other areas. Over the years the kids have shown a lot of class."

Walt Wyniemko, a teacher at CHS who is the boys track coach for Clarkston and the head football coach at Waterford Mott, strongly believes that the lessons learned in athletics carry over to life.

While he said he expects his athletes to be good sports, he also says that doesn't mean they can't show emotion.

"It's not always an easy area because some kids that compete are emotional in what they do and some are quiet," he said. "If they are acting in a way that would hurt the team or break the rules then that isn't allowed, but if a kid is showing emotion after a good play then how can you tell him to stop?"

"If it's a quick response emotion, fine. But if it's done to point fingers or taunt then you've crossed the line."

Dan Fife, 14-year head coach for the boys basketball team and athletic manager, said much of the credit for Clarkston's good sportsmanship reputation should go to Tungate.

"Paul has been consistent in that area ever since I've known him," said Fife. "He's made that a focus when hiring coaches. So from my point of view, it starts right there with Paul."

For the most part, sportsmanship is more of a concern in basketball and wrestling. In Clarkston, both Dan Fife, the basketball coach, and Mike DeGain the wrestling coach have made good sportsmanship a part of the team's tradition, just like winning.

Wrestling

No sport is more intense than wrestling, pitting athletes one on one. And because of the intense nature of the sport, wrestling coaches and officials know they have to enforce good sportsmanship.

DeGain's squad is an example of a winning team that shows class: Last year his team won the regional Good Sports Are Winners award and DeGain himself was voted Class A Coach of the Year, in part for the way his team showed good sportsmanship in finishing as Class A runners-up.

DeGain demands and expects his athletes to act in the proper way, but it's not always easy. Along the way he's had to take matters into his own hands.

Early in the wrestling season, the coach sensed some of his kids were letting their emotions get away from them during matches. Not one to beat around the bush, DeGain called a team meeting and made sure his kids knew he wouldn't put up with it.

One wrestler flared up in a match following the talk. The unsportsmanlike actions got DeGain fuming and he confronted the kid right after, basically laying down the law: my way or the highway.

helps set pattern, but rules must be enforced

That wrestler hasn't stepped out of line since. "We always talk about it (sportsmanship) but you still have to remind them," said DeGain. "If you let them cross the line it will happen because no sport has the amount of intensity packed into six minutes like wrestling."

"We tell them if you lose, you let it go and shake hands like a man, and if you win, you win humbly. It's OK to show some emotion but we don't want them to run around and do cartwheels or anything like that."

For DeGain, good sportsmanship is expected from fans as well as his own athletes.

Last week at a wrestling meet at Lake Orion, DeGain and Orion coach Doug Kline took care of an incident in the stands when opposing fans started yelling at one another.

With the match still in progress, both coaches went into the stands themselves to make sure the problem was confronted and solved. It was a perfect example of coaches taking an active role in making sure good sportsmanship is followed.

"I think you need to show the kids you won't accept those things on any level," said DeGain. "You have to get involved and the coach has to do that."

In wrestling, officials have as much responsibility for enforcing sportsmanship as coaches. DeGain said for the most part wrestling officials are strong when it comes to deducting points or giving warnings to wrestlers who display disgust with officials or taunt or become overly physical with opponents.

"It's different for wrestling officials than any others, because if they let it get out of hand it will," said DeGain. "Most do a good job because they get involved immediately."

Boys basketball

Coach Dan Fife has simple rules for his players and the teams he plays against. He won't tolerate unsportsmanlike conduct.

Tim Wasilk is a senior and three-year starter for the Wolves, and he is an example of the type of athlete that plays for Fife: intense in his play but quiet in his emotions. He says the tradition of showing respect on the court comes with the territory of Clarkston basketball.

"I guess you learn to play that way from experience and, for me, looking up to varsity players like my brother (Chris Wasilk) and Duggan Fife when I was little," said Tim. "I just followed what they did."

Tim Wasilk said players entering the varsity already know what is expected from them because they've been around Dan Fife and his program from a young age, which begins with the McGrath youth basketball league.

"You already know how to act when you get up here," said Wasilk. "We just keep our mouths shut and let our playing take care of itself."

Coach Fife's other rule is that he won't play non-conference teams whose coaches allow the kids to trash talk or act in an unsportsmanlike manner.

"There are some games we've played where I didn't care if we won or lost because I hated the way the other players and coach acted," said Fife. "There are wrong ways to win ball games, and I want our kids to win the Clarkston way."

Coach Fife said unsportsmanlike conduct would be less of a problem if more referees made it a priority.

"If it's a bad official, you've got problems," said Fife. "Before we joined the OAA we always used Flint-area refs and they were real good about that stuff. Right now our league is trying and it's getting better."

Guest opinion — By: Scott Strickler, wrestling official

Bring sportsmanship back

A parent runs down from the bleachers and begins to verbally abuse the referee. A victorious warrior stands over his beaten foe, one finger raised in triumph. The meet official needs a police escort from the building because of an abusive crowd. A coach throws a chair in disgust of his players' performance.

No, I am not describing highlights of the World Wrestling Federation. These events can be witnessed nearly every day of the week, sometimes free of charge. Just take a trip to your local high school and enjoy an interscholastic sporting event.

I'm sure I can speak for the majority of people who attend such functions, including parents, coaches, athletes, sports fans, officials and administrators, when I say the disease of poor sportsmanship is spreading at a rapid pace and something must be done about it.

We are quick to place a large portion of the blame on professional athletes and the glorification of their antics. With all the fame and fortune associated with pro athletes, it should be expected that young athletes will emulate and idolize their favorite players.

Speaking as a parent, official, ex-coach and former high school and college athlete, I suggest we turn off the television and look around the room. There we will find the main source of change ... our own deteriorating morals.

When a young man or woman sees his or her parents curse the driver of a car that pulls out in front of them, or views a coach getting belligerent with an official over a call, how do you expect them to act when they are faced with the same situation?

If parents and coaches viewed their children's and players' behavior as a direct reflection of themselves, perhaps they would begin to place less emphasis on winning and losing and more on sportsmanship and respect for others.

I have been an official of high school sports in Michigan for the past twelve years, seven of which I also spent as a coach. During the past five years there has been a rampant increase in player, coach and spectator ejections from events, as well as more unsportsmanlike conduct.

Just this past Saturday during a high school wrestling tournament, there were two parents ejected and three coaches penalized for unsportsmanlike conduct. In the past this would have been considered a rough day, but now it is the norm.

Are more rules needed? Again the answer is no. The Michigan High School Athletic Association already has some of the most stringent penalties for misconduct in the United States. The problem, as I see it, is two-fold. We need to stress sportsmanship at a younger age, and consistently enforce the rules that are already in place.

Stressing sportsmanship early on is the responsibility of the child's parent and coach. Enforcing the rules that are currently in place is the responsibility of meet officials and administrators.

I currently belong to a 52-member wrestling officials association that has committed itself to the above problems. It is our belief that if all officials are consistent in enforcing the letter of the law when it comes to unsportsmanlike behavior by contestants, coaches and parents, we will see a decline in this type of behavior.

Unfortunately this is a reactive response to a problem that needs to be dealt with proactively. Parents, coaches, officials and administrators must realize this problem will not go away by turning our heads to it. Instead, join the fight to bring sportsmanship back to interscholastic athletics.

— Scott Strickler, a wrestling official for 12 years, coached the Clarkston High wrestling team from 1985-92, winning the Class A title in 1991. He is also a member of the All-American Athletic Association for wrestling officials and Editor of the Michigan Wrestling News.

Freshman Basketball

The Wolves had their best week of the season last week, winning both their games.

On January 23, the Wolves played at Berkley, and defeated the Bears 48-41. Scott Davis led Clarkston with 15 points, and Eric Poley had 14. Matt Baker added eight.

On January 26, Matt Baker made a shot at the buzzer to give the Wolves a 46-45 victory. Poley and Nick Holland both had nine for the Wolves and Baker finished with eight.

The Wolves are now 3-10 overall. This week they play Pontiac Northern on Tuesday and Rochester Adams on Friday.

JV sports

By Michael Romein

JV Volleyball

The JV Volleyball team had a difficult week, playing well, but more often than not, they came up on the losing end.

On January 25, the Wolves played a tough match with Rochester Adams. After losing the first match 15-2, they came back to take the second, 15-5. Then, in a hard-played third match, the Wolves came up just short, falling 16-14. Amanda Worden led the team with four digs and six kills. Tracey Harmon added five aces for Clarkston.

Then on January 27, the Wolves hosted the Clarkston Invitational. Unfortunately, they did not do quite as well as they had planned. In the first game, they lost to Royal Oak Kimball twice, 10-15 and 4-15. They split with Rochester in the second game, winning 15-13 and losing 11-15. In the third game, they lost twice to Romeo, 6-15 and 6-15. In the final game, the Wolves were defeated by Oxford, 13-15 and 7-15.

Overall in the tournament, Corinne McIntyre had five blocks, Worden had 10 kills and six digs for the Wolves, and was 78% on passing defense. Nicole Nelles was 68% on passing defense and 65% on serve receptions. Kara McCullum had six aces for the Wolves.

"We had a tough week," said head coach Melissa Hixon. "We could not get it going on serve receptions. We need a boost of confidence. We have the skill and the talent to win."

This week, they play both Rochester and West Bloomfield at home. Last time the Wolves played West Bloomfield, they lost a tough third match 15-17. Their overall record is now 6-19.

JV Basketball

The Wolves got behind early against a very tough Southfield team, and although it was close, the Wolves could not pull out a victory. The Blue Jays capitalized on Clarkston's mistakes and prevailed 55-53.

The game was tied in the third, and the Wolves entered the final quarter with only a two-point deficit. But turnovers and bad passing were obstacles the Wolves could not overcome. Kevin Mason and Jeff Loveless led Clarkston with 14 points apiece, and Brad Phalen added 13. Mark Mazur had eight rebounds, and Loveless and Joe Hillinger both had seven. However, the Wolves came up short on the offensive glass, limiting their second chance opportunities.

On January 23, the Wolves defeated the Berkeley Bears, 52-32. They played very well, allowing only nine points in the first half. The scoring was spread out, with everyone contributing. Loveless and Phalen both had 10 points, and Mazur grabbed 10 boards.

This week the Wolves play at Pontiac Northern. "That will be a very difficult game for us," said Coach Tim Kaul.

They also play at Rochester Adams on February 2.

Does someone on your team consistently hit home runs, score lots of goals or pile up lots of serving aces? We'd like to know at The Clarkston News. 625-3370

Eternal Tattoos, Inc.

Each new generation that comes along rediscovers tattooing. Often, they're not aware that they're taking part in a very old ritual. Tattooing goes beyond the 1940's pastime of separating an inebriated sailor from his pay by leaving a battle-ship on his biceps. The Maori people and other South Pacific Polynesian tribes used tattooing extensively to mark coming of age rituals, acts of bravery or status. Some tribes tattooed males exclusively, others only females. For each, it was a beautification of the body as well as a symbol.

Today, men and women are becoming the canvas for body art by professional tattoo artists. Eternal Tattoos is the local source for safe, professional and highly creative tattoos. These experts have available to them pigments that the Maoris never dreamed of. Like any artists, they have perfected their skill so that even the most intricate and unique designs can be applied. Individual tattoos are available or a panorama of inter-connected designs can be planned and executed.

Eternal Tattoos has four locations to serve you including Waterford, Roseville, Taylor and headquarters in Livonia at 27590 Plymouth Road, phone (313) 425-0428. Their services are competitively priced, and they adhere to strict sterilization control standards. Contact Eternal Tattoos to discuss your body art ideas.

Stephen Arrington

Live & In Person Presents

Journey Into Darkness

Your children will never think the same way about DRUG ABUSE again.

A Program For The ENTIRE FAMILY

"Childhood and teenage dreams are the future foundations for adult realities," says Stephen Arrington, "yet during the daily stress of growing up we often forget this important truth. My goal is to motivate young people, to focus them on the wonder of the potentially adventurous life that is each of our birthrights."

HIGH ON ADVENTURE and JOURNEY INTO DARKNESS are electrifying multi-media presentations by Stephen Arrington, co-defendant in the John DeLorean drug trial of 1982, and ex-convict diver for the Cousteau Society.

In between he found himself trapped in the drug smuggling trade, unwittingly becoming the Fall Guy in the highly publicized JOHN Z. DeLOREAN drug trial. Naval career shattered, his youthful innocence tested, he looked on one truth during his savage stay in prison and endeavors to share that critical truth now.

Book signing after the presentation.

The clock never stops

Dr. Jean Lang, principal at Sashabaw Middle School, was feeling powerful.

As she sat behind the panel that controlled the clock in the school gym, she knew the fate of her staff was in her hands.

"If I stopped the clock every time our staff would drop dead," she said. Then she laughed.

The occasion was the annual contest between the eighth-grade boys basketball team and the faculty and staff. The older guys (and gals), the ones dressed in the purple 'Animaniacs' shirts, looked serious. The younger boys looked fit and strong, if at a bit of a height disadvantage.

In announcing the rules, Lang said there would be four, 10-minute quarters and no stopping the clock. And she tried to keep to her word, but everyone kept protesting.

The students scored first. And second. When finally the staff scored, it was met with a rousing round of catcalls. But it was clear from the outset that neither side was in it just for fun. This was serious business. They wanted to win.

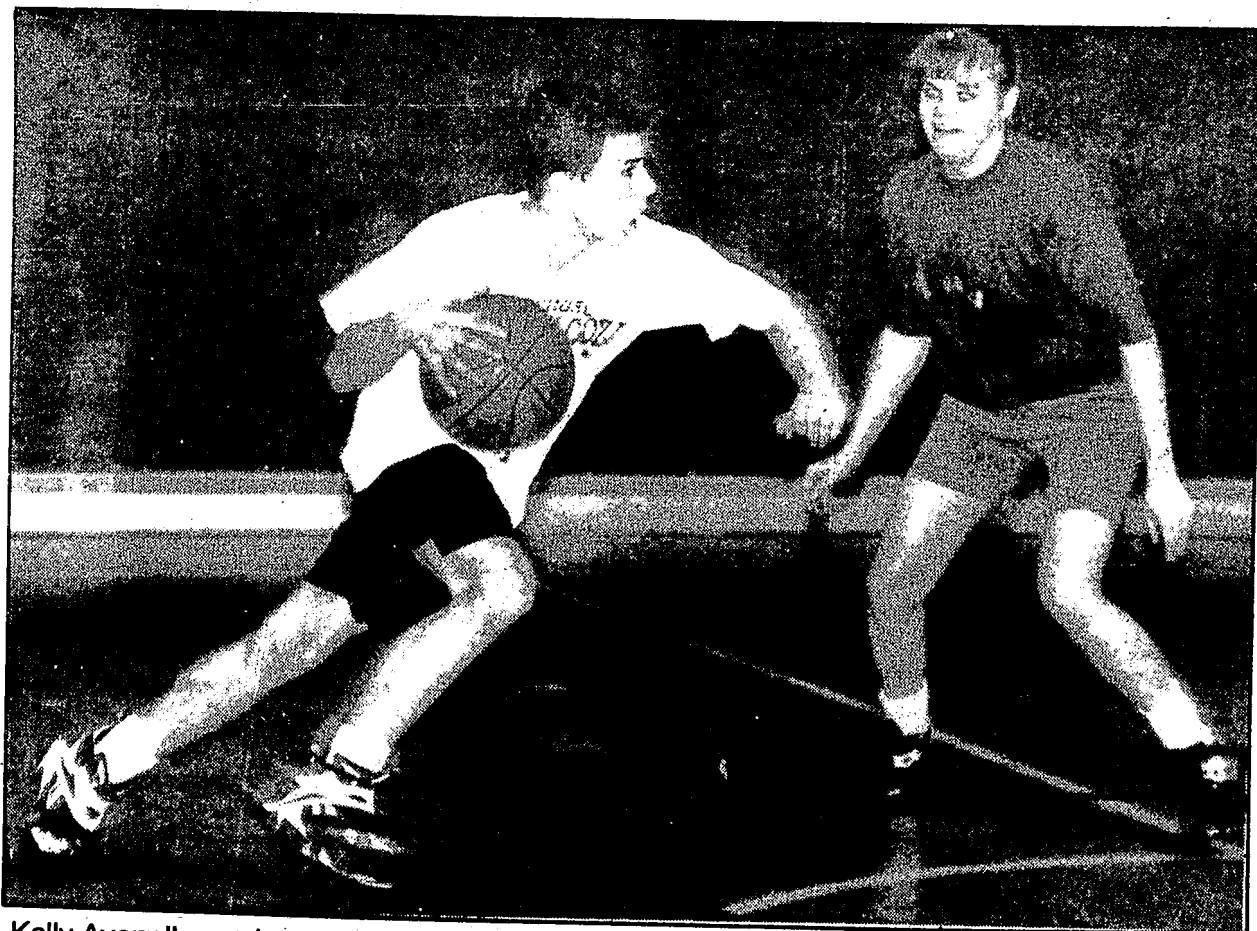

The staff did at one point crack out wigs and hats, but the silliness didn't last long.

After three quarters, teacher Jeff Peariso was heard to mutter, "Isn't this done?" Teacher Kelly Avenall's whiff was greeted with a rousing rendition of "Airball!" "Airball!" No mercy.

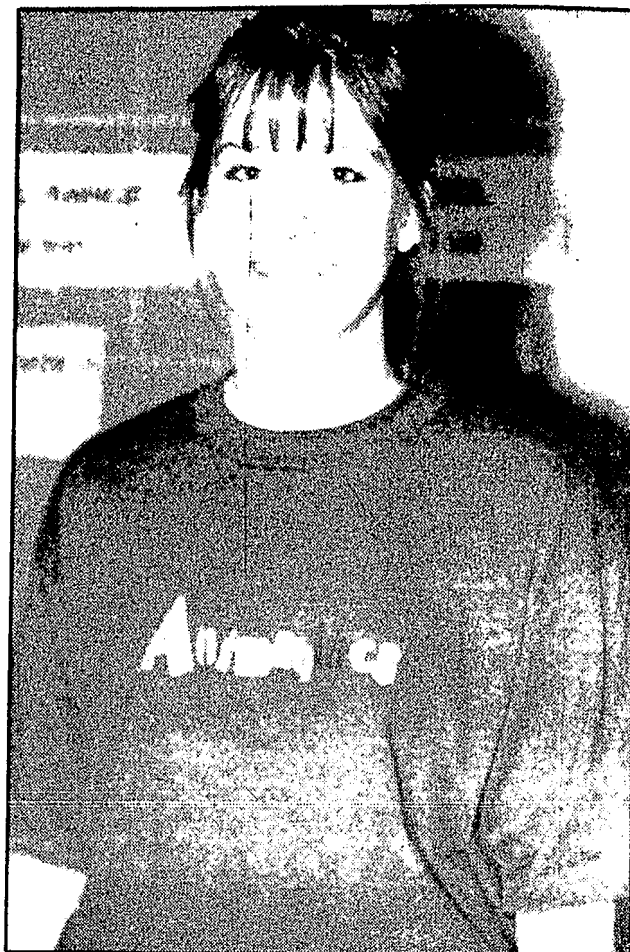

When it was all over the staff had won, but not without a few fights. The refs, seventh-grade hoopsters Ryan Kaul and Brian Endreszl, had been tough on the old-timers. And the time keeper had been, well, generous.

The staff dons wigs and hats for a little comic relief.
