First high school proficiency test results released

Are they a useful barometer or just another set of numbers with a political agenda behind them? Either way, school districts are now grappling with the fallout

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

The good news is that Clarkston High School students finished ahead of the state average, and most county averages, on the new High School Proficiency Test. The bad news is that only about half the students were considered "proficient" in math, reading and writing, and just over a third in science.

Administrators in the district, as well as the Oakland Intermediate School District, are still working out how they feel about the test results and what they'll do with them.

The HSPT was given to high-school juniors last spring for the first time and replaced the high-school MEAP tests. The resulting scores are categorized as "proficient," those considered to have mastered essential skills; "novice," those considered to have mastered basic skills; and "not yet novice," those who have not mastered even basic skills.

Anyone who receives a mark of "proficient" in one of three categories—math, science and communications arts (reading and writing)—will receive a state endorsement on his or her diploma. Students who did not qualify for the endorsement on the first try will have two chances to take the test over again before graduation.

At a press conference held at Cakland Schools Friday, administrators tried to explain the numbers of the scoring and selfs the public figure out with to do wall the information. Statewise fewer than half of students were graded as "proficient in any of the four testing areas, a figure that thous that our paper.

The proficiency test is relatively new and if we aren't careful we will fall into reactions that are false premises and be part of a disservice." said Oakland Schools Superintendent Dr. James Redmond. The news in brief

Turn in those surveys!

Recently, surveys were mailed out with residents' sewer bills, asking for input on feelings about the downtown business district. Residents were asked about what they like or don't like about the City of Clarkston.

At the last council meeting, members Dave Savage and Karen Sanderson, who have spear-headed the project, said quite a few surveys have been turned in. After skimming the surveys, Sanderson said she found many people concerned about deteriorating city sidewalks, for example. Both she and Savage stressed the importance of responding.

Surveys may be dropped off at or mailed to City Hall, 375 Depot St. in Clarkston. They should be returned by the end of the month.

Remembering POWs/MIAs

Phil Mudge, coordinating chairman for Oakland County's Vietnam Veterans chapter #133, will be passing out stickers to commemorate those war veterans who need to be remembered.

This Friday, Sept. 20, is designated for National POW-MIA (Prisoners Of War-Missing In Action) Recognition Day. Mudge says he will hand out the commemoratives in front of the Oakland County Courthouse on Telegraph from 10 a.m. until noon. Then he plans to be in downtown Clarkston in front of NBD Bank from 1 to 2 p.m.

Mudge says folks should "take some time to remember those who have not returned home." He said the number of Vietnam soldiers still missing in action has dropped considerably since last year.

Parents meeting on drugs, alcohol, violence

On Tuesday, Sept. 24 and Thursday, Sept. 26, a coalition of community groups will present a two-part seminar entitled "Take a stand against alcohol, drugs and violence."

Sue Blaszczak, founder of the Minnesota Parent Network, will be the keynote speaker and will talk about setting curfews, bullies, alcohol, teen pregnancy, gangs, suicide, MTV, Mortal Combat, discipline, TV violence, hanging out at the mall and Admission is $10 per family or $5 per adult. Child care and a light supper will be provided. It all takes place at St. Daniel's Church.

Scholarships are available. Call Becky Kelly at 625-4402. The event is being cosponsored by the Clarkston PTA District Council, Clarkston Community Schools and Parent To Parent.

Crafts and Cider Festival this weekend

The Clarkston Community Historical Society's annual Crafts and Cider Festival returns to Depot Park this weekend.

Festival hours are 10-6 Saturday-Sunday. Over 100 artists will be on hand, and visitors will also be able to purchase cider and doughnuts and home-baked goods.

The event is the major fund-raiser of the historical society.

Scoring low on new science MEAP

Fifth-graders do better on first-ever writing test

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY Clarkston News Editor

Lost amid the flurry of publicity surrounding Friday's announcement of results of the new High School Proficiency Test were the scores on new science and writing MEAP scores for fifth- and eighth-graders.

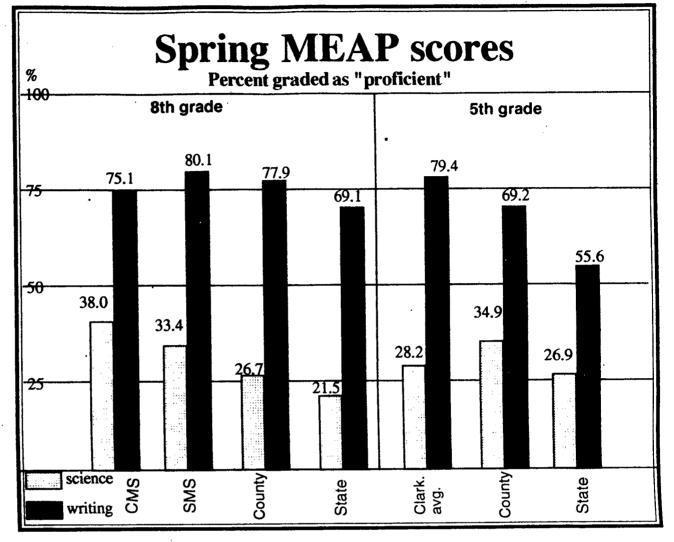

The science tests have been revamped; the writing tests are completely new. In both cases, students were ranked as either proficient, novice or not yet novice.

Clarkston students, for the most part, scored well above state averages on the tests. The exception was the fifth-grade science test at Andersonville Elementary. Andersonville students did score above the state average on the writing test. Both tests were given last spring and the students are now in sixth grade.

Andersonville principal Bill Potvin said there are no excuses—the scores just aren't good enough. He blamed adults, not kids, for the results.

"We're very unhappy with those scores," he said.

Elementary scores by school science writing school 57.4 14.5 Andersonville 89.0 Bailey Lake 33.3 89.5 30.9 Clarkston El. 78.7 N. Sashabaw 26.5 73.2 28.8 PineKnob 79.4 30.1 Spring. Pis. 79.4 Dist Avg.

"We know they're not an accurate reflection of what our kids can do."

The results are ironic, given the fact that last spring, Andersonville fourth-graders showed significant improvement in their MEAP scores for math and reading. At the time, Potvin credited his staff with creating an environment conducive to good testing.

However, the fourth-grade tests were given in the fall. These new fifth-grade tests were given in spring, when the younger version of "senioritis" has a way of breaking out among fifth-graders, Potvin said.

"Fall testing is better for us in that kids are fresher," he said. "But that's the same for everybody. So that's not a reason why our scores are lower...

"Fourteen percent proficient is totally unacceptable and I am confident that's not a true reflection of how well then can write or handle science."

According to Dave Reschke, Clarkston schools' assistant superintendent for curriculum and staff development, the district has a new science curriculum in place in the elementaries.

"We have probably the best curriculum you can buy," said Reschke, who feels Clarkston students should have done better in science.

"My concern would be that overall, our science scores should have been much higher, and they will be once we get our teacher training completed."

Reschke was happy with the reading scores. "In writing I thought our scores were high but a lot of people did well in the county, so our ranking stayed about the same in the county... The standard is that then risen up as expectations of the new tests became better understood. He suggested that to really understand the HSPT results, the public should combine the "proficient" and "novice" scores. That would show that generally speaking, about 90 percent of students have at least basic skills.

"If you add proficient and novice, that's a good number. Frankly that surprises me, and I'm glad they did that well... A fairly small number were below that novice level on all the tests."

Bauer took issue with the idea of naming the "beset" and "worst" districts based on scores, and said in reality, the students' scores were not that far apart. The big discrepancies are due largely to where the judges decided to cut off the proficiency level, known as the "cut score."

For example, on the writing test, 16 points were possible; if you scored 11.5 or better you were considered proficient. Troy students were 52.4 percent proficient, Ferndale only 29.1. However, as Bauer pointed out, the average score in Troy was 11.2; in Ferndale 10.2—only one point difference.

"There is an urge to make it as simple as possible," Bauer warned the reporters in the room. "It's not that simple."

Dave Reschke, Clarkston schools assistant superintendent for curriculum and staff development, said last fall he wouldn't panic over this first round of tests, no matter what the scores. He attended Friday's meeting and said his attitude hasn't changed.

"I think the curriculum our school board has adopted is aligned with what is necessary to do well on the test," he said. "We can bring a lot of kids from novice to proficient in a fairly short period of time... We've put in a lot of new curriculum in the last 24 months. We know that's aligned. But we haven't finished the materials, we haven't finished the training."

Reschke, Bauer and others who attended the meeting expressed frustration that the state will not make available an analysis, item by item, of what students did wrong. They will also not be returning students' writing samples. This is unlike the MEAP tests, where detailed item analysis is available on all but the writing test.

"There are a lot of us who would like to get more feedback," Bauer said, adding the districts would get "nothing helpful" back from the state, which is pleading poverty.

"We're being told all we can do is look at the objectives to which the tests were written, and in many cases they are so broad," Bauer said. "These tests were constructed in such a way as to make them virtually useless, particularly if you're going to compare different groups of kids."

Despite the shortcomings, Reschke said he knows what the district must do. The biggest is completing the work already begun on implementing new curriculum and teaching practices "that enable kids to learn the things they need to learn" as well as "the ability to perform what we think they know"...

"I think 24 months from now our scores will be stronger on the proficiency level. I'm not sure we'll make any moves on novice."

Reschke is also concerned a Jut the number of students moving into the district from other schools. "I think that's significant when you're giving an 11th-grade test," he said. "to me it says we need to have intervention points consistently so we can integrate them academically."

City puts new parking ordinance in drive

BY EILEEN McCARVILLE Clarkston News Staff Writer

It's final. It's official. And Clarkston will have about a month to prepare for parking enforcement.

After months of debate and without attorney Tom Ryan present, Clarkston's City Council swiftly voted 5-2 to adopt a traffic violation bureau ordinance at the beginning of Sept. 10's council meeting. Councilmen Doug Roeser and Dave Savage voted no.

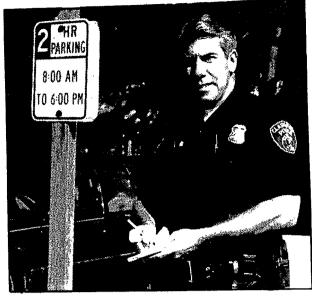

Roeser could not be reached for comment. Savage said he voted against the ordinance because Ryan was not present to reiterate the most recent changes he had made in the prohibited parking section. He also had a problem with the restrictions.

"I feel the enforcement of the parking ordinance is going to become an issue with the people who live in the village ... I just think it's too encompassing. This is a little tiny town."

After the last August meeting, Ryan had reworked a portion of the ordinance that deals with prohibited parking on city streets during winter months. Clarkston residents will need to obtain hardship permits from the city's police department if they can't move their cars off the street between the hours of 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. from Dec. 1 through April 1. The intention is to clear the roads for snowplowing.

Clarkston Police Chief Paul Ormiston, who proposed the ordinance, said the idea is not collection, but compliance. For example, the idea behind prohibited parking is "to attach the vehicle to the resident so we can contact that person if there is a problem with that vehicle."

The ordinance will allow the city clerk to collect fines for city use. Previously, parking violation fees were collected by the local district court, with only a portion returned to the city.

Police Chief Paul Ormiston stands in the Main-Washington city parking lot that currently carries a two-hour limit.

"The main reason to get this ordinance in place is so we can collect parking fines directly," said councilman Bill Basinger. "Also there have been concerns about snow removal ... This is one of the things we wanted to address."

The ordinance will take effect 20 days after it is published. Ormiston said a council vote is needed to set the fee schedule which he expects to be $10 each for the first few parking violations within a year. After that, the fee will go up to $100 per violation during that year.

Ormiston said he hopes to address the fee schedule and the issue of loading zones at the next council meeting Sept. 23. "If there's any interest people have about loading zones, they should be at that meeting," he said.

Meanwhile, people should familiarlize themselves with the parking limits around town. Most city streets, including the municipal lot at Main and Washington, carry two-hour limits. That means your car can't be moved to another spot in that lot if you need to exceed the limit.

The only 30-minute limit is between Rudy's and NBD Bank on Mill St., which Ormiston says he may change to a 15-minute limit to allow for more rapid turnover. All-day parking is allowed in the city lots on Depot.

He added that there are two things to keep in mind about parking: "One, courtesy to your fellow drivers and other people who are parking." Ormiston used parking in a handicapped zone as one illustration. He hopes to add more handicapped spots soon.

His second concern is safety. "For example, parking in a fire lane ... People will park in a fire lane because it's easy, but it's a hazard to anybody who might need the fire department — medicals even more than a fire."

However, Ormiston added that no parking ordinance is carved in stone.

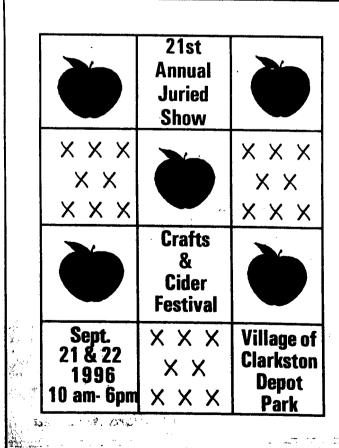

"Parking in general is going to be an ongoing concern. The needs of the community will change as the businesses change," Currently, he said, there are a lot of non-retail businesses, but if more retail moves into town, other needs could arise.

The new ordinance will allow flexibility by providing for those changes.

"It's not going to be like once this is done, that's the end of the story. It will continue as long as there's a community," he said.

Commission eyes plans for young and old

BY EILEEN McCARVILLE Clarkston News Staff Writer

The Independence Township Planning Commission reviewed two proposals that are needed due to escalating growth in the area. They ironically affect "the opposite ends of the age spectrum," noted planner Dick Carlisle wryly at a public hearing held Sept. 12 in the township annex.

Just Like Home assisted living facility

Lake Orion resident Sandy Mabery has bought into the Bradenton, FL franchise, Just Like Home, which operates nine assisted living facilities in Florida. He wants to build a home for the elderly on 4.6 acres to the rear of Mr. B's restaurant on Parview.

The two, unattached ranch-style buildings would feature a total of 36 bedrooms, each with a private bath. Although there would be some semi-private accommodations available, the majority of those residents would most likely prefer private rooms even though they cost a little more, he said.

The facility would be non-medical and staff three aides during every shift except midnights, where there would be one aide available. Just Like Home is designed to help elderly, frail residents, who are otherwise mobile and mentally competent, with daily activities like housekeeping, cooking, dressing and remembering to take their medication.

"Our typical resident is a frail 85-year-old woman who doesn't require the regular care of a nursing home." Mabery said. He told commissioners he decided to locate in the Clarkston area because "in the last few months we have received a number of inquiries from families moving here who want to have this."

The land is zoned multiple family residential and features woodlands and a pond which Mabery said would be kept in tact.

Several neighboring residents in the audience expressed concern over increased traffic jams because there is a group home on Parview that gets many visitors. But commissioner Joe Figa said he felt the new facility was a "less intense use" than either the group home or Greens Lakes Apartments, other multiple uses that generate more traffic. He also pointed out the convenient proximity to the new medical center on Commissioners generally had problems with the parking lot and building layout, which Steve Board said looked more engineered than architecturally pleasing. He felt it should be built east to west rather than north to south along Parview.

A question was also raised about the proportional density of the number of units on the site, in regard to the size of the site. Carlisle said he would turn that matter over to township attorney Gerald Fisher.

Dan Travis said he feels the proposal is "a good special land use."

"I think it's long overdue for our community," agreed Jill Palulian.

The commission voted 5-0 (David Lohmeier and Carolyn Place were absent) to grant both special land use and conceptual site plan approval, contingent on Fisher's review about density. Carlisle also said plans would be updated to make the building look "a little more residential."

Both Mabery and his sister Crystal Carrier, a licensed practical murse who specializes in gerontology, said they plan to make the small-scale buildings look inviting.

"The last thing we want people to do is drive by and say that looks like an old folks' home,' Mabery

Rainbow Rascals Learning Center

Doug Budden of Lathrup Village-based Rainbow Rascals Learning Center Inc. approached commissioners with a plan to build a 6,000-square-foot child day care center on just under an acre of land across from the new township fire station on Citation Drive. The property is currently zoned for office use.

Though members of the commission voted 4-1 to grant special land use (Todd Moss voted no), they feel the plans need to be reworked before they can grant conceptual site plan approval.

Budden's current plans call for an outdoor play area in the front because there are high-tension utility lines out back.

However, commissioners had problems with the total amount of outdoor play area which Budden has designated at 4,000 feet. The township's ordinance requires 5,000 feet, but by reconfigurating the layout, Budden figured he could come up with 5,700 feet. Board suggested that by rotating the building around 90 degrees, more play space could be created.

Commissioners also worried about parking because the center will accommodate up to 70 children. Some members said they thought the 24 parking spots wouldn't be sufficient because cars must be parked and children taken into the building.

With "70 pickups," Travis said he could see "chaos in the a.m. and p.m. It's going to be a management headache. We see it right now and you can anticipate it."

However, Budden said everyone wouldn't be there at the same time because people's work schedules vary and some kids would participate in only morning or afternoon sessions. He said he has no parking problems at any of the other 17 facilities he operates in

The commission agreed to form a subcommittee to meet with Budden, Carlisle and township engineer Jim Scharl. Palulian, Figa and Travis volunteered.

LeRoy Mabery, assistant superintendent of Lake Orion Schools for curriculum, had a problem.

In Friday morning's Free Press, there ran a lengthy article about the new state High School Proficiency Test, and in a small box listing the top 10 and bottom 10 among scorers, there was Lake Orion—in the bottom 10.

Now, a quick glance at the numbers shown elsewhere in the article would have shown a thoughtful reader that the ranking was wrong, but the damage was done. As Mabery said at a meeting at Oakland Schools that afternoon, "This is a major mistake and incorrect information. We've already talked to the Free Press and they've said yes, it's incorrect... Just to make a point, Lake Orion is in the upper half in Oakland County, and in all of southeastern Michigan in the upper third. The whole district now is spending all of today, and most of the weekend too, I'm sure, to get the correct information out because we know that first impressions are what will stick."

The point, I guess, is not to leap to conclusions when presented with new information we don't yet fully understand. Rather than pointing out that over half the students failed state proficiency tests, perhaps it's instructive to think about how the tests were graded. Who decided and how did they decide what was considered the necessary level of proficiency in math, reading, science and writing for a student to graduate from high school?

Underlying all of this, of course, is another level of discourse that many school administrators don't feel it's their province to discuss. But Ernie Bauer, Oakland Schools director for research, evaluation and testing, wasn't shy. At Friday's meeting he went so far as to call the tests "useless."

Why? Because the state reneged on a promise to provide detailed analysis of where students did poorly. Because the difference between districts with high levels of proficiency and low levels of proficiency may average as little as one point on a score. Because the tests were rushed into place based on a mandate from Lansing without giving districts enough time to prepare for them.

Clarkston's assistant superintendent for curriculum and staff development, Dave Reschke, was less upset about the test and didn't want to place any blame for the way the results are being construed.

"I'm not overly dismayed; I'm kind of frustrated with the State of Michigan," Reschke said after the meeting. "I don't think it's my job to make political statements. I have feelings but they'd just get in the way."

Reschke pointed out that the state has been easing toward a core curriculum for the last few years, and even though no such curriculum is mandated, this test is one way of accomplishing the same thing.

"That is what this test is about. It's a new test but it's not a new curriculum." Reschke is justifiably proud that Clarkston has stayed ahead of the game in the last few years in implementing new curriculum, a costly process but one that pays off in the long run. But it does take time.

Union responds to recess controversy

To the author of the "name withheld" letter, Clarkston News, Sept. 11, 1996:

The Clarkston Education Association and the Clarkston Board of Education are engaged in a collaborative bargaining process called ACCORD. This arrangement provides a method of solving problem issues rather than creating confrontations. Neither group of representatives in this team operates in a vacuum. The board team represents the interest of the board of education. The association represents teachers' interest. Since their ultimate constituents are children, the interests of Clarkston's children are paramount to both. Problems are brought to the table and the function of bargaining is not to create a confrontation, but to solve problems through discussion.

The case of the elementary recess issue was brought to the ACCORD negotiating team. Our legislature, those who represent us, and the governor passed and signed into law a measure increasing the amount of "instructional time" with students. This created a problem which was studied and discussed at length by the ACCORD team. During the discussions, the state vacillated several times on its definition of what could be called "instructional time." Included in this, and still not resolved, is the ability to count AM or PM recess as "instructional time." Because of this instability, the very important teacher preparation time, which had been based upon the recess schedule, was threatened.

The Clarkston Education Association and the board of education responded to this problem through the collaborative bargaining process. Considerable creativity was generated to build enhanced instructional time into the day, as well as increasing exposure of students to seriously needed health, physical education and fine arts programming while balancing the evergrowing academic requirements.

I hope you and the public understand that neither the board or the teachers are thrilled by the requirements directed and interpreted by a bureaucracy which has no contact with your children. Nonetheless, we resolved the problem in the best interests of the students, complying with the law while being proactive to meet an ever-changing educational scene.

If you truly take the time to think through this issue, you would realize the removal of recess from the daily schedule benefits your student, not the teacher or teachers' union. The members of the ACCORD team are monitoring the process to determine its effects on students and teachers alike.

The collaborative negotiations teams from the board and CEA were presented a problem from the legislature. I am sure the negotiators from the board made the board members clearly aware of what was happening, and thus, there was no ignorance of the situation. Likewise, our teachers were made aware of the issues. The solution that emerged benefits students, not teaching staff.

When agreement is reached in bargaining, it means there is mutual acceptance of the solutions. Both sides accepted this agreement and no one was ignorant of the terms of the solution. If it is your desire to place "blame" anywhere, look to Lansing, not to the educators, teachers, administrators or board of education who are working to provide maximum instructional time for your child within the limits of reason.

Jim's Jottings

By Jim Sherman

Ripped off while watching grandkids

Jim Fitzgerald, retired back-page columnist at the Freep, gave me his secret for sitting his grandkids: "Just give them anything they want."

That's what I was doing while taking them through the Woods & Waters outdoor show at Imlay City recently. Karen, 8, wanted a caramel apple, Danny, 11, wanted cotton candy.

"That'll be six-twenty-five," said the bearded (all the men at outdoor shows are bearded) man. "WHAT!"

"Yeah," said the beard. "Cotton candy is four-fifty."

I've been scammed for a few hundred dollars more than a couple times in my life, but none made me as mad as I was at that rip-off. Danny, seeing my anger, offered to give back the treasure, but, after all, our grandson had wanted it in the first place.

We went on to Karen's favorite part of the show, the puppy house, but when it came time for lunch I took them to Burger King.

The last time we cared for these two grandkids while their parents played (this time they went to Nebraska to watch their Green and White from East Lansing get clobbered) I made a Jottings column from their remarks.

Remembering that, Danny asked me about four times a day, "Have you had a Jottings moment yet?"

The one I made note of was when Danny said to his sister, "Act your age, not your shoe size!"

That wasn't one of our generation's sayings, so I questioned its origin. He said, "Sometimes our teach-

I questioned its origin. He said, "Sometimes our teachers say that when we do things,"

Another thing that is not from our generation, and we wonder if it should be in any generation, is sex education.

Danny got exposed (the right word) to it last Friday. He said, "Grandpa, they showed us a video, and I saw a whole lot more than I ever wanted to see."

His 4-page handout told what he would be learning in sex ed. Every mid-body part of the male and female were named, and Danny was told or shown what each could (would) be used for.

After hearing him read off the words I wondered if it was a coed class. No. Was your teacher male or female? Male. Well, thank goodness for that, at least.

What else, Danny? I learned I'm going through puberty, I'm going to get zits and grow body hair.

I'm glad the do-gooder generation wasn't here in my time. I'll bet we had a lot more fun learning on our own what they get from a video.

Downtown Clarkston may soon have a pinball arcade. Robert Warrington of Waterford Township has a proposal on the table to set up shop in the lower level of the Max Broock Inc. real estate building on Main St. Clarkston's Village Council makes no decision at the Sept. 14 meeting, saying they will wait for the proper permits and inspections from various departments before proceeding.

Independence Supervisor James B. Smith is involved in discussions with neighboring townships on the possibility of establishing a regional police force, thereby ending the practice of contracting with the Oakland County Sheriff's Department. According to Oxford Township clerk Clara Sanderson, representatives of Oxford, Addison and Independence townships have met recently at the Oxford Township Hall.

The Clarkston Board of Education ratifies a twoyear, non-economic contract with the teachers of the school district at their regular meeting Aug. 13. The contract will be presented to the general membership of the Clarkston Teachers Association for their approval at a meeting set for later in the week. Negotiators for both agencies will reconvene when the State Financial Aid bill is handed down from Lansing.

Church of the Nazarene plans to hold special grand opening services in its new building on Clintonville Rd. Included will be a Sept. 18 program featuring two singing groups and special music and a Sunday School contest at the Sept. 19 morning service with a potluck lunch and evening service following. The church has been built mainly from volunteer labor. Many teens from the area have donated their efforts in painting, roofing and other helps.

The Clarkston Wolves varsity football team will kick off into the 1971-72 season with an opener against the Oxford Wildcats Friday. Rick Butler will start at center. Other linemen include guards Brad Funk and Mel Johnson, tackles David Foster and Bob Trim and ends Mike Pryomski and Bill Svetkoff.

The Clarkston Boy Scouts must find a scoutmaster or they will lose their charter. After establishing itself as the second best Scout troop in Oakland County. the organization has now deteriorated to a point of near oblivion - all because these boys cannot find a scoutmaster to lead them, although they have many sponsors. A meeting will be held at the township hall Monday night and the boys of Scout Troop 49 invite all the dads in Clarkston to attend and lend a hand in the search.

Playing at the Drayton Theatre are Joan Leslie and Robert Alda in "Cinderella Jones," Robert Cummings and Barbara Stanwyck in "The Bride Wore boots" and Bing Crosby and Bob Hope in "Road to Utopia." Featured at the Holly Theatre are Edmund Lowe and Brenda Joyce in "The Enchanted Forest" and Laurence Olivier and Joan Fontaine in "Rebecca."

The program for fall and winter presents eight talented speakers of national and international fame. The lectures will be held at the Pontiac High School auditorium; tickets are $2.50 apiece, reserved seats, $3.50 apiece.

Truth vs. opinion

It's probably time for a little Newspapering 101

To set the record, our paper is full of relevant local news articles, opinions and human interest stories (not to mention a bunch of timely, cost saving ads).

What every newspaper should have, we try to accomplish. Sometimes we don't, but quite often we

I recently talked to a former government official. The discussion centered around whether or not most readers distinguish what is news and what is an opinion piece, be it an editorial, letter to the editor or

I thought for a second and probably didn't give too good a response. Sure -- most do know the difference between a news article and say, one of my columns.

Isn't it hard to come up an opinion 52-weeks a year? Doesn't forcing yourself to have an opinion, one way or another, force you to compromise yourself as a reporter?

I said no, and didn't elaborate. I have never been one of the lucky folks, blessed with the ability to come back with something smart to say, quick. Growing up somebody would yell, "Hey, Rushy, mushy, flushy . . ." To which I always retorted, "Oh yeah . . ."

Oh yeah -- that was all I could muster. Ten hours later I always had the pefect comeback. Ten hours late, humiliated again.

Things haven't changed much since then. Words don't fall off my tounge easily. I have to kick 'em out. But, back to the conversation. Do I compromise reporter-self when I write a column?

When I report, I report. I write what was said, what has taken place, black and the biz, "no editiorializing."

When it comes to the hallowed halls of Don't Rushmedom, I report a little, but mostly let fly what I feel like saying. Usually, based on some sort of logic.

My column is the truth as I see it when I write it. Over the course of time, in the light of new understanding, circumstance or whatever on any given subject, that opinion may change.

And, it has. It must. The people who cannot admit they may have been wrong are the people that take themselves too seriously. Which is something I don't try to do. So, lighten up and chill out, life is too darned short.

When I -- or anybody else -- offers you an opinion piece, it is supposed to challenge you. It is supposed to make you think, get you involved. It is supposed to get your goat, get you off your duff and into action.

Now that you all know the difference between news and opinion, give yourself a pat on the back. You passed today's Newspapering 101 exam.

Drivers ed

Tires squeal and a patch of rubber is left behind as the Oldsmobile does 90 leaving the parking lot. Two people in the back of the car duck, clutching the seat for dear life. The man riding shotgun fastens his seatbelt and then calmly says "You accelerated a little fast back there and technically we're going over the speed limit. Try letting up on the gas."

If you have your license you probably know all about avoiding cars with the proverbial "student driver" sign fastened securely on top. I'm just now getting my permit and I already know that rule. Most driver's ed students become aware of it when driving down Dixie Highway for the first time. You know you are going the speed limit and yet everyone is passing you. Generally, this causes some alarm. You start to wonder if perhaps the speedometer is broken or maybe the tail end of your vehicle has burst into flames. When your passengers assure you there's no scent of burning metal and the instructor tells you not to keep on speeding up, you will probably come to the conclusion that people don't want to drive behind you. Having driven with many teenagers, in hope of a permit, I can see why.

Though you may think it's tough luck when you get stuck behind a "student driving" car it's worse luck when you're stuck in it. On one of my recent excursions the girl who was driving got in an argument with the instructor over the directions to our destination. While they yelled and screamed, the other guy in the car and I watched in horror as we swerved into the oncoming lane and then off onto the shoulder, directly into a huge pothole.

Not to say that I'm the best driver in the world either, in fact I know quite a few people who would beg to differ. The first time I got in the car was in a parking lot on Dixie. I was a bit concerned because unless we were going to drive in circles around the parking lot, I was going to have to drive on Dixie.

The look on my face must have told all. I heard the click of seatbelts being double checked and the pressure of someone clinging to the back of my seat. All in all, I didn't do too badly though. There were no casualties, which is all that counts, right?

Most people think driver's ed. is all fun and games, which is definitely not true. Especially when the person behind the wheel has been in the class 10 times and looks like he could hardly handle riding a bicycle, let alone driving a car. This is not an afterschool activity for the weak of heart.

Imagine driving with the guy who thinks it's his duty to be the next Mario Andretti. Even better is when the girl behind the wheel sees it as "my way, right away" rather than "yield to the right of way."

Driver's Education certainly gives you quite a thrill. After being in the car with some of the future drivers of Michigan, I think I'd rather go skydiving without the parachute.

Onward and upward

Remember the baby food jar filled with mud that was an opening salvo in Pat Nowak's campaign for Congress? Though the stunt didn't go over very well with the folks at Gerber, it apparently didn't hurt Nowak's press guy, Jason Booms, much. A current Nowak staffer told The Clarkston News last week that Booms has moved to Washington, D. C. to take a job with a polling firm. "He was real excited," the staffer said. "We hated to see him go." The mud was Booms' idea and was used to dramatize the issue of environmental clean up.

Thanks anyway

During a recent Clarkston City Council meeting, Clarkston Union owner Curt Catallo asked about his plans to hold a one-day Octoberfest behind his restaurant. It would, he said, feature the usual German fare—beer, bratwurst, a little "oom-pah-pah" band and some dancing. After he was told his matter would probably need to go before the ZBA, Catallo was frustrated, but nevertheless gracious. "Danke shoen," he quipped, dryly.

Corrections

● In a story which ran in last week's paper about a new Italian restaurant, it was incorrectly reported that the Independence Township Board of Appeals transferred a state liquor license. The Independence Township Board of Trustees transferred the license.

Youth Assistance gives annual accounting

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY Clarkston News Editor

Former Tigers star Kirk Gibson was in town over the weekend to speak to the youth of Clarkston United Methodist Church. According to Pastor Douglas Trebilcock, he told them not to "mess up."

Trebilcock told that story at the annual meeting of Clarkston Area Youth Assistance Monday, then added, "What you do is help kids who have messed up. You give them a second chance."

And that is a large part of the work of Youth Assistance, a 42-year-old arm of Oakland County Probate Court that is unique in Michigan. With a social

In the past year, within the Clarkston school district's boundaries, a total of 92 children were referred to Youth Assistance for help (up from 88 the previous year). Of those, 47 were referred by law enforcement agencies, 25 by schools, 17 by parents and three by others.

Children who are referred to social worker Fred Merden, and their parents, can expect to get help designed to help strengthen their families and prevent juvenile delinquency. In addition to counseling, Youth Assistance offers parenting classes, summer camping opportunity, recognition of outstanding youth in the community and a program called PLUS, similar to Big Brother, Big Sister.

Also at ding the meeting were probate judges Joan Young and Eugene Moore and probate court administrator Robert Bingham.

"This is a great organization because we have the volunteers who give of their time and experience and really give back to the community," said Stan Garwood, a psychologist and outgoing CAYA vice president. "I don't think I have to sell people on the merits of this program and keeping kids out of court . . .

First major fall allergy outbreak due to strike

According to Schering/Key's Allergy Outbreak Alert, thousands living in the Detroit area will be suffering under the grip of the first major outbreak of the 1996 fall ragweed allergy season within two weeks.

Information was obtained from Surveillance Data Inc.'s Allergy Activity Notification (AAN) Program, America's leading seasonal allergy monitoring service.

260,000 of the 992,000 potential seasonal allergy sufferers in the area are experiencing allergy symptoms.

• During the peak of this outbreak, the number of afflicted people could reach as high as 357,000 potential sufferers in the Detroit area.

The most common seasonal allergy symptoms include a runny nose, frequent sneezing, itchy eyes and nasal congestion. While many Michigan residents may dismiss these symptoms as pesky annoyances, recent national studies indicate that seasonal allergies actually take a more significant toll on sufferers and could lead to serious respiratory problems, such as asthma, sinus infections, nasal polyps, and ear infections.

To reduce the impact of allergies, patients can prepare for the impending outbreak now by speaking with their physician about allergy management and avoidance options and by calling the following toll-free hotline to receive free treatment information about seasonal allergies: 1-800-252-7484.

City council briefs

In other action at last week's meeting of the Clarkston City Council, the following took place:

New master plan under consideration

City manager Art Pappas said city planner McKenna & Associates has provided an estimate of $33,000 for composing a master plan and updating the city's zoning ordinance. Both Phil McKenna and city engineer Gary Tressel from Hubbell, Roth & Clark will be asked to attend the Oct. 14 council meeting. By that time, results of a recent survey that asked residents to assess their likes and dislikes of the downtown are will be compiled. Some council members feel those results need to be considered in structuring the ordinance and master plan.

Union asks for outdoor festival OK

Clarkston Union owner Curt Catallo addressed council about holding a one-day Octoberfest in back of his restaurant Oct. 5. He plans to serve alcohol and shuttle guests' cars down to the city parking lot on Depot to provide the space out back.

Although Ormiston signed for state liquor license approval, Catallo was later notified that he will need to appear before the city's Zoning Board of Appeals for a one-day permit to conduct his gathering. His ZBA hearing is set for Oct. 3 at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall, 375 Depot in Clarkston. Ormiston's OK is contingent on that approval.

For 100 years, the National PTA has promoted the education, health and safety of children and families, therefore, it is only fitting that the Clarkston PTA Council in a joint effort between Parent-to-Parent, Clarkston Community Schools' Safe and Drug-Free Schools Grant, and Clarkston Community Education present to you, it's community, Parents for Prevention.

This 2-part workshop for parents and families will be held at St. Daniel's Church on Tuesday and Thursday, September 24th and 26th from 6 to 9 p.m. featuring, nationally recognized speaker Sue Blaszczak, former coordinator of the Minnesota Parent Network and author of Parental Empowerment Workshop.

Have you ever heard "But all my friends get to..." or "You're the only parents who..." You're not alone! During this two-part workshop you will talk about and learn effective methods to deal with such topics as: setting curfews, bullies, alcohol, teen pregnancy, gangs, suicide, discipline, hanging out at the mall...and more.

Clarkston High School's America's Pride students will provide age-appropriate skits and dialogue for middle-school students in attendance. Clarkston Community Education will provide workshops for elementary students and high school honor students will assist parent volunteers with preschool child care. Prior to the workshops and during breaks, area professionals will be available in the Expo Center, to provide individual and family assistance: MADD, Triad Associates, Clarkston Area Youth Assistance, and Deputy Dave Hernandez, community liason are only a sample of these professionals. Also on Thursday, September 26 at 1:30 p.m., by special invitation, there will be a community key leaders workshop given by Sue on what the community's role in prevention is. There is truly something for everyone.

This year, during National PTA's 100th anniversary, it is time to renew our committment towards the development of our children. There is no greater love than that between a parent and child, therefore, one must recognize that the responsibility for eliminating the threats that endanger them must start with us.

Many people believe that being responsible for a child is the most important job you will ever have. You are helping children and young people become adults who will, in turn, be parents, caregivers, employees, friends, aunts and uncles, neighbors, flowers and leaders. It is your support and influence that will determine the adult that your child turns out to be. You can help your child make good decisions, and we believe this workshop will give you that support.

Once again, this coalition of community organizations extends to each community member this opportunity to Take a Satnd Against Alcohol, Drugs and Violence. Registration is limited to the first 200 parents, so please don't delay. Registration forms are available at both Clarkston Community Education and the Board Office.

The Passing of the Eagle

On September 9, 1996 I attended a memorial service for J. Brooke Bennett, age 64, a longtime resident of Clarkston. Brooke was described as a river overflowing, a man who did everything with grand enthusiasm.

Several years ago our family was visiting at Brooke's son Eric Bennett's home. At the time my youngest son, Peter Bertling, was questioning whether or not he should remain a Boy Scout. Some of his high school classmates had poked fun at him saying "Scouting just isn't cool." Peter had refused to be seen in public with his uniform on.

Brooke arrived unexpectedly and immediately began expressing his happiness at hearing of Peter's scouting achievements. He then gave Peter a five-minute motivational speech on the merits of scouting. "Go for the Eagle!" he said.

From that day on Peter had a new attitude. He began accumulating badges, wore his uniform in public and added his scouting status to his campaigns for senior class president and for school board. He was proud to be a Boy Scout.

I didn't know that Brooke was an Eagle Scout until after he died. Peter was awarded his Eagle Scout medal the week that Brooke entered into eternal life.

I cannot deny that small miracles happen to each of us in everyday life and will always remember Brooke Bennett not only as a river overflowing but as an Eagle in Flight. At the memorial service: Eprayed. "Thank you Lord for thy servant, Brooke Bennett, for he touched my son."

For some reason I did not notify the Clarkston News when Peter received his Eagle status, and I feel that this is the most appropriate way to announce it.

Recess disappearing as kids hit the books

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY

Clarkston News Editor

The Clarkston Elementary School playground was a hubbub of activity Thursday at lunch time.

Let out for their first real free period of the day, students took advantage of the great weather in a variety of ways. In one corner, a pretty-well-organized soccer game was going on. In another area, students swung from the various pieces of playground equipment. Off to one side, students in ones and twos sat quietly, soaking up what was also their last recess of the day in a quieter manner.

In Clarkston's six elementary schools, lunch time is now the only time students are sent out to recess. Despite the improvements made to the playgrounds in the last two years in safety features and new equipment, the playground has fallen prey to the shifting sands of educational theory and political trend.

The Michigan legislature has mandated that the number of hours kids spend in school—in instructional time-will increase every year for the next 10 years. Last, year, districts were allowed to count recess time as instructional time, as long as a certified teacher was on the playground. This year, even that has gone by the wayside based on direction from Lansing.

Left to fend for themselves are school boards and their teachers unions, which negotiate such things as the school calendar and how much free time teachers have each day for planning, in their contracts. In each of the last two years, the Clarkston Education Association and the school board have modified contract language to accommodate changing state expectations when it comes to recess.

"A year ago the Department of Education told us they would count (recess) when they audited us as long as there was a certified teacher on the playground," said Duane Lewis, Clarkston's assistant superintendent for personnel services, the district's chief labor negotiator.

But that changed this spring. Legislation was proposed that would eliminate recess from consideration as instructional time, at the same time as instruction time requirements were increasing. To make matters even tougher, the district had already negotiated 60 minutes a day for teacher preparation time.

"We couldn't find 60 minutes a day without recess because recess was where all of the time came from, frankly," Lewis said. So the two sides returned to their collaborative bargaining process, called ACCORD, to try to find a solution.

Though the legislature did not end up passing the aforementioned bill, the Department of Education informed the district it still would not accept recess as instructional time—at least not more than 10 minutes per recess. Not seeing that as a workable number, the union and the district agreed to eliminate recess, except at lunch, and spread their planning time around (in a much more complex manner) throughout the week.

The move has apparently not settled well with some teachers. In addition, some parents are upset about their children's lack of time to "blow off steam," (30 minutes per day in two, 15-minute recesses) even though physical education time has been extended.

But not everyone was upset.

"There was general consensus we were breaking up instructional time too much anyway," Lewis said.

"That 15 minute recess was turning into 25 minutes, especially in winter with boots, (etc.)."

Lewis said he surveyed other districts to see what they were doing. Those who've made the same change told him that though dropping recess feels like a big change at first and usually meets with some resistance, everyone gets used to the new schedule eventually.

To try to head off any problems that might occur based on a lack of understanding of the situation, Clarkston school superintendent Dr. Albert Roberts met with the members of the PTA District Council last week. Then, on Sept. 11, he sent out a letter to parents explaining the reasons the changes were made.

Cheryl McGinnis, president of the District Council, said it was nice to be consulted, even though she hadn't heard any complaints about the new schedule.

"Most of us weer extremely happy with it," McGinnis said. "Yeah, there were some that said 'We're concerned they're sitting all day.' But most of us were happy at this opportunity to spend more time with the curriculum."

McGinnis doesn't feel any irony-or regret-at the fact that recess has disappeared just as the playgrounds were made safer than ever, thanks to the District Council's advocacy on the issue.

"Kids work better when they're not disturbed. Everybody works better when they're not disturbed," she said.

Thanks to the changes, the district has already met the requirement for the 1997-98 school year for the number of hours of instructional time it must provide, so the contract will not have to be revisited next year. That sounds good to McGinnis.

"I very much appreciate the position our district has had to adhere to," she said. "The law is for the best of the kids. Personally, as a parent, I like it . . .

"Since I graduated from school 20 years ago there's that much more knowledge that has to be taught to our kids . . . What do you stop teaching?"

The value of recess, as a time for blowing off steam, socializing and other kinds of learning is not seriously debated by researchers. Designated playgrounds have been around since the 1880s, and early researchers thought they resulted in a decrease in juvenile delinquency, fewer accidents related to playing in the streets (for lack of anywhere else) and improved relations between races and nationalities, as well as quickened mental powers.

Nowadays, researchers differ more on the effects of the types of play children engage in: how strenuous, how long and at what age. Gender differences have also been noted. But the value of recess as part of the learning process is generally accepted.

McGinnis, the mother of three elementary-age children, acknowledges those differences among chil-

Marching band festival returns to CHS

your throat every time a marching a n d passes by, you'll be positively speechless Saturday when 16 marching bands compete at the annual Clarkston. Invitational.

The event kicks off at 5:30 p.m. at the Clarkston High School stadium (right after the Crafts and Cider festival ends for the day) and will go late into the evening. The event is sponsored by the Clarkston Band Boosters and is a major fund-raiser for the Clarkston schools band program.

"These are the large competing bands," said booster Marla McKee. The bands are judged on a number of criteria, including winds, color guard, marching and maneuvering and percussion. There is also an overall award in each of the two flights that will be competing.

The CHS band is scheduled to go on at 9:15

Returning for his 15th year as announcer is don Borngesser, owner of Carol's Village Grill.

The invitational is a colorful glimpse at the state of high-school marching bands today. No longer

I f content just to parade in military-style straight rows, most bands devise all kinds of interesting visual flourishes to go along with their playing. Costumes, too, have moved away from the traditional and more towards the theatrical.

> Part of the challenge in such a large competition is getting all the equipment on and off the field in the allotted time. Along with CHS, bands competing include Henry Ford II (Utica), Plymouth, W. Bloomfield, Milford, Livonia-Franklin, Troy Athens, Davison, Saginaw-Heritage, Algonac, Marysville, Clawson, Durand, Chesaning, Linden and Grand Blanc.

Gates open at 5 p.m. and the boosters will be selling refreshments, including plenty of hot chocolate and cider. "Every year we sell out," McKee

Under the direction of Cliff Chapman, the CHS band has a busy fall mapped out for itself. Football half-time performances are scheduled for Sept. 20, Sept. 27, Oct. 18 and Oct. 25. Other marching competitions will be held Oct. 5 (at Livonia Franklin), Oct. 12 (at Plymouth), Oct. 19 (at John Glenn-Westland) and Oct. 26 (the state championships). The band is also preparing for the Homecoming parade Sept. 28 and a return trip to London, England in December.

Admission for the Clarkston Invitational is $5 for adults and $2.50 for students and senior citizens.

Six ballot proposals on November statewide ballot

The Michigan Secretary of State has announced that six proposals gathered enough signatures or were sent by the legislature onto the November 5 generalelection ballot.

Proposal A would amend the state's Bingo law as it relates to who is eligible to sponsor gaming, including Bingo, and change the maximum payout allowable.

Proposal B would establish qualifications for judicial offices, including five years of experience as a member of the bar (existing judges would be grandfathered in).

Proposal C would make the existing Veterans' Trust Fund a part of the state constitution.

Proposal D would prohibit the use of bait and dogs to hunt bear.

Proposal E would permit casino gambling in qualified cities (those over 100,000 population, among other things).

Proposal G would give the Natural Resources Commission exclusive authority to regulate hunting, including bear, in the state.

Study with a smile at Clarkston's new tutoring center

BY EILEEN McCARVILLE Clarkston News Staff Writer

Before he started going to the Tut'r Network, Rob England admits he wasn't very focused.

"I didn't do it, I'd forget stuff or whatever," says the Waterford Mason Jr. High student about his homework. But everything's improved now since Rob's seen a tutor at the new business in downtown Clarkston. After his sessions, Rob does his homework so it's done before his mom picks him up.

And the tutor keeps in touch. "They call up the school and watch over me," Rob says.

Although Jamie and Liz Wittenberg officially opened their Clarkston branch of Tut'r Network in July, they say they will hold a variety of open houses soon for educators, local businesses and other groups.

"Everything's going to be together within the next three weeks," Jamie says. The business, which moved and has expanded from a previous location in downtown Clarkston, features something for everyone. And the Wittenbergs have retained one old brick wall indoors and added outdoor flower boxes for a cozy, relaxed atmosphere that blends well with the Main streetscape.

Besides the private tutoring for both children and adults, the former Hallman's Apothecary location features a computer center and an art and jewelry boutique called "Art & Sol." There are also therapy services. psychological counseling, learning disability specialists, adult support groups, art programs and six private cubicles that function as workrooms.

In-depth testing, evaluations and IQ or performance testing are available.

The computer center features Internet access, E-Mail and other "state-of-the-art" applications, Jamie says. It costs $12 per hour to rent a computer and classes are offered. "We'll be doing some free computer classes two to four times a month," he adds.

The business also plans to stock student needs like "a full line of Cliff Notes," Jamie says, and will also operate a teachers' store which will offer everything from flash cards to computer software.

"It will have very new, modern, up-to-date stuff. We're going to use the same kind of special care we use in picking things out for Art & Sol and our other places." Jamie runs two other Tut'r Network branches

3 CHS students named to National Merit semi-finals

Three current and one former student of Clarkston High School have been named National Merit Scholarship Semifinalists.

Colin McIntyre, Andrew Boissonneau and Anthony Knakal, all seniors at CHS, and Sue Gilbert, who has moved to Pennsylvania, were the students who, according to CHS principal Brent Cooley, finished in the top one-half of one percent of the 1.1 million students taking the PSAT test last year.

The students now have the opportunity to continue in the competition for about 7,000 Merit Scholarship awards, worth about $27 million, which will be offered next spring by independent sponsoring organizations and schools.

"You are to be commended for your performance," Cooley told the students in a brief meeting in his office Thursday. "Semi-finalists usually get to go to any school you want to go to. This will make you very special to many schools."

Andy said he hopes to go East for college (he's from Connecticut) and will probably study political science. "I'm seriously considering family law" as a career, he said.

Tony said he is interested in studying engineering "and I don't have any idea where." He is considering mechanical engineering or the University of Michigan's engineering physics program with an eye toward an auto-related career. "That's where most of the jobs are," he said.

Colin said he has no idea yet what he plans to do after high school--"No, not at all."

Andy is the son of Peter and Virginia Boissonneau. Tony is the son of Michael and Diane Knakal. Colin is the son of Michael and Denise McIntyre.

Jamie says he is continuing a family tradition that started 27 years ago when his grandfather opened the first tutoring service in Flint. It dealt mainly with math and reading skills. "I liked the concept. I just got more and more involved. The arts eventually entered into this. I envisioned a center that was interesting and modern, with a very attractive atmosphere."

Besides, the boutique gives people a little reprieve after they've finished studying, he admits. "Kids and adults love her store. It really melds with the whole program."

So far the response to the new business has been "fantastic," Jamie adds. "It's not just kids, it's for all people. We get just as many high-schoolers as middleschoolers and junior-high kids." The business also offers educational supplements to home schooling, which Jamie says is getting more and more popular.

Though he says all ages will benefit, the business is primarily geared toward juveniles. Jamie runs his hand over the long wooden counter where kids can perch on stools to attack those algebra and composition

"In my old place we had tutor rooms. But kids sometimes want big, open spaces."

Jamie says he plans to stock plenty of nutritional drinks and snacks. He envisions a place that emulates the Cyber Cafe in Birmingham which he describes as 'a coffee house with computers."

"I have a vision of a kid walking in here with a sack full of books. Plopping down and studying here. Having a juice ... This is a youth-oriented center. I want kids to feel comfortable."

New MEAPS have mixed results

MEAP, from 3A they will be proficient."

In both tests, Reschke pointed out that very few students finished in the lowest category, "not yet nov-

"That's a good sign," he said. "That tells us we can really make headway.'

Reschke, Potvin and staff of the Oakland Intermediate School District, which held a press conference Friday to discuss the new tests and the way they were scored, say it's also instructive to look at how far students were from receiving "proficient" status. Potvin said in writing, for example, where 4.0 was the maximum score and 2.5 was the cut-off for earning a "proficient" mark, no more than one student at Andersonville had less than 2.0. Thus, they were virtually all within one-half point of earning "proficient" status. Potvin said his staff wants to know "What do we have to do to get them to a 2.5?"

Reschke pointed out that the same test can be applied to scores from the various elementaries. For example, Andersonville students averaged 39.4 out of a possible 61 in science, while Bailey Lake students averaged 42.2 out of 61. However, only 14.5 percent of Andersonville students were ranked proficient, while 33.3 percent of Bailey Lake students were.

"There's less than three points difference between the schools yet their scores look very different," Reschke said. "So they're very close."

Unfortunately, when it comes to writing, the staff will not get the students writing samples back, nor will they receive an analysis of what points the students missed. Such an analysis is common with other MEAP

"Without the item analysis it's difficult to fix." Potvin said. "It's not that you can't improve, but it makes it harder."

Reschke predicted that scores will go up over time based upon better understanding of the tests as well as further application of existing curriculum.

"I will predict to you . . . Some of the areas we didn't do as well as we'd like to is because we haven't got all our kids through the curriculum yet."

"What we count on is they've had since March (the first test) part of a year of learning and six months of maturity," he said. Reschke admitted that the new tests do put new pressure on school districts.

"We're trying to stay ahead of the game on this, and I think we are," he said. "Our job is to make sure those basic skills are in place, those essential skills . . . We can't afford to write off 20 to 30 percent of our

Wolves stomp Berkley, 47-18

Attack switches from air to ground in week 2

BY SARAH CALLENDAR
Special to The Clarkston News

Coach Kurt Richardson knew that his Clarkston football team needed to stop Berkley's running game. He also knew that his own team needed to produce a running game of its own.

His coaching strategies apparently paid off as Clarkston pounded Berkley, 47-18 at Berkley, boosting the Wolves' season record to 2-0.

"We spent a lot of time working on our running game." Richardson said. "Obviously, the kids responded well."

In a turnaround from last week's game, Clarkston gained 382 yards on the ground, compared to only 98 in the air.

Brad Conley scored on Clarkston's lone touchdown pass on a toss from quarterback Dane Fife from eight yards deep to open the scoring. After three- and 24-yard TD runs by Jeff Long, Clarkston went into halftime with a 21-12 lead.

Long increased the Wolves' lead in the third quarter by scoring on a one-yard run. Brad Phalan continued the running attack with two TD runs of his own, 28 yards in the third quarter and 27 yards to start the fourth-quarter scoring.

Clarkston's last touchdown came on a two-yard run from Ryan Kulka. "We really did a good job with the running game," Richardson said. "Jeff Long and Brad Phalan both played good games for us."

Even though the Clarkston defense held Berkley to 18 points, Richardson still sees room for improvement.

"We need to work on defense," he said. "We need to stop the big play."

Richardson also plans to spend more time with the special teams.

Kevin Mason kicked five extra points, but two were blocked in the second half.

Although Richardson feels that his team can improve for next week's home opener, he is still pleased with the teams' efforts.

"The offensive line should be singled out as the play-makers," he said. "They were challenged, but they responded in a big way."

Next week the Wolves face Waterford Mott at home before what is sure to be a big crowd. Richardson looks forward to the game because of the Clarkston connections, former Clarkston coaches who will be on the other sideline.

"It will be a really tough game," he predicted.

A videotape of the Berkley game will be broadcast on TCI cable's Clarkston Channel 63 tonight (Wednesday) at 6 p.m.

Kickers tie Oxford

Oxford's highly touted kicker Matt Green gave the Clarkston varsity soccer team little trouble last week as the Wolves played Oxford to a 1-1 tie Sept. 12.

Green, the subject of a big article in the Detroit Free Press last week, scored the Wildcats' lone goal Jerenty Parrot scored for Clarkston. Both goals came in the first half.

The Wolves traveled to Grand Blanc Monday and Brandon Tuesday. They are scheduled to return home Thursday to face Waterford Mott. Game time is

Golfers still undefeated

Clarkston's varsity golf team remains undefeated in dual meets for the last three years, following its win over Rochester Adams September 12 at Katke Cousins Golf Course on the campus of Oakland University.

Although the tea shot well over its average of 151, the 161-165 win over Adams offered a respectable win.

"It was a good victory," said coach Jim Chamberlain. "It was a pretty rugged day for golf. The course is difficult, long and hilly, and it was windy."

Finishing first in the top four for Clarkston was senior Tim Klimek at 37, followed by junior Bob Schultz at 39, sophomore Ben Ness at 42, and senior Jeff Cumberworth at 43. Senior Mike Gray shot 44 and junior Bryan Haggard shot 45.

This week is the toughest as far as the number of plays is concerned, said Chamberlain. The team will play in a league tournament Tuesday at Bald Mountain, followed by a meet with Waterford Kettering at Pontiac Country Club on Wednesday. Thursday they are back home again at Clarkston Creek against Rochester High School. To round out the week on Friday, the Wolves (considered the underdogs) will compete against at least eight other teams in the 27-hole best ball Kresge Classic, which will be held at Hartland Glen.

Girls win Chesaning Invitational third straight year

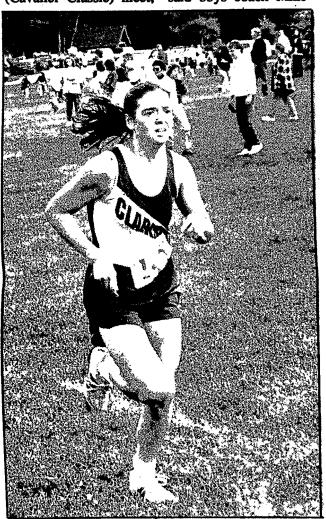

BY MARALEE COOK Special to The Clarkston News

Clarkston's boys and girls cross-country teams spent last weekend at South Higgins Lake State Park on their 'almost' annual canoe trip. And if they spent the entire time celebrating, they had good reasons to.

For the third straight year, the girls won a firstplace trophy at the Chesaning Invitational September 12 at Showboat Park. The team also won five medals, and with only 50 points was well ahead of second-place Hartland at 126, and Durand with 128

And for the first time in the three years the teams have been going to Chesaning, the boys earned a trophy, taking third place and earning two medals with 131 points, following Ann Arbor Huron with 61 and Kearsley with 73 points.

This meet reaffirms the successes of our first (Cavalier Classic) meet," said boys coach Mike

Taylor, of the success of both teams. "We have more depth this year than in the last several years. Most good teams are 10 people (capable of running varsity) deep."
The girls

Senior Kristin Maine, running in a time of 20:07, came in first for Clarkston and second overall, followed by junior Liz Cook, 4th in 20:28; Megan Plante, 6th in 20:47; sophomore Jennifer Rooding, 15th in 21:25; Emily Hogan, 25th in 21:55; sophomore Christina Rooding, 40th in 22:40 and junior Shannon Carry, 45th in 22:58. Although seven team members run, only the top five times can be

"Today I felt really good," said Maine about her showing at Chesaning. "I didn't want the race to end because I was gaining on her (Oxford junior Becky Keller, who won the race)." Maine said she wants to run in college, hopefully at a big school in Michigan, and is looking forward to the rest of the season. "I'm trying to keep myself healthy and thinking of the end of the season. I don't want to get burned out."

Girls' coach Debbie Zonca said the girls have been struggling with colds and are still running a little flat. "I'm impressed with the fact that the top three (Maine, Cook and Plante) are consistant, ' Zonca added. "The one minute gap between third and fourth has to be closed, but I'm really pleased with Jennifer Rooding coming on strong."

Coach Taylor added that Hogan has been dealing with asthma problems, but seems to have them corrected, and was able to help out on this meet. The boys

For the third straight race, freshman David Sage finished first for Clarkston. He was 8th overall with a time of 17:01, followed by freshman Matt Haver, 24th in 17:40; senior Jayson Scheiderer, 31st in 18:07; senior Jeff Deevey, 35th and Curt Brewer, 36th, each with a time of 18:10; sophomore Dave Dixon, 41st in 18:21; and freshman Chris Weber, 45th in 18:23.

Coach Taylor was very pleased with his team's performance, and said his impressions of the team after Cavalier were confirmed at Chesaning.

'Sage will be able to treak away and run with the leaders," Taylor said, "Matt Haver will be a big help, and Scheiderer is greatly improved over last year." Jeff Hopcian, who came in second in the JV race, ran tough, said Taylor and is showing a lot of potential. Taylor added the good showing by new team members is making everyone work harder.

"This weekend trip is good for team morale,"

Taylor said, adding that it gives the team members (there are 50 this year and most of them went on the trip) a chance to get to know each other and become Clarkston's next two meets, Tuesday, September 17 against Rochester High School and Tuesday. September 24 against Troy, will be held at their home course at Independence Oaks Park on Sashabaw Road.

Bundridge scouted by pros

Brent Bundridge of Clarkston faces a challenging year. Entering his junior year at Northwood University. he faces tough academic requirements and will have professional baseball scouts looking over his play and making decisions about his potential career.

Bundridge has been playing ball for the last 15 years, including three years starting for Clarkston High School and two years starting at Northwood. This summer he played in the Macomb Senior Travel League for the Mt. Clemens club and batted .383 with an on-base percentage of .626. He was the leader in runs scored and walks and was a leading defensive player with 38 put outs in center field.

In addition to holding down a full-time job with Power Distribution (in his marketing major) Bundridge lifts weights, runs, plays basketball and is generally trying to prepare himself for the year ahead, both academically and athletically.

Clarkston girl at top of Taekwondo world

A Clarkston girl has been named the outstanding female competitor at this year's AAU/USA Junior Olympic Games Tackwondo Event.

Bridget Gardner, an eighth-grader at Clarkston Middle School, swept the competition with gold medals in all three events-forms, international sparring and point sparring. The performance netted her the Joel Ferrell Award, which is given to the outstanding competitor, male and female, in all divisions.

"This is the highest award bestowed upon an athlete competing in AAU Junior Olympics and she joins the likes of Chris Webber who won this award for basketball in 1990." said Bridget's proud papa, Lee.

Bridget, along with younger brothers Sean and Brady, has been training in the ancient Korean martial art form for about five years. The children have all attained red belt status, which is considered the advanced division. Their parents, Lee and Maureen, also train at the Waterford Karate Club under the instruction of Doug Bourgeois.

The entire family made the trip to New Orleans Aug. 1-10 to the AAU Junior Olympic Games. The Taekwondo event was held at the Louisiana Superdome.

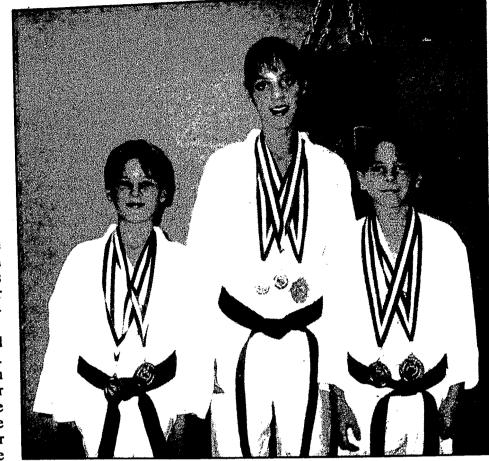

To be invited to the Junior Olympic games in this sport, competitors must first finish in the top eight in their divisions at the state level. All three Gardner children made the cut.

In Tackwondo, competitors have three events in which to compete. Traditional forms involves a pre-determined pattern of blocks, strikes and kicks to an imaginary opponent. The other two categories are point sparring and international sparring. The Gardner kids participated in all three events and combined for seven medals.

Brady, the youngest, took a bronze medal in international sparring and a silver in point sparring. Sean, perhaps not wanting to be outdone by his younger brother, also took a bronze in international and a silver in point sparring.

Their dad says the training is good for the entire family in a variety of ways.

"It's a wonderful way to stay in shape as well as participate with your children in a sport at the same time," he said. "They probably won't fully realize how beneficial Taekwondo has been for them until they are adults, but I have seen them gain more confidence and self-esteem in addition to improving their overall athletic abilities for other sports."

Clarkston Shadows win Romeo tourney

Three Independence township girls soccer teams played Labor Day weekend in the 15th annual Romeo Peachfest Soccer Tournament. Over 150 teams participated from the US and Canada.

Due to a scheduling mix-up, the under-19 Shadows had to play all three of their preliminary-round games back to back—and in the mid-day heat. To make the situation worse, each team they faced was playing its first game of the tournament.

Natalie Vaughn and Amanda Yarber scored big goals in this round. "Our girls were hot and tired for the second and third games, while the other teams came out fresh," coach Forney said. "The Shadows played together as a team and did what they needed to do to get to the championship game. I'm proud of each one of them."

The U-19 team came back fresh the next day to capture the division title with a 5-0 win over a team from Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Forward Carin Lloyd came out strong, scoring a hat trick (three goals) in the first half. Mindy Thompson added two more goals in the second half. Erin Forney went all the way in goal, allowing only one goal for the tournament.

"I'm happy for the team. This is a great group of girls," the coach said.

The under-16 Shadows played in a division of equally matched teams. Coach Steve Forney said the team had to play tough each game.

"Nobody was giving anything away out there. Good defense was critical and our defensive line did a good job."

Theresa Koenings played a tough tournament, the coach said. Cara Forney and Crystal Wilkerson combined for success in the goal. Wilkerson also scored the deciding goal in the preliminary round to send the girls to the final game.

In the championship game the Shadows came home with the runner-up trophy after losing a closely contested 1-0 game to the Rochester Thunder.

The under-15 Clarkston Shadows, coached by Jenny Combs, played three hard-fought games in the preliminary rounds but just missed a trip to the final found. Goals were scored by Shadows Sarah Voss, Heather Combs and Jody Back. Allison Barth did the goal-keeping duties in each game.

Homecoming season kicks off

Considering the pile of broken drumsticks littering the gym floor, it was a wonder anyone had their hearing left after Friday's Pre-Tapping ceremony at Clarkston High School.

"An occupational hazard," said principal Brent Cooley, who has sat through his share, to be sure, of the drum-banging ceremonies associated with the fall ritual known as Homecoming.

At CHS it works this way: First, Pre-Tapping establishes just who is a member of the Homecoming court. Then, a week later, Tapping illuminates the name of the king and queen. The following week, the day of the game, the Queen's Assembly parades the king, queen and court in full dress around the gym and allows the rest of the student body to take part in silly games. It's all organized by the student council.

Pre-Tapping and Tapping involve the aforementioned drumming as members of the student council wade into the packed bleachers to seek out the members of the court, "tapping" them on the shoulder and handing them a flower to notify them of their selection.

This "tapping" really takes more the form of jumping on the person bodily. Then, it's that person's turn to do it to someone else. And so on.

Who will be this year's king and queen? The nominees include, for queen, Allison Prudhomme, Natalie Vaughn and Stephanie Vogler, and for king Brad Conley, Jason Ostrum and Jay Richardson. The announcement will be made—make that "tapped"—Friday during an assembly.

Other Homecoming activities include the game, versus Rochester Adams, Sept. 27 at 7 p.m. The game will be preceded by pre-game festivities from 4-6 p.m. and there will be an alumni tent at the game.

On Saturday, Sept. 28 there will be a pancake breakfast at Clarkston Elementary before the parade. The parade kicks off at 10 a.m. and winds its way through the downtown streets. The dance is at 7 p.m. that night.
