City, Adler reach parking agreement

By BRAD MONASTIERE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

The city and Ed Adler finally have their parking agreement.

After months of debate, suggestions and changes, the Clarkston City Council came to an agreement for the Clarkston Mills project at its regular meeting Monday.

City attorney Thomas Ryan said the agreement was satisfactory to everyone involved, and now hopes the issue is resolved.

"We want to put this to bed," he said. "This is acceptable to the city, Mr. Adler's group and the engineers."

The 10-year lease calls for Adler's Lehman [illegible] Company to maintain, construct and repair all the new parking going in as a result of the agreement. Ryan said the agreement will add more than 40 new parking spaces to the downtown Clarkston area.

"I think this is good for everyone," Adler said. "I'm pleased and I think the city council is pleased."

There are two different agreements for the projects on the two sides of Depot Street. The south side only has a memorandum of understanding at this point, because Ryan said no final agreement had been made, although all the parties agreed "in principle" to the items included for that part of the project.

On the south side of Depot Street, Detroit Edison has agreed to move two utility poles closest to the alley free of charge. Ryan said easements were needed for the guide wires on the poles, but Lehman would assist in that.

Other provisions included in the agreement for the north side of the street include a license for the city to allow parking in the new spaces for no more than five city-sponsored events, not including the Concerts in the Park series. When the city wants to use those spaces, it must give Lehman 30 days notice.

Lehman will also pay premiums on the liability insurance policy connected with the new spaces. When the lease expires, the city will then own the property exclusively and have all responsibility for improvements as they are needed.

"We have no timeframe right now as to when this will get started," Ryan said. "The sooner, the better."

In other council business:

- The council tabled discussion on the master plan and zoning ordinance until a hearing could take place on reallocation of leftover Community Development Block Grant monies. The council expressed a desire to channel some CDBG money into the master plan and zoning ordinance projects, but in order for it to use that money, a public hearing must be held first. City manager Art Pappas said hearing will take place at the next council meeting Dec. 17, with the actual allocation of the funds to take place at the Jan. 13 meeting.
- Ryan said he will look into [illegible] of city employment policies, as recommended by the Bond issue includes move for adult, community ed.

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

Probably the only person who can get excited about the current Clarkston Middle School, a structure built in the 1920s, is Marilyn Allyn, Clarkston Schools' director of community education.

In fact, the word "excited" peppers her conversation as she talks about the proposed move of her department to the old middle school after the new high school opens. As she sees it, the building presents a wealth of opportunities.

"It would be such a vast improvement from this building," Allyn said from her office on Maybee Rd. And she reels off a list of program expansions that will be available when the old middle school space changes hands.

The move is one of the lesser known aspects of the Dec. 17 school bond issue dubbed the Sunshine Bond. Along with additions at the elementary schools and a new elementary, the middle school will move to the current high school and community education will move to the present CMS. Cost for the needed renovations at CMS is pegged at $2.56 million, including a computer lab, playground and parking improvements.

Allyn's department serves everyone from preschoolers in daycare to high-school dropouts seeking diplomas to senior citizens in enrichment classes. All of those programs, which are self-supporting, could grow if the bond issue is approved.

Preschool and latchkey programs are currently enrolled at capacity (250 in preschool, 525 in latchkey) and have waiting lists.

"So we're looking at expanding those services. There's also a dire need for more day care," Allyn said. "We have three portables (classrooms) and we're full. We get calls daily."

Allyn would also like to add enrichment activities for children (and their moms) who are not in daycare or preschool, but right now, "There's no room at the inn," she said.

As for alternative high school, 200-300 students per semester enroll in this state-funded program to complete their GED or diploma. At their present

City, township approve Block Grant funds

The Independence Township Board of Trustees voted 6-1 to approve the 1997-98 budget for Community Development Block Grant funds at its Nov. 19 meeting.

Designations for funds include SCAMP, Clarkston Area Youth Assistance, HAVEN, meals, chore, large print books and a barrier-free computer work station for the township library, the Clintonwood Park play structure, emergency rehabilitation and planning and management.

Though total estimated funding is $63,468, township treasurer John Lutz reminded the board they were approving percentages rather than dollar amounts because figures change.

Township clerk Joan McCrary dissented because she wanted the board to approve 10 percent more for planning, rather than the 10 percent (approximately $5,000) that is allocated.

McCrary said she had hoped to get twice that amount so some funding could be used toward historic home preservation and the township's rural and historic preservation plan.

Though McCrary said CDBG guidelines allow up to 20 percent for planning purposes, Lutz told board members that the township tries to target funding toward situations that affect low- to moderate-income families.

The Clarkston City Council handed out some of its federally granted money at its regular meeting Monday to a few local groups.

The allocation for 1997-98 is as follows: $3,800 for parking; $1,000 for senior citizens; $1,000 for Youth Assistance; $600 for the library and $1,600 for planning.

City manager Art Pappas said he didn't want to give any money to Lighthouse because it has not used all the money its been given in the past.

Township vetoes sewer lift station improvements

Though a Clarkston couple has been complaining for weeks about odors from an M-15 sewer lift station, on Nov. 19 Independence Township's Board of Trustees unanimously voted to turn down spending approximately $34,000-$45,000 of its money to correct the problem.

A report prepared by township DPW director George Anderson indicated that amount would have to be spent to construct a carbon filter system that would be encased in a Fiberglass enclosure or a more aesthetically pleasing brick building.

The cost would be shared between the township (92 percent) and the city (8 percent), based on use. Township trustee Jeff McGee spoke for other board members who questioned whether the project was crucial enough to support.

"I think that's pretty excessive for some carbon filters," he said.

One of the problems is that the odors are not consistent, but seem to occur seasonally (warmer weather) or at certain times of the day. Trustee Dan Travis said he has been down to the lift station three times. "I haven't smelled anything yet," he said.

Clarkston Mayor Sharron Catallo, who attended the meeting, said she was disappointed the board did not act. She told them she could get the names of other community members who claim there's a severe odor problem.

Clarkston seniors donate hands, hearts to convent restoration

BY EILEEN McCARVILLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Bob Weir never guessed the toilet seat he grabbed from Home Depot and threw into his suitcase would become such a conversation piece.

He and another Clarkston resident, Jack Byers, were two of the 16 Clarkston United Methodist Church members who traveled overseas to spend time restoring a Russian Orthodox convent last June.

The toilet seat was a last-minute thought, said Weir, 66, explaining how he took the seat off a chair to construct his makeshift contraption. The chair was then positioned over the simple hole on the floor many Russian people still use.

"People were pointing at it and talking excitedly," Weir said.

"Primitive," is how both men describe some of the conditions that remain in the former Communist country [illegible] the little group from Clarkston helped restore a portion of a 500-year-old convent which was nearly destroyed by the Germans during World War II.

An old photo shows the buildings before the damage, surrounded by what looks like a long wall. Actually, there are rooms inside, explained the men, who worked to build back the roof of one section.

The convent is located in Stupino on the Oka River, approximately 60 miles south of Moscow. Weir said he found out about the work mission from the church's bulletin board. His wife said, "Why don't you call the man and see if you're too old," Weir quipped. "Turns out I was one of the younger ones."

Byers, 77, had already volunteered for several other missions which pop up all over the world "wherever there's a need," he said. He's been to Cuba, Costa Rica and Jamaica and next year he'll travel to Haiti. Weir said he was involved in a work mission in Central America 10 years ago.

Clarkston residents and Clarkston Methodist Church members Jack Buyers (left) and Bob Weir pose with one of Weir's souvenirs — nesting dolls from a two-week work mission to restore a Russian convent.

This past summer 40 other groups were involved in the project from all over the U.S. The Michigan group was sponsored by the Detroit Conference of the Methodist Church.

Both men said their members made quite an impression on the Russian people, especially the teenagers, who appear to be happy with the changes as opposed to the older people, who seem not to be.

Weir said you hardly ever see a senior smile. "They want to go back" he said, speaking of Communism. Under that form of government, people feel they were taken care of and fared better with social security — $800 a month as opposed to the $80 they receive now, he said.

But the 10 or so Russian high-school students who worked alongside them went crazy over a jar of peanut butter Byers brought. They say it's hard to get, although, strangely, some high-falutin' delicacies like Dove Bars are plentiful.

The kids proudly touted Western threads featuring "anything with Nike, Michael Jordan or Snickers bars," Weir said — which makes sense. Stupino is one of the Mars Candy centers of Eastern Europe.

That's the dichotomy of life "over there," said Byers and Weir. Moscow is stark and squalid in contrast to St. Petersburg, which is splendorous. Both went sight-seeing there and remarked about the beautiful palaces. Some had staircases of gold, they said.

"St. Petersburg had flush toilets and everything because it's a tourist town. Moscow is not," Byers said.

Both said they truly learned to appreciate U.S. amenities. Because there was not a single restaurant nor a grocery store nearby, they had to resign themselves to a 'same-old-same-old' diet of cucumbers, tomatoes, rice, pasta, potatoes and tea.

Canned sardines were an occasional treat, but "nobody ate those," Weir cracked.

Though even the poorest of Russian homes feature at least one T.V., the bathroom floor holes are common, the men said. Running water is scarce, so people have to pour water over themselves when "flushing" and also when taking a bath.

At one point during a bus trip, the driver pulled off the road.

"All the men on this side. All the women on this side," Byers said, imitating the bus driver. "You head to the nearest tree to take care of your needs," he laughed.

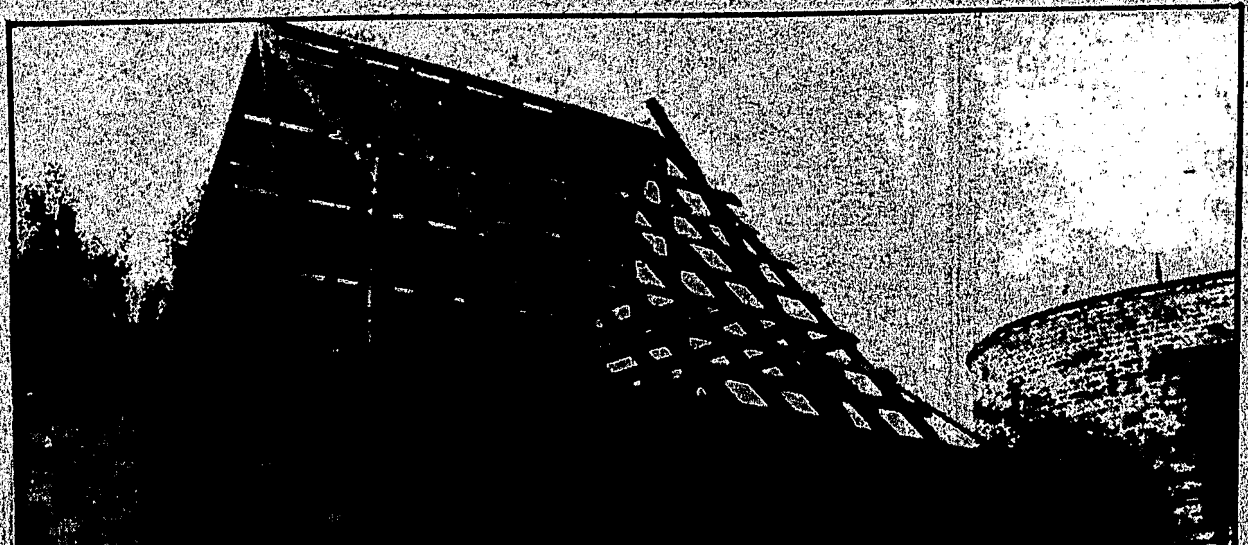
That's why they appreciated stopping in town at Stupino occasionally after a hard day's work — to enjoy the hot showers and flush toilets at a modern sports center.

The men remarked that, although stark, the country is apparently not without a sense of humor. For example, a set of the popular nesting dolls features great Russian leaders like Gorbachav and Yeltzin. And Byers says he could have kicked himself for not picking up a "McLenin" sweatshirt featuring suspiciously familiar golden arches.

When they left Russia, the little group was given a farewell party by the people of Stupino. Byers remarked that the mayor said he couldn't figure out why the Americans had come.

"They don't understand the concept of service or outreach," he said.

But, Weir added, "They're kind of appreciative. The Russian people just cry for you to come back."



This section of the convent roof was repaired by Weir and Byers.

Board members go out with style, and a few tears

BY EILEEN McCARVILLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

As John Lutz spoke about his years with the township, he adjusted his glasses and, at one point, his lip quavered.

The Independence Township treasurer said an emotional farewell, seated at the board of trustees table for one last time.

"I thank the good people of Independence Township who gave me the opportunity to serve them for 12 years. It has been a very rewarding experience for me and my family." Lutz said he'll miss his fellow staff members at township hall.

"I have found that friendships are forever and I will take with me many happy memories of Independence Township. Thank you very much," he said, his voice faltering at times.

Besides numerous responsibilities including union negotiator, Community Development Block Grant coordinator and his involvement in Clarkston Area Youth Assistance, SCAMP, the Optimists, Boy Scouts and various treasurers' associations, Lutz reigned as township treasurer for three consecutive terms.

He also was held responsible for investing in some risky derivatives that cost the township $3 million.

But negatives were ignored as Lutz and trustees Bruce Mercado and Mel Vaara gave their final speeches during their last official meeting Nov. 19. Like Lutz, Vaara was defeated at the November polls, losing in the supervisor's race to Dale Stuart. Jim Wenger, a retired Clarkston school teacher, defeated Lutz. Mercado announced months ago he was retiring to spend more time with his family.

Mercado, who, in addition to his role as trustee, has served the township as a planning commissioner, weltands board member, Vision 2020 participant and been active in many community endeavors, said it had been an honor to serve the board and the township.

Vaara waited until the last agenda item was over before he spoke.

Talking from a podium in the corner, he chronicled his 25-year history — planning commission member and chair, master plan member, chairman of the zoning board of appeals, Friends of the Library member, Independence Land Conservancy board member and a long relationship under seven different supervisors.

He cited some highlights including the famous fight involving a ski-lift on the roof of Pine Knob's hotel and a lawsuit that ended, in his estimation favorably, with the denial of 69 apartments on Deer Lake.

"And look what we have here today," he said.

Vaara urged the board to move forward with his suggestions for improvements that include the election of a library board, a city form of government, a new township hall and senior citizen center, more safety paths, increased funds for police protection and working to keep the northern part of the township rural residential. And, he left a tip for all.

"Don't be afraid to take a minority voice or opinion. If you feel strongly about something, measure up to it and work hard to achieve any goal."

Several board members offered their comments after Stuart presented the three with plaques of appreciation.

Township clerk Joan McCrary choked up as she told Lutz she would miss his "clever one-liners and smile."

"We saw our kids through school," she mused, praising Lutz as a valued board member and a friend. She told Mercado he had been the "straight thinker" who could always be counted on when the going got rough.

As he presented his former rival with a plaque, Stuart noted that Vaara has been involved in just about every facet of public service and cited his "consistent pursuit of ideals and ideas you thought were important."

Bowing to all three board members' accomplishments, trustee Dan Travis relied on a paraphrased quote from Abraham Lincoln which says the greatest thing in a community is its leadership. Travis noted the combined terms of all three men totaled 50 years.

"Don't expect these gentlemen to disappear into the dust in any way, shape or form," he said.

Looking ahead, Travis welcomed new treasurer Wenger and trustees Neil Wallace and Larry Rosso, who will attend their first meeting Dec. 3.

"Roll your sleeves up, gentlemen. We're gonna work hard," he said.

In other board action:

● Members voted unanimously to approve the purchase of flooring for the new fire hall, up to $29,000.

● The board decided to wait until spring to rebid for a proposed new heating and cooling system for the township hall and annex.

● The board unanimously approved the seeking of bids for a DPW dump truck.

● Under an AFSCME contract settlement, benefits for non-union employees were unanimously approved to be adjusted according to changes in union employees' benefits, including vacation time and dental and optical plans.

Drunk driverswill pay--in more ways than one

New fee schedulewill bill offenders for township's costs

BY EILEEN McCARVILLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Next time you choose to drink and get behind the wheel of a car, think twice. It may cost you more than just a ticket.

During its Nov. 14 meeting, the Independence Township Board of Trustees unanimously adopted a fee schedule that will bill drunk drivers for dire consequences.

According to Oakland County Sheriff's Sgt. Dave Pement, of the Independence substation, those drivers who are under the influence of alcohol or drugs will have to pay the township's expenses if they cause accidents which result in property damage, injury or death.

Violators will be billed for every OCSD officer who has to be called to an emergency situation based on that officer's hourly pay rate, he said in a presentation to the board.

The provision for cost recovery fees falls under a section of a township ordinance which was adopted in 1995. According to the ordinance, anyone whose blood alcohol level tests over .07, considered legally "impaired," will be fined (.10 is legally drunk).

"We all talk of the horrendous costs," Pement said, speaking of the tragedies. "But there's a monetary cost. When you put a lot of people out there and they're tied up for hours, that's a lot of money."

Pement used an example of a couple who was seriously injured last Christmas when they were hit from behind by a drunk driver who didn't turn his lights on. Tabulating the estimated cost, he came up with just a bare-bones figure: over $800 for the six officers, including two crash investigators, who were involved.

That's not even counting other costs like extricating the people from their car, transportation to the hospital and stabilization, Pement told board members. Items like those fall within the township's fire department, whose cost recovery schedule has been interpreted to include negligence in hazardous material spills or arson fires, according to township fire chief Gar Wilson.

"I can use it," Wilson said, talking about extending the interpretation to include substance-related accidents, "but I don't know if we're going to go on with it. Maybe we should." Problems might include extensive court costs, but "If you're going to have the ordinance, it should cover eveyone who's involved," he said.

Under the OCSD's schedule, the offender will be billed by the township clerk and, if not paid within 30 days, the matter will be turned over to district court, Pement said. Payment could also be part of the violator's sentence and, if the fees aren't recovered, the township could file a civil lawsuit, he added.

The collected fines go into the township's revenue fund and will be used for department-related equipment.

Pement doesn't know why it has taken a year to approach the board about the cost recovery system, but said officers at the Independence substation noticed it hadn't been implemented.

The schedule of hourly fees range from $37 to over $45, according to an officer's rank. The charges become effective immediately and will be published and made available at the township clerk's office on Main St. or the OCSD substation on M-15. Because the schedule is for the next three years, those rates will increase each successive year through 1998.

"The cost of the contract increases from, say, a simple arrest to an officer being tied up at the hospital for four hours," Pement said.

Pement said that out of the 714 accident reports taken in the township this year, 30 were related to drunk driving. He said taxpayers shouldn't have to bear the burden.

"Part of the purpose of the ordinance is to make people responsible for their actions. It's not just 'I'm going to get a ticket for drunk driving, go to court, pay a ticket and that'll be the end of it,'" he said.

OPINION

In Focus

by Annette Kingsbury

My favorite holiday

Thanksgiving is one of those days that causes me each year to get misty-eyed and nostalgic.

Perhaps it's because it's a truly all-American holiday; perhaps it's because it's the official beginning of the Christmas season. Whatever the reason, Thanksgiving is the day I give myself permission to indulge in traditions that go back to childhood.

I can never miss seeing the parade, no matter how busy I am making pies or cooking a turkey. In high school one year I marched in the parade with my high-school band, and I still remember how awed I was by how big everything was. I also remember how we froze. All part of the fun—even now, from a distance.

It's also the day made for watching the old version of "Miracle on 34th Street" on TV, even if it's while your busy. It wouldn't be Thanksgiving without it. And it's officially OK with me to get out the Christmas music starting now.

For the next month we'll all be on a more frantic than usual timetable trying to get in the shopping, card-writing, decorating and partying along with getting to work every day. But for just this one day, we can laze in the radiating glow of a warm oven that's been on all day.

A couple of years ago I stopped eating meat, but that didn't change Thanksgiving that much. Since I often hosted the family on that day, I suggested to my mother that in order to continue to do so, it would have to become a vegetarian dinner, since I can no longer abide the smell of a roasting bird.

"Oh no," she said, with no uncertainty in her voice. That year, the festivities moved to my sister's house. This year, another sister will host. The turkey must go on.

So I will bake the pies. There again, tradition. One year I tried pumpkin cheesecake instead of Mom's usual (but great) pumpkin pie recipe, but it didn't go over very well. So now we're back to pie.

Thanksgiving is also the time I try to get up the evergreen roping around the front door. From then on, it will stay up until it begins to turn yellow, about next March. As Christmas gets closer, I will add ornaments or whatever else I can find to add to the mood.

Of course the other tradition is football, but we've gotten around that in our family by timing dinner to start after the Lions game. Of course we can still talk about the game—it wouldn't be Thanksgiving without that.

Of course the best thing about Thanksgiving is the people. No matter where we meet and what we eat, getting the generations and all my siblings together is what it's all about. In that respect, the day goes too fast—exchanging Christmas gift lists, catching up on news, washing mountains of dishes—so much preparation and it's over in a flash.

Then we'll all get in our cars and drive home through dark streets newly illuminated with Christmas lights. But the warmth of the day will remain in our hearts, even after the turkey has gone cold and the oven light gone dark.

Vote yes on school bond

On December 9th, voters will be asked to vote on Phase III "Sunshine" bond proposal. You may think "Didn't we just build a new elementary school and then there is the new high school. How can it be possible to need more?"

I have been involved in studying educational facility needs in the Clarkston district since 1988. It has been nearly a decade and it is evident that the situation is the same. It has been an uphill task informing residents of the tremendous number of inadequacies that occur in our aging buildings. There is sometimes a tendency to want to blame someone for additional money requests to pay for schools. Two words immediately come to mind - growth and age.

All we have to do is look around with our eyes open to see the phenomenal growth occurring within our district. Many may have doubted enrollment projections in the past but those projections have been extremely accurate, if not lower than what we are experiencing, and the new homes and kids keep coming. Growth coupled with the need to maintain, renovate and update our older buildings support the Phase III request.

In 1988, voters were asked to support a new elementary, high school and building renovations. It was said that all this was too much to swallow at once. Additional failed attempts led by the school board to develop a long-range, 3-phase plan to separate issues - focusing on each individually. Close watch and constant review have brought us now to this point in time.

The needs have not disappeared; if anything they have only increased along with the price tag attached. It's like putting off replacing an old car - repairs become more frequent and the cost increases with each new model.

This bond will address the growth, eliminate costly portable purchases, update and renovate existing buildings allowing our students to receive quality education in quality facilities.

Had we approved these issues in 1988 the cost would have been drastically less but we can't go back, only move forward. There is an old saying "pay now or pay later." Well it is now later. This is the fiscally responsible time to go forward with Phase III.

Please vote "YES" December 9.

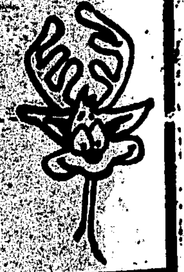
● In last week's publication of the Clarkston Middle School Honor Roll, three seventh-graders were incorrectly left off the all-A list. Those who should have been included were Megan McGeogh, Meghan McGinn and Maureen McIntyre.

Jim's Jottings

By Jim Sherman

Thanksgiving is my holiday day



Christmas is my favorite holiday season. Thanksgiving is my favorite holiday day.

My cooking wife probably wouldn't rate Thanksgiving as I do, but for a man it's an un-rushed day. It gives man time to think of the things he's thankful for, including having a Thanksgiving-dinner-cooking-wife.

Everyday can be "family" day for our tribe, since all three of our children (Children? Furgoshsakes they're in their 30's and 40's) work at Sherman Publication headquarters in Oxford.

But Thanksgiving is a different, better "family" day. Very little is said about business, and much is said about grandchildren, turkey and dressing and then about the need to cut back on our weight before Christmas.

A dozen or so years ago I listed several things I'm thankful for, and suggested you readers might take a few minutes and do the same. Most of us find it easy, maybe natural to complain first. But we all do have much to be thankful for.

First on our list is the aforementioned "family." God and Hazel did a good job rasing them.

Second is health, allowing us mobility and mental awareness.

Then in no particular order I list:

Friends
Fried chicken
Deer Camp
Arizona
Grandchildren
Our home
A long putt I sank to win a scrambles match
Sunset over Millecoquin Lake at our place in Engadine, November 16, and sunrise at the same place November 17. Gorgeous reds.
Newspapers, radio and television, in that order.
Smells of leather, new cars and fresh coffee grounds.
Ballpoint pens
This computer where I've learned a new game of solitaire.
Riding tractor-mower-blower, and a big yard to mow and blow, and hoe and sow.
Toasted bacon and tomato sandwiches, but only when the tomatoes are locally grown.
Memories
Pictures and paintings I can relate to, Dixieland music, barbershop quartets, and tapes of old radio shows, Red Skelton and Jimmy Durante.

A fast-reading mystery novel
Snowmobile outings
Walking a beach
Walking shoes
Gas barbecue grill
Smiles -- getting and giving
Deodorant
Air-dried sheets

See, there are lots of things to be thankful for, including a hug now and then.

A look back

15 YEARS AGO (1981)

Local businessman Tom Ritter joins forces with prominent Republicans in support of President Ronald Reagan's economic polices. Ritter, a Democrat, is the owner of Ritter's Farm Market on Dixie Highway and a member of the Michigan Citizens Committee to Support the President, formed by Richard Headlee of Farmington Hills. Headlee is best known for his amendment to the state constitution approved by voters which limits the increased revenue taxes generate by the rise in the cost of living index.

Clarkston High School varsity wrestling coach Rick Detkowski is crossing his fingers this year. If his team can avoid injuries, illnesses and bad breaks, there could be a lot of excitement this season.

Nine members of the Clarkston High School varsity football team are selected to the Greater Oakland Activities League's All-League squad for outstanding play in the 1981 season. Named first team All-League are Guy Hubble, Dave Fulcher, Kurt Norman, Bruce Burwitz and Steve Nichols.

25 YEARS AGO (1971)

Reassessment of Independence Township, commissioned last July by the township board of trustees at a cost of $69,800, begins in Birdland Sub this week. The reappraisal of residential property is undertaken by United Appraisal Co. of Cleveland which has done similar jobs for Commerce Township and Wixom. The complete township appraisal is expected to take about a year.

Kim Blasey, 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Blasey of Holcomb, is chosen Clarkston's Junior Miss Saturday night at the high school. Kim is selected from a field of 19 Clarkston girls and awarded a $700 scholarship and a sterling silver bowl in remembrance of the contest.

Dan Fife, Clarkston's all-star athlete now with the Detroit Tigers, ends the Florida Instructional League season with a 6-2 pitching record. The Tigers walk away with a division championship in the league and narrowly miss capturing the pennant.

50 YEARS AGO (1946)

The Rev. W.S. Ross, pastor of Hough Avenue Baptist Church in Cleveland, accepts a call to First Baptist Church of Clarkston. He succeeds the Rev. Walter Ballagh who resigned to accept a call in Northville. Rev. Ross will move into the parsonage this Tuesday and begin at the church Dec. 1.

Playing at the Drayton Theatre this week are Robert Young and Dorothy McGuire in "Claudia and David," Olivia DeHavilland in "To Each His Own" and Irene Dunne in "Anna and the King of Siam." Featured at the Holly Theatre are Joel McCrea and Brian Donlevy in "The Virginian" and Barbara Stanwyck and Van Heflin in "The Strange Love of Martha Ivers."

Thanksgiving specials at Rudy's include roasting chickens, 51 cents a pound; pure pork sausage, 49 cents a pound; Florida oranges, 34 cents a dozen; pumpkin, a No. 2 can for 21 cents; and mixed nuts, 49 cents a pound.

60 YEARS AGO (1936)

Clarkston High School's Senior Class present their play "Miss Jimmy," a farce in three acts, with unusual success on Friday. There is not a vacant seat in the auditorium and proceeds amount to $91.

The Holly Theatre presents a Thursday Thanksgiving Special with continuous runs of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Following that event, the theatre offers several other features during the next week: Sir Guy Standing and Frances Drake in "I'd Give My Life," Clark Gable and Marion Davies in "Cain and Mabel" and Jack Benny, Bob Burns and Martha Raye in "The Big Broadcast of 1937."

Specials at Rudy's include beef roast, 14 to 16 cents a pound; Boston butts, 21 cents a pound; oleo, 27 cents for two pounds; flour, five pounds for 19 cents; catsup, a large bottle for a dime; and Chocolate Drops, 10 cents a pound.

Lunch is on me

During a recent dedication of 50 Bridge Valley acres to the Independence Land Conservancy, member Mel Vaara, who serves on the board of directors, said the idea for the preservation stemmed from lunch with landowner Dr. James O'Neill. "You paid for it, didn't you, Mel?" someone asked. "You're damn right I did," Vaara answered.

Just be thankful

Be thankful for all the things we have: good home, family and friends . . .

Be thankful Wayne Fontes isn't on television every morning, afternoon and evening explaining how wonderful his Detroit Lions are . . .

Be thankful Bill Clinton won't run for President of the United States again.

Be thankful men and women of the auto industry are putting together fine cars ...

Be thankful we can afford these fine cars

Oh, and be thankful people are buying these fine cars ...

Be thankful for the first 10 Amendments to the United States Constitution ...

Be thankful that we don't just have interpretations of the amendments, but also the words of those who helped create the Constitution, Jefferson, Madison, Washington, etc ...

Be thankful that ours is a written history, that if read and studied can help insure we don't make mistakes over and over and over again...

Be thankful the Detroit Lions football game isn't the only thing to be televised on Thanksgiving

Be thankful the Detroit Lions don't play every night of the week ...

Be thankful for living in an area that is more wealthy than many nations of the world ...

Be thankful for the efforts of good samaritans as they work to ease the burdens of others . . .

Be thankful you have no burdens needing to be eased ...

Be thankful that those who would nowadays would be called a right wing, religious group left their homes in Europe to land on a rock named Plymouth ...

Be thankful the Mayflower didn't sink ...

Be thankful for all the wonderful things the individuals of this country have provided to us and the world ...

Be thankful this is still the country that inspires and offers hope ...

Be thankful we are here and that we have so much to be thankful for . . .

For all these things and all the things I missed, be thankful . . .

Have a happy and loving Thanksgiving, this year.

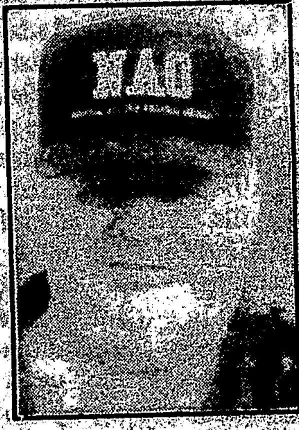
How far along are you in your Christmas shopping?



JERRY FISHER, DAVISBURG: I'm pretty well along. All I've got left to buy for is my wife, my three kids and my grandchildren. But I do have my own bought.

DENISE SAUNDERS, CLARKSTON: I'd say I'm 80 percent done.

NORMA CLEMENT, CLARKSTON: I haven't even started. Oh yes, I have. I got one present. But I do have my decorations up.

CONNIE HOFFMAN, CLARKSTON: I will finish today.

BILL LAING, WATERFORD: I've done 75 percent of it, I'd say. It's been pretty easy because we're giving money most of the time.

Questions and answers about the Sunshine bond issue

Wouldn't I pay less of a tax increase if the new elementary wasn't on the Sunshine Bond issue?

Surprisingly, the answer is no. While the new elementary is 22% of the Sunshine Bond, (approximately $12.47 million of the $52.5 million bond) the amount of tax increase to homeowners would be the same whether the new elementary had been included or not on the Sunshine Bond.

The reason: Clarkston schools will quickly reach its maximum allowable millage rate for debt levy (a total of 7 mills). Once we reach that maximum, we participate in the state funded school bond loan fund. So if the Sunshine Bond is $52.5 million or $40.03 million, the cost to homeowners is still 1.36 mills. A real bargain!

Isn't $12.47 million a lot of money for a new elementary?

Keep in mind that the estimated cost includes money for site acquisition and development. It's a hard cold fact that you can't build a school in 1997 for the amount of money it would have cost in 1992. The same is true of your own home. Construction inflation has been approximately 10% annually for the last two years. As construction for Detroit Public Schools bond issue begins, we expect an even greater increase in labor and resource costs.

Why don't you just admit this is a bad time for an election and put this bond issue back on the ballot at a more reasonable time of year, like March or June?

There is never a good time for an election. This was the first available date for an election after proper filing and bond application paperwork was completed.

An additional school election costs approximately $15,000 to run which includes time for the township staff (Independence Township administers our elections and maintains voter registration/records), ballots, election inspectors, equipment required for our elections, further draining our school operating fund.

We also need to get this bond approved so construction can begin. When the Sunshine Bond passes on December 9th, there is a chance if everything runs smoothly, that the remodeling and new elementary will be ready for use in the fall of 1998. Even waiting a month for this bond election will remove the possibility of the new elementary and additions being ready to open in the fall of 1998.

Do we really need specialty rooms at each of our elementaries?

Spearate rooms for art, music, science and support services make an incredible difference in the delivery of curriculum for your child. Art tables, drying racks, display areas increase the opportunity for projects and learning. Science hands-on materials can be stored in the science room allowing easy access, set up and space for exploration when students work on science projects. Additional storage is needed for our music program. Elementary students learn to read music, play percussion and/or recorders, and listen to music on tapes or video to gain greater awareness of music history and appreciation. A dedicated music room provides opportunities for movement and dance without disrupting the general education classroom.

Support services like math and reading support, speech, instructional support, social workers, academically talented support, etc. currently meet where space allows, sometimes this is in hallways or audio visual storage closets.

Do we really need a new elementary?

There are 25 portable classrooms at the elementary level. Even without added student growth these portable classrooms indicate the need NOW for additional space at the elementary level.

Why aren't we adding more classrooms to each building instead of building a new elementary?

Based on current research, the Clarkston Board of Education and administration have taken a position that mega-mall elementaries are not in the best interests of children. Elementary buildings are more effective and efficient in meeting the needs of students when they service under 500 students. In order to add enough classrooms to accomodate current and projected growth, our elementaries would end up housing 700 or more students.

Why are we adding cafetoriums at the elementary schools? Don't students currently eat in the gym?

Currently our elementary school kitchens are located down the hall from the gymnasiums. Students buying hot lunch carry their Styrofoam trays down the hallways and into the gym in order to eat. Adding a separate cafetorium would allow more time for students to eat their lunch. Lunches would be served conveniently from a kitchen in the cafetorium. Students would not disturb other classes by walking down the hall with their lunch trays. Gym classes and other activities using the gym could continue without impacting the lunch schedule including: large group instruction, grade level assemblies, program rehearsals on the stage, and voting.

CHS life

By Meghann Smith

It's a wonderful life

When most people think of high-schoolers they think that all we do is lay around and watch MTV. In actuality most teenagers aren't lazy at all and as a matter of fact they wish there were more hours in a day.

The average teenager awakes to the beeping of an alarm or the annoying voice of a radio announcer telling the world that it is 5:30 A.M. He or she showers, dresses, eats breakfast, and does any last-minute, procrastinated homework, all before five to seven when they have a date.

A date with all the other teenagers in their neighborhood who aren't lucky enough to have a ride. They meet at the street corner, rain or shine, sleet or snow and wait in below-zero temperatures for the bus headlights to appear on the horizon. Freezing, but definitely not anticipating the disco music on the bus radio or sitting three to a seat that is hardly big enough for two teenagers.

At 7:35 we are rushing into our first hour as the bell rings, not exactly enthusiastic about the start of yet another long school day. Now whoever believes that teenagers have all the time in the world obviously hasn't gone to high school within the last decade or so. After all, about seven hours of our day (six hours and fifty minutes to be exact) are spent behind a desk.

Now that the final bell has rung, you may spend another half an hour on the bus ride home or you may have sports practice at school. Or you may have to search through the parking lot for your car and then attempt to get out of the traffic-flooded parking lot. Once arriving home, many teenagers have to rush and get ready for another responsibility.

Now is the time that most teenagers report to their job. Whether it be flipping burgers or bagging groceries there has to be some way that they can make money for a future car or college tuition or just a new wardrobe. So, pretend you have an average work shift and work from four to seven or eight (you may start and end later because of sports). That means that the instant you get home you can rest, right?

I think not. When you get home you immediately hit the books. Trying to figure out the new equations in your math book and cramming for your history test at the same time as you are writing a lab report for science class is not exactly easy, especially when you have a speech to memorize for tomorrow's language arts class and a chart on your new verb conjugations due in your foreign language class.

So now most of your schoolwork is done and a little procrastination will assure that you can do your math before school and memorize your speech during lunch. It's bedtime, correct?

It's 9:30 and most adults would be expecting us to hit the sack but there's one important thing you've left to do. Begin your gluttony of entertainment. Simultaneously, you turn on "Seinfield" or "Party of Five" and tune into your favorite radio station; speed-dial your best friend or your mega-crush, preparing for a gab session, and if you have two phone lines you hook up with a chat room on the Internet; you also read the latest "Seventeen" or "Car and Driver" magazine. And adults say we can't do more than one thing at a time.

At 10:30 or 11 the parental units supply you with the "Value Of A Good Night's Rest" lecture and it's off to slumber-land, time to dream of sugar plum fairies (more like it's time to dream of an extra 40 minutes to listen to your new Coolie C.D. which you've had for nearly two weeks but have yet to hear in it's entirety).

After only five to six hours of sleep your dozing ears are shocked into awakening by the chords of "Sweet Dreams" and, YAWN, it's time to start all over again.

Kudos to choir

Dear editor,

Bravo! Bravo! To Miss Grayce Warren and the Clarkston High School Varsity Chorus for last week's outstanding performance with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra! What an honor to be chosen for this rare appearance at Orchestra Hall, complete with tuxedos...and what an example, in these days of budget cuts, of the importance of such a high quality fine arts program as we enjoy at CHS.

Music touches the soul and reminds us of our human potential, in a way that nothing else can.

Thanks for an incredible and memorable week!

Bond issue includes help for community, adult ed.

location all work is done in conventional classrooms—no science labs, no gym, no cafeteria. And they must compete for space with the childhood programs.

"Looking at it from an adult education standpoint, it's going to open up a lot of opportunities for curriculum delivery, and we're real excited about that," Allyn said.

Enrichment classes draw 1,000 to 1,500 students per semester. "At night our classes are all over the ball park at all the schools; our facilitators are running from school to school at night," Allyn said. She would like to add daytime enrichment classes and use the new building as a center for all enrichment activities, as well as a community center housing such other services as Youth Assistance and social services.

The other service community education offers is technical training for businesses. Companies hire the district to train their employees on computer programs, and the classes are customized to their needs. However, this fee-based service must also compete for space with everything else at the community education building, where computer labs are usually fully booked.

Allyn said she is not planning on turning CMS into the Taj Mahal ("although it's about the same age," she quipped). Rather, the bond issue will address structural needs for a changeover in use.

"It's going to need some work. Those basic things . . . are being taken care of in the bond. It could use some other things. But when we looked at it, we said 'What does it need (to be serviceable) . . . It'll be a very good building for us. I think the community will be pleased."

Support cheerleaders

Just a quick note to all the great fans who attend all the sports games.

I recently attended an out-of-town competition with the 3 cheerleading squads. As far as I am concerned it's a sport as well as everything else. These girls practice 3 or more hours a day too. They stand in the rain, snow and whatever comes along to support their team, but the fans certainly don't! Clarkston's support & cheering section consisted of the parents and a few football players. It was terrible compared to all the other squads!

I just think it would be real nice if we supported all of our teams. Many of the sheerleading parents sit through all the games & cheer the boys on even though we don't have a player on the team. So it would be nice if in December when they compete again, they had some support from their school.

Giving Thanks!

We would like to take this opportunity to thank the wonderful Clarkston-area merchants for their warm welcome on Thursday, November 21. The second-graders from Andersonville Elementary visited the downtown area and were treated to a talk about local government and toured NBD, the Clarkston News, the antique/gift shop and many other local shops. Each location graciously invited them in and shared their knowledge of Clarkston with the children.

Thanks to the beautiful maps provided by the Clarkston Historical Society, our parents/tour guides were able to accurately locate all the sights important to our study of the Clarkston/Independence Township area! We can't wait for next year's visit!

Bond a bargain

Dear Editor,

The Sunshine Bond proposal (a.k.a. Phase III Bond Proposal) is good news for students in Clarkston, and good cents for parents and community members.

First and foremost we must deal with the growing number of students here in our school district. That we are overcrowded and gaining more students should surprise no one who has sat in church and seen the unbelievable numbers of children who come forward for the children's time. There are 25 portables at the elementary level alone.

But beyond the capacity issue, we must deal with the disparities and variation in learning opportunities that dogs our teachers and students from building to building. The Sunshine Bond will address these disparities and allow every child, no matter what school they attend, to receive the fullest measure our quality curriculum has to offer.

But the best news is, this bond is a bargain! $52.5 million in bonds for just a 1.36 mill increase.

Ladies end season with overtime loss

Lake Orion wins in playoff

By BRAD MONASTIERE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

The Clarkston girls varsity basketball team was literally inches away from a breathtaking victory against Lake Orion Nov. 19.

But senior center Allison Richards' last-second 3-point shot rimmed in and out as regulation time expired in the team's district playoff game. The Dragons went on to outscore the Wolves 10-0 in the overtime period to pull out a 43-33 win, ending Clarkston's season with a 10-11 record.

Richards' shot came on the tail end of a furious fourth-quarter rally which saw Clarkston come back from nine points down to tie the game at 33 with 1:05 left.

Three-pointers by Richards, junior forward Abby Wiley and junior guard Tiffany Honey brought the Wolves back and a rowdy Jungle to a fever pitch.

Clarkston had the ball with 6.8 seconds left when coach Larry Mahrle called a play for a last-second shot. Richards faked to get the defense up in the air, then took two steps back to the 3-point line and released a shot that appeared to be right on target. But the shot rattled inside the rim, then flew out, ending regulation.

"It was a good pass and a good look, it just didn't drop for us," Mahrle said. "It was a game of swings for us."

In the overtime session, Lake Orion's vaunted post players - senior Karen Chastian and sophomore Jennifer Johnson - went to work, converting offensive rebounds for layups and making crucial free throws. The pair combined for 29 points in the game for the Dragons.

After junior Georgia Senkyr fouled out, the Dragons surged, with Chastian making a turn-around jumper in the lane and Johnson grabbing two offensive rebounds for a score, giving Lake Orion all the points it needed. The low post defense of Senkyr and senior Allison Prudhomme helped to keep Clarkston in the game defensively, Mahrle said.

"We gave them too many second-chance shots;," Mahrle said. "That, and when they hit 21 free throws and we only shoot 11 total, made the difference."

Honey led Clarkston with six points, while senior Sue Naboychik had five points and seven steals. Mahrle said the entire team gave a terrific effort in this spirited game.

"It was a tough loss, but we finished strong and never gave up," he said. "I'm looking forward to next year and I'm excited about our prospects."

Clarkston got off to a strong start in the game, taking an 8-3 lead early in the first quarter. The defense was forcing Lake Orion into bad passes and badly missed shots, while the offense was its usual patient self.

Both defenses then settled down in the second quarter, each playing very well. Both teams forced jump ball situations almost every possession, but the Clarkston offense never could get in a rhythm, until the final five minutes, when the 3-point barrage almost saved the game.

In the penalty box

With Brad Monastiere

In Baseball ; Out Juwan

Is Wayne Fontes on his ninth life yet? I guess his week in the penalty box helped to push that field goal wide right in the Seattle game. Alas, his luck may have run out after that public beating his team took in Chicago Sunday. That being said, let's see who's in trouble and who is out of my penalty box this week, tune titles courtesy of the Doors.

Break On Through: Juwan Howard of the Washington Bullets.

Howard, a 23-year-old All-Star basketball player, recently ran afoul of police when he was arrested for drunk driving at 3:45 a.m. outside a night club. Normally, an offense such as this is grounds for some down time in the box. That's not the case with Howard, however.

Howard has been known in his short career for his considerable charity work in the Washington area. He always makes it a point to spend time in burn centers and children's hospitals, making some young kid's day with a visit. He made visits just like that when he was at the University of Michigan, befriending an 11-year-old boy struck with cancer.

This work, in my book, gives Howard considerable benefit of the doubt. Now, he did get caught driving while intoxicated, he admitted as much. But he was a man and accepted the mistake he made. He took full responsibility for what he did and apologized to just about everyone but me. Too often, when coddled and rich athletes get in trouble (see Michael Irvin, J.R. Rider, Albert Belle) they point fingers, blaming everyone under the sun for their problems. Well my sixth-grade teacher taught me when you point at someone else, three fingers are pointing right back at you. Go ahead, try it.

What I like about Howard is his work ethic and unassuming personality, and now you can add maturity to that list. Hey, most young people make mistakes. But it takes a man to accept thosemistakes and become a better person. You can bet on Howard doing just that.

When the Music's Over: Major League Baseball.

This is an organization that somehow finds a way to make itself look dumb and dumber all the time. The players have a whining, sniveling talking head (Don Fehr) who would steal from his mother if the money went straight into the players' pockets. The owners constantly bemoan their miserable fate, how they are losing so much money under this "impossible" labor agreement. So what do they do? Hardline owner Jerry Reinsdorf goes out and drops $55 million on the aforementioned Belle, a man just as known for his R-rated tirade against TV reporters as his mammoth home runs. Apparently, the current labor deal can't be all bad if you have Ft, Knox to hand over to someone, eh Jerry?

Baseball needs someone who can bring owners and players onto the same page. Someone who can put a cap on the ridiculous salaries going around. Unfortunately, baseball appears satisfied with running itself into the ground, playing third fiddle in the American sports scene, perhaps fourth, with the growth in hockey in all parts of the country. It really is a tragedy, considering baseball's seamingly unbreakable hold on our country's heritage. Well that hold has been broken, many times over and it will take a long time to repair, thanks to the pig-headed brain surgeons who currently call the shots.

I nominate Hank Aaron to be the new commissioner of baseball. What are his qualifications you ask?

First of all, he is a living link to baseball's great past. He owns perhaps the most cherished record in the sport - career home runs. In addition, he has spent much of his time since his playing days involved in community relations with the Atlanta Braves. This is key since baseball's image with the public is almost as bad as Gary Hart's after a little "monkey business."

Ahhh, that feels better. I would be happy to hear your thoughts on my choices on who goes in the box each week and who stays out. Call us here and we'll have some fun. Catch you at the games.

Wolves dominate in opening hockey game

By BRAD MONASTIERE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

In its much-anticipated debut performance, e Clarkston varsity hockey team removed all the ama early and often.

Three first-period goals set the tone for a ominating opening game for the Wolves as they oundly defeated Bloomfield Hills Lahser 8-0 in aturday's first ever varsity hockey game.

The game, complete with a ceremonial first rop of the puck by school superintendent Dr. Al Roberts and a near capacity crowd, was all Clarkston asthe Wolves exercised total mastery over the Knights. Lahser could only manage a handful of quality scoring chances, while Clarkston won every battle for loose pucks and controlled the play the entire game.

Freshman forward Andy Cote made school history with the first goal, coming on a wraparound shot just 1:44 into the game. He took a pass from sophomore defenseman Lewis Lanway, cut behind the net and stuffed the puck past Lahser goaltender Justin Holmes.

That was all the scoring the Wolves needed, thanks to the perfect play of goalie Ryan Hogan, who stopped all 14 shots he faced.

Clarkston coach Rick Rowden said he was happy with the team's performance, considering it was the team's first game.

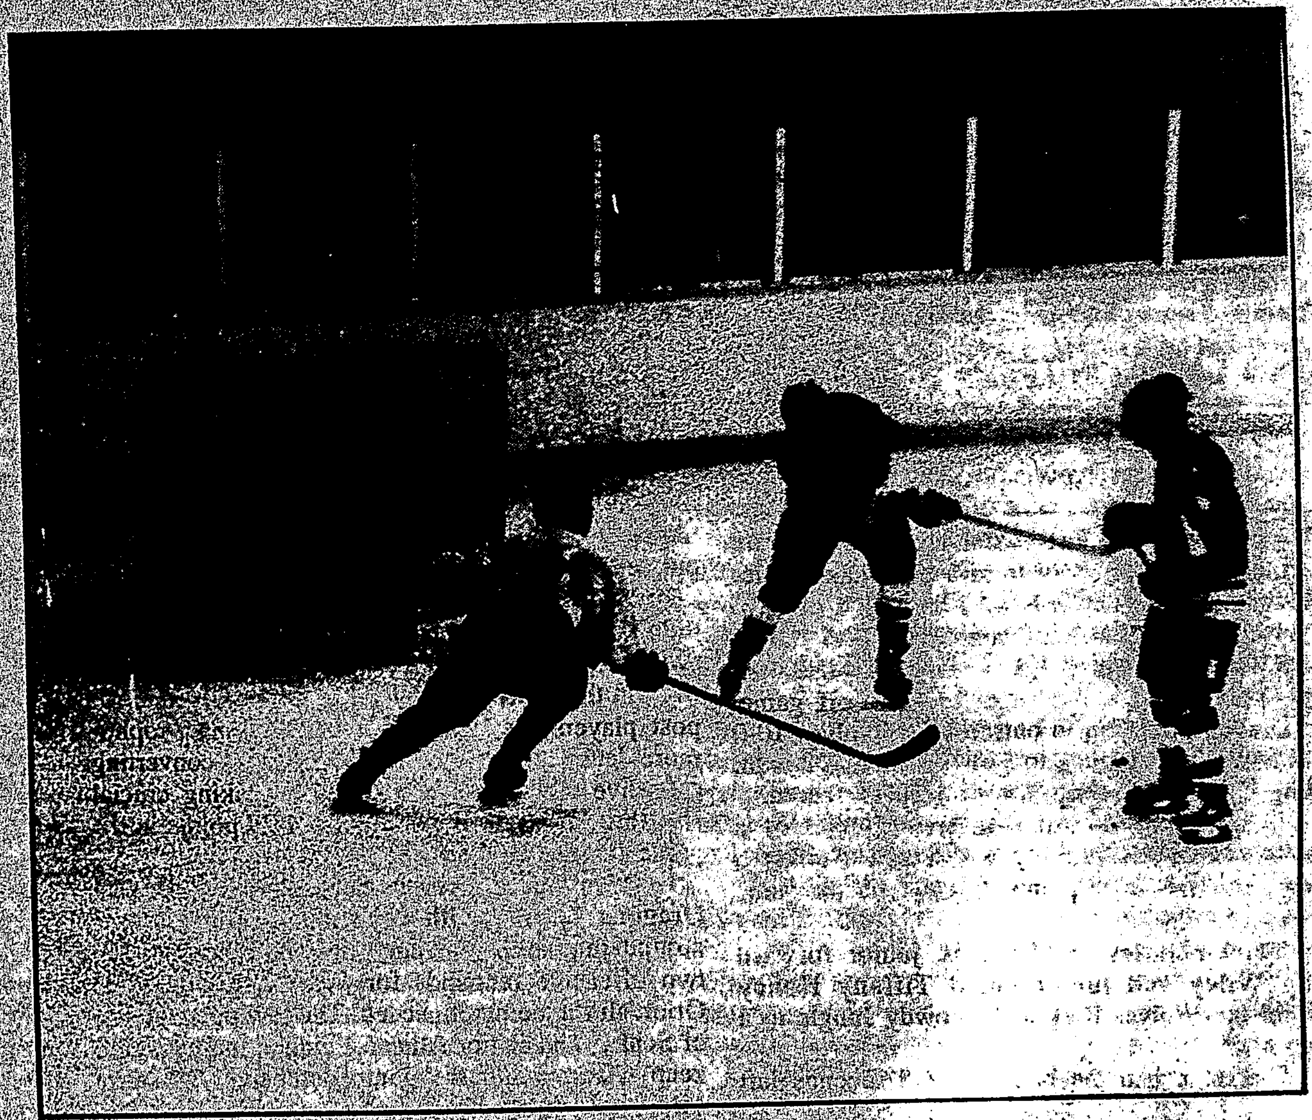
"Well, I was pleased we won," he said. "We showed great desire and hustle. We were a little jittery from all the pregame hoopla, but I was happy with how we came out."

Cote led all players with four points in the game, adding three assists to his first-period goal. Freshman Anthony Facione scored two goals and assisted on another, while junior Ryan Peters tallied twice and sophomore Bret Postal had two assists.

Also making the scoresheet for Clarkston were sophomore D.J. Thomas (2 assists), sophomore Ben Gray (1 goal), senior Marcus Johnson (1 assist), sophomore Ron Wells (1 goal), junior Steve Zulinski (1 goal) and junior Josh Babe (1 assist).

"Offensively, we did very well," commented Rowden. "Our three lines just overpowered them, but sometimes we tried too much for the fancy pass instead of taking the shot.

"But we will keep growing as a team. We will be taking little steps each week and keep improving."



Clarkston's Ryan Peters (8) makes an effort for the puck in the team's first ever varsity game Saturday night. Peters scored two of the Wolves' eight goals in the 8-0 win.

Top gun wife dethrones husband's trophy

BY EILEEN McCARVILLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

No one would ever picture Kelly Stonerock in a neon-orange hunter's outfit. Or caked with mud and dirt.

Yet, as the dainty blonde carefully lifts a 9-point buck's head out of her car truck — being ever so careful not to spoil her elegant periwinkle suit — she throws a saucy look over her shoulder and bats her cover girl lashes. "I always tell everybody you can be a lady and a deer hunter too."

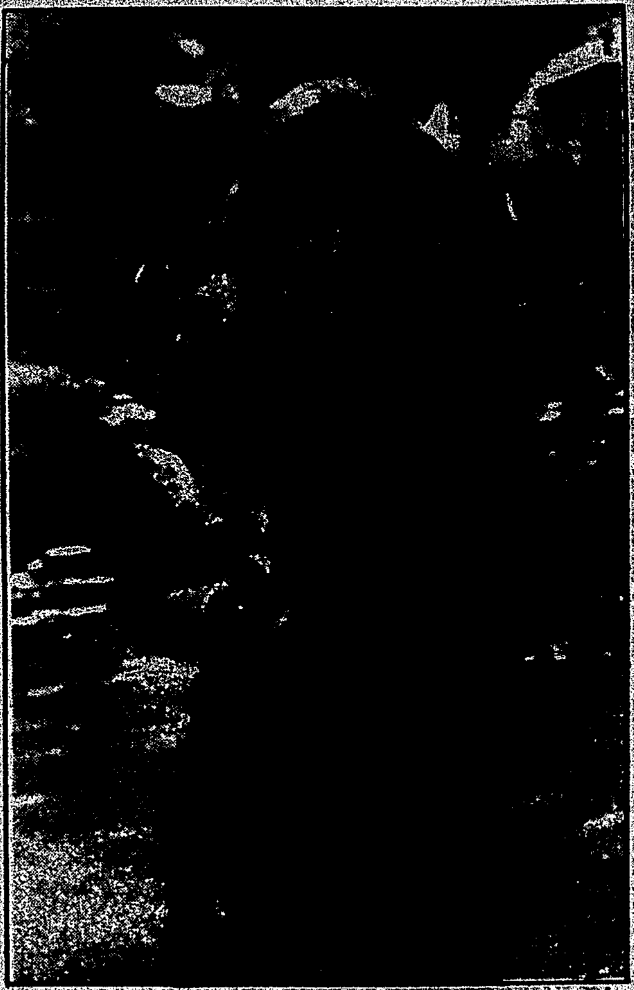
While her husband and several male relatives bonded during a UP hunting weekend, Stonerock was lolling around deservedly after killing the animal within two hours of the opening of rifle and shotgun season on her grandmother's property in Clarkston.

A Goodrich resident who works and grew up here, Stonerock had lined up a babysitter for her two young sons for the entire weekend. But at 7:50 a.m., she took the animal with a 22-caliber shotgun from 50 yards away.

It wasn't her first capture. Since husband Jeff introduced her to the sport four years ago, Stonerock has shot a buck every season. One other was taken with a shotgun, and two with bow and arrow. But this one, in addition to the 9 points or tines of his antlers, has a 22 1/2-inch outside antler spread.

"I'm told there are girls and guys who will hunt 20 years to get a buck like that," she says.

An avid sportswoman who coaches and plays softball and skis, Stonerock sees deer hunting as just another sport, and a profitable one.



Kelly Stonerock poses with her prize possession — a 9-point buck she shot opening day.

"What other sport can you enjoy and also supply your family with a lean, healthy venison meal?" she asks. She also likes the tranquility. "I like hunting because most other sports have a tendency to get me worked up. To excel in hunting, I have to slow down, relax and concentrate. It's a wonderful sport to enjoy after a long, stressful day."

Though upstaged, her husband didn't pout over her success. In fact the two betted she'd hit a better buck to replace his champion over the fireplace — now resigned to a staircase spot.

Though his is a 10-pointer, Stonerock says hers tops it because other factors figure in the scoring.

"My husband was my teacher. Now he jokes with me. He says, 'The student has surpassed the teacher,'" she says with a laugh — and just a hint of smugness. "My goal was to dethrone a beautiful 10-point he had hanging over our fireplace. I succeeded it dethroning it this year."

SAVE TAX ON HOUSE SALE
$125,000 SAVED!!
YOU CAN EXEMPT $125,000 of the profit from the sale of your home — but only once.
RELO
QUESTION: How can a homeowner save tax dollars on the sale of his home?
ANSWER: There are two big ways to save taxes on the sale. If you or your spouse are over age 55, the IRS allows a onetime tax exemption of $125,000 of the profit on your primary residence if you have lived there for three out of the last five years prior to the sale.
Most sellers defer paying taxable gains on their homes by buying another principal residence of equal or higher value. Your new home must be purchased within two years before or after the sale of your old home. If the replasement home costs less than the one you sold, the profit difference may be taxable.

Offensive Most Improved Player: Frack

Defensive Most Improved Player: Dan Neubeck

SKIN DEEP

by Scott Friedman, D.O.

THE UV INDEX

The UV Index was developed to help those who venture outdoors to anticipate the amount of ultraviolet rays that they will be exposed to during peak sunlight hours. Reported in weather forecasts, the UV Index exposure levels according to numerical risk categories. A rating between 0 and 2 indicates minimal UV exposure, while 3-4 is low, 5-6 is moderate, 7-9 is high, and 10 or greater is very high. This clear-cut rating system can help outdoor enthusiasts to plan to protect themselves adequately through the use of sunscreens. It may also help dispel some misconceptions such as a widely held misperception that clouds protect us from UV rays. In fact, partly cloudy skies do not reduce UV exposure by much at all. It takes an overcast or rainy day to reduce the amount of UV light that hits the earth below by 50% or more.

Excessive sun exposure cause serious skin ailments - protect yourself. As in all areas of your health needs, your dermatologist feels is important to have informed patient participation. By your awareness and understanding of your particular problem, and the treatment necessary, everyone works as a team. Our goal is to help you, the patient, achieve and maintain healthy skin. We are conveniently located at 6330 Sashabaw, Clarkston (625-0692); 3003 Baldwin Rd. Orion (391-9599).

P.S. If at all possible, stay out of the sun during those hours when your shadow is shorter than you are.

Bridge Valley parcel deeded to ILC

BY EILEEN McCARVILLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Henry Ford's ideals will live on because of the tireless work of Independence Land Conservancy preservationists.

The late auto magnate, a strong preservationist himself, once owned some farm land that has become part of the Bridge Valley development off of Holcomb Rd.

On Nov. 22, land conservancy members met with Troy-based KIRCO Development Corp. representatives to sign a deed that donates 50 acres in Bridge Valley to the ILC. The action preserves a section of the development as it is forever.

According to member Mel Vaara, who serves on the ILC's board of directors, the idea sprouted from a casual lunch with landowner and Clarkston physician Dr. James O'Neill.

Vaara said he then invited the doctor to an ILC meeting which became "very productive," O'Neill agreed to donate the 50 acres in Bridge Valley which is part of a large valley that stretches from the I-75's Dixie Highway exit in Springfield Township to Davisburg Rd.

The valley's ecosystem features a stream, wetlands and swamps and includes three rare varieties of plants: white lady slipper, English sundew and mat huhly.

The acquisition is an important accomplishment for the land conservancy, said ILC president Tom Stone.

"It's exciting for us because it's our first partnership effort with Springfield Township ... and the first step in the preservation of this entire valley," he said.

KIRCO vice president Mathew Kiriluk noted the teamwork and said the preservation is also an amenity for Bridge Valley residents.

"It represents a lot of hard work and effect between the public and private sides and the land conservancy ... You can work together for something that's good for everybody.

"People come out here for a reason. They enjoy the peace and the natural serenity. It's important that we be sensitive to those desires," he said.

Michigan Municipal League.

- The council will accept bids on a possible new insurance carrier, to see if it can get a better deal for the city, Pappas said.
- The council held off on making changes to its gypsy moth spray program, saying since only one tree in the city was infected, there was no need to be part of Oakland County's helicopter spray program.

Academic achiever

Dan Campbell

NAME: Dan Campbell

GPA: 3.856

PARENTS: Anne and Michael Campbell of Independence Township.

PLANS: "To attend college. I've been accepted to Michigan Tech, Alma and Ohio but I'm still going to apply to Lawrence Tech. I'm going into engineering. You can make real good money coming out of college and you don't have to go six to eight years. And I like math and science."

EXTRA-CURRICULAR ACTIVITIES: Executive board of Blue and Gold, senior class officer, football team, National Honor Society, Future Problem Solving, Youth in Government. Also enjoys listening to music and hanging out with friends.

FAVORITE SUBJECT AND TEACHER: Physics, psychology and math teacher Debbie Zonca, whose classes he's taken for three years.

JOB: Busboy at Mr. B's in Clarkston.

PETS: A dog named Daisy and two cats, Murphy and Quincy.

CHURCH: St. Daniel's.

BEST SCHOOL MEMORY: "Helping design and decorate for last year's senior prom. It felt good being with a large group of friends decorating and seeing our finished product."

MAJOR CONCERNS FOR HIS GENERATION: "We tend to throw caution into the wind. We get too caught up in certain issues but can ignore others. Also, it bothers me the number of people, of all ages, that chose not to vote in the past election. I know I just can't wait."

Campbell worked on Pat Nowak's congressional campaign as part of his Advanced Placement government class and was appalled on election night, as he watched the returns come in, how few people voted. Nevertheless, he found he enjoyed working on the campaign stuffing flyers, manning a phone bank and putting up signs.

"I enjoyed it. I'd probably do it again . . . It made me feel like I did a little more" working on a big race. He chose Nowak because he was local and a Republican. "He shares my views on things."

PROUDEST LIFE ACCOMPLISHMENT: "Tie. Playing for the 9-0 football team, receiving the Youth Recognition Award earlier this year." Campbell was nominated by assistant principal Melissa Kentner White for his work with Blue and Gold.

CLARKSTON HIGH SCHOOL IS . . . : "a place full of opportunities to find yourself. The more you get involved the more chances you have to find something you like . . Just getting involved helps you know what you want to do."

Milestones

- Several Clarkston teachers have been selected for the 1996 Who's Who Among America's Teachers. All the teachers selected were named to the list by students listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students. - Three Clarkston students received degrees from Western Michigan University at the end of summer session. Mark Fauss received a BS in recreation. James Hall II, son of James and Elena Hall, received a BBA in management. Holly Walker, daughter of Donald and Carolyn Walker, received a BA in English and Spanish.
- Kellie Shelton of Clarkston received her MAT in early childhood education from Saginaw Valley State University in August.
- Daniel Manthei, Maxium Morrow and Scott Irwin have been invited to serve a two-year term on the Oakland Community College Vehicle Body Technology Program Advisory Committee. The committee will advise the college on course content and instructional equipment. Manthei is principal of Oakland Technical Center Northwest in Clarkston. Irwin is an auto body instructor at OTCNW. Morrow is a retired former owner of Morrow-Collision, Inc. of Clarkston.
- Junior Andrew Soltes of Clarkston made the Honor Roll at St. Mary's Preparatory School in Orchard Lake. The honor requires a 3.7 or better GPA.
- Simone Lutz, a student at Kalamazoo College, is a cast member in "Joe Hill," a new play about the legendary labor rebel and songwriter. The play made its world premier Nov. 14 at the college with an all-student cast. Lutz, a freshman, is the daughter of Christina and Fred Lutz of Clarkston and is studying political science.
- Stephanie Seltzer and Lisa Vallad, both of Clarkston, are among the new members of the Lee Honors College at Western Michigan University this fall.

Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes was sitting in his library, one day when Franklin D. Roosevelt called, a few days after his inauguration in 1933, and found him reading Plato, at the age of ninety-two. "Why do you read Plato, Mr. Justice?" "To improve my mind, Mr. President," Holmes replied.

Clarkston girls star in Nutcracker ballets

BY EILEEN McCARVILLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Kacie Colbert (seated on floor, center) dances the prime part of Clara in Lakes Area Civic Ballet Company's production. Erin Lamont (back row in white tutu) stars as the Snow Queen.

Visions of sugar plums dance in their heads, and through their toes, as seven local youngsters prepare for the Nutcracker ballet this season.

Besides the numerous companies that offer the charming Christmas classic, two area ballet schools have turned out students who dance everything from a gumdrop to the coveted role of Clara, the young girl who is whisked off to the enchanting kingdom of a handsome prince after she frees him from the dreaded throes of a giant Mouse King.

Rochester School of Dance's Oakland Festival Ballet presents four performances at Macomb Center for the Performing Arts, Dec. 5 and 6, with Russian composer Peter Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker Suite" music brought to life through the Warren Symphony Orchestra directed by Dr. David Daniels. Choreographed by director Cornelia Sampson, it's the school's eleventh annual presentation.

Starring in the lead roles are OFB dancer Julie Hawk as Clara, and guest artists Lawrence Hernandez, formerly of the Cincinnati and Milwaukee ballets, as the Nutcracker Prince and Shawn Black as the Sugar Plum Fairy and Jonathan Fagan as her Cavalier, both from the American Ballet Theatre. For more information call the Performing Arts' box office at (810) 286-2222, Ticketmaster at (810) 645-6666 or the ballet school at (810) 652-3117.

Waterford's Lakes Area Civic Ballet Company presents a public performance Dec. 14 at 7 p.m. inside West Bloomfield High School's auditorium on Orchard Lake Rd. Christine Bove, who danced professionally with the Arizona Ballet Company, is serving as ballet mistress for the school. The part of the Nutcracker Prince will be danced by Juan Sanchez, a professional dancer from Miami.

Special rates are available for community organizations purchasing 15 tickets or more. Tickets may be purchased at Terri Newman's Dance Shoppe, 7330 Highland Rd., Waterford or by calling (810) 666-1971.

The young dancers are profiled below.

Oakland Festival Ballet Company

It was their older sister Eva, 13 and an eighth-grader at Clarkston Middle School, who motivated Elizabeth Trapp, 11, and younger sibling Janette, 8, to dance.

Now all three sisters perform in "The Nutcracker," with Eva starring in three key roles this year. Of the three, which require changing her costume thrice — from Snow Queen, to Arabian Princes and then into a frilly tutu for a Rosebud in "Waltz of the Flowers" — the Arabian princess is her favorite.

And Eva looks the part with her dark doe eyes and long brown hair. "It's because I get into the character and it's really fun." She plans to become a professional ballerina someday and, with stars in her eyes, speaks about how she'd eventually like the dance the part of the Sugar Plum Fairy. She's played many roles but she never gets tired of the ballet. "You almost want it to stay longer. You hate when it's over," she says.

Though Elizabeth and Janette play a soldier and a mouse, respectively, they won't be fighting each other because Elizabeth performs one night and Janette the other.

Up from being a Party Boy two years in a row, Elizabeth, a CMS sixth-grader, enjoys being a soldier. "I think I like it because I get to do more," she says.

Janette, who's a second grader at Clarkston Elementary, is looking forward to her mouse role. Though the scampering critters are oh-so-charming for the audience, it's a feat to stay comfortable. "It's hot," says Janette about the cumbersome mouse head.

It's become a family affair for the Trapps and something they look forward to every year. Mom

Christmas fun can happen right here at home

Though the calendar is filling up quickly with great holiday events, you don't have to travel far to get in on the fun.

On Friday, Dec. 6 merchants in downtown Clarkston will sponsor "Caroling around the Christmas Tree" at the corner of Washington and Main streets beginning at 7 p.m. Cider and doughnuts will be served.

Then on Sunday, Dec. 15 Independence Township Parks and Recreation will sponsor a day at Bay Court Park, which will be transformed into the North Pole for the day. Included will be entertainment, horse-drawn sleigh rides, refreshments and a visitor from the North Pole. Hours are 2-5 p.m. and tickets are $5 per person or $20 per family, including a photo. Advance tickets are required; call 625-8223 for more information.

At the library, the fun takes place Saturday, Dec. 7 when the Clarkston Area Optimist Club teams up with the library youth services department for their annual celebration. Two sessions will be offered for kids ages 3-11; 10:30 a.m.-noon and 2-3:30 p.m.

Included are music, a magic show by Ming the Magnificent, a gift book for everyone, cookies and a special North Pole visitor. Admission is by free ticket only; tickets are available at the library. One adult per family due to space restrictions. Photos with Santa will be available for $1.

Call 625-2212 for more information.

Fourth-graders from Bernice Rynders' class at Andersonville Elementary School pose with the food they and their schoolmates collected for Lighthouse North for Thanksgiving.

Kids help Lighthouse

Students at Andersonville Elementary School pitched in to help Lighthouse Clarkston for Thanksgiving.

Under the leadership of Bernice Rynders' fourth-grade class, the students gathered hundreds of non-perishable food items, which were delivered to Lighthouse on Thursday, along with money collected for turkeys.

"We've sponsored this for a number of years," Rynders said. "The response of the kids is really great."

Amy Martocci's class brought in 205 items, and Rynders' class brought in nearly 200. "Some classes set up their own goals," she said. "But we didn't try to figure out who brought in the most . . . I'm really pleased."

The students will do it all over again for Christmas.

Frozen turkey gifts need safe handling

One of the most common questions that the Food and Nutrition hotline gets every Thanksgiving is about the safety of using a turkey that has been received as a gift at work, says Sylvia Treitman, home economist for the Michigan State University Extension Service - Oakland County. Often these turkeys are left at room temperature all day until closing time, thus causing a potential food poisoning problem. Turkeys should be kept in the refrigerator or freezer - never at room temperature.

If you receive a turkey at work, it should arrive solidly frozen and be immediately stored under refrigeration or in the freezer depending on how soon you will be using it. "Keeping is in your car, desk, or other area is looking for trouble," says Treitman. If there is no refrigerator space at work, here are some suggestions:

- Delegate someone to make a quick trip home to find available freezer space.
- Purchase large bags of ice at the nearest source and pack in a cardboard box tightly sealed.
- Remember the safe way to defrost a turkey is in the refrigerator - room temperature is not safe. The outer area may warm up to a dangerous temperature to cause the growth of bacteria, even if the inside remains frozen.
- Don't keep the turkey in your car. It is very difficult to know if the temperature has remained cold enough to keep it safe all day!

If you have other questions on safe turkey handling or other food safety, food and nutrition questions call the Food and Nutrition hotline at 858-0904.

Dueling 'Nutcrackers' feature Clarkston kids

Dawn sews a lot of the costumes and dresses many of the young performers backstage. Their dad helps out too, doing loading and other chores. "In fact, he took a whole week of vacation so he can help do stuff," Dawn laughs.

Allison Hoddinott, 8, a third-grader at Clarkston's Cedar Crest Academy, is in her second year with the production. Before her role as a mouse this year, she was cast as an angel.

"Last year was my first time. I was pretty nervous. I had to lead the angels. We were all little kids. One of us always went up too early or too late," she admits.

This year's steps are more complicated and her pink ballet shoes are spray-painted gray for the part. "It's neat," she says with obvious awe. "You look up there and say, 'I've been up there only a few minutes ago.'"

Lakes Area Civic Ballet Company

Two area Clarkston girls star in this production. Clarkston High School student Erin Lamont is dancing the role of the Snow Queen and Kacie Colbert, 13, a Sashabaw Middle School eighth-grader, stars as Clara. Her younger sister Jennie, 11, also performs in the production.

It's a dream come true for Kacie, who previously danced parts that include a gumdrop, a candy cane, Spanish dancer, snow(flake) and harlequin.

"I was surprised when I got it. It's so exciting," she says. She has no fear of her starring part, which is demanding. Kacie appears in just about every scene — except for part of the second act where she gets to kick back and watch the performers in the Kingdom of Sweets.

"I've performed before in solo and on stage. I'm pretty comfortable up there. I like to work the audience."

Her younger sister Jennie, a fifth-grader from North Sashabaw Elementary, is dancing dual parts as a candy cane and a harlequin. Unlike most of the young performers, Jennie's experience inside the costumes is the opposite.

"Usually I get so nervous I just get cold,' she says with a smile.

Being hit by a car last year on his way to school hasn't slowed Derek Weddle down much.

Derek, 13 and his sister Danielle, 10, are once again conducting their annual holiday clothing drive for Oakland County Children's Village. This is the eighth year they have collected hats, mittens and socks.

For the last three years, the kids have been assisted by Clarkston Rotary and have been able to purchase toys, gift certificates and personal hygiene items thanks to the alliance.

This year, the dynamic duo are also accepting new board games, basketballs, footballs, model kits, children's underwear, brushes and combs and stocking stuffers.

Derek, who attends Clarkston Middle School, and Danielle, who attends Clarkston Elementary, were originally inspired by their grandfather, the late Delton Lohff, to begin the clothing drive. They say last year, which was dedicated to their grandfather's memory, was their biggest year so far.

"We are truly hoping to expand this project, with a future goal of sponsoring our own party for the children at the Village," they said in a letter sent out to local businesses and individuals. The letter also said this year they would like to donate some items to children in pediatrics at Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital, where Derek was hospitalized after his accident.

"They had nothing to do when he was there," said his mom, Beverly. "So he wanted to do something." POH is interested in used Nintendo games in good conditions.

Otherwise, only new items are being sought, along with cash donations. Checks may be sent to the Clarkston Rotary Club, PO Box 43, Clarkston, MI 48347, attention of the Children's Village Christmas Project.

Items may be dropped off at several locations around town: Kieft Engineering, 5852 S. Main; Pete's Coney, 6678 Dixie; the Independence Township Library on Clarkston Rd.; and Bonnie's Pet Parlour, 5883 Dixie in the Independence Commons shopping center.

Deadline is Dec. 18.

Derek had surgery in August on his leg and could be facing plastic surgery in the future, his mother said. He's grown taller in the last year and is still concerned about safety for children crossing M-15.

For more information on the Christmas drive, call 625-0457.

Garden Club's greens market returns Dec. 4-5

About 30 members of the Clarkston Farm and Garden Club gathered Nov. 4 at Clarkston United Methodist Church for a work bee in preparation for the club's annual Christmas Greens Market, Dec. 4-5 at the Masonic Temple.

Featured at the sale will be live and dried wreaths, swags, table arrangements and more, including evergreen roping. The club ordered French ribbons and many other beautiful things to incorporate in the arrangements, according to Maureen Moultrup, wreath and roping co-chair. "We start in September taking orders," Moultrup said. "Our fresh arrangements, there are none that compare. This is a really creative group."

Wreaths come in three sizes and all include handmade bows. Roping is available in 25-, 50- and 75-foot lengths.

Carol Rademacher, co-chair of the wreaths and roping committee, advised shoppers to come early. "Last year we got very low on supplies," she said. The sale, now in its fifth year, is very popular.

"It just kind of started out as word of mouth," Moultrup said. "We have grown to where people expect our phone call in September."

All the money raised goes toward the club's scholarship and community beautification work. Hours are 10 a.m.-8 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 4 and 10-4 Thursday, Dec. 5. The Masonic Temple is located at the northeast corner of Main and Washington streets.

Habitat breaks round on first house

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY
Clarkston News Editor

Freddie Lewis has lived next door to a vacant lot on Martin Luther King Blvd. in Pontiac for seven years. He hoped one day to buy the lot himself, but with two small children and a layoff from his job, he was never able to do so.

So on Nov. 13, fighting off the flu and watching a crowd gather under rapidly falling daylight on the lot, he came out to find out what was going on. He ended up being introduced to a small crowd of volunteers from Habitat for Humanity of North Oakland, who said a few prayers of thanksgiving, then turned a shovel of dirt.

The event, which was attended by Pontiac Mayor Walter Moore and city councilman Everett Seay, marked the ceremonial groundbreaking for the Habitat affiliate's first house, and it had been a long time coming. Nevertheless, there was no grumbling about bureaucratic red tape, only thanks that the mission was about to get underway.

Based out of Calvary Lutheran Church in Clarkston and under the leadership of chairman of the board Carol Eberhardt, a Clarkston real-estate agent, the North Oakland affiliate of Habitat for Humanity became official last May. Ever since, with volunteers chomping at the bit to get going, they've been looking for a parcel of land to build their first house on.

Habitat for Humanity builds houses for those who could not otherwise afford home ownership. The homes are made more affordable because much of the materials and labor are donated and the loan is underwritten by Habitat, which charges no interest. Payments go back into a fund to underwrite the next house.

For this house, Pontiac's Mayor Moore and his wife have donated all the plumbing fixtures. The mayor said in a press release, "More than ever, you can see Pontiac being rebuilt. However, to keep the ball rolling, we will all have to roll up our sleeves and pitch in to help, in one way or another. Hopefully, we will all want to be part of this rebirth."

After the groundbreaking, excavation was expected to begin on the tiny lot within a few days. The hope is the house can be roughed in before winter sets in, allowing volunteers to work on the inside in relative comfort.

"I actually had a guy who wanted to start (digging) today," said Dave Force, chairman of the construction committee, who showed up at the groundbreaking in a white hard hat. He predicted the basement would be dug last weekend.

Eberhardt said that only days before, the project had been in need of $10,000. But a decision was made—a "leap of faith," she called it—to go ahead and purchase a vacant lot when no property could be donated that had a clear title attached to it. Then, just before the groundbreaking, a $10,000 donation was made in memory of a Clarkston man, Raymond Jarvis, who died recently.

Rev. Ken Benson, Michigan regional director for Habitat for Humanity, read from the Bible and offered encouragement to the new volunteers. Pointing out that the Detroit affiliate built 20 houses in a blitz build this year, he urged the North Oakland group to build 25 next year.

"This year there were close to 190 Habitat houses in Michigan," he said. "Next year our goal is 300." Then he added, "Our biggest problem isn't money, believe it or not . . . Our biggest problem is organizing our volunteers and training. Do a good job there and everything else will follow, and you'll be able to rebuild your community."

Richard Williams, a Clarkston resident who is director of Oakland County Community and Minority Affairs, praised Margaret Kiernan, chair of the site selection committee, for what he called her tirelessness and tenacity in finding the parcel of land. The two went through Oakland County land records trying to find a vacant lot that was free of encumbrances. Kiernan said earlier that most of the land that was available was tied up because it had gone back to the state because of unpaid taxes.

However, this piece came through in a bit of "serendipity," as Kiernan calls it. "I drove by a lot that had a (for sale) sign on it. I'd certainly been in the area before . . . It was meant to be."

Lewis said at first he wasn't so sure about having new neighbors, since his children, ages 6 and 8, often played on the land. Now, he says, they can play across the street at a nearby school.

"At first I was kind of resentful. I didn't think the lot was big enough (for a house). As the idea goes on I began to like it," he said. "Hopefully the neighbors will have some kids too."
