Husband-and-wife music teachers bring Detroit, Clarkston students together for exchange concert

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY

Clarkston News Editor

Joel Cooper has only been playing the violin for a few months. So he was a little intimidated when he found out he'd be performing a recital with other kids his age who've been playing for a few years.

But the atmosphere was one of pride, not competition when students from two Detroit elementary schools and two Clarkston elementary schools got together June 4 at North Sashabaw Elementary for what was billed as an "exchange concert."

What the students have in common, besides their age and the violin, is their music teachers. The Clarkston students are taught by Lois Richardson. The Detroit students are taught by her husband, Peter Richardson.

A total of 53 students, from Detroit's Rose and Brewer elementaries and Clarkston's Pine Knob and North Sash, took part in the concert. First they played variations on "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star" all together, then they played a series of pieces in smaller ensembles. It all came with very little rehearsal—about 15 minutes just before their audience arrived.

Peter Richardson said his students, in grades two through five, have violin class two times a week. He said children can start on violin younger than most other musical instruments.

"Band instruments are made for adults to play. But violins you can get for little kids," he said. "The earlier you can start them the better." Some of his students have been playing for as long as three years.

As for the Clarkston kids, this is the first year a string program has been available, and it was a pilot program at two schools. Since it began, the board of education gave formal approval to adding a string program to the district's thriving instrumental music program.

The Detroit kids may or may not find a string program in their higher grades, Peter Richardson said, depending upon which schools they attend in the years ahead. " A lot of (Detroit) middle schools don't have strings," he said. "So you hope that they're going to continue but you don't have control over it." He tries to steer his student to magnet schools that offer string programs.

Crigger, Sullivan elected as voters give thumbs up to bond

A proposal for a new elementary school and renovations at most existing buildings was narrowly approved by Clarkston voters Monday.

The $57,650,000 bond proposal passed 2,897-2,676. Results were received around 9:25 p.m. during the regularly scheduled board of education meeting. A similar proposal had failed in December with a smaller turnout.

Help Us Grow (HUG) co-chairperson Cheryl McGinnis attributed the difference to "election day activities. Our database had approximately 2,600 yes supporters. All our precincts were high throughout the going into the election, McGinnis said she was shocked when a cheer went up in the hall outside Monday night's meeting, signaling a positive outcome.

"I think parents in this community said 'We want this for our kids.' I know it wasn't just the parents, but it was the parents the major burden fell on."

She also credited new school superintendent Dr. Al Roberts. "Al sets that standard. We had to, as parents, get a wake-up call--his standards are higher than ours as parents?"

Roberts said he too had been feeling optimistic. "Cheryl and Penny (Shanks) and Dave (Meyer, cochairman with McGinnis) did a fabulous job. Dave Reschke (assistant superintendent) coordinating things from the central office viewpoint was fabulous.

Trucker visits Bailey Lake students who've followed her travels all year

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY

Clarkston News Editor

Principal Chris Turner's voice came over the loudspeaker in Cheryl Bailey's classroom at Bailey Lake Elementary School.

"There's a very large vehicle pulling into the north end of our driveway," he said. And Bailey's face lit up; her long-awaited visitor had arrived.

What followed was a meeting between two old friends, as well as the culmination of a year's worth of lessons for Bailey's class of fourth- and fifth-graders. For outside in the driveway was the 70-foot tractortrailer driven by Judy Salmons, also known as "Trucker Judy" to Bailey's students. The kids had been corresponding with Trucker Judy all year long.

Salmons is a former Clarkston resident whose son Jimmy, now 31, was one of Bailey's first students. The two women have stayed in touch over the years but hadn't seen each other since 1983 when Jimmy graduated, as best they could remember.

As Salmons tells it, she decided to take up her lifelong dream of being a truck driver five years ago. Then one day she heard about a program called "trucker buddies," where students kept in touch with truckers, and decided her old friend might be interested. She was.

"Just a year ago Judy called me from Florida (where she lives now in Leesburg)," Bailey said. "She was feeling melancholy one night.'

"I had been reading about a trucker buddy program and wondered if she was interested," Salmons said. "Cheryl stayed in touch with so many of her students. That's what's so great . . . None can beat this

Bailey recently suffered a stroke and was out of school for awhile. Salmons injured her back and was also out of commission for awhile, so the reunion was postponed longer than planned. On June 4 as Salmons entered Bailey's classroom and the two women got their first look at each other in 14 years, they opined as how their hair is now shorter and they both look a little different. The exchange prompted one student to wonder what his teacher had looked like back then.

As for the students, Salmons had each of their pictures with her on the road so she could memorize their faces. The students had a stack of 80 postcards she'd sent them from the road, as well as maps of the US where they'd plotted out her routes. They would write to Salmons on their computer, and she would write back, sometimes sending small gifts from around the Salmons explained that though she started her trucking career relatively late, "It's something I've always wanted to do. My dad told me when I was 8 I decided I wanted to be a truck driver."

"Ask me if I was surprised she started," Bailey said. "I wasn't."

Salmons and her road partner for the last two years, Pete Heffron, were in the Detroit area to deliver meat products to a Thorn Apple Valley site. When they left they were heading to Nashville with a load of paper. Generally they don't do much sight-seeing along the

"At times we'll have a couple days off but you're restricted because you don't have a car, and no one wants a truck in their yard," Salmons said.

"You only get to see what the windshield and the windows let you see," Heffron said. "This is a treat. You can't get off the back roads. We've got some beautiful country out there, but you've got to get off the interstate."

Cheryl Bailey's in the driver's seat; trucker Judy Salmons is beside her in the passenger seat.

The drivers let the students climb inside the cab of their rig, pull the rope that produced a loud horn blast,

Circuses are coming to town

The Clarkston area will become circus central during the next few weeks as not one but two circuses come to the area.

The Walker Brothers Circus is coming to the Springfield Oaks Activity Center in Davisburg Thursday, June 19. The event is sponsored by the Davisburg Rotary and the Oakland county 4-H Fair. There will be two performances, 5:30 and 7:30 p.m. The public is also welcome to attend the tent raising that morning, around 9 a.m.

The Walker Brothers Circus is described as an "old time" country circus. It's all under one tent, with live music, trained animals, clowns, aerialists and horseback riders.

Tickets are $6 in advance, $8 at the gate. Special reduced tickets are available from Davisburg Rotary members. For ticket information call 625-8133.

If you can't make the Walker Brothers Circus but need to get that sawdust-and-greasepaint experience, hang on. The Kelly-Miller Circus is coming to town July 1.

The K-M Circus is sponsored by Independence Township Parks and Recreation and will be held at Clintonwood Park. Showtimes are 4:30 and 7:30 p.m.

The 1997 edition of the show feature a new, higher tent, which allows for more dazzling aerial acts. A new "European style" format debuted in 1995. A midway will open one hour prior to the shows. And as always, the public is invited to the tent raising that morning.

Tickets are $7 for adults, $5 for children under 12 in advance ($9/$6 at the gate). Tickets are now on sale at the Clarkston Burger King, dairy Dream, Bay Court Park, Clintonwood Park and Independence Township Hall. Call 625-8223 for more information

Roberts gets contract extension

After a first year on the job that saw a successful bond proposal and nothing but compliments, Clarkston school superintendent Dr. Al Roberts got a raise and a contract extension Monday night.

By a unanimous vote of the board Monday night, Roberts received a two-year contract extension, taking his contract through June, 2001. He also received a five-percent salary hike, taking him to $105,000 a year.

"I make that recommendation both on reviewing various contracts and salaries in existence," said board president Bill McGregor. "I do believe Dr. Roberts' performance more than merits this type of increase."

Board members praised Roberts' focus on children, his interest in improving curriculum, and his ability to communicate with the community.

"You've been very successful in a very short period of time," said trustee Mary Ellen McLean. "I think the salary adjustment is appropriate. We don't want to lose you." -

McGregor read a letter he had composed regarding Roberts, but it was interrupted by the news that the bond proposal on Monday's ballot had passed. Vice president Janet Thomas expressed the hope that now that the campaign is over, Roberts will have more time to spend with children, one of the strengths he was hired McGregor said the board will set goals for Roberts for the coming school year, and they will be announced at a future meeting.

Roberts said he had enjoyed the past year in Clarkston. "When you have the confidence and support of your school board all year, you can move mountains," he said. "We've really enjoyed being part of the Clarkston community."

Phase II of Vision 2020 to be presented

BY EILEEN McCARVILLE Clarkston News Staff Writer

It's been a long time coming, but Independence Township's Vision 2020 plan is finally nearing comple-

At the June 3 township board meeting, planner Dick Carlisle announced a public meeting on Phase II, the Vision 2020 Strategic Plan, which will be presented Thursday, June 19 at 6:30 p.m. at the new township fire station at 6500 Citation Dr. Displays will be available for viewing.

The Strategic Plan is the final document which was compiled from Background Studies (Phase I) incorporated from several study groups which identified issues, goals and strategies on how they want the township to look in the future.

The following areas were scrutinized: residential, commercial and industrial land use; transportation; utilities; community facilities and services; and historic, rural, open space and natural resource preserva-

For example, the preservation of open space and the quality of schools are just two of many areas of concern studied by the strategic planning committee, which was composed of local government officials, business people, residents and other members of the community.

The Master Plan, or Phase III, is the final step of the Vision 2020 planning process, which takes into account those goals and strategies identified in the Strategic Plan. According to information supplied by Carlisle, the Master Plan "represents the long-range view of the township, focusing on more of the traditional elements considered in planning such as future land use, thoroughfares and community facilities."

Mixed feelings pepper DDA extension discussion

BY EILEEN MCCARVILLE Clarkston News Staff Writer

It's the $2.4 million question. Should Independence Township approve an extension of the Downtown Development Authority for another five years?

The township's Board of Trustees was urged by supervisor Dale Stuart at the June 3 meeting to consider that matter strongly and arrive at a decision by the next board meeting June 17.

"I think it's appropriate to face this. I think the fundamental issues have been very well presented ... At some point in time, we just flat have to do the job," Stuart told the board. "It isn't going to be any sharper than it is now."

Stuart was referring to recent discussions about extending the life of the township's DDA, a 10-year plan that ended this year. The decision comes in the wake of a recent mistake found by the township, wherein it misunderstood current DDA documents which called for taxes to be captured for DDA projects from various entities for only nine years. The over-amillion-dollar mistake has since been corrected with the entities reimbursed for the snafu, along with their portion of interest.

With that behind them, board members must now make a decision on whether or not to keep capturing those funds, of which 45 percent comes from Oakland County and Oakland Community College and the balance, 55 percent, is collected from the township's fire, police and library departments and general and safety path funds. Taxes were previously collected from Clarkston, Waterford and Oakland County schools as well, but that ended with Proposal A.

Created in 1986, the DDA has allowed the township to capture tax revenues from the above entities, targeted for improvements like sewer, water and safety paths on primarily White Lake Rd. and Dixie Highway.

The current three-lane, road-widening project on White Lake Rd. is one example.

But some projects remain unfinished, with only approximately $400,000 left in the DDA fund balance. And there are others the township has its eye on. That's why the township must consider whether it wants to extend the program, with a new tax-capturing period beginning this year.

During the meeting, Carlisle admitted earlier he had underestimated the costs, ball-parking the figure at just $2 million. But $2.4 million is a more-realistic estimate, he said. Considered projects, mostly on White Lake, include completing the road-widening project to three lanes the rest of the way from Mustang to Dixie Highway, streetlighting and its maintenance at key intersections, extending safety paths on Andersonville Rd. to the DDA limits near Bay Court Park and on the east side of White Lake north of Mustang and landscap-

However, before deciding to unanimously table the issue, 6-0, until the next board meeting (trustee Jeff McGee was absent), members voiced mixed opinions.

Clerk Joan McCrary and trustee Dan Travis wholeheartedly supported the extension.

"I'm fairly convinced," said Travis, who noted White Lake improvements would "entice or encourage development for industry, jobs and the SEV that goes with it." Also a planning commissioner, Travis said the commission has viewed DDA improvements on White Lake Rd. as "a desperately needed amenity to right that area" with projects like safety paths. "It's very difficult for children, bikers, walkers to use that road."

But others were still undecided, including treasurer Jim Wenger and trustee Larry Rosso, who is not sure whether it's imperative to widen the rest of White Lake Rd. — especially at a cost of $1.2 million.

"Boy, that's a lot of money for a turn lane," said Rosso. "I understand there's safety implications but ..."

Stuart admitted he too has mixed feelings. While he's concerned about depleting township funds, "It's difficult to walk away from that money we do not otherwise have," he said, pointing to the 45-percent share from other entities.

Trustee Neil Wallace had yet another perspective — no extension at all.

"There is more to this township than Dixie Highway and White Lake Rd. There are other priorities that deserve a turn," said Wallace, citing the Independence Township Library and police and fire protection as some of them. "We have created an addiction," he added, speaking of White Lake Rd.

Attorney Paul Wygoski, who has been advising the board on DDA matters, said members could consider several options, among them ending the DDA altogether. The township could use up the rest of the money but capture no more revenues, he said, which would end its existence.

But if they choose to extend it a number of steps will have to be taken, including amending the present plan. A public hearing would also be required before adoption, he said.

In other board action:

- Township resident Jeff Gallant reminded the board of state mid-decade census funds, currently sitting in the general fund balance, and expressed interest in allocating a portion for the Independence Township Library. "As you know, you've had those funds available for three months but, as yet, they have not been allocated or distributed," he said. Gallant, who was supported by Clarkston resident Laurie Stern, said he wanted the item put on the agenda and would "come back time and time again" to make sure that was done.
- The Deer Lake Beach lease was approved 6-0. The annual agreement means the township leases the beach from the City of Clarkston at the rate of $1 per year.
 - A noise variance was approved 6-0 for Fourth Continued on page 17A

Cornering the market

I must be a strange egg. Most people hate to go grocery shopping but, except for those times when I'm in a hurry, I view it as a fun experience.

Some tips for a pleasant trip:

When I step in, I imagine that scene in "The Wizard of Oz" where, in the original version, you go from black-and-white to color when Dorothy opens the door to Munchkinland.

A grocery store, you will notice, is a veritable rainbow of color, especially the produce section. Still, if you're plagued with shopper's blues, repeat after me, "There's no place like a. Food Town, b. Farmer Jack, c. Kroger."

● Ditch the old cliche, "Never shop when you're hungry." Go for it, arriving around noon on weekends when the store goes all out with freebies. Make several trips to the deli counter for starters. Then peruse the store for those who hawk smothered cocktail wieners from an electric frypan. Don't forget the coffee-of-the day samples, served in those teensy paper cups. For dessert, a couple of grapes should do (when the stockboy isn't looking).

● If you can't find something, don't leave muttering expletives. Hunt down the store manager and ask him where-in-the-heck-do-they-put-the-parmesan-cheese and why-the-heck-isn't-it-in-the-dairy-section-where-it-belongs.

When faced with the challenge of several choices—like what kind of toothpaste to buy—have patience. You can make decisions. Ask yourself: Do I want tartar or gum control? Whitener or brightener? Striped, mint or gel? Don't explode like the hapless customer who was carried out yelling, "I just wanted a (!#!) tube of toothpaste!"

■ When the bagboy says "Paper or plastic?" ask for a box.

• Squeeze tomatoes, melons, the (whisper) Charmin. Do not, however, pinch the clerk.

want the job done right. The last woman I talked to sent her husband, who returned with a dozen macaroni-and-cheese dinners, a giant bottle of catsup, a head of lettuce, a Sports Illustrated and a case of Bud, which he fudged off as a "hot" sale. (He was last seen wearing the paper bag.)

● If you do send someone, make sure the list is understood, and stay away from Morse code, shorthand or other abbreviations only known to you. And be specific. I'll give you an example.

In his book "Wrap it as a Gift," humorist-author Ralph Kircher serves up a chapter entitled, "The Shopping List." Kircher arrives at the butcher's, only to discover the list written by his wife is, to say the least, vague: "Butter. Crackers. Pickles. Bread. Cheese. Soup. A nice Roast." But "deep down in the great heart of hers, she knows what it is she wants. She merely fails to get it across to me," he writes.

After doing his best with the first few items, he is stumped. The discourse between Kircher and butcher goes like this:

Candidate says thanks

On Monday, the voters in Clarkston let their voice be heard concerning the $57.6 million bond and their choice for two school candidates. As one of the candidates for the Clarkston school board, I would like to send my congratulations to both Rick Crigger and Ron Sullivan. Both of you ran excellent campaigns and I believe that the next four years will hold many challenges for each of you. It was an honor to have an opportunity to be a candidate for school board in Clarkston and get to run against three other superb candidates. It turned out to be a great learning and financial experience that I will never forget.

To all the voters in Clarkston, thank you for allowing me the opportunity to run for your school board. To the voters that supported me, I thank you with all my heart for your support and I apologize for letting

The democratic process can work and I feel very good with the campaign that I ran. I refused to criticize my opponents and I refused to compromise my Christian, conservative, Republican values in the name of getting a few votes. I realized from the start that my position on the board would be very unpopular. But, as I said during the debate, I was taught that you have to stand up for your beliefs, even when those beliefs are not popular. I could not lie for the sake of winning an election and feel good about myself and the values that I want to teach our daughter.

I believe the low voter turnout does not do our community justice. Clarkston is a super community with super people. It is truly a great place to live!

Again, congratulations Rick and Ron!

Impressed with all night party

Dear editor:

I am a parent of a junior at Clarkston High School. I want to thank the principal, teachers and parents for the opportunity to be a part of the Class of 97's graduation party.

The students were so appreciative, pleasant & polite to all the parents, grandparents & friends who were there for them. The hard work done by so many parents was astonishing. It was done with so much love and smiles galore.

I reach out and offer this wonderful experience to all the junior-class parents to get involved & see the joy and comaraderie between all. To the community of the Clarkston School District, I say again 'thank you.' Your input was overwhelming. The donations were outstanding. In all the states and countries I have lived in before, I never saw such overwhelming support. You should all be commended for your commitment to our youth. These kids are the families that will remember, stay, live and work in your community.

To all the parents of the Class of '97, Congratulations. You have a great bunch of kids & they will go far in what they pursue, becase of the love, strength & support from wonderful parents.

Sincerely, Kathy Will

Nudist camp appreciates utility worker's attention

There was a time, shortly after a nudist camp was started northeast of Oxford, when every new male reporter at The Oxford Leader volunteered to write a story on the camp.

We also received a copy of a letter sent from the camp to a utility company that bares repeating:

Dear Mr.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to you for the excellent service your linemen performed last summer. It was explained to us that the transformer on the pole next to our swimming pool was of a special type that had to be dusted twice a day, oiled once a week and have the bolts tightened every ten days.

A Mr Watt explained to me that unless the transformer was dusted regularly, the dust would coagulate with the paint, which would set up a chemical imbalance of the hydrofoil and cause a great deal of trouble.

I am happy to report that your line crew stopped every morning and afternoon and spent 15 minutes dusting the transformer.

While this operation was being carried on, a Mr Volt stood on the top of the truck cab overlooking the 8-foot fence around our camp and carefully warned the girls around the pool not to get too close to the transformer.

Nine men and three ladder trucks worked four hour to replace the crossarm. They had quite a little trouble making repairs as they would put up a crossarm, put a level on it, then unbolt it and install another.

A Mr Shock explained to me that unless the crossarm was absolutely level, the wires to the transformer by the swimming pool would sag, the power flow would be uneven and, as a result, only half the swimming pool would be heated while the other half remained cold.

Evidently we have a special type meter by the swimming pool. The meter reader told us that it had to be read twice a week by two men so that an exact average of the power could be calculated.

One of your meter readers is very clumsy, because last summer he fell over two lawn chairs, a picnic table and a garbage can while walking over to check the meter.

I wish to thank you again for the wonderful attention your line crew and meter readers gave us last summer.

I have been assured that all the men will again be on the job next summer. I also understand that last summer two men even gave up their vacation just to make sure that our electrical equipment worked properly.

Sincerely, (name withheld on request)

A tornado rips through Independence Township, leaving a path of uprooted trees, torn telephone lines, and a ruptured gas main before crashing a 50-year-old poplar tree on top of a house on Mann Rd. No one is reported injured, but damage is significant. Residents describe the tornado as sounding like "a freight train."

Quick action saves a ballplayer's life Thursday during a men's softball contest at Clintonwood Park. While pitching, Independence Township resident Mike Yingling is struck in the chest with a line drive that causes his heart to start beating irregularly. Fortunately, watching the game are Mike's sister-in-law, Flora Yingling, who works for the township's fire department, and Susan Movosel, a recent nursing school graduate. Both administer CPR to Mike until the ambulance arrives. His condition is reported "stable" at the hospital on Friday and he is taken off the intensive care list Monday. Flora calls him "a true baseball player ... He threw the ball home and made the play before collapsing."

Charles Smalley and Albert Foster are elected to four-year terms on the Clarkston Board of Education in unofficial vote returns. Voters Monday also pass, by a margin of better than two to one, a renewal of five mills operating tax for the next ten years.

An all-out campaign to get a traffic light at Dixie Highway and Maybee wins the endorsement of the Independence Township Board. Some 700 residents sign a petition which they hope will encourage the Michigan State Highway Department to heed their request. Records from 1971 show nine personal-injury and 26 property-damage accidents.

On Wednesday the Ford tractor, with its numerous attachments, is officially presented to the nation's press and radio at Deer Lake Hills Farm on Miller Rd. The farm is the educational-experimental farm of the Dearborn Motors Crop. Its 500 acres are planned for a continuous training program for Dearborn distributors and dealers as well as to conduct research and experience in agricultural science and technology. It will also be used for demonstration of the tractor and Dearborn farm equipment. Among the press are publishers of the Saturday Evening Post, Country Gentleman, The Chicago Tribune, Forbes Magazine and The Detroit News.

Playing at the Holly Theatre are Michael Chekov and Joanne Dru in "Abie's Irish Rose" and Edward G. Robinson and Loretta Young in "The Stranger." Showing at the Drayton Theatre are Ida Lupino and Robert Alda in "The Man I Love" and "Love Laughs at Andy Hardy" with Mickey Rooney.

Supervisor Arthur Claspill of Rose Township thinks farmers in this vicinity are overlooking a good thing—devoting more acreage to soy bean production. Claspill, who has been investigating the matter for some time now, is convinced of the crop's value, proclaiming it a valuable feed with plenty of protein.

Featured at the Holly Theatre are Guy Kibbee and Una Merkel in "Don't Tell the Wife," Billy March and Frank Craven in Booth Tarkington's "Penrod and Sam," Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in "Shall We Dance?" and Loretta Young and Tyrone Power in "Cafe Metropole."

Don't Rush Me

By Don Rush

One column, two opinions

'Member back a few columns ago I wrote on picking up rocks of the shoulder (and sometimes in the middle) of the road? I wrote how great it was to find rocks, pick them up and put in my yard.

I, like many of you, probably sluffed it off as a week I had nothing to write about . . . however, it did evoke emotion at least from two people — both from the Orion area. The Lake Orion Review ran both these letters to their editor, Elaine Steib. Read 'em and then tell me what you think.

May 7: Don, don't take those rocks

A recent column by Don Rush tells the joys of rock "hunting." Where is Rush getting these rocks?

All land is owned by someone. It's illegal to remove anything from public land and it's just stealing to remove rocks from privately-owned land.

Rush praises the joy of "finding" rocks for "landscaping" instead of having to buy them or other materials. He asks: "What is the adventure of going to a rock store to just pick and choose?" Not adventure — just honesty.

Many gardeners use large rocks for landscaping. If you aren't fortunate enough to have some on your own land, you will pay quite a lot of money for them.

Smaller rocks are used by many people to border a flower bed, border a tree or shrub or stabilize the "shelf" created by a vehicle for the road commission.

I have never seen a "landscape" size boulder turned up by grading at any time of the year. Many people cultivate wildflowers or other plants to improve the appearance of their roadside and they often use rocks to hold these plants in place.

These rocks don't belong to you, Mr. Rush. Let them alone unless you get clear and specific permission from the people who own the land they are on.

Eleanor Wolf

May 28: Rush, come to my house for rocks

This letter is in response to a letter . . . that was a scathing commentary written by Eleanor Wolf pertaining to your assistant publisher, Don Rush.

To make the assumption that Rush is a thief because he collects rocks is beyond rhyme or reason. Maybe Mr. Wolf should rent the movie "The Long, Long, Trailer" that starred Lucille Ball and Dezi Arnez.

Talk about "rock collections!" It's a wonder she wouldn't have the movie banned from all the shelves.

I wish Mrs. Wolf were far more concerned about private property rights when it comes to "Big Brother" intervention or the individual rights that this country was founded on than nitpicking over rocks. Rush has done an excellent job over time expounding on those issues.

To paint Rush as dishonest tells me there is a bigger thorn sticking in Mrs. Wolf's side. I only hope the thorn belongs to her.

As for rock collecting — Rush, you can come to my home any ol' time and collect some rocks. We dig them up out of our yard all the time.

In fact, when they were developing our subdivision they dug up more than a few boulders. Isn't this why this area has been called the gravel capital of the world?

And, as for "buying rocks" to landscape your property — well, don't worry Mrs. Wolf. If taxes on property, clothing, cars, essentials (such as fuel and electricity) continue to rise at their current pace, our young people will find it unimaginable affording any property for a home or a garden to place the rocks around

The only rocks you'll be able to afford to throw will be verbal. That is if you aren't accused of discrimination.

How do you think Timothy McVeigh should be punished?

SUE EVANS, CLARKSTON: I almost think he should have the death penalty, but when I think of that I wouldn't want to be one of the jurors to make that decision.

MARY SLUMBA, CLARKSTON: I don't believe in life being taken for another life, but I do believe he should be put in prison for the rest of his life with no parole.

MICHAEL EVANS, CLARKSTON: I say death. An eye for an eye, a toothfora tooth. If he killed people I think he should be killed, most likely by the death chair.

CHUCK RADER, CLARKSTON: Mixed emotions. If in fact he did committhe bombing, capital punishment. I don't think he did it by himself though. I think there's more involved than just the two (Terry Nichols and McVeigh).

MELINDA KITSON, CLARKSTON: I think death penalty. I just think fordoing something that cruel and killing so many people he doesn't deserve to live.

Superintendent's corner

By Al Roberts, Ed. D.

Reflecting on the first year

It has been a gratifying first year for me as Superintendent of Clarkston Schools. I have appreciated the opportunity to communicate with readers of The Clarkston News, and the feedback which I have received has provided me with a greater understanding of my new community. I have found that our citizens, parents, students, faculty and staff believe that it is time to "raise the academic bar" in Clarkston and they are ready to do that.

Since I am writing this column on the day after a successful bond election, I thought it might be appropriate to address yesterday's events. To the many folks who supported the bond, I offer you my congratulations and heartfelt thanks. The passage of this issue will enable your school board, the administration, and the staff to provide our Clarkston youngsters with the type of education needed to live and work in today's world. This successful vote reaffirms our belief in quality education and strong property values. The future looks bright for all our residents.

To the voters who did not support this bond, I give my absolute commitment that we will spend our tax dollars wisely to make Clarkston schools better than they are today and even better the day after that. We feel satisfied that issues of space and technology have been put behind us and we can get on with the most important task-educating youth.

The success of Phase 3, together with the building of Springfield Plains Elementary School and the completion of Clarkston High School, has breathed new life into our school system. As we move ahead, we are ever mindful of the need to be excellent planners and good stewards of the public dollar.

During the building phase, it will remain my priority to focus on academic excellence and to keep the community dialogue going. Virtually every resident has a stake in the school system. We are known by the schools we keep!

"What will it be today, Mr. Kircher?"

"A nice roast, please," I reply, reading carefully from the list.

"Just what kinda roast you got in mind, Mr.

"It says a NICE roast here on the slip."

The butcher stops beaming and "the friendship fades from his eyes and the lines around his mouth grow tight." Kircher considers running away to join the Navy but decides to throw himself on the man's mercy.

"Look, Butch," he whimpers. "I don't know nothing about these things. Just give me a nice roast. All I know is I gotta have a nice roast."

The butcher brightens once again and, since he knows the family, picks out a beef roast, planning for the parents and two little ones, maybe extra company for dinner, relatives who might drop by ...

"He hoists it aloft for inspection, but by now my eyes are too filled with shame to see it, so I dumbly nod and am shortly staggering home with a roast that would feed a Democratic picnic," Kircher continues. "And all the while I know that it isn't the right kind of roast, and that it isn't the right size roast, and for all I know, it may not even be a NICE roast ..."

Following these suggestions may change your attitude. And, while we're on the subject, can anyone tell me how to use up 10 spaghetti-sauce coupons before they expire June 307 conserver conserver and a server server ser

Flag etiquette To the editor:

I was appalled when I read the May 28th issue of the News and saw the picture of members of the local American Legion post carrying the American flag along with the Legion flag and another one I couldn't identify. If any group in the country should be familiar with proper respect and how to display the flag, it should be the Legion.

Throughout history, the right has been recognized as the position of honor and hence, the American Flag is properly displayed on its own right. I quote from the official Boy Scout Handbook for the Boy Scouts of America:

"When the flag is carried alone, there should be an honor guard to the left of, or one on each side of it. When carried with other flags, the flag should be in front of the others or to the right if the flags are arranged in line."

I hope members of the American Legion will bone up on the United States Flag Code adopted by Congress and familiarize themselves with the rules for honoring and displaying the flag before next years parade.

Pine Knob parents make a difference

This year over 30 parent tutors participated in Pine Knob Elementary's ERIC Program (Early Reading Intervention Corps.) and kindergarten-ERIC Program. These trained volunteers worked with individual students, kindergarten to third grade, in order to help boost reading skills and confidence. Strategies learned in the classroom were reinforced and supported by the ERIC tutors.

Were they successful? You bet they were! More than 60 young readers made significant improvements in their reading ability due to the support they received from these two programs. Our generous parent tutors made a commitment to helping one, two, even three students each week. They gave their time, knowledge, and friendship to each child and made a positive difference in young lives!

Thanks, ERIC Tutors! You're the best!!

Sincerely,

Pine Knob Elementary Staff and Students

Costs of disposal rise dramatically

Independence Township has successfully completed its 16th annual spring clean up. This year's program was held on May 10 and May 17 from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. There were a total of 642 township and city residents who participated.

The total amount of fees collected was $6,644. The amount collected will be approximately 35% of the cost to dispose of the materials. The cost of the township personnel is not included in this estimated total. In 1995, the amount collected was $9,018 with the total disposal bill of $23,848. In 1996, the amount collected was $8,632 with the total disposal bill of $22,987.88.

Up until six years ago, the township did not charge township and city residents for this service. Since that time, the total costs to the township has escalated. The township has asked those of us who use this service to pay a small fee to help defer some of the cost.

Beautiful noise

On Sunday, 25 May, I had the extreme pleasure of attending "Amazing Grayce" which was held in the CHS gymnasium to honor Grayce Warren for her many years of dedication to the Clarkston Community Schools and to our community as a whole.

What a delight it was to see so many of Grayce's current and former students perform the beautiful music she taught them to appreciate and love throughout her teaching career. As a former colleague of Grayce's, it was particularly heartwarming to see what successful and productive citizens each of the former students has become. Most of all, it was very touching to see the outpouring of love and respect these "kids" have for a person who gave them an appreciation for such "beautiful noise."

At the conclusion of the concert, I was very pleased to see how many parents, members of the community, and former and current school staff were in the audience. However, I was very dismayed, though not completely surprised, to see that only one of the current school administrators (Daniel Lewis) was in attendance. I do realize that this was a holiday weekend; however, this event was well-publicized since last fall, leaving sufficient time for individuals connected with the school system to set aside a few hours of their time to attend this tribute to Grayce. I guess the current administration believes the upcoming district-wide retirement dinner is a sufficient honor for anyone who has dedicated 33 years of their life to serving the school and its community. If this indeed was the rationale for administrative nonattendance at this wonderful event, I am very sorry for the lack of class demonstrated by these individuals, particularly those in the leadership roles at the school where Grayce has spent so many fulfilling years of her career.

I would like to thank all of those who put together this tribute to Grayce for letting us share the joy of the afternoon and for the fond memories that > we will have for many years to come. Hurray for a job very well done!

Thanks for tour

A special thank you to our community which once again opened its doors to our second-grade students to bring Clarkston's heritage alive.

We thank our many moms who contacted people in the community to allow us to visit, and all the parents who spent the day walking with us. Mrs. Basinger, Mrs. Cattalo, Mrs. Olafsson, Mrs. Lynn and Mrs. Sharkey not only opened their homes but shared the history of their homes with us. The business community also graciously opened their doors to us. The Clarkston Country Store & Main Street Antiques, The Clarkston News, Millpond Inn, Morgan's Service Inc., NBD Bank, and Tierra Arts & Designs all allowed us to visit and spent time sharing the history of their buildings and businesses. The day ended with a visit to the township hall where treasurer Jim Wenger gave us a tour of the hall and shared with us the history of the building.

Our children have a better appreciation of their community and its heritage because of the terrific people in Clarkston.

"We are thrilled to have assembled such a knowledgeable and dedicated board," Hewko said. The foundation hopes to raise funds to come up with a building, ready it for operation and open it to the public within three to five years.

ity of using a building a developer was considering donating in the northern part of Independence Township.

"We have since determined that house isn't right for us," Huttenlocher said. She cited concerns such as climate control for historical artifacts, handicap accessibility and parking.

"We're 100 percent behind preserving the building and we hope it gets preserved and we've stated our wishes to the township."

A committee has been appointed for site acquisition. "Within in the next month or so they're going to put out a plan of action," Huttenlocher said. They would love to have a property donated close to town. "We're certainly looking at any option and if anybody's got any ideas we'd love to hear them," Huttenlocher said.

The executive committee of the board, consisting of Hewko, Huttenlocher, Beattie, Reid and Wiederhold, will meet monthly on the second Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Independence Township Library's Heritage Room. Members of the community wishing to offer assistance, suggestions or contributions should call Hewko at 625-9230

Cadillac's more than just a car

BY EILEEN McCARVILLE
Clarkston News Staff Writer

Most Michiganders probably don't know one of America's largest manufacturing cities started with a little fort called Ponchartrain.

On May 13 Andersonville Elementary students got a heady dose of history when a noted French historian visited their school with tales of Antoine de la Mothe Cadillac, the French soldier who founded Detroit over two centuries ago.

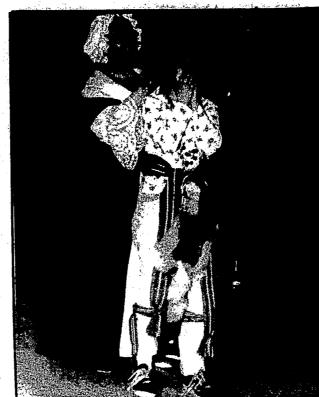

With just a handful of men and two small canoes, he left Quebec and traveled 750 miles of uncharted St. Lawrence Seaway to finally land somewhere between the Renaissance Center and Cobo Hall, planting his flag in the murky Detroit River.

As she does with other school tours, French-born speaker/writer Annick Hivert-Carthew used a series of audio-visual aids to catapault Andersonville El. kids back in time, playing Madame Therese Guyon-Cadillac, the Frenchman's wife who crossed the sea later, though pregnant with her seventh child.

As Mme. Cadillac, she shared these and other memoirs, which have taken her 15 years of research: drummers were used for communication "because they didn't have telephones" and fur-trading became known as "the Gold Rush of the Midwest."

Children seemed to enjoy the experience "beaucoup." They counted up to 10, donned French fur-trader garb and danced the minuet — with lots more gusto than their prissy predecessors.

Imitating French settlers, they yelled "Au revoir!" instead of "Timber!" when pretended trees came down. They heard how early doctors concocted medicine out of spider webs, bones and other items "you would call gross," said Hivert-Cathew, drawing laughter.

Melanie Stewart becomes a French voyageur, outfitted with a colorful sash and fur-pelt bag, used for carrying weapons. And no outfit is complete without a "tuque"—that "funny" stocking cap the French like to wear, says Hivert-Carthew.

Of course, Detroit's founder left his name on more than just a city, said the Michigan Women's Hall of Fame inductee. "When you look at the front and back of a Cadillac, you still see Monsieur Cadillac's coat-of-arms."

Library announces summer reading

There'll be no time for youngsters to get bored this summer. With school just getting out, the Independence Township Library invites youngsters to Be Eager About Reading (BEAR) at Camp Read beginning June 19.

Kids entering grades one through three in the fall will meet in one group, kids entering grades 4-5 will form a second group and meet weekly for reading and activities. They'll earn tickets for each hour of reading (or being read to) toward a drawing at the end of camp.

Over the course of the summer kids will enjoy games, stories, magic, a talent show and a walk in the July 4 parade. Events are held on Thursdays; mornings for younger tykes, afternoons for older kids. A schedule of each week's events is available at the library

A separte BEAR program for preschoolers and incoming kindergarteners will be held during their regular Storytime. For more information call the library at 625-2212.

Retiring teacher holds open house

Shine! Middle schools honor eighth-graders with annual awards

BY EILEEN McCARVILLE Clarkston News Staff Writer

When describing Daniel Holody, his teachers use phrases like "responsible," "highly motivated" and seeing what needs to be done "quietly, without prompting or fanfare." Those are some of the qualities that make him a very special young man.

The athlete and all-A student was one of four Sashabaw Middle School eighth-graders traditionally honored at the end of the school year. Each year the principal selects two students, a boy and a girl, to receive Principal's Awards, and the assistant principal selects two, also a boy and a girl, to receive Cougar Spirit Awards.

At Clarkston Middle School as well, two students received the Principal's Award and Torre Antonazzo was the eighth-grade recipient of the McGrath Award, given for school spirit and good citizenship.

Dan and Allison Lynch were each recipients of the Principals' Award at SMS, presented to those students "who are academically at the top of their class," according to the award. Jenny Miller and Scott McGregor were the recipients at CMS. Good citizenship, attendance and leadership are also considered.

SMS's Cougar Spirit Award is earned by two eighth-graders who display qualities of optimism, leadership, caring and cooperativeness. According to the award, they show "an overall winning attitude." This year Adam Gebus and Lindsay Simko were selected.

In presenting the honors during an awards night June 3, SMS principal Dr. Jean Lang said, "Often, we teach more than we know, because people, both young and adult alike, tend to be instructed more by what is done rather than what is said ... You have not just dreamed and talked, you have accomplished something.'

CMS assistant principal Ginny Farmer has great things to say about her students too. "The Principal's Award encompasses both academics and extra-curricular activities. Both Jenny and Scott are role models in both of these areas. Torre can always be counted on for his very positive attitude toward school and community. He carries the school spirit."

The seven eighth-graders are briefly profiled be-

spirit, Farmer says he shows up "at everything." Agrees Torre, "I go to lots of games. It's your peers if it's a game at school. It's fun to cheer your friends at the games they're playing. And at high school it's cheering for those kids you look up to." Torre plays sports himself, nearly everything, including basketball, baseball, football and track. He'll spend his summer playing both "bb's" and is checking out the possibility of volunteering with SCAMP. He likes to read, enjoys history and also plans football conditioning and "having fun" before school starts next fall. "I think I want to get into some sort of engineering," he adds.

Jenny Miller: Jenny says she earns "A's and B's." She likes both French and history. "I don't know which one I like better," she says, wrinkling her nose. Jenny's very active, devoting time to sports like basketball and volleyball and she participates in the school's "Out of Range" program, a women's group that deals with problems like sexual harrassment and drugs. This summer she'll attend volleyball camp, have fun with her friends and swim. She doesn't bat a long, dark

ON THE LOOKOUT FOR MELANOMA

Melanoma, the deadliest form of skin cancer, now claims nearly triple the number of lives (over 6,400 per year) that it did just 30 years ago. What can be done to reduce this number? As it turns out, one of the most valuable tools that we have is to check our skin on a regular basis for signs of the disease. According to a recent study, those people who "deliberately and purposely" checked their own skin on a regular basis greatly re-duced their risk of death from melanoma. Regular skin checks are important because the earlier this deadly form of skin cancer is detected and removed, the greater the potential for sav-ing lives. When checking your skin, follow the ABCD rule and look for moles that display: Asymmetry, irregular Borders, variegated Color, and Diameter larger than a pencil eraser. For the most comprehensive skin check, visit your dermatologist regularly.

If you have any questions regarding moles or anything else related to your skin, be sure to speak with a profes-sional in the field. When it comes to your skin, it's not a good idea to play guessing games. Call us for an appointment. Our offices are located at 6330 Sashabaw, Clarkston (625-0692); and 3003 Baldwin, Lake Orion (391-9599) to serve all the members of your family.

P.S. When performing a skin self-exam, have someone check your scalp.

Juniors improve scores on proficiency test

Clarkston students improve in all categories over last year's results

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY

Clarkston News Editor

Clarkston schools received some good news last week when the results of the second year of testing in the statewide High School Proficiency Test were released.

Scores were up all around for Clarkston High School juniors, who improved the performance of last year's class in reading, writing, science and math. That's no accident, according to Mike LaBay, Ph D, deputy superintendent, middle school/high school operations.

"We've done quite a bit" since last year's first crop of test results were released, Labay said. "When we analyzed we found out in order to score well in math and science they had to read well. It's kind of strange to talk about teaching high-school students to read, but there are techniques."

LaBay said that even though the state did not furnish any analysis of the first year's tests, as it has routinely done on the Michigan Educational Assessment Program (MEAP) tests, the teachers had the actual tests and were able to conduct an analysis themselves.

"I credit the high-school staff. They looked at last year's tests. We did not have analysis, but we did have the test."

Whatever they did seems to have paid off. Though scores statewide rose slightly in math, science and reading, they fell in writing. Clarkston, on the other hand, rose in all four categories and posted double-digit increases in math and science.

"We're very pleased to have come up in all four categories," Labay said. As they usually do, Clarkston students scored well above state averages in all categories. It also appears that unlike last year, they also exceeded Oakland County averages on all four tests. County averages were not available as of presstime. However, LaBay said that the county average went up 6.2 percent in math and 6.9 percent in science, and went down 1.2 percent in reading and 4.5 percent in writing from last year.

In Oakland County, there were only five districts that outperformed Clarkston on all four tests--Birmingham, Bloomfield Hills, Novi, Farmington and Rochester. Birmingham was among the districts where large numbers of students opted out of the tests, with their hen we analyzed we found out in order to score well in math and science they had to read well. It's kind of strange to talk about teaching high school students to read, but there are strategies.'

parents' permission. However in Clarkston, all but five students took the test.

"When you consider that about 10 percent of our population have learning disabilities and only five students were excluded, our results in Clarkston look even better," LaBay said.

The HSPT is given to all high-school juniors, including alternative high school students, except those excluded by their parents. It now replaces the administration of the MEAP test at the high school level. Students who achieve the score considered "proficient" on a given test receive an endorsement on their diploma. Those who don't have the opportunity to take the test over again.

A press release from the state Board of Education explains the difference between the HSPT and the MEAP tests. "In 1995-96, the HSPT replaced the 10thand 11th-grade MEAP tests which were designed to measure students' basic knowledge of essential skills. The HSPT assesses high school students' in-depth knowledge of mathematics, reading, writing and science and asks students to apply this knowledge and solve problems."

This test was designed to ensure schools are preparing students with the knowledge and skills necessary to meet the demands of college and the work place," said state Superintendent of Instruction Arthur Ellis in a statement released June 5. "While all scores need to continue to improve, every high school teacher and student should be commended for accepting the challenge this new test offered."

and check out the bunks. They weren't allowed to see ' inside the trailer because it was sealed until delivery.

Heffron explained that Salmons drives by day, he by night, based on their personal preferences. Salmons is the boss, since she has more seniority with their employer, Florilli Corp., the owner of their brand new truck. Each trip lasts about six weeks, then they go home for about a week before heading out on their next trip, he said.

Students crawled through the cab, under the trailer and around the engine. Principal Turner stopped by, asking, "Mind if I take it for a spin?"

Salmons and Bailey sat in the cab and chatted for a few moments. You couldn't hear what they were saying, but the smiles on their faces showed the reunion was going well. Then, all of a sudden, a few loud, rhythmic blasts on the horn were heard, and it was Bailey, with a big grin on her face.

"I'm having more fun than the kids," she admitted. Then she contemplated how she was going to get back to ground level from the lofty cab. Bailey walks with the aid of a cane since her stroke. But with some help from Salmons behind her and Heffron below, she gingerly made her way down, putting her good leg first.

"You better check for stowaways before you leave, including me," Bailey warned. "I was supposed to travel with Judy over Easter break, but because of the stroke I couldn't. So we're going to reschedule."

Salmons said she couldn't explain exactly what it is about trucking that has captured her imagination. "There's not one thing; I like it all," she said. But she admitted the life hasn't been all peaches and cream.

"I had a gun drawn on me by a man in Texas. So I asked Pete if he'd like to run team. And he's an excellent partner. It's easier to run team; it's safer."

And she reminded students of the important function of her job. "Just about anything you want hauled comes by truck. Just remember, if you got it, a truck probably brought it."

Lois Richardson said the idea for the joint program came out of the Suzuki program, a method she first became familiar with when her daughter took up the violin.

"The inspiration for doing this came out of the Suzuki philosophy of bringing students together to play in a non-competitive environment," she said. "We've never had a chance to rehearse together. That can be done when people know the same songs. It's always fun to get together with other people who know the same songs."

There were a few glitches. The plan had been for the students to march into the gym playing their first piece. However, the line stretched so long that the back couldn't hear the front and vice versa, making it impossible for them to stay together. So the teachers quickly ditched that idea.

The students all played from memory; many of the tunes were familiar, such as Beethoven's "Ode to Joy" (the short version, to be sure), "Long, Long Ago," which included the Richardsons' daughter in a trio, and a Bach minuet. Two Detroit girls who've advanced further than any other of Peter Richardson's students people of Clarkston breathed some new life into their school system . . .

"We're very appreciative to our supporters. But to those folks who voted no, I want to make a commitment their tax dollars will be well spent."

The proposal was approved by 12 of the district's 18 precincts. Precincts 5, 7, 10, 11 and 14 voted no as they did in December. Precincts 1, 1A, 3, 6, 8, 12 and 13 switched from no to yes this time around. A majority of absentee voters voted against the plan.

In addition, newcomers Richard Crigger and Ron Sullivan won seats on the board of education. The will replace Bill Craig and Bill McGregor, both of whom chose not to run for re-election.

closed out the concert with a duet that was clearly more complex than the other pieces, including sixteenth notes, repeats and pizzicato.

When it was over, Joel Cooper, a North Sashabaw student, admitted he'd been a bit worried about playing with students with so much more experience than he had.

"They're talented; they know a lot more stuff than us," he said. "We were so scared because they were so good."

Following their '94 tour, they weren't "Rushed."
Or, as Neil Pert, one of the most highly lauded drummers in the biz, puts it, "We took a long break. We made a record. It snowed a lot."

Canada's super-rock group Rush, composed of Geddy Lee (bass guitar, vocals, synthesizers), Alex Lifeson (electric and acoustic guitar, mandolin) and Pert (drums, cymbals, hammer dulcimer), say the weather "helped them chill" while creating their newest album, "Test For Echo."

After the "Counterparts" tour of May 1994, Lee and his wife had a baby girl, Lifeson struck out on a solo effort and Pert persued a tribute to late-great, big-band drummer Buddy Rich. The trio settled into normalcy, taking almost a year-and-a-half off. "We worked; we traveled, we lived our lives; and it was fine," says Pert.

But then it was time to regroup for a new work. The group holed up in Chalet Studio, a country retreat just outside Toronto.

"In past writing sessions (Lee and Lifeson) often built the songs as they went, matching verses and choruses and roughing out the arrangement on a demo tape. At that point we would all listen to the song, and discuss what was good and what might be improved, both musically and lyrically ...

"But this time they chose another method. As the musical ideas emerged, they would go through the lyrics and try to match up a verse or a chorus, record that fragment, then move on to something else. They didn't want to get bogged down in the jigsaw puzzle of assembling whole songs, but rather keep the momentum going with a flow of fresh ideas."

Add Old Man Winter, a familiar face in the north, and certainly one conducive to concentration. As they composed, "it began to snow—in Biblical proportions ... and that seemed to be the weather forecast until the album was finished—six months later," Pert says. "No coincidence that the Arctic theme pervades our cover art, for it certainly pervaded our working environment."

"Test For Echo" features the title track plus "Time and Motion," "The Color of Right" and "Driven," currently number 22 on Billboard's Mainstream Rock Tracks

As with typical Rush gold and platinum fare — "Tom Sawyer," "Spirit of Radio," "Working Man," "Fly By Night" — the band's style, highly reminiscent of vintage "Yes," continues with soaring synthesizer and intelligent, apocalyptic lyrics.

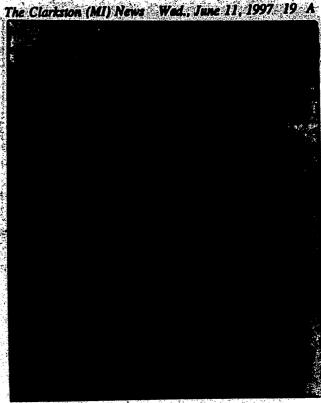

Add Lee's high-pitched vocals, virtuoso instrumentation — which often includes the creative mix of various time signatures — and you have a group that's oft described as the quintessential "working man's hard-rock band," always placing high on musicmagazine readers'polls.

Getting back to business was yet another successful merger, Pert adds. "We do our best work together. And we have the most fun too."

Rush takes the stage at Pine Knob Tuesday, June 17 at 8 p.m.

CHS student council surprises even itself by donating over $22,000 this year

> BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY Clarkston News Editor

Maybe Clarkston High School students just have a mammoth sweet tooth. Maybe they have money to burn. Maybe they're just generous.

Whatever the reason, CHS students made it possible for their student council to donate more money than ever this year—over $22,000. And with the school year ending, they still had, as of last week, $8,000 in the kitty that hadn't yet been spent. All that after fulfilling every single request for money they've received this lunches and constant peer pressure—the good kind—to get fellow students to dig deep for student council causes. Even longtime faculty sponsor Cheryl Miller confessed the grand total took her by surprise.

"It started at the senior awards. Part of a speech I gave to them was how proud I was of them. And other students came up to me and said 'We didn't realize student council had done all that.' So we started putting it all together."

She raised her eyebrows way up high when asked if it was more than usually raised. "WAY more," she said, clearly impressed.

Student council is a class at CHS and meets last hour every day. After a big activity, such as the pre-Homecoming field day, Miller's class looks a lot like a dorm room after a big party—chaotic, messy, lived in. In a memo addressed to her fellow teachers dated June 2, Miller acknowledged that sometimes student council activities require a little patience because they interrupt normal class schedules and generate a little noise. She thanked her co-workers for their help in allowing the fund-raising to go on.

"This year it seems student council has asked for more help, cooperation and patience than ever before. As a result, student council was able to put together a phenomenal year," the memo states.

The list of causes that have received the council's financial blessing include $1,000 to a Romanian orphanage relief fund, $1,000 for North Dakota flood relief, $$2,000 to the family of a Clarkston girl killed recently in an auto accident, and much more.

Nearly $3,000 was raised for the American Cancer Society, a Michigan Association of Student Councils designated charity, through a "penny war" at school. Many funds were also used to send students to conferences dealing with diversity, team-building and leadership. And a Waterford child with aplastic anemia who needs a transplant was given $2,000 to help cover her medical costs, which hover around $3,000 a month.

Ricky Williams, a sophomore member of council, said everyone had to work to make it happen.

"Everybody on student council, we all had to do our own part," he said. "I think it was our enthusiasm. Our job was to persuade people to donate to the cause."

Junior Dave Trollman, who was in charge of public relations this year, said his fellow students weren't too hard to convince. "You've got to remember: The students have got it (charity); you've got to get it out of them . . . By the end of the year, we got a name out that we were the group to go to for money."

This year's council officers were Mindi Thompson, president, Lauren Pointer, vice president, Julie Marshall, secretary, and Allison Richards, treasurer.

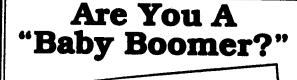

As council president next year, Trollman knows he's got big shoes to fill. During the summer, council members will meet in a retreat setting to begin some

"We haven't got a goal yet," he said. "If we can even do half of what we did this year we'll be a success."

"In the past we've not set a goal," Miller said. "Every year we have a minimum in our constitution . . . We start all over. We start collecting again and taking requests for fund-raising."

As he closed the last meeting of the school year, Trollman summed up the year's success with what he called the "thought for the week: Leaders have a compass in their mind and a magnet in their heart. And this year I think we've used both."

School board approves contract

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY Clarkston News Editor

A new three-year contract with CLASP, the Clarkston Association of Support Personnel, was ratified by the board of education Monday night.

The vote was unanimous on the deal, which assistant superintendent Duane Lewis said has a total compensation increase of 2.38 percent in each of the first two years. The third year will be dependent upon future state funding.

CLASP members gave up some fringe benefits in order to receive a 3.95 percent increase in their pay the first year, 2.38 the second year. School superintendent Dr. Al Roberts said the changes reflect an understanding by both sides that having regular drivers on the job is very important. Some of the changes negotiated reduced sick days and eliminated medical benefits for substitute drivers.

Roberts said both sides "did a truly outstanding job of coming to grips with some very tough issues. I'm very pleased."

School board president Bill McGregor echoed the sentiment, praising the team approach. "I hope it sets the table for many contracts to come," he said.

In other action

● Tenure was granted to 25 teachers. Deputy superintendent Dr. Mike LaBay said teachers are granted tenure after satisfactory performance reviews over four years, or two years if they transfer into the district with tenure from elsewhere.

"Tenure is an important step in the professional career of any teacher," he said.

• A new principal was introduced for Pine Knob Elementary School for next year. Her name is Kathleen (K. C.) Leh.

In addition, positions were filled for other vacancies. Michael Peterson was hired as a vocal music teacher, replacing the retiring Grayce Warren. Chad Mester will replace the retiring Tom Lamm in Clarkston Middle School's tech ed. department. In addition, teacher Gary Kaul was recalled from layoff due to a vacancy at the high school.

● Changes to the schools' student code of conduct were approved, including more stringent penalties for athletes caught smoking.

● The board approved the administration's request to hire an elementary school DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) officer for 1997-98 at a cost of up to $20,000. The previous DARE officer has been reassigned full-time to be a school/police liaison officer. The district is considering replacing the DARE program with a revised health curriculum, and may make that recommendation next year, assistant superintendent Dave Reschke said.

Scott McGregor: With a mischevious grin, Scott admits he studies "a little" to earn that all-A record. He figures he received the Principal's Award "for my grades and for like extra help with the teachers." Already he's developed a hearty work ethic (hire this boy): He runs errands and passes for the main office, helps teachers "clean up" — he even fills the Coke machine. He's playing baseball and umpiring for the township this summer; family trips include up north and out West. As for college, he hasn't made up his mind yet but, like Jenny, he's thinking about law school.

Daniel Holody: Dan, an all-A student, excels in sports, particularly baseball, basketball and football. This summer he'll attend camps or practices for all three. His favorite subject is algebra. Dan thinks education is important "because you learn a lot in school, not only algebra and that stuff, but you learn to get along with people, socially. That's important too.'

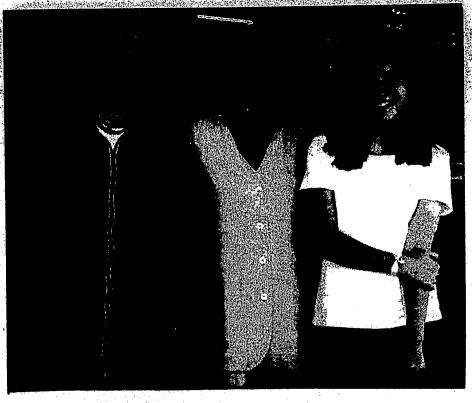

Allison Lynch: Allison, also an all-A student, ran track and is an avid swimmer. She'll be searching for a lifeguard job for the summer. She's also a member of the school's Students for a Better World organization, which is responsible for planting the school's lovely courtyard. "School's important because it helps you to get into a good school, get a good job, make good money - and have a good living," says the perky teenager. Oh - she'll be attending space camp this summer and would like to do "something in the space program" eventually.

Adam Gebus: Adam played football, basketball and ran track this year. This summer he'll pursue his favorites — basketball camp, sailing and the Gus Macker tournament. He feels he exemplifies true Cougar spirit "because I participate in activities, I apply myself to school work." He's already got his college major picked out - engineering. And of course (he couldn't resist) - he's a big Wings fan.

Lindsay Simko: Lindsay loves basketball, softball, volleyball and ran track. "And, I'm a manager of the guy's basketball team," she says proudly. This summer you'll find her on the diamond, playing softball. Lindsay feels she truly earned the Cougar Spirit Award "because I was the mascot for the basketball games." She explains, with a giggle, "I was all dressed up in a Cougar costume, dancing in front of the crowds."

Other honors, including departmental awards, were also given to numerous students at each middle school.

Historic barn burns

A barn on the former Henry Ford property now owned by Clarkston physician James O'Neill was destroyed by fire Sunday afternoon.

Oakland County Sheriff's fire investigator Art Schrah said he believes the fire was accidentally started when three children, ages 11-12, lit a match in an effort to untangle a fishing line. No one was injured.

Schrah said the three went into the barn to find something to cut the fishing line with, but couldn't. They knew the line would burn, so they lit a match. Thinking it was out, they threw it to the floor in a workshop area of the barn where gasoline was stored in plastic cans.

The fire started on the second (ground) level of the three-story barn, Schrah said. The contents of the basement level may be salvageable, he said, but the barn itself is a total loss.

The Independence Township Fire Department responded to the alarm at 6:04 p.m. Sunday. The barn was fully engulfed in flame by the time firefighters arrived at the Holcomb Rd. site adjacent to the new Bridge Valley Subdivision.

The farm was the site of a tractor testing ground when it was owned by Henry Ford.

An ending and a beginning

The neat thing about graduation is that it's all so timiliar, but for the kids in the caps and gowns, it's a constrain a lifetime thrill. The faces change, but the so itement remains the same.

For the Clarkston High School Class of 1997, the mance into the Pine Knob pavilion June 4 was filled whoops and hollers more than pomp and circumbance. "It looks disorganized, doesn't it?" asked assist an principal Ron Santavicca, whose job it was to make sure half the students got into their seats in order. "Somehow the kids always pull it off."

As students started down the stairs, one called it our last walk," another "the yellow brick road." Where the trip from high school into the adult world would eventually lead was the topic of much speculation as the night went on.

Class member and graduation speaker Dan Campbell looked back, remembering how small he telt as a freshman, then summed up how well he telt his class had turned out

"They dubbed us bad apples, second generation hippies, Generation X because they didn't know how we'dturn out," he said "It's our turn to take everything we've learned over the last four years and show the world what we can do. Any way you cut it, Class of '97, it's our turn."

Heather Schmidt, graduating at the top of her class, talked about the inevitable topic of change.

"It is the only way to reach a destination. It is the music we as instruments make—. So we gaze upon the horizon—and open our eyes to gaze upon the face of change."

The speakers talked about the accomplishments of the class of 1997, and got one last taste of it when senior Jimmy Territo led the choir—and his friend Colin McIntyre on the piano—in one of his own compositions. He got a big ovation from his classmates, hugs from band director Cliff Chapman and choir director Grayce Warren, and left the podium with a huge grin on his face.

Warren, conducting her last concert before retirement, also got a big hug from Chapman after her last song. Her characteristic big smile left her face as she walked away from the podium for the last time

Superintendent Dr. Al Roberts, addressing his first Clarkston commencement audience, told the students, "We have confidence in your abilities. Thank you for allowing us to support you in your quest for wisdom, confidence and confrage."

While encouraging the graduates to take pride in their achievements, he also asked that they remember those who had helped them along the way—parents, teachers, friends

"They all share in this achievement. Think about that and let them know how you feel. Some you may never see again."

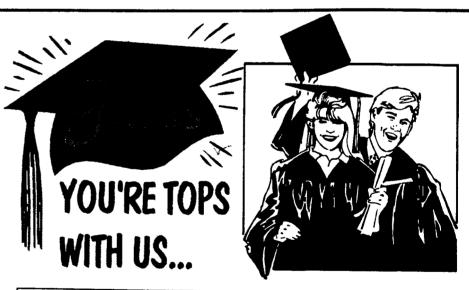

Ashley Halleran (center) chats with friends before the ceremonies.

Jimmy Johnson receives a handshake from school superintendent Dr. Al Roberts after getting his diploma.

Graduation speaker Dan Campbell said of principal Brent Cooley that he 'took 1,400 people under his arm, called us a family and made us believe it.'

Party time!

As a reward for four years of hard work, more than 350 graduating seniors danced the night away at the post-graduation all-night party at Deer Lake Country Club June 4-5, Activities varied from the bungee harness contest to the all-night euchre tournament. While camera flashbulbs flared and casino chips rolled, Clarkston High School seniors went out in style.

Party co-chair Bob Olsen called the party very successful, thanks to everyone involved.

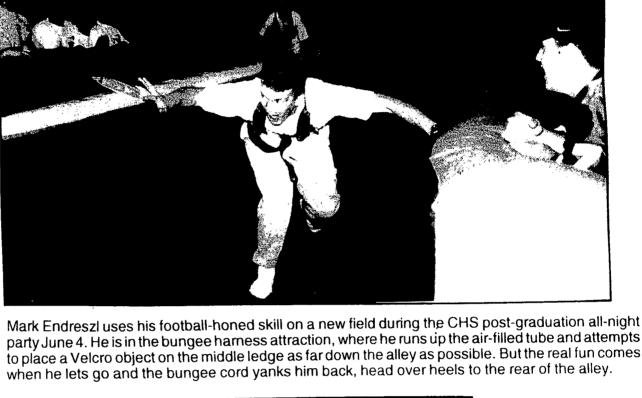

The job our 150 volunteers did was nothing short of miraculous," Olsen said. "We were able to throw an approximately $40,000 party with no conflicts. All the kids stayed until 5 a.m. It was just a perfect class."

Olsen said 93 percent of the graduating class attended the party, themed "Holywood Nights.". Graduates filtered into the party between 10-11 p.m. and staved until its conclusion just before 5 a.m. But as weary seniors dragged themselves home, they took with them a night-full of memories that will always stay with them

Jason Ostrom (left) rethinks his strategy during his much-hyped sumo wrestling match with Brad Conley (right). Here, Conley used a bit of trickery and backed away from the onrushing Ostrom and won this round. Fortunately, wagering on this match was kept to a minimum!

Welcome back, Stanley

Wasn't that great Saturday night? I've watched a lot of sports in my life and will see a lot more before I'm through. But I don't know how anything will be able to top the Red Wings winning the Stanley Cup, in four games, in front of the home crowd.

There was so much about it all that was perfect. The team properly deferred to the captain, Steve Yzerman, for a solo lap around the ice carrying the most coveted trophy in sports. I wrote back in January that no player in Detroit pro sports history had more deserved a championship without winning one than No. 19. Well, Stevie Y. won his championship and the smile he had while skating around was enough to bring tears to my eyes.

In a gesture just as appropriate, Yzerman passed the Cup on to Russian players Igor Larionov and Slava Fetisov. In order to measure the effect Fetisov had on hockey in Russia, think of the impact Michael Jordan and Muhammad Ali have had on sports here. Now combine it. Fetisov fought a tyrannical system in the old Soviet Union and found some of his lifelong friends had been spying on him. He battled for future Soviet hockey players when he became the first to come over and play in the NHL in 1989. Now 39 years old, Fetisov was overcome with emotion when putting into words what winning the Cup meant to him.

In Larionov, you only have a man who could seriously become the Russian president if he wanted to. These two icons of hockey have not been appreciated as they should have - until Saturday night.

Another great thing about this title was that everyone contributed one way or another. The stars like Yzerman, Brendan Shanahan and Sergei Fedorov played like stars. But how about the role players. Joe Kocur scoring a big Game 1 goal. Kris Draper's goal in the St.Louis series rescued the team from possible firstround elimination. Larry Murphy, unwanted in that Toronto wasteland, led all playoff players with a plus-16. And Darren McCarty, he who won a unanimous decision over Claudia Lemieux in March, scored the prettiest goal you will ever see to clinch the Game 4 win.

Another nice move was Scotty Bowman lacing up the skates before getting his turn with the Cup. His moves and motives were questioned, but they should be no more, now that we've seen the results.

To top it all off, the fans in Detroit really made a great effort not to go crazy like they did in 1984 and 1990. The national news media must have felt let down when there was no footage of violence from Detroit to be had during the postgame celebration. But hey, there's all the footage of car flags and red brooms they

What will happen next year? Who cares! This group of 25 guys just brought the biggest wave of excitement I've ever seen in this area. Let's just sit back, open up some lemonade and savor this championship season.

Tell us about your little league teams

Now that the high school sports seasons have passed, it's time to throw the spotlight on the younger crowd. We encourage all coaches in any boys or girls Independence Township Parks and Rec league to keep us updated with league standings or game summaries. They will be published as space allows, each week in The Clarkston News. Just give sportswriter Brad Monastiere a call at 625-3370 or fax them in at 625-0706. Correct spelling of names would also be appreciated.

Parks and Rec celebrates 25 years with summertime fun

BY BRAD MONASTIERE Clarkston News Staff Writer

Now that spring is over (that was a fun day and a half), summer is here and the Independence Township Parks and Recreation department is greeting it with a wide variety of activities and events.

From marching bands and kids games on July 4 to the ever-growing recreational sports leagues, there really is something for everyone of all ages offered this summer here in Clarkston.

In addition to the sports and activities, seminars will also be conducted, including CPR clinics, ballroom dancing classes and family karate lessons.

Parks and Rec Director Ann Conklin said there are almost too many activities to talk about. But with this being the department's 25th anniversary, there is something for everyone.

"We will be bringing the birthday in everything we do," she said. "At one of our camps, we will have a little birthday party for us."

Conklin said among the summer's highlights are the opening of Newport Beach, the circus coming to town July 1 and all of the 4th of July festivities.

As always, sports will be at the center of the department's activities. There are baseball camps. volleyball and in-line skating hockey leagues and tennis lessons. All of these are open to people of all ages and skill levels.

Plenty of activities are available for seniors, including the widowed support group, blood pressure testing, and the men's breakfast club. Many sporting activities are also offered, such as softball, golf and swimming.

Consult your summer program guide or call 625 8223 for more information.

othër' graduation

BY ANNETTE KINGSBURY

Clarkston News Editor

the Clarkston High School auditorium was filled to occur one to hime 5 as 47 students from Clarkston's atternative Renaissance High School and adult oduce tion program received their diplomas.

Relatives and friends brought video cameras and a few banners to the hour-long proceedings. Someone remarked that they'd never seen so many babies in the audience, and so many tears from the stage.

Eight Students addressed their fellow graduates, and many of them had a hard time getting through their speeches without getting emotional. These are students who took longer than normal to graduate, and many talked about the tough obstacles they overcame to make it to the stage that night.

"I worked so hard to get where I'm at and I thank you so much for that," said Lisa Vantine, her voice turning to a squeak as she dissolved into tears. The audience chuckled appreciatively, and when Renaissance High supervisor Beth Ford came back to the podium, she said, "Lisa, I only have a half a box of tissue up here."

The next speaker, Neil Belrose Jr., picked up the theme. "A couple years ago many of us may have never dreamed we'd be here," he said. "All of us have worked very hard to rise above our problems. But for every time they tried to hold us down, we will rise above."

Johanna Tubbs said she came back to school because "I have three small children at home and someday I want them to look back and say 'If Mom could do it, so can I'... I have a family of five and I have done it."

Jami Bassett said it took her three years to finish.

Angel Hubbard-Lawson steps forward to accept the white cord signifying her academic achievement.

"When I turned 16 I decided to drop out of school because I thought it was cool." Now she plans to go to college. "It may take awhile but it's worth it," she said.

Jason Washburn had to cut his speech short when he became—well, speechless. "I spent a lot of time here, a long time. It's pretty much been my home away from home," he said. When thanking his teachers his voice began to quiver. He threw up a hand and said, "See you guys later."

Kim Marquis, 26, has four children. "I decided to return to high school to show my children how important an education is," she said.

Each story, each moment of thankfulness and pride, was greeted warmly by the audience. The teachers, too, reacted with pride when they were remembered by their students on the stage.

Perhaps Community Education Director Marilyn Allyn summed up the night's feeling best. "One chapter in your book is finished. Now is the time to start the next chapter. You are the author, and the pages are blank."

Jamie Bassett gets moral support from Marilyn Allyn while giving her speech.
