Clarkston News Staff Writer The shootings at Columbine High School in Colorado reached a little too close to home for many Clarkston school students and parents last week.

Fears were exacerbated when a graffiti message was spray-painted on the sidewalk at Clarkston High School, and rumors of a hit list began circulating.

School administrators met with the entire student body Monday to help quell some of the fears, and sent letters to all parents over the weekend addressing some of the rumors that have surfaced.

Despite the administration's best efforts, some students and parents said they were still worried about possible copycats of the Colorado incident.

"There has been so much violence around the school recently, it scares me," said a female senior. "I fear for the whole student body. People are walking around afraid they could get shot."

"The biggest thing is to sift through the rumors going around," said the father of a high school senior. "It's something we can't take a chance with. It takes the focus off what the kids are in school for, and that's education."

One longtime teacher was asked to go through lockers near the gymnasium and pool to search for evi-Continued on page 4A High School student's two-year-old website on Tuesday that was described as "bizarre" by Superintendent Dr. Al Roberts.

Making room for bluebirds

Bluebird enthusiast offers tips for encouraging this colorful, native bird to take up residence

By Carol Fitzpatrick

Special to The Clarkston News

With Spring underway, now is a good time to inspect and clean out eastern bluebird and purple martin bird houses.

Don't be surprised if you see a deermouse nest when you first open the birdhouse. They are tough little critters and should be evicted to make way for Mr. and Mrs. Bluebird.

More troublesome are house sparrows which have moved into a bluebird house. Once inside, they stay year-round, preventing bluebirds from using them.

What's more, if a bluebird has found a nestbox and set up occupancy, house sparrows will enter the box, destroy the eggs or kill the nestlings and even the mother if she's unfortunate enough to be inside.

House sparrows can inflict the same kind of damage on purple martins. Purple martin houses are also invaded in the spring by another uninvited guest, the European starling.

Starlings are too big to enter man-made bluebird houses with 1 1/2-inch entry holes, but they are the right size to enter purple martin houses. They are equally as aggressive as house sparrows and kill purple martins to gain possession of the nesting cavity.

Both the house sparrow and the starling were introduced from Europe within the last 150 years. They have spread rapidly and taken over most of the natural tree cavities.

They were a major reason for the severe decline of bluebirds and purple martins earlier in this century. Devoted bird enthusiasts have helped bluebirds and other cavity nesters like the chickadee and the woodpecker by installing nest boxes, but the starlings and house sparrows are invading them, too.

If you would like to attract bluebirds and martins, and have a large, open lot, there are some control measures you can try to reduce the impact of house sparrows and starlings.

First, starlings do not like bright, shiny objects. Try dangling small mirrors from your purple martin house and paint the inside with a white, non-toxic paint. These tactics may not phase house sparrows, however.

But there are ways to deter house sparrows from using bluebird boxes. First, place them at least 300 feet from any building.

If you don't have this much space, try making a bluebird house out of four-inch PVC pipe. Make it in seven-inch lengths and cut a slot entry hole at the top, 1 3/8-inches tall by 2 1/4-inches wide.

You can find end caps called knock-out plugs at the hardware store or you can make your own tops and bottoms out of wood.

Carolyn stands next to a tree swallow nesting box neat the entrance to independence Oaks County Park. The post it sits on is covered in axle grease to keep away snakes, raccoons, squirrels and other predators. Tree swallows will often protect bluebirds.

for them to perch.

Because they are shallow, these nestboxes should have predator guards placed on the poles to prevent snakes, cats and raccoons from eating the eggs or babies. Predator guards are a good idea for any type of nestbox.

Check your birdhouses at least once a week through mid-August. Conditions in the wild can change daily and by monitoring the nestboxes, you can correct problems before they get worse. It will help prevent starlings and sparrows from taking over the boxes.

Human intervention will not cause bluebirds and martins to abandon their nests. Just be sure not to install more boxes than you can keep up with.

Mary Karshner of Royal Oak monitors many bluebird houses at Independence Oaks County Park on Sashabaw Road north of Clarkston Road. She sugture existence of bluebirds.

Starlings and house sparrows are extremely abundant and are a constant reminder of the negative impact of human introductions on natural ecosystems.

They have no natural enemies so we can only try to keep their populations in check. Since they are not native to America, starlings and house sparrows are not protected by law. Their nests and eggs should be removed from bluebird and martin houses.

If control measures don't work at your birdhouses, it would be better to block entry or remove the boxes. By letting starlings and house sparrows nest in those houses, the problem would only be compounded.

By working together and following a few guidelines, we can help ensure the success of the beautiful

Student's anti-drug poster is a winner

Gordon Bokuniewicz, a 13-year-old seventhgrader at Sashabaw Middle School rubbed elbows with Oakland County Prosecutor David Gorcyca and Detroit Pistons basketball star Grant Hill when he was named one of 13 winners in the Prosecutor's Middle School Anti-Drug Poster Contest. "First, I never really thought I'd win," said the budding art director. "But after I did, well, all I can say is Grant Hill is one cool dude, but he didn't seem as tall as I thought he'd be." Oakland County Prosecutor David Gorcyca said he "borrowed the idea" for the competition after a trip to Washington D.C. "We were there for a conference and I noticed this contest where they took anti-drug posters designed by kids and turned the best ones into a calendar. We're going to do the same thing here. Our anti-drug calendar for the year 2000 will be available sometime next fall."

Bokuniewicz's poster idea featured an illustration of an hour glass with the final grains of sand emptying to the bottom. Its headline read: "This is how much time you have left when you do drugs. Bokuniewicz received a $50 U.S. Savings Bond by Gorcyca, a tour of the Oakland County Prosecutor's office and was able to shake hands with Hill and get his autograph. Later that night, Bokuniewicz watched himself on both Channel 4 News and Channel 50 News, two of several news organizations that covered the presentation ceremonies.

Kevin's perspective from inside Clarkston High School

I'm getting used to dramatic endeavors that really start to get pushed for time.

It hasn't hit me yet for "Little Women." Our shows are on Thursday and Friday, and I still haven't really registered it.

Maybe it isn't so shocking that I'm not getting nervous yet. The cast is observably progressing as we rehearse. Everybody seems to be fairly calm about the whole deal.

That could also be due to having other things on our minds.

The shootings in Colorado last week and the graffiti at our own school have led to a tense situation, and I think it's all kept our minds from fully focusing on acting.

Friday was one of the most awkward days I have experienced in my education. Attitudes ranged from ignoring the situation to outright fear. The attendance office was packed every time I saw it with students trying to get out of the building and parents trying to get their kids out.

As you are certainly aware, rumors were flying around all day, and the only official information we would do in certain situations, and these feelings had coming at us for most of the day was from teachers choosing to share details of a building-wide staff meeting. We heard there were undercover police around school all day (I didn't see them, but hey they were undercover).

I've always felt that any place is just as susceptible to a shooting as the next place, including Clarkston. I may not be the norm, but I did not have any particular feelings of not being safe in school, but I also did not have any strong feeling of being safe.

Planes crash; you still fly. People get food poisoning; you still eat. The primary concerns of most of the people I observed did revolve around safety. Mine did as well:

though I didn't have any strong change in my attitude towards general safety, I did begin to wonder what I didn't seem to be uncommon.

People come up with their own way to feel safe, whether or not it's a direct solution to a problem. Metal detectors give some people that impression; staying away from school works for others. I try to think logically and acknowledge that the threat is not significantly worse here than before the Colorado shootings.

There is one striking change in school that I've noticed: everyone is looking at everyone else differently. I weigh every word my friends say, and they do the same to me. No one can afford to completely trust anyone now, which is a sad thing, but ultimately will provide some good in the form of prevention.

I don't feel this is the place to offer some attempt at a witty remark, so I hope I've given you my perspective from within the high school about last week's events. Humorous reflections on teenage life will return next time.

dence that may substantiate the rumors going around. He said he found nothing.

"If you can create fear and panic in people's minds, you can get them to believe almost anything," the teacher said. "If there are people enjoying the power trip they're on (by spreading the rumors) and are hiding behind this to give themselves a rush, then I feel sorry for them."

A mother of a high school student said she received a phone call from a friend; who is a school employee Friday, and was advised to pull her student out of school. Friday is when the rumors hit their peak, as many students went home early.

"I was one of the parents who took their daughter home early on Friday," she said. "They just didn't know what was going to happen, and I didn't want to take any chances."

One father of a high school student said he was struck by the similarities between Columbine and Clarkston.

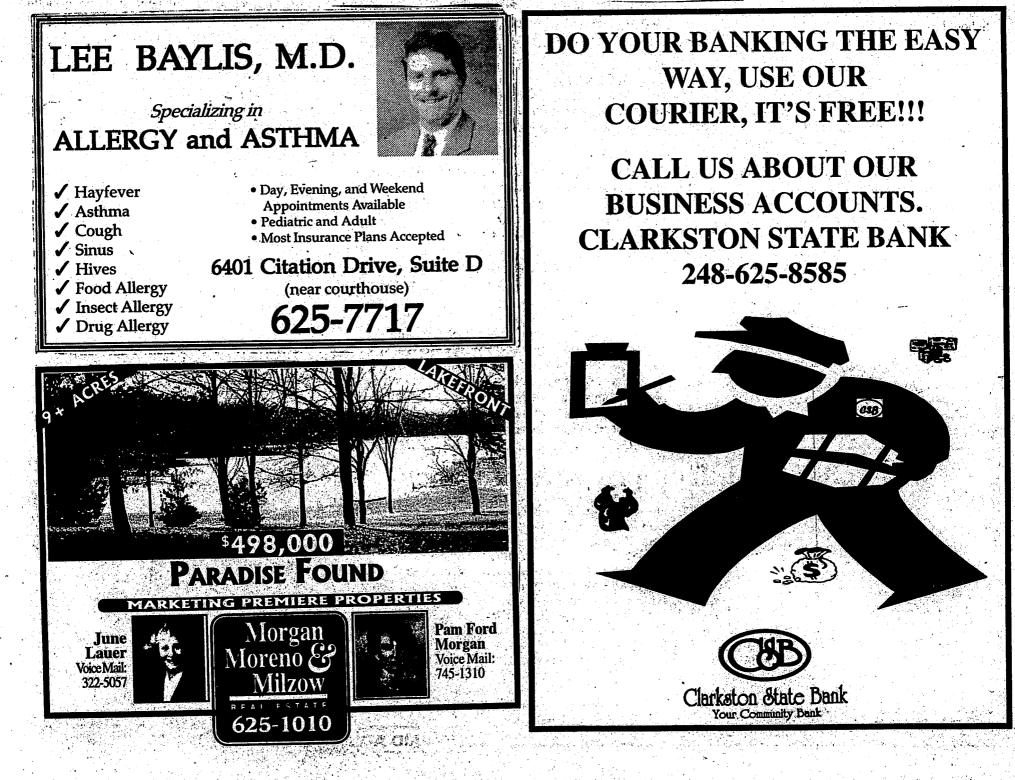

"I know someone who lives out there, and they said Columbine is just like Clarkston," he said. "I am very concerned. The signs are there. The biggest thing is how the administrators, teachers and police react to it. If there is a danger, it needs to be removed."

One member of the CHS support staff said she was worried because she could tell the kids were scared to be at school last week.

"Yes I am concerned, because the kids are scared to death," she said. "They are afraid of people that were their friends. Some were concerned about going to their cars in the parking lot after school. You just can't fathom what the kids are going through, especially the athletes."

The alleged hit list supposedly targeted some CHS athletes, and one female student said she and a friend were making a plan to meet and get out of the school in case something did happen.

"When it first happened, we saw how much (Columbine) was like Clarkston," another female student said. "It really can happen anywhere. I just hope it isn't here."

Schools act to increase security, rumor control and reevaluated crisis plans. In Clarkston, that happened as soon as officials received word of Columbine High School's tragic events.

Security was increased at all of the buildings across the Clarkston school district the day after the shootings, said Barb Johns, coordinator of public relations for Clarkston schools.

Last Friday Assistant Superintendent, Pat Brumback said, "This particular incident causes us to look at our whole game plan (for crisis management), We already have in place a comprehensive crisis plan and we used that plan on Wednesday.

"We have the best-researched methods of how to handle what's going on in the building and how to deal with the faculty, staff and the community."

Brumback said every community must be aware this can happen. "When you have 2,000 people in a building, it would be unlikely there wouldn't be a potential for problems."

Clarkston High School is very familiar to the Oakland County Sheriff's Department. During construction of the new school, members of the OCSD were called in to assess the layout of the school and its security measures, said Brumback.

Lt. Dale LaBair, Commander of the OCSD substation in Independence Township said his department

'It's okay to be different'

The students who terrorized Columbine High School in Colorado were allegedly part of a clique of students who felt they were outcasts. High school cliques are not a new phenomenon, and Clarkston High School has its share.

Pat Brumback, assistant superintendent of Clarkston schools, said the district plans to increase dealing with issues between groups.

"This falls under the umbrella of diversity and helping students understand it's okay to be different. We have a reasonable ratio of support for our students in terms of social workers and guidance counselors in the counseling department." The crisis management program includes counseling for students upset by the tragedy. Brumback said there are also several support groups for students on an ongoing basis.

Several of those support groups, some studentled, are under the direction of Kelly Kanigowski, student assistance coordinator at CHS. On Monday explored the possibility of several incidents while Clarkston High School was under construction.

"The school administration has been pretty progressive. Before the school opened we went through it with the engineers. We made certain recommendations regarding security devices, and they took our suggestions to heart," said La Bair. "We reviewed the emergency plan for the school when it was written and found it was pretty much all encompassing. We suggested some minor changes and they made them."

After the school was finished the department's special response team spent a day touring the building, said La Bair. A master set of blueprints to the school is kept at the substation and each patrol car

He added because of the strict guidelines about weapons in most of the area schools, there are few problems. "God forbid we have a problem," he said. "We don't want to be caught starting from ground zero. I think we're ahead of the curve as far as most schools go. We just want to stay up on it."

LaBair said graffitti found on the sidewalk on the east side of the building Thursday was cleaned up immediately and no suspects have been found. La Bair said the message read, "25 dead. Revenge of the Nerds."

It did spark additional fear and rumors, which administrators have been dealing with on a daily basis. On Friday, CHS principal Brent Cooley said he and others combed the high school and the Internet looking for a rumored "hit list," but none was found.

CHS was also rumored to have had up to 1,500 absences on Monday, said Johns. The school actually tallied up about 110 absences above the normal count of 140.

Both Johns and Dr. Al Roberts, superintendent of Clarkston schools said part of the problem is that students and parents are calling the media with reports of rumors which is fueling the fire: Roberts said calls should be directed to the board office so they can be handled properly. The Administration Office phone number is 623-5400.

Kanigowski said Superintendent Dr. Al Roberts and adminstrators spent most of the day in class assemblies talking to students about the shootings, security at CHS and answering questions.

"The kids talked about how they relate to each other. They did a good job of standing up and saying, 'We have to respect each other. It doesn't mean we have to agree or like each other."

"It was hard," she added. "The kids said it all comes down to them. The kids say they'll have to create a sense of community. That was the underlying message."

Lt. Dale LaBair, Commander of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department Substation in Independence Township said the department is "well aware of the cliques and who runs with who."

He added the school liaison, Dep. Chuck Young, who has an office in Clarkston high School "keeps an eye on them."

LaBair said he is hoping one of the federal law enforcement agencies will publish an "after-action" report on the shooting at Columbine High School.

Such a report would profile the people involved and, "here's what we looked at - here's what we found, what did we do wrong - how can we make it better?"

"I'm saddened more than anything," La Bair said. "If this was done by an outsider, a terrorist group, can you imagine the retaliation? What do you do when it's your own kids?"

The administration has also made CHS available as a training ground for the department, including its tracking dog program.

Editorial Shock waves from Colorado shootings will last a long time

We can't even begin to imagine the horror and heartache the families in Colorado are suffering following the shootings of their students and teacher at Columbine High School in Littleton.

Most people across the country are reeling as well. Like never before, our students are afraid of each other and afraid to go to school.

These concerns will probably remain until well past the end of the school year. It will take a lot of talking, listening and determination among all of us to help our children through this.

Clarkston students are to be commended for their mature attitudes at such a difficult time. That they are stepping forward in their attempts to treat each other with more respect is a good example for all of us to follow.

Clarkston will celebrate our National Day of Prayer Thursday, May 6 at 6:45 a.m. at Deer Lake Athletic Glub., The time is ripe for all of us to make an effort at being better people, and this event will be a good place to start.

Tickets are available at the Independence Township offices or by calling 625-2430. MKC

Concern should drive us to action, not depression

Dear Editor: All the worry in the world won't prevent a tragedy like Columbine High School and others from happening. All the positive action in the world will make a tremendous difference in the lives of every youth. It has been said that "Concern should drive us into action and not into a depression." Wonder what you can do?

1. Create healthy, positive relationships with every youth you come into contact with.

2. Learn about developmental assets the 40 qualities every young person needs to grow up healthy, caring and competent. www.search-institute.org. The more of these "developmental assets" youth have in their lives, the more likely they are to thrive and the less likely they are to be involved in a variety of risky behaviors that can hurt themselves or others.

3. Compliment a youth for doing something right! 4. Read "What Kids Need to Succeed" or "What Teens Need to Succeed."

5. Model and mentor young people with appropriate behavior that teaches them right from wrong.

6. Stop by the library and check out the discussion videos, "40 Assets Start Over, Starting Now" or "Creating Healthy Communities for Kids, Start Over, Starting Now." Gather your friends and neighbors and start discussing ways to make a difference in the lives of youth.

7. Support organizations that are working to make things better for all youth.

The tragedy that occurred in Littleton, Colorado has shaken the country. News coverage has been nonstop, and the level of anxiety for parents, educators and the community has gone through the roof. Apprehension has been particularly high due to the tasteless, insensitive work of a vandal who defaced a slab of concrete outside the east entrance of our high school. The graffiti stated "25 dead, Revenge of the Nerds." As is the case with most incidents of vandalism, the culprit left the scene in an attempt to remain anonymous. The individual created havoc and ran for cover. But the issues raised by the events of last week go well beyond some writing on the sidewalk and subsequent attempts to investigate the incident.

Drug and alcohol use, the glorification of violence, and the growing numbers of students who become disenfranchised with their schools and communities are all signs of what many refer to as a "Toxic Culture." Clarkston is not immune from hate, violence, drug use, or the anxiety that has been exacerbated by excessive media exposure! What should our community do to provide maximum protection for the children in our care? Allow me to share my suggestions with you: 1. Take some consolation in knowing that

1. Take some consolation in knowing that the schools have, and will continue, to work closely with the Qakland County Sheriff's Department. It might ease your mind to know that the police advised us about building security even before the high school construction was complete, and we have held police training drills at the new facility. 2. Understand that the schools have an emergency plan and it has been implemented. Of course this plan addresses physical safety, and it also tends to the emotional needs of our kids. Counseruling disgusts me! I think we need to return some control to the schools. Given the state of society, our legislators may need to work to bring about changes in the very fabric of our laws. Incidentally, our dress code does not permit coats to be worn in the building. Work with your school officials. It has 4. become commonplace for parents to fight disciplinary action on the basis that "you can't do that to my child." Some parents in one Michigan school actually resisted an administrator's attempt to have their children remove their black trench coats. This happened the day after the shootings and seemed insensitive, if not downright dangerous. What do children learn when parents do not support school rules? Now, I am not suggesting that schools be given a "blank check," but I do believe that disagreement between the adults in a child's life should not happen in front of the youngster. Remember that your actions speak for themselves and that school decisions and conduct codes are based upon what is good for the entire student body, as well as the youngster in question. 5. Call the right place to squelch rumors and to get accurate information! Rumors and innuendo did not work to our advantage last week. As I understand it, parents called the media, rather than the police or school authorities. The media descended upon CHS, but to what avail? Rather than spending time improving upon our plan to protect our students, hours were spent before cameras and tape recorders responding to unfounded rumors. All rumors Continued on page 7A

Why do winged things bother me?

Winged creatures give me the hebee-jeebees. Plain and simple they ook me out for no other reason than they have wings and flap about. Well, butterflies don't bother me -- but everything else, yuck.

I guess I have finally come clean with myself. I work hard to keep this tough-guy image polished for the world at large. And, if you ask me, self exploration, honesty to one's self is not all what it's cracked up to be. I'd just as soon live in self-denial and go on living in bliss with the knowledge that I can fool myself on about any topic.

There is comfort in ignorance.

On Sunday, I was forced into a situation where I couldn't hide the panic in my eyes nor the wildness in body language when some sort of black bird flew out of a hole in an overhang I was inspecting. Let me say this, going hell bent for leather down a 12-foot ladder when a little black bird with a littler yellow beak pops out is not a good thing for a macho image.

It takes some of the shine off the armor when on the ground is the gal you try to impress with acts of bravado, laughing at your own silliness. "I tried to tell you it was only a bird," she chortled.

Bird, schmird ... I wasn't sticking around up there to find out. I saw bat. I saw teeth, I saw skeletal little feet and wings tangled in my hair, and I heard little "eek, eek" noises. I can feel my heart start to race just reliving the moment.

When my feet hit the pavement I tried to pick up some of the shattered pieces of my once well constructed facade. With as much of a smile as I could muster I said, "Came down that ladder pretty fast, uh?" Then the classic guy "change the subject" routine, "Boy,, isn't it a great day. It feels good to have the sun shine on my face. Want a soda, or something?"

I'm not sure why our fine-feathered and winged friends affect me so ... I do know I can move near Mach 7 when one has entered my air space and I have to get away post-haste. God be with any small woman or child who is unlucky enough to occupy the space I have deemed the best path for escape. Sorry babe, there was a fourounce winged thing near 200 pound (and some) body.

When I was young I think there may have been a bird in the house, once, and Mom screamed. Maybe she's to blame for my phobia. It certainly isn't my fault. I'll have to go and have a talk to her about this. Of course, this doesn't help me any with the problem of the bird or birds or bats or wasps or moths or gnats living up in that over hang. They're still up there and I'm still down on the ground not wanting to go back up and get 'em out. Any ideas? Help. Please.

City moving ahead with new building plans

BY BRAD MONASTIERE Clarkston News Staff Writer

Representatives of the Clarkston city council will move ahead and begin to solicit bids for work on the city hall building.

The council's building committee was given the OK to move ahead with the plans after getting an idea what it was the council was looking for.

"We are going to contact an architect about our limited-space project," councilman Mike Kelley said.

One of the options the council seemed to be in favor of was reconfiguring the current building to include more office space and an extra parking bay for the city's Department of Public Works.

The city's current meeting space would be used for offices for city manager Art Pappas, with DPW supervisor Bob Pursley moving in to Pappas' current office. The council is exploring the option of holding its twice-a-month meetings at the Independence Township Library.

"It is available and inexpensive," said council member Anne Clifton. She said the library would charge the city $5 per meeting held there.

The council has worked for several months on a building plan, and has heard presentations from three area architects on possibilities for a brand-new building, or a refurbished one.

One fact the council universally agrees on is the need for more space for the DPW.

Pursley said his DPW staff would be willing to finish remodeling the garage and hall building, reducing some costs for the city.

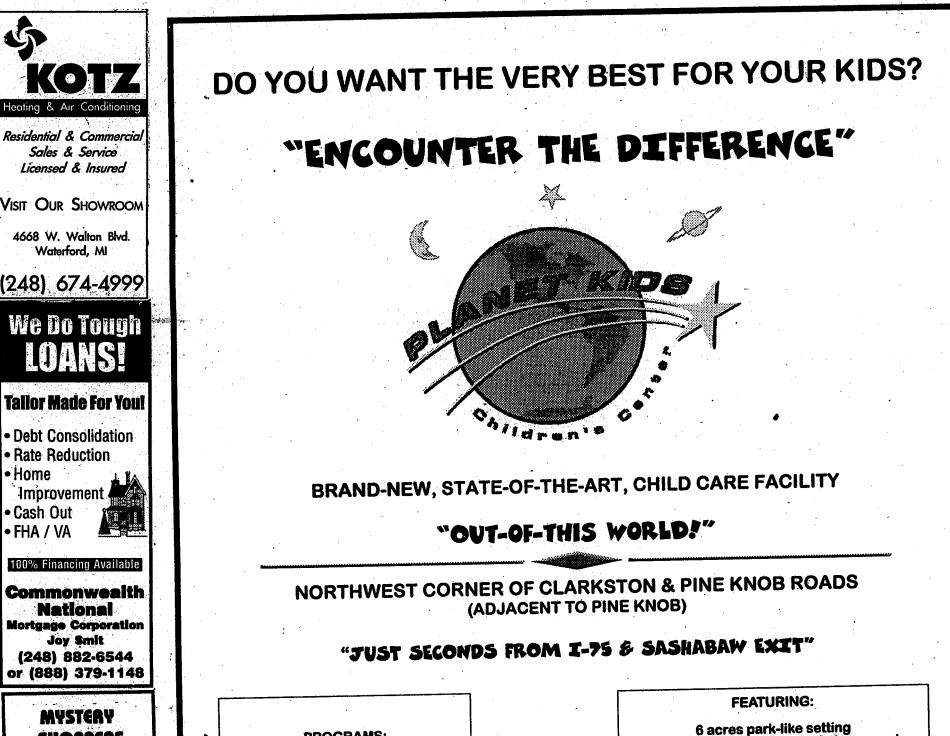

In other council business:

The council unanimously approved the site plan for a four-unit condominium to be located at the northeast corner of the city on Main Street. Developer Tim Birtsas said the plan meets all of the zoning requirements set forth by the city.

■ The council spent nearly 40 minutes discussing the size of the bills it's paying to city planner McKenna and Associates and city engineering firm Hubble, Roth and Clark. The council felt they were being charged too much for services rendered, and asked Pappas to draft a letter to both firms asking for details on the charges that were made.

The council then decided to consult both McKenna and Associates and Hubble, Roth and Clark regarding new parking maintenance fees in the city. City attorney Tom Ryan recommended the action, saying going that route was better than "pulling numbers out of thin air."

Rezoning for possible new restaurant denied by planners

BY EILEEN McCARVILLE

Clarkston News Staff Writer

A request to rezone a two-acre parcel from office (O) to C-3 (Commercial Highway) was denied by Independence Township Planning Commissioners at the April 22 meeting.

The parcel, which rests between the Clarkston Big Boy and Pontiac Municipal Cemeteries and Crematory, was eyed by national restaurant chain Red Robin for a new Clarkston eatery.

Before casting the 6-0 vote (Cynthia Lohmeier was absent), commissioners cited numerous concerns, among them traffic problems with Big Boy and another restaurant, the Outback Steakhouse, just across the street.

They also referred to township planner Dick Carlisle's planning review which states the current office zoning conforms with the master plan, and produces a transitional zoning that blends with commercially zoned Big Boy and the cemetery further south, zoned R-1R (rural residential).

Planning Commissioner Rich Oppmann said landowner Keith Davis was represented by Rudy Lozano, a Realtor with Morgan Moreno & Milzow. Lozano argued that over a decade ago, the parcel was zoned C-3. However, building director Bev McElmeel confirmed the zoning status as office since the '70s.

"Mr. Carlisle recommended to look at a compromise of OS-2 (Office Service Two) which would also allow a restaurant, but that was declined," Oppmann said. "The applicant said he wasn't interested in that."

That's because under OS-2, setback requirements would be greater -- 40 feet versus 30-foot setbacks under C-3, Oppmann explained, "which means less space for development."

At an earlier meeting, Clarkston Big Boy general manager Dan Scully said he was opposed to another restaurant opening next door -- which would compound current parking problems.

"We're still having problems at the Outback because they're parking in our parking lot and run across the street (Dixie Highway). It's especially dangerous when (patrons) have a few drinks."

Big Boy manager Jeff Davis said a sign out front warns parking is for Big Boy patrons only. And on busy nights a staff member patrols the parking lot, making sure this is followed, he said.

Oppmann feels planners need to address parking requirements for sit-down restaurants. He feels current stipulations -- one spot for every two patrons -- aren't enough. He cited the Outback and Duggan's Irish Pub as two Dixie eateries with insufficient parking space.

"When they're at full capacity, there are people standing at the bar, which indicates one for every two (people) isn't enough," Oppmann said. Mr. B's Roadhouse is an example of one restaurant which addressed this problem, calling for extra spaces in its site plan, he added.

McElmeel said the Mr. B's case prompted planners to amend parking requirements several years ago. "We feel (current requirements) are adequate," she said.

In an earlier interview, Brian McDonnell, director of operations for Red Robin of Michigan, said the Seattle-based burger chain -- which runs restaurants in Southgate, Westland, Novi and Madison Heights -is a big hit with teenagers and families.

Besides the food, the big attraction is the Planet Hollywood atmosphere -- with planes, cars and flying saucers -- 15 TV screens and a video arcade room. Red Robin plans to build 300 new restaurants across the U.S. within the next few years -- 10-15 are planned for the Detroit area.

The planning commission's denial is a recommendation only. The rezoning request will be decided by the township board at a future date.

ENTERTAINMENT FRIDAY & SATURDAY NIGHT WITH SHENANIGANS

'It's for the birds!'

A recent bird house building project at Clarkston's six elementary schools sponsored by the Clarkston Farm and Garden Club turned out to be a bigger success than club members expected.

Students created nearly 300 birdhouses, said the club's president, Kay Robertson. The project was promoted on a volunteer basis, although some teachers made it a class project. Students were given some ideas and directions to use if they chose to, but could create their own bird house as well.

After the bird houses were finished they were displayed in the schools and participating students received certificates from the Garden Club. Each school received a donation of about $200 in books about nature and birds.

Robertson said she was thrilled at the amount of participation from the students. "It was really neat. I wish more people had been able to visit the schools to see how creative they were. And the best thing is that most of the students made them with family members. One student at North Sashabaw Elementary made four birdhouses with her grandpa."

The bird houses made by Springfield Plains fourth grader Andy Piercy and third grader Kristin Stone are only two of almost 300 made by elementary school students. Andy and Kristin both said their moms want to display their birdhouses in their homes.

15 YEARS AGO (1984)

The increasing popularity of peer-pressure theft has reached new highs in shoplifting, say local storekeepers. In addition, the Clarkston Business Association is printing signs that read: "Shoplifting is not a game --- it's a crime," and will post them in all the stores.

After more than an hour of heated discussion, Independence Township firefighters storm out of the board meeting, unhappy with the administration's polices and accumulation of close to a $1-million surplus in the fire fund. Firefighters spokesman Steve Ronk says "Fire protection is slipping away and becoming a dangerous level compared to surrounding communities."

Though the Village of Clarkston budgeted $60,000 in its general fund last year for village operational costs, it spent only $27,460. This year it's budgeted $46,295 with the idea that most of it might be spent to clean and fix up the results of sewer construction.

Jim Brueck is elected president of the Clarkston Area Jaycees. He suceeds Mark Pankner who becomes chairman of the board.

Clarkston's track team runs over Avondale, winding up with a score of 78-45. Ten first places are captured by the Clarkston boys, including Tim Doherty (shot put), Wayne Thompson (long jump) and Tim Westover (high jump).

Well-known landmark Old Mill Tavern is destroyed by fire, with damages estimated at $100,000. The cause is a broken gas line in the basement. Wolves conquer Martians for first win

When your team is still searching for its first win three weeks into the season, you will take whatever you can get.

Clarkston

That was the prevailing opinion Friday night after the Clarkston varsity girls soccer team struggled, but got that first win, beating Goodrich 3-2 at the CHS field.

Coach Tami Mitchell was not pleased with her team's play through most of the first half, but a pair of late goals gave the team some much-needed momentum into halftime.

"It wasn't pretty, but it was a win," she said. "We weren't doing much the whole game. We didn't play up to our potential. But I think, with everything going on around here the last three or four days, their heads just weren't in it." Continued on Page 3B

rack teams unite for Andover Relays

BY BRAD MONASTIERE Clarkston News Staff Writer

Ask any member of the Clarkston boys and girls track teams which meet they look forward to the most, and the Andover Relays are sure to be at the top of the list.

The teams combine in relay events and compete against other unified track teams in the area that has everyone on the infield cheering for the same group.

The Wolves finished fifth overall at the meet with 51 points, just two behind fourth-place Bloomfield Hills Lahser. Milford won the invitational with 84 points, while Pontiac Northern (79) and Rochester Adams (76) rounded out the top five.

Girls track coach Gordie Richardson said he was pleased with the improvement in times he saw from a lot of the athletes.

"We were pretty consistent with all of our times, and the kids ran the times they expected to," he said. "Katie Bills and Lissa Lukens ran very well in the 4 by 3200."

Clarkston placed in six of the 14 events, highlighted by the first-place finish for the 4x800 relay team of Kevin Breen, Lukens, Matt Haver and Nicole Fischer. They clocked the competiton with a time of 9:02.3

The discus relay teams finished in second with throws adding up to 402 feet, 11 inches. Klint Powell, Katie Jerge, Mark Wisniewski and Becky Friesen were the team that took second.

The following teams finished third in their events: shot put relay - Ron Tolbert, Megan Whipp, Dave Chavers and Jerge; the high jump relay which included Brittani Brewer, Lindsay Brandt and Chavers; the 4x3200 relay team - Haver, Bills, David Sage and Lukens; and the shuttle relay team of Cody Senkyr, Brewer, Nick Holland and Amanda Chicalas.

"Our 4x800 team ran as fast as they have all, year," Richardson said. "Some of our younger kids are showing some improvement, and their form is getting better. We're not going to be blazing fast, but we're not bad there either. Will it be good enough against the competition we face? I don't know."

In their first test in the OAA Division I, the Wolves passed with flying colors.

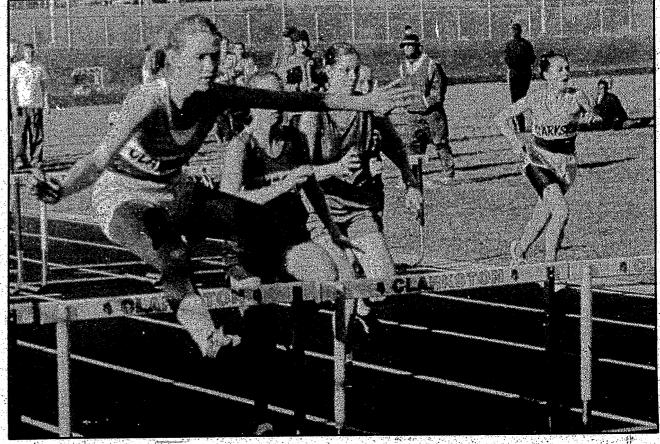

After two years of dominating the competition in the OAA Division II, Clarkston picked up where it left off in its first dual-meet action against OAA I teams Pontiac Central and Rochester.

Although Clarkston only had seven first-place finishes in the three-way meet, the team's depth was shown as it beat the Chiefs 74-54, and the Falcons 78-49.

"It was a great victory for us," Wyniemko said. "It was our first experience in Division I against a couple pretty good teams, and we did extremely well."

Leading the pack for the Wolves were its throwers and middle-distance runners. Clarkston took the top three places in the 800, and two of the top three places in the shot put and discus.

Sophomore Amanda Chicalas takes the early lead in the 100 meter hurdles at Clarkston's track scrimmage March 29. Chicalas has been improving her times in the 100 and 300 hurdles, and is looking to become one of the dominant hurdlers in Oakland County this season.

"Our throwers did an excellent job, and the middle and long distance guys were great. We had the total package going that day."

Other multiple-placers included Senkyr, who was second overall in the 300 hurdles (42.03) and third in the 110 hurdles (16.9), Sage, who was first in the 3200 run (9:52.4) and the 1600 run (4:31.5), and Haver, who was second to Sage in both events, 10:20 and 4.44.9 respectively. Chavers also took third in the high jump, with a leap of 5 feet, 8 inches.

Clarkston takes their annual shot at some of the county's top talent Saturday at the Ashley Relays. The competition is at Waterford Mott High School, and begins at 10 a.m.

Girls Track sees streak end

- Rochester 68 Clarkston 60
- Clarkston 92 Pontiac Central 36

The last time the Clarkston girls track team lost a dual meet, some of its members were less than a year old.

But that streak finally ended at the hands of Rochester on April 20, 68-60 in a three-way meet. Clarkston bounced back to whip Pontiac Central 92-36 in the other half of the day's competition?

"I am disappointed, because it's a meet we should have won," Richardson said. "We knew there were spots we couldn't give up points, and we did. If a couple of things could have gone differently, we would have won it."

The Falcons got unexpectedly strong performances from several events, including the 3200 run, the shot put, and discus throw.

"We didn't win the relays, and that really hurt

2:05.5, followed by Breen, also at 2:05.5, and Ryan Thomas at 2:08.6

The Wolves were dominant in the throwing events, led by Chavers. His throw of 44 feet, 2 1/2 inches was nearly three feet better than anyone else in the shot put. Tolbert took second against Central and third against Rochester with a throw of 41 feet, 10 inches.

Powell was first in the discus, as usual, with a toss of 133 feet, 1 inch. He also scored a first in the 400 dash with a time of 52.2 seconds.

"It was a team victory for us," Wyniemko said.

Clarkston swept the 200 dash, led by junior Rachel Uchman's time of 28.0 seconds. Lyndsay Vincent (28.4) and Brandt (28.6) followed close be-. . . . - 1 . · · · hind.

Chicalas won the 100 hurdles with a time of 17.6, while Fischer won the 800.

Baseball team stumbles vs. champs

BY BRAD MONASTIERE Clarkston News Staff Writer

After a roaring 7-0 start, the Clarkston varsity^{*} baseball team faced its biggest tests of the season this week.

Saturday, the team traveled to Midland High School for a game with the defending state champions, and Monday, took on the West Bloomfield Lakers, last season's OAA Division II champs.

The Wolves fell in both games, 8-3 and 14-7 respectively.

Against the Lakers, Clarkston lost a 5-1 second-inning lead when west Bloomfield exploded for six runs in the third and five runs in the fourth.

The loss drops Clarkston to 8-2 overall and 0-1 in the OAA Division I.

Midland 8 Clarkston 3

Clarkston 13 Traverse City West 2

Saturday, the Wolves finally got out from under the nasty weather, only to run into an avalanche of a baseball team.

The Midland Chemics, the defending Division I state champions, used splendid defense and hitting to hand Clarkston its first loss of the season 8-3 at the Midland High Quad. Clarkston bounced back in the day's second game to whip Traverse City West 13-2 in a mercy-shortened game.

"The kids were very intimidated," Price said of the Midland game. It was a big game, against a quality team that's well-coached. The kids wanted to do so well against them, maybe they stiffened up a bit. But that's why we play these games."

The Wolves were held to just one hit through the first six innings, while Midland consistently produced runs with timely hitting. Clarkston also committed an uncharacteristic four errors through the first six innings.

One positive out of the game was the good relief pitching by first-year varsity players Adam Riggs and Ryan Marino. They threw three innings of shutout ball and drew praise from Price after the game.

"They did a nice job throwing the ball, keeping us in there," Price said. "This is why we play these games. We want to see how well we measure up against teams like this, but the kids that played this game aren't the kids I know."

Game two saw the team return to form, exploding for the most runs it's had in one game this season. Senior Eric Jenks provided the fireworks with a two-run home run to left in the bottom of the fifth. It was the team's fist homer of the season.

Spencer Hynes added two hits and two RBI, while Mitchell slammed a first-inning double and an run batted in.

Mitchell was referring to the incidents that took place at the high school last week on the heels of the massacre at Columbine High School In Colorado.

Through the first half of the game, the Martians controlled the play, with the wind at their backs. But the Wolves broke through late in the half.

Freshman Lauren Welbourn scored her first goal of her career at the 6:46 mark with a high-arcing shot that went right through the arms of the Goodrich goalkeeper.

Senior Kara Bergkoetter scored her second goal of the season with just 22 seconds left in the half off a nice set up by Brooke Petrinic.

Athlete of the Week: Jenny Kerney

Salut, Jenny: In her four seasons with the Clarkston varsity girls soccer team, senior Jenny Kerney has seen it all. Before her freshman season, the team only scored four goals in the entire season. Since she came on board, the team has made the district finals two out of three years, and she has been a big part of those runs. She was voted the team's most valuable player after her freshman season, and this year, is one of the team's co-captains. Last year, she scored the only goal in Clarkston's 1-0 district semifinal win over West Bloomfield. She is a strong player all over the field who is always positive and supportive of her teammates. She carries a 3.0 grade point average, and is considering attending the University of Nevada-Las Vegas or Arizona State University next year. She was also a participant in the Clarkston Junior Miss contest, where she was awarded the Spirited Award.

Coach Tami Mitchell on Jenny: "She is definitely one of the leaders of our team. She is very competitive and hates to lose. She is my safety net in the back, and I like playing her up front too. She does a good job of getting the girls going before a game."

Clarkston stayed in control through much of the second half, taking a 3-0 lead when a corner kick by sophomore Angela Humphreys deflected into the Goodrich goal off two defenders.

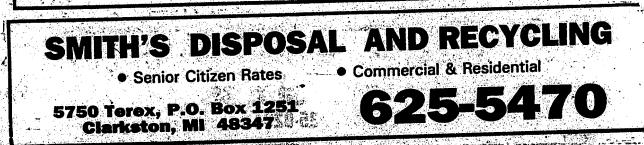

But Goodrich struck back and nearly pulled the game out. The Martians tallied goals with 7:53 and 4:06 left in the game to pull to within 3-2. They made a furious rally in the final seconds, but Clarkston escaped with the win.

Lauren Stout got the win in goal of the Wolves. "Jenny Kerney did a great job for us, again," Mitchell said. "This was our third game in four days, and I think we were a little tired. But a win's a win." Clarkston is now 1-4-1 on the season, and hosts Bloomfield Hills Lahser Thursday night at the CHS field. The JV game starts at 5:30, and the varsity at 7 p.m.

The Clarkston News: 625-3370

Jenny on Jenny: "I love being a leader, and I like passing some of he bits of wisdom on to the younger players. Sometimes, I feel like a mother with the team. I have enjoyed every moment this year. Now, we have team dinners before the games, and we bond so well at practices and games. It's always

AND DESCRIPTION OF A DE

B 4 Wed., April 28, 1999 The Clarkston (MI) News

After shootings, kids' safety takes top priority play on this spring. All too often, the people behind the scenes don't Like many of you reading this newspaper, I was not road the stoned with struck by the bloody massacre that took place at Columbine High School in Colorado last week.

But one of the nagging questions I have had since this tragedy is why. Not why these lunatic kids decided to open fire and laugh about it, nor why the parents had such opaque blinders on to their children building bombs in the den.

But why this was striking so close to home. Why we have had a handful of school shootings in the past few years, all out of state, and yet, this one seems to twist in your stomach.

In viewing the gory footage, some of my questions were answered. The grounds at Columbine High look strikingly similar to the new grounds here. Two-story building, trees and landscaping around the parking lot, green window panes.

The school district there seems quite similar to our own. Big, suburban high school, upper-middle class, a full spectrum of people.

In talking with many people in town over the past week, I was equally surprised that they had the same reactions I did. I have traded emails with some first-year college students, and they agree - Columbine is just like Clarkston.

Then, late last week, the whole incident crept a little closer. Idiotic graffiti on the high school sidewalk. Rumors circulating of a "hit list" with as many as 800 names on it.

Chances that this hit list was just a vicious rumor started from someone in need of attention are good. School administration seems to think the hit list doesn't, exist. Here's hoping it doesn't.

I was at the girls soccer game Friday night against Goodrich, and it was plainly obvious the players' minds were not on the game. The main topic of conversation all over was the shootings, and that isn't right. Even coach Tami Mitchell referred to the incidents in our post-game conversation, saying all the attention paid to this over the previous few days may have been a distraction to the team.

But the bottom line is, kids are scared to go to school. I talked to several students who have talked with friends and worked out plans, looked for places to hide, and made arrangements for a safe place to meet in case the unthinkable happens.

Nearly 300 students went home early Friday, and many more stated they weren't going to classes on Monday, out of fear.

One thing the administration has to be aware of is the fear the kids have. Whether a hit list or manifesto exists or not is a job for investigators. It is fear kids and parents have that needs to be addressed. The last place kids should feel fear is in school. Going through high school is difficult enough without having to plan quick escapes, or sizing up lockers to see how well you can hide in them.

I know the CHS staff has met about this issue, and has plans in place. For this pro-active thinking, I applaud them. Heaven forbid anything like that ever happening here, but I feel a little better knowing we have good people who are prepared for the worst.

A big salute goes to all the workers who labored the past couple months to get the baseball and softball varsity fields at CHS ready for the teams to get the "thank you" or "good job" they deserve when putting on these events. I know it was a real chore to get those fields ready so quickly after winter, and myself, all the parents, coaches and athletes appreciate it. Congratulations go out to CHS cheerleaders Michelle Wilson and Kristi Pope, who are on college cheerleading teams next season. Wilson made the team at Oakland University, and will be doing those gravity-defying flips and twists for the up-and-coming Golden Grizzlies basketball programs next year.

Pope will be jumping and cheering on the sidelines for Saginaw Valley State University. SVSU had an outstanding football team last year, and featured first-round pick Lamar King, who went to the Seattle Seahawks.

It's nice to see these girls continuing the activities they enjoy so much at the college level. I know they will both do well.

Fret not about the softball team's tough start.

In the team's first 13 games, it has played five top-10 teams, gone against the top pitcher in Oakland County (Jessie Warren from Birmingham Groves), and played in the largest and most competitive tournament in the state.

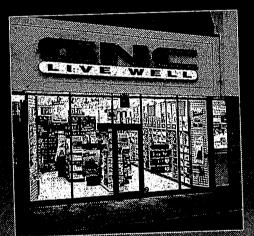

Half of Clarkston's starting lineup is sophomores, another starter is a freshman, and pitcher Candace Morgan is still renewing acquaintances with the ball diamond after taking a year off.

This is a team that will peak as the postseason hits, and with as much talent as they have, don't be surprised at another long, fun ride into June.

Eric did a nice job on the mound and at the plate." Price said. "Adam Leech has really been swinging the bat, and Mike Simko has played very well in the field. I wish we could play Midland one more time right now."

The Wolves returned to their aggressive ways against the Trojans, scoring three runs on no hits in the second inning. Clarkston scored on a wild pitch, an overthrow, and a balk.

Clarkston 8-14 Holly 2-2

Nothing like starting a new era with a pair of dominating wins over a regional rival.

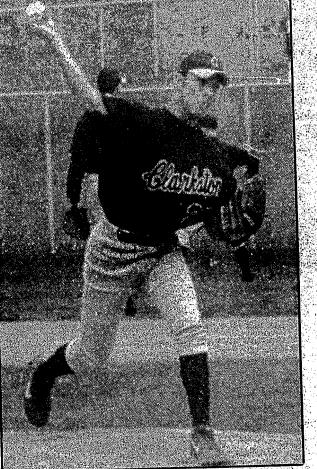

The Wolves saw their first action at the varsity field at CHS with 8-2 and 14-2 wins over the Holly Bronchos Wednesday afternoon.

In the first game, the Wolves slowly pulled away from Holly, scoring runs in five of the seven innings of the game. Senior Spencer Hynes was brilliant on the mound, allowing only two hits and two runs in the complete-game win.

There was nothing gradual about Clarkston's game two win. The Wolves hammered Holly pitching for nine runs in the first inning after falling behind 1-0 in the top of the first. Marino went the distance to get the win in game two.

against Holly. He will add quality depth to the pitching rotation, and has already solidified a spot in the middle of the batting order. He was thought to be out for the season with a back injury, but he received doctor's clearance to play, and should contribute to Clarkston's success this season.

Senior Spencer Hynes throws out the first pitch in the first game at the new CHS varsity baseball field Wednesday against Holly.

ham Groves tennis teams had played to 4-4 ties. That was a possibility again this year going into the first set, and just lost it." the final match. But this time, Groves pulled out the final contest and got a key OAA II win, 5-3 over Clark-49-at two-doubles. ston.

LI was a big loss for Clarkston, in its hopes of winning its first OAA Division II title. The Wolves are now 4-2-1-overall and 2-1-1 in the OAA II.

"We didn't play as well as we should have," coach Kevin Ortwine said. "Now, we need help from the other teams to win the league. We don't control our own destiny anymore."

The winners for Clarkston were Scott Barnett at three-singles, Brent Griffith at four-singles, and the two-doubles team of Jesse Roderick and Michael Rashid.

With the wins, Barnett and Griffith are both 7-3 on the season, tied with one-singles player Pat Heber for the best won-loss record on the team.

Ortwine said Groves and Clarkston are two evenly matched teams, and no matter how many times they play, it will be close:

"It's one of those things that if we played them 10 times, each team would win five," he said. "Three or four years ago, we didn't think we could compete with a team like Birmingham Groves, so at least we are on a level with them now."

Clarkston travels to Waterford Kettering Thursday for a dual meet. The action starts at 4 pim. The team will make up its rained-out match with Rôyal' Oak Kimball Monday at 4 p.m. at the CHS courts.

Warren Mott Invitational

Despite significant losses from last year's team, Clarkston managed to improve on its performance compared to last year at Saturday's Warren Mott Invitational.

The team finished fourth overall at the tournament. Troy Athens took first, while Groves and the University of Detroit-Jesuit tied for second.

One of the top players lately for Clarkston has been Barnett, who was a runner-up in three-singles at the invitational.

"Scott has played very well lately," Ortwine said. "He has played smarter and is making better shots Barnett beat a tough player from U-of-D in the semifinals before losing to Troy Athens in the finals. Two of his three losses this season have come to Athhave some good young players on their team." ens.

Heber was also the runner-up, at the numberone singles spot. "He made mistakes you won't see him make very often," Ortwine said. "He got up 5-3.

Clarkston 8 Lake Orion 0

Until Wednesday's dual meet, the Wolves have been involved in several close matches, with one or. two players determining the outcome.

Against Lake Orion, it was never that close.

Clarkston played its best team tennis of the season in completing an 8-0 sweep of the Dragons.

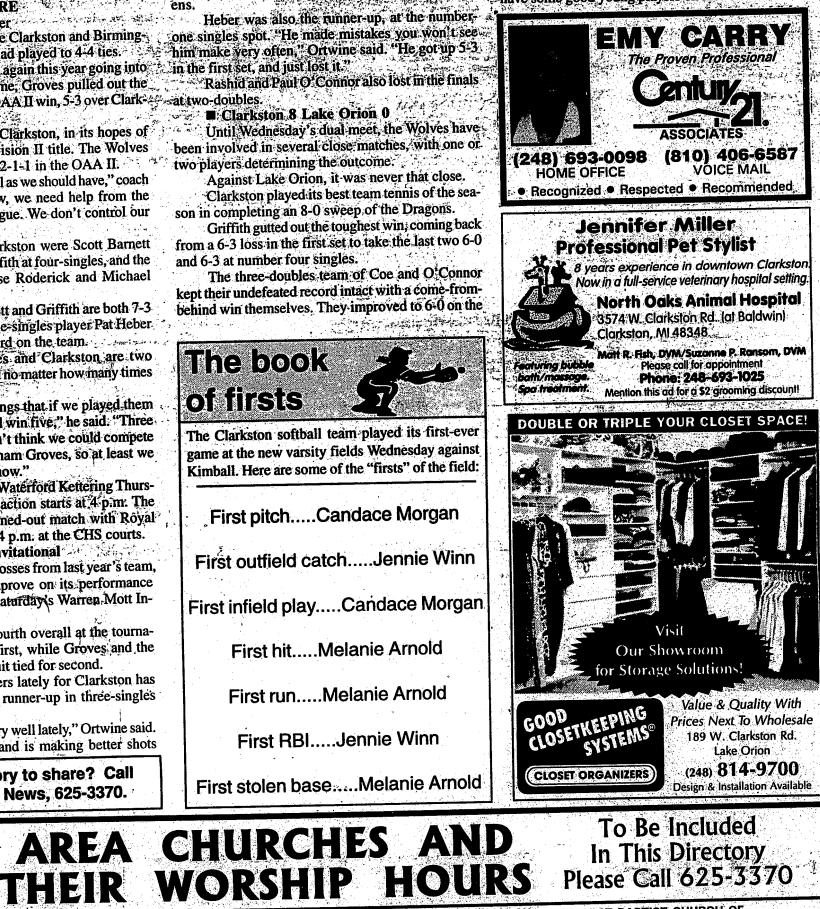

Griffith gutted out the toughest win; coming back from a 6-3 loss in the first set to take the last two 6-0 and 6-3 at number four singles.

The three-doubles team of Coe and O'Connor kept their undefeated record intact with a come-frombehind win themselves. They improved to 6-0 on the season with a 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 win. Grant Gilford and Dave Wickland made their debut at number four doubles, and were victorious, 4-6, 6-2, 6-1. Yo, "Orion is down a bit this year," Ortwine said. "But overall, they are better than they've been. They about them, and the first game we let get away, but the girls didn't get down," he said. "We played good defense, kept their bunters off the basepaths, and Lisa pitched a real nice game."

Senior Mandie Harrison fires a throw to first base during the firstever game at the new CHS varsity softball field Wednesday, Harrison's defense was a key factor in Clarkston's game two win over Brandon 4-2 Monday.

Ferguson's father Dr. Michael Ferguson is the principal at Brandon High School. But on Monday, Lisa made sure he will see sour faces in the hallway on Tuesday.

Although Ferguson didn't strike many out, she did a nice job getting her pitches over the plate and forcing Brandon into groundball outs, which for any pitcher; is just as good as a strikeout.

After losing the first game, leaving the bases loaded in the bottom of the seventh, Clarkston came out fired up to start game two. The Wolves jumped out to a 1-0 lead, thanks once again to the speed of junior leadoff hit-a ter Melanie Arnold. She legged out an infield bunt, advanced to second on an error, went to third on a sacrifice grounder by Lindsay Simko, and scored on a sacrifice fly by Morgan. Brandon struck back for a pair of runs in the next two innings to take a 2-1 lead. In the past, this meant the Blackhawks would rely on their pitching and slick defense to pull them through. But this time, Clarkston would not be denied. Sophomore Tricia Brewer, who had a terrific day offensively and defensively, led off the second inning with a single, and later scored on a double by senior Mandie Harrison, who fooled the defense into a bunting position. Harrison scored the game-winning run by stealing third, and getting home on a wild pitch.

was Clarkston's improved defense. Except for the third inning in game one, when Clarkston allowed five runs and committed three errors, the team played calm all day.

"I thought Mandie had an outstanding day at shortstop, and Lindsay did a nice job at third," Land said. "When we get two fielders coming up strong like that, it makes our whole team better."

The Wolves took a 1-0 lead in the first game, but were done in by the second-inning errors. Clarkston also stranded runners in scoring position in the fourth, fifth, sixth hand seventh innings of the first game.

North Star Softball Classic As the weather this weekend improved, so did the team's play.

Saturday, the team started off with a 3-1 win over Lapeer East, then fell to third-ranked Harper Woods Regina 14-0 and Imlay City 4-3 in the tournament held at Softball City in Rochester.

Sunday the team bounced back
