Semi rollover leaks fuel, snarls rush hour

Independence Township firefighters inspect the scene of a tractor-semitraller rollover on I-75 just north of M-15 on Monday. Just before 5 p.m., the southbound driver apparently lost control of his rig, which went into the median and rolled over into the northbound lanes. Attempts to obtain official details from the Michigan State Police were unsuccessful. Fire Captain Mike Fahrner said the driver; a 43-year-old Roseville man, suffered minor injuries and was taken to POH Medical Center-Clarkston primarily for observation. The truck leaked about 70 gallons of diesel fuel, Fahrner said. Firefighters did not clear the scene until about 9 p.m., and cleanup crews caused northbound traffic to be slowed even later into the evening. Photo by Christina Ulaj

Participants, each wearing a sign reflecting a different segment of the community, threw a ball of yarn back and forth to demonstrate how "connections" can help strengthen the community. The balloon represented a young person, and the exercise illustrated that more connections left fewer holes through which someone may fall. File photo

'Connecting' campaign kicks off

BY DON SCHELSKE

Clarkston News Staff Writer

There will be no large public rally to launch the campaign, nor will there be a "thermometer" to measure its progress.

The effort is so massive that a five-week period is needed to kick off "Each One Reach One...Connecting for a Better Community."

The Clarkston Coalition for Youth, with support from local schools, churches, businesses and service organizations, has issued a call for everyone to become active in the "community initiative" introduced last No### vember.

The coalition wants individuals to develop better relationships through specific activities. Some of the actions are as simple as a smile or a thank-you note. The resulting "connections," however, will promote "40 healthy assets" in the community.

"I think anybody who has any kind of investment in our community — and very few haven't — why wouldn't they want to participate?" said Suzette Hart, president of the coalition.

After doing extensive research, the students realized there were many victims of the Southeastern Tsunami without clothing, shelter and food. They decided to do something.

The entire student body at Clarkston Middle School formed a Penny War. The Penny War was between nine teams from all grades. The teams competed to see who could raise the most pennies. In order to increase thier chance of winnig. teams would pay attention to other teams' jars to see where they stand. # Connect with Clarkston; we will help

The Clarkston Coalition for Youth has developed a true community-wide coalition to launch what they call a "community initiative."

With the slogan, "Each One Reach One...Connecting for a Better Community," the campaign will kick off on Jan. 24 with five week's worth of specific suggestions which can promote personal "connections."

This campaign deserves everyone's support and we want to add ours.

This initiative promotes more than just a catchy, feel-good slogan. The campaign carries a specific, long-term strategy, based on carefully researched and time-tested values of family and community.

The coalition welcomes — and needs — the participation of schools, churches, businesses (of every category), law enforcement, service organizations, families and individuals.

They recognize the work already being done by good-hearted people in the community. They now call for a more unified, "intentional" approach, however, with a role for everyone.

The "40 Assets for Healthy Development" are worthy of detailed study, but the eight broad categories (which appear on page 22A) nicely summarize desired outcomes for both youth and adults. They balance principles of providing help to others and taking personal responsibility.

In addition to urging everyone to find practical ways to be involved, we pledge to do our part. The Clarkston News "connects" with our local community, and has for the past 75 years. Our news and feature coverage is focused on the people and the events of the Clarkston area, and we believe we help promote many of these "healthy assets."

We will continue to seek out news stories to accurately reflect community happenings. We will continue to seek out feature stories to highlight the good things being done by the people of our community.

We also continue to welcome items from the community for publication in The Clarkston News. For example, our Around Town calendar and In Our Churches (on the Religion page) are available to publicize local events. Our Milestones page is available for engagements, weddings, anniversaries, births, academic honors and business achievements. We already work with schools and service groups Further opinions expressed on elementary redistricting

A word of apology

This apology comes a year too late to make any difference. After dealing with the Clarkston School Board regarding what one reporter has labeled "the redistricting fiasco," I feel that I must tell our friend Tony Miller that we are sorry for not standing by him last year.

Like many people, I was thrilled to see him win his position on the board and I looked forward to some positive changes from someone from "our generation." His victory was short-lived as he struggled against Mrs. Foytek and Dr. Roberts on about every issue. Friends, associates, neighbors and classmates supported and applauded Tony as he tried to make the board accountable for some of the problems they were facing, such as budget issues, pay-to-play sports, etc. He questioned salaries and allowances, and such, and that is where the trouble began.

Each week we read on to see what was going on as the battle lines were drawn and the board refused to let Mr. Miller coach football in hopes he would give up his position. Again, like so many people, I felt sorry for him and wished him luck, but did nothing else to support him.

Tony, now that I see what you faced in the name of trying to make positive change for our children, I just want to say that I am sorry we were not behind you more.

The absolute lack of facts on the redistricting issue is enough to drive the involved parents crazy. Like most of the parents, if I could clearly see the logic I could swallow this bitter pill. However, the board admittedly states they cannot guarantee that this shuffling of students will alleviate the problem of absence of the "specialty" rooms. They admit this plan may only last a few years, but are hoping for five.

Even more specifically, I demanded an answer to what the projected new bus ride time would be for my daughter and they would not answer. This lack of an answer comes after first stating that the head of the transportation department was crucial in making this redistricting map. The best answer they could offer was that it would fall under the district rule of "under 60 minutes."

As a parent, I find a 60-minute, one-way bus ride for an elementary school child to be unacceptable. All I can do at this point is anxiously wait for the next board elections and hope we have some candidates with some common sense and backbone to stand up to the tired regime that exists.

ary line map; the proposed plan E; and all of the data in regard to school numbers, capacity, previous plan data (A-D), etc. PAT members had the opportunity to question everything: busing routes, school capacities, potential for growth, leaving people where they are, what each school had to offer, where overcrowding exists and which schools are not being fully utilized.

After hours of looking at the numbers, moving the subdivisions and streets back to their home schools and shifting things around, no matter how hard we tried, no matter how creative we sought to be, and most importantly without guidance from Geri or Anita, we ended up coming right back to the boundary proposals found in plan E. Our additional suggestions had to do with utilizing all available space at Andersonville Elementary.

Most PAT members had attended the meeting on December 6 with full intent of keeping their families at their home schools and reduce the number of families affected. We were frustrated by the fact that we consistently came to similar results as the Boundary Line Committee. It was very difficult to admit their findings were truly in the best interest of the district and that every angle had been considered.

These plans may not be in the best interest of those affected, including the best interest of myself and my family. However, I cannot condone personal attacks on members of the Boundary Line Committee for putting together a plan that is, in their educated opinion, in the best interest of our district as a whole.

It is also important to remember that the redistricting is only one part of Geri's position as Executive Director of Pre-K and Elementary Education. As PTO President of Independence Elementary, I invited her to speak at our general membership meeting in November regarding the 6/7 reconfiguration. She accepted without reservation. Not only did she present, but she took questions from the crowd, then chose to stay and talk with parents all on her own accord.

Personally, I think she has a very difficult position to uphold and as far as my own experiences with Geri have gone, I have been very pleased with the way Geri has handled herself. Furthermore, I have great respect for her and respect for the difficult (and controversial) tasks she has undertaken.

Dear Editor:

I would like to respond to the negative and disparaging remarks made about Geri Moore over the past few weeks; from the comments made in various editorials to the damaging remarks made by one of your own reporters at The Clarkston News. To her defense, Geri has been working very diligently facilitating the Boundary Line Committee. As a Parent Advisory Team (PAT) member, I have found her commitment to this redistricting effort commendable.

On December 6, Geri (along with Anita Banach) spent time with the PAT sharing extensive information, including, but not limited to, access to the current bound-

After listening to the redistricting committee's  $1\frac{1}{2}$ hour presentation on why boundaries need to change and the limited questioning on such a touchy subject by the board of education, the discussion was open for the floor.

To the redistricting committee's benefit, the board of education limited the time for open floor discussions to about 1/3 the time allowed for the Committee. Even with the limited time, the points brought forth from the floor not only proved that the committee did not complete their homework assignments pertaining to proper research for such a topic, but also was missing a key representative on the committee, a voice from a concerned parent.

Since adequate time was not available for the floor, I would like to take this time to share my comments and concerns.

Hark! Here I go again.

Just what is a community newspaper?

A community newspaper isn't a regional, county, state or national newspaper. A community newspaper publishes news and advertising that is timely and relevant to the community it serves. A community newspaper may (and should) find a local angle to a state, national or international incident, but it won't fill its newshole with anything that ain't local.

I can imagine your reaction if the community newspaper you are holding in your hands was full of news from Pontiac, Rochester, Birmingham, Flint, Livonia or anywhere else but here. Our niche, the reason you and your neighbors read us, is local. Local, local, local.

Anybody can slap a name down on some newsprint and call it a community newspaper. Locally, we're the only ones who consistently pull it off. What did the old TV commercial voice-overs used to say?

"Don't be fooled by cheap imitations, buy the original Ramco-matic-slice-a-magic-banana peeler ....

"Hey, Bob. Can I borrow your weed whacker?"

A community newspaper isn't some stuff-shirted rag that minds its "P's" and "Q's," while dotting all the "I's" and crossing all the "T's." A community newspaper isn't written with the Queen's English.

A community newspaper is colloquial. It's the voice of its community. It reads and sounds like a neighbor on the other side of the fence. Hoity-toity? Nah, we're just simple country-fołk. Anybody seen the piece of straw that was just hangin' from my mouth?

That is not to say we don't have to spell stuff cor-

About once a year I go back to the farthest, dark- rectly, we do (we try). And, it is a heck of a lot easier est, creepiest place of the office, pull out and dust off nowadays than in those thrilling days of yesteryear. (Note to editors and reporters: Can anybody say 'spellcheck?'')

Wake me up when the war is over.

A community newspaper is not indifferent. A community newspaper cares. Any community newspaper worth its salt is the cornerstone of debate from which all things local are established and built.

A community newspaper is the cheerleader when wonderful things happen locally.

A community newspaper is the voice of reason in turbulent seas.

A community newspaper mourns when the community grieves.

A community newspaper comforts the afflicted. A community newspaper is a community's conscience. It promotes citizenship. Through providing relevant, timely and interesting information, a community newspaper helps foster togetherness -- a sense of community. A community is held together by a bond called the community newspaper.

A community newspaper affects change for the good.

How much is in the bank account?

A community newspaper isn't a not-for-profit organization. A healthy community newspaper provides its owners and workers with a modest living, through delivery of good, local news and effective, enticing advertisements.

A community newspaper is a business.

So, what is a community newspaper? Take a gander at what is in your hand. You know the product. You know where to go when you have a complaint. You know the editor when you see him or her in the grocery. What you're reading is an award-winning community newspaper.

To be sure, we can improve and we will (with your help). Got ideas for us, send 'em in. Send them to me directly or to Shermanpub@aol.com.

Ah, I can get off the box and take a breather.

Where not to set your beer; a scope and a gift

I'm going to prove there are things to learn you didn't even think you needed to learn.

It was taught to me by a early-20s gal on a very slow night at a restaurant. She had stood at our table long enough to hear some of our conversation, which prompted her to tell an experience.

Seems she had been to a major outdoor event last summer, an event that caused the import of many portable toilets, that had been placed in a confined area. So confined that they touched each other.

When the need arose for, I'll call her Nadine, she carried her cup of beer into the totally inadequately sized plastic stall, only to find there are no shelves to sit said cup on.

Needing both hands to proceed, Nadine put the cup of beer on the toilet paper holder. About the time she got seated a neighboring goer left their portable and slammed its door so hard it rattled Nadine's toilet, causing the beer to fall.

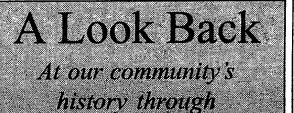

Well, it fell into both pairs of her pants causing gasps, banic and outrage. What to do? Her decision was to wring out her wear, put on her determined, straight ahead stare and march hurriedly past the bewildered, yet smiling, sympathetic and staring line-up awaiting her exit.

I'm one who follows doctors' orders to the nth degree. But, I may not be able to do it this time. When he said keep doing was I was doing I was scratching my myself.

Polio is apt to strike any place, it might be our child and it might be yourself. There must be a concerted effort on the part of everyone in the country to raise funds for this purpose. •Do You Protect Your Child's Health: Vigilance is a small price to pay to help maintain thehealth of your child. # Home invasion leads to multiple charges

A 22-year-old White Lake Township man was arraigned last week on eight counts, ranging from home invasion to felonious assault, all resulting from incidents on Eastlawn Avenue on Jan. 8 and 9.

Michael James Esson, 22, was in custody in the Oakland County Jail after 52-2 District Judge Kelley Kostin set bond at $750,000 at the Jan. 11 arraignment. Details on a subsequent court date were not immediately available.

Esson's threats of physical violence to a former girlfriend, up to and including murder, included multiple telephone calls and went so far as to include statements recorded on an Oakland County Sheriff patrol car video camera after his arrest.

"I think he's a real danger to society," sheriff Detective Jerry DeRosia said.

Charges include home invasion I (a 20-year felony), aggravated stalking (a five-year felony), felonious assault (a four-year felony), domestic violencethird offense (a two-year felony) and misdemeanor charges of cutting telephone lines, malicious use of telephone communication services and breaking and

entering

DeRosia said the county probation department will likely file additional charges, since Esson had gained early release from prison in December after a previous conviction for felonious assault.

Deputies were first called to an address on Eastlawn Avenue on Jan. 8, when the victim said Esson threw a telephone at her during an argument.

Deputies returned around 1 a.m. on Jan. 9, after the suspect allegedly called to tell the woman he was on his way over to the home with a gun to kill her, reports said.

While deputies were at the woman's home, the suspect called again. Without identifying himself, a deputy answered the phone and arranged a meeting with the suspect. Patrol units stopped a vehicle in which Esson was a passenger and took him into custody.

Reports said Esson continued to make threats against the woman after his arrest. In one instance, Esson was in the rear seat of a patrol car with the deputy's video camera pointed at him.

The power of your credit reports

By William H. Langdon, Jr., RFC CFS BCM RFP When was the last time you pulled up all three of your credit reports? You credit score determines whether you can get credit. Using a series of complex mathematical calculations that compare you to tens of millions of other people, lenders could accurately predict how likely you are to pay your bills. The higher your score, the better you look - and the lower your interest rates will be. Credit scores range from about 300 to 830. Generally, the higher the score, the lower the credit risk. Lenders have different standards for how much risk they will accept. Scores also fluctuate depending on credit activity. Credit bureaus only calculate your score at the lender's request; it will be based on the information in your file at that particular credit bureau, at that particular time only.

Five steps to get your credit repaired Blotches on your credit report always will cost you. So get started in repairing it and remember that it will not happen overnight.

Order your credit reports

Find out what the top three credit bureaus-Equifax (800)685-1111, TransUnion (800)888-4213, and Experian (888)397-3742 - are saying about you. It is likely that they are all slightly different, because creditors do not have to report to all three credit bureaus, they typically report to the credit bureau to which they also subscribe.

It is also important to order all three-credit reports. Beginning December 1, consumers are entitled to a free credit report once a year.

You can ask for reduced monthly payments, or even change due dates to balance out your monthly bills. Remember, that this is a short-term strategy. You will have to pay more interest to extend the repayment schedule, but it allows you to stay current and save your credit rating. # Family escapes house fire

BY DON SCHELSKE

A Glenalda Drive family escaped from an early morning fire on Jan. 17. The fire destroyed a storage shed, however, and caused damage to the home.

The Independence Township Fire Department was dispatched at about 1:40 a.m., with the fire coming under control around 2:06 a.m., according to Fire Marshal Greg Olrich.

The fire started in the back yard storage shed, Olrich said, but spread to the back of the house, broke some exterior windows and traveled into the roof area.

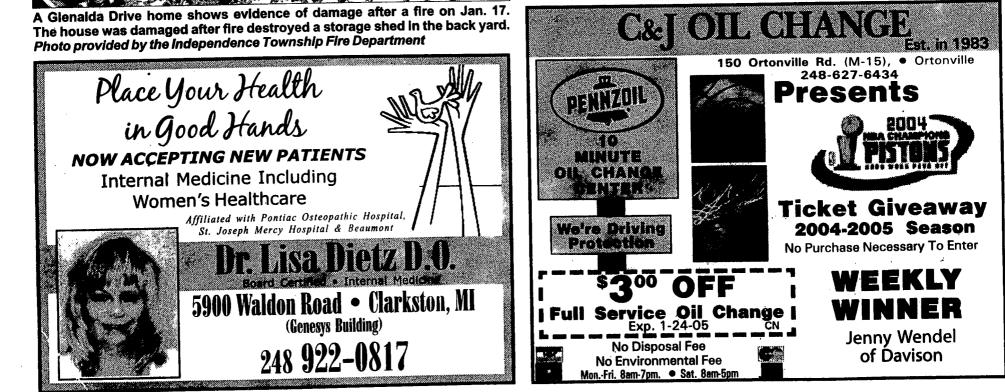

The cause of the fire was not immediately determined, and the Oakland was a tough one to fight."

County Sheriff's Department Fire Investigation Unit was called in to investigate. Olrich gave a preliminary estimate of $10,000 to $15,000 worth of damage to the home, in addition to the loss of the storage shed and its contents.

A passerby saw the fire and awoke the family, Olrich said, allowing everyone to escape safely.

No firefighters were injured, although the frigid temperatures caused some challenges both to personal safety and fighting the fire. Olrich said crews had to keep all water lines flowing at least slightly to prevent freezing.

"It was very, very cold," he said. "It

Strole protests plan for running school elections

BY DON SCHELSKE

Clarkston News Staff Writer

Springfield Township Clerk Nancy Strole did not say, "I told you so." However, her reaction to the latest plan for conducting school elections is similar to predictions she made last year before the new state law was passed.

The Springfield Township Board last week backed Strole's decision to "opt out" of a plan proposed by County Clerk Ruth Johnson, requiring each municipal clerk to administer elections for each school district within their boundaries, in the same precincts used for general elections.

At issue is the fallout from a new state law limiting all elections to four specific dates a year and calling for all elections to be administered by county, city, village and township clerks.

Proponents said the law would reduce voter confusion and save tax dollars by requiring fewer elections overall. The details, however, have Strole and others questioning those claims.

"There's a lot of redundancy,"said Strole, who predicted some of the problems last year before the Michigan Legislature passed the new law. "I don't believe it's cost effective. In fact, it's going to cost a bundle, and I don't think it's going to come with commensurate benefit to the voters."

Desiring to maintain their independence from municipal ballots and some semblance of their former June election date, most school districts have voted to establish their annual election in May (one of the options offered under the new state law).

The law no longer allows school districts to administer their own elections, as Clarkston Community Schools did in 2003 and 2004. Municipal clerks knew the state law would put the responsibility on them, but many assumed the predominant municipality (in

An Independence Township man has been charged with 10 counts of computer-related pornography crimes generated by a Pennsylvania state trooper's investigation.

If allowed to stand, Johnson's decision means Strole will have to staff precincts with ballots for Clarkston, Holly and Brandon school districts. Further, since Holly and Clarkston school districts each overlap into a total of five municipalities, the law dictates that they will pay the costs incurred by each local clerks' offices.

Strole said the Holly district, currently attempting to cut $2 million from their budget, could pay up to $20,000 just for the public notices in the five municipalities.

With other school districts facing similar budget challenges, Strole said municipal clerks not protesting Johnson's plan should not expect to be immediately reimbursed for their expenses.

"If there are local clerks who think that when the bill comes to the school districts they're just going to turn around and write a check, I think they're off in lala land."

In addition to financial issues, Strole said there could even be constitutional issues. For example, Springfield Township has a small portion of the Brandon school district within its boundaries, with only 39 registered voters.

Using a hypothetical 4 percent turnout for a school election, Strole said it could be easy to lose voter privacy.

"If two or three vote alike, you know how the person voted," she said.

Strole also noted the cost to order a minimum of

Local area clerks react to election plan

BY DON SCHELSKE Clarkston News Staff Writer

While some of the issues differ, Independence Township Clerk Shelagh VanderVeen's office also responded to County Clerk Ruth Johnson's plan for the administration of school elections by issuing an "opt out" memo.

VanderVeen said last week that memo "may have been premature."

The memo echoed some of the concerns voiced by Springfield Township Clerk Nancy Strole in that parents are used to voting in school elections separate from municipal elections. Independence Township includes small portions of the Lake Orion and Waterford school districts, and Johnson's plan would require Independence Township to accomodate those districts, as well.

Since Independence Township has cooperated well with Clarkston Community Schools in the past, VanderVeen's office proposed handling the entire district, including portions outside Independence Township. To date that proposal has been rejected.

VanderVeen admits the objections may be academic, since all elections are now technically "municipal" elections.

"There may be a bug in this," she said last week. "I don't know if we will have anything on this ballot." While none have been formally proposed to the Independence Township Board, a local ballot issue would support Johnson's contention that all voters be required to visit only one polling location.

Even with the local contention, Vander Veen said the situation could be worse. Some municipalities have portions of as many as seven school districts within their boundaries, and she knows of one school district which overlaps three county lines.

"There are a few issues we have to resolve," VanderVeen said, and she is waiting to learn how Johnson's office will rule.

While VanderVeen is new to the job, she is grateful that Sandy Miller is a veteran elections coordinator within the clerk's office.

"I knew I was going to get my feet wet this year, but I didn't anticipate these problems," VanderVeen said.

Art Pappas, meanwhile, appears to be the only local official escaping the bulk of the confusion.

Pappas, who serves as both city manager and clerk for the City of the Village of Clarkston, told the city council last week he anticipates few problems, since Clarkston has to deal with only one voting precinct and one school district.

The biggest change, he said, will be the requirement for the city to issue a separate public notice for the May election, with expected reimbursement from the school district.

"It doesn't make much difference to the city," Pappas said.

Sheriff Detective Carol Leposky said the formal charges include three counts of distributing child sexually abusive materials (a seven-year felony), two counts of possession of child sexually abusive materials (a fouryear felony) and five companion charges of use of a computer in committing a crime (a four-year felony).

A preliminary examination is scheduled for Feb. 3 in front of 52-2 Judge Kelley Kostin. The combination of charges resulted in bond being set at a total of $10,000, Liposky said,

The Clarkston basketball season has begun to make the leap from just a good start to a solid campaign. The Wolves improved to 8-0 (2-0) on Jan. 14 with a 75-59 victory against Pontiac Central.

For the second Friday night in a row, Clarkston fell behind early, letting the Chippewas jump out to a 10-2 lead. However, nine points from junior John Kast and two threes from senior Robbie Clark helped Clarkston make a 17-5 run to close the first quarter. Kast had a game high 21 points to go with five rebounds, two steals and a block in the contest.

"I had been in a little bit of a slump and I was trying to get out of it," said Kast.

After the Wolves slight lull in the first quarter, they were able to set up their motion offense with ease - at one point burning close to a minute off of the clock late in the second quarter.

"Clarkston is very tough and very physical. No matter what happens they come down and run their offense," said Pontiac Central Coach Albrey Tipton. "After the first five minutes of the game we started gambling instead of playing solid defense. You can't gamble with (Clarkston).'

The half closed with a 38-28 Clarkston lead, which grew to a 15 point lead by the end of the third quarter.

The Chippewas went on a mini-run in the fourth, but Kast stepped up for the Wolves again. After blocking a shot that would have cut the Clarkston lead to 10, Kast went coast to coast for a layup and a 64-50 lead.

"I always worry about our competitive spirit and if we play hard. If we do those things I'm happy," said Clarkston Coach Dan Fife.

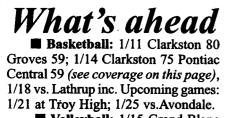

Down the stretch in the fourth quarter Clarkston went 15 for 18 from the free throw line to seal the game. Senior Brad Goodman was particularly deadly from the line, stroking nine of 10. Goodman finished with 15 points and notched five assists.

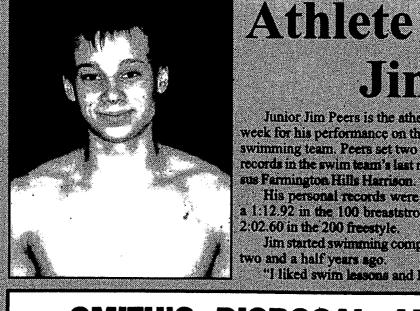

While the Wolves were able to hold off the Chippewas in the end, the fourth quarter exposed a possible weakness going forward. Central, especially junior Donte Campbell and senior Maurice Hobson, worked Clarkston over on the offensive boards gathering in numerous put-back attempts.

"We just have to get better at (rebounding). Rebounding is a part of the game that is physical and competitive, we just give up a million easy baskets and then we have to play so hard to get baskets," said Fife.

Earlier in the week Clarkston worked over Birmingham Groves to the tune of 80-59. Clark led all scorers with 25 points in the game. Junior Joe Moran chipped in 21 points for the Wolves as well.

This week Clarkston will take the show on the road. The game Jan. 18 at Southfield Lathrup finished too late for this edition of The Clarkston News. The Wolves play next at Troy on Jan. 21.

Clarkston did have some shining moments. Junior Ryan Kurrle won both the 50 freestyle and 100 yard butterfly for the Wolves.

Although the wrestling team posted a 1-3 record at the Michigan duals, Coach Joe DeGain is not displeased with the team's performance.

"I thought we wrestled pretty darn good," said DeGain. "I'm really not too concerned about our record right now. Twenty years from now no one is going to ask these kids what their record was, they will just want to know where they ended up at the end of the season."

Clarkston beat Lapeer West 38-28, lost to Grandville 36-30, and Lakewoods 33-29, before being ousted from the tournament by Montrose 48-10.

Braden L'Amoreaux won all four of his matches on the day. Tyler Snyder and Tommy Ellsworth wrestled tough winning what DeGain described as several "gut check" matches.

"We wrestled better at the Michigan Duals than we did at the Oakland County tournament (first place). The Michigan duals is the best tournament in the state outside of the State tournament," said DeGain.

The Wolves wrestling team, having already had matches against West Bloomfield and Waterford Mott rescheduled for a yet to be determined date, will open their league schedule on Jan. 19 at Avondale where they will face Lake Orion and Troy.

"Lake Orion matches up real well against us. It should be a good match," said DeGain.

Wed., January 19, 2005 The Clarkston (MI) News 13 A Hockey's had busy, fruitful week

BY NOAH PURCELL Clarkston News Sports Writer

This past week for the Wolves was make or break. After ending a three game losing streak in a rout against West Bloomfield on Jan. 8, the Wolves played four games in six nights, winning three and losing one to push their record to 9-5.

The centerpiece of the Wolves week was a showdown with Birmingham Unified. Having beaten Birmingham 4-0 on Dec. 10, the Wolves were looking to slam the league title door on the team which bested them late last year for the crown.

Clarkston, who came in to this week's action ranked number six in Division I, emerged triumphant, posting a 5-3 win over Birmingham, who ranked number seven.

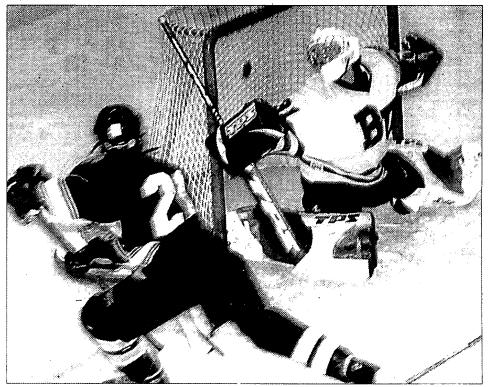

"(Clarkston) probably has the bragging rights for the year," said Birmingham Coach Steve McIntyre. "If they take care of their business they should win the OAA."

Senior Bryan Morin drew first blood against Birmingham banging home a rebound past senior goaltender Bobbie Howe at 10:15 of the first period. Juniors Kyle Chartrand and Mike Medonis assisted on the goal.

A momentary lapse on defense a minute later left Birmingham's Brian Walsh alone in front of Clarkston goalie Michael Brach, who could do little as Walsh's shot whistled by his ear and into the net, tying the game 1-1.

The Wolves did not tuck tail after their defensive mistake. At 7:27 of the first, junior Ricky Spano got a feed from senior Trevor Johns and chipped the puck top shelf past Howe for a 2-1 Clarkston advantage.

With 2:37 left in the first period, the game started to get dicey when Clarkston senior Steve Eddy was sent to the penalty box for tripping, shortly following was an interference penalty called on Birmingham's Khortnal Delvecchio at 2:00 of the first, leading to four on four hockey. As Eddy left the penalty box Clarkston had a man advantage for the final :37 of the period. Senior forward Mike Fogg stood out from his teammates Eddy leapt from the penalty box. perched upon the boards, seemed to know that Clarkston needed a goal ... A save by Howe prompted a line change and Fogg was on the ice, with seven tenths of a second left in the period he had scored a power play goal putting Clarkston up 3-1.

"When they scored, we came back and scored a big goal and stopped their momentum and kept ours going," said Clarkston Coach Bryan Krygier. "At the beginning of the year when (teams would score) we would go into a shell and we'd play frustrated and we'd take ourselves out of the game. We are starting to respond when they score against us and keep our composure and our discipline."

Walsh scored shorthanded at the beginning of the third, but true to their coach's words, the Wolves answered back as senior Alex Handley popped junior Kyle Cummings pass into the net.

Later on in the third, Birmingham tallied a goal on an odd play: the puck ricocheted far above the ice, momentarily nestling in Brach's glove, before bouncing out and landing on Delvicchio's stick, before being sent into the back of the net. Clarkston again was not phased and Chartrand made the game 5-3. Junior Matt Prasil and Fogg assisted on the final goal.

Rubber grass to be installed at CHS football stadium

Clarkston News Staff Writer

The days of Astroturf are long gone.

In fact artificial turf as a whole seems to have gone the way of the dinosaur. Synthetic is the word these days, and fields full of polyurethane blades of grass filled with thousands of pieces of rubber "dirt" is the norm.

As early as next year Clarkston High School football stadium will be the latest high school field in Oakland County to be upgraded to synthetic turf. The changeover from natural grass is estimated to cost $800,000. The new turf is part of phase I of the Master Facilities plan which was passed at the Jan. 10 school board meeting.

Unlike the other items in phase I, the synthetic turf field was not specifically part of the 2003 bond, although there is a provision for an "upgrade of field surfaces."

"I hate to say we have extra money available, because we are not done with all the projects, but we have undesignated funds of $1.8 million as we stand this very day. That is where the money is coming from (for the synthetic turf)," said Bruce Beamer in the presentation to the board on Jan. 10.

Superintendent Dr. Al Roberts was quick to note the surplus funds are due to bond bids coming in under budget and the schools managing the bond money "very well up to this point."

The biggest drawing point of the new turf field is the flexibility and versatility the high school would gain. This past year, in the fall, only football games were played at the CHS football stadium since the grass could practice time on the field with the soccer team, and both sports can play their games there. In addition the CHS' marching band, as well as any number of gym classes, will also be able to use the area without ruining the field for the Friday night football game.

The current maintenance costs for one natural grass field in the Clarkston school district is $11,250 a year, according to the packet given to the school board prior to their vote. This includes mowing, fertilization, aeration, topdressing, painting and irrigation repairs.

According to Rich Jordan, vice president of sales and marketing at General Sports Turf Systems, the maintenance costs for one of his company's synthetic turf fields is roughly $5,000 a year. General Sports Turf Systems installed the field the Wolves played on (and lost on) at West Bloomfield High School and is currently working on three synthetic turf fields for the Rochester school system.

Jordan mentioned that a synthetic turf field must be groomed so that trash does not work its way into the rubber "dirt" fill, and occasionally the fill must be redistributed across the field.

"(Synthetic turf) is a turf management tool, it is not meant to replace natural grass," said Jordan, implying that Clarkston could shift usage of other natural turf fields to the synthetic one to further cut maintenance costs district wide.

The current timetable for installation of the new synthetic turf field includes having a bid confirmed and ready for the board at the Feb. 14 meeting and breaking ground sometime in March or April. The goal is for the field to be ready for the start of fall sports.

Synthetic turf just the tip of the iceberg

BY NOAH PURCELL Clarkston News Staff Writer

While the featured item of the master facilities plan is the addition of synthetic turf to the CHS football stadium, the plan has many other facets which the board approved and looked over on Jan. 10.

The master facilities plan is divided into two parts: phase I and phase II. The Clarkston Community School Board approved most of phase I at the Jan. 10 meeting.

Phase I includes $300,000 for the installation of toilets at the CHS baseball/softball fields; $50,000 laid out for the construction of a staircase/entryway in the CHS gym; $50,000 at both CJHS and SMS for site work and improvements to the game fields; and $800,000 for a synthetic turf field at CHS.

All of the money for these projects is coming out of the 2003 bond. Unlike the other items, the synthetic turf field was not originally part of the bond, but was alluded to in the 2003 bond.

"In the bond application process we did have field renovation included. So (the synthetic turf field) is not a problem from the legal/moral high ground," said Superintendent Dr. Al Roberts.

Phase I also includes an additional $5,000 for maintenance at CJHS which will come from the 2006 general fund.

One item of phase I, $10,000 to relocate the football stadium ticket booth, was left out of the school board's vote because it can easily be integrated into projects of phase II.

Phase II calls for $50,000 for added practice fields at CHS; $100,000 for game fields at SMS; $299,000 for parking lot improvements; $200,000 to relocate the concession stand, which the ticket booth would be a part of; $50,000 for team room renovations; and $800,000 for another synthetic turf field.

According to the packet submitted to the board, phase II would be paid for by either a future bond, sinking fund or other means of teaming with the community.

"We had not thought this far ahead as far as the needs of the community," said Assistant Superintendent Dave Reschke, in regard to why some of the items in phase II were not part of the 2003 bond. A bid is expected to be announced and confirmed by the school board in regard to the synthetic turf at CHS at the Feb. 14 meeting.

not be maintained under higher usage.

"By reducing the number of gym classes and practices on the other fields, you also reduce, to some extent, the maintenance costs on practice fields as well," said Deputy Superintendent Dave Reschke.

A 16 Wed., January 19, 2005 The Clarkston (MI) News Parents concerned over daughter's Internet use

My middle-school aged daughter is very inter- ever, these are scenarios that can happen every day ested in chatting online with her friends, but I'm a and need to be addressed with your preteen: little worried about the hidden dangers of using the internet. How can I ensure her safety while also acknowledge her growing independence?

Using the computer and accessing the internet does seem to be the activity du jour for middle school children.

The preteen years are a time of rapid change in their lives. Although at this age preteens are still quite dependent on their families, they want more independence. Kids who are 9-12 years old also start to take an interest in the world around them, and relationships with friends become more important.

any information that makes me feel uncomfortable.

• I will never agree to get together with someone I "meet" online without first checking with my parents. If my parents agree to the meeting, I will be sure that it is in a public place and bring my mother or father along.

• I will never send a person my picture or anything else without first checking with my parents.

• I will not respond to any messages that are mean or in any way make me feel uncomfortable. It is not my fault if I get a message like that. If I do I will tell my parents right away so that they can contact the online services.

As with most important topics, talking about safety on the Internet requires more than one conversation. You'll probably need to renegotiate limits as your preteens grow and develop. Keeping the computer in a shared family space is a good way to help preteens feel a sense of supervision without having someone constantly peering over their shoulders.

Allowing your preteen to use the internet for social purposes can give them a little independence, but only if you feel confident that it is safe. Your preteen's level of maturity, responsibility and communication skills should directly factor in your decision on whether it's an allowable activity in your household.

School boards that work as a team guide districts to success

January is School Board Recognition Month and I thought it might be a good idea to use this column to provide readers with a historical perspective of the accomplishments of our Clarkston school boards, past and present. As many readers understand, it is the local school board that sets the vision for the district, approves the budget and hires the superintendent as its chief executive officer.

Our educational vision starts way back in 1850 with Nelson Clark.

Clarkston Schools

Dr. Al Roberts Mr. Clark erected

a large two-story building at the west end of Parke Lake. The building was designed as an academy and was later purchased by Isaac Cochran who opened a select school and served as its professor for several years.

For a period of time around 1868, the district school was housed at the Gulick house at 54 Buffalo Street, and students were taught by George Taylor. One can still discern the original lines of the school by observing the center section. Enrollment at the time numbered 90 students.

Today, the school district houses approximately 8,000 youngsters in eleven buildings and maintains other structures for transportation, maintenance, community education, preschool and administrative functions! Some of our more recent construction projects include:

•The construction of a new Clarkston High School ($52 million bond issue). That new high school was approved by the voters in 1995 and opened in 1998. The district student enrollment at this time rose to 6,507.

• The remodeling of existing elementary schools, renovations to Sashabaw Middle School, renovations to the old Clarkston High School for middle school purposes, renovations to Clarkston Middle School for community education purposes, technology improvements and the construction of a new elementary school. The June 1997 passage of a $57.65 million bond issue resulted in the renovations and the building of Independence Elementary, which opened in Nov. 1999.

 Additions to alleviate overcrowding and consolidate programs and services, renovations to the Community Education team is perhaps the most critical differ-Center and Administration Building, the building of an Early Childhood Center and other capital improvements were approved by voters in June of 2003. The passage of an $83.7 million dollar bond issue will result in a reconfiguration of grade levels with one school building housing grades 6/7, one school building housing grades 8/9 and Clarkston High School housing grades 10-12.

We have come a long way; but bricks and mortar, while visible, are only part of the story. Yes, school boards work hard to ensure their students have proper facilities, but they do so much more! First and foremost, they set policy that directs the administration to:

•Provide for the safety and welfare of students while at school or at a schoolsponsored activity.

•Set high expectations for students and staff; and offer our youngsters a rigorous curriculum designed to help them succeed in school and beyond.

•Guide and direct the administration to be good stewards of the district's budget.

•Hold all employees to a high standard of integrity.

While no single board member holds any "power," their work as a board really sets the stage for any success that a district enjoys. Their ability to act as a pattersonj ence between board's that are successful, and those that don't make the grade.

For all intense and purpose, our school board members are volunteers. They work long hours for little remuneration. I can honestly say that our board members set aside personal viewpoints to see the big picture. The decisions they make are determined on the basis of information. They listen and they are not swayed by popularity or pressure; rather they respond from a framework of their own sense of what is in the best interest of the 8,000 young people we serve.

I hope readers will take an opportunity to express appreciation to our seven board members during School Board Recognition Month. They can be reached at the following e mail addresses:

Players give 'Proof' of their talent

Two new additions to the Clarkston Village Players strutted their acting chops at the opening night of the troop's production of "Proof" by David Auburn.

Christine Marie Horstmann debuted as the lead Catherine, a brilliant young woman attempting to discover exactly how much she resembles her father, and how much she resembles herself.

The first thing to catch my attention about the new CVP actress occurred even before the opening act - I noticed in the program that Christine studied in the Studio Program at The American Musical and Dramatic Academy in New York, and now works as a communication and project specialist for Oakland County Mental Health Authority:

I found this little bit of irony funny since her debut role with CVP is as a young woman with possible mental health problems being dragged to New York by a domineering sister. Talk about studying up for a part.

Chicago.

Christine did a wonderful job at creating a believable woman lost in a world of confusing relationships while trying to find certainty in numbers. Also making his CVP'debut is Adam Kipiniak as the nervous, "geeky" Hal, a math professor in Adam comes to the CVP stage with a wide variety of acting experiences, including composing the music, writing the book and performing in his one-night only production of Jenny: The Jennifer Michael Wickens Story, a one act musical. The one point about Adam's performance that really caught my attention was how he turned looking uncomfortable into an art form. At first I thought he was simply nervous in his debut role – at least until my more highly educated, observant and loving husband Tom pointed out that was actually the demeanor of the character. Okay, so sue me - now I get the stiff on-stage awkwardness. I bow to the masters.

Einally, not to leave out the veterans, I would like to keep my comments on Cynthia Haaseth (Claire) and Verne Vackaro (Robert) like their performances: clean, simple and believable. Cynthia, I just want to say, I would truly hate having you as an older sister. And Verne, I've met many like you, and I miss them.

Now onto the play

Anyone terrified after hearing the word "drama" can relax. "Proof" follows the definition referring to a rollercoaster of emotions, not simply an "allow-your-girlfriend-to-bawl-her-eyesout" date requirement.

Haughed at moments, I teared up at others – and no, there were no free-flowing tears. I really became immersed in the play and the characters. One thing I must mention - I thid walk away unsansthed with the ending 'Allow me's moment to explain, while trying my hardest not to run the best part. Simply seased – I wanted more. Not necessarily the hardly flue sky with ally at little clouds over great realize parties more. This more, I wanted Hall for little alore, these little more. # Letters to the Editor

How did the Redistricting Committee determine the boundary change in such a short time frame? The last conversation I held with Anita Banach they were still putting together the committee and gathering information on the current enrollment at each elementary school within the district. Then approximately four weeks later the new boundary proposals were displayed at each of the elementary schools. This committee must have been composed of a bunch of workaholics or held to a very tight schedule for boundary submittal to the board of education.

This committee consisted of elementary school principals and transportation representation. Beyond their primary jobs, getting our children to and from school and educating them while they are there, the redistricting committee was able to gather statistical data on population growth in the school district due to new developments, determine the number of students at each school by grade level and their housing locations, and map out adequate bus routes for the new boundaries that would not have our children riding school buses for long periods of time.

They took this information and ran every possible change to the boundaries to limit the amount of affected children. Then they must have had an individual with a statistical background verify their calculations. Then they created a new boundary map to be displayed at each elementary school.

So lets look at this again: a committee was formed, statistical data was collected and analyzed and verified, and a five-year boundary proposal submitted. All of this was done within approximately four weeks after their daily assignments had ended. I don't know about you, but I find this very hard to believe, but then again they were only dealing with numbers and not children's emotions.

Some members of the redistricting committee stated during the meeting that their particular schools were unable to use dedicated classrooms because they were being used as regular classrooms due to the schools current student body size. They felt that the new boundaries would allow them to have the dedicated rooms back for their intended use.

This puzzled me since the sixth grade will no longer be taking up classrooms in the elementary schools. Simple addition and subtraction shows that at least two classrooms per school will become vacant after this school year. If those classrooms are empty, then why not move the classes that were utilizing the dedicated rooms into the recently vacated sixth grade rooms since they will no longer be needed in the elementary school buildings? This would at least give the dedicated rooms back to the school for their intended purpose.

For the schools that have not lost the use of the dedicated classrooms prior to the boundary change, won't this allow for an estimated growth potential of approximately 40 students or more depending on the number of sixth grade classrooms currently in use and their class capacity? I don't know if this is an area the committee looked at, but it appears to me that some of the capacity issues are going to be resolved just by moving the sixth grade to the middle school and this did not even require a boundary change.

The final comment I would like to make pertains to a statement made at the meeting dealing with communication with the affected parents. I don't know about any other parents reading this, but I definitely saw a communication gap between the parents and the redistricting committee. Anita Banach stated in her sales pitch to the board that she received numerous phone calls from concerned parents, but if you noticed not one non-Clarkston School employee was on the committee.

If they were legitimately concerned about the well being of the student body being rezoned, wouldn't it have made sense to have some parents on the committee? At least the children would have been represented instead of someone representing the adult that has to push a cart full of art supplies from classroom to classroom.

I feel that the committee would have been surprised with the response of parental volunteers that would have been willing to represent the children had they communicated with the parents.

All in all I am very disappointed with the board of education for their quick decision on this delicate matter. Most of all I am disappointed with the redistricting committee especially after one of the principals boasted about the communication between the schools and their staffs.

Here is a bit of advice for you: how about including the parents in your communication next time!

Tim McLennan Waldon Creek Resident

Editor's Note: Clarkston Community Schools does not have the sixth grade at the elementary level. Currently, sixth graders are housed at Clarkston and Sashabaw middle schools. Next year, all six graders will attend Sashabaw Middle School as a part of the grade reconfiguration.

I am a soldier currently deployed in Baghdad, Iraq. Recently, I received holiday greetings from a few of the staff members of Clarkston High School. I want to take the opportunity to thank all those who have written me. I appreciate the thoughts and prayers that have been sent along my way, it means a lot

While serving here, I have witnessed too much tragedy and much joy. This holiday season, I ask of the community to take a moment and reflect on the military. # 'Angels' bring joy to CAYA children

There aren't enough words in the English vocabulary to say thank you enough to Suzanne Schmidt and the Clarkston Brandon Community Credit Union Members for the joy and happiness they brought to over 50kids service by the Clarkston Area Youth Assistance.

Even though they did all of the work by shopping and filling the kids' Christmas Wish Lists, I had the privilege of being part of the team delivering the gifts. I was able to witness first hand as a single father of four who had just lost his job eyes swell up.

Thanks to the Clarkston Brandon CCU's generosity, his kids had a Christmas.

I was not able to witness this firsthand, but I can only imagine how a 9-year-old girl's pain was eased a little on Christmas morning as she opened her gifts. All she really wanted for Christmas was her mom, a U.S. soldier, back home from Kuwait. This wish could not be fulfilled, but her second wish for Bratz stuff was.

Then there is the story of a divorced mother of five who is dying of a brain tumor who was able to give her kids a special last Christmas together.

These are only three stories out of over 20 families whose lives were touched by the Clarkston Brandon Credit Union gift tree.

Thank you Clarkston Brandon Credit Union so much for being these kids' Christmas Angels. You gave them more than material gifts, you gave them hope.

More than a feel-good campaign, the "healthy assets" came from research conducted by the Minneapolis-based Search Institute into experiences and relationships needed for young people to be well-developed adults.

Such assets include everything from affirmation and personal self-worth to clear rules and consequences for breaking the rules. While targeted specifically at youth, the initiative's organizers believe they can still be modeled by and for adults.

"Everybody needs those things," said Jennifer Arkwright, a local parent educator who has received training from the Search Institute. "You can apply them to any age."

The "40 assets" are grouped into eight broad categories, which will be promoted in a variety of forms during the kickoff period.

Street light banners in downtown Clarkston will publicize some of the "community needs" with suggested actions to promote them.

A special calendar is being sent home with students, will be promoted in a variety of school and community newsletters, and appears on page 23A of this edition of The Clarkston News.

Each day of the kickoff period includes a specific suggested action, such as the wearing of Clarkstonrelated clothing (or school colors), writing notes of encouragement or thanks, making eye contact and saying hello to people on the street, and attending community activities.

The key is personal contact, Hart said.

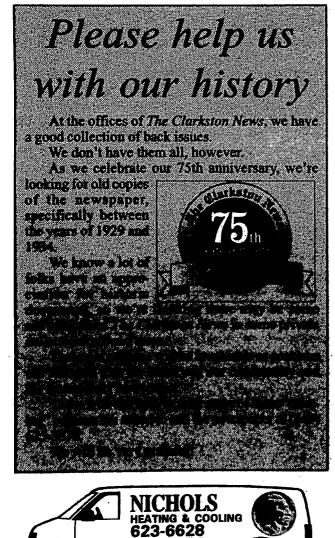

"When we reflect on our lives, we recognize it has been other people who have helped us get to the places we are in our lives," she said.

At a Nov. 6 leadership forum, organizers used a "web" of yarn to illustrate the strength which can be created when more "connections" are created. The initiative is intended to create the same thing in the community.

"If we become intentional about these connections, we will make an impact," Hart said.

Organizers admit the impact may not be easily or quickly seen. Because the ultimate goal is to create an entire generation of "healthy" adults, Hart said it might be considered "an 18-year plan."

"It's not a program; it's an approach," Arkwright said. "It's very difficult to measure. I already have a good feeling about my community."

5690 Dixie Hwy., Waterford

On the other hand, Arkwright predicts there may be a marked change in some individuals.

"Before, they would not acknowledge you on the street, and now they will," she said.

. Mike Stefanski, assistant principal at Clarkston Middle School and another coalition trainer, said school parents and students are being recruited to help. The kickoff calendar is being sent home with students in their "Friday földers," and school newsletters will also carry information about the initiative.

Building representatives will help promote "connections" in other ways, and Stefanski believes some current student projects may be expanded to include the entire community.

For example, one current exercise has students writing letters of appreciation to a school staff member. That may be expanded to include letters to other members of the community.

"Now we're making that link outside the school, not just inside the school," Stefanski said.

Charity projects conducted by students could become more powerful if everyone in the community joined in, Stefanski said, noting current efforts to aid tsunami victims in Asia as an example.

"Everybody is doing something, but if everybody does the same thing, wouldn't that be a powerful thing in our community?"

The "connecting" message is also being communicated through the Clarkston Area Chamber of Commerce newsletter, local cable television and "e-mail blasts" to various members of the community.

In addition, Hart, Arkwright and Stafanski continue to offer their time to present details of the "40 assets" and overall initiative to service clubs, business associations and other groups. Hart recently met with local pastors and has plans to meet with a group of child care providers.

After the kickoff, the coalition has other activities planned, including the "Clarkston Connects Expo" on April 16. A similar event last year focused on summer children's activities, but Hart said plans are to expand this year's program to include other family-friendly resources.

In the meantime, Hart is excited about the response so far and the potential down the road.

"I don't think we've ever had an opportunity for this kind of collective endeavor," she said.

To schedule a presentation to a group or to get more information on the initiative, call the coalition at (248) 922-3004.

100 ballots for such a small voter base.

Strole supported the proposal to have Independence Township serve as the administrator for the entire Clarkston school district. She also believes Brandon voters could still vote in a Groveland Township precinct with little confusion, since they have voted there for past school elections.

Township attorney Greg Need said the Independence proposal and other alternatives are legal.

"That's clearly consistent with the law," he said. "There's no reason that can't be done."

Local clerks who "opt out" of the county clerk's plan may still be required to perform certain functions, such as issuing absentee ballots and providing equip-

What do community members need?

The following eight categories encompass the "40 Assets to Healthy Development" as compiled by the Search Institute, and are foundational to the "community initiative" to be launched on Jan. 24. All community members need:

 ...to be surrounded by people who listen, care for, appreciate and accept them.

...to feel valued and valuable.

•...clear rules, consistent consequences for breaking the rules and encouragement to be and do their best.

 ...to value the importance of lifelong learning.

...strong guiding principles to help them make positive choices.

•...the skills to interact effectively with others, to make difficult decisions and to cope with new situations.

•...to believe in their own self-worth and ability to make good things happen.

road signs throughout Independence and Orion townships, and the "hill" is now used for skiing and snowboarding.

The historical society archives has much information on Col. Waldon and his legacy, Smith said.

Smith shares questions about other quotations in the poem, as do even some long-time residents with family histories of their own.

For example, what and where was "Lake Field" (from the poem's line, "Where Lake Field farms lay spreading fair")?

Chuck Robertson (whose grandfather was a prominent settler in the 1880s), is among those who would like to know.

"I wondered about that too [after reading it]," Robertson said. "It was a beautiful poem."

While the current Sashabaw Road is familiar to all, and while some will remember the separate region known as Sashabaw Plains, the poem contains an unclear reference to "the Sashabaw 'neath alders cool," which "winds its way to the slumbering pool." Neither Smith nor Robertson could interpret that passage of the poem.

The Clarkston News invites anyone with knowledge of the community's past to help clarify these and ment and poll lists. All other duties would be the county clerk's however.

"I'm not trying to shirk any of my responsibility or the municipality's responsibility," Strole said, noting her office would still be actively involved in the process under the proposed alternatives. She said Johnson's plan, however, "is going to be a costly course of action."

Middle school cagers finish crosstown rivalry

Perpetual bragging rights and the ball were up for grabs between Clarkston and Sashabaw Middle Schools on Jan. 10. Sashabaw's Chris Kowalk and Clarkston's Kevin Pinkos seek the favor of the basketball gods and possesion of the ball, during the eighth grade game.

eighth grade students won themselves perpetual bragging rights as they escaped with a 22-20 victory in the final tilt with Clarkston Middle School on Jan. 10. CMS' shot to tie the game fell short as time expired.

The rivalry between the two schools is being coming to an end due to Clarkston schools shift to a middle and junior high school setup.

"These kids have played together for years in the McGrath program, so it should not be that big of an adjustment," said Clarkston seventh grade Coach Mike Greve.

think (the game) wasn't fun they had so much size over us," said Sashabaw Middle School's SMS seventh grader Sean Hoffman. "(The season) next year will be great playing with those big guys."

Both of the games were very well attended. At one point one of the referee's was heard to remark that the crowd could rival that of some high school's varsity games in size.

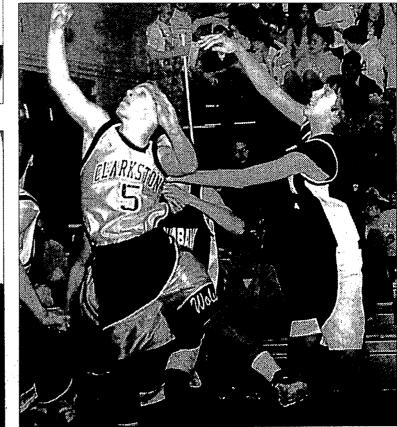

One group of students not affected by the School Building Shift is the cheerleaders, who already compose their seventh and eighth grade squads from both middle schools. They performed at halftime and in between the games.

Clarkston's eighth graders Greve's squad triumphed finished with an 8-4 record this season. Sashabaw's eighth grade students' pushed their

There was a time when a family would use a crest to advertise the feats of their brood to all who passed. Although the days of shields emblazoned with accomplishments blended into legend have passed, the DeGain family could easily fill one.

In the top corner of the crest would be four crowns placed upon a wrestling mat representing the DeGains' four high school state championships. Next there would be a wrestling singlet draped across a college diploma portraying the opportunities wrestling has afforded them. At the

The DeGain household, and all the lamps and plates inside, somehow withstood Joe and his brothers Pat and Clint as they grappled their way to the top of the high school ranks and into college. While Mike DeGain, who like his sons was crowned a state champion in 1976, was an integral part of the boys success, Their Mother, Donna, was the one who introduced them to the sport.

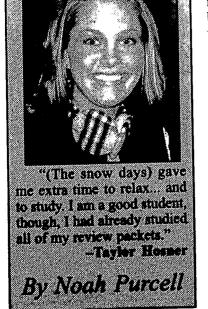

"I didn't have any thoughts about getting the kids into wrestling," said Mike, who at the time was coaching wrestling at Royal Oak Dondero. "One day I got home and there was a note from my wife that said 'took the kids to wrestling practice."" A leaflet for the Utica Hawks had come home and Donna felt the time was right for the boys to step off the sidelines of the Dondero practices and onto the mat.

"Joe (age eight) and Pat (age four) seemed to like it right off the bat. Clint (age two) was still a little young. He and I just rolled around on a mat in the corner," said Donna.

Being the baby of the family, Clint received extra training growing up from his brothers.

"They would come home from practice and still have energy left over and beat me up most of the time," said Clint. "In the long run (my brothers) got me where I am today."

Today Clint wrestles for The Citadel, although his freshman campaign has been

Residents patent new concept for staircase

BY CHRISTINA ULAJ

Clarkston news Staff Writer

A new product is on the market – and the whole idea stems from a bare staircase and two dedicated women.

Clarkston resident Judy Hoddinott and Ortonville resident Judy McBride worked hard to create the newest trend in home decor – Volban.

What is Volban? To understand, Hoddinott and McBride began explaining from the root of their creation.

If you take a look at your staircase, you may not see much. Many are traditional wood or steel and are used for only one purpose, as a guide to walk up and down steps. The Judys saw something more.

At the foot of many staircases is a post called the newel. Usually, the post has a swirling design. Hoddinott attempted to place a vase on top of the post, but the idea didn't work very well. The vase was unstable and could have crashed down upon the slightest movement. She proceeded to tape it down, glue it, anything that would help, but nothing did.

That is when the idea was born: Hoddinott and McBride put their heads together and came up with...Volban.

Volban is a system by which a custom made vessel, bowl or pot is safely and securely stabilized on the post (vo-lute) using a specialized, patent-pending fixture. With the help of ceramicist Don Fuchs, the specialized pots are already in production. Also, with the help of their husbands, Hoddinott and McBride were able to specify the details of their product.

"I expect to provide homeowners with the option to personalize their staircase," said Hoddinott. "It has been a lot of work, but also a lot of fun."

The pots are water tight and can hold eight inch potted plants, fresh flowers, dried silk flowers or any decorative piece of your choice.

Hoddinott and McBride have showcased their product at gatherings including the SCAMP auction.

"We are great partners," said McBride. "There were times that we were saddened by results and there were times that we were thrilled, but we stayed focused."

Volban is currently sold at The Parsonage, Frames N Art and North Oakland Trim and Mill Works Incorporated and Moran's Flora Incorporated.

Hoddinott and McBride have definitely worked hard and experienced great success.

Something they both feel has helped them acheive all they do is a saying by Winston Churchill: "No matter how tough it got, we never gave up."

Resolutions: Thoughts on the new year

والمستعدة والموقع الموقع الرواق والم

You may have seen these billboards while driving around the country. The billboards are a simple black background with white text. No fine print or sponsoring organization is included. They are simply messages... from God:

Tell the kids I love them. ---God

Let's meet at my house Sunday before the game. — God

What part of "Thou shalt not ... "

don't you understand? --- God We need to talk. - God

Keep using my name in vain, I'll make rush hour longer. --- God Loved the wedding; invite me to the marriage. -- God

That "Love Thy Neighbor" thing... I meant it. - God

Big bang theory, you've got to be kidding. — God

You think it's hot here? ---God

Have you read my #1 best seller? There will be a test. — God

(And my personal favorite ...)

Don't make me come down there. -- God

God has in fact given us many "messages." Messages of truth and love and hope and warning. The question is, "How are we responding?"

I am starting a new message series with my congregation on the book of Romans. Although the Apostle Paul wrote this letter almost 2,000 years ago, it remains a powerful and dangerous letter. Its truth will change your life if you let it.

As we start this New Year of 2005, many of us make resolutions --- to lose weight, to join the health club, to save more money --- whatever.

How about making some spiritual goals? I am suggesting two New Year's resolutions that come from the book of Romans...

1) Learn to see the world through God's eyes.

"Don't copy the behavior and customs of this world, but let God transform you into a new person by changing the way you think. Then you will know what God wants you to do, and you will know how good and pleasing and perfect his will really is" (Romans 12:2, NLT).

We tend to segment our lives into pieces. God and church over here; and our "real lives" over there. We may even go to church and sing the songs and go through the motions, but our hearts and minds and daily lives remain untouched by God. Our values and habits and actions are seldom brought before God for evaluation or guidance.

As we begin 2005, I encourage you to resolve: Learn to see the world through God's eyes. Ask him to transform you. Don't copy the behavior of this world. Get active in a good Bible-believing church. Ask God to change your heart and your life so that you start to see the world through his eyes!

2) Grow your faith by developing relationships with other believers.

In Romans 16, Paul greets many of his friends. Even the great Apostle Paul was not a "Lone Ranger" Christian. I believe the reason many Christians don't experience the joy of Christ is because they aren't following the plan of Christ.

God has told us very clearly how to grow spiritually. One key is to develop relationships with other believers.

A Christian who doesn't go to church is a contradiction in terms. It's like a football player without a team or a trumpet player without an orchestra. The most talented football player won't win any games all alone. The most gifted trumpet player cannot perform the "Messiah alone." Likewise, life was not meant to be a solo performance.

So, besides losing some weight this year, why not try to gain some friends and a closer walk with God?

(Greg Henneman is senior pastor of Clarkston Community Church.)

A brunch to help kids in Afghanistan is being planned for noon on Sunday, March 6 in the St. Daniel Cushing Center social hall. Enjoy a family style brunch and, at the same time, support and learn more on how we can help the kids in Afghanistan. Keynote speaker will be Kris Nedam.

It is estimated that infant mortality in Afghanistan is 165 per 1,000 live births, while under-five mortality is as high as 257 per 1,000 live births. There are an estimated 400,000 internally-displaced persons in the country. Afghanistan has also seen a rapid increase in the number of returnees coming back to the country in 2002, mostly from Pakistan.

More than 1.7 million people returned in 2002, many more than anticipated. Many households are gathering in urban areas such as Kabul as they are not able to rebuild homes and livelihoods in their original places of residence.

School board OKs curriculum for grades 6-7

BY CHRISTINA ULAJ Clarkston News Staff Writer

Since the redistricting was introduced to area residents, many people put a lot of focus on the issue. Another important issue is the new courses for grades 6-7 and 10-12.

At the Jan. 10 school board meeting, Executive Director of Pre-K and Elementary Education Geraldine Moore reviewed the courses for grades six and seven.

School will be required to take core classes including: language arts, math, science and social studies with technology being incorporated into the curriculum. Moore then explained the

The new courses include: Literature and Modern Media, which will replace Literature to Film and Contemporary Publishing; Female Team Sports; Personal Fitness - Females; Stress Management; Water Polo; Aquatics (water aerobics); and AP Physics.

Reschke also recommended Oral Communications text.

The school board approved the proposals as presented.

Board members react to final redistricting plan

BY CHRISTINA ULAJ

Clarkston news Staff Writer The Clarkston area is now educated on the redistricting of the elementary schools. Through board meetings and parental input, this issue has received plenty of energy and focus.

On Jan. 10, the school board listened as Executive Director of Pre-K and Elementary Education Geraldine Moore and Director of Communications and Marketing Anita Banach went over the redistricting plan for the last time.

ception of one change, section (D). The redistricting committee changed section (D) to rid some of the unevenness in that area, The Clarkston Bluff Condominiums. The Clarkston News attempted to contact the five families affected by the section (D) change, but they were unavailable for comment.

The board approved the plan conceptually, and although there were parents that agreed with the logic, there were many others who did not. Now that all is

The plan was the same with the ex- said and done, the board has made a decision and adjustment seems to be the important word.

"The parents had complete facts, but the board has to do what's best for all of our students," said School Board President Karen Foyteck. "We had to do something so our students can utilize the dedicated rooms."

Board members did converse at the Jan. 10 meeting about the plan. They asked many questions and once again listened as area parents voiced their opinions.

"I'm still looking at some of the figures presented by Mr. Lohmeier," said trustee John Koval. "This is a controversial and passionate issue no matter where it happens, and we worked to move as little around as possible."

Parents have voiced their views and board members have decided on this topic.

After speaking with several parents, they agreed everyone must move on and adjust to the new changes.

weight division.

Joe was a four-year-letter winner at Michigan, captain of the wrestling team in his senior year and named to an All-Big Ten team.

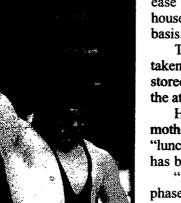

"Some parents make the mistake of pushing their kids before the child is committed to the sport. You have to keep some desire burning or they will burn out," said Mike. "We only let them go to one tournament a week (as kids), that seemed to be the key to keeping them from burning out."

Last season Joe took over for his father as the Clarkston wrestling team's coach. Mike was "not as young as he used to be" and tired of being an engineer by day and coach to the Wolves in his free time.

"I felt I left the program in good hands with Joe. He had already coached for two years (at Flint Kearsley)," said Mike. "He calls me a lot, most of the time he has everything figured out he just wants to see what I think too."

Mike still runs the Oakland County tournament, an event that he wrestled in when he attended Madison Heights.

"Eight years ago the Oak-they put up, thank god we could get scholarships and pay them back."

Time passed and tournaments were won and lost. Miles were traveled and singlets washed. Then in 1989, the DeGains moved to Clarkston. Mike coached the Clarkston youth wrestling program until landing the CHS coaching job in 1992.

"I don't think we've ever had a conversation without wrestling working its way in wrestling mat downstairs did ease the pounding the DeGain household underwent on a daily basis.

These days Donna has taken her antique lamps, long stored out of harms way, out of the attic.

Her boys are grown and the mother who for so long was the "lunch lady and singlet washer" has been set free.

"I could move on to the next phase of my life but I'm having too much fun traveling and seeing them," said Donna.

Her next trip will be to South Carolina to be with Clint as he undergoes surgery, something she has not quite grown accustomed too, but knows is part of the sport.

Clint hurt his ankle in the first match of his collegiate career, but perserveered to finish second in the tournament, going 4-1 on the day, He lost to a fellow teammate in the final.

While he loves the weather in South Carolina, Clint is still tied to Michigan by his family and Linsey Walker whom he has dated since the two were freshmen at Clarkston High School.

"I'll be bumming out and I'll call her and she will dig me out of whatever rut I'm in," said Clint.

Clint may still have three years of college left but he is already thinking about graduation and the possibility of running his own wrestling program.

"I want to help others accomplish things I could not. I think it would be fun if I could coach a program in the same league or district as Joe. We could have a little battle every year," said Clint. "I'm trying to pay my parents back for all of the sacrifices they made for me... besides they told me I'm not allowed back home without a diploma."

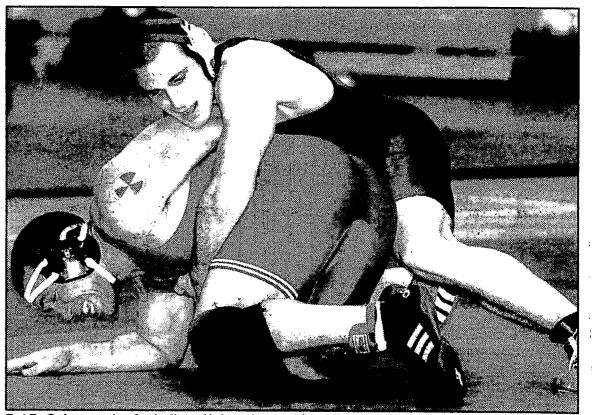

Pat is actually closer to taking the brothers sibling rivalry to the next level. He will graduate from Indiana at the end of the year with a degree in physical education and wants to pursue teaching and coaching. Pat and his fiancee Nicole Hill, who also graduated from Clarkston, are currently deciding between beginning their professional lives in Chicago or someplace in Michigan.

"I miss everything about Clarkston, the people, my friends, I don't get to see many of them anymore," said Pat.

Joe and his wife Elizabeth, with their children Madeline, 8, and Lillian, 1, reside in Grand Blanc. The couple's third child is on the way and his name will be Sam.

Even though the boys have grown up, their sibling rivalry still continues to burn.

"We'll be sitting around having a good old time and then Joe will kind of egg things on," said Clint. "He'll mention how he won a state championship, and then Pat will say he won two state championships, but then I'll say 'I was three time state qualifier.' The argument just goes on and on from there."

land County tournament was in real trouble. It is a hell of a tradition," said Mike.

Long before her boys ever wrestled in the Oakland County tournament, Donna remembers her sons sleeping in their singlets so they could roll out of bed, only to continue sleeping in the car on their way to a weekend wrestling tournament.

"My dad would wake us up and throw us into the car to get us to tournaments on the weekend," said Pat. "All of the Saturdays and Sundays (our parents) spent with us at tournaments and all of the entry fees somehow," said Donna.

Wrestling was so entrenched into the daily lifestyle of the DeGains that one Christmas, Donna's attempt to introduce something else into her sons' lives backfired completely.

"We got them a snowmobile one Christmas, they all just looked at it like they did not know what to do with it. Finally Joe said 'we could sell this and buy a wrestling mat,'" said Donna.

Which is what they did. And while their Christmas present that year did not get the boys out of the house completely, the

ty to crack down on restaurant sewer maintenance

BY DON SCHELSKE

Clarkston News Staff Writer

Downtown Clarkston businesses have caused thousands of dollars in "extraordinary maintenance" costs because of a failure to install and maintain grease traps, according to city officials.

In the future, responsible businesses will have to foot the bill, following action by the Clarkston City Council on Jan. 10.

The issue has been discussed at various times over the past six or seven years, but the hard line strategy was adopted after officials saw videotapes documenting grease discharge into the sanitary sewer system.

"You're going to start getting bills from Independence Township for extraordinary maintenance for these facilities," said Gary Tressel, the city's contracted engineer through Hubble, Roth and Clark. "This is an issue that has to be addressed. You have to have a mechanism to recover your money."

The council sent an advisory letter several years ago, but City Manager Art Pappas said no one took responsibility for ### the problem.

me, it's the other guy," Pappas said. After recent meetings with the Independence Township Department of Public Works, however, there is no question.

"We watched the videotape, and everybody's the cause of it," the city manager said.

"It is happening throughout [downtown]," Tressel said. "Anyplace that processes food."

Because of markings inside the worst-case scenario. "People came in and said, 'It's not sewer lines, a snake-like camera is able

'The ultimate problem is going to be when someone discharges something that causes the sewage to back up into the basements of people upstream. They're going to come to [the Clarkston City Council] to pay to clean the mess up.'

"They're doing extraordinary mainto record conditions at individual connect, tenance because the discharge from tions from local businesses and homes, these units is not being appropriately these units is not being appropriately handled," Tressel said. "The ultimate problem is going to be when someone discharges something that causes the sewage to back up into the basements of people upstream. They're going to come to this body to pay to clean the mess up."

The council voted to charge responsible businesses for the "extraordinary maintenance" (which requires the DPW to use acid to break up the grease buildup) and for any "consequential damage" to the sewer lines or property, caused by backups

Billing will be done based on the businesses' "residential equivalent unit," which is also used to compute regular sewer charges.

Council members wanted to be kind in communicating the new policy, but agreed to hold businesses more accountable

"The problem is not unsolvable," Mayor Sharron Catallo said.

Pedestrian signal will change: Wylie

Clarkston City Council:

 Council Member Steven Wylie said he received an e-mail promising a change to the pedestrian signal at Main and Washington streets.

According to Wylie, an e-mail from a staff member at the Road Commission for Oakland County said an electrician will reprogram the system to return the walkways to an automatic cycle, eliminating the need to push the pedestrian crossing button before crossing M-15.

Officials had complained about the new push-button system, installed by the road commission under orders from the Michigan Department of Transportation when new traffic signals were installed at downtown intersections last year.

Wylie said such changes usually take about two weeks. City Manager Art Pappas said he had not received notification that the change was approved.

• The city administration will ask the Traffic Improvement Association to conduct a study at Washington and Holcomb streets to see if stop signs are "warranted" for all four legs of the intersection.

Wylie suggested the study, but other council members predicted controversy.

"From my perspective it's a good thing to do," Wylie said, noting he tends to try to stop there even without a stop sign. "It seems like a natural place to put a stop sign."

Council Member Kristy Ottman, however, warned

In other business at the Jan. 10 meeting of the that stop signs on Holcomb would cause traffic backups, making it difficult for Holcomb residents to get in and out of their driveways.

> We talk about it every year" with the road commission, Pappas said, and others noted previous debate on the issue.

> Because the city is a member of TIA, there will be no cost for the warrant study.

> Ottman also volunteered to poll Holcomb residents to gauge their reaction to the idea.

> • Council Member David Savage proposed that the city revisit their master plan with contracted planner McKenna and Associates.

> Officials briefly debated both the need and the process of such a review. Mayor Sharron Catallo said the master plan is technically under the authority of the planning commission, but council members are welcome to share their suggestions.

> • Recognizing that poverty can be an issue in Clarkston, the council established guidelines for use by the city board of review for property tax appeals.

> Pappas said two homeowners made such appeals last year. For such purposes, local governments are allowed to set poverty levels no lower than that determined by federal guidelines.

> The city council voted to set the official poverty level at a point midway between the single person federal minimum of $9,310 and the Oakland County minimum level of $14,700.

Museum hosts

Capturing Clarkston Capturing Clarkston: A Celebration of Everyday Life' is on exhibit at the Clarkston Heritage Museum, located at the Independence Township Library on Clarkston Road. This is the ninth installment by the Clarkston Community Historical Society, who opened the museum's doors in 1999. The exhibit focuses on the daily life of Clarkston's earliest residents within the village and surrounding farms. Each display case is centered on different themes such as elementary school, high school, early childhood, business, women's fashion and handiwork, and also religion.

In the early childhood case are items such as a wind-up toy giraffe, child's parasol, hand stitched nightgown and images of small children at the turn of the last century. Because children have a way of growing up, the exhibit also covers high school years with old yearbooks, a marching band baton, as well as photos of the local soda shop and pool hall.

Business exhibits include the Porritt Diary, Setterlin Bros. Chevrolet Dealership, Addis Hardware, Miller & Beardslee lumber yard and even a Hydro plant owned by Henry Ford.

On the fun side, there is a collection from when Clarkston was a popular tourist destination. The exhibit will be on display until late spring. For more information, please contact the Clarkston Heritage Museum at (248) 922-0270.

health. Measles, for example, is estimated to kill 35,000 children every year. Major successes have been achieved, both during and after the Taliban era: in 2002. More than 11 million children were immunized against measles (measles immunization coverage now stands at about 80 percent) and some 6.4 million children were immunized against polio in each of five rounds of vaccinations (polio coverage exceeds 80 percent). There is a concern that cross-border transmission may occur if maximum polio immunization coverage is not achieved soon

Access to healthcare for women was severely restricted during the Taliban era and a recent study undertaken in four Afghan provinces indicates that the county still has one of the highest maternal morality ratios in the world, estimated at 1,600 deaths per 100,000 live births. Other health issues of concern are goiter and stunting — both related to the lack of iodized salt in Afghanistan — and anaemia due to iron deficiencies.

Diarrhoeal disease is prevalent among children, especially during summer months, because of severe water shortages, notably in rural areas. Approximately 65 percent of the population in urban areas and 81 percent in rural areas do not have access to safe water, with considerable regional disparities.

There are an estimated 3 million children now attending some form of learning, the vast majority at the primary level. Nationally, girls make up on average 30 percent of the student population, a massive increase even compared to the years prior to the Taliban restrictions on girls' education. However, in southern and eastern parts of Afghanistan, girls enrollment rates remain unacceptably low. In addition, the enormous demand for education has placed more pressure on the school system in terms of physical access, the need for classroom supplies and the shortage of qualified teachers.

Land mines continue to threaten the lives of women and children on a daily basis. Latest estimates indicate that between 150 and 300 people are killed or injured by land mines every month in Afghanistan, many of them children.
