The council also discussed the need for criteria which would limit the type of enterprise allowed to obtain financing through the EDC.

Council members debated the adop-

Other council members, administration and members of the business community spoke out in support of the EDC

Smith presented a list of items he hoped would be included in the articles of incorporation in an attempt to bring them in line with what he perceived to be the intent of the ordinance.

He was successful in getting council approval for one of his suggested revisions to the articles of incorporation which had been recommended to the council last week by the city's bonding attorney, Dennis Neiman.

Council members decided the majority of Smith's concerns could be dealt with by making them provisions in the

In addition they prohibited the corporation from participating in any political campaigns for candidates or other issues.

It was pointed out by Council Member John Chamber that had the council deleted provisions of the articles as Smith suggested the city would be prohibited from financing certain projects, although the purpose of the articles was to outline what the city would be permitted to do.

"We'll never justify this on that basis because this is not a depressed area, but the government has allowed cities to take the position 'everyone else is doing it so we better get on the band wagon'."

He said that throughout the discussion it had been noted the council would have three chances to review the application for financing and reject it at

"If an enterprise meets all the criteria of the board I'm concerned we would have to accept them in this community," said Schmid.

"Would we be encouraging a comfinance housing for residents, 50 years pany which might meet all the criteria but is a schlocky corporation? One of my concerns is whether we are taking away one of our rights. Will this bind us in areas we don't want to get involved anything I could accept this."

Novi Schools have decided not to buy an elementary school site in the Whispering Meadows subdivision.

The school-board previously had made an offer to buy an 8.1 acre site. but could not come to terms with the property owners — Kaufman & Broad. The district had not taken out an option to buy the property.

"The board does not feel we want to build an elementary school anywhere at this time and specifically not there ever." explained Board President Ron Milam.

Negotiations with the developers formally were terminated last week when the school board accepted a $5,000 donation to cover costs incurred throughout the negotiations. "The school board is unanimous in its decision not to build any more elementary schools in subdivisions," Milam

Milam said the board has adopted this stance because of the experience of surrounding school districts with declining enrollment.

"When your population changes and you don't need an elementary school building what do you do with it if it's in a subdivision," Milam asked.

The school board is looking for school sites on major mile roads or arteries to support the campus concept started such as Beck and Taft, he indicated. In with the three schools on Taft Road the future if property on mile roads is which are located on a major artery. As If a school has been built, it can be converted for other uses, Milam explained.

The school board president said there also was some concern that the Whispering Meadows site was too small since the ideal elementary site should be 10 acres. However, he emphasized the primary reason for terminating negotiations was the board's philosophy to buy property on major arteries.

"We determined we no longer have an interest in the subdivision property." Milam said.

Use of an abandoned school is limited to office space, and it is difficult to get a planning board to approve commercial zoning in the middle of a subdivision, Milam explained.

"Otherwise about the only thing that can be done is raze the school and build houses on the property. We did not feel that would be a prudent investment," Milam said.

Novi Schools already own another elementary school site on Beck Road and negotiations for additional sites are underway, he added.

Milam admitted some residents bought homes in Whispering Meadows under the impression a neighborhood school would be constructed there.

However, he said that to his knowledge no one on the school board or in the school administration has told He pointed to examples in Livonia sellers or buyers that there would be a school in Whispering Meadows.

"I'm sure when the subdivision was built there was a lot of discussion of a potential school there and I don't know what the residents in that subdivision were told when they bought the home from the realtors. I imagine some promises were made. But based on enrollment projections the school district could not justify a decision to buy that property five years ago when that subdivision was planned."

Police report that a Walled Lake woman was bilked out of her savings by the two women within the past month, and two additional incidents have been reported in Farmington.

Police said the scheme works like his: The suspects single out a victim, rusually an elderly woman, and tell her they have just found a large sum of money. They then show the victim a billfold bulging with cash.

Planners slate public hearing on rezoning

Commerce Township will be held at 7:30 p.m. next Wednesday (November 28) by the township planning commission. The meeting will be held in the township hall, 2840 Fisher Avenue.

The commission initiated the rezoning in September as a compromise with Daniel D. Lublin, president of Standard Industries. Lublin and several of his associates own or control almost 500 acres bounded roughly by West Maple, Haggerty, Fourteen Mile and Welch roads.

of Haggerty will remain zoned as a mobile home district. The parcel includes a black spruce bog that the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has said will require special individual permits for filling or dredging because it is the headwaters of the Rouge

The township board last week accepted for first consideration another rezoning request from Lublin's group to change an 11-acre parcel on West Maple near Haggerty from R-1B (single-family residential) and C-1 (local business) to C-2 (community business) for a proposed landscape

Township Planning Consultant Steve E. Lehoczky proposed the compromise in September at a public hearing on Lublin's request to rezone the 60acre parcel at Haggerty and Fourteen Mile.

Noting that a number of rezoning requests had been filed by the developers, Lehoczky suggested that the entire area should be reviewed as one package instead of the piecemeal zoning changes and site plans submitted by the Lublin group over

"If we don't compromise," the consultant said, 'we'll be talking about this for another 18 months." The first rezoning request, filed by Lublin and his associates in March 1978, proposed changing some 357 acres to multiple residential use for the construction of some 3,000 apartments and 54 acres for industrial and commercial uses. The 75 acres at the corner of Haggerty and Fourteen Mile were slated to remain light industrial.

Those requests were withdrawn following a public hearing in favor of plans that proposed more single-family residential or commercial development before the Commerce Central proposal emerged last summer.

Lublin and Steve Klochko have owned at least 120 acres in the area since the mid-1950s. They approached township officials in 1964 with plans for a commercial, office, recreational and multipleresidential complex, but the development was delayed due to consideration of the M-275 freeway project that finally was cancelled by the Michigan State Highway Commission in January 1977.

Standard Industries filed suit against the state agency in December 1976 in an effort to force the state to buy the land for the M-275 right-of-way and pay damages because of the difficulty developing the property with the freeway plans still pending. Regardless of which alignment the Michigan

Mary Ellen Miles, Marian Owczarski and Paul Rentschler stand in front of the stainless steel sculpture which was unveiled during dedication ceremonies at Walled Lake Central High School Sunday. The sculpture was given to the school as the class gift from Central's 1979 graduating class. Ms. Miles was class sponsor, while Rentschler was class president. The students had commissioned the artwork from Owczarski as the class gift, but had to cancel the request due to lack of funds.

Upon learning of the cancellation, Owczarski offered to complete the work within the students' budget. An internationallyrecognized artist whose works are exhibited in Moscow, Paris, Warsaw, Washington, Berlin and Milan, Owczarski said the sculpture was "like four streams coming together - two streams coming in and two streams leading out." He also said the stainless steel medium reminded him of education because of its strength and permanence.

Novi rezones Haggerty-Fourteen Mile

Novi City Council members thought they had rezoned the southwest corner of Fourteen Mile and Haggerty Road last week. But they were mistaken. Council members were expected to reconsider their action Monday, since the amendment to the zoning map made last week is not effective. The council had been trying to determine the type of zoning which would allow the best development for the corner, which is the last annexed parcel of Novi Township to come under scrutiny. Their decision is complicated by the fact that that section of the city is zoned almost entirely for small farms, but the owner of the property wishes to develop it multiple family, as was designated by

A motion to rezone the 13.69 acre parcel to small farms residential (R-1-F) passed by a 4-3 vote, and it apparently was assumed at that time that the property was rezoned.

However, because the property owner had protested that action, and filed a petition so stating, the council was required to pass the rezoning by a twothirds vote. It would have taken five yes votes to actually change the zoning from its multiple family designation. Last week's meeting was the second time council members had reviewed the zoning for the property.

In May they asked the planning board to consider the natural division in the property created by a stream diagonally bisecting the site.

The council proposed zoning the property north of the stream for multiple family dwellings and south of the stream for small farms. Planning Consultant Charles Cairns told the planning board and council he believed the property could be better developed if it were zoned as a whole.

The planning board disagreed, however. They recommended to the council that due to an existing home, one piece of their property should be zoned small farms. In addition, 11 acres owned by Mel Kaftan Properties should be developed as multiple family dwellings and the northeast corner of the property should be zoned for a business use because of an existing gas station, the planning board recommended.

James Ginn, an attorney representing Kaftan Properties, told the council his client urged them to retain the township zoning. "I would like to stress that this property is presently zoned for the multiple family residential development and we're trying to convince you not to change that classification as it presently exists," Ginn said. Throughout the council debate of the zoning, Kaftan's consulting planner, Jay Eldridge, threatened the city with a law suit if they persisted in changing the zoning. "You're inviting pressure to be brought to bear to have this zoning changed to something you can't live with. You're opening up a can of worms you don't want and no one knows where it can end up," Eldridge said.

He told the council that by zoning the property for multiple development, the land to the south of the disputed property would be "protected."

Threats of a law suit were reiterated after the council voted to rezone the property to the small farms designa-

Ginn asked the clerk to "hold the tapes" of the meeting and warned the council that the published notice of the meeting prohibited the reclassification to small farms. During debate of the zoning matter, the council wrestled with zoning the property as a whole or with different designations on separate parcels. They also discussed whether or not the property should be zoned multiple before the master plan for the area is com-

"I feel it would be a mistake at this time to allow multiple development in this area until the master plan is completed," said Council Member Robert Schmid. "It could be we want total single family development in that area. I think this goes against the master plan and it will be a mistake to zone this when we don't know what we want in the area. I would like to retain the R-1-F zoning until the master plan is completed and the area is completely planned. Short of that is a mistake for the entire area." Council Member Patricia Karevich said that after listening to Kaftan's planner she thought that the property should be zoned for small farins, but part of it also should be zoned for business in order to recognize the existing gas station.

Martha Hoyer said she believed they should consider that the property is on the city border and recognize the immercial center.

"Those zonings are very relative to what will develop on this property,"

Council Member Ronald Watson expressed concern that the parcel zoned for business is larger than the gas station. He asked whether the balance of that parcel could also be zoned small

Schmid agreed, saying "if a truck went through tomorrow and hit that gas station, that parcel could be developed into a rather substantial commercial

State should deal M-275 final blow

The Michigan State Transporation Commission will meet in beyond environmental concerns Lansing next week to decide the such as wetlands, bogs, lakes and fate of a north-south state trunkline road through western Oakland

Hopefully, the commission will kill for the last time plans for the controversial M-275 freeway. The four-member Michigan State 期ighway Commission — which was ransformed into a six-member transportation commission last December — cancelled M-275 in anuary 1977 and reaffirmed that lecision on several occasions.

Some of the original reasons for opposing M-275 are no longer viable. The unique black spruce hog at West Maple and Haggerty oads in Commerce Township has been drained as part of a peatmining operation and the transportation department has acquired replacement land in the township for the Dodge Park Number Five that was destined at one time to become an interchange.

There are, however, a number still-valid reasons to cancel the freeway that would serve as the last link in in an interstate bypass route to the west of Detroit. The main reason remains the potential for urban sprawl in largely semifural and rural areas of northwest Oakland County.

Experts say the metropolitan Detroit area is not "growing," what we're experiencing is a shift n the existing population along or freeway routes out of Detroit and, now, the older ring of suburbs. Persons who are moving to Commerce and West Bloomfield and Milford and Highland today are, in many cases, persons who moved to Southfield and Oak Park and Livonia in the 1950s.

This trend has an impact munities to build new schools, ter roads to serve its residents; we do not need a major freeway that will accelerate development in an environmentally sensitive area at the expense of our older neighbor-

In order to pay for the local road improvements, we agree with the Northwestern Coalition that the commission should "develop a whole new policy for transportation planning" that would allow the use of state and federal funds earmarked for M-275 for "local road maintenance and improvement as a substitute for freeway building.' Additional funds could be made available for what Coalition Chairperson George E. Snyder described as "war reparations" following the lengthy battle over M-

The first step toward reaching a compromise, though, should be a final death knell for M-275, an idea whose time has come and gone.

However, as the November

In light of the time of year and the past several months.

We offer these comments:

(1) In spite of the hard feelings which surfaced during the heat of the recent Novi elections, there are many positive things which came out of the process.

First of all, we would suggest that Novi has never had a finer slate of candidates from top to bottom than those on the November ballot. The amount of work done by the individual candidates was most impressive and bodes well for the future of the city.

Secondly, we would suggest that perhaps the most positive thing which came out of the recent election was the involvement of the Chateau Estates Mobile Home Park.

It was our perception that residents of Chateau Estates, which was annexed from the township earlier this year, did not truly consider themselves a part of the city back in the spring. After a long, drawn-out annexation fight, Lsuch feelings were understandable.

streams. It also affects social and economic conditions by the demands it places on growing comroads, sewer facilities and water systems. This population shift also places a burden on the older suburbs which are now faced with empty classrooms, shrinking tax bases and fewer residents to pay for the public improvements that were made 20 or 30 years ago. West Oakland badly needs bet-

We believe the best solution would be a compromise aimed at improving the existing grid of local roads, although we don't think it should be along the Haggerty-Union Lake corridor proposed by the Citizens in Opposition to M-275. That plan, we feel, would virtually destroy the Union Lake Village

It was a unique class gift which will have lasting import. It's another sign of student pride — and that's a positive thing.

Thanksgiving?

Thanks-

If you forget for a moment that your turkey dinner will cost you more this year (not to mention the gas it takes to drive to grandmother's house), there are many more things to be thankful for than you can possibly think of.

If you are a sports fan, for instance, be thankful that the Detroit Lions can only lose four more games this year. Also, this will definitely be the year that Michigan does not lose the Rose Bowl.

Chances are, there is no one left to write a book about Watergate. That's something to be thankful for. Actually, for those of you in search of silver linings, there is much to be thankful for in 1979.

Of course, for many of us, there are the usual things health, comfort, friends and loved ones.

But there is something else that should not be

Roughly translated, the Chinese symbol for "crisis" means "dangerous opportunity." There are, of course, grave problems today which cause much concern. But the energy needed to solve these problems presents a challenge that is very exciting to consider. The chance for failure is great; but that makes the rewards for success so much greater. The potential for what can be, rather than what is, can make life worth

For this, we can all be thankful.

An optimistic voice

No thanks-

Sure, you folks make a big deal out of Thanksgiving. But look at it from my point of view.

Do you think it is some big honor because you call it Turkey Day? That privilege is somewhat dimmed when you are being carried out of the kitchen on a platter. Any day you want to trade places, it's all right with me. Call it Harold's Day or Maude's Day or whatever.

Why in the world did you have to pick on us turkeys anyway? Why not the eagle? You think that's a hot shot bird anyway. Or how about the peacock? If it's good enough for NBC, it ought to be good enough for you. Actually, it's not fair for you to concentrate on fowl all the time. What's wrong with a nice Thanksgiving Day macaroni dinner? Or spaghetti? I've heard it goes well with cranberries.

I don't care what you do as long as you leave us turkeys alone. If you are so fond of drum sticks, then invite Buddy Rich to dinner. Just leave me alone — in the straw, so to speak.

No sir, I won't be thankful tomorrow. Unless, that is, the whole nation suddenly turns vegetarian.

Spindly brown stems, bowed under the weight of knarled zinnia blossoms, nod their reminders each time the gardner looks out the kitchen window.

"Are you going to leave us here all winter?" they seem to ask. And from over his shoulder, the cajoling wife echoes the backyard plea: "For goodness sakes, when are you going to dig out those dead zinnias? The yard looks a mess." Indeed it does look awful.

And they really ought to be dug out. Dug out and tossed onto a pile and burned. Yes,

But society has decreed an 11th commandment: "Thou shalt not burn leaves, nor light a fire under rotting zinnia stalks."

(Incidentally, have you noticed all the good things society has been doing for us lately? Like inventing and mandating no-lead gas? Or, requiring "barrier free" ramps to racquet ball courts?) No matter what the law or the neighbors say, autumn was made for burning nature's refuse, insists the gardener. No ifs or buts about it. The smell of burning leaves is as natural and pleasant as a cow barn or rain on

Frankly, the law stinks more than the smoke, he points out.

Incredulously, the law prohibits the backyard burning of zinnia stalks, but it permits the gardener to "foul" the air by carting the zinnia stalks indoors (as he has done on occasion to spite the law) and burning them in his fireplace.

All of which gives rise to a variety of in-

Why is the chimney smoke of zinnia stalks environmentally less offensive? Or why is the burning of birch logs in the fireplace legal while the burning of those logs in the backyard barbecue is illegal? Is coal burned in a furnace cleaner than leaves burned outdoors? Which is less offensive: burning indoor garbage or burning outdoor garbage? Which smells better? Why are backyard barbecues legal but fire pits and trash incinerators illegal? If charcoal may be burned outdoors, why not Pondering these things, the gardener nods back at the dead zinnias, ignores his wife and continues to procrastinate.
