tion through Christ. At a day following, in the presence of his family and some friends, the ordinance of baptism was administered. The scene was a solemn one, and none present more than the aged father drank freer of the water of life. He made all the arrangements for the presence of his family and some friends, the ordinance of baptism was administered. The scene was a solemn one, and none present more than the aged father drank freer of the water of life. He made all the arrangements for the funeral, choosing his pall-bearers, the place of burlal, and selecting the following text: "Prepare to meet thy God." The injunction of the text he had carefully considered, and gave indubitable proof of preparation and acceptance in Christ.

In regard to his material effects he disposed of his property by will, in a manner he believed just, to his widow and heirs. The deceased by nature was a positive man, active and earnest in what he had to do. As a husband and father, his family was ever near his heart, and their interest and welfare the purpose of his life and the object of his solicitude in death.

The funeral was held from the Seymour Lake M. E. church last Sunday, and was largely attended. Rev. Tickner preached an appropriate sermon from the text selected by the deceased, when the remains were buried in the family lot in Seymour Lake cemetery.

Mr. Taylor was born in Warren county, New Jersey, in 1819, and had lived in Oakland county some 45 years. He settled first in Oakland township, living there until some 20 years ago when he moved to Brandon on the farm upon which he died. Two daughters single live at home, and one married at Greenville.
