

PONTIAC BILL POSTER

An infant child of G. C. Perry, of this city, died last Thursday of brain disease, aged three months. JAN 4 1888

George Whitehouse, of Rose, died at the county house last Saturday evening, aged 73 years, and the remains were taken care of by friends. JAN 4 1888

The family and relatives of Jacob Johnson, deceased, who was recently killed at Oxford, published a card in last week's Gazette stating pretty plainly their opinion that Mr. J. came to his death by imbibing too much Oxford tangle-leg. They also severely criticised the manner in which the inquest was conducted and the part several citizens of Oxford took in the deplorable affair. In their haste to get money many liquor dealers of Oakland and every other county in the State have evidently furnished a club to knock themselves on the head, so to speak. Perhaps it has begun to dawn upon them that the steady and persistent selling of liquor to minors and confirmed drunkards, the law to the contrary, notwithstanding, is the secret of the prohibition majorities rolled up in every county that has thus far submitted the question. One or two more Johnson cases and it will not take much of a prophet to predict how old Oakland would vote on the question. JAN 7 1888

Will A. Cornyn, who went to California a few weeks since, died at Pasadena on Thursday, Dec. 29, of consumption. Mr. Cornyn has been a sufferer with the disease for several years, and his death was not unexpected. JAN 11 1888
