Oxford Globe: "An autopsy was held on the remains of Mrs. Susan Glasple on Monday evening by our resident physicians, at the request of the deceased made some time ago; they found the prime cause of her death to be fatty degeneration of the liver. She was an old and highly respected citizen of this place. Her funeral was attended from the Baptist church on Monday, Rev. W. H. Mills, of Rochester, officiating." JAN 13 1886

Mrs. Alvin Foadick died last Thursday at her home in Bloomfield, of consumption of the bowels, and funeral services were held at the house Saturday, the Rev. W. H. Weaver, of this city, officiating. Jane Ann Adams was born May 11, 1810, at Kingsborough, Montgomery County, New York, and was married to Alvin Foadick Nov. 1832. Ten years later they came to Michigan and like other pioneers carved themselves a good home out of the wilderness. They raised a large family but when in the prime of life the husband and father was taken away by that dread disease, small pox. Mrs. F. although left in an unenviable position, was in every way equal to the emergency, and with the assistance of loving children easily carried on the work of the farm. Deceased will always be remembered as an indulgent mother and kind friend.

Joseph Belford, of Holly, died last week Monday of consumption, aged 52 years, and funeral services were held Thursday. JAN 20 1886

Miss Susan Sutherland, of Oxford, died Jan. 13, at the residence of her brother, of consumption, aged 41 years. JAN 20 1886
